I can picture him teaching me how to do the twist or of him giving me rides on his back. He taught me that education was important and told me to study hard so I could get a scholarship. He also taught by example. I remember him often studying so he could further himself in the military. He taught us that good manners at the table and with people were important. Thank yous and thank you notes for gifts we received were expected as was staying at the table until everyone was finished and then asking to be excused. We were taugthtd to say 'yes, mam' and 'yes sir' to adults. He taught me about honesty, respect, honor, integrity, and to stand up for what you believe in. He taught us to do the 'right' thing even when it is not always easy. He worked hard and enjoyed life. He had a very playful and fun side to him. His youngest sister, Maryanne, once told me that when he came home to visit his mom and siblings (when he was first in the Marines), that it was like a visit from Santa Claus as he always made things special by bringing home gifts for the younger siblings or by helping his mom fix something in the house.

It was fun to hear that from her as my dad was that special to me, too. My mom and my dad met while they were both in the Marine Corps. I was even named after the Marines (Maureen), but with a different spelling. Luckily, I was a girl or I may have been named Gung Ho or Semper Fi.

My dad was a career Marine. He would have had 20 years in the year that he died. He was killed during the TET offensive in 1968 in Khe Sanh. My dad was very proud of being a Marine and I was proud of him. I don't know how he would have felt about the war since 1968 was a turning point for the war, but I do know that he believed in what he was doing. He honored his call to service and believed in his country. For that reason, I will forever feel that he did not die in vain. There is not one person in the world that could ever confince me of anything other than that. It is hard to imagine all that has happened in the 40 years that have gone by since he died. Occasionally, I have had dreams that he came home after all of these years... In reality, I know those dreams will never happen, so I cling to the memorsies I have of him that are real and very special. I loved my dad with all of my heart! Below is a poem I wrote about my dad many years ago..

MY FATHER, ROBERT MARIZ
Written April 4, 1971

Lover of life
Believer in right
Leader of men
Sponge of knowledge
Foundation of strength
Built of faith
Husband, father, and friend
All these things have passed before us
In one human soul
The soul lives on
In our hearts and minds
We'll never forget the life he had
Or the life he gave
Our memories are beautiful
We were one
He is a part of our life
Every day in spirit
Even though...
He is no longer present to Claim the day his.

[1378] Letter from Maureen (Mariz) Hudak, 21 April 2002.
[1379] Contained in her letter of 17 July 2008.

It makes us realize the Days are numbered—
We too must live
Each day as he did,
Caring and loving each precious
Moment before us.

At 301230H, EOD (FLSG-A) the ammo dump received incoming rounds.[1380] The barrage of rockets ignited a stack of Grade III projectiles in ASP #1, all but a few of which were high explosive.[1381] Master Gunnery Sergeant John P. Driver, Master Sergeant George J. Edwards, Gunnery Sergeant Donald H,. McIntyre, Sgt Jesus R. Vasquez, Sgt Alvin E. Sittner, and 1/Lt Eugene L. Keiter entered ASP #1 to extinguish the fire to prevent mass detonation of the stack which could have caused widespread damage and extensive injury to men in the surrounding area. Sgt Vasquez ran for the fire truck as GySgt McIntyre ran to the men in exposed positions to warn them.[1382] The last detonating round beat down the flames, foam was applied, then water. Then, MGySgt John P. Driver noticed a small fire about 10 feet to the side of the stack, and upon investigation discovered a 81mm mortar round in the middle of some burning trash which he kicked clear of the fire, called a warning, and went for a fire hose. Sgt Vasquez, who was wearing barbed wire gloves, picked up the round to toss it into a crater, the walls of which would have absorbed the blast had the round detonated. As he leaned over the crater while tossing the round, it exploded in his arms, giving him mortal wounds.[1383]

At 301650H, Co B, 3rd Recon received four 122mm rockets from the southwest resulting in 1 KIA and 5 WIA (evacuated).[1384] The Marine who was killed, LCPL Timothy Michael Barmmer, had endeared himself to many and died while saving others. The Platoon Commander of 3rd Platoon of Co B, 3rd Recon Bn, Craig Swanson, tells the story: "..he was killed because he saved others... Those of you who were there remember that we could hear very clearly when the incoming was on the way. There was a distinct 'thunk,' which we all learned to identify very quickly.. As I remember, we had about 5 seconds to find cover whenever we heard that dreadful sound. On a day like any other day during the siege, Corporal Barmmer and a handful of other Marines were standing around outside their bunker, when they heard that familiar sound. Barmmer quickly started hustling all the Marines around him into the bunker. The entrance to the bunker was small, and only 1 man could go through it at a time. While Barmmer may have been the closest to the bunker [entrance], he insured that every other Marine in his group got into the bunker before him—grabbing them, pushing them, pulling them. Everyone got into the bunker in time except Lance Corporal Barmmer. The shell hit near him killing him, before he could get in."[1385]

Also receiving major wounds in this incident was Barmmer's friend, LCPL James Kevin McCann, who died 03 February 1968 of wounds received in this incident. "Timmy and Jimmy were inseparable. Where one was, the other was. The day that they got hit, they got hit together. The artillery round came at the bunker, and whether they did it knowingly or did it unknowingly, they shielded the round from going into the bunker, and they died within a week of each other. They were hit at the same time and medevaced at the same time."[1386]

One of the Corpsmen in Bravo Company, 3rd Recon Bn, "Doc" R. David. Hagewood, was in the bunker and fondly remembers Timmy Barmmer: "Tim and I had a special relationship. He took me under his wing when I got there and showed me a lot of the ropes, and taught me the things you can do and can't do, and how to survive—more or less the short cuts. When Tim got killed, he died in my arms. He died trying to get someone else in the bunker during incoming. We were walking down the street and incoming started in and we all started to a bunker. You could only get so many in the door at one time. Tim was standing there literally throwing people in the door. I was next to the last one in, and Tim would have been the last one in. About the time he jumped, he got hit. Tim held a special place in my heart because of the kind of person he was: he was big and he was rough and he wanted to be a lot tougher than he was. He was just a super nice guy but he took me under his wing, taught me how to pack my pack, and what I needed to carry, and what I didn't need to carry. He didn't have to do that. As soon as I got in, I turned around and he more or less fell in. He just collapsed, and then I pulled him into the bunker with us, away from the open doorway and did what I could, but he didn't live very long."[1387]

In a letter PFC Roger A. Howes wrote his mother from Khe Sanh: "Yesterday we were sitting in our bunker eating C rations and a rocket came in about three feet

---

[1380] 26Mar 301015Z/Jan68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #363. The SITREP notes only WIA, no KIA, and states "Not added to casualty totals." The official designation of the unit is: Ammunition Company, Supply Battalion, First Force Service Regiment, Force Logistic Command. FLSG-A=Force Logistics Supply Group ALFA (there was also a BRAVO).

[1381] Statement of 1/Lt Eugene L. Keiter in Navy Cross file of Sgt Jesus R. Vasquez. Grade III refers to damaged, unusable munitions. ASP=Ammunition Supply Point.

[1382] Statement of GySgt Donald H. McIntyre in Navy Cross file of Sgt Jesus R. Vasquez.

[1383] Statement of MGySgt John P. Driver in Navy Cross file of Sgt. Jesus R. Vasquez; Navy Cross Citation of Sgt Jesus R. Vasquez.

[1384] 26Mar 301015Z/Jan68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #363.

[1385] Letter from Craig Swanson, 20 March 1997. (Printed in Khe Sanh Veterans: Red Clay, Issue #40 (Fall, 1997), p. 29.

[1386] Conversation with Scott Miller, 18 November 1986.

[1387] Conversation with David Hagewood, 11 June 1988.

from it. Huck (Tim's nickname), Doc, Mac and Zeke were outside heating chow. Huck tried to push them in like the big stupid loveable guy he was and took the blast and was killed instantly. The other three are in serious condition and sent back to the States. My God, what a dear friend we've lost. Huck was big and big hearted. He could be gruff yet gentle. We loved him like a brother and he left an impression that could never be forgotten. Everyone in our company could not help but like him. He was first to help a new guy coming in. He was the first one to welcome me here. This place can never be the same without him. God had some purpose in it I know, but Oh God, will we miss him. Could you do me a very great favor and have a Mass said for Huck. His name is Timothy Barmmer. Thanks Mom, so much."[1388]

Kevin Macaulay remembers that Tim Barmmer consoled him initially when his friend, "Junior" Reather died. "There's a picture, published on the West Coast of me kneeling on the ground with my helmet in front of me, sobbing. Timmy has got his hand on me, behind my head and the other hand on my shoulder trying to console me after Reather died. And two days later, I was about 15 feet away from Timmy when a 122 came in, blew him apart."[1389]

[During the month of January, 1968, B Co., 3d Recon Bn, suffered 10 USMC KIA, 1 USMC DOW, 53 USMC WIA, 1 USN KIA, and 3 USN WIA (one twice).[1390]]

31 JANUARY 1968

FLAHIVE, CAPT William Joseph, Jr.	MACTU-62
GUTHRIE, SP4 Steven Allen, Jr.	1/44 Arty
HUDSON, LCPL Roy	A/1/26
WRIGHT, LCPL O'Neal	A/1/9

At 1442H, SP4 Guthrie and Cpl Knick from the Army guns on the KSCB were on top of their bunker. While Cpl Knick was holstering his .38 caliber pistol, one of Guthrie's arms accidentally hit the pistol causing it to discharge into Guthrie's head. Guthrie was taken to Charlie Med and further evacuated to DaNang in very critical condition.[1391]

"At 0830 5 or 6 82mm mortars hit, 2 or 3 in our [CBMU 301 Det B] area, wounding Frye and LeBlanc just slightly, thank God (both have returned to duty), and another landed near the MACTU tower and killed Capt Bill Flahive. I was near our area and just hit the deck and crawled to a hole. I'm real sorry about Bill—he only had about 40 more days to do—but I don't think about it much. He never knew what hit him—it could happen to any of us at any time."[1392]

A relative of Flahive writes: "William Flahive was born on Dec 5, 1943. He attended Mt. St. Michael Grammar School in the Bronx, N.Y. He attended La-Salle Military Academy on L.I. and he graduated from Fairfield University in Conn. He was commissioned a 2nd Lt in the Marines in 1965. His dad, William Flahive, was in the Army in World War II and was wounded in action. His mom, Juanita Flahive still resides in NYC right next to the twin towers of the World Trade Center, which were attacked on 9/11/01 and destroyed. I named my first son William Flahive after my cousin William when he was born on 8/1/69. Until this day we Flahive's are very proud of our cousin, Capt. William Flahive. He paid the ultimate sacrifice for his country. We know it was not in vain. He loved the Marine Corps. William Flahive was the first Flahive to also graduate college and had a great career ahead of him. For whatever reason we know God had other plans for Capt. William Flahive and decided to call him home and start a new career in heaven. Till this day I wear a military bracelet of my cousin William who was KIA at Khe Sanh."[1393]

[As of 31 January 1968, there are 226 USMC officers, 5,294 USMC enlisted, 10 USN officers, and 247 USN enlisted as part of Marine Corps units serving at Khe Sanh.[1394] From 20-31 January, a total of 13,457 rounds of artillery were fired, complemented by 1,087 Marine, 811 US Navy, and 2,092 Air Force fixed wing attack sorties and 288 SAC B-52 sorties.[1395] USAF deliveries to Khe Sanh averaged 250 tons per day. The C-130s averaged 18 landings daily in the same period. USAF C-130s delivered a single-day high of 310 tons on 27 January, the highest for the Vietnam campaign to date. According to USMC statistics, Marine Corps C-123s and C-130s hauled 3600 tons into Khe Sanh and CH-53 helicopters carried in 565 tons.[1396]

John Donnelly of the Newsweek staff wrote that the Marines at Khe Sanh "..were bearing the ordeal with their traditional show of humor and guts. But their casualties were mounting steadily with each new bombardment, and with punctured sandbags, burned-out shelters, shreds of wire and pieces of shattered equipment visible every-

[1388] Letter sent to Viola Howes from Roger Howes.
[1389] Conversation with Kevin Macaulay, 22 August 1984.
[1390] 3rd Recon Bn ComdC, January 1968.
[1391] 1/26 ComdC January, 1968, S2/S3 Log, 31 January 1968, Ser #11. SP4 Guthrie was KIA this date.
[1392] Ens Martin Kux, Diary entry for 31 January 1968. MCTU=Marine Corps Traffic Unit; is the air tower for the airstrip.
[1393] Letter from James Flahive, 23 March 2003.
[1394] FMFPAC 030406Z/Feb68, SITREP #1040.
[1395] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, January, 1968, p. 11.
[1396] Bowers, Ray L., Tactical Airlift, Washington, D.C.: Office of Air Force History, USAF, 1983, p. 299.

where. Khe Sanh was shaping up into another version of hell in a very small place."[1397]

President Johnson at his news conference, 02 February 1968, stated: "..we may at this very moment be on the eve of a major enemy offensive in the area of Khe Sanh."[1398] A few days later, on 17 February, he said: "The eyes of the nation and the eyes of the entire world—the eyes of history itself—are on that little, brave band of defenders who hold the pass at Khe Sanh and the area that is around it. We do not doubt the outcome."[1399] A CIA aerial reconnaissance and photo interpretation expert, notes: "Of all the engagements of the Vietnam War, President Lyndon B. Johnson.. developed a special relationship with the men of the 26th Regiment.. who defended the base during that crucial period."[1400] In order to appreciate better the situation as indicated by the hundreds of photographs taken by the SR-71 flying at 80,000 feet and 2,100 miles an hour that arrived in Washington daily as well as intelligence cables, Richard Helms, Director of Central Intelligence, had Arthur C. Lundahl, Director of the National Photographic Interpretation Center, prepare a terrain model of the Khe Sanh area. The model, prepared in only 3 days, was referred to as "The President's Sandbox" and was utilized daily by the President to appreciate the situation at Khe Sanh. "During the day, he would frequently view the model which was updated daily with information from reconnaissance and other sources. Always, he would ask about the 26th Marines."[1401]

Perhaps the pilots and crew of the UH-1Es of VMO-6 were greatly relieved at the change of their radio call-sign from "CADAVER" to "SEAWORTHY" as of 01 February 1968.[1402]

Aerial photographs taken 01 February disclosed tanks at the intersection of Routes 9H and 92C (XD50404022 and XD49354062), traveling south and east.[1403]]

01 FEBRUARY 1968

SCOTT, GySgt Jeremiah I/3/26

At 1013H, I/3/26 on Hill 881-South received 2 rounds of incoming, believed to be 60mm mortars.[1404] At 0115H, they received 2 rounds of incoming 120mm mortars resulting in 3 WIA (evaced) and at 1245H received another 120mm incoming round.[1405] Between 1645H and 1715H, I/3/26 took 4 rounds of 120mm mortar during medevac pickup and re-supply. Again, at 1745H, they received 2 incoming 120mm mortars. They received one 120mm mortar at 1855H and 1910H. At 2000H, they received 4 incoming mortars from approximately XD774436 resulting in 1 KIA and 2 WIA (evaced).[1406]

The 325C Division had 35 82mm mortars, 4 recoilless rifles, and 4 120mm mortars.[1407] NVA records state 184 rounds of 120mm mortar were fired during their Phase I (20 Jan – 07 Feb 1968) and 403 fired during their Phase II (10 February – 31 March 1968).[1408]

02 FEBRUARY 1968

ALFANO, 1/Lt Rodney Arthur	37th SigBn
BETTS, SP5 Albert Leon	362nd Sig Co
HUBER, SP4 Leon Fairden	544th Sig Det
RANEY, SP4 Steven Leon	362nd Sig Co

[All from 1st Signal Brigade]

Operating a TRACK-129 mobile troposphere scatter terminal (a radio link between KSCB and Phu Bai) as well as a teletype circuit to NKP [Nakhon Phanom Air Base], Thailand (for a link to Task Force ALFA, the electronic sensor headquarters), a detachment from the 37th Signal Battalion, 1st Signal Brigade, arrived on KSCB in mid-January. Being unannounced and unexpected, the TROPO van was set up without bunkering, on top of the ground; its large, prominent lollipop-shaped antenna making it a good target, and the only way to link the regimental comm. center to it was through 5 pair of cable over a distance of about a quarter mile between the van and the center.[1409]

[1397] Newsweek 71:6 (05 Feb 1968) 33f.
[1398] Lyndon B. Johnson, Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States, 1968 – 1969, Vol. 1, p. 156.
[1399] Ibid., p. 240.
[1400] Dino A. Brugioni, "The President, Khe Sanh, and the 26th Marines," Leatherneck 49:9 (Sep 1986) 23.
[1401] Ibid., p. 24.
[1402] VMO-6 ComdC February 1968, Encl (1), p. 1.
[1403] 6470 ReconTechSq TanSonNhut 020532Z/Feb68, IPIR MSN YT895S, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 02/03Feb68 #372.
[1404] 3rd MarDiv COC 020830Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #370.
[1405] 3rd MarDiv COC 021330Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #371.
[1406] 3rd MarDiv COC 021520Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #372.
[1407] Tong Ket Tac Chien Phao Binh [Artillery Tactical Operations Reports]. Classified MAT [Secret]. Trans. Sedgwick Tourison. Hanoi: Artillery Branch, People's Army of Viet Nam, 1985, p. 136. The Soviet M38 120mm mortar can fire 12-15 rounds per minute, each round weighs 15.4 KG. It had a maximum range of 5,700M and a minimum of 460M. Weight of the weapon in traveling position is 500KG (1100 lb.) and has a crew of 6 men.
[1408] Ibid., p. 136.
[1409] Comments of Maj John A. Shepherd, HQMC Oral History Tape #2621. Maj Shepherd was the Communications Officer of 26th Marines Regiment.

The Officer in Charge of the detachment was 1/Lt Rodney Arthur Alfano, from Boston. The Marines of Co D/1/26 enjoyed a special relationship with them, and Lt Alfano readily shared what special foods he had with them. He even prepared a meal of shrimp and a home-made cocktail sauce for the officers of DELTA Co, 1/26.[1410]

SP4 William Hawkinson from this unit had just walked away from their area when, at 1605H KSCB received four incoming 122mm rockets screeching in from the west causing 4 KIA and 10 WIA (evaced).[1411] As the rockets exploded, Hawkinson dove into a Marine bunker and, a few seconds later, another Marine dove into the bunker exclaiming, "The whole Army bunker got wiped out. What a mess!"[1412] The 122mm rocket had entered an opening in the bunker and detonated inside it.[1413] Hawkinson immediately rushed outside to find his buddies—buddies no more, but was restrained by the Marines who began to console him as only brothers in battle can.[1414]

Two Marines of Co B/1/26, LCPL Johnny F. Bellina and PFC Richard G. Cruz, were in their trench during the incoming, about 30 feet from the Army van. Bellina recalls: "It was coming in hot and heavy and I guess I got rescue stuff in my blood, but I ran up there and their bunker had caved-in, and I was digging them out during that incoming and dug one of them up—got his head out, started to give him mouth to mouth. And then found another man. Then when it slacked up, others came to help. One of them was definitely dead. I'll never forget: I saw his hand sticking out of that red dirt and he had a wedding ring on. I will never forget that."[1415]

One of the Marine officers desperately fought back tears; he knew the Army officer as a friend. "I will write his wife," he muttered.[1416]

The three Army signalmen in the struck bunker all subsequently died from their wounds. There were 4 KIA, 1 WIA. Specialist Hawkinson, together with the assistance of 2 Marines, kept the system on line for 40 hours until replacements arrived.[1417]

1/Lt Alfano, born in Boston, Massachusetts, attended St. Lazarus School in East Boston and St. Mary's Junior and Senior High School in Lynn. He played four years varsity baseball in high school, graduated in the Class of 1966 from Providence College, and was commissioned upon graduation. He was married.[1418]

03 FEBRUARY 1968

McCANN, LCPL James Kevin	B/3rd Recon
TAYLOR, CPL Bobby Allen	B/1/9

LCPL McCann DOW received when Timmy Barmmer was KIA on 30 January (q.v.). Top Walsh recalls McCann's situation slightly differently. He recalls that McCann and several others were out in front of their bunker late in the afternoon when the round came in. McCann's foot was blown off and he was medevaced, but later died.[1419]

At 031230, A/1/9 (XD823416) spotted approximately 40 NVA moving east to west at XD840381 believed to be carrying a mortar tube. The Marines fired 60mm mortar and artillery missions on the NVA with unknown results. Then, at 1340H, 1/9 (XD827416) received four rounds of 60mm mortar and 3 rounds of 82mm mortar incoming from XD821402 resulting in the death of Cpl Bobby TAYLOR, 4 WIA (evaced), and 1 WIA (minor).[1420]

Official records for 04 February indicate a KIA from FOB-3 during a patrol to Hill 471;[1421] no American KIAs from FOB-3 are indicated in the roster of those on the Vietnam Memorial Wall in Washington, D.C., for this date, however. It may be that the KIA was a Bru member of the patrol.

05 FEBRUARY 1968

BOGARD, PFC Jack Crosby	E/2/26
HAMEL, PFC Wayne Douglas	Hq 26Mar
LAMITE, LCPL Tyrone Francis	E/2/26
LOWERY, PFC James Allen	A-1-40
MOLETTIERE, LCPL Joseph Anthony	2/26
ORNELAS, SGT John Carl	FLC (POL)
RIMSON, PFC Martin Luther	E/2/26
SELDERS, PVT William Dean	K/3/26

[1410] Ernest Spencer, Welcome to Vietnam, Macho Man, California: Corps Press, 1987, pp. 107-109.
[1411] 3rd MarDiv 130625Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #375
[1412] John T. Wheeler, "Life in the V Ring," Associated Press release, 12 February 1968, reprinted in Peter Braestrup, Big Story, Boulder, Co.: Westview Press, 1977, Vol. 2, p. 143.
[1413] HQ, 37th Signal Battalion (SPT), Operational Report of 37th Signal Battalion (Spt) for Period Ending 30 April 1968, RCS CSFOR-65 (R1), 8 May 1968, p. 1.
[1414] Wheeler, op,. cit.
[1415] Conversation with Johnny Bellina, 08 February 1987.
[1416] Spencer, op. cit.
[1417] MajGen Thomas Matthew Rienzi, Communications – Electronics, 1962-1970, Washington, D.C.: Dept. of the Army, 1972, pp. 108-109. Betts' MOS, 26L, was "Tactical Microwave System Repairman;" Huber's MOS, 52B, was "Power Generation Equipment operator/repairman; Raney's MOS, 32E, was "Fixed Plant Carrier Repairman (Communications)."
[1418] Obit., The Boston Globe, Fri., 16 February 1968, p. 34.
[1419] Conversation with James Walsh, 23 September 1989. He opines that McCann died from shock; it could have been infection or loss of blood or some other reason.
[1420] 3rd MarDiv 130605Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #379.
[1421] 3rd MarDiv 041745Z/Feb68, Spot Report #178, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 03/04 Feb 1968 #309; 26Mar ComdC, February 1968, Encl (1), p. 7.

SMITH, PFC Alan Ray	E/2/26
STAPLES, LCPL Louis Franklin	E/2/26
STEVENSON, PFC Charles Robert	E/2/26
TAYLOR, PFC Ernest Vernon	E/2/26

That the battle at Khe Sanh was subsequently to be won by something so secret that it could not be included in the official siege battle at Khe Sanh published shortly after the battle, something of which all but a few knew nothing, was to become determinative in the battles of this date. The TOP SECRET NOFORN project of Joint Task Force 728 directed by General Starbird involved electronic eavesdropping on the enemy—an anti-filtration barrier to detect and monitor vehicles and troop movements. Although developed by DCPG [Defense Communications Planning Group], it had nothing to do with communications. Even as late as June, 1968, the South Vietnamese were unaware of the electronic sensors, and only a handful of Thai were briefed under the very close supervision of the U.S. State Department.[1422]

The gathering, ominous threat to Khe Sanh prompted Gen Westmoreland on 18 January to request a diversion of sensors from Laos (where they had originally been destined to monitor NVA infiltration via the Ho Chi Minh Trail network) to Khe Sanh. Task Force ALPHA, the sensor headquarters for southeast Asia, stationed at Nakhon Phanom Royal Thai Air Force Base in Thailand, sent representatives to meet with Major General Tompkins to brief him on what they could accomplish.[1423] U.S. Navy OP-2E aircraft of VO-67 along with CH-3s, dropped several strings of sensors around Khe Sanh; several of the OP-2E aircraft were shot down (on 17 and 27 February).[1424]

"Many veterans of Khe Sanh owe their lives to these sensors, even though they may have been completely unaware of them."[1425] The sensors "..turned the tide by hammering these people [NVA] prior to their jump-off points. Several times that we knew, or we figure.. that these people were in assembly areas and actually were preparing for the attack and this was given to us through these sensor devices."[1426] Capt Moyers S. Shore, II, in his original manuscript wrote: "Almost every major attack against the 26th Marines was picked up well in advance by the sensors.."[1427] The sensor program at Khe Sanh was costly, "..somewhere in the neighborhood of a billion dollars."[1428] Lives saved by them far exceeded the billion dollars, and Colonel Lownds, testifying before a Congressional committee investigating the sensor program stated that the number of Marines killed at Khe Sanh may well have doubled were it not for these devices.[1429]

NVA forces had previously attempted to take Hill 861 in the morning hours of 21 January. The next day, Co E/2/26 moved to and occupied the small knoll to the east, Hill 861-A, a position which had not been developed with trenches, bunkers, and perimeter wire to that point. (When 2/26 arrived at Khe Sanh on 16 January 1968, Col Lownds briefed the officers and staff in the regimental bunker saying, "We must hold." Noticing Captain Earle G. Breeding among those gathered, he blurted, "Won't we, Captain Breeding?" To the astonishment of all those present, Breeding, with the bravado that tense moments generates, immediately replied, "Sir, with ECHO Company, Khe Sanh will be held!" PFC Breeding had been a scout when (then) Major Lownds was S-2 of 9th Marines in 1953.)[1430] Hill 861-A was the linchpin to the defense of Khe Sanh. "Obviously they would have to take 861-Alpha before they could take 861. Had they taken those two [hills] they could have isolated 881, and this would have allowed the North Vietnamese to look right down on top of 558, which was the 2nd Battalion, 26th Marines minus one company. They were well-dug in and defended, but they would have been just sitting ducks. And so they would have to take 861-Alfa and then 861 in probably a 2-prong attack. And then they would have owned that piece of territory and they would have looked down to Khe Sanh proper. They could have annihilated 558 from that position, and that would have opened up the entire valley for a massive onslaught of even armor, heavy armor, to come down that valley and just roar right into Khe Sanh. They would have to (in my opinion) take 861-Alfa to be able to take and hold Khe Sanh."[1431]

The 4th of February had been a normal day for the Marines of ECHO Company, 2/26, atop Hill 861-Alfa. "I remember it was real hot, and we'd been stringing wire and so forth, and it was just kind of a normal type day.

[1422] Comments of Col. F. N. Pippin, 24 June 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2907. Col. Pippin was Chief of the Evaluation Branch of J-3, MACV, 30 June 1967 – 23 June 1968.

[1423] Van Staaveren, Jacob, History of Task Force Alpha, Nakhon Phanom Royal Thai Air Force Base, Thailand: 7/13 Air Force, 13th Air Force, Pacific Air Forces, 1969, p. 49.

[1424] Ibid., pp. 54, 58.

[1425] GySgt Jerry Perdue, "This SCAMP Plays Havoc With the Enemy Scamps," Pacific Stars & Stripe, Fri., 14 Sep 1973, p. 7.

[1426] Comments of LtCol Edward J.A. Castagna, HQMC Oral History Tape #2770. LtCol Castagna was S-3 of 26th Marines.

[1427] Shore, Moyers S., II, The Battle of Khe Sanh, (original MS), p. 86. This was deleted from the published version due to the security classification given to the sensor program at the time of publication.

[1428] Comments of Col. F.N. Pippin, 24 June 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2907.

[1429] U.S. Senate, Committee on Armed Services, Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee, Electronic Battlefield Subcommittee, 91st Congress, 2nd Session, Nov., 1970, Investigation into Electronic Battlefield Program, p. 95.

[1430] Conversation with Earle G. Breeding, 29 May 1985 and 18 July 1984.

[1431] Interview of Earle G. Breeding by Duon Rose, 13 July 1989.

As night fell, we were on our normal two or three hour watches—one may sleeping, one man awake. As usual, the fog had done set in where you couldn't see past the wire, just real heavy, dense fog."[1432] Capt Earle G. Breeding, CO of E/2/26, recalls: "The night was very, very dark. Literally, you could not see a white handkerchief held in front of your face. It was totally black. I think the moon phase was zero, and we were heavily fogged in. We could not see anything."[1433]

Major Mirza Munir Baig[1434] began is 12-hour watch in the Khe Sanh FSCC at midnight alarmed at a pattern of electronic sensor activations. One large troop movement was detected along the river some four clicks north of 861 and 5 ½ clicks north of 881S (XD76824976 to XD79684807); another moved from a position 5 ½ clicks northeast of 861 to the other movement (XD80904795 to XD82094847); a third movement was also to the north of 861 (XD80904795 to XD82094847).[1435] Throughout the night of 3/4 and 4/5 February, sensor activations (generating SPOTLIGHT reports) indicated numerous heavy troop movements along a ridge to the northwest of Hill 881S. Baig evaluated these as at least two infantry battalions of NVA soldiers (or an equivalent number of porters) who reached a point 3000 meters to the northwest of Hill 881S from the direction of the known location of the 325C Division.[1436]

By 0100H, 05 February, all sensors were quiet and Capt. Baig waited. "I could not prove that which I was beginning to believe. The forces had either moved off the line of sensors and the ridges away from Hill 881-S (therefore, no danger) or they were moving towards the hill (therefore, grave danger..). I plumped for the second explanation; for this fell neatly within the [NVA] Lieutenant's remarks."[1437] The total number of enemy troops as reported by the sensors amounted to a possible 1,500 to 2,000 men. It was now 0200H and Baig knew that if it were a NVA regiment, the force would be in regimental column, battalions on line at an interval of 100 meters, standard NVA regimental tactics for a night attack. There would be a last minute reconnaissance and the attack would be in waves. Colonel Lownds concurred in Baig's evaluation, and LtCol Hennelly, the FSC [Fire Support Coordinator] and CO of 1/13, ordered about 30 minutes of fire from five batteries within KSCB and 4 batteries of 175s to pour continuous fire into a 1,000 x 300 meter target box to the south of Hill 881-S to a point where a large force, moving at 2 KM per hour (NVA rate of march in darkness and mist) would reach. (Later, LtCol Peese, USAF, at NKP told Baig that the sensors recorded the voices of hundreds of men running in panic through the darkness and heavy fog in a southerly direction. Seismic sensors had gone wild.[1438]) The Marines defending 881-South had been spared a regimental assault.

Upon Baig's recommendation, artillery fired 350 rounds of light and medium artillery into a 500 x 300 meter box while four batteries of 175mm guns at Camp Carroll and the Rockpile fired 200 rounds along 1,000 meter curtains at each end of the east-west box. The enemy force would still have half an hour march to reach 881-South. 0300H came and went; euphoria pervaded the FSCC. "To this day I regret what followed. It never oc-

---

[1432] Taped comments of Larry E. Jackson, late November, 1984.

[1433] Interview of Earle G. Breeding by Duon Rose, 13 July 1989.

[1434] 26th Marines Target Intelligence Officer (TIO). Baig was born in Panchgani, India, 13 July 1932. His amazing grasp of the total battlefield situation enabled him to direct strikes against major headquarters, artillery and logistics positions within days of his arrival and destroy them. Educated in Trinity College of Cambridge University in England (a prep school for British officer candidates destined for Sandhurst) and having received a Masters degree at McGill University in Canada, his keen intellect enabled him to devise an interpretation of the large amount of sensor readouts and develop patterns of enemy movement—to direct strikes at where they would be at a certain time; whose adept grasp recommended and devised effective artillery tactics. His father, Osman Baig, established the Pakistan embassies in Canada and the United States as Ambassador and was also the Secretary General of CENTO (Central Treaty Organization (similar to NATO and SEATO). His grand-father, Mirza Imam Abbas Ali Baig, was the first Indian in the British Cabinet of Prime Minister Herbert Asquith and was knighted by the King of England. His great-grandfather was the last defender of the fort at Bijapur, India, a position held by hereditary leadership as a prince. Baig, because of whose efforts so many survived Khe Sanh, was assassinated while serving in the MAAG in Bangkok, Thailand, on 20 April 1971. His mother, Juliette, notes that his name, "Mirza," is Arabic for "prince," "Munir" means "refulgent," and "Baig" is a title "spread from Samarkand along all the Muslim republics of Russia into the Turkish Empire of old and into all the Muslim world but its spelling changes. It started as Beg, became Bek in Turkey, Bey in Arabic. The only other senior title is Pasha." [Letter from Juliette Baig, 19 Feb 2002]. Mr. George Allen, then Deputy SAVA (Special Assistant for Vietnamese Affairs) at the CIA recalls how Baig personally requested the CIA furnish him with photos the French had taken at Dien Bien Phu in order to study patterns of their entrenching tactics, and how Baig briefed three senior officials at the CIA upon the conclusion of the siege battle at Khe Sanh. [Conversation with George Allen, 21 July 2000].

[1435] 3rd MarDiv 021823Z/Feb68 in III MAF COC Journal and File 02/03 Feb 1968 #343.

[1436] Letter of Mirza M. Baig, quoted by MGen Rathvon McC Tompkins, in Electronic Battlefield Hearings, op. cit., p. 84; Letter of Maj Miraza M. Baig, 23 December 1968, HQMC, Historical Division, Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file.

[1437] Baig letter quoted by Tompkins, cited. Lt La Than Tonc had revealed the plan of attacking Hills 861 and 881S simultaneously as a diversion. The main attack would then approach KSCB from Route 9 to the south.

[1438] Baig letter of 23 December 1968, pp. 4-5, cited.

curred to me that night that the enemy's intent was and always had been to attack Hills 881S and 861 simultaneously. I had forgotten the NVA battle plan. There were no sensors near Hills 861 and 861-A.[1439] The NVA, attacking in 2-battalion strength, assaulted Hill 861-A. "The missing two battalions had been signaled by the sensors and I had, to my shame, completely forgotten them.... Only one battalion actually made a known appearance on the hill... The second battalion, if one there was, was attended to by our one hour of shelling and air strikes, which landed on all the possible assemble/reserve areas at the base of the hill.[1440]

Facing the onslaught of the surviving NVA battalion were the Marines of Co E/2/26. The only indication of anything different that night was a pungent, persistent stink of something like marijuana that filled the air from about midnight to 0200H.[1441] (Maybe it was the stench of smelly troops that had so arduously humped that terrain!)

Then, at 0405H, enemy troops were suddenly in the wire perimeter of 861A, commencing a heavy ground assault supported by a tremendous volley of 82mm mortar fire from XD806448 and XD803447,[1442] during which the majority of the casualties to ECHO Company were sustained.[1443] As the first mortars of the NVA's barrage struck, PFC Larry W. Curado and PFC Martin Luther Rimson were standing about ten feet apart. Both were hit. Rimson was killed; Curado was able to make it to a trench and to the company's medical area,[1444] a crater formed from a 500-pound bomb.[1445]

One group of NVA slid a Bangalore torpedo under the wire of 2/Lt Donald Edmund Russ Shanley's First Platoon, and streamed within the Marine position. "..human waves seemed to move right under their own mortars. They blew our wire and moved right up on us. They seemed to have a good idea what their objective was once they got into the area. Their first RPGs knocked out gun positions and mortars. Some people didn't really have a chance to get under cover when everything hit."[1446] The initial assault, directed against E-1, included the Marines' 60mm mortar and M-60 machinegun.

One of the LPs, PFC Jack Bogard, miraculously made his way back into the lines and was informed that his fighting hole had been knocked out. Under the heavy fire, he dashed to his hole to drag back the wounded PFC Gomez. He then returned under NVA mortar fire to retrieve another buddy, but was killed by automatic weapons fire in the process.[1447] He had been hit by a round in the head, instantly killing him. The E-1 Platoon Commander, Donald Shanley, later noted: "Bogard was just remarkable; out of those guys I knew Bogard the best. He was a very funny man and I felt a good Marine too, and I was pretty blown away by him getting killed."[1448] Staples, Bogard, Smith, and Rimson were all part of Shanley's E-1. "We were pinned down on that trench line. We heard the Gooks laughing as they fired down in the trench line towards us. I heard one man scream out, saying he was hit in the arm, and I heard a Gook laughing."[1449]

"The Vietnamese just come running in like wild people. And then on this point, there were parts of First Squad and I think parts of Second Squad or maybe the Gun Squad. Just immediately they had knocked out our machineguns on that point. That's where they concentrated on coming in our perimeter, and before we even knew what happened most of the guys on the point was gone. They were either killed or wounded. We actually had guys on the point that were fighting with E-tools and just whatever they could use to help themselves."[1450]

"I was down on the point when it got hit. I was inside my hootch and, well, it all started out. I heard one shot go off and I thought that was just somebody, like they thought they saw something in the wire and just fired. And all of a sudden, mortar rounds dropped all around the gun pit and around my hootch. I had one man that got trapped inside this hootch when they busted the lines and myself. I was still inside my hootch and I saw the flashes of light from the inside of my hootch because I had a tunnel leading from my hootch straight to the gun pit, and I seen different colors of light. I didn't know exactly what it was—come to find it was shrapnel flying around inside the gun pit. As I tried to get out my gun pi8t I got right up in it and concussion from one of the rounds knocked me back into the gun pit. I tried to get out again. That's when I see a couple of enemy troops coming up on side of the hill... Then, as soon as the rounds let up, the mortar rounds, I got outside the hootch and got inside the gun pit. I had another hootch right next to me which had another man, PFC Stevenson, in this hootch. They snuck up beside this hootch and dropped a ChiCom inside this hootch and blew him away right there. As for myself, I tried to fire the tube while I was inside the gun pit to get the guys some illumination

---

[1439] Ibid..
[1440] Baig letter quoted by Tompkins, cited.
[1441] Taped comments of Larry Jackson, cited.
[1442] 3rd MarDiv 082318Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #385.
[1443] Comments of Capt Earle G. Breeding, March, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2621.
[1444] Comments of PFC Larry W. Curado, April, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.
[1445] Conversation with Earle G. Breeding, 18 July 1984.
[1446] Comments of 2/Lt Aleck J. Bodenweiser, April, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.
[1447] Statement of 2/Lt Donald E. R. Shanley, 18 Feb 1968, in Bronze Star Medal file on PFC Jack C. Bogard.
[1448] Interview of Donald Shanley by Ronald Drez, 14 April 1989.
[1449] Comments of HM3 Richard Lynn Woodard, April, 1968, USMC Oral History Tape #2775.
[1450] Taped comments of Jackson, cited.

because they hit so hard and so fast that nobody know exactly what was going on. I dropped one round in the tube; didn't go off. Come to find out the tube was all busted. It had shrapnel holes went on through it."[1451]

Cpl Thomas J. Eichler thought it unusual for the NVA to shell before light. "Making my way down the trench line I found three of my machinegun crew laying severely wounded. Thinking they had been hit by a mortar shell, I took off my ammunition belt, laid down my rifle and placed one of the wounded Marines on my back. Making my way back through the trench line I suddenly came face to face with a NVA soldier. Instinctively I turned and began running back down the trench line. The NVA soldier opened fire and I could feel the bullets striking me in the back but they were not penetrating. The wounded Marine was absorbing the rounds in his flak jacket. I ran right into another NVA soldier who was firing a rocket down the trench line. With the wounded Marine on my back, I strangled the NVA soldier with the strap from his rocket pouch. During this incident the young Marine on my back who was now close to death was whispering directions in my ear. Funny, I had started out saving his life, now he had saved mine. Then and only then did I realize that we had been overrun. After getting the three Marines to safety, I was in the process of running from position to position telling the Marines to pull back to our secondary position, when I came upon a sight I will never forget as long as I live. Here in one of the holes lay three young Marines who had been blown apart. And on the dirt walls of their hole you could see TEN LONG BLOODY MARKS from the top of the hole to the bottom made by the bloody hands of one of those Marines who had attempted to crawl out before he died."[1452]

PFC Newton D. Lyle recalls that later, "..when the sun finally did come up and we thanked God that the ones of us that had lived God let us live, I had to help pull two of my best buddies out of Corporal Franklin's positions where they'd been killed in their bunkers before they could get out. We got Stevenson out of his bunker. He'd been hit by a ChiCom and was killed instantly by the way it looked because he was really mangled up. We went to the next hole to get 'Reds' out and we could see where 'Reds' had been hit, but was still alive, because he had claw marks on the wall where you could see he had tried to get out."[1453]

Nine minutes after the attack on 861A KSCB artillery began firing all available pieces in support.[1454] The Khe Sanh FSCC fired three phases of artillery, all simultaneous. The first included three batteries of 1/13 firing on the slopes of the hill with a 4th battery concentrating in the area where the enemy movement was thickest and then rolled down the slope to prevent the enemy from retiring or being reinforced. The second phase included 4 batteries of 175mm guns from Camp Carroll and the Rock Pile delivering ordnance along two arms of a broad "V" which embraced the base of the hill from the northeast with the objective of saturating the area wherein the NVA reserve battalion was estimated to be. Slowly the "V" crept up the slopes until it reached a point 200 meters from the wire... The third phase involved rapidly assembling aircraft delivering TPQ-10 controlled air-strikes in the form of 200 and 300 meter ripples dropped outboard of and parallel to the "V" to avoid check fires. Bombs fell on known mortar clusters, possible assembly areas, and through the area to the far rear of the assault battalion. Enemy attack doctrine frequently positions the reserve battalion directly behind the assault unit. At all costs, the FSCC was determined to prevent their juncture. Hence, the multiple bands of fire. The reserve battalion never materialized."[1455]

In addition to artillery, 861-A received significant 81mm mortar support from INDIA Company on 881-South. "Bill Dabney was the real hero. He had 3 81mm tubes. They were further away than the max. range, but he had 20 meters more elevation and this was enough to give him extra range. They fired 1100 rounds out of 3 tubes in 3 hours."[1456] Additionally, there was 106mm recoilless rifle fire from 2/26 at Hill 558.

All during this time, KSCB received an exceptionally heavy volume of incoming rocket, mortar, and suspected artillery fire,[1457] undoubtedly meant to stop our artillery support. "They all did a magnificent job. See, they were getting hit, too. There was a lull for awhile, and I called back. In no uncertain language I told them to get firing again. And very calmly I heard this voice on the other end of the radio saying, 'No matter how many guns we loose, we will support you.' And they started shooting again. They had to take guns off other targets."[1458]

Since the initial mortar barrage on E-1 had knocked out the 60mm mortar there, Cpl Billy E. Drexel, Jr., as Mortar Section Leader, disregarded the heavy, minatory fire from the NVA and led another mortar squad and tube to E-1's position and fired over 300 rounds within 25 meters of the Command Post area. When 2 NVA came to within 30 feet of his position, Cpl Drexel accurately threw a fragmentation grenade, killing both.[1459] Michael

---

[1451] Comments of Cpl Eugene J. Franklin (mortar squad, E-1), April, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775

[1452] Letter of Thomas Eichler, postmarked 3 September 1986.

[1453] Comments of PFC Newton D. Lyle, April, 1968, USMC Oral History Tape #1775.

[1454] 26Mar ComdC February, 1968, Encl (1), p. 8.

[1455] Baig letter of 23 December 1968, cited, pp. 3-4.

[1456] Conversation with Earle G. Breeding, 18 July 1984.

[1457] 26Mar ComdC February, 1968, Encl (1), p. 8.

[1458] Interview of Breeding, 13 July 1989, cited; Comments of Earle G. Breeding, 13 July 1989, Khe Sanh Veterans Reunion, Chicago, Il., printed in Khe Sanh Veteran, issue #9 (Summer 1989) 7.

[1459] Statement of 2/Lt Donald E.R. Shanley, 19 Feb 1968, in Bronze Star Medal file of Cpl Billy E. Drexel, Jr.

B. DeLaney recalls: "We shifted our tube straight up in an effort to reduce greatly the number of NVA that were fighting to control and overrun 861A. Our mortar crew lay as flat as we could around and in the gun pit so as to still operate our weapon, praying we could survive our own rounds. The spectacle and thought of what we were doing was beyond comprehension. Our crew survived with only minor injuries while producing substantial casualties for the NVA."[1460]

In the midst of the carnage and horror, terror, and fear, a bit of battlefield humor intervened. "While in the trench line at our last defensive perimeter, I was in the process of throwing grenade after grenade out of the position when I thought: this is taking too long. So in my haste to speed up the process I pulled the pin on two grenades and laid them behind the Lieutenant who was directing supporting fire from hill 881. The Lieutenant turned around just as I came to my senses and had barely managed to get the grenades out of the trench line before they exploded. To this day he believes that I saved his life by throwing enemy grenades out of the position. At the time I was afraid to tell him what really happened."[1461]

Michael Worth remembers this grenade throwing by Eichler, "Ike," and feels he should have been recognized by the Medal of Honor: "When we reached the point where the enemy was coming through the wire, Ike [Eichler] unbelievably was standing above the trench line with no regard for his own life, throwing one grenade after another and screaming at the enemy. The rest of us were trying to keep low. Ike was a sitting duck since the hill at this time was like daylight with all the illumination. There must have been an angle of the Lord protecting him. It was a miracle he was not killed. His continued grenade attack plugged the hole up where the enemy was coming through. This enabled the hill finally to be secured. The rest of us felt like if Ike had not plugged the hole up the enemy would of kept pouring in and eventually conquered the hill... We all felt like Ike deserved the Medal of Honor for his uncommon valor and bravery."[1462]

The first assault against Hill 861-Alpha ceased at 0520H.[1463] E-1, under the leadership of Lt Shanley, had pulled his platoon back into supplementary positions, counterattacked, and drove out the NVA that had penetrated the defensive wire.[1464] "We bent the company perimeter around to just north of the aid station and then it became fixed bayonets and we had a bayonet charge. Once we really engaged the enemy that way, it was all our ball game from that point on because a trained Marine rifleman is so much superior to any other rifleman in the world, and I will stake my life on—I did! We pushed them and drove them out."[1465]

At 0616H, the NVA again assaulted Hill 861A.[1466] The NVA assault, made by survivors of the first assault, was quickly beaten back. The reserve battalion never materialized, having been caught in the artillery barrage.[1467] Capt Breeding assumed that the second assault was meant as a distraction so they could retrieve their dead and wounded left outside the wire on the northern sector.[1468] By 0955H the wounded of Hill 861-A had been evacuated and extra medical supplies flown in. At 1430H, a platoon from D/1/26 reinforced Co E on 861-A.[1469] The platoon, D-3, led by 2/Lt Samuel James Hannah, one officer and 36 enlisted Marines, included one with completely white hair who looked at Breeding and asked, "Sir, are you the Company Commander?" "Yes," responded Breeding. "May I speak with you, Sir?" He then related that all the replacements had been told that none of them would get off that hill alive![1470]

The NVA attack had obviously proved the validity of defending this hill outpost,[1471] but the cost was indeed great. Marine losses were 7 KIA and 25 WIA (evacuated).[1472] The Platoon Sergeant of E-1, SSGT McChurty G. Allen, in words that are reminiscent of John Donne's famous lines: "Everyone of the men that were lost were part of me."[1473] The specter of battlefield's horror etched itself on PFC Edward Steward: "You could see Vietnamese laying all over, everywhere. Guts laying everywhere—eyeballs and stuff like that. Being a boot that I was, I never forget that night, the 5th."[1474]

[1460] Letter from Michael B. DeLaney to Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc., 29 July 1996. DeLaney indicates Cpl Billy E. Drexel as the Squad Leader, LCPL James Appleman and LCPL J.T. Nangle as gunners, and PFCs James Carmichael, Donald M. Wyatt, Carl Lerose, Michael Roberts, and Michael B. DeLaney as ammo humpers.

[1461] Letter of Thomas Eichler, postmarked 3 September 1986.

[1462] "Thank You, Ike!" letter from Michael Worth, 23 June 1991, printed in the Khe Sanh Veteran, Issue #37 (Fall, 1996) 21.

[1463] 3rd MarDiv COC 082318Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #385.

[1464] Comments of Capt Earle G. Breeding, March, 1968, USMC Oral History Tape #2621; Statement of 2/Lt Alec J. Bodenweiser in Bronze Star Medal file of 2/Lt Donald Edmund Shanley.

[1465] Interview of Earle G. Breeding by Duon Rose, 13 July 1989.

[1466] 3rd MarDiv COC 151559Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #386.

[1467] Letter of Baig, 23 December 1968, cited.

[1468] Comments of Breeding, Tape 2621, cited.

[1469] 26Mar ComdC, Feb, 1968, Encl (1), p. 8.

[1470] Conversation with Earle G. Breeding, 29 May 1985.

[1471] Comments of Col David E. Lownds, HQMC Oral History Tape #2621.

[1472] 3rd MarDiv COC 151559Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #386.

[1473] Comments of SSGT McChurty G. Allen, April, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[1474] Comments of PFC Edward Steward, April, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #1775.

"After the battle was over, we had Vietnamese scattered everywhere. We were picking them up and carried them down to the point where they came in—mutilated bodies where they'd been shot up real bad. We piled them up. Another man helped me dig a hole and bury them... I never thought that I could ever throw 19 human beings in a hole and just covered them up. What made it so bad—I stood up and peed on them. It just affected me so bad because that was the first time I'd ever saw a dead Marine, my squad leader, Bogard. I remember helping take him to the LZ to be transported out. And I remember just falling down on my knees, crying just like my 3 year-old baby."[1475]

Sgt John Carl Ornelas was killed by a 152mm artillery round. His fellow Marines had cautioned him against walking the main base road that went by recon, LSU, C-Med, and to use the trench system instead, but he was determined to use the road. He just stepped out of his hootch and was walking up toward the main road. "The shell damn-near landed on his bootlaces and split him wide open and gutted him all at one time. There was a very surprised look on his face; his face didn't get hurt. His eyes were as big as saucers."[1476]

PFC James Allen Lowery died in an artillery attack on the Rockpile positions of A Battery, 1st Battalion, 40th Artillery Regiment, 108th Artillery Group, 1st Field Force, supporting Khe Sanh.[1477]

06 FEBRUARY 1968

CORLEY, LCPL Thomas Eugene	C/1/26
MEADE, CPL Thomas Allerton	D/1/26

KSCB was struck by 3 incoming rockets at 1845H, killing 2 Marines.[1478]

Cpl Meade, a Company Clerk for D/1/26, was killed by a rocket at the entranceway of his bunker that took him apart; his head was missing.[1479]

One of his buddies, Cpl Patrick J. Fitch, a company clerk for B/1/26, remembers him: "Tom had mesmeric eyes. His 'black Irish' features and quick wit were gifts denied an entire generation of young American peers. He was a principled man who truly believed in God and country without affectation. It was my deep pleasure to have known him. Like all deaths, I try not to dwell on the end. He was gregarious and [playing] cards were one of our few diversions... My last game with the S-1 troops who worked with Tom was replete with booze. I have no idea how it appeared... The game was on at Delta Company and there was enough of something that looked like Jack Daniels to make every one of us happy. As I recall, there were always about eight people in the game... I left the tent with Tom, went outside, visited the piss tube and felt elated that I escaped with a mere $60 deficit and all my limbs appropriately attached. Then we laughed. That's what I still remember about Tom. Not the end, but the beginning and the middle. He was only a Corporal here but he's now a celestial Sergeant Major."[1480]

Thomas Aloysius Meade[1481]
By Patrick Fitch, B/1/26

"Hippiecrits" he called them.
Students in "The World."
Did they know? Did they care?

His name was Thomas.
Apostle of doubt.
Penultimate Aloysius, surname Meade.

The rocket round directly taken.
Chest high – no cry.

He had a name, and it wasn't "Corporal."
Left a twin brother and a father who asked:
"How did he die?"

But the letter was a lie.
No body bag need apply.
A backpack sufficed.
For the arm and the watch
we tagged remains.

Just another stat.
Body count ours.
On a damp little mesa.

Just a faded memory of the 26th Marines in a place called Khe Sanh.

His death was obscene.

07 FEBRUARY 1968

ASHLEY, SFC Eugene	A-101
CORBIN, LCPL Russell B Jr.	B /1/26
HANNA, SMAJ Kenneth	A-101
HOLT, MSGT James William	A-101
KOT, CPL Myron	H&S/3/26
LINDEWALD, MSGT Charles W Jr.	A-101

[1475] Taped comments of Larry E. Jackson, November, 1984.
[1476] Conversation with Philip Wright, 12 January 1995.
[1477] Letter of Mark Swearengen, 9 March 2007.
[1478] 26Mar 061615Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #392, para. 4.H.
[1479] Conversation with Ernest E. Spencer, 16 July 1996.
[1480] Letter of Patrick Fitch to Ernest E. Spencer, 1993, printed in Khe Sanh Veteran 1:5 (Spring, 1994) 36.
[1481] Ibid., p. 37.

MORELAND, SFC James Leslie A-101
PHILLIPS, SFC Daniel Raymond A-101

On 14 January 1968, the 304th Division Party Committee met from 1800 until 0300 the following day to discuss the coming campaign and combat mission assigned by the Front. "The reason that the meeting lasted so long was because of the change in the timing. At the beginning the intention was to open fire launching the campaign at the end of February. But now it had been changed to the 20th of January. Therefore the combat preparations had to move quickly. The troops who had a long route of movement had just arrived in the battlefield. The organization of the troops, the preparation of rice and ammunition had not yet been done. The reconnaissance and preparation for combat plans had also just been initiated. The total time permitted to prepare would only be within the next four to five days. At that time the mission the Front assigned to the Division was extremely heavy. The Division was reinforced by the 198th Tank Battalion.."[1482]

During the attack on BV-33 at Ban Houei Sane, only two of the eleven tanks of 3rd Tank Company went into combat; after the battle, all eleven tanks returned to their regrouping point.[1483] At the 14 January meeting, it was decided that Lang Vei would be attacked the night of 26 January; the date had to be delayed "because the date of arrival of the tanks could not be guaranteed."[1484] The forces attacking Lang Vei consisted of units from two divisions and represented the first time tanks where employed in the war.[1485] "This was the first time the [304th] Division carried out a combined branch operation with a complement of infantry, engineers, armor, and artillery participating in a major engagement."[1486]

The mission was to "..eliminate the enemy forces at A-2 [the secret cover name for Lang Vei] and liberate the populace. If the enemy came out of their positions [i.e., if additional troops arrived, then the reinforcements were to be attacked]. This engagement would create favorable conditions to surround and isolate the enemy at Khe Sanh.. and permit reinforcements to be attacked.."[1487]

Two major issues at the 14 January meeting raised by the 24th Regiment included how to attack strong fortifications. As a result, the Front Command requested the 24th Regiment to prepare numerous explosive charges and augmented the regiment with a flame-thrower unit. The second problem was the requirement to make 16 bridges trafficable by tanks moving from the west. A sand table was utilized to establish the route for the armor and coordination with the infantry.[1488]

Prior to the 14 January meeting, engineers had secretly and frequently conducted reconnaissance and measured the various depths of the Xepone River. At the meeting, the engineer unit was to establish (by 24 January) the tank route, destroy underwater obstacles so that the tanks could move across the water in sections of the river that were deep and move on tracks in shallow areas. "Hundreds of engineer troops swam underwater to lead the tanks and cadre and soldiers riding the tanks so that they knew how to drive the tanks safely at night."[1489] From the Xepone River, the engineers took advantage of a small stream to create a road in secrecy nearly 4 KM long that would permit the tanks to arrive so that when the attack was launched, they would have the element of surprise. As planned, on 24 January the 9th Armor Company consisting of 8 PT-76 amphibious tanks[1490] reached a regrouping point at Pe Sai, 3 KM from Lang Vei (as the crow flies). However, because the tanks could not withdraw, the attack was delayed.[1491] The tanks were on a brush-covered hill with grass covering only the top of the [1482] Su Doan 304 (Ky Su) (Tap II) [304th Division (Chronology) (Vol. 2), Trans. Sedgwick Tourison, Hanoi: People's Army Publishing House, 1990, pp. 63-63. [See p. 113 of this book for ramifications of the change of "N-Day" on other battlefield operations].

---

[1483] Ibid., p. 69.

[1484] Ibid., p. 72.

[1485] Ibid., p. 73. Units participating in this battle were: the 24th Regiment of the 304th Division (minus the 6th Battalion which had been assigned to the Hue Front), the 4th and 40th Sapper Companies, the 3rd Battalion of the 325th Division, one 122mm Artillery Battalion from the 45th Artillery Regiment, the 7th Engineer Battalion (minus), the 3rd and the 9th Armor Companies which were under the command of the 304th Division.[1485] The plan was for the 3rd Battalion of the 325th Division together with the two sapper companies and the 4th and the 40th (minus) augmented by the 9th Armor Company were to attack from the south with the mission of eliminating the command headquarters and Companies 104 and 101. The 5th Battalion together with 2 sapper squads and 6 tanks were to attack from the secondary direction from the west with the mission of eliminating Companies 102, 103, and coordinate with the 3rd Battalion of 325th Division to wipe out the American command headquarters. The 7th Company, accompanied by 2 tanks from the 3rd Armor Company were to attack the outer outpost. The 4th Battalion of the 24th Regiment, using the 2nd and 3rd Companies were to attack from the northeast into the positions of Company 101. The 3rd Company deployed one platoon to attack the camp in the village of Lang Vei.

[1486] Ibid., p. 75.

[1487] Ibid., p. 75.

[1488] Ibid., pp. 75-76.

[1489] Ibid., p. 76.

[1490] The PT-76 has a welded hull which makes it completely waterproof and amphibious, despite its 15.4 tons. Armament includes a 76mm main gun that fires high explosive rounds. Its main gun can fire 15 rounds per minute on a sustained basis. It also has a 7.62mm coaxial machinegun. The tank has a crew of three: tank commander, gunner, and driver. The maximum road speed is 27 mph (6 mph max. in water) and has a max. range of 161 miles. [Stockwell, David B., Tanks in the Wire, Canton, Ohio: Daring Books, 1989, p. 175].

[1491] Su Doan 304, op. cit., p. 76.

tracks; the armor troops used dirt in order to camouflage the tanks. "Although the enemy routinely used reconnaissance aircraft and commando forces to sweep the surrounding area, our troops were able to maintain secrecy for the large mechanized force for 12 days and nights until the hour arrived to open fire."[1492] Meanwhile NVA infantry units closed in and surrounded the Lang Vei base.

Following the overthrow of BV-33 at Ban Houei Sane, Laos, 520 Lao soldiers and their 2200 dependents[1493] moved to Lang Vei and were located at the old Lang Vei camp site (XD794361) pending arrangements for their air evacuation back to Laos.[1494] LtCol Daniel F. Schungel (CO of the "C" Company,[1495] radio call-sign CROSS-BOW), had arrived the afternoon of 6 February replacing LtCol Hoadley (the C Company XO); it has been Schungel's policy to keep one of the Company's three field grade officers at Lang Vei since the CO of BV-33 (radio call sign, ELEPHANT) was a LtCol and to coordinate with the complex tactical and refugee situation that had developed.[1496] With the fall of BV-33, Lang Vei was isolated. Following the fall of the Huong Hoa District on 22 January, the Team Sergeant of A-101, William Craig, noted, "..that killed us. We were cut off. We was finished."[1497] MACV had requested a review of contingency plans to reinforce Lang Vei in view of the NVA buildup threatening it;[1498] 3rd Marine Division responded that the plan written in September, 1967, providing for initial support of one reinforced rifle company and command group to be deployed on a 2-hour alert remained valid with no additional assistance or support required (as of 20 Jan).[1499]

All of this reassurance obviously changed due to the battlefield situation that rapidly developed at Khe Sanh as it became surrounded by 40,000 NVA that saturated the area. No one bothered to inform Lang Vei (radio call sign SPUNKY HANSON), and military units and individuals never say they cannot discharge their mission. Those in the C Company rear in DaNang or those at MACV perhaps should have ordered the newly-constructed camp abandoned. They did not.

Its tenuous and precarious location (close to the Laotian border and the D'Ai Lao Pass at Lao Bao on Route 9) and difficulty in traveling to it from the KSCB,[1500] together with last minute intelligence (aerial photography, electronic sensors, signals intelligence) indicated that the NVA had "anticipated that we might possibly reinforce the garrison at Lang Vei; [and] had troops positioned along the edges of Route 9" and in planned helicopter landing zones.[1501] Major General Rathvon McClure Tompkins, the CG of 3rd Marine Division, had dictated a prohibition against local patrols; patrols were to be limited to 500 meters from the KSCB.[1502] Tompkins, evaluating the developed situation at Khe Sanh following 20 January, stated: "there were no troops [available], the bases were under attack at the time, and had the base not been under attack I still wouldn't have sent a battalion to Lang Vei. Route 9 was completely held by the enemy—complete from Khe Sanh village to the Laotian border was enemy territory, [and] the hills to the north of Route 9 were completely held by the enemy."[1503] When Lang Vei came under attack, the KSCB was under heavy artillery

---

[1492] Ibid., p. 77.

[1493] BV-33, as with similar Lao units, were similar to our National Guard; they were locally static troops together with their families, chickens, livestock, etc. The CO of BV-33 was LtCol Soulang Phetsomphou.

[1494] "General Narrative of Events," Encl (8) to 5th Special Forces Group (Airborne), Combat After Action Interview Report, Battle of Lang Vei Special Forces Camp, 7 February 1968, 22 March 1968. (Hereinafter referred to as AAR, Lang Vei).

[1495] In Special Forces organization, the "A" teams are the operational detachments and the "C" Company is the headquarters coordinating the various "A" teams.

[1496] Statement of LTC Daniel F. Schungel, Encl (2) to AAR, Lang Vei.

[1497] Conversation with William Craig, 04 October 1988.

[1498] COMUSMACV 140801Z/Jan68, Lang Vei Special Forces Camp in 3rd MarDiv Msgs, Etc. file, Jan 1968, Encl (34).

[1499] 3rd MarDiv 200808Z/Jan68, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs, Etc., file, Jan 1968, Encl (53).

[1500] LtCol James B. Wilkinson, CO of 1/26, had sent Co A/1/26, led by Captain John Raymond, to conduct an imaginary rescue mission, avoiding roads and trails, and moving overland to Lang Vei. The exercise, launched at 0600H on 25 September 1967, brought the Marine company to Hill 552 by 0945H, Hill 542 (XD809391) [later, LZ PEANUTS] at 1625H where they set in for the night, and then moved out at 0630H the next morning arriving at XD805381 by 0840H and Lang Vei (at XD 791363) at 1600H, remaining at XD781375 for the evening. The movement took approximately 19 hours. [1/26 ComdC Sep 1967, S-2/S-3 Log, 25 and 26 Sep 1967; Intv of James B. Wilkinson by John Wright, 14 July 1989; Letter of LtCol James B. Wilkinson to Capt. Moyers S. Shore, HistBr, G-3, HQMC, 19 December 1968]. Maj Matthew P. Caulfield, S-3 of 3/26, made a similar trek in January, 1968, with the conclusion: "..it was tactically impossible to go down there. The place should have been closed up if the intelligence showed that they were going to be overrun. The Army people at Lang Vei actually thought that we were going to come down and help them out. It was tactically unsound to do so... Someone should have told them that it was impossible for us to help them in almost any instance." [Comments of Maj Matthew P. Caulfield, HQMC Oral History Tape #6157].

[1501] Comments of Col. David E. Lownds, HQMC Oral History Tape #2621; Conversation with David E. Lownds, 04 November 1989.

[1502] Intv of MGen Tompkins by Oral History team, HistBr, HQMC, 13 April 1973, Transcript p. 31. Tompkins' strategy was to conduct a "set piece" battle: to create a lucrative target and annihilate gathering large numbers of NVA troops by air power.

[1503] Ibid., p. 30.

attack and the airstrip had become unusable and deteriorated weather the morning of the 7th was not conducive to aerial operations. An Air Force CHECO report begins its discussion of the fall of Lang Vei: "Although there was more than sufficient advance notice that the Special Forces Camp at Lang Vei would come under heavy attack, probably backed by armored support, the enemy appeared to have little difficulty in overrunning this outpost on 7 February."[1504]

Although Captain Frank Willoughby,[1505] the Commanding Officer of A-101 at Lang Vei, was aware the NVA utilized armor, he "..did not expect an attack in which tanks would physically penetrate the camp defenses... Willoughby suspected that the tanks were intended for an attack against the Khe Sanh combat base."[1506] Captain Willoughby had served 3 years in the USMC and was a Sergeant before going to Army OCS from which he was commissioned in 1963. Interestingly, he was the OCS Commander when Miles Wilkins, the Executive Officer of A-101, went through officer training.[1507] The camp at the new Lang Vei site had just been completed at great cost: extensive fields of fire had been cleared; a sound and sturdy concrete TOC [Tactical Operations Center] had been built; only Americans were permitted within the inner perimeter (to avoid a repetition of the 4 May 1967 overthrow of the camp by agents from within); and Captain Willoughby confidently asserted the camp could withstand an assault by a NVA regiment.

At 061810H, an estimated 40 – 50 rounds of 152mm artillery exploded within the southern perimeter of the camp launching the battle.[1508] The artillery was fired by the 45th Regiment and from artillery organic to the 304th Division. "Taking advantage of the sounds of the exploding artillery rounds, the 9th Armor Company moved parallel to Highway 9 to its point from which it would launch its combat movement. The engineers had repaired the bridges and the fords, organized recovery parties if necessary to ensure that the route was satisfactory for the armor, and at 2300 all eight tanks had arrived at the Bi Hien Bridge, 2 kilometers from the enemy. The 3rd Armor Company after having hidden itself for twelve days at Pe Sai rid itself of its camouflage and moved along a branch of the Xepone River, advancing to [Lang] Troai hamlet which was 1800 meters from the enemy."[1509]

Sgt Peter Tiroch, in the TOC when the rounds started to impact in 104 Company (at 1800, 6 Feb) linked up with Sgt Fragos who had gone there (from the TOC guard tower) to aid 2 WIA. Since no friendly artillery was being received, Tiroch became frustrated and went to the 4.2-in. position approximately 30 meters to the west of the TOC where he met LTC Schungel and 1/Lt Longgrear who already were there. Using maximum charge, 1/Lt Longgrear passed the H.E. rounds to LtCol Schungel who passed them to Sgt Tiroch who dropped them in the tube. After the NVA fire ceased, Tiroch returned to the TOC. He learned of some trouble at the MSF OP: SFCs Lindewald and Hanna reported that the indigenous troops did not want to remain there because they had seen numerous enemy. Sgt Tiroch then went to sleep in the TOC and was awakened "about midnight" with the words, "There are tanks in the wire!"[1510]

All NVA firing ceased approximately 1900, and at 1930, two CIDG troops within the 104 Company area reported hearing noises similar to engines running, coming from the vicinity of Lang Troai (XD780344) south of the camp. About the same time, the Mobile Strike Force OP (location of Sgts Hanna and Lindewald) to the west (XD778531) also reported hearing noises,[1511] although the USSF with the platoon (SFCs Lindewald and Hanna) reported by radio that they had personally seen no enemy.[1512]

Camp Lang Vei was shaped like a dog biscuit with Highway 9 its top (north) edge. The northeast corner was occupied by 101 Company, the southeast corner defended by 104 Company, the southwest corner defended by 103 Company, and the northwest corner by 102 Company. Outside the wire and to the west lay the Mobile Strike Force OP. Along the long northern edge the CRP 1 had its position, while at the southern edge lay CRP 2. Within the inner concertina perimeter, the TOC was located just above the 104 Company.

The locations of Americans at Lang Vei when the battle erupted indicate a wide dispersion:
[* = KIA]

At the TOC:
Capt Frank C. Willoughby, Detachment CO
LtCol Daniel F. Schungel, CO of Co C
SSG Emmanuel E. Phillips, Radio operations supervisor
SSG Peter Tiroch, Intelligence Sergeant

In the TOC Guard Tower:
SGT Nikolas Fragos, Assistant Medical SP

At the 81mm Mortar #1:
1/Lt Thomas E. Todd, Co C Asst Eng Off
*SP5 Daniel R. Phillips, Demo SP

[1504] Warren A. Trest, Khe Sanh (Operation Niagara), 22 January – 31 March 68, HQ, PACAF, Directorate, Tactical Evaluation, CHECO Division, 13 September 1968, p. 29. ["CHECO"=Contemporary Historical Evaluation of Combat Operations].
[1505] Willoughby died 5 April 1998 in Alabama.
[1506] "General Narrative," cited.
[1507] Conversation with Miles Wilkins, 27 March 1994.
[1508] Statement of Capt Frank C. Willoughby in AAR Lang Vei.
[1509] Su Doan 304, op. cit., p. 79.
[1510] Statement of SSG Peter Tiroch, AAR, Battle of Lang Vei.
[1511] Statement of Capt Frank Willoughby, AAR, Battle of Lang Vei.
[1512] Statement of Emanuel E. Phillips, AAR, Battle of Lang Vei.

At the 81mm Mortar #2:
1/Lt Paul R. Longgrear, CO of 12th MSF Co.
At the 4.2-in. Mortar:
1/Lt Miles R. Wilkins, Detachment XO
SFC William T. Craig, Team Sergeant
SP4 Franklin H. Dooms, Jr., Radio operator
At 101 Company:
SFC Harvey G. Brande, Plt Leader, 12th MSF Co.
At 102 Company:
SGT John D. Early, Plt Leader, 12th MSF Co.
At CRP 2 area:
SFC Earle F. Burke, Plt Leader, 12th MSF Co.
At Mobile Strike Force OP:
*SFC Kenneth Hanna, Heavy Weapons Sgt
*SFC Charles W. Lindewald, Plt Leader, 12th MSF Co.
At the Emergency Medical Bunker:
*SFC James W. Holt, Senior Medic
At Supply Bunker #1:
SSG Arthur Brooks, Light Wpns Sgt
SSG Dennis L. Thompson, Jr. Radio Operator
At the Team House:
SP4 William G. McMurray, Jr. Radio operator
*SP4 James L. Moreland, Medic for MSF
At the Old Lang Vei campsite:
*SFC Eugene Ashley, Jr., Intelligence SGT
SGT Richard H. Allen, Assistant Medical SP
SP4 Joel Johnson, Asst Medical SP[1513]

"Under the command of the 5th Battalion Commander, Dinh Xuan Nguyen, and the Political Officer of the 6th Company, Bui Dinh Cang, led two squads of sappers to place connected explosive charges [i.e., Bangalore torpedoes]. Arriving next to the base, the enemy threw grenades, and Dung, the sapper squad leader, threw them back. However, he didn't throw the second grenade fast enough and he was killed... The tanks advanced first. Company Commander Dan led his force behind the tanks seizing their objectives and providing protection for the tanks. When they reached the center, separated by one roll of barbed wire, Squad Leader Nguyen Van Ngan used demolition charges to finish the job. Nguyen Van Tuat's squad and two tanks penetrated deep into the area with the flag pole."[1514]

Captain Willoughby's first indication of the battle that was to erupt came at 2330 when the 104 Company reported enemy troops in their wire.[1515] Then, at 0015, the observer in the TOC tower (Sgt Nikolas Fragos) reported seeing 2 men cutting the wire in front of a vehicle (later identified as a tank). "Both men were cut down by small arms fire from the camp perimeter. At this time the tank turned on its spotlight for about 30 seconds and 'G-2d' the area before running over the wire."[1516] Sgt Fragos ran down to the TOC to report what he had seen; LTC Schungel emerged with him to observe the tank with his own eyes. At 0030, tanks were sighted by SGT Lindewald with many ground troops behind them and Capt Willoughby called INTRIGUE (26th Marines) to report they were being hit with tanks.[1517] At 0030 on 07 February 1968, Company C, 5th SFGA, recorded the radio message: 2 tanks in the wire, hit from 2 sides, one company of CSF overrun.[1518] At 0032, Willoughby requested JACKSONVILLE (Artillery at KSCB) to fire pre-plotted concentrations.[1519] The 26th Marines COC records 070042H: Lang Vei USSF camp reported NVA troops and tanks on the camp's defensive wire.[1520] This was followed at 0054H with the report of tanks inside the camp's defensive wire. Seven tanks were reported.[1521] Capt. Willoughby was vexed at a delay in receiving artillery: "If we had received it in time, we could have knocked out the tanks in the wire... Two tanks were knocked out in the wire with our 106 and they were sitting there smoking. Another tank pulled around the two that were destroyed and rolled into 104 Company [SE corner of the camp].. blowing bunkers apart and finally 104 Company fell.. The tank remained in 104 Company's area."[1522] Capt Willoughby was unaware that beginning at 0040 and lasting until 0400, KSCB came under heavy mortar and rocket fire, the majority of the fire impacting in the area of 1/26 (XD849417) and 3/26 (XD837417).[1523] This incoming may have been the occasion for CPL Myron Kot's death.[1524]

When the attack started, SP4 Franklin H. Dooms was in the 4.2-in mortar bunker. 1/Lt Wilkins and SP4 Dooms were told to shoot illumination rounds. Dooms set the time on the illum while Wilkins fired them. A few minutes later they learned of the tanks in the wire and were joined by SFC Craig and SP4 Phillips who were bleeding from head wounds. SSG Tiroch (who was jolted [1513] Encl (1) to Combat After Action Interview Report, Battle of Lang Vei.

[1514] Su Doan 304, op. cit., pp. 79-80.
[1515] Statement of Capt Frank C. Willoughby, AAR Lang Vei.
[1516] Statement of Nickolas Fragos, AAR Lang Vei.
[1517] Statement of SP4 Joel Johnson, AAR Lang Vei.
[1518] Co C, 5th SFGA Journal Entries, AAR Lang Vei, Encl (7).
[1519] Monitored Radio Transmissions 6-7 February 1968, Encl (8) to AAR Lang Vei.
[1520] 26Mar Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #393, Para 3.A.
[1521] Ibid., Para 3.B.
[1522] Statement of Frank C. Willoughby, AAR Lang Vei.
[1523] 26Mar Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #393, para 4.A. Kent O.W. Steen, an officer at the FSCC at Khe Sanh later noted that the reason artillery wasn't immediately fired was because of the SAV-A-PLANE doctrine which enunciated a prohibition against artillery once any aircraft had been requested (for fear of a round hitting the aircraft). [Conversation with Col. Kent O.W. Steen, 25 Mar 1992].
[1524] The Opn SCOTLAND SITREPs for this date do not note any KIA. In fact, SITREP #393 (covering the period 0001 – 0600) notes 63 KIA for Opn SCOTLAND to this point, and SITREP #396 (covering the period 1801 – 2400) notes 62 KIA for Opn SCOTLAND to this point! Kot's MOS, 2511, is in the communications field, "Wireman."

awake by the words, "there are tanks in the wire,") joined them and suggested some H.E. [High Explosive] rounds also be fired just outside the wire to detain any ground troops that might accompany the tanks.[1525] In addition to SP4 Dooms, SSG Thompson, SFC Burke and SSG Peter Tiroch, about 15 minutes later SFC Craig and SP5 Phillips joined them in the 4.2-in. mortar position. The latter two had been hit by fragments in the face and were both almost deaf.[1526]

1/Lt Thomas E. Todd, who arrived at Lang Vei the afternoon of 5 February to supervise the repair of its airstrip found himself in supply bunker #1 when, at 0100 he observed a NVA tank drive in front of his position headed towards the TOC. He dashed to his bunker to retrieve some grenades and, while searching for them, his bunker took a direct hit by NVA artillery. He immediately vacated his destroyed bunker and dashed to the emergency medical bunker located just north of his bunker. He had just arrived when one tank stopped in front of the bunker's front entrance and fired point blank in to the stairway and another tank positioned itself at the rear entrance and fired. Both tanks then departed, and Todd decided to remain in the bunker until morning and then see what the situation was. While in the bunker, he observed that the tanks were active within the camp from about 0230 to 1600.[1527]

By 0135, KSCB was averaging 6 rounds a minute of incoming.[1528]

As SGT Holt delivered effective fire against the tanks with a 106mm recoilless rifle single-handedly until joined by SSG Peter Tiroch, LTC Daniel Schungel organized tank-killer teams consisting of 1/Lt Longgrear, 1/Lt Quy [VNSF S-3, Det C-1], SGT Fragos, SP5 McMurray, and later, 1/Lt Wilkins, to contain the tanks that had penetrated the 104 Company area.[1529] Schungel dispatched Fragos and McMurray for all the LAWs they could carry plus hand grenades and sent 1/Lt Longgrear to the TOC for additional LAWs and hand grenades. By 0100, the 106RR had knocked out two tanks at the wire, but two more had penetrated the wire and one was practically upon Schungel. A tank had fired at the entrance of the TOC, caving it in. Only 1/Lt Quy remained unscathed in this effort and was able to maintain a heavy volume of fire against the NVA attempting to outflank the Americans. "I am sure he saved our lives."[1530] 1/Lt Wilkins was knocked unconscious, crushed between barrels and SP5 McMurray was gravely wounded: he was unable to see and both of his hands were mangled. Schungel was knocked "head over heels" by the concussion, but sustained only a slight wound to his right hip. He took McMurray to a pile of sandbags, attempting to make him comfortable. "He looked to me as if he was out of it. Then I got Wilkins awake and got him situated. He was beginning to come around."[1531] 1/Lt Quy suggested that he and Schungel hide in a shell crater until dawn, however another tank approached from the rear. It was now about 0300 and "there were plenty of NVA around in small groups on top of the hill... I took Wilkins and we crept down to the team house. I deposited him behind the half finished bar, and then stood in the middle of the building where I could observe both entrances." He cut the rubber inner tubes on the doors so they remained open.[1532]

Meanwhile, three tanks were lumbering up Route 9 just below the Mobile Strike Force OP to the west and SP4 Joel Johnson reported two tanks sitting in the drop zone between Highway 9 and Lang Vei village (vicinity XD791358).[1533]

A FAC was on station at 0055 and made radio contact with SPUNKY HANSON, informing him that fighter aircraft were on the way. "SPOOKY" was on station at 0101 but was concerned over the possible effect of tank fire on his aircraft. At 0105, SPOOKY radioed JACKSONVILLE (arty, KSCB) saying that he could not do anything to the tanks, but they could sure work on him. Although Capt Willoughby requested fire on the south edge of the perimeter, SPOOKY never delivered the fire.[1534] Fighter aircraft were orbiting on station shortly after 0100.[1535]

Almost all of the LAWs misfired.[1536] SP5 Daniel R. Phillips was able to fire a LAW successfully by dashing close to a threatening tank.[1537] At 0115 the last 106RR was knocked out by a tank,[1538] but not before SFC Holt managed to knock out his third enemy tank, the one that had penetrated 104 Company. After Holt fired his last HEAT round, he left the 106 and almost immediately afterwards, a blast from an enemy tank destroyed the recoilless rifle and the beehive rounds located with it.[1539] SSG Peter Tiroch who was with SFC Holt, returned to the 4.2-in. bunker while Holt ran for more LAWs. This was the last time Tiroch saw Holt.[1540]

[1525] Statements of SP4 Franklin H. Dooms and SSG Peter Tiroch, AAR Lang Vei.
[1526] Statement of SSG Peter Tiroch, AAR Lang Vei.
[1527] Statement of 1/Lt Thomas E. Todd, AAR Lang Vei.
[1528] KSCB Running Log, 07 February 1968, in 26Mar ComdC Feb68.
[1529] Statement of LTC Daniel F. Schungel, AAR Lang Vei.
[1530] Ibid.
[1531] Ibid.
[1532] Ibid.
[1533] "General Narrative of Events," Encl (2), AAR Lang Vei, p. 3.
[1534] "Monitored Radio Transmissions 6-7 February 1968," AAR Lang Vei.
[1535] Ibid.
[1536] Vide Statements of SSG Peter Tiroch and SGT Nikolas Fragos, AAR Lang Vei.
[1537] Phillips, William R., Night of the Silver Stars, Annapolis, MD: Naval Institute Press, 1977, p. 86.
[1538] Statement of Capt Frank C. Willoughby, AAR Lang Vei.
[1539] "General Narrative of Events," AAR Lang Vei, p. 4.
[1540] Statement of SSG Peter Tiroch, AAR Lang Vei.

At 0130, SFC Craig radioed that the POL dump "just went up."[1541] The fire provided a reference point for air strikes. Simultaneously, LTC Schungel, SFC Holt, SP4 Moreland and Sgt Nickolas Fragos made a mad dash towards the Bru company area where the tank was and attempted to fire a LAW, without success. They moved back to the TOC at which time someone asked for some C-4. SP4 Moreland and Sgt Fragos moved to the 4.2 pit and were on their way to the ammo bunker when the fuel dump blew up into roaring flames.[1542] At 0135, 2 F-100s were on station with 750-pound general purpose bombs.[1543] Unable to move to the ammo bunker (next to the POL), Moreland and Fragos returned to the TOC. In addition to the Americans, about 25 Vietnamese were packed in the TOC.[1544]

At 0220, SPUNKY HANSON reported enemy troops hitting both ends of the camp, and nine minutes later, enemy troops inside the compound.[1545] The official NVA history of the 304th Division relates: "To the northeast, the 4th Battalion was meeting more difficulty because it had selected a breech on a hillside between two enemy bunkers and therefore when the firing began, Comrade Dang, the Battalion Commander, Comrade Si, the Company Commander, Comrade Dau, the Company Deputy Commander, and most of the platoon and squad attempting to place the explosives, were killed... The troops had only breeched two rows of barbed wire when they ran out of explosives. The enemy was firing ferociously from the two bunkers. Le Minh Thuyet, a light machine gunner, fired heavily into the bunkers but without results. The B-40 gunner, Nguyen Van Truc, was unable to fire because of the position where he was lying on the hill. The only way he could do anything was to stand up straight, fire his weapon, but Truc began to rise when he was hit and killed. Thuyet then took his friend's launcher and.. stood up straight and fired a B-40 round into the bunker, causing the enemy to break firing... The two bunkers at the breech were eliminated but the enemy's fence remained. We were out of explosive charges and those in direct command were dead or wounded. In light of this situation, the Regimental Commander gave a direct order to the battalion commander, Le Dac Long, to find any way at all to cut or break through the barbed wire so the troops could move through the breech.. While Political Officer Hoang Tho Nha ran like the wind into the breech, deputy squad leader Bui Xuan Cot moved forward with four others to cut the barbed wire and at the same time other squads moved in quickly to cut the barbed wire permitting the troops to assault into the base."[1546]

By 0230, SFC Hanna at the MSF OP reported that SFC Lindewald was gravely wounded and the OP remained under heavy attack.[1547] About this time, communications were lost with the MSF OP. Survivors from the OP escaped to the south and last saw SFC Hanna, who was also wounded, administering first aid to Lindewald on top of the OP as it was about to be overrun.[1548]

Back in the TOC, a large explosion from the tower of the TOC, apparently blown away by a tank, was followed by hand grenades dropping down the tower along with incendiary grenades which caused all the paper in the TOC to burn making smoke "so thick that it made visibility impossible [and] also made breathing impossible unless you laid flat on the floor."[1549] The NVA dropped CS grenades. "I saw the VNSF camp commander coughing and speaking some Vietnamese to his people and the next thing I saw was all the Vietnamese make it to the outside of the TOC including our Interpreter [Tiep]. I waited about five minutes and went towards the door of the TOC... Outside was light from.. flares. I saw five or six Vietnamese lined up around the exit on top and my interpreter asking me to come out. I started to ask him something when I saw the head of a NVA with a camouflaged steel pot and an AK-50 folding stock pointed at the prisoners. I pulled back from the door and heard the click of a grenade follow me.. The grenade blew up and I got a small piece of shrapnel in the left elbow. I managed to move junk on top of me since more grenades were tumbling down the staircase."[1550] The was followed by more exchange of words and grenades. 1/Lt Longgrear, SP4 Moreland and Sgt Fragos stood by the door and opened up simultaneously to discourage anyone from entering. As Fragos went into the CO's room to get some ammo, a huge charge and explosion came down the air vent knocking him unconscious.[1551]

SPUNKY HANSON reported at 0243 that all friendly personnel were in bunkers and VT fire was requested over the camp itself.[1552]

About 0245, as a tank rolled from the 103 Company area past supply bunker #1 and appeared to be headed to the 4.2-in pit, approximately 40 – 50 CIDG attempted to escape and evade through the north eastern perimeter wire. As they arrived at the wire, SFC Craig saw that SP5 Daniel R. Phillips and another (unidentified) Green Beret had made their way through the triple concertina. Although trapped in a crossfire, they appeared safe since the tanks were firing above their heads. It was the last

---

[1541] "Monitored Radio Transmissions," AAR Lang Vei.
[1542] Statement of Sgt Nickolas Fragos, AAR Lang Vei.
[1543] Ibid.
[1544] Ibid.
[1545] 26Mar Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #393, Para. 3.E. and G.
[1546] Su Doan 304, op. cit., pp. 80-81.
[1547] Statement of SSG Emanuel E. Phillips, AAR Lang Vei.
[1548] "General Narrative of Events," AAR Lang Vei, p. 4.
[1549] Statement of Sgt Nickolas Fragos, AAR Lang Vei.
[1550] Ibid.
[1551] Ibid.
[1552] 26Mar ComdC Feb 1968, Encl (1), p. 10.

time Craig saw Daniel Phillips.[1553] Machinegun fire from the eastern end of the camp prevented Craig and Tiroch along with about 10 MSF from getting through the wire. They remained fixed due to illumination still lighting the camp, and remained in shallow ditches for about 5 minutes until the illumination ceased and then rushed through the wire approximately 100 meters to the north into a bamboo thicket where they remained about 15 – 30 minutes as CBUs dropped around them causing the remainder of the MSF to take off, leaving Craig and Tiroch by themselves. They moved another 100 – 200 meters to a dry creek bed or washout and remained at its edge for the remainder of the night.[1554]

The CBUs they encountered were the result of a decision by Major General Tompkins who use FIRECRACKER munitions for the first time in the Vietnam War. Also referred to as "Improved Conventional Ammunition," these were anti-personnel, area-clearing munitions that initially exploded in a most non-spectacular manner, sending out numerous ping-pong-sized spheres which in turn exploded as numerous small grenades. The small spheres formed with an interior skin of thousands of small bumps which fragmented into tens of thousands of small bits of steel. COFRAM was classified TOP SECRET NOFORN. On 12 January 1968, Gen Westmoreland, in a back-channel message to the Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff (Gen Wheeler) said: "As I file this message, another thought occurs to me which I tag on. I believe the time has arrived to declassify and employ COFRAM. I recommend that the JCS act on this matter and that it be authorized for use in the unpopulated area of I Corps."[1555] COFRAM was controlled at the highest levels—CINCPAC and FMFPAC.[1556] At Khe Sanh, the Commander, Col. David E. Lownds was informed he needed to complete forms for another security clearance in order to have access to COFRAM information. "I said, 'What the hell do you mean you're going to have to give me another clearance? Here I am, the Commander, and you're telling me you can't talk to me about it unless—I told them to take the damn stuff and go home!' They said, 'OK, fill out this form.' I said, 'I'm not going to fill out a damn form; I just finished a tour in the armed forces special weapons project working in the atomic weapons with a clearance that would include anything.'"[1557] (The Khe Sanh Siege battle had just begun; Col Lownds obviously had more important things to do than fill out forms!) In his end of tour debrief at FMFPAC, Col Lownds noted: "When I asked for somebody to come down and give me the scoop, I finally got a Brigadier General from Fort Sill.. Now maybe this type of munitions has to be kept this secret, but you can't really make me believe it... There was nobody at Khe Sanh really who knew how it should be used, how it should be fired, what the limitations of it were, what the advantages of it were, what was a good target, what wasn't a good target."[1558] One of the artillery officers at Khe Sanh, Lt William Smith, remembers, "When it came out, it came with such hype that everyone thought, 'This is the answer to war!' Nobody knew how it was going to do... They were saving it to use on the NVA in the mass ground attack—50,000 of them in the open and one FO blow them away: Surprise!"[1559] On the highest levels, on 16 January, JCS (Earle G. Wheeler) in a memo to the Secretary of Defense, noted that COFRAM was envisioned for use at Khe Sanh and that "COFRAM submissile munitions are particularly effective against personnel targets and can take much greater advantage of the element of surprise than can their conventional counterparts."[1560] The 105 rounds were designated M444, the 155mm rounds as M449, the 8-in as M404, the 40mm cartridge as M386, M397, and M441, and the hand grenade as M33.[1561] Production costs of COFRAM totaled $47,032,600.00.[1562]

Following upon a message from SPUNKY HANSON that all above ground are to be considered enemy, Tompkins told the S-3 of 26th Marines to "use FIRECRACKER, then HE on the tanks, then air." At 0257, 28 FIRECRACKER rounds were fired on the enemy troops at Lang Vei over a 5-minute period, then 5 minutes of mixed HE and VT, then air.[1563] This was the first employment of COFRAM in the Vietnam War and in-[1553] Phillips, op. cit., p. 97. SP5 Phillips was unaccounted for when the survivors were rescued and was carried as MIA.

---

[1554] Statement of SSG Peter Tiroch, AAR Lang Vei.

[1555] Westmoreland 121422Z/Jan68, Subj: Khe Sanh, in Westmoreland vs .CBS file.

[1556] Cf FMFPAC Telephone Call 220330H/Jan68 in III MAF COC Journal and File, 21/22 Jan 1968, #356 which notes that CINCPAC advised FMFPAC that information from MACV indicated that the III MAF G-4 would receive 40% of COFRAM 20 January and the remainder 21 January and that FMFPAC was unaware of this. "If you want COFRAM immediately, tell FMFPAC how much and where and FMFPAC will ship immediately."

[1557] Conversation with Col David E. Lownds, 13 July 1997, at Khe Sanh reunion.

[1558] Debrief of Col David E. Lownds, HQMC Oral History Tape #3139; BGen Kenny and a team arrived at KSCB 30 January 1968 to brief 1/13 Marines on the employment of COFRAM munitions [1/13 ComdC January 1968, Encl (1), p. 7].

[1559] Conversation with William Smith, 16 March 1985.

[1560] JCS, JCSM-28-68, 16 January 1968, in Wheeler files, Box 1, folder: JCS, NATO, VN, Nuclear, etc.

[1561] Ibid., p. 4.

[1562] Table 2, Annex B, in JCS 092317Z appended to JCSM-29-68, cited.

[1563] 26Mar Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #393, Para. 4.D. The same pattern was fired at 0420 with an expenditure of 36 FIRECRACKER rounds.

volved Gun #3 of BRAVO Battery, 1/13, and Gun #2 of CHARLIE Battery, 1/13.[1564]

At about 0300 a tank demolished the entrance to the TOC, trapping Capt Willoughby, 1/Lt Longgrear, Sgt Phillips, Sgt Early, Sgt Fragos, SP4 Dooms, and SP4 Moreland inside along with the VNSF camp commander, the VNSF Sergeant Major [SgtMaj Day], the Company commander of 104 Company, the interpreter Minh, and a CIDG commo man. A tank sat atop the TOC for about 20 minutes, satchel charges were being thrown down the main entrance and the tower, and outside comm. was lost.[1565]

At 0330, LTC Schungel (with 1/Lt Wilkins at the team house) spotted 5 NVA approaching, three with AK-47s, 2 with satchel charges. LTC Schungel shot all 5. The team house then was struck with a satchel charge and small arms fire hitting Schungel in the right lower leg. Knowing it was unwise to remain there, upon 1/Lt Wilkins' recommendation, they moved to the dispensary, arriving about 0430 and remaining there into the morning. Schungel assumed at this time that they were the only two Americans alive on the hill.[1566] They hid under the northern end of the building behind a wall of sandbags.[1567]

In the TOC (Willoughby, Longgrear, Phillips, Early, Fragos, Moreland, and Dooms) satchel charges and grenades continued to explode from about 0300 and for the next four hours. Bullets ricocheted all over. At 0600 they received a thermite grenade that started a fire, along with CS or CN, followed by satchel charges.[1568] "We played dead and hoped for help in the morning."[1569] 1/Lt Todd remained in the medical bunker. SSG Tiroch and SFC Craig remained in the creek bed.

At approximately 0320, the TOC lost all communications with the outside. While the radios were still in good condition, the primary and secondary antennae had been cut.[1570] "Dan, a Company Commander, located the signal communications antenna being used by the enemy in the underground bunker. It had been very carefully camouflaged. He was able to break it and pour gasoline into the hole. The enemy was no longer able to communicate."[1571]

At 0452 tanks were observed on the road east of Lang Vei moving in an easterly direction toward KSCB.[1572] The tanks were spotted again at 0510 and taken under fire by aircraft.[1573]

At first light, LTC Schungel (and 1/Lt Wilkins), hearing continued ground fire, knew it wasn't yet time to emerge from their shelter. They finally hobbled out at about 0930 and eventually LTC Schungel made it to the old Lang Vei camp.[1574] Those inside the TOC heard sappers on top yelling, "We are going to blow up the bunker, so give up." The indigenous troops all surrendered. There was much firing, and Capt Willoughby assumed they had all been shot. At about 0430 the NVA started to dig a hole down the north side of the TOC. A satchel charge exploded a hole six or seven feet deep on the north side of the TOC through which the NVA tossed fragmentation grenades. Capt Willoughby was wounded by one of these at 0705 and passed out about 0800. When he came to, he reestablished comm. with Sgt Craig at the old camp site and emerged from the TOC at about 1100. He was informed that Sgt Ashley from the old camp site was attempting to link up with them.[1575] Sgt Nickolas Fragos was attempting to calm down SP4 Moreland who had earlier been hit in the head by the explosion from the air vent. "He was semi-conscious, screaming when someone touched him, unable to recognize or understand anything said to him. Realizing that morphine was contradictory in head injuries I found it necessary to give him a morphine syrette I.M. to keep him quiet as it was the only way possible that we could make the enemy think that we were dead."[1576] Capt Willoughby noted: "Moreland had been hit when the sappers blew the north wall. We tried to get him up but he was frantic and began flinging his fists and arms, kicking and yelling at the top of his lungs. With the amount of injured people that we had on our hands, the decision was made to leave Moreland there... We climbed out of the TOC and received fire from the east end of the camp. We.. filtered out in ones and twos. Sergeant Phillips and I carried Sergeant Early out. Lt Quy, VNSF, met us at the front gate with a jeep. We put everybody in the jeep and went back to the old camp. Time: about 1600."[1577] Sgt Fragos noted: "There were eight of us. We were all injured in one way or another except the two commo people (Dooms and Phillips). We decided that it was getting late and it would be suicide to stay here another night. We had been without water or food for over 24 hours. Everyone was physically exhausted and close to the point of shock. I had thrown up about seven times all through the night from [1564] Comments of Capt William J. O'Connor, HQMC Oral History Tape #2535. This was reported by MACV to CINCPAC as the first employment of COFRAM in SEA [COMUSMACV 071421Z/Feb68].

[1565] Statement of Frank C. Willoughby, AAR Lang Vei.
[1566] Statement of LTC Daniel F. Schungel, AAR Lang Vei.
[1567] "General Narrative of Events," AAR Lang Vei.
[1568] Statement of Capt Frank C. Willoughby, AAR Lang Vei.
[1569] Statement of SP4 Franklin H. Dooms, AAR Lang Vei.
[1570] "General Narrative of Events," AAR Lang Vei.
[1571] Su Doan 304, op. cit., p. 83.
[1572] 26Mar ComdC, Feb 1968, Encl (1), p. 10; 26Mar Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #393, Para 4.F.
[1573] Ibid.
[1574] Statement of LTC Daniel F. Schungel, AAR Lang Vei.
[1575] Statement of Capt Frank C. Willoughby, AAR Lang Vei.
[1576] Statement of Sgt Nickolas Fragos, AAR Lang Vei.
[1577] Statement of Capt Frank C. Willoughby, AAR Lang Vei.

the smoke and the gas causing me to be dehydrated and weak."[1578]

1/Lt Thomas E. Todd left the medical bunker where he had been hiding at 1700 and ran to the TOC where he discovered all had departed, that it was completely destroyed, and "one American was found buried in the debris; he appeared dead." He immediately proceeded to the air strip and was rescued.[1579]

Unknown to those at the new camp, SFC Ashley (radio call sign 15A) at the old camp (along with Sgt Allen and SP4 Johnson) were making efforts to relieve the trapped Americans. At first light, they attempted to muster up 100 Lao troops go accompany them, but it took almost an hour to gather them.[1580] The three Americans, together with approximately 60 Lao troops moved west on Highway 9 toward the new camp Lang Vei, encountering a group of approximately 20 – 40 CIDG survivors near the road and the Americans who persuaded them to assist in the operation. When they reached the 101 Company area, they found a few seriously wounded CIDG, several NVA bodies, and numerous satchel charges strewn in the area.[1581] They came under machine-gun or automatic small arms fire and the Lao broke and ran back toward Highway 9, forcing the Americans to withdraw. SFC Craig and SSG Tiroch had left their hiding place in the creek bed and stumbled upon the Lao troops and the three Americans near the gate on Highway 9.[1582]

Following air strikes directed by SFC Ashley, the five Americans led a second assault which met similar results. This time they also received 81mm and 60mm mortars. A third assault was attempted, but also failed. Air strikes were being directed on the target by SFC Ashley throughout these attempts. At about 0930, LTC Schungel and 1/Lt Wilkins hobbled out from under the dispensary, and with the assistance of a CIDG soldier, eventually made it to the old Lang Vei camp. At approximately 1000, the TOC regained comm. with SFC Ashley. When Capt Willoughby regained consciousness (at approximately 1100), SFC Ashley was making his fourth assault attempt, but met the same determined resistance by the NVA troops.[1583]

On the fifth attempt to link up with those trapped in the TOC, SFC Ashley was hit on the right side of his chest; the round penetrated his radio. Sgt Richard H. Allen attended to Ashley's wound and administered artificial respiration. He had run out of battle dressings after treating a bunch of indigenous and found a T-shirt on the ground which he stuffed into Ashley's wound. Sgt Allen carried Ashley to the wire with SSG Peter Tiroch covering him. Six indigenous assisted in getting SFC Ashley into a jeep. Ashley's left lung was collapsing because of blood filling his chest cavity and he was going into shock. SP4 Joel Johnson and Sgt Richard H. Allen continued giving artificial respiration until they arrived at the old Lang Vei camp, where they were hit by an artillery round that knocked out Johnson making it necessary for Allen to administer artificial respiration to him.[1584]

Capt Willoughby had managed to break out and was retrieved by the jeep driven by Quy (who had been captured by the NVA, escaped and evaded to the old Lang Vei clamp). By this time, SFC Ashley was dead.[1585]

At 1550, the Special Forces reported enemy all along Route 9 in (preparation?) to ambush any road bound relief column.[1586] Major George Quamo (Special Projects Officer at FOB3) was gathering a relief force to land at Lang Vei to provide security and retrieve the Americans. At 1630, choppers departed from PIEDMONT (FOB-3) to SPUNKY HANSON.[1587] Supporting the exfiltration were two FACs, 6 A1E Skyraiders, 4 jet aircraft, 5 or 6 Army and Marine helicopter gunships, and 4 USMC CH-46 helicopters. LTC Schungel, Craig, Johnson, and Wilkins were placed on the UH-1D (slick) which landed first at the old Lang Vei airstrip (vicinity XD796364). Major Quamo directed the entire operation.[1588] This was followed by the landing of the C&C element (radio call sign RUSTY SPIKE) which established a perimeter as the Americans were evacuated. Capt Willoughby departed about 1630 or 1700 on the 6th or 7th helicopter.[1589] All US survivors were evacuated with one exception,. Lt Todd, who had spent most of the attack by himself in the emergency medical bunker emerged from it, went to the TOC where he found Moreland, who appeared to be dead. "He was mostly covered with debris. He appeared unconscious or dead. I only stayed in the TOC 30 seconds. He appeared dead; that's the reason I didn't go over there and check him out."[1590] He then and proceeded to the airstrip and was evacuated by the helicopter that departed with the last four Americans from FOB-3. Approximately 160 survivors made their way to KSCB between the evening of 7 February and 1600, 8 February.[1591]

[1578] Statement of Sgt Nickolas Fragos, AAR Lang Vei.
[1579] Statement of 1/Lt Thomas E. Todd, AAR Lang Vei.
[1580] Statements of Sgt Richard H. Allen and SP4 Joel Johnson, AAR Lang Vei.
[1581] Statement of Sgt Richard H. Allen, AAR Lang Vei.
[1582] "General Narrative of Events," AAR Lang Vei.
[1583] Ibid.
[1584] Statement of Sgt Richard H. Allen, AAR Lang Vei; Sworn statement by Sgt Allen in Library of Congress MIA microfilms, Reel #396, Folder #48.
[1585] Ibid.
[1586] Company C, 5th SFGA Journal Entries, Encl (7) to AAR Lang Vei.
[1587] Ibid.
[1588] "General Narrative of Events," AAR Lang Vei.
[1589] Statement of Capt Frank C. Willoughby, AAR Lang Vei.
[1590] Sworn statement of 1/Lt Thomas E. Todd in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #396, Folder #48.
[1591] "General Narrative of Events, AAR Lang Vei.

SFC Ashley, who had only been at Lang Vei for about three weeks prior to the battle,[1592] received the (Congressional) Medal of Honor (posthumously).

Of the 24 Americans at Lang Vei, 6 were KIA and 4 were MIA (SFC Harvey G. Brande, SFC Earl F. Burke, SSG Dennis L. Thompson, and SP4 William G. McMurray).

Dennis Thompson (who had been in Supply Bunker #1 when the battle erupted) had fought to the old Lang Vei camp. He was unable to make it out on the last helicopter, but saw it lift out. The NVA overran the old camp and killed off the Bru. They dragged Thompson off. "Things were surrealistic. We hadn't had any sleep for some 36 hours and 18 hours of misery at Lang Vei. I was very exhausted." His elbows tied, he was led into Laos. While walking, he's speed up and slow down until he found a time when the person in front of him couldn't be seen and the person behind him couldn't be seen, and he'd push off into the tall elephant grass. Unfortunately, he landed right in the middle of a NVA encampment who were sleeping. Just waking up, they weren't aggressive. He was returned to the unit from which he escaped where "they just about killed me with an entrenching tool. They interrogated me. They kept asking me about Tacon." Thompson was unaware they were talking about Khe Sanh, using their term for Khe Sanh Combat Base. He was put into a little ditch where he met Brande, whose legs were shredded and arms and chest peppered with fragments. Both again escaped as Thompson carried Brande 7 days to Lang Vei. NVA were everywhere and had eaten everything. "It was like a bunch of locusts had come through the area. The Xepone River was just full of bodies—people, fish, birds." He once found himself on a forward slope of a hill as B-52s blasted off the top of the hill causing the side of the hill to become liquefied earth—fluid, but didn't stick. He was almost buried in it. Again he was captured; again he escaped. Guided by flares at night, he managed to approach Hill 881-South, but the Marines didn't know who he was, fired at him (assuming he was enemy), and he was again captured.[1593]

LCPL Corbin was in a bunker alongside the road to the garbage pit which was hit by a 122mm rocket and collapsed. "He was pinned from the waist down and crushed... He was a terrific person—he was a big man but a very kind person. It is the loss of a good, good man—suddenly many things that 'Hoss' [Corbin] and I did as friends rushed back to my memory."[1594] The official records note that at 1700 Bunker #18 (XD847417) received rocket fire resulting in Corbin's death after receiving shrapnel in his entire body. Also seriously wounded in the same incident was LCPL Noel E. Tucker who also received shrapnel through his entire body.[1595]

08 February 1968

ALLEN, PFC Kenneth Jeffrey	A/1/13
ANTRIM, SGT Tommy Edward	A/1/13
AYERS, LCPL Leslie Steven	A/1/13
BARRETT, HN Michael Barry	H&S/1/9
BURKHEAD, CPL Jerry Clark	A/1/9
CLEMSON, PFC Gerald Richard	A/1/9
COLEGATE, PFC William Karl	A/1/9
CRAIG, PFC Thomas R Jr.	A/1/9
CUNNINGHAM, PFC Bruce Edward	C/1/26
DALTON, PFC Bill Norman	A/1/13
DICKIE, PVT Guy Douglas	A/1/9
DUNLAP, PVT Darrell Edward	I/3/26
FEATHERSTONE, PFC Richard H.	A/3d SP Bn
FORDHAM, PFC Kenneth Charles	A/1/9
GLASPER, LCPL William Lawrence	A/1/9
HANDLEY, CPL Anthony William	H&S/1/9
JACKSON, PFC Leonard Jr.	A/1/9
LAPHAM, MAJ Robert Granthan	14 ACW
LEWER, CPL Thomas Charles	A/1/9
McDANIEL, CPL Roy Dean	A/1/9
McKINLEY, PVT Allen	A/1/9
McKINNEY, SSGT Bernard B Jr.	A/1/9
MORDEN, PFC Robert Nelson	A/1/9
MURPHY, PFC Patrick Michael	A/1/9
PEMBLETON, PFC Ronald Lee	A/1/9
PONDOFF, PFC John Christopher	A/1/9
RIZZO, LCPL James Patrick	A/1/9
ROACH, 2/Lt Terence Raymond	A/1/9
ROUNTREE, LCPL Ronald Corbin	A/1/9
SCOTT, LCPL James Frank	A/1/9
SKUZA, LCPL Arvid Burdeen	A/1/9
SMITH, PFC John Archer	I/3/26
STEWART, PFC Tommy Lane	A/1/9
TORRES, CPL Manuel Prieto	A/1/9
WALSH, LCPL Jeffrey Michael	A/1/9
YORK, CPL Henry	A/1/9

At 0400H, a 122mm rocket landed in the perimeter of Gun #6, Battery "A," 1/13, hitting a WP [white phosphorus, or 'Willy Peter'] ready bunker, causing all the powder in the bunker to burn and explode. 3 Marines were on watch where the rocket hit, instantly killing Sgt Antrim, LCPL Ayers, and PFC Allen. LCPL Jan K. Strieter rushed to their aid unmindful of the burning white phosphorus fires and amid the unexploded projectiles scattered in the gun parapet; when he saw all three were dead,

---

[1592] Conversation with James W. Moore, 12 December 1995.

[1593] Conversation with Dennis Thompson, 25 February 2001. Thompson had addressed the assembled Khe Sanh Veterans reunion in 2000 with a longer account.

[1594] George S. Heckanauer, unpublished memoir, undated, p. 163.

[1595] 1/26 ComdC Feb 1968, S2/S3 Log for 07 February 1968, Serial No. 20. Tucker is identified by the first letter of his last name and service number, "T 2213387." His MOS was 0311. Corbin's MOS was 0351.

he grabbed a fire extinguisher and began to extinguish the fires. He entered a bunker storing some 700 rounds of artillery ammunition where some flaming debris had entered and extinguished that fire also.[1596] HM2 Alfredo P. Lucero recalls Sgt Antrim: "Johnny was about ready to leave in about a month. He was coming home to get married. He was a very nice man, a handsome young man, red-haired. I called him 'OUTLAW' because there had been an outlaw a long time ago named Antrim."[1597] LCPL Hal C. Johnson (D/3rd Recon) happened to be assigned as a working party to help transport wounded at C Med to waiting medevac helicopters and was carrying a badly wounded Marine. "I only checked dog tags twice while I was over there; this happened to be one of them. His name was [PFC Robert W.] Flaherty, from the arty outfit on the west end of the base [A/1/13]. He was just blown up. His left leg—there was nothing left of it. He was full of holes. You could see his heart beating through the big hole in his chest. I held his left leg while the doctors snipped the last piece of skin holding it." Many years later, Hal Johnson was visiting a VA hospital and met Flaherty. He said he had been standing next to Louis Ayers when the rocket exploded.[1598]

PFC Dalton was also killed at Battery "A." Cpl Robert Holscher (Hq Btry, 1/13) recalls: "I'm down in S-4 and we get another barrage of incoming. We dive in our bunker, and you hear that blood-curdling scream, 'Corpsman!' So I go running up and everybody's running to my old bunker. We had taken a round right in that back door opening that was just covered with a piece of plywood. Dust is still in the air. One fellow that had glasses was leaning up against my foot-locker box. His glasses were broke, lying down on his nose. His faced was covered with dust. There wasn't a spit of blood on him, but he had a hole in his chest the size of a quarter, about where his heart was. It went right through his rib cage. All was darkness. The fingers on one of his hands were sliced off from the shrapnel. There was one guy who was laying down in my rack when the shrapnel just kind of filleted him—bottom part of his body and just kinda ripped it straight up and layed him open, all bloody but still alive. The only thing he's saying is, 'Am I going to die? Am I going to die?'... It was then that they decided to move these bunkers below ground—at least ours. They brought in a TD-15 bulldozer and dozed-out an area and we just took the runway matting off the top ceiling and the good boxes out that were still left, and built it down under ground."[1599]

Continued NVA mortaring of Hill 881-South by 120mm mortars took their toll today. At 0540H, three rounds impacted, killing one Marine and wounding three (2 evacuated). 7 rounds landed at 0706H and 10 at 0725H, but neither caused any casualties. Then at 1001H, two rounds exploded, killing one and wounding two (both evacuated). Artillery was called on the active enemy mortar site (XD790499) resulting in numerous secondary explosions.[1600]

At 1430, Co. C/1/26 (XD847419), in the northern (Blue) sector of the perimeter, received one incoming rocket resulting in two WIA (evacuated) and one KIA.[1601] LCPL Steven M. Jenkins later wrote (concerning Cunningham): "He was just a kid, as was I. He was scheduled to go on R&R in a few days and was quite apprehensive about it. He confided in me that he had never even kissed a girl before and, based on stories he'd heard from the other guys returning from R&R, he didn't think he could measure up. He was afraid of being ridiculed by the other guys by returning with no sea stories of passionate drunken romances. I told him to take his camera with him, be himself, and enjoy his five days as he saw fit. Then I told him to spend some of his time making up the biggest 'sailor story' he could dream of, and relate this upon his return. He was killed the next day."[1602] Another Marine from C/1/26, Cpl George S. Hecknauer, notes (concerning Cunningham): "A young kid.. caught a large piece of shrapnel in the head—it took off the side of his helmet. He never knew what hit him and thank God for that. I think his mother would be happy to know that only God and her ever knew the tenderness of his kiss."[1603]

In order to counter the new threat posed by tanks in the Khe Sanh area,[1604] Maj Robert Lapham was flying HOBO-1, the lead A1G (#52-135043) in a flight of 2 from Detachment 1, 14th Air Commando Wing at Pleiku Air Base. The plane was diverted by HILLSBORO (the ABCCC) to the area immediately south of Lang Vei and alerted to join an airborne FAC (FINGERPRINT 24) at XD778322 to destroy 3 NVA tanks. Each HOBO aircraft was loaded with 6 BLU 23, 4 CBU 25, and 800 rounds of 20mm. During the first pass, Major Lapham

---

[1596] 26Mar 072304Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #397; NAVPERS 1650/6, Award Recommendation for Bronze Star Medal for LCPL Jan K. Strieter, 10 Feb 1968.

[1597] Conversation with Alfredo Lucero, 27 April 1994

[1598] Conversation with Hal Johnson, 3 August 1996.

[1599] Interview of Robert Holscher, no date, Eisenhower Center tapes.

[1600] 26Mar 080450Z/Feb68 and 081224Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREPs #s 398 and 399, respectively.

[1601] 1/26 ComdC Feb 1968, S2/S3 Log for 08 February, Serials #21-24; 26Mar 081224Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #399. The two WIA included PFCs Richard Campbell and Michael Pendleton. There was one more WIA indicated, "P2375085," but there is no Marine whose last name begins with "P" and with that service number in the C/1/26 Monthly Personnel Roster (RUC 15165) dated 26 January 1968 which infers that he may have just arrived at Khe Sanh.

[1602] Letter from Steve Jenkins postmarked 8 Jan 1990 [Printed in Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue No. 1 (Spring, 1991) 3]; Conversation with Steve Jenkins, 03 Feb 1991.

[1603] George S. Hecknauer, unpublished memoirs, p. 91.

[1604] Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 136.

dropped 4 BLU 23s completely engulfing one tank. On his second pass, Maj Lapham had already dropped his napalm when he crashed at XD792357, about 100 meters beyond the target at XD792357, approximately 100 meters SSW of Lang Vei. Neither the second A1G, who was then on his attack run, nor the FAC, observed a parachute. A helicopter flown to the crash site from Khe Sanh closely observed the crash site at close range and reported no recognizable portions of the aircraft remained.[1605] The crash was reported by the AO at 1700H.[1606]

The great devastation of the day, however, occurred on Hill 64,[1607] an outpost manned by First Platoon, Alfa Company, 1/9, to the west of the main 1/9 battalion position (southwest of KSCB) at XD813415. The football-shaped hill was occupied on 23 January; the day after 1/9 arrived at KSCB and moved out to occupy the former quarry for basalt rock used to repair the KSCB airstrip, known as "the rock quarry." "On January 23rd.. I remember we stopped on the road just below a small hill. Some people went up on the hill and looked around. When they came back, the orders were given that 1st Platoon was going to occupy that hill. Our platoon went up onto the hill under the command of Lt. Roach."[1608] LtCol John F. Mitchell, CO of 1/9, had directed this outpost be manned: "I put them out as a buffer, just like you'd put out a fire team for a platoon."[1609] The "A" Company Commander, Capt H.J.M. Radcliffe,[1610] recalls the position not only as an early warning of approach of enemy, but if the enemy were to approach from the west, they'd have to take this hill first.[1611] Given the saturation of the area by the NVA, Col. John Mitchell remarks, "I knew surely that this [the attack] was going to happen."[1612]

For the next 20 days "we dug deeper, and dug a five foot trench all the way around the hill and for the post part with only one meal and 1/2 canteen of water a day."[1613] Having been in the quarry operations site, "..the ground was hard and full of rocks, making it hard work to dig in."[1614] The rocks were imbedded in dense clay,[1615] making digging onerous. Although there was a hastily-dug trench encircling the hill, the Marines of A-1 configured it into a zigzag trench[1616] so that if an incoming round landed in it, the force of the blast would not be as destructive. "I remember digging the trench line deeper and deeper and finally having to dig steps into the side of the trench to be able to see down the hill, because the trench line was up over eye-level."[1617]

PFC Edward Wayne Welchel remembers one night in which it was very cold. "I had a large tear in my trousers from running concertina wire and I was freezing, hungry, thirsty and just about at the end of my patience. I put on my poncho to keep my body heat in and the fire team leader told me to take if off and I told him to get @*#&ed! The next morning he told my squad leader that I had disobeyed his orders and I was sentenced to hard labor digging and filling sand bags without any chow for the day and only 1/2 canteen of water. I was placed in a different fire team a couple of bunkers up from [PFC Gerald R.] Clemson. There were three of us, the fire team leader's name was LCPL [Jeffrey M.] Walsh. A couple of days later they asked for volunteers to go out on a LP without any way to communicate back to the rear and as hungry as I was I volunteered just to get an extra meal!"[1618]

Soon after occupying the position, Capt Radcliffe sent 2/Lt Francis B. Lovely to the outpost, the Weapons Platoon Commander: "I put him up there for two reasons: One, I didn't like the idea of them being out there, but that was a decision made above my head, so when I reinforced them, I brought some 60mm mortars out there. I had an extra mortar; I had four. I put some mortars up there and part of the weapons machineguns. I sent Lovely up there with Roach in command and charged: I want you to integrate the automatic weapons on the western and northwestern tip."[1619] Capt Radcliffe was

---

[1605] Biographic Section, Narrative (Case 1043-0-01), and AF IN 14348, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #402, Folder #35

[1606] 26Mar 081224Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #399.

[1607] Unlike numerical hill designations in military parlance, "Hill 64" does not refer to its height in meters, but rather to the fact that it was manned by approximately 64 defenders. [Conversation with Arnold Alderette, 11 March 1992]. CPL David R. Ford, in a letter to his father dated 2 May 1968, refers to the location as "O.P.—Hill 64."

[1608] Statement of Guy W. Leonard to David Ford, November, 1994.

[1609] Remarks by Col John F. Mitchell at Reunion of 1/9, 17 July 2002.

[1610] Named for his grandfather, "Henry James MacDonald," and was known by his nickname, "Mac," Capt. Radcliffe was born in 1939 when his father was over 50 years old. His father had served in World War I where he was in action for which he was awarded the Silver Star Medal. There is a corner in the Globe and Laurel pub at Quantico that honors him. He retired as a Captain with 30 years in the USMC before Mac Was born. Mac had commanded "A" Company 4 or 5 months by the time they arrived at Khe Sanh. [Conversations with Col H.J.M. Radcliffe, 31 August 1994 and 06 February 1995]

[1611] Conversation with Col H.J.M. Radcliffe, 31 August 1994.

[1612] Mitchell remarks, 17 July 2002, cited.

[1613] Letter of Edward Wayne Welchel to David Ford, 11 May 1994.

[1614] Letter of David Ford, 29 November 1993.

[1615] Conversation with Arnold Alderette, 11 March 1992.

[1616] Statement of Guy W. Leonard, November 1994; Conversation with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 31 August 1994.

[1617] Ibid.

[1618] Letter from Wayne Welchel to David Ford, 11 May 1994. Welchel remained later transferred to the U.S. Army and retired as a First Sergeant.

[1619] Conversation with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 3 July 1993.

grooming him to take over when one of the lieutenants rotated. "I sent him up on the hill with Roach a few days prior to the attack to get some experience up there [and] made it clear to both Roach and Lovely that there was only one person in charge up there and that was Roach, that he was responsible for what was going on and Lovely was to learn and observe."[1620] The position had about 45 Marines from A-1 plus 20 from Weapons (60 mortars and M-60 machineguns).[1621]

About the first week of February, the outpost began to be probed by the NVA; the Marines could hear them in the concertina and tossed a few grenades at the sounds. "We were told by Capt Radcliffe that there were approximately 45,000 NVA around us and that we were to be expected to be hit at anytime. We started receiving first aid classes form the corpsman."[1622]

The Battalion Chaplain (Lt Jack Heino) arrived on the hill on Tuesday, 30 January, and PVT Guy W. Leonard, realizing he didn't have a bayonet, wrote home and had his mother send his uncle's bayonet from World War II. Lt Roach put out the word to have everybody put a piece of camouflage parachute on the back of their helmet to keep the sun off their neck which made PVT Leonard wonder if he was imitating Lawrence of Arabia! PFC Colgate was experiencing foot trouble; he couldn't keep his boots on and was wearing tennis shoes, waiting orders off the hill to the rear.[1623] "Supplies from KSCB didn't always get there on time and a few times we went without rations and water... The lack of sleep, the digging all day, the incoming, C-rations, very little water, all were taking a toll on everyone."[1624] Between nightfall of 5 February and morning of 6 February, one of David Ford's men woke up the other for watch, but went to sleep before his relief was fully awake. Lt. Roach, making his rounds, found Ford and the other two all asleep at the position. The next morning, Ford was told to change fire teams with a friend on the other side of the hill, an action that was to save his life when the attack was sprung on 8 February.[1625] Unlike the guidance provided by senior officers on KSCB which recommended sleeping at any time—even during the day—that one was free to do since one never knew when a night attack might occur which would demand lack of sleep for a prolonged period, "Lieutenant Roach did not allow anyone to sleep during the day. Therefore, as time went on, we became more and more lethargic as far as staying awake. He continually caught people falling asleep... When you have now been a week, ten days, with only two and a half hours sleep a night, you become very complacent.. regardless of how dangerous it is to you."[1626]

The night of 07/08 February was pitch black but clear and the moon was not out.[1627] The heavy ground attack came at 0415,[1628] preceded by a bugle call![1629] LCPL Arnold Alderette had been informed a couple days earlier of elephants in the area carrying supplies so that when he heard the bugle—"just a high screech—my first thought was: My God! They're using elephants on us! I was afraid that elephants would crumple up everything!"[1630] Simultaneously, the 1/9 battalion position came under a heavy mortar, rocket, and artillery fire which lasted throughout the attack.[1631] Some 350 NVA mortar and heavy artillery shells rained on the 1/9 battalion CP position from 0530 to 0900 in support of the NVA attack on Hill 64.[1632]

The initial NVA attack was focused on the four bunkers facing Laos, 2nd Squad, under the leadership of George Chapman. Chapman had just completed chjecking the squad because the radioman reported that Lt Roach radioed the wires were being probed. Chapman had just completed checking the line when the rounds hit, probably from a recoilless rifle, completely wiping out the machinegun bunker and a second bunker containing the team leader of the "B" team, killing PVT Dickie.[1633]

The first explosion was a hit on Cpl William L. Glasper's machinegun bunker followed with an explosion resulting from a hit on Cpl Jerry C. Burkhead's machinegun bunker. In retrospect, LCPL Alderette believes the NVA had been watching the Marines on Hill 64 for many days and determined the positions of the machineguns; many of the Marines cleaned their guns on top of their bunkers, so the NVA knew were they were.[1634] The NVA poured into the position through the northwest sector, near Cpl Burkhead's machinegun position.[1635]

Realizing that the NVA had scoped out the positions, and that the safest place was not in a bunker but in the trench, LCPL Arnold Alderette attempted to dash out of his bunker. After wrapping up the machinegun in a poncho liner that had been used to keep light from the sleeping area, his A-gunner, who was already out in the trench

---

[1620] Taped comments of H.J.M. Radcliffe to David Ford, 7 January 1996.
[1621] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., May, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.
[1622] Letter from Welchel, 11 May 1994, cited.
[1623] Statement of Guy W. Leonard to David Ford, November, 1994.
[1624] Letter of David Ford, 29 November 1993.
[1625] Ibid.
[1626] Taped comments of David William Moody, 09 June 1994.
[1627] Conversation with Arnold Alderette, 11 March 1992.
[1628] 26Mar 080426Z/Feb 1968, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #398; 1/9 ComdC Feb 1968, Encl (1).
[1629] Conversation with George Einhorn, 17 March 1992.
[1630] Conversation with Arnold Alderette, 11 March 1992.
[1631] 26Mar 080426Z/Feb 1968, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #398; 1/9 ComdC Feb 1968, Encl (1).
[1632] Letter of Col J. F. Mitchell to Col F.C. Caldwell, 31 Jan 1969 (in Khe Sanh Monograph file).
[1633] Conversation with George Chapman, 28 Nov 2004.
[1634] Conversation with Arnold Alderette, 11 March 1992.
[1635] Conversations with George Einhorn, 2 April 1992 and Arnold Alderette, 11 March 1992.

yelled, "Come on! Let's get out of here! They're all over the place!" The bipods of the machinegun stuck in the opening as Alderette was rushing out, there was an explosion, and his A-gunner, whose legs were blown up in the explosion, grabbed a hold of Alderette's and he screamed, "Don't leave me!" Alderette, was thrown backwards, deeper into the bunker, "broke like a baby. I was scarred, and I was crying. Luckily one of the flares went off. Something came inside my bunker. It hit my head, my helmet and fell to the floor as a flare went off. It was a ChiCom! So I covered it, just threw my body backwards, and that's where the shrapnel got me"[1636] He had deftly covered the grenade with his helmet. "As soon as that happened, I grabbed the machinegun and "went over the edge," stepped out of the bunker and killed the guy that was there."[1637] Aldrette met up with PFC Raymond Rosales, and got his A-gunner (he can't recall the name; he was a new man) to the platoon corpsman,[1638] HN Michael F. Coonan.

PFC Welchel had been standing watch and was looking forward to an hour of sleep after he was secured. Just after he returned to his bunker on the north end of the outpost, the NVA threw a grenade inside, destroying his rifle and wounding all the bunker's occupants. Welchel's bunker was the first to be attacked.[1639] "The NVA fired a red smoke grenade inside our bunker and almost instantly they fired a frag grenade exploding inside our bunker which blew me up against the right side of the bunker with such force it blew my helmet off my head and my rifle out of my hand. As I tried to get to my feet another grenade exploded; by this time all I could think about was getting out of the bunker. I could not see anything or the other team members; the red smoke was so thick. I dove in the direction that I thought the hatch way was, and as I did I felt someone following me out as they fell on the back of my legs. I crawled out of the hatch and somehow Lt Roach grabbed me and asked me if I was hit.. All I could feel at the time was my face and arms burning like they were on fire and I had caught three pieces of shrapnel in my left leg but was not aware of it until later on in the battle. He pulled me and the guy behind me out, and put us in [PFC Gerald] Clemson's bunker which was right next door [on the northeast side]... Lt Roach went to the back side of the hill to get the M60 machinegun; the NVA had entered our perimeter and were running up the hill on top of us.. I was laying on my stomach and shaking so bad, my whole body; I was so scared. Clemson placed his hand on my ankle and was trying to help me get it together when a grenade exploded inside the bunker... I jumped down into the trench in front of my squad leader, Cpl [Edward H.] O'Connor. I was laying in a prone position and Cpl O'Connor was squatting down in front of me.. and about that time somebody yelled ChiCom and it exploded right between us. I caught a piece of shrapnel in the left side of my jaw with such force it blew my head and neck back.. For a few seconds I thought I was dying.. During this time the NVA were already in the trenches with us, and I'm sitting there with no helmet or rifle and there would have nothing I could have done had a NVA jumped into the bunker with me. A few minutes later a Marine by the name of Larry Cioffi told me and O'Connor to follow him because we were being overrun. The three of us started running back to the other side of the hill in single file with Larry in the front, me in the middle, and O'Connor last. A grenade exploded within two feet of O'Connor's face. The force blew him almost at a position of attention. He covered his face with both his hands and the blood was spurting in every direction. O'Connor was screaming and started running in the wrong direction back toward the NVA thinking he was running away from them. Larry went after him and brought him back and the three of us found a few other Marines on the other side of the hill.. O'Connor was temporarily blinded.. Larry was running back up the trench to help the wounded and to find more weapons and ammo we could use. If it had not been for Larry's leadership and courage I doubt if any of us five Marines would be here today."[1640]

Larry Seavy [Cioffi], although wounded himself, personally moved about half a dozen wounded Marines to the bunker containing the platoon corpsman at the extreme south end of the outpost. A black Marine whose legs were severely mangled by a NVA grenade cried for help but was isolated; between him and the rest was the location where the NVA were throwing many grenades. PFC Welchel remembers Seavy [Cioffi] calmly directing two Marines to fire continuously over the trench line in the direction of the place where the grenades were exploding. The grenades kept coming. "Without saying a word or hesitating he ran forward himself in the direction of the wounded, isolated Marine. Seavy-Cioffi was running into a heavy, continual barrage of enemy grenades and into almost certain death. We thought he was a dead man. However, in a short time Seavy-Cioffi reappeared again, running backwards and pulling the wounded Marine after him.. pulled by his wrists. This wounded Marine had lost blood but was given first aid and survived.. Seavy-Cioffi was entirely without a helmet or [flak] jacket and in addition to his numerous shrapnel wounds he was also wounded by blast and concussion on several occasions though he refused medical treatment.."[1641]

"I had been wounded four times and had caught a grenade between my legs which caused a hole.. the size of

---

[1636] Conversation with Arnold Alderette, 11 March 1992.
[1637] Ibid.
[1638] Ibid.
[1639] Statement of Edward W. Welchel, 12 October 1986.
[1640] Letter of Edward Wayne Welchel to David Ford, 11 May 1994.
[1641] Statement of Edward W. Welchel, 12 October 1986.

a dime and a hole in my left jaw the size of a silver dollar. I was standing there shaking, crying, and scared to death. I had my M16 on auto and on my hip position as I began to want to dream [that what] I was seeing [was] a NVA soldier crawling toward me from my left side only 20 feet away. During this time as the capping sounds were going off, the enemy screaming in foreign tongue, flares going off occasionally, and the feeling of cold tears running down my cheeks, I felt the presence of Jesus Christ so strongly as if he had entered my body.."[1642]

On the north side of Hill 64, LCPL Robert L. Wiley "played dead" as a NVA soldier entered his bunker. In a letter written February 9th, 1968, after being medevaced, he wrote: "You can never imagine the fear I felt when the gooks checked to see if I was breathing and ran their hands up and down my legs to see if I had anything in my pockets. When you are scared and want to live I guess you can even play dead real well. To top it all off they stepped all over my head and back, I guess using me as a step to get in and out of the hole. All the time I never lost faith in my fellow Marines and knew that soon they would come back to me. When I heard your voice I was so relieved I guess I just went a little spastic crying and all but it was such a relief I just had to let myself go."[1643]

On the east, directly facing the battalion 1/9's lines, Cpl Henry York grabbed the sleeping PFC David W. Moody, "Come on, man, get up! Gooks in the line!" Illumination flares created the eerie specter of shadows. For LCPL Alderette, "..there's something about light—gives you that security. We could see what we were doing,"[1644] but for PFC Moody, the light disclosed the Marines to the NVA more than vice versa.[1645] In the following hours, Cpl York and PFC Moody traded positions in the trench; York kept telling Moody to keep his head down.[1646]

2/Lt Lovely "ran out into the trench line and discovered that we were being hit by a large enemy force. As I ran down the trench line I ran into about 3 NVA who had already penetrated the perimeter, apparently knocked out our western-most positions, and penetrated our perimeter. Lt Roach, the Platoon Commander, had run across the top of the hill to try to bring defensive fires and bring in our On-Call defensive fires. He was shot almost immediately by a NVA soldier who leaped up in a bunker [and] took him under fire. He was killed instantly. At that time I took over the First Platoon in the defense of the hill."[1647]

Unknown to Lt Lovely, Lt Roach had moved from his CP bunker without his radio operator, almost immediately following the initial mortar barrage at a point where there were already 2 or 3 NVA squads in the northeast sector. This portion of the perimeter was weak, with some empty bunkers due to lack of troops. "Lt Roach was attempting to rally our trapped Marines in the northeast sector and halt the enemy influx.. Upon reaching the northeast sector Lt. Roach had enemy to his rear and both flanks... Lt Roach was lost to us while directing fire upon instantly reaching the northeast trench line perimeter, [dying] within the first five minutes of the initial enemy ground assault subsequent to the mortar attack."[1648]

Cpl David R. Ford's father had been a Sgt in the USMC during World War II, was captured by the Japanese on Corregidor and remained a POW throughout the war. His brother, Cpl Dennis V. Ford, was wounded near Con Thien while on patrol with C/1/9 (28 Jun 1967).[1649] Asleep when the attack began, he was jolted awake by the sound of explosions on the other side of the hill (where he had been located only a few days earlier). As he woke, he heard screams of Marines that there were NVA in the trenches. "There was no panic; everyone was calm, even though we suddenly realized we were being overrun. I thought about my squad on the other side of the hill. Somebody had to warn them to watch the trench line behind them. I turned to the Marine nearest to me and told him I was going across the hill to tell the guys on the other side.. I should have taken a few seconds to grab my rifle, but I didn't. I climbed up on the inside wall of the trench and ran as fast as I could.. headed straight towards my old bunker, holding a grenade in my right hand.. I saw Lt Roach's bunker and headed for it... I stuck my head just inside the entrance a couple of times, but there was no answer, so I started running again... I landed on my feet.. There was just enough light to see a NVA about 10 feet away.. crouched down on the edge of the trench... We stared at each other for a split second, both of us startled to see the other."[1650] Ford pulled the [1642] Letter of Edward Wayne Welchel, 17 March 1987.

---

[1643] Letter of Robert Wiley to Cpl Sutherland, 9 February 1968, DaNang (copy provided by 1/Lt James Eddie Grissom, XO of A/1/9 at the time, on 14 Feb 1995).
[1644] Conversation with Arnold Alderette, 11 March 1992.
[1645] Conversation with David William Moody, 27 June 1994.
[1646] Taped comments and Conversation with David William Moody, 09 June 1994.
[1647] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., May, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.
[1648] Statement of Edward H. O'Connor, 10 February 1986.
[1649] Letter of David Ford, 29 Nov 1993.
[1650] Ibid. Ford left his position wearing only a flak jacket, no helmet, and holding a grenade in his hand. [Letter of David R. Ford to Commandant of the Marine Corps, 21 April 1997]. In an interview conducted 3 months after the fact (in May, 1968), Ford stated: "First thing I heard was ChiComs. At first I thought they was 60s. But then it dawned on me they were ChiComs. So we got on 100%, got everybody alert and got some illumination. Then all of a sudden a bunch of wounded made it down the trench towards our direction, so we knew that the other side got hit pretty bad. So I was told to go look for the Right Guide of the Platoon. He was some-pin on his grenade, tossed it, and fell to the ground fully expecting the NVA to shoot him. He felt he was about to die. After the explosion that threw dirt and pieces of cloth about him, he jumped out of the pit and ran back in the other direction crossing the top of the hill in a matter of seconds. Upon his return to the trench, he met up with LCPL Alderette who had his M-60 on the side of the trench and who was holding a M-16.[1651] (Alderette, was wounded with a piece of shrapnel in his shoulder).[1652]

At 0400, PVT Guy W. Leonard was awakened by Cpl Roy D. McDaniel since it was his turn to sleep. PFC David M. Moseley and Leonard were on watch in the bunker for 15 minutes when the rockets and mortars struck the top of Hill 64. "Cpl McDaniel came into the bunker with blood streaming down his face. He said when the explosions began he sat up really fast and hit a nail which was protruding through some board with his forehead. He said, 'Stay here and keep your eyes open; I'll go to the CP and find out what's going on!'... Shortly after that, Cpl McDaniel returned and told us that gooks were in the wire and in the trenches on the north side. He said, 'One of you stay here, the other come with me. We'll have to start pushing them back off the hill.'"[1653] McDaniel and Leonard started to crawl across the top of the hill as the mortars struck, raising them off the ground 6 or 8 inches every time they exploded. As they proceeded, McDaniel asked for Leonard's grenade pouch when another ChiCom grenade landed between them. "Everything seemed to be in slow motion. Cpl McDaniel's face seemed to lift off, leaving a bloody mess, and then he fell backwards into the trench. I saw my rifle, which was in my left hand, go sailing up and out of the trench. My helmet flew up and back, and then I could see dirt and flame and smoke hurling at me until it all hit at once. I remember thinking it felt as if someone hit me full in the face with a shovel, [that] I would not get up again, and I'd die right there in that trench... Blood was streaming from my hands and I was unable to see clearly, but I reached into my jacket pocket and got my mess kit knife, since I didn't have a bayonet. I had sharpened my mess kit knife on rocks... I wiped the blood out of my eyes to see better and saw a NVA. He started to turn around to face me with his rifle. I jabbed him in the throat with my mess kit knife... As I went further down the trench line, I came across one wounded Marine sitting on a sandbag leaning against the bunker. There was another Marine sitting next to him trying to help him. The Marine sitting on the sandbags had been shot through the left eye and had a big hole in the back of his head, but he wasn't dead yet. The other Marine, who wasn't wounded, tried to stop me to help him. I put my hand on the wounded man's shoulder and just told him that there wasn't anything that could be done, that he wouldn't be in pain very much longer... I don't remember who the wounded Marine was, but I remember he was muscular and good-looking—like a 'poster Marine.' He was a bigger guy, not scrawny like most of us. I remember PFC Colegate was a bigger guy, too, but I don't believe this was him."[1654]

PFC James R. Martinez was asleep in his bunker when the NVA attacked. CPL Manuel Torres was to his right as a grenade (or satchel charge) fell between the wall and Torres, killing him and wounding Martinez' right side. Martinez immediately escaped from the bunker and went into a little hole, the entrance to the Second Squad Leader's bunker, George Chapman.[1655]

Michael Coonan, the Corpsman on the position remembers everyone on the outpost as physically exhausted and sleep-deprived. He was in his bunker when the attack began, a med bunker that didn't face downhill but was built into the side of the hill so the NVA didn't actually see it. Chapman, the squad leader, who shared the bunker with him, woke him, "Hey Doc, we got wounded." He then took off. "I had no idea—it's blacker than hell. Grabbed my Unit-1 and walked around, outside to the trench line and went down about 20, 130 feet, and there's Staff Sergeant McKinney, laying on the ground. He almost shot me because he didn't know who I was. I said, 'Where are you hit?' He says, "In my hip.' So I bend over, and as I bend over, a NVA comes walking around the corner and he shoots that guy. This is the first that I even know that we're under attack. He's huge, and at that time I weighed about 117 pounds. I tried to drag him but couldn't. He said, 'Go get me some help.' I go back—it's only about 30, 50 steps at the most, and I go to this bunker and holler, 'Hey, we need some help,' and someone hollers 'Chi Com!' At that time, two Marines come diving out of that bunker and land on top of me. ChiComs blow up inside the bunker. Martinez and Torres are hit by it. The other two guys that jumped on me take off, running. I see that we have a case of grenades by my bunker, so I grabbed two grenades, pulled the pin,a nd threw them down the hill. Martinez is hit, so I dragged him out of his bunker and put him in my bunker which is about ten feet away. The NVA are in the line. We can hear them talking, right behind us, so they must of already killed McKinney. They're going right past us."[1656]

LCPL Glasper's machinegun bunker was in front of CPL James Feasel's (Squad Leader of Third Squad of A-1, the other squad leaders being CPL Chapman and CPL where up on top of the hill, but nobody knew where. I ran over the top of the hill, jumped in a mortar pit.." [Comments of David R. Ford, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803].

---

[1651] Ibid.

[1652] Letter of David R. Ford, 29 November 1993.

[1653] Statement of Guy W. Leonard to David Ford, November, 1994

[1654] Ibid..

[1655] Taped comments of James Martinez to David Ford (received from Ford on 5 August 1994).

[1656] Conversation with Micdhael Coonan, 02 Nov 2006.

Joseph J. Sutherland). Feasel dashed to Glasper's bunker finding it blown-up but not caved-in. Those inside were on the floor, dead, blown in half. Feasel got two Marines to pick up the gun and set it up in the window of Feasel's bunker. However, when they retrieved the weapon, they neglected to grab the ammo, and needed to return to bring back two cans of ammunition.[1657] Feasel also crept to the command bunker to speak with Lt Roach for the plan of attack, but found it empty.[1658]

Just as he was leaving it, LCPL James P. Rizzo, the platoon radio operator, entered, followed by a hail of heavy NVA automatic and rifle fire directed at and into the bunker. Rizzo attempted to raise GARDEN VALLEY (the radio call sign of 1/9), but was unable to do so. All during this time, the NVA were attempting to blow up the bunker. Rizzo mentioned to Feasel, "I've got to get out of the bunker so I can transmit and get artillery fire and reinforcements up here to help the platoon!" Rizzo had been through Con Thien and was well experienced.[1659] He well knew the dangers that lurked and threatened outside the bunker. "Rizzo again told me that he had to get into the open to transmit because we needed reinforcements to turn back the NVA assaults. At this time, Rizzo broke from the bunker and into the open and began to transmit. He was shot several times in the chest. I pulled Rizzo back into the bunker. Rizzo was still alive and he transmitted, 'I'm the radio man and I've been shot and I'm dying.' Shortly thereafter James Rizzo succumbed to his wounds and died."[1660] Rizzo had got through to Capt Radcliffe: "I said, Rizzo, let me speak to your '6'; this is ALFA-6, and he replied, 'Skipper, he's not here now.' I said, 'I need to talk to him, find out what the hell's going on out there.' He said, 'They're all around us, Skipper. They're all over the place! Come and get us, Skipper! And it broke my heart. I said, 'I need to talk to your 6.' He said, 'We looked there, we looked here, we don't know where he is.' I remember the last words, 'Skipper, you gotta come and get us."[1661]

CPL Feasel continued to move about the remaining area controlled by the Marines as the remaining effective squad leader as he re-positioned the men. He also singlehandedly took out a NVA mortar tube.[1662] Feasel took another Marine with him to retrieve Rizzo's radio, but found the radio to be inoperable, after which he went to the Weapons Platoon bunker and asked for supporting fire missions. He did this several times.[1663]

PVT George E. Einhorn, the Grenadier (M-79 man) for the Platoon, became frustrated that his rounds were ineffective on the NVA troops already in the Hill 64 position. (The M-79 round must rotate 14 times before becoming armed, and the distance was too short). Consequently, he attempted to fire it as a mortar—straight up.[1664] This, however, was abandoned as the rounds landed among them, one round landing almost on top of Alderette, Ford, and Einhorn, and "after that Einhorn abandoned that idea and returned to the trench line."[1665] PVT Einhorn frequently moved positions, each time becoming the object of extremely heavy enemy fire, and yet continued to place effective the 40mm M-79 rounds on the influx of NVA.[1666]

Alderette does not recall that Cpl Jerry Burkhead's machinegun was retrieved. Fortunately, there were three M60 machineguns on the hill, including an extra one obtained during a previous battle in the Street Without Joy area.[1667]

LCPL Alderette dashed with his machinegun to the top of the hill and fought side by side with PFC Larry J. Seavy [whose name was later changed to Seavy-Cioffi], an artillery FO who joined the outpost platoon on 03 February[1668] and together Alderette and Seavy [Cioffi] "fought in the trenches and assaulted the northern hilltop in two men assaults, preventing the enemy from charging over the top.. After many of these two men assaults, Cioffi and I were separated and I remained alone on the hilltop."[1669]

Larry Seavy-Cioffi, a Forward Artillery Scout Observer (MOS 0846) assigned to D Battery, 2/12, and attached to 1/9, was attempting to call in pre-registered on-call artillery. In the total darkness and with the registration numbers written on the map, he struck a match to read the number. His radio operator immediately blew it out since the poncho covering the entrance to the bunker leaked light. Several grenades were tossed inside, blowing Seavy-Cioffi and his radio operator against the wall. Seavy-Cioffi struck another match and located the registration number, called it in, but was told the Fire Support Coordination Center (FSCC) declared a "check fire." More grenades were exploding inside the bunker, causing

---

[1657] Conversations with James Feasel, 8 September 1997 and 11 July 2003.

[1658] James M. Feasel, Jr. "Hill 64, Feb. 8, 1968," undated statement attached to award recommendations for Bronze Star Medal award to George E. Einhorn, David R. Ford, and LCPL James P. Rizzo.

[1659] Conversation with James Feasel, 8 September 1997.

[1660] Letter of James M. Feasel to Commandant of the Marine Corps, 29 April 1997. Rizzo was posthumously awarded the Bronze Star Medal in January, 1998.

[1661] Conversation with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 12 August 1994 and taped comments to David Ford, February, 1996.

[1662] Statement of George Einhorn, 20 March 1997.

[1663] James M Feasel, Jr., "Hill 64," cited.

[1664] Conversation with George Einhorn, 9 March 1992.

[1665] Statement of David R. Ford, appended to Bronze Star Medal recommendation for George Edward Einhorn, submitted by Joseph Donnelly, 15 August 1997. Einhorn was awarded the Bronze Star Medal in January, 1998.

[1666] Statement of James Mark Feasel, Jr., 29 April 1997.

[1667] Conversation with Arnold Alderette, 11 March 1992.

[1668] Lawrence J. Seavy-Cioffi, "Our Victory for Alpha One, 14 April 1986, p. 1.

[1669] Statement of Arnold Alderette, 25 March 1997.

Seavy-Cioffi to hear nothing but ringing. He was told the fire mission needed to be cleared by the CO (Lt. Roach). Seavy-Cioffi insisted that the clearance was given by the CO since the previous day. FSCC insisted it needed a second clearance to fire. Seavy-Cioffi knew he needed to locate Lt Roach. With no helmet, flak vest, and being wounded in the thigh, he dashed from the bunker across the top of the hill where he stumbled upon some NVA and engaged in hand-to-hand combat with them.[1670] After moving through ordeals of encounters with pockets of NVA that parallel the ancient accounts of Homer's Odyssey, he learned that Lt. Roach was dead and Lt. Lovely was in charge, his hands full repulsing the NVA on the southern part of the outpost.[1671] Proceeding through the gauntlet of battle, he reached Lt. Lovely's bunker and, with the Lt's permission, radioed the fires.[1672]

1/Lt Michael J. Walker's 81s stood ready to suppoirt. His subordinate, 2/Lt Maurice M. ("Ray") Casey (later LtCol), recalls the radio traffic with Larry Seavy-Cioffi, being with 1/9's 81s: "We were the only ones that could fire on them other than direct support 105s from the main base. I was working the Plotting Board, and he kept closing the circle on their position. Finally he called in some coordinates, and I told him I wouldn't shoot those positions because according to my map, that was his position I was firing on... He said, 'Put WHISKY-6 [1/Lt Michael J. Walker] on.' [who] said, 'Sorry we can't fire those coordinates; they're on your position.' And he said, 'Well, Sir, you have two choices: you can fire those coordinates and most of our guys are either down or dead, and you'll get a lot of them still in the open in our trench line, or, you cannot fire them, and they'll finish off the rest of us!' That's the time you have to kind of depend on the guy on the ground to tell you"[1673] Over the strenuous objections of the 1/9 F.D.C., Walker gave the orders to fire.[1674]

After holding that position for 30 minutes to an hour, Alderette was joined by David Ford "For the next two to two and a half hours we fought side by side, attacking the top and far end perimeter with two men assaults, keeping the enemy at bay.. and were able to keep them from controlling the top of the hill."[1675] PVT Einhorn vividly recalls Alderette throwing rocks, seen doing so under the illumination.[1676] Marines were throwing magazines to them, and when they ran low on grenades, they tossed rocks,[1677] as Alderette and Seavy had previously done. So heroically did Ford perform, that Alderette felt he should receive the Silver Star Medal.[1678] Ford and Alderette screamed as they charged the NVA in the trenches, Ford firing the M60, Alderette firing the M16 and throwing grenades. Alderette's M60 fired sluggishly due to damage from a piece of shrapnel when Alderette was wounded in his shoulder. Their forays may well have confused the NVA into believing there was a large number of Marines rather than the two who popped up at different spots and screamed as though there were many. Ford recalls hearing grenades and firing in the trenches to his right where Larry Seavy [Cioffi], Edward Wayne Welchel, and Edward O'Connor were fighting to stop the NVA advance; George Einhorn, Bill Moody, Malloy, Cpl York, Cpl Sutherland, and Lt Lovely were doing the same thing on Ford's left side.[1679]

With Alderette and Ford firing the machine-gun, throwing grenades and rocks, and George Einhorn firing the M-79 grenade launcher, the NVA were unable to advance, and never overran the position. For David Ford, the fight was "to the end:" he was wearing a belt he'd taken from a dead NVA at Con Thien bearing a Communist star on its buckle and, upon realizing the consequences of being captured with it, he and Alderette agreed that they definitely would never surrender or be captured![1680]

The attack had been launched at 0415, by 0513 NVA were inside the position and at 0615 the initial attack had been beaten back. The NVA force then regrouped and massed for another attack.[1681] The battle raged. Once PVT Guy Leonard was pulled safely into a bunker, "I'd be sitting there and my whole body would begin to jerk and convulse, then stop, like someone had jolted me with electricity. The corpsman came in and pushed the sleeve to my rain jacket up and gave me a shot of morphine... I felt detached, like I was watching a movie. I remember looking out and seeing one gook get hit. He just blew completely apart. Arms flying, head rolling, body parts everywhere."[1682]

Daylight came. Cpl McDaniel was sitting at the entrance to a bunker; his legs blown. The NVA poked a rifle into the bunker and fired, opening McDaniel's body from his belly button on up. The NVA then tossed in a grenade. "Mac had the strength to pick it up and put it under his body, and that saved us."[1683] For this action, [1670] Lawrence J. Seavy-Cioffi, Our Victory for Alpha One, 14 April 1986, pp. 15-18.

---

[1671] Ibid., p. 23.
[1672] Ibid., p. 25.
[1673] Note from Ray Casey printed in Khe Sanh Veteran's Red Clay, Issue No. 2 (Fall, 1991), p. 6.
[1674] Letter from Michael J. Walker, 23 Jan 2006.
[1675] Lawrence J. Seavy-Cioffi, Our Victory, op. cit..
[1676] Conversation with George Einhorn, 9 March 1992.
[1677] Statement of Arnold Alderette, faxed to Joseph Donnelly, 16 Sep 1967.
[1678] Statement of Arnold Alderette, 13 November 1997, p. 8.
[1679] Letter of David Ford, 29 November 1993, p. 7.
[1680] Ibid., p. 12.
[1681] 26Mar 080450Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #398.
[1682] Statement of Guy W. Leonard to David Ford, November, 1994.
[1683] Taped comments of James Martinez sent to David Ford, 05 August 1994.

which should have been recognized with a Medal of Honor, McDaniel received nothing. CPL George Chapman, the Squad Leader of Second Squad, decided they'd better leave the bunker. Three Marines moved down the trench, led by Cpl Chapman, followed by James Martinez, and then another (unidentified) Marine. Cpl Chapman was shot in the back by a NVA who also shot the last Marine, leaving Martinez alone to spot the NVA, rifle in one hand, grenade in the other, about to toss the grenade. He tossed it, but his aim was off, and it landed above the trench and exploded to the side, giving Martinez sufficient time to pull a .45 and shoot the NVA. David Ford suddenly appeared—"boy he was a pretty sight! He came around and grabbed me. I was back with the fellows."[1684]

Cpl York was shot through the skull with a bullet that exited and took off three-quarters of Feasel's ear.[1685] After dawn, David Ford noticed Cpl York: "Off to my left and behind me, when it was light enough to see, I saw Malloy holding Cpl York in his arms. He (York) was either dead or unconscious. He appeared to have been shot through the left eye and temple. I looked at Malloy and he looked back at me. We didn't speak. Blood covered both of their flak jackets and I couldn't tell if one or both were hit. I learned later that Cpl York was already dead although Malloy continued to hold him in his arms after he died... Malloy would have to wear his flak jacket for days, with the entire front of it covered with dried blood, until someone finally found another one for him to wear."[1686]

Capt Radcliffe (CO, A/1/9) called LtCol Mitchell (CO, 1/9) and said he was forming the Company to reinforce Hill 64; Mitchell responded, "No, you're not! Orders from higher headquarters are not to leave."[1687] "I was told: Hold what we have in the line until the situation gets clarified. I just couldn't do that."[1688] He told his XO, 1/Lt James Eddie Grissom, "..to stay on the Land Line and keep talking to the Battalion Commander like I was there and tell him I was just out checking the lines—which is true: I was checking the lines to see if anyone was dumb enough to volunteer to go out with me."[1689] "Damn near the whole company wanted to go, but I couldn't leave the line deserted."[1690] At 0740, the relief force with command group departed 1/9's position to reinforce and consolidate the OP position, arriving at the base of the hill at 0805.[1691] The hill was still receiving NVA mortars and sniper fire.[1692]

Capt Charles B. Hartzell, S-3 of 1/9, "..was on my normal night radio watch when the attack started. For the most part, all we could do was listen and stay out of Captgain Mac Radcliffe's way while he directed the war. Captain Radcliffe was maybe the best qualified leader in the battalion at that time and his unit was tough and aggressive. My problem as the representative of the battalion command was holding him back. We had orders from Gen. Westmoreland [sic., orders were actually from MG Rathvon McClure Tompkins, CG of 3rd MarDiv] to not leave our wire. The top guy wanted to use supporting arms to kill the enemy. It was my job to make those orders happen. I very well recall Capt. Radcliffe's response at first light that day: 'F you.. I'm going in to get my men out!' Major Ringley and Col. Mitchell took to the radio to try to get control of the situation. Radcliffe was into one of those Marine moments. If he won the situation he could be a hero and get a medal and all those in higher position would find a way to be part of it.. If he lost, he would have been lost as far as having a future as a Marine officer, and everyone would have piled on to get that asshole who violated the Man's order. Well he did good, very good, and got a silver star. I say, 'outstanding!!'"[1693]

The fog, which normally blanketed Khe Sanh during these days until 1000, lifted this particular day aty 0730, and the 1/9 S-3, Charles Hartzell noticed NVA on hill 64: "They were all over our side of the hill like little ants running around. The ceiling wasw still too low for attack aircraft, but direct fire weapons were now in play from our side. The sniper called all his guys forward and they went to work. I called the other companies to get all the machineguns at my position on the double. They were all there within minutes and Gunny D's [D'Hondt] training at Camp Evans really paid off big time. We had about twenty machineguns lined up in the trench line, most tripod mounted, withb the operators talking and marking, total control, no bullshit spray fire. It was talk, watch my marker round, then five or six guns short burst to zero out the target. I did not move the 106mm recoilless rifles, those guys really were not ready for a shoot out, Incoming began as they could see us now, too... I did call our two tanks into play. They moved up out of the pit to the firing position we had dug to cover the road from the west. The tankers stayed locked inside to avoid the incoming and got to work on the hill with their main guns and machineguns. With their strong far-seeing gun sight they could locate and mark targets for our line of machine gunners, too. We really had our stuff together. Controlled, well-aimed fire, well within effective range of all weapons,."[1694]

Shortly after 0745, when COVEY 252 had checked in with the ABCCC to reconnoiter refugee movements on Route 9, the FACs moved from Route 9 to direct strikes

---

[1684] Ibid.
[1685] Conversation with George Einhorn, 17 March 1992.
[1686] Letter from David Ford, 29 November 1993.
[1687] Conversation with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 17 October 1996.
[1688] Conversation with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 12 August 1994.
[1689] Conversation with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 3 July 1993.
[1690] Conversation with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 12 August 1994.
[1691] 26Mar 080450Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #398.
[1692] Conversation with George Einhorn, 17 March 1992.
[1693] Martzell, Charles, Memoir, p. 60.
[1694] Ibid., p. 61.

in support of Hill 64. CANASTA 403, a flight of 4 Navy A-1Hs were on station with MK-81s (250-pound general purpose bombs), MK-82s (500-pound general purpose bombs), and 20mm. The FAC found it difficult to distinguish between friendly and enemy forces due to the uniforms worn and their close proximity. Air strikes were directed by the FAC on the northwest base of the hill. Task Force ALFA at Nakhon Phanom Air Base, Thailand, scrambled a flight of three A-26s (NIMROD 32A, 34A, and 35A) to aid the outpost, and three T-28 ZORROs were already working the area to help repulse the attack.[1695]

Capt Radcliffe crawled to the center of the hill outpost, taking small arms fire while pitching grenades and maintaining eyeball contact with the two squad leaders on either side of him. James Feasel rolled over the hill, exposed himself, to toss him grenades; had it not been for Feasel, Radcliffe feels he might not have made it.[1696] As he inched forward, a NVA popped up about 15 feet from him with an AK-47 and fired. "I was waiting to feel the round. I said to myself: I hope he didn't hit me in the groin! But nothing happened, and I shot him."[1697] The going was slow: "we didn't know if our friendlies were still alive or actually where our flanks were, and who controlled what bunkers. It took us about three hours to push the remaining [NVA] forces off the hill. The NVA had pulled back, but had left approximately two squads on the hill, apparently suicide squads to keep us and maintain contact."[1698] The relief force took some casualties, among them PFC John C. Pondoff.[1699] Capt Radcliffe knew there were Marines that were trapped in bunkers with the NVA or between himself and the NVA and had to advance with great care. As he advanced, someone yelled Chicom! Capt Radcliffe pushed down Cpl John J. Enzinna, one of the squad leaders accompanying him, and caught the grenade as it flew towards him and flipped it back where it detonated on the edge of the trench, killing 2 NVA. As they continued, LCPL Robert L. Wiley rushed out, grabbed the Captain, crying, sobbing, and saying, "Skipper, I knew you'd come for us; I knew you'd come for us!"[1700] Capt Radcliffe's relief force reached the crest of the hill at 0825.[1701] On LtCol John F. Mitchell's Bronze Star Medal recommendation for Capt Radcliffe, Major General Rathvon McClure Tompkins (CG, 3rd Marine Division) wrote: "In my opinion deserves a Silver Star. I am intimately familiar with this action and the terrain on which it took place. Had it not been for Radcliffe we never would have thrown the enemy back out of that position."[1702] The brave Marines on Hill 64, while so few, had managed to prevent the hill from being overrun, and yet those remaining were exhausted. Sgt Larry L. Powell, part of the relief force, describes the battlefield: "It was quite a scene up there. People were all over the place, laying around, wounded, dead, blown up pretty bad... It was a real bad sight to see. I know they fought hard on that hill. Men that made it had to do some real good fighting."[1703] At about noon, an accounting was determined and by 1230, all had pulled from the hill and returned to the battalion perimeter.[1704]

Edward Wayne Welchel was squatting down with a M-16 after Capt Radcliffe ordered a squad to go up the trench, watching two Marines ahead of him. Suddenly a grenade exploded, killing one instantly. He saw Larry Seavy [Cioffi] and the other Marine running right down the middle of a group of NVA on top of the hill, spraying the whole area with M60- machinegun fire. (Evidently, Burkhead's machinegun had been retrieved). Slowly the hill was re-taken. Welchel made his way to where he last saw his friend, PFC Gerald R. Clemson, hoping he were still alive. He met Clemson's fire team leader who said that Clemson jumped up during a firefight and was killed along with Welchel's other friend, PFC William K. Colegate. Welchel went to the bunker where he found the corpse of Clemson, still in one piece. He found Colegate sitting with legs crossed in front of him, his head bowed, his chin touching his chest, and black powder burns all over his face. Welchel reached to pick up his helmet, where the men kept their mail, "..thinking maybe I would write his wife and there was about two inches of his blood in the bottom of his helmet which covered the mail and then I noticed he had a hole in his forehead."[1705] He then returned to his own bunker and found LCPL Jeffrey M. Walsh "..in a position I will never forget. He was on his knees sitting on the back of his legs with his head tilted up, eyes open as if waiting for someone to help him get out. He died that way. I was told later on they had to break his legs to get him out of the bunker."[1706]

CPL David Ford found PFC James R. Martinez laying on his stomach: "I crawled up to him and grabbed his

---

[1695] Trest, Warren A., Khe Sanh (Operation NIAGARA), HQ, PACAF, Directorate, Tactical Evaluation, CHECO Division, 13 September 1968, pp. 43-45. The action mentioned refers to Hill 861, but the date indicated plus the details obviously refer to the Hill 64 action.

[1696] Conversation with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 15 October 1997.

[1697] Conversation with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 17 October 1996.

[1698] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., May, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[1699] Conversation with Guy Leonard, 14 January 1995.

[1700] Taped comments of H.J.M. Radcliffe sent to David Ford, 7 January 1996.

[1701] 26Mar 080450Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #398.

[1702] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 8 April 1968. CG, FMFPAC, approved a Silver Star Medal.

[1703] Comments of Sgt Larry L. Powell, May, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[1704] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., May, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[1705] Letter from Edward Wayne Welchel to David Ford, 11 May 1994

[1706] Ibid.

hands which were stretched out toward me. He wasn't at all panicked, but happy to see another Marine. As I started to drag him, I could see his legs were bloody from mid-thigh down to his boots. He'd been shot several times and behind him was another Marine also badly wounded."[1707]

As Ford continued searching through the battlefield rubble, he came upon a bunker containing three dead NVA, their bodies on top of three dead Marines covered with a layer of dirt. Then he came to another bunker, completely destroyed and collapsed, and then his old bunker. As he moved up the connecting trench he saw the Marine who had replaced him only days earlier, on his back, his legs doubled back underneath him. His old fire team was at the rear of the bunker, appearing as though they had covered up an exploding grenade. Sandbags were shredded with a large amount of dirt on top of them. "I don't remember feeling anything. I was numb."[1708]

Larry Seavy-Cioffi moved to locate LCPL Rizzo since his own radio was failing due to weak batteries. He located Rizzo "..collapsed backward, sitting down against the bunker's wall. He was propped up with his PRC-25 field radio strapped onto his back and resting against the far wall, his radio behind his back like a couch's pillow. His both legs were fully extended and apart in a "V", and his lifeless arms hanging at his sides... I observed that his radio's handset wire had been cut. This description of locating LCPL Rizzo's body is forever burned into my own mind's eye like an indelible and vivid color photograph. Thirty-five years later I still clearly see him."[1709]

Just as Capt Radcliffe was consolidating the position and feeling fairly secure and hold it for the night, he received the word to withdraw. "It was incredible to me. I said, What! And he said, 'Abandon the hill.' I said, 'You gotta be kidding me; we just fought for this—we're not giving it up to them and besides, I don't have all my dead and wounded out of here.' He said, 'Well, move your wounded out.' We filled up two Otters with NVA equipment, arms... There were some C-rations and stuff we just didn't bring out of there."[1710]

David Ford helped carry Marines in body bags to the center of the hill while the wounded were carried down to the base of the hill. On one of the trips down, he saw a dead NVA at the bottom of the hill and thought it strange that he was killed there.[1711] PFC Andrew L. Metts recalls the NVA: he had lost the lower portion of his leg, from the calf down, and a Corpsman had applied a tourniquet.[1712] The Corpsman, HM2 Richard Goodwin, the senior Corpsman of C/1/9, had accompanied the relief force to provide medical assistance to the wounded Marines. An Army Staff Sergeant (from FOB-3) grabbed and brought him to a wounded NVA Colonel. "I need you to save him." "Well, I had seen the Colonel and said, 'There's nothing I can do for him, and besides that, I've got some of my own men I need to take care of.' He pulled a .45 on me! He said, 'I'm not asking you; I'm telling you! I really shocked him because I was so frustrated at that point that I grabbed the barrell of the gun and I put it to my forehead and I said, 'Do me a favor and pull the trigger! And he looked at me and said, 'You're crazy!' And I said, 'No, but I probably will be if you think I'm going to let my boys lay here and bleed and take care of a NVA, you're crazy—when the NVA is shot-up so badly that I can't do a thing. Colonel Mitchell came over and asked what was going on. Colonel Mitchell told him that he had about 30 seconds to get out of the area or he'd be declared a 'free fire zone! He was very irate that he [the SSGT] expected me to let my men lay and take care of someone else."[1713]

Capt Radcliffe then went to C-Med "..to see our wounded get out of there, make sure they got on helicopters. I just needed to see them... I was dirty and bloody and standing there. I looked like hell. Dr. Brown [CO of 3rd Med Battalion] was there and he ordered me out of there. He said in a real rough voice, 'Get that Marine out of here! I didn't have time to tell him I was the Company Commander and those were my troops, I just started getting furious. I was crying uncontrollably, tears run down me, and I was shaking. I had to change my uniform. My bodily functions went kaput and I was sobbing uncontrollably. But I was able to regroup. One of the Corpsmen grabbed me, sat me down, and they gave me some coffee laced with brandy."[1714]

A few days later, Marines from Co "A" returned to retrieve the bodies of three MIA: PVT Gary D. Dickie, CPL Manuel P. Torres, and LCPL James F. Scott. While they dug out the bunker, the NVA lobbed in a couple of mortars.[1715] Dickie, a very good friend of George Einhorn, was a Canadian citizen who joined the USMC to become a citizen. Einhorn recalls, "There was nothing left. A RPG hit him."[1716] David Ford writes: "I went to the bunker Pvt Dickey had been in, the one that I'd seen destroyed and collapsed. Some Marines began digging it out, starting in the front, working backwards. They'd been digging a few minutes when we heard tubes popping on the ridge line across from us. We all took cover in the trenches and bunkers just before the mortar

---

[1707] Letter from David Ford, 29 November 1993, p. 16.
[1708] Ibid., p. 17.
[1709] Letter of Larry Seavy-Cioffi, 24 July 2003, p. 6.
[1710] Taped comments of H.J.M. Radcliffe sent to David Ford, 7 January 1996..
[1711] Letter from David Ford, 29 November 1993.
[1712] Letter of Andrew L. Metts, 14 December 1995.
[1713] Conversations with Rev. Richard Goodwin, 17 March 1994 and 12 June 1994.
[1714] Conversations with H.J.M. Radcliffe, 12 August 1994 and 6 February 1995; Taped comments of H.J.M. Radcliffe to David Ford, 7 January 1996.
[1715] Taped comments of David William Moody, 9 June 1994.
[1716] Conversation with George Einhorn, 9 March 1992.

rounds hit the hill.. We continued digging. It wasn't long before we found the first body. It was Pvt Dickey. His head was blown apart from the base of his skull to his forehead; his brain was gone. Even though his face was distorted, I could still recognize him. The smell was sickening. We then dug out a black Marine, LCPL James Scott, who I'd known since getting in country, a member of the mortar crew who'd been standing watch with them at night."[1717]

CPL Dewey Edward Troup, newly-arrived, received a first aid pack bearing the name "Roach." Nobody else wanted it, thinking it was jinxed, but Troup took it, knowing it might come in handy.[1718]

Philip Wright, a Marine with the FLC, was working at Graves Registration as the KIAs from Hill 64 arrived. "The one that just sticks out in my mind—they wrapped the kid's head in a poncho liner—it just looked like someone emptied an AK-47 into his head. But he still had Stateside utilities, and they still had that shine to them—they were so green, and he still had Stateside combat boots. He couldn't of been there a week."[1719]

A map found on one of the NVA "..marked every tank and every armored position on the perimeter.. This map showed, almost to a bunker, that they knew where everything we had was, including the positions of our underground ammo bunkers."[1720]

Terrence Raymond Roach, Jr., was known as a nonconformist when in high school, an "individual," who would go to New Mexico and climb mountains. He wore a tam-o'-shanter,[1721] and was even suspended from high school for wearing kilts. He was athletic and played varsity baseball. His daughter, Mary Scott, was born three months after he was buried with honors on a cold, wintry day at Sacred Heart Cemetery in Detroit, Michigan. Mary Scott named her son Terry in honor of the father she never saw.[1722]

Cpl Thomas Lewer was born in Waseca, Minnesota, and moved to Bemidji in 1959 where he graduated from high school in 1965 and attended Bemidji State College before he enlisted in the Marine Corps in June, 1966.[1723] Cpl James F. Scott, Jr., a native of Mobile, Alabama, was survived by his wife, Mrs. Barbara D. Scott, and one son, Michael E. Scott.[1724] Cpl Henry York was active in football, wrestling, and track at North Babylon High School prior to enlisting in the Marine Corps in August, 1966. He was an enthusiastic surfer, a "daredevil," according to his mother.[1725]

[Message from CG, III MAF: "SPECAT EXCLUSIVE for Colonel Lownds. For the past two weeks the eyes of the world have been on Khe Sanh, and particularly the U.S. Marines tasked with the responsibility for its defense. The enemy has thus far been unable to claim even a small success despite continual attacks by fire on the combat base and ground attacks on outpost positions. This can only be attributed to the well organized defensive system, extreme alertness on the part of all units.. and good intelligence. Though we mourn those who have gallantly given their lives in defense of this outpost of freedom, we who are directly involved, and the free world, know it has not been in vain. The main ground contest for Khe Sanh remains to be fought, and a continued effort of vigilance is still necessary. Your professional performance and the determination of every Marine, soldier, sailor, airman and Seabee involved to win, are the same denominators used since 1775. Keep up the outstanding work. Well Done! LtGen Cushman sends."[1726]]

09 February 1968

LOVATO, PFC Michael Leon	C/1/9
PINATELLI, PFC Thomas Michael	C/1/9

Brief contacts with NVA and exchange of small arms fire and grenades characterized the night of 9/10 February. At 2215H, a LP of C/1/9 at XD831418, after receiving small arms fire and grenades, withdrew to the company perimeter. C/1/9 then received 7 satchel charges in their wire during which 2 enemy penetrated the outer wire to the tangle foot strands. The action resulted in the deaths of 2 Marines:[1727] PFCs Lovato and Pinatelli.

"I remember when our Listening Post got hit: I just wanted to jump up and go out there. They had movement—lots of movement—and they were attempting to come back in, and something went wrong. And I wanted to go out there because Lovato got hurt real bad—both legs blown off—there, screaming for help. And I jumped up and I was going to go out there, but then the Lt. started yelling: OK; we're going to get a patrol out there. And it seemed like it took hours; it might have been 5, 10 minutes. But I wanted to go out there. [The patrol retrieved the body]—and Tom Pinatelli: he was still alive when we got to him, but he died that night or early the [1717] Letter of David Ford, 29 November 1993, pp. 19-20.

---

[1718] Conversation with Ed Troup, 28 March 1993.
[1719] Conversation with Philip Wright, 15 July 1993.
[1720] Comments of Sgt P. J. Fitch, April, 1968, HQMC Oral History Tape #2498.
[1721] Conversation with Terry Charbonneau, 21 February 1998. A tam-o'-shanter is a large woolen cap worn by Scots.
[1722] Information supplied by Jack Wells, 2 June 2004.
[1723] Obit., Bemidji, Minnesota, Daily Pioneer, Tuesday, 27 Feb 1968.
[1724] Obit., Mobile, Alabama, Register, Thursday, 7 March 1968.
[1725] Obit., paper unidentified.
[1726] CG III MAF 080112Z/Feb 1968 to CG 3rd MarDiv in III MAF Outgoing SPECAT EXCLUSIVE file 4 Feb – 1 Mar 1968.
[1727] 3rd MarDiv 100328Z/Feb68, Daily Report of Khe Sanh, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 10/11 February 1968, #72.

next morning. I always assumed that if we just got them back alive, that we're going to save them. [Lovato].. was dead when we got to him. He bled to death, and he was screaming for help."[1728]

10 FEBRUARY 1968

BROWN, SSGT William Leo	H&HS-1
CALVIN, SSGT Glenn Henry	E/2/26
D'ADAMO, MSGT John Jr.	VMGR-152
DEVIK, LCPL Daniel Ralf	VMGR-152
PETERSON, COL Carl Elving	I MAW
WALBRIDGE, SSGT George Wilcox	H&HS-1

At noon,[1729] a silvery[1730] KC-130F of VMGR-152, #149813, call-sign BASKETBALL-813, on Mission #810, approached the KSCB runway carrying 6 500-gallon JP-4 fuel bladders and 2 pallets of flame throwers[1731] on an emergency re-supply of vitally needed fuel. Due to weather and wind conditions a TACAN approach was made to Runway 28, discontinued at approximately 900 feet to enter a right downwind VFR to Runway 10.[1732]. Flying in, just under the cloud cover and after turning from the 180 degree position, the aircraft received several hits from hostile fire while 2 miles SW of the airstrip (over Khe Sanh village). At least one round penetrated the fuel bladders causing fuel to splash the interior which was ignited by aircraft electrical systems. Within seconds, the plane's interior was engulfed in flames.[1733] The fuel went underneath the flight station, was ignited by the air turbine units and the flames came out of the throttle quadrant (where the pilots's hands control the throttle), severely burning Wildfang's hands, and flames came out of the air-conditioning ducts.[1734] The fire and smoke not only made breathing difficult, it also limited visibility to near zero at times.[1735] The aircraft touched down approximately 800 feet from the approach end of the runway. "The plane landed from the west, moved down the runway with a burst of speed, twisted to the south and headed into a row of bunkers, managing to steer the crippled plane away from the bunkers and bring it to a stop, a scant hundred feet away, before it was engulfed in flames."[1736] Prior to completing a full stop, two separate explosions occurred followed by the third and final explosion which completely engulfed the aircraft in flames. The pilot, an old legend of Marine Corps aviation, CWO-4 Henry Wildfang,[1737] expertly managed to land the aircraft, thus saving 5 of the 10 on board. Despite his painful burns to his hands, the smoke-filled compartment, and imminent danger, Wildfang maneuvered the aircraft from the runway to permit other planes to land, and risked his life to help extricate two others from the burning aircraft.[1738]

Master Sergeant D'Adamo, the flight engineer, remained in the cockpit to assist Wildfang to land the aircraft.[1739] He pulled his own flight suit up over Wildfang to try to stop the fire from burning him as he landed the aircraft.[1740] LCPL Ferren, First Mechanic, remained at his post until the aircraft stopped and then made his exit

---

[1728] Conversation with Richard Bryant, 25 May 1990.

[1729] 26Mar 100425Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #406, Para. 4.N.; 26Mar 101054Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #407; Resume of Telephone Call from TADC I MAW 101215Z/Feb68, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 10/11Feb68 #73.

[1730] USMC C-130s were silvery; USAF C-130s were camouflaged brown and dark green.

[1731] Letter of CWO-4 Wildfang to Jack Shulimson,. Marine Corps Historical Center, 26 Nov 1994.

[1732] The KSCB airstrip was 60-ft. wide, 3,900-ft., and with a 1500-ft. elevation. It was oriented ESE-WSW and had the peculiarity of a higher elevation on the western end so that planes landing from the east went up-hill (the normal use of the runway) and planes landing west to east went down-hill on a 3% gradient. There was a sharp cliff off the eastern end dropping some 800-ft. with a trough through which prevailing winds carried warmer, moist air from the lowlands to the airstrip and, together with a waterfalls, produced fog. [Pollica, TSGT Bruce W., and Rickey, TSGT Joe R., Monograph of 834th Air Division Tactical Airlift Support for Khe Sanh, 21 January – 8 April 1968, 834AD-DXI-69-001, pp. 5, 9, 28) [1733] Letter of R.M. Williams, CO, Marine Aerial Refueler Transport Squadron 152, 1/HC/khb, 1650, 22 Mar 1968, Subj: Appropriate Awards, recommendation for (in Navy Comm Medal file of Cpl Tommy Floyd Taylor and Bronze Star Medal file of SSGT Joseph Hookano Kahee, Jr.; Resume of Telephone Call from TADC, I MAW 101215Z/Feb68 in III MAF COC Journal and File, 10/11 Feb 1968 #73. "Over Khe Sanh Village" (Diary of ENS Martin Kux, 10 February 1968).

[1734] Conversation with James Veletto, 9 July 1995. (For burnt hands of Wildfang, Richardson, op. cit., p. 48).

[1735] Wildfang letter of 26 Nov 1994, cited.

[1736] Statement of LtCol John A. Wachter in Bronze Star Medal file, Sgt David G. Cumming.

[1737] CWO-4 Henry Wildfang was commissioned in 1942 and during World War II had been awarded four Distinguished Flying Crosses and attained the rank of Major. With demobilization following the War, he left the USMC, but within 90 days returned under a program that permitted enlisted pilots, and picked up the rank of Master Sergeant. By 1976, he had flown more than 22,000 flight hours and was designated the "Silver Hawk," the Naval Aviator with the longest active duty. [Herb Richardson, "Silver Hawk," Leatherneck 59:3 (Mar., 1976) 46-49]. CWO-4 Wildfang retired in June, 1978, after nearly 37 years of active service. [Letter from Henry Wildfang, 28 March 1988].

[1738] He was awarded his fifth Distinguished Flying Cross in this incident.

[1739] Distinguished Flying Cross Citation of MSgt John D'Adamo, Jr.

[1740] Conversation with John Merchant, 24 June 1993.

through the crew entrance door receiving severe burns.[1741] (He later died from these wounds, on 01 March).

LCPL David Ralf Devik was the Radio Operator aboard BASKETBALL-813 and remained in the smoke-filled rear compartment, advising Wildfang of the situation until he was killed in the third explosion.[1742] David was a minister's son from Seattle, Washington. "He was a typical minister's kid: he was 'hell on wheels.' I had red hair at the time. I'm 5-6. He was about 6-ft. with red hair, and he and I were best buddies. He had been with a reserve unit up there in Seattle and they had talk about '67 about activating the unit and sending them over to Nam. He wanted to beat that, so he opted for active duty.. He was just about set to come back to the States when he went on that flight."[1743] The fuel sloshed and the fire went into the throttles, consuming everything forward of the 245 bulkhead.[1744]

Because of the dangerous cargo, CWO-4 Wildfang didn't want to embark any passengers and so Master Gunnery Sergeant John Merchant and a Marine Corporal were bumped from the manifest.[1745]

SSGT Walbridge was coming to Khe Sanh to write stories on Air Wing personnel at Khe Sanh. He had only been in country a few days.

COL Peterson, a reserve officer from Green Bay, Wisconsin, had volunteered for active duty only a few months previously.[1746] Despite Wildfang's reluctance to embark passengers, apparently the Colonel had pushed his rank and said, "I'm going to take this flight!"[1747]

The Crash Crew arrived under the leadership of SSGT Joseph Hookano Kahee, Jr.[1748] Cpl Tommy Floyd Taylor managed to open the port paratroopo door and despite the extreme heat, assisted in extracting four crew members and one passenger.[1749] SSGT Kahee attempted to gain entrance to the aircraft through the forward hatch.[1750] The crash crew covered the flaming aircraft wreckage with 8,000 gallons of water, 500 gallons of foam concentrate and 600 pounds of PKP to control and extinguish the flames.[1751]

The aircraft had stopped less than 100-feet short of the bunker containing the Combat Correspondents, and Sgt David G. Cumming ran to the aircraft, assisted one badly burned man onto a stretcher and then moved to assist in the attempt to rescue others.[1752] Many others simply had seen the aircraft move from the 3/26 Red Sector on the western end of KSCB to the eastern end, looking "..like it was crop-dusting—there was so much fuel leaking out of it... Everybody ran over there. Everybody had to just stand and watch it burn, and once everybody found out there's nothing we could do—let's get the hell away from it, before the rounds start coming in."[1753]

The two pilots were brought to C-Med. "Two very badly burned, older men. The skin of their faces was peeling, darkened, burned, charred. One, obviously in shock and perhaps numb, asked for a Roman Catholic priest. He was relatively composed and didn't utter a word. The other was in excruciating pain and pleaded, 'O Shit! O God help me! Please let me sit up! I got to sit up! O, please let me sit up!.."[1754]

GEORGE WALBRIDGE AT KHE SANH
By MGySgt Ed Evans

"..As I approached, my attention was held by the burned out hulk of what had been a C-130 Hercules, still resting on the edge of the runway.. I turned from the C-130 and saw Gunnery Sergeant Chuck McCormick.. After a few pleasantries, Chuck said, 'You know George Walbridge burned up in that.'.. I hadn't known George Walbridge was in Viet Nam. I dropped my gear where I stood, left Chuck and walked toward the wreckage, slowly. After a few moments, carefully facing toward the plane so that if Chuck were still behind me he wouldn't see the tears..

"I first met George.. in September., 1964... George was a real clown most of the time, a con artist, but he had a good heart and if he had something you needed, it was yours.... He introduced me to my wife, who was then a Navy WAVE going through the school... What is so poignant about all this is that George had one real weak spot.

[1741] Distinguished Flying Cross Citation, LCPL Jerry Wayne Ferren.
[1742] Distinguished Flying Cross Citation, LCPL David Ralf Devik.
[1743] Conversation with Jon Filina, 25 August 1993.
[1744] Conversation with John Merchant, 24 June 1993. The "245 bulkhead" was the wall between the crew compartment and the cargo compartment, 245 inches from the nose of the plane." [Conversation with Jon Filina, 25 August 1993].
[1745] Conversation with John Merchant, 24 June 1993.
[1746] Letter of LtCol Johnny D. Gregerson, 3 Jan 1969, in Khe Sanh Monograph File, Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.
[1747] Conversation with Jon Filina, 25 August 1993.
[1748] Others in the Crash Crew: Sgt Rito Aguilera, Jr., Cpl Daniel M. Decato, Cpl Michael L. Orr, Cpl Paul R. Carmean, Jr., and Cpl Tommie F. Taylor. [Ltr of R.M. Williams, CO, VMGR-152, cited.]
[1749] Navy Commendation Medal file on Cpl Tommy Floyd Taylor.
[1750] Bronze Star Medal file on SSGT Joseph Hookano Kahee, Jr.
[1751] CO, VMGR-152 ltr of 22 March 1968, cited.
[1752] Bronze Star Medal file on Sgt David G. Cumming.
[1753] Conversation with Philip Wright, 20 August 1993.
[1754] Diary entry of Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, 10 Feb 1993.

He wanted desperately to be loved. He would do anything for a girl, and often did. But they simply took what he offered them and ran off with somebody else. George's broken heart was a regular item.. In 1967..he was married and he was very much in love with her... His wife, a pretty Woman Marine.. let me know George meant a great deal to her, and if I had any ideas about taking him out and getting him into trouble like most of is old cronies, well, what she promised isn't found in anybody's book of polite mannerisms. She said he'd been through enough, too much. She let me know he'd tried to go to Nam and they wouldn't let him, but I better not try to make George feel guilty about that. I loved her for that..

"I thought about her as I stood in the wind, gazing at the burned out hulk where George died... George had apparently only been in country a few days, but he wanted to be where the action was.. As a new guy, he didn't know you shouldn't get on a plane filled with a bladder of AV-gas headed for Khe Sanh..."[1755]

[On 10 February, the B5-T8 Front withdrew 5 regiments from the Khe Sanh battlefield. By "..the middle of February, 1968, the 66th Regiment [304th Division] replaced the 325th [C] Division."[1756] On 10 February, the NVA began "Phase 2" of their Khe Sanh battle, the encirclement of Khe Sanh Combat Base.[1757] The resolve and tenacity of the Marine defenders, the inability to draw-in infantry so they could be annihilated, the inability to restrict resupply, the inability to mass troops (due to electronic sensors and signals intelligence which pinpointed NVA units with uncanny accuracy), and B-52 strikes which annihilated any massing, all made overrunning KSCB impossible given the situation. LtGen Phillip B. Davidson, General Westmoreland's J-2 (Intelligence staff officer), opines the removal of NVA units to the leak in the papers concerning the possible use of nuclear weapons in the defense of Khe Sanh.[1758]

So significant had the battlefield of Khe Sanh become, employment of nuclear weapons in its survival was considered under the code name FRACTURE JAW. President Johnson's apprehensions over Khe Sanh reflected in his demand for a statement from the JCS that it could be held, the construction of a sand-box in the White House Situation Room of the Khe Sanh battlefield, and his continual questions concerning the welfare of the 26th Marines,[1759] led him to express his apprehensions concerning nuclear weapons. The possibility employing tactical nuclear weapons (artillery-fired or mines (SADM)) loomed as a definite possibility should the base be in danger of being overrun, and the President vehemently eschewed having to make the decision to release this chimera. On 1 February, General Wheeler, CJCS, asked the advice of General Westmoreland and Admiral Sharp (CINCPAC) "..whether tactical nuclear weapons should be used if the situation in Khe Sanh should become [like Dien Bien Phu]. I consider such an eventuality unlikely. Nevertheless, I would appreciate your views as to whether there are targets in the area which lend themselves to nuclear strikes, whether some contingency nuclear planning would be in order, and what you would consider to be some of the more significant pros and cons of using tac nukes in such a contingency."[1760] Two days later, he informed General Westmoreland: "I have just had a phone conversation with the President in which he reiterated his concern that the situation could become so serious in the Khe Sanh area he could be confronted with a decision to use tactical nuclear weapons to redress the imbalance, a decision which he does not want to be forced to make."[1761] General Westmoreland's response vexed both General Wheeler and President Johnson,[1762] for whereas he reiterated the differences between Khe Sanh and Dien Bien Phu (supporting air, reinforcing heavy artillery, and techniques for aerial re-supply), together with sufficient manpower either at Khe Sanh or nearby, he concluded, "The use of tactical nuclear weapons should not be required in the present situation in view of the authority to use COFRAM. However, should the situation in the DMZ area change dramatically, we should be prepared to introduce weapons of greater effectiveness against massed forces. Under such circumstances I visu-

[1755] Printed in The Khe Sanh Veteran 1:6 (Nov., 1994) 18-20.

[1756] Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign], Hanoi: Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense, 1987, p. 32.

[1757] Cong Tau Hau Can: Chien Dich Duong 9 Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [Rear Services Operations: 1968 Spring Summer Khe Sanh Route 9 Campaign]. Classified "Mat" [Secret], Restricted "For Distribution within the Army, Luu Hanh Trong Quan Doi, Hanoi: General Directorate for Rear Services, 1988, p. 267.

[1758] Davidson, Phillip B., Vietnam at War, The History: 1946-1975, San Francisco, Ca.: Presidio, 1988, pp. 564-565.

[1759] Brugioni, Dino A., "The President, Khe Sanh, and the 26th Marines," Leatherneck 69:9 (September, 1986) 24. Brugioni was a senior official and aerial reconnaissance and photo interpreter expert for the CIA.

[1760] JCS 011526Z/Feb 1968, JCS 01154 to COMUSMACV and CINCPAC, in OCJCS File 091, Vietnam February, 1968.

[1761] JCS 030332Z/Feb 1968, JCS 01272 to COMUSMACV in OCJCS File 091, Vietnam February, 1968.

[1762] Davidson, op. cit., p. 565.

alize that either tactical nuclear weapons or chemical agents would be active candidates for employment."[1763] Admiral Sharp, the CINCPAC Unified Commander, reported to General Wheeler that although use of tactical nuclear weapons at Khe Sanh was unlikely, "..we felt that military prudence alone requires that we do some detailed planning regarding [it].. We are accomplishing the planning under the strictest security in Okinawa with a special planning team headed by a CINCPAC planner.. [and have assigned] the unclassified nickname of FRACTURE JAW.."[1764] General Wheeler responded that any plans that are developed under FRACTURE JAW not be forwarded until the JCS requests them "..or until a critical situation arises which, in your judgment, dictates the need for us to consider such plans."[1765]

Then, on 5 February, an anonymous telephone call was made to the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations reporting that a noted nuclear weapons expert had arrived in South Vietnam,[1766] the Committee had hearings in closed session, and Senator Eugene J. McCarthy reported it at a news conference.[1767] General Wheeler directed Admiral Sharp "..to discontinue the FRACTURE JAW special planning efforts. There has been much news media speculation and opposition assertions on this subject, and he [President Johnson] desires that there be no foundation for allegations being made."[1768] CINCPAC instructed General Westmoreland: "Discontinue all planning for FRACTURE JAW. Place all planning material, including messages and correspondence relating thereto, under positive security. Debrief all personnel with access to this planning project that there can be no disclosure of the content of the plan or knowledge that such planning was either underway or suspended. Security of this action and prior actions must be air tight."[1769]

LtGen Davidson opines that it was the public disclosure of consideration of the use of nuclear weapons at Khe Sanh—and, in the mind of Gen Giap, the possible use against choke points in the Ho Chi Minh Trail and dikes along the Red River—that caused Giap to cease attacking the outposts of Khe Sanh and withdraw significant numbers of troops.[1770] Davidson argues that Giap may well have remembered Operation VULTURE, Admiral Radford's plan (as CJCS) to relieve the besieged French troops at Dien Bien Phu by using nuclear weapons.[1771]

Military planning exercises including the use of simulated atomic weapons were included in the biannual SEATO Exercise STRONGBACK.[1772] In 1964, a CIA cable from Laos noted: "Communist China and North Vietnam sincerely believe that the United States will not engage in atomic warfare to win in Vietnam."[1773]

Whereas the Institute for Defense Analyses, Jason Division, study on nuclear weapons in Southeast Asia concluded: "..the political effects of U.S. first use of TNW in Vietnam would be uniformly bad and could be catastrophic,"[1774] General Westmoreland demurred: "If Washington officials were so intent on 'sending a message' to Hanoi, surely small tactical nuclear weapons would be a way to tell Hanoi something, just as two atomic bombs had spoken convincingly to Japanese officials during World War II and the threat of atomic bombs induced the North Koreans to accept meaningful negotiations during the Korean War. It could be that use of a few small tactical nuclear weapons in Vietnam—or even the threat of them—might have quickly brought the war there to an end... I felt at the time and even more so now that to fail to consider this alternative was a mistake."[1775]

Ominous similarities between the fated Dien Bien Phu and Khe Sanh soon prompted much apprehension.

[1763] COMUSMACV 031226Z/Feb 1968, MAC 01586, to CJCS, in OCJCS File 091, Vietnam February, 1968; in Memorandum for the President from CJCS, CM-2944-68, 3 February 1968, in LBJ Library, March 31st Speech, Vol. 6, Khe Sanh Reports

[1764] CINCPAC 020208Z/Feb 1968, in OCJCS File 091, Vietnam February, 1968.

[1765] JCS 101848Z/Feb 1968, JCS 01678, to CINCPAC, in OCJCS File 091, Vietnam February, 1968.

[1766] Hammond, William M., Reporting Vietnam, Media and Military at War, Lawrence, Kansas: University Press of Kansas, 1998, p. 118. The scientists had arrived in Vietnam in connection with the study of the electronic barrier, the "McNamara Line," and had nothing to do with nuclear weapons. [Tannenwald, Nina, The Nuclear Taboo: The United States and the Nonuse of Nuclear Weapons Since 1945, (unpublished email by Nautilus Institute, Nuclear Policy Project (to be published by Cambridge University Press), March, 2003, section entitled "Khe Sanh."]

[1767] "Viet Nukes Requested, McCarthy Says," Washington Post, 9 February 1968; "White House Disputes McCarthy on Atom Arms," New York Times, 10 Feb 1968.

[1768] JCS 111913Z/Feb 1968, JCS 01690, to CINCPAC, in OCJCS File 091, Vietnam February 1968.

[1769] CINCPAC 120242Z/Feb 1968 in OCJCS File 091, Vietnam February, 1968.

[1770] Davidson, op. cit., pp. 565-566.

[1771] Vide, Memorandum from Admiral Arthur W. Radford to Secretary of Defense, Charles E. Wilson, 26 May 1954, Para. 3.a., reprinted in The New York Times, The Pentagon Papers, p. 45.

[1772] Conducted 11 Feb – 13 March 1958. National Security Council Progress Report, 6 November 1957 on U.S. Policy in Mainland Southeast Asia (NSC 5612/1)

[1773] Intelligence Information Cable TDCS-3/581,821, Vientiane, Laos, 17 May 1964, Para 7.F., CIA MORI document #11432.

[1774] F. J. Dyson, R. Gomer, S. Weinberg, and S.C. Wright, Institute for Defense Analyses, Jason Division, Study S-266, Tactical Nuclear Weapons in Southeast Asia, March, 1967, p. 51.

[1775] Westmoreland, General William C., A Soldier Reports, Garden City, NY: Doubleday & Co., Inc., 1976, p. 338.

Marine planners had been sensitive to this from the beginning of permanent Marine Corps presence at the Combat Base. Indeed, a 30-page detailed analysis reflects their cognizance of differences and similarities as early as January, 1967.[1776] The North Vietnamese newspaper, Nhan Dan, warned that the U.S. faced a defeat as "disastrous as that suffered by the French at Dien Bien Phu in 1954."[1777] Despite General Giap's assertions that Khe Sanh was no Dien Bien Phu ("Khe Sanh didn't try to be, nor could it have been, a Dien Bien Phu. Khe Sanh wasn't that important to us.")[1778] Phase II of the Khe Sanh battle is described as an encirclement (i.e., "siege") in official NVA histories,[1779] their attack of outposts (Hill 861, Huong Hoa District Headquarters, BV-33, Hill 861-A, Lang Vei, and Hill 64, together with extensive trenching activities with saps and other traditional siege tactics, betray their true intentions. In an undated Top Secret analysis, CG, FMFPAC, gave his reflections on the similarities and differences to General Chapman, Commandant of the Marine Corps.[1780] On 11 February, Colonel Reamer W. Argo, Jr., the MACV Historian, briefed General Westmoreland and his staff comparing Khe Sanh and Dien Bien Phu.[1781] Col Argo argued: "It appears that Khe Sanh is following the pattern of previous sieges," and concluded, "If a purely defensive course of action is pursued at Khe Sanh, the enemy may succeed in concentrating sufficient combat power to overwhelm our base in spite of our firepower, as has been the case in most sieges in the past," and recommended "urgent consideration be given to employing an outside force in offensive action against the enemy's forces devoted to the siege." Gen Westmoreland recalls that his staff was stunned by Col Argo's presentation and the General responded that it was good they had heard the worst, "But we are not, repeat not, going to be defeated at Khe Sanh. I will tolerate no talking or even thinking to the contrary."[1782] A 24-page analysis by the SACSA, General DePuy, complete with maps and statistical tables was forwarded to President Johnson by Walt W. Rostow as a "brilliant comparison," and with three appended interrogation reports on the NVA campaign plan, Rostow wrote, "they define what we are up against."[1783] A 105-page, single-spaced document prepared in March, 1968, by COMUSMACV, reported the final results of the committee to study the comparison between Khe Sanh and Dien Bien Phu,[1784] concluding with political and physical similarities, but two major differences: Khe Sanh's extensive fire-support (16 175mm guns and a very sophisticated air environment) and reinforcing logistic capability for Khe Sanh.[1785] He failed to mention the tenacity of the Marine defenders and, although few, just the right people on the ground to make the right decisions that would ensure Khe Sanh would hold, however desperate the situation was to become.]

11 FEBRUARY 1968

KEEFE, CPL Dennis Michael	HQ 26 Mar
SCOTT, PVT Walter Michael	H&S/1/26
TURNER, 1/Sgt Robert Lawrence	A/1/9
WOODS, 1/Lt John Kevin	H&S/3/26

At 1115H, a rocket from the south exploded on a 106mm recoilless rifle bunker (XD848416) killing Pvt Walter Michael Scott.[1786] "My best buddy who I've known since 27th Marines was killed.. A 122mm rocket landed on the roof of Mike Scott's bunker. I run over and crawled inside and pulled out a body. It was horrible. There wasn't any head and I looked on the shirt and seen the name of Scott. I about went crazy."[1787] From the official 1/26 Command Chronology report: "Fm: B – KIA Report – A. S235986 B. 111115H C. XD848416 D. Shrapnel and concussion E. Multiple lacerations F. Dead G. Yes H. Defense of perimeter I. Rocket J. H&SCo, 106 Plt." Official records hardly disclose the reality!

Richard Cruz first met his buddy, Mike Scott, in Staging Battalion. As the siege battle at Khe Sanh progressed, Cruz notes, "Food was short. My bunker was right behind the messhall. He was with H&S Company, attached to 106s. So him and a couple other guys made a

---

[1776] "Khe Sanh Area Report," appended as Enclosure (1) to 3rd Marine Division Command Chronology, January, 1967.
[1777] "Waiting at Khe Sanh," The National Observer, 26 Feb 1968, p. 4.
[1778] Fallaci, Oriana, Interview with History, Trans. John Shepley, Boston: Houghton Mifflin Co., 1976, p. 85.
[1779] Cong Tac Hau Can: Chien Dich Duong 9 Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [Rear Service Operations: 1968 Spring-Summer Khe Sanh Route 9 Campaign], op. cit., p. 267; Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign], op. cit., p. 30.
[1780] "Khe Sanh and Dienbienphu," in archives of Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.
[1781] MACJ031, Subj: Analysis of the Khe Sanh Situation in Light of Previous Sieges, COL Argo/lpb/3838, 3 March 1968, in LBJ Library, Westmoreland Papers, b. 16, History File #30 [II], Doc. #153. Col. Argo not only compared these two battles, but also provided a summary of 38 past sieges beginning with that at Constantinople in 1453.
[1782] Westmoreland, op. cit., p. 338.
[1783] LBJ Library, Files of Walt W. Rostow, Khe Sanh-Dien Bien Phu Comparison by Gen DePuy.
[1784] Headquarters, United States Military Assistance Command, Vietnam, Strategic/Tactical Study, prepared by ACos, J-5, 10 March 1968.
[1785] Ibid., pp,. 8-9.
[1786] 3rd MarDiv 160015Z/Feb 1968, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #411; 1/26 ComdC Feb 1968, S2/S3 Log for 11 Feb 1968, Serial #15
[1787] Letter of Richard Cruz to his parents, 16 February 1968.

raid on the supply—H&S Co. Supply, where they had all the C-rations the night before. He said, 'Man are you hungry?' and I said, 'I'm starved!' So he went over and got me some food, around through the trenches. He wasn't walking above ground—all the way by the trash dump. He crossed the road right there where Perez had his M60 set up, by the gate, by the ammo dump. And we just hear BOOM! I looked, and it was Mike's bunker. So I ran right there, and Perez, he lifts the Air Force matting up and I crawl in there and pull out a body with no head. So I go in and I can't find Mike. I come out and I saw 'Scott' right across his shirt—first one I pulled out—no head, decapitated. And that's when I went nuts."[1788]

As a USAF C-130 from Tuy Hoa Air Base landed on the KSCB airstrip at 1130H, a rocket and mortar barrage erupted lasting for 20 minutes. The first round, landing 15 feet from the plane, resulted in the death of two passengers, serious wounds to the loadmaster, extensively damaging the plane's tail section, and starting a fire inside the plane.[1789] "Colonel Lownds raced to the scene of the accident and immediately took charge of rescue operations. To do so he placed himself in immediate proximity to the burning plane without benefit of protective clothing while exposed to flame, burning debris and numerous explosions caused by the fire. He personally and diligently searched the wreckage for survivors. Locating one crew member he pulled him from the wreckage in a vain attempt to save his life. Throughout the rescue efforts he continually exposed himself to the billowing flames directing operations and personally trying to extricate other crew members from the wreckage."[1790]

Among the passengers were all the company First Sergeants of 1/9 who were sent to obtain the payroll for the battalion. As a result of the hit, all five First Sergeants were medevaced. Top Robert L. Turner (of Co A/1/9), although evacuated to Delta Med at Dong Ha, succumbed to his wounds.[1791]

Bill Jabusch was dying from leukemia at the Madigan Army Hospital, Tacoma, Washington, in 1990. He later received a bone marrow transplant from marrow donated by his sister, but then died from a brain fungus 8 November 1991 in connection with the transplant. Facing his last days, he wrote down his experiences in Vietnam and wrote of his Lieutenant, John Kevin Woods who had been in Dong Ha with the 3/26 rear supply and was one of those killed in the plane crash today. "He came up to Khe Sanh, wanted to see how his Motor Transport troops were doing. He apparently wasn't supposed to be there, but he had enough concern for us to check. I didn't give him much credit for being a decent guy. He was just a Second Lieutenant to me and I was a forever-time-in-grade Private. His plane got hit and burned up inside, and he burned to death in it."[1792] He wrote the following:

"Lt Woods was a pretty good guy as far as officers go.. He joined us at Camp Evans in September, 1967... He was about 6-1 with dark red hair and a bright red mustache which he was really proud of. He even started to let it exceed regulations a bit, a little bit of rebellion but not much. He caught me with little to do one afternoon around the first of October and decided he wanted to tell me all about going through O.C.S... I think he was just dying to tell someone something about himself.. I think at the time I must have been standing perimeter in one of the 60 bunkers because he just had to tell me about being the 60 gunner in O.C.S... I'm sure he thought of this as get acquainted time, but I got the impression he would like to become another Audie Murphy. A day or two later he really outdid himself. He'd gotten up, walked out of his tent with his little shaving pan, walked to a water can by the shop tent, filled his pan up and walked back to the tent. Trouble was, it wasn't water, it was gas. A lot of the cans were too rusty, so we used them for gas when we needed to. He was red, he was so mad. He'd gotten it on him before he'd realized and was fit to be tied... General Hochmuth got killed. Our Battalion got detailed to retrieve the bodies. Someone, probably the Battalion Commander, thought a wreath or something like that should be sent to his widow. Lt Woods got detailed to collect from all of Headquarters. I think he'd collected from most sections when he came to us and told us he'd need 50 cents per man donated. That's all well and good, but I did some quick calculations and $600.00 was just a little too much for our battalion to buy one wreath, so I gave him a ration of shit about where the rest of the money was going. Before long, he was standing in the middle of the hooch screaming, 'Jabusch, you're just a P.V.T.—shut up!' Over and over; he was livid. It took him a couple of weeks to get over it and I really felt bad, but Privates just don't tell Lieutenants they're sorry!... [We went to Khe Sanh]. He'd gotten left at Dong Ha and I was at Khe Sanh driving ammunition and such for S-4.

[1788] Conversation with Richard Cruz in his home in Columbus, Ohio, 19 August 1984.

[1789] Pollica, TSgt Bruce W., and Rickey, TSgt Joe R., Monograph of 834th Air Division, Tactical Airlift Support for Khe Sanh, 21 January – 8 April 1968 pp. 12-13; 3rd MarDiv COC (Cpl Petri 111530H/Feb 1968, Resume of Telephone Call to III MAF COC, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 11/12 February 1968, #100. The latter document puts the rocket attack at 1155H. 3rd MarDiv COC 160015Z/Feb 1968, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #411 (puts the attack at 1200H).

[1790] CG III MAF 071000Z/Apr68, SPECAT EXCLUSIVE for LtGen Krulak from LtGen Cushman info MGen Tompkins in III MAF Outgoing SPECAT Exclusive file 28 Mar – 11 Apr 1968.

[1791] Comments of Capt Peter A. Woog, USMC Oral History Tape #4726. (Capt Woog was the Adjutant and Headquarters Commandant of 1/9; Bronze Star Medal Citation on First Sergeant Robert L. Turner.

[1792] Taped comments of William Jabusch sent 8 March 1990, transcript p. 14.

"I hardly had a chance to even think about him, and didn't until Feb... I guess he'd just wanted to see how the troops were, so he hopped a ride our way, intending I was told to see us, his platoon, and then catch the next bird out back to Dong Ha... He was thinking about us at the end. I never did get to apologize and a couple of times I really wanted to, but didn't let myself. I guess shitbird Privates like me thought they had an image to maintain, and never saying you're sorry to a Lt is one of them....

"The most important thing I've got to say is this: 1st Lieutenant Woods, John Kevin, USMC—you were a good man. I never gave you much reason to believe this, but I honestly do say it now. We laughed at some of the things you did and kept our distance, but you did make us smile. Most officers didn't. You stuck up for us, especially me, and I returned the favor... You thought about us, I see that now. You're actions clearly proved that. Perhaps God will deliver this for me!

"Sir! Please accept my most humble apology. My actions to you were reprehensible. My respect for your rank only grudgingly given, but I recall I liked you, and you generated more smiles on my face than frowns. You busted your ass trying, and that's as much as you can do. I respect you for who you are, and even though I didn't let myself say it then, I say it now—proudly. You're a good Marine. Thank you."[1793]

[On 12 February, the USAF ceased landing C-130s on the Khe Sanh airstrip due to the dangerous situation. Prior to that, between 21 January and 11 February, the 834th Air Division had delivered 3,669 tons (7,338,000 pounds) of assorted supplies via 320 C-130 (jet-equipped "K" models) and C-7A sorties.[1794]

12 FEBRUARY 1968

SPANGLER, CPL Larry Keith HQ 26 Mar

Died of fragment wounds to his head.

13 FEBRUARY 1968

EDMONDS, PFC Arthur Lee, Jr. H&S/2/26

NVA shelling during the early afternoon included 5 rockets impacting in the LSA area of the KSCB at 1410H, killing one man and wounding 8 (2 evacuated).[1795] The Marine killed, PFC Arthur Lee "Slip" Edmonds, Jr., was an American Indian, a member of the 81mm mortar section of 2/26 who had lost a part to his rifle and went in to the main base to get the part from the armory. He was on the base for about an hour when the rockets exploded killing him.[1796]

14 FEBRUARY 1968

BUNGARTZ, PFC Frederick William	K/3/9
COMBS, CPL Lowell Thomas	K/3/9
DOORNBOS, CPL Don Michael	D/1/9
FLEMING, CPL Dennis K	K/3/9
GOSS, HM2 Larry Jo	K/3/9
JAMES, LCPL Mark Everett	K/3/9
JONES, PFC Melvin Lewis	K/3/9
PATRICK, PFC Albert Earl	A/3rd Eng
REESE, 2/Lt William Robert	K/3/9
RIGSBY, PFC Barry Lane	K/3/9
ROBERTSON, PFC Gerald William	A/1/9
SCHNEIDER, CPL David Francis	K/3/9
SLACK, PFC Steven George	D/1/9
WARD, CAPT Alexander Kearney	K/3/9
WENTZELL, Jeffrey Raymond	K/3/9

On 13 February 1968, K/3/9 departed Ca Lu Combat Base (YD012455) to an objective 150 meter hill running north and south (XD990450) terminating at Route 9, approximately 2500 meters west of Ca Lu Combat Base and 13000 meters east of KSCB. At 1645H on 14 Feb, all four of KILO's companies were in contact with a reinforced NVA unit whose mission was to prevent movement of vehicles up Route 9 to assist the besieged KSCB. Early in the battle, a 60mm mortar landed in the CP group mortally wounding the CO, XO, and chief Corpsman (Capt Alexander Ward, 2/Lt William Reese, and HM2 Goss). Over 80% of KILO Company was wounded in this battle and sustained 10 KIA or DOW Marines and 1 KIA Navy Corpsman.[1797]

Raymond Felle, the Corpsman assigned to K-1 of 3/9, recounts the detail of the action:[1798]

"Our platoon headed down the hill to a streambed below. We had seen NVA at the streambed and knew that we would be in contact soon. There was a well-made trail leading up the side of soon to be called Valentines Ridge. Our Platoon Commander, 2nd Lt Holladay, and his trusted Marine, Cpl. Williams, wanted to get our men off the well-made trail even if it meant climbing up a very steep slope in the jungle. We only got about 10 of us off the trail when a .50 cal. machinegun started to fire on us, killing the point man in 3rd Platoon. The ten of us continued up the hill, only to be fired on by a NVA with

---

[1793] Essay appended to letter from William Jabusch, 6 January 1990.

[1794] Pollica and Rickey, op. cit., pp. 9-10.

[1795] 3rd MarDiv 152213Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #426.

[1796] Interview of Ron Bennett by Kathi Jones, 29 January 1990, transcript p. 9.

[1797] Information provided by Raymond Felle in his letter of 4 December 2001. (Felle was 1st Platoon, K/3/9, Corpsman). Printed in Khe Sanh Veterans: Red Clay 49 (Spring, 2001) 31.

[1798] Email to Kate Nicholson in letter from Ray Felle, 9 Dec 2005.

a RPG which exploded on a rock sending fragments into most of us. The Marine in front of me was the most seriously wounded with half of his rear end removed. By this time everyone was firing and yelling commands. Holladay took Marines up to the summit of the hill taking out the RPG fighting hole. About two hours into the battle he lost contact with Capt Ward. That is most likely when the mortar landed near him mortally wounding the XO, the Chief Corpsman, and himself. Our Platoon Commander, Holladay, sent Williams back down the mountain to find the rest of 1st Platoon and brought them up to the summit. He then called in jets to pound the NVA. They were dropping the HE so close you would be lifted off the ground with the explosions along with the shrapnel tearing through the jungle. Night was coming fast, so Holladay took us over the summit and down the other side. I knew we were going to get ambushed carrying our wounded and being on low ground, but luck was with us, and we got down to Route 9. The battle3 was still raging above in the jungle but we did not know where each platoon was and there was no radio contact and our commander [Capt Ward] was unable to give commands to the platoons. It became very chaotic. We formed a defensive position and waited for orders from Major Oliver and India Company. Along the way we picked up several lost Marines. What was left of our platoon got back into base and waited till morning. We knew that the CO, XO, and Chief Corpsman had been wounded but did not know how bad. That whole day wounded were coming off the mountain and into Ca Lu...Kilo Company was decimated with 9 KIA Marines, 1 DOW [Capt Ward] and 1 KIA Corpsman, along with 80% of the company wounded."

KSCB received one incoming rocket at noon impacting in the 3rd Engineers area next to a PC, killing PFC Albert Earl Patrick and seriously wounding another man.[1799]

At 1515H, Co D/1/9 received 3 rounds of 60mm mortars resulting in one seriously wounded and one non-seriously wounded man. Later, 2 additional rounds impacted, one of which landed in a bunker doorway killing Cpl Michael Doornbos and PFC Steven George Slack, and seriously wounding LCPL Kenneth L. Madello.[1800] Madello was spared death because he was closest to the doorway and protected by a dirt wall.[1801] Doornbos was a Canadian citizen who volunteered for the USMC.[1802]

[At 1835H a major NVA supply area was struck just inside Laos (at XD7622, a location about 21 KM south-southwest of KSCB, 9 KM south-southwest of Co Roc (XD7431), and 1 KM west of the Xe Pone River). The strike caused so many secondary explosions and fires that another strike was made 4 hours later. During this strike probably 4 ammunition dumps were hit which burned from 5 to 30 minutes and then another fire started burning into a cave, setting off numerous secondary explosions. The FAC reported that he believed there was a great deal more in the area. Niagara Control decided to keep pounding this area with tactical fighters and also requested a B-52 strike. For the next seven days it was repeatedly hit and the strikes generated approximately 1,000 secondary explosions and fires.[1803]

Also on 14 February, General Maxwell Taylor (Special Consultant to President Johnson), in a Memorandum for the President, wrote: "My review of Westy's [General Westmoreland] cables does not convince me of the military importance of maintaining Khe Sanh at the present time if it is still feasible to withdraw. Whatever the past value of the position, it is a positive liability now. We are allowing the enemy to arrange at his leisure a set-piece attack on the ground.. which will allow us little opportunity to punish him except by our air power... B-52s cannot attack with safety to our own forces."[1804]]

15 FEBRUARY 1968

GAYNOR, SGTMAJ James Thomas	H&S/1/26
PERETTA, CPL John Rocco	I/3/26
SILER, PFC Jimmy Louis	B/1/9

At 1230H, B/1/9 (XD831415) received one incoming 60mm mortar killing PFC Jimmy Louis Siler and wounding three who were medically evacuated.[1805]

At 1510H, the CP of C/1/26 took a direct hit by a 122mm rocket resulting in 5 seriously wounded (medically evacuated) and one minor wounded.[1806] LCPL Jo-

---

[1799] 3rd MarDiv 160311Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #424, Para 4.B.

[1800] 26Mar 141002Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #423; 1/9 ComdC Feb68, Encl (1); Letter from Charles Olson, 20 March 1995.

[1801] Letter from Olson, 20 March 1995, cited.

[1802] Ken Madello, email posted 24 April 2002, Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board.

[1803] MACV, "Khe Sanh Analysis," 08 Jul 1968, p. 14.

[1804] Appended to Memo from Walt W. Rostow to Robert Ginsburgh, 14 Feb 1968, in LBJ Library archives, National Security Files, Vietnam Country File, 2A(2) I Corps & DMZ, Doc. #49, and the basis for Rostow's memo to the President of Tuesday, 13 Feb 1968, 4PM, same file, Doc #53.

[1805] 3rd MarDiv COC 161300Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #427, Para 4.F.; 26Mar 151050Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #427, Para 4.F.

[1806] 3rd MarDiv COC 161300Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #427, Para 4.Q.; 26Mar 151050Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #43rd MarDiv COC 161300Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #427, Para 4.Q.; 26Mar 151050Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #427, Para. 4.P. The 1/26 ComdC, S2/S3 Log, notes the time at 1515H, and lists those wounded as G258762 (SgtMaj James T. Gaynor), J2390988 (Pvt Larry L. Jenkins), D211469 (Cpl James A. Densmore), E091132 (Capt David L. Ernst), B2361418

seph T. Bailey was in the process of waking up LCPL Charles Norman Chamberlin to assume the radio watch in the Co C bunker along the northern (Blue) sector of the KSCB perimeter. At this time, the bunker was still above ground, and just after Joseph roused him, he stood up next to a wood pillar that supported the roof. At that instant, the round impacted and hit LCPL Bailey in the back of his head giving him wounds from which he would die on 19 February. Sergeant Major James Gaynor was visiting the Co C CP, behind a poncho hanging in the bunker to separate the enlisted from the officers. As the round exploded, he stumbled back and fell on the floor. Captain Ernst (CO of Co C/1/26) was badly hit in his arm, eventually loosing his arm as a result. LCPL Chamberlin was spared injury by the fluke of being behind the wooden pillar which shielded him from the minatory bits of steel.[1807]

"I had been sleeping after standing radio watch until early that morning, and LCPL Bailey had tried to wake me by shaking my shoulder a few moments before the incoming rocket hit. I did not get up immediately, and will always regret that.. I fell back to sleep and then heard Joseph call to me from the north side of the bunker where our radios were set up on ammo boxes. I stood up and happened to be standing next to a post that supported the roof of the bunker when the round came in.. LCPL Bailey was seriously wounded in the back of his head. He pitched forward on the bench he was sitting on and I went to help him but was unable to determine in my confusion where to start to assist him, as he had multiple head injuries and I believe wounds to his back also. He did not regain consciousness in the 5-10 minutes it took to get a stretcher to the bunker and evacuate him... Captain Ernst came forward from the rear of the bunker and was attempting to apply a field bandage to LCPL Bailey's wounds when I noticed he (Capt Ernst) was bleeding profusely from his arm in a manner that suggested arterial wounds, and Sgt Maj Gaynor was unconscious on the floor of the bunker."[1808]

1/Lt John M. Kaheny received word that his orders to return home for special leave in connection with his father's grave illness had arrived. He went to the 1/26 Bn CP and LtCol James B. Wilkinson (CO, 1/26) told him that something tragic had just happened: the Battalion Sergeant Major and the CO of Co. "C" had been seriously wounded by a rocket that struck their command post. He said, "You're the next senior Lieutenant; do you want to take Charlie Company?" After Kaheny related the news concerning his father and the orders, LtCol Wilkinson, in his typically sensitive manner patted Kaheny on the back and said, "Why don't you go home," and indicated that upon his return he might get a rifle company later.[1809]

The only way to leave Khe Sanh was to hop a medevac helicopter and help tend to the wounded, so he went to CHARLIE MED. While waiting, he walked to the helicopter landing area for a few minutes and met up with 1/Lt Charles W. King who had come off Hill 881-S (where he was a Platoon Commander with MIKE Co., 3/26) who was walking to Graves Registration with the remains of a Marine from 3/26; "all he had was a small Willy Peter bag. The young Marine had been hit directly with an enemy mortar."[1810] The KIA Marine, CPL John Rocco Peretta, had been killed as a result of a heavy fire attack directed against 881-South by NVA units firing 122mm rockets, 82mm mortars and sporadic fire from automatic fire. At 1615H, Hill 881S (XD777437) received 2 incoming 82mm mortars.[1811] The Company Commander having been wounded and evacuated, 1/Lt Esslinger immediately assumed command, moved into the impact area to direct the movement of WIAs to safe positions, and then ran to the middle of the LZ, standing amid the intense barrage of mortars and sniper fire, personally directing in the medevac helicopter. Although wounded, he personally carried three of the wounded to the helicopter.[1812]

Both King and Kaheny were called back to CHARLIE Med since the helicopter was enroute, and Kaheny was assigned to assist with Sergeant Major Gaynor. "You have to realize that Sergeant Major Gaynor and I had lived together in the alternate Command Post for the past 30 days or so and I had gotten to know him fairly well. He had been in the Air Wing, and this was to be his "twilight cruise" before retirement. He made a request to serve his last tour with the Grunts because he had never

---

(LCPL Joseph T. Bailey), and B2163655 (CPL Ronald J. Barry) [Serials #34-39].

[1807] Conversation with Charles Norman Chamberlin, 13 Oct 2004.

[1808] Letter from Charles Chamberlin, 8 November 2004.

[1809] Taped comments of John M. Kaheny, 30 Nov 1986. Kaheny was the 1/26 S-3 Liaison Officer, attached to 1/26 from January, 1967 to July, 1968 (CO, Co "D").

[1810] Ibid.

[1811] 26Mar 151050Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #427, Para. 4.R. NAVPERS 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 8 September 1968, Bronze Star Medal file of 1/Lt John Thomas Esslinger. During this attack, the CO of M/3/26, Capt John J. Gilece, Jr., had been a lawyer who, during The Basic School, decided to transfer to infantry. "Gilece had a great affinity and interest in airplanes, particularly the old airplanes. I was on one side of the trench and I called him up on the phone and told him that a couple of South Vietnamese propeller planes, A-1s, were flying up the valley on the opposite side. He jumped out of the trench and ran across the hill, and while he was running across the hill, a sniper shot him in the leg. The bullet went right through the thigh, above the knee, and he was medevaced." [Conversation with J. Thomas Esslinger, 28 July 1993]. 1/Lt Esslinger became Co of CO M/3/26 until late March. Esslinger notes that 1/Lt King, although unable to return to the hill, did send a bottle of scotch to Esslinger. [Ibid.] served with the infantry and felt that one could not be a retired Sergeant Major of Marines without having so served. He was injured doing what he did best and that was visiting the troops on the lines during the siege. I thought highly of the man, and it was very difficult for me to go down and see him as badly wounded as he was. I took one end of the stretcher and we raced out when a 53 came in and got him aboard. It was getting dark; it was always kinda gloomy in those days. We barely got out of Khe Sanh while there was enough light. Captain Ernst was next to me. I remember lighting a cigarette for him. It probably wasn't good for him, but at the time he probably appreciated it. I had, in my hand, the IV bottle for the Sergeant Major. He was resting on my lap. The closer we got to Dong Ha (where DELTA Med was located) the greyer he became, and sometime, I think on the way in to Dong Ha, he passed away."[1813]

[1812] Bronze Star Medal Citation, 1/Lt John Thomas Esslinger.

SgtMaj Gaynor, who had been the Sergeant Major of 1/26 since 2 January 1968,[1814] was First Sergeant of the Embassy Marines in Rome when he met his future wife, who was in the Women's Army Corps, and married in 1952 after returning from service in Korea. He'd been captured (as a Corporal) in Corregidor and remained a Prisoner of War for most of World War II, released when Japan fell as a Gunnery Sergeant. Mrs. Gaynor notes that although he was forced to eat rice several times a week during his captivity, he still ate it. "How come you eat rice? I'd think you'd hate it." He replied, "The rice saved my life." They had one son who was 13 or 14 when his father was killed. He refused to let his mother speak of his father for the first two years after his death. The death affected him deeply and he left home five years later and Mrs. Gaynor never again heard from him.[1815]

"My Sergeant Major"
By James B. Wilkinson

"'Sergeant Major, why are you here with a line outfit?' I asked. I could not believe that a very senior sergeant major would be assigned to a line outfit. After all, from his record book, I could plainly see that the man would have been in the rear with the gear unless something or someone had intervened. He was on his 'twilight tour.' He had done Corregidor at the beginning of World War II. He was taken prisoner, did the Bataan Death March and survived as a POW [for over three years] until the end of the war. I was struck by his calm and friendly demeanor.

"'This is my final tour, sir,' he said matter-of-factly. 'I feel that I can make a difference with these young Marines. They need positive role models. That's what they've always needed. Third MAF Headquarters doesn't need my skills. These Marines do.'

"As the siege intensified and the incoming increased, I became concerned about the possibility of a ground attack, but Sgt Major Gaynor calmly said, 'No, not yet. The incoming will have to get a lot more intense before they try a ground assault on us.' Experienced learned the hard way had taught him. Corregidor had schooled him for this, for Khe Sanh. What a man he was, all over the place. Visiting and comforting the young Marines and me. February 15 was a dreadful day. It didn't feel right to me. I couldn't put my finger on it, but I knew in my heart that something was happening. Sgt. Major Gaynor heard me ask my radioman to saddle up. I planned to tour the perimeter as was my custom. He insisted on accompanying us. It was my suggestion that we split up and each go in a different direction and meet at Charlie company's area.

"I remember the dull gray sky that day, the heaviness in the air. The incoming was sporadic. When I was about two-thirds finished with my half, I saw a rocket pass over me and impact on the Charlie company line. The rocket had hit the company command bunker. The wounded were immediately taken to our battalion aid station.

"When I got there, Dave Ernst, the company CO—a wonderful commander—was on the table with his shoulder bandaged and his arm in a sling.. Sgt Major Gaynor was unconscious. I tried talking to him, hoping beyond hope that he'd come to. My pleas went unanswered. We had requested a priority medevac but nothing happened. I dashed down to Colonel Lownds' headquarters and asked that he intervene. He did and the medevac chopper from Dong Ha came.

"Jim Gaynor was alive when he left Khe Sanh, but died in route to Dong Ha. I was devastated. I had to go and identify him. I am honored to have been given that assignment. He was my sergeant major. Although the difference in our ages was not that great, he was more a father to me than my sergeant major. The entire battalion was deeply saddened by his death. His steadfast bearing, his maturity and experience, his sense of humor, his dedication to the Corps and, above all, his inspiration to the young Marines at Khe Sanh is a lasting memorial to his indomitable spirit. I could not bring myself to visit him at the Wall until 1993 when we had our [Khe Sanh Veterans] 25th reunion in Washington. I shall never forget the man. He was an remains forever a Marine's Marine."[1816]

[1813] Taped Comments of John M. Kaheny, 30 November 1986.
[1814] Bronze Star Medal Citation, SgtMaj James Thomas Gaynor.
[1815] Conversation with Mrs. Betty Gaynor, 20 November 1992.

[By mid-February, 1968, General Ginsburgh (member of the National Security Council staff) reported: "There is an outside chance that the battle for Khe Sanh may be over... SIGINT [signals intelligence] information indicates the movement of six possible NVA units away from Khe Sanh."[1817] The NVA history of Khe Sanh notes that during the middle of February, 1968, the 66th Regiment replaced the entire 325C Division which was assigned to the Tay Nguyen [B3] Front. The 66th Regiment left behind a small force to be used against Hill 832 [i.e., Hill 861 on American maps] and Hill 845 [i.e., Hill 881-South on American maps].[1818] The NVA history attributes this departure to the failure of their mission "to totally eliminate one combat experienced battalion of Americans defending the hill in order to draw in additional American forces to the mountains and jungles of Khe Sanh."[1819]]

16 FEBRUARY 1968

JOHNSON, LCPL Kenneth Richard	B/1/9
SHULL, LCPL Sandy Lee	H&S/1/9
WOODS, LCPL Cordell Emanuel	H&S/1/9

At 1230H, 1/9 received 5 incoming recoilless rifle rounds from XD823403 resulting in one KIA and one WIA (medevaced).[1820] "LCPL Sandy Lee Shull was a fellow member of the H&S Company 81mm mortar platoon of 1/9 with the MOS of radioman for the platoon... We were ordered out of our holes and the mortar gunpits to bask in the morning sunlight. LCPL Shull emerged from the 81s command bunker calling out to all of us to get out of our holes and bunkers, as ordered by [1/Lt Michael J.] Walker. [I had a premonition the enemy] was going to take some more kills this morning. We stood and watched as the enemy.. landed a 82 round three feet to the front right of LCPL Shull as he stood talking to LCPL Woods and the corpsman. As we stood and watched, the explosion blew out the right hip area of LCPL Shull and an area of some eight inches long out of his left elbow area of his arm. The sound of the flesh and clothing material leaving his body flying through the air was a slashing sound as all of them fell to the ground.. The other platoon members, especially LCPL [James J.] Delfino, LCPL Healy and others, moved ahead to rescue the fallen Marines. I screamed at all of them, knowing the enemy mortarman would like nothing better than to level his bubbles and fire again. He waited, as several moved cautiously ahead. He fired again, but his gun dope was off the target area about ten yards. LCPL Woods raised up into the push-up position to look underneath his opened flak jacket at the small wound to his heart area. Upon doing so, LCPL Woods fell back to the ground dead. The corpsman and LCPL Shull were put onto stretchers and moved past my gun pit up the backside of the rock quarry hill."[1821]

Michael J. Walker, the 81s commander, recalls Woods as an Afro-American, tall, thin, and rather quiet.[1822]

At 1700H, a patrol from B/1/9 at XD834410 received heavy small arms and automatic weapons fire from XD831411. While attempting to locate the enemy, more fire came from the enemy position resulting one KIA.[1823] "Like everybody else, I lost some good buddies at Khe Sanh... Kenny Johnson died of a AK47 wound to the head while on patrol south of the Rock Quarry on Feb. 16. He was a quiet, dependable guy who had a sister that wrote to him religiously, and would often write to the squad to offer support and kind words. I remember a letter we received about a month after his death (mailed the day of his funeral). She told of the ceremony, the color guard, the outpouring of sympathy by friends and family, etc., but the one line I remember most was 'they folded the flag and gave it to mom, that's not much of a [1816] Jim Wilkinson, "My Sergeant Major," The Khe Sanh Veteran 2:1 (Fall, 1995) p. 4. Wilkinson's comments at the Wall on 03 July 1993 are reprinted in the Khe Sanh Veteran 1:4 (Winter, 1993), p. 22. He also made comments at the 1989 Khe Sanh Veterans Reunion in Chicago, Il, printed in The Khe Sanh Veteran, Issue No. 9 (Summer, 1989), p. 8.

[1817] Gen Ginsburgh, hand-written memo to Walt W. Rostow, 15 Feb 1968, in LBJ Library archives, National Security Council File, Vietnam Country File, file: 2A (2) I Corps & DMZ, Doc. #46.

[1818] Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 (The Spring-Sumnmer 1968 Khe Sanh-Route 9 Offensive Campaign), Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense, Hanoi, 1987, p. 32.

[1819] Ibid., p. 64.

[1820] 3rd MarDiv COC 171120Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #431, Para 4.C.

[1821] Letter from Joseph G. Creed, 7 December 1996.

[1822] Conversation with Michael J. Walker, 02 January2005.

[1823] 3rd MarDiv COC 171858Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #432, Para. 4.E.

trade, a brother for a flag'. That one line stuck. I've never met the lady, but we share a loss."[1824]

UNITS/MANNING AT KHE SANH
(16 FEB 1968)[1825]

UNIT	USMC (off/enl)	USN (off/enl)	USA (off/enl)	USAF (off/enl)
HQ 26Mar	13/191	1/4	0/0	0/0
1/26	44/1115	3/60	0/0	0/0
2/26	40/994	2/58	0/0	0/0
3/26	41/1131	2/61	0/0	0/0
SU5, 3dMarDiv	5/20	0/0	0/0	0/0
HQ/1/13	14/133	2/3	0/0	0/0
A/1/13	8/23	0/3	0/0	0/0
C/1/13	6/119	0/3	0/0	0/0
W/1/13	4/81	0/1	0/0	0/0
1stSearchlights	0/6	0/0	0/0	0/0
A(-)/3rd AT	4/85	0/1	0/0	0/0
B/3rd Recon	6/122	0/6	0/0	0/0
1/44 ADA AW	0/0	0/0	1/11	0/0
G/65th Arty	0/0	0/0	0/8	0/0
2ndPlt/A/3rd SP	1/18	0/1	0/0	0/0
3rdPlt/B/3rd Tk	1/19	0/0	0/0	0/0
Det A/9th MT	0/3	0/0	0/0	0/0
Det B/9th MT	0/2	0/0	0/0	0/0
Otter Plt/3rd MT	0/8	0/0	0/0	0/0
B/CBMU-301	0/0	0/28	0/0	0/0
2ndPlt/C/3rdMed	0/1	1/14	0/0	0/0
UtPlt/3rdEng	1/55	0/0	0/0	0/0
Det Radio Bn	1/15	0/0	0/0	0/0
LSU	1/45	0/0	0/0	0/0
20th TASS	0/0	0/0	0/0	5/9
15th Aerial Port	0/0	0/0	0/0	0/6
1stMobile Unit	0/0	0/0	0/0	0/9
VMGR-152	0/5	0/0	0/0	0/0
FOB-1 [strength unavailable without authority of MACSOG]
FOB-3 [strength unavailable without authority of MACSOG]
Det 3rdDental	0/0	1/3	0/0	0/0
Det HqBn 3rdDiv
Det Postal	0/3	0/0	0/0	0/0
Det Exchange	0/2	0/0	0/0	0/0
Photo	0/2	0/0	0/0	0/0
TOTAL:	153/3039	10/188	1/19	5/24
Det A-101	0/0	0/0	4/11	0/0
CAC OSCAR	1/30	0/3	0/0	0/0
TOTAL:	1/31	0/3	4/11	0/0

[The first delivery by LAPSE effectively brought supplies to Khe Sanh on 16 February 1968. The Khe Sanh Drop Zone[1826] presented many difficulties: (1) it was 200 yards shorter than the standard for container delivery system drops; (2) it was located outside the KSCB defensive perimeter, 1000 yards from the west end of the runway; (3) wind velocities in the Khe Sanh valley were extreme and unpredictable; (4) the terrain was extremely hazardous, rising steeply on three sides of the field and containing enemy gun emplacements; (4) turbulence was expected to be moderate. Air-drops on the airstrip (3900 x 60 ft.) were ruled out since they might damage the airstrip.[1827] In addition, Marines possessed insufficient MHE (Materiel Handling Equipment) to recover as much cargo on the DZ as the 834th Air Division could deliver and all supplies left overnight might be booby-trapped or appropriated to enemy use and therefore had to be destroyed.[1828] Landing of cargo aircraft on the airstrip, while encouraged by the 26th Marines, was rapidly becoming untenable in the minds of the USAF due to the military situation and climatic conditions. If required tonnage was to be delivered, some other method was indicated.[1829] The solution was to use the TPQ-10 radar to deliver the supplies. In LAPES (Low Altitude Parachute Extraction System), the aircraft approaches as in a normal landing "..except that the aircraft is flared to a straight and level flight path approximately five feet above the ground. On the approach, the rear cargo door is opened and the ramp is lowered to the airdrop position. The extraction parachute is deployed in a reefed condition while the aircraft is descending on the approach, approximately ten seconds prior to the extraction point. When the aircraft reaches the extraction point the parachute is disreefed electrically and extracts the roller-mounted cargo pallets from the rear cargo door, and the pallets skid to a stop on the runway.[1830] On a single pass, payloads varying from 4,000 to 18,000 pounds per platform of ammunition, rations, fuel drums, or 500-gallon containers may be extracted either singly or in tandem.[1831]

18 FEBRUARY 1968

TAYLOR, CPL Homer Jr. I/3/26

[1824] Letter from David Granger, postmarked 25 November 1996.

[1825] 26Mar 162126H/Feb68, in 26Mar ComdC Feb 1968. While FOB-3 strength was unavailable in this message, the 16 April message of units and strengths indicated 1/30 CAC O, 1/31 USMC, 0/3 USN, 20/105 USA and 2/455 ARVN for FOB-3 and 2/3 USA, 14/436 ARVN for the 37th ARVN Ranger Bn. The A-101 (Lang Vei) personnel had, by this time, been evacuated from the Khe Sanh area.

[1826] Center of DZ (XD83224231), Distance from east end of runway (2620 meters), altitude of DZ (1574 ft.), length of DZ through PI (point of impact) (550 meters), width of DZ through PI (300 meters), coordinates of DZ (North, XD83034268; East, XD83404231; South, XD83394207; West, XD82744226), Ref: 26Mar 010430Z/Mar68, Point of Impact Khe Sanh DZ, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc March, 1968, Pt. 1, Encl (10).

[1827] McLaughlin, BGen Burl W., "Khe Sanh:Keeping an Outpost Alive," Air University Review (Nov-Dec 1969) 60-61.

[1828] Pollica and Rickey, 834th Air Division, pp. 18, 19.

[1829] Ibid., p. 10. [The daily re-supply requirement was 185 tons; however, during February, an additional 650 tons was required for an average daily net requirement of 235 tons. Ibid., p. 24.]

[1830] Letter of Col Robert D. Brown, in HQMC Historical Division, Khe Sanh Monograph Comments File.

[1831] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, March, 1968, p. 83.

"In a day when we are so technologically sophisticated that we are almost able to land on the moon itself—250,000 miles away—we cannot go out a few miles to a hilltop to save a dying man."[1832]

The weather at Khe Sanh for the period 0900 on the 17th to 0900 on the 18th "resulted in fog and stratus on both days reduced the ceiling and visibility to zero during the morning hours. The visibility improved to seven miles by noon of Tue 16th but was again lowered by fog after 2300H."[1833] "Weather was bad during 17-18 February, with little improvement forecast. Low clouds and dense fog reduced the ceiling to less than 300 feet and visibility to less than one-half mile. Little change is expected extending into 19 February. Ceilings and visibility will be near zero with only slight improvement in the afternoon."[1834]

Early in the morning, about 0530, a mortar round exploded on the top edge of the trench as Cpl Taylor was walking through it.[1835] Shrapnel from a NVA mortar round had hit Cpl Taylor in the head and shoulder, with several a large wound in the temple area, but he was unable to be evacuated due to fog. The wound was, at the time, not serious, and HM3 Ronald V. Bowling attended to his wounds. What began as a non-serious wound, deteriorated during the following 36 continuous hours that Corpsman Bowling attended his wounds. Bowling became so exhausted and tired that finally, after 36 hours, he got someone to relieve him briefly and he fell asleep.[1836]

In a letter to his parents, J. Michael Jones wrote: "Three days ago Cpl Taylor, the 1st Squad Leader, was about three feet from a 82mm mortar round that dropped in. Needless to say, he was pretty messed up. He had three or four good sized holes in his head and a hole through his right lung. Well, the fog was so bad we couldn't get a med-evac in and had to keep him over night. I stayed up all night sitting on his legs and holding his arms. The next day we still couldn't get him out so we started the night routine over again marvelling that he was still alive. We only marveled until 0100 that morning when he died. It was tough to lose him and even tougher to see a man fight so hard to live for nearly 40 hours die from lack of help. We did all we could but we just didn't have enough gear."[1837]

As night fell, Captain Dabney (CO, I/3/26) radioed for medical advice. The heavy fog continued throughout the following day, precluding any helicopter landing, and Cpl Taylor began to slip into a coma. As night darkness fell, messages from Captain Dabney became more urgent. Thick fog continued to blanket Hill 881-South, the remotest outpost in the Khe Sanh defense—indeed, the most remote outpost in Vietnam! A radio operator, peering into the night sky, saw stars; the fog had temporarily lifted! Although a night landing is extremely hazardous, a helicopter was launched with a 4-man crew. As it approached, the radio operator reported: "Be advised the medevac is now routine, repeat, routine." Cpl Taylor had died.[1838]

"Corporal Taylor died as the bird was coming in. We got some flak on that because it was initially called in as an emergency medevac and we waited and waited for the weather to clear. As his condition worsened the need for an evacuation became more critical and finally the weather cleared enough that a helo making his final attempt prior to returning to Dong Ha could get in. About that time Corporal Taylor died and the medevac was changed, as was correct, to a routine. Evidently the aviators, who had been sincerely trying to get in, didn't realize why the medevac precedence had changed and complained once they got back to their base."[1839]

19 FEBRUARY 1968

BAILEY, LCPL Joseph Thomas	C/1/26
BURGESS, LCPL Alex Leroy	H&S/3/26
HORNBAKER, PFC Kenneth Eugene	2-94
WILLIAMS, SP4 Douglas Condit	2-94
WRIGHT, SP4 Arkie Junior	2-94

LCPL Bailey succumbed to wounds received when the C/1/26 bunker was hit on 15 February, mortally wounding Sergeant Major Gaynor and severely wounding Captain Ernst.[1840]

At 191625H, 3/26 received one incoming rocket from the northwest killing LCPL Burgess.[1841]

[1832] Diary entry, Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe.

[1833] General Westmoreland 171013Z/Feb68, MAC 02269, 17 February 1968, Report #13 on the Situation in Khe Sanh and DMZ area.

[1834] General Westmoreland 181131Z/Feb68, MAC 02318, 18 February 1968, Report #14 on the Situation in Khe Sanh, DMZ area.

[1835] Conversation with J. Michael Jones, 13 November 2004. There is no record of this incident in the Operation SCOTLAND SITREPs for 17 February 1968.

[1836] Letters from Ronald Bowling, postmarked 15 December 1992.

[1837] Letter of J. Michael Jones to his parents, 20 February 1968.

[1838] "Fog Fails to Lift, and a Marine Dies," New York Times, 22 February 1968, p. 7.

[1839] Letter from Maj Walter L. Whitesides, undated. At the time a Corporal, Whitesides was one of the Tactical Air Control Party (TACP) operators assigned to I/3/26; his radio call sign was DUNBAR COUNTY INDIA ONE FOUR.

[1840] See entry for 15 February 1968 for description of the event.

[1841] 26Mar 191024Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #443, Para. 4.R.; 3rd MarDiv COC 192020Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #443, Para. 4.R.

PFC Hornbaker, SP4 Williams, and SP4 Wright were KIA on the morning of 19 Feb when Camp Carroll came under a heavy rocket attack, all three soldiers providing 175mm support to Khe Sanh. Hornbaker was schedule3d to be sent home on a hardship discharge because of his mother's health condition.[1842]

20 FEBRUARY 1968

GOMEZ, PFC Armando Abel	E/2/26
SMITH, CPL Terry Lee	H&S/3/26

At 201320H, Co E/2/26 on Hill 861-A (XD806444) received 3 incoming 82mm mortars killing PFC Gomez.[1843]

Major David Lawrence Althoff (XO, HMM-262), flying CHATTERBOX 20-1, launched in minimum weather to Khe Sanh to pick up emergency medevacs. Upon arrival at Khe Sanh, he was informed there were no medevacs and the mission was changed to re-supply Hill 881-South. They were initially to retrieve a load of cargo slings. "As we approached the zone on 881 we found them unaware of our mission. Major Althoff waved off the approach because there was no one to hook up our load. As we waved off the zone began taking heavy mortar and fifty caliber fire. We were in the process of making a 360-degree turn to make another approach when we were called to get an emergency medevac that had been a direct result of the last few mortars taken in the zone."[1844]

Re-supply of Hill 881-South, always by helicopter, attracted mortar fire, frequently of 120mm size. The Tactical Air Control Party (TACP) radio operators directed the inbound helicopters with the troops or medevacs assembled in nearby trenches. After it became obvious that the bald hilltop was a well-registered target, alternate landing zones were established, one outside the wire (to the east) on the Khe Sanh side and the other in the saddle between the western knoll of the hill (occupied by Mike Company) and the main hill (occupied by India Company). The TACP operators decided on which zone would be used when the helicopter was making its final approach by popping a colored smoke. As helicopters landed, the grunts fired weapons in the general direction of Hill 881-North, the location of a NVA forward observer directing their fire. The TACP operator then directed Marines onto the helicopter and, as the helicopter lifted, dashed into a nearby hole awaiting the cessation of the incoming.[1845]

Cpl Terry Smith ran to the landing zone and began using hand signals to direct the inbound CH-46 helicopter.[1846] Cpl Smith had been Major Matthew P. Caulfield's [S-3, 3/26] radio operator and volunteered for duty on Hill 881-South telling Major Caulfield he wanted "to be where the action was, where I can do the most good for the battalion." Maj Caulfield cautioned him of the dangers of leaving covered positions at that location during daylight, being aware of the numerous wounded Marines from the Shore Party HST [helicopter support teams] and others. Maj Caulfield later noted, "There is absolutely no question that Corporal Smith knew well that by leaving a covered position and crossing the LZ while a helicopter was inbound and in full view of the enemy, he risked almost certain death. It was characteristic of Corporal Smith that he acted fully aware of the consequences in order to save the helicopter and the Marines on board from certain death."[1847]

Cpl Smith had proceeded about 20 meters into the center of the LZ when the first mortar round struck him. HN Ronald V. Bowling immediately grabbed his Unit-1 Corpsman's bag and ran to him, covering Smith body with his own and administering medical assistance while several more mortars exploded in the zone.[1848]

SGT J. Michael Jones [of 1st Platoon, I/3/26] was next to Bowling when Smith was hit. "I can still see the incident vividly: the sky was blue, the color of everything is sharp, and the smells intense. Terry had freed a hooked cargo net and was running towards us when an incoming mortar round landed right in front of him. The explosion lifted him in the air and he did a slow cartwheel against the sky as his blood spun away from him. Doc and I reached him right after he landed and we immediately saw how terrible his wounds were. His concern was for us. He knew how badly he was hit and he told us to leave him and get back to the trench. It is a moment that I have always been able to relive, not just recall, and it was one that haunted me for years."[1849]

[1842] Letter from Mark Swearengen, 9 March 2007.

[1843] 26Mar 201100Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #447, Para 4.F.; 3rd MarDiv COC 201939Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #447, Para. 4.F.

[1844] Statement of 1/Lt William Arthur Murphy in Air Medal file for Maj David Lawrence Althoff. 1/Lt Murphy was flying co-pilot.

[1845] Letter of Maj. Walter L. Whitesides, received May 1989.

[1846] Conversation with Chaplain Timothy C. Sims, 27 August 1989. At the time, LCPL Sims was TACP for M/3/26. After becoming a Lutheran minister, he became a Navy Chaplain, retired, and was killed 10 June 2002 in an automobile accident while traveling to a 3/26 reunion after which he was planning to return to Vietnam and visit Khe Sanh.

[1847] Maj Matthew P. Caulfield, 3rd Endorsement, 6/MPC/glm, 1650, 6 Nov 1974, Subj: Award recommendation; case of the late Corporal Terry L. Smith, 230 68 18/2533, USMC.

[1848] Statements of 2/Lt Richard F. Dworsky (Weapons Plt Cdr of I/3/26), Sgt Joseph M. Jones, SSGT Karl G. Taylor, and Cpl Robert E. Stanton, appended to Silver Star Medal file, HM3 Ronald V. Bowling.

[1849] Letters from J. Michael Jones, postmarked 18 May 1990, and 30 June 1993

"Major Althoff complied with the request and made another approach into Hill 881. As we landed in the zone the men on the ground with the medevac started towards the aircraft. Just as they cleared their trenches the zone again came under mortar and fifty caliber fire. The Marines stopped and put the medevac in a shell crater, leaving us alone in the zone. Our crew chief motioned the men to bring the man to the aircraft. After about one minute in the zone the medevac was finally aboard the aircraft. During this time that had elapsed numerous mortar and fifty caliber rounds had landed in and about the zone. The aircraft had received control cable damage due to mortar fragments. Major Althoff lifted out of the zone and got the medevac safely back to Charlie Med at Khe Sanh."[1850]

Cpl Walter L. Whitesides was getting a haircut on Hill 881-South when he heard that Cpl Smith was hit. "I remember saying, 'Good,' knowing that he would get out of there since that would have been his third Purple Heart. "It was only his second award and I had no idea that it was to be fatal. I regret having ever said that."[1851]

Through the efforts of Col William H. Dabney, the gymnasium for Headquarters Battalion, USMC, Henderson Hall, Arlington, VA, was dedicated as "Terry L. Smith Gymnasium" on 30 September 1988. The dedication brochure notes that Terry L. Smith was born on 13 May 1947 in Nashville, TN, and was active in little league baseball, Cub Scouts, Boy's Club and church activities. He served as a camp counselor and during high school lettered in football, tennis and band. He was an avid outdoorsman, enjoying hunting, fishing, camping, horseback riding and water skiing. He briefly attended Middle Tennessee State University for a year, but felt the need to serve his country in the military, following the example of his father who had served in World War II. He enlisted in the Marine Corps 17 May 1966.[1852]

His mother recalls that when he played high school football, he would tell her, "Now mother, if I get hurt and they haul me off of that field, don't you come down out of those stands! If they put me in an ambulance and take me off, don't you come down!"[1853]

21 FEBRUARY 1968

BAKER, SFC Robert Nelson	FOB-3
DOUGLAS, SSGT Paul Melvyn	FOB-3

SFC Baker died from blood clots[1854] on 21 February 1968 from wounds he received 14 January 1968 while on patrol on the Co Roc Massif, the looming cliff just inside the Laotian border.[1855] Maj George Quamo, in charge of Special Projects, had been promoted to Major 01 October 1967. He was 27. His mission was to move the Special Projects effort from the initial planning, conceptual phase, to an operational phase (training and then conducting a long-range unconventional warfare (UW) role in the Mu Gia/Tchepone area). In early January, 1967, he was at the Royal Lao BV-33 battalion at Ban Houei Sane and during the period 7-17 January, BV-33 guerrilla teams discovered extensive NVA positions in the vicinity of Co Roc Mountain.[1856] "On 11 January, a team found an occupied 50-man foxhole complex at the top of Co Roc peak. On 13 January, a patrol observed 75 NVA soldiers and sighted heavy ground fire, including .50 caliber machinegun fire at an aircraft. On 15 January, a team observed a hut with a long wire antenna set up next to it. The area showed signs of heavy foot traffic in the immediate vicinity. On 16 January, two caves were discovered, one of which contained two tons of rice. Three enclosed structures were located nearby which could house 30 men each. Approximately 900 meters southeast of the caves, an extensive bunker complex was discovered. The team counted 500 bunkers and reported that many were of 10-man capacity. One large bunker was estimated to be a regimental command post. The other bunkers were constructed with gun ports for defensive action."[1857]

SFC Charles ("Skip") Minnicks, the ONE ZERO[1858] of ST[1859] PENNSYLVANIA recalls that Colonel Harold [1850] Statement of 1/Lt William Arthur Murphy in Air Medal file for Maj David Lawrence Althoff, cited.

---

[1851] Letter of Maj Walter L. Whitesides received May, 1989.
[1852] Dedication of Terry L. Smith Gymnasium, brochure.
[1853] Conversation with Mrs. Henry Smith, 13 July 1991.
[1854] Conversation with Robert Cavanaugh, 27 October 1993; Conversation with James W. Moore, 12 December 1995.

[1855] Co Roc, 14.8 KM southwest of KSCB, just inside the Lao border, "..is a granite ridge that runs along the border from XD725348 southeast to XD768321 and then south to XD753270. Varying in height from 850 meters to 515 meters above sea level, the Co Roc is more than 300 meters higher than the Khe Sanh plain and the crest of the ridge is only one to three kilometers inside Laos." [HQ, 1st Inf Brig, 5th Inf Div (Mech): Combat AAR, Operation TASK FORCE REMAGEN, 16 Mar – 29 Apr 1969, 4 Jun 1969, Paragraph 8.c.Tab E & E to 3rd MarDiv ComdC, May, 1969]. The entire area is covered by forest and laced with trails and streams. Co Roc was formed with the Kontum Massif slammed into the Southeast Asia mainland, lifting up an ancient sea bed of what is now Laos (like shoving a hand under a stack of newspapers), this sheer cliff of the limestone sediment from that sea bed, doused with monsoon rains over many millennia, had formed numerous caves where the water trickled into the cracks. Caves, in ancient myths, are openings to the realm of demons of the deep, an entrance to the underworld, the place where evil beings bent on destruction of human life dwell.
[1856] Warren A. Trest, Khe Sanh (Operation NIAGARA), 22 January – 31 March 68, HQ PACAF, Directorate, Tactical Evaluation, Project CHECO [Contemporary Historical Evaluation of Combat Operations], 13 September 1968, p. 18.
[1857] FMFPAC 280335Z/Jan68, FMFPAC WESTPAC SITREP #1034; Trest, Khe Sanh, op. cit., pp. 18-19.
[1858] ONE ZERO refers to "Team Leader."

K. Rose, circling overhead in a Birddog aircraft radioed Quamo, "I want you out of there. I want you out of there—now!" Field grade officers of SOG were not to be in Laos. Quamo radioed back to his senior officer, "To my knowledge, I am in command at this location. Out!" Minnicks was astounded. "I couldn't believe my ears, and we did not come out."[1860]

On 14 January, a helicopter inserting SFC Robert Cavanaugh, ONE ZERO for Spike Team OKLAHOMA and 1/Lt Harlan ("Rip") Van Winkle, leading a Hatchett force of 8 Americans and about 30 Bru, was about to touch down on the summit of Co Roc when a command detonated (Claymore-type) mine was detonated, slamming into the left side of the chopper, seriously wounding the pilot, the door gunner, and most of Cavanaugh's team along with Rip's platoon leader, Lua.[1861] Van Winkle, standing on the skids on the right side of the helicopter, was thrown to the ground and was about to get up. "Something just told me to get down again, and as I ducked, the boom of the helicopter flopped around and knocked my hat off! If I'd of just stood there, it would of taken my head right along with it."[1862] An immediate defensive perimeter was established, and SFC Cavanaugh attempted to coax the door gunner out of the chopper and place his machinegun in their defensive perimeter. He froze. "He was a scarred kid, so I had to make him 'scarreder!' He took his gun out and did what I told him to do, and I got him out on the next chopper."[1863] A medevac chopper came in to evacuate the wounded, and Cavanaugh, looking at the helicopter carcass said, "What are we going to do with this thing?" Van Winkle replied, "Burn it." Cavanaugh replied, "I gotta hear it from somebody more than an O2," so after radioing Maj Lucius Campbell, the CO of FOB-3, permission was granted and the helicopter destroyed.[1864] Sgt Fusco had been carrying an American flag for 5 ½ months, looking for the proper place to plant it. The top of Co Roc Mountain seemed appropriate to him, and there he placed it.[1865]

Cavanaugh led his patrol, following the edge of Co Roc when he happened to notice "a funny-looking object sticking out of the face of the cliff. We found a little trail—you could hardly see it, and that's when we found the first of the big caves, right in the face. We found all kinds of stuff in that cave and just burned everything up. We found no men and we never made any contact with anybody."[1866]

On 16 January 1968,[1867] SFC Baker (of team WISCONSIN) was one of the FOB-3 Team Leaders patrolling atop Co Roc Mountain.[1868] The patrol had been scouring Co Roc, finding caves full of NVA gear and munitions, but no NVA. Signals intelligence had determined that NVA units had moved into the Khe Sanh TAOR from eastern Laos; they were already poised to attack and commence the siege battle.

Robert Cavanaugh recalls: "Skip was the boss—so he took out the patrol, and my team went with it... Skip and we went out. We came to this clearing. We hadn't made any contact. We came to this clearing by a river and I said, 'Well, I'm going to check over the top of this rise—see if there's anything over at the top of this rise.' And I said, 'You guys wait here.' At that time, Skip and Bob [Baker] said, 'No, we're going to go with you.' So I said, 'OK,' and Bob was on my left side, I was in the middle, Skip was on the right side. We had maybe ten yards between us as we're walking up there. To this day, I can still hear 'click, click,' which is Bob and Skip taking their weapons off 'safety' and putting them on 'full automatic.' And this guy jumped out of a hole—to shoot me. He'd seen me, and he jumped up to shoot me, and when he did that, Bob was no more than three feet to four feet away from him, and he swung his weapon away from me, and that's when he hit Bob [three times in the gut]."[1869]

Doc Secore dashed to Baker and miraculously kept him alive. "I remember Bob kept hollering, 'I gotta take a crap! I gotta take a crap!' And Doc was saying, 'Don't do that! Don't do that! Just be good! Stay in there!'"[1870]

It was about 1500,[1871] and Major Quamo called FOB-3 for a medevac, but someone at DaNang had pulled off the Army helicopters there. When Colonel Lownds was asked, he replied that he couldn't send the choppers without permission from III MAF. "So when Major Quamo heard the answer—there will be no air extraction with [1859] ST=Spike Team. The Spike Teams consisted of three Americans and about seven Bru Montagnards. [Conversation with Robert Cavanaugh, 13 September 1993].

---

[1860] Conversation with Charles Minnicks, 26 December 1991.
[1861] Conversation with Harlan E. Van Winkle, 26 December 1996.
[1862] Conversation with Harlan E. Van Winkle, 23 October 1994.
[1863] Conversation with Robert Cavanaugh, 27 October 1993.
[1864] Conversation with Robert Cavanaugh, 13 September 1993.
[1865] Conversation with Harlan E. Van Winkle, 23 October 1994.
[1866] Conversation with Robert Cavanaugh, 13 September 1993.
[1867] Maj Ira Snell ltr of 16 February 1968, Subj: Letter of Commendation, appended to Air Medal file of Capt James Hargreve Knox. [Maj Snell was CO of FOB-1]
[1868] Conversation with Robert Cavanaugh, 13 September 1993. The three team leaders had "..all chipped in for a knife for Major Quamo—a Randall knife. We had engraved on it—because this is the way our Montagnards said the names—we had 'ST WISSICON, ST OKLAHOME, and ST PENNSYLVANE' That's how they said them and we put that on the knife for Major Quamo." [Conversation with Robert Cavanaugh, 13 September 1993].
[1869] Conversation with Robert Cavanaugh, 27 October 1993.
[1870] Ibid.
[1871] Letter of Maj Ira Snell, Jr., CO, FOB-1, appended to Air Medal file of Capt James H. Knox.

the Marine helicopters at Khe Sanh, he lost his temper and became very profane. He came up on the Marine command frequency and called some people a series of very bad names. Now some Marine helicopter pilot, a very large guy, heard this, and he went up in his H-34 and took off in the fog."[1872]

Capt James Hargreve Knox, co-pilot to Major Horace ("Hoss") S. Lowrey, Jr., "a legendary, gutsy aviator, mustang officer" recalls "It was a wild day. Things really could not have been much worse at Khe Sanh and the general area. The weather was absolutely horrendous! A decision was made to try to get the whole team out. We attempted to launch with several gunships and transport helicopters and didn't even make it to the end of the runway. We almost ran into one another. It was just an impossible weather situation to control that number of aircraft. We all got back down on the ground—fortunately without a midair collision, and there was another briefing. The Army people were screaming at us that we had to get this wounded guy out of there. An extremely gutsy guy named Charlie Upshaw, a Major, said that he would take a H-34 and go out and try to hoist this guy out if we would send one gunship to give him a little cover. Charlie led the flight. We stayed behind him with the gun switches hot and headed south from Khe Sanh, basically just went over the treetops the entire way. We didn't dare go up in the 'goo' because it was so damn mountainous and we were afraid we would crash. At one point I saw a guy run out of a hut, stand there and opened up on us with a sub-machinegun All I did was give him 'the finger' as I went by. There was absolutely nothing we could do, because you didn't dare turn around and go after the guy cause you'd lose the H-34. We got to the zone. The zone was a depression, like a little valley in the top of Co Roc. Charlie found the team and lowered his hoist in that H-34, hovered over this jungle cliff situation for 15 minutes, an absolutely steady hover. They got the kid up in the plane. We made it back to Khe Sanh—and all changed our underwear!"[1873]

The evening before the extraction of all the Americans on this Co Roc operation, Major George Quamo had an early version of a "smart bomb" strike from Navy aircraft, and the morning of the extract, he had everyone fire a "mad moment."[1874] The American force with Bru Montagnards departed Co Roc with a bang.

SSGT Paul M. Douglas, unlike the regularly-assigned soldiers of FOB-3, was not airborne-qualified. He had volunteered for assignment to SOG, but was a "leg." Harve Saal, Team Leader of recon team BEAR, recalls "He was from the 7th Long Range Reconnaissance Unit or something in Germany, not airborne, not Special Forces. He volunteered for it. He was a real nice guy. He took off his flak jacket to put on a sweater and a mortar round came in and got him."[1875] Charles Berg recalls sitting with Douglas in the trench one night. "He said, 'You know why I'm in the Army?' I said, 'No, why?' He said, 'I belong to the Ku Klux Klan.' I said, 'What!' He said, 'Yeah, I was told to come in the Army to get demolition training; I didn't think I was going to be sent to Vietnam.' I looked at him and said, 'Paul, you can't tell me that! This is a Top Secret organization. How did you get a clearance?' He said, 'Everybody where I live belongs to the Ku Klux Klan so when some guy comes by to validate your clearance—wonderful person!'... There was a lull. He came up out of the trench and was just washing off, under his flak vest. I used to joke with him. I was just so surprised."[1876]

"I went to Graves Registration and said prayers over Paul Melvin Douglas, E-6, RA 147 60 613, of FOB-3, who died today. The logbook at Graves Registration reflected that on 19 January the entry was number 12-68. Today, the number is 141-68, indicating that 129 have been killed on the base itself since all this began. Of course, this number does not include all those who died after being evacuated nor all those who were to die in aircraft attempting to land here, nor all those who were yet to die. It was, after all, only 21 February, and the battle still goes on."[1877]

22 FEBRUARY 1968

BRETT, LTJG Robert R (Chaplain Corps)	H&S/2/26
CHIN, PFC Alexander Scheleph	H&S/2/26
CRAMER, PFC David Arthur	H/2/26
DOOLEY, PFC Robert Ellis	M/3/26
FOSTER, LCPL Julius Cartwright	E/2/26
McCALL, SGT Billy Ray	G/2/26
RILEY, CAPT James Thomas	HMH-463
SMITH, 1/Lt Cary Carson	HMH-463
VANCE, PFC Reggie Lee	A/1/26
WURTZ, HN Emil John	H&S/3/26

Yesterday afternoon, between 211245H and 211530H, KSCB received 345 mortars, rockets, and artillery rounds

[1872] Conversation with James W. Moore, 12 December 1995.
[1873] Conversation with James Hargreve Knox, 04 October 1994.
[1874] Conversation with Harlan E. Van Winkle, 23 October 1994. "Mad Moment" refers to everyone firing their weapons simultaneously for a moment. It corresponds to an artillery "TOT" (Timed on Target) when all guns in a battery (or several batteries) plus mortars, etc., fire simultaneously on a specific target.

[1875] Conversations with Harve Saal, 12 March 1991 and 13 March 1993.
[1876] Conversation with Charles Berg, 05 June 1994.
[1877] Diary entry, Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe.

resulting in moderate casualties, none killed.[1878] In addition to NVA incoming, a TPQ-10 strike accidentally dropped about 40 meters inside the KSCB perimeter between the ARVN and Co B perimeter, causing a 40-foot crater and throwing clumps of dirt hundreds of feet into the air. One such clump crashed into a radioman lying flat in a trench giving him a compound fracture of his right arm; the bone protruded. He was sent back to man the perimeter after being treated at C Med; anybody who was ambulatory was returned. The casualty, PFC Peter J. Mudinich, was a German national who had joined the USMC (which he viewed as training) so he could return to Germany and become an officer.[1879]

"I remained in the C Med Triage, looking after all the casualties that had arrived. One man, Smith, was trembling and crying. A round had exploded on top of the bunker beside which he was standing and he had already been twice wounded since all this began, and I remained with him, attempting to comfort him."[1880] Another wounded Marine, Reggie Lee Vance, later died. The condolence letter from LtCol James B. Wilkinson (CO, 1/26):

> "On 21 February Reggie's section was assigned to the northeastern sector of the defensive perimeter at the Khe Sanh Combat Base. During the afternoon of 21 February, his sector of the perimeter was subjected to enemy small arms and mortar fire in support of a light ground attack. At 4:25 PM a C-130 cargo aircraft, while making a low-level approach over the runway was fired upon by enemy anti-aircraft weapons forcing it to make radical evasive maneuver. In doing so, the tail section of the airplane struck Reggie's bunker and caused it to collapse seriously injuring Reggie and one other Marine. Reggie was immediately taken to Company C, 3rd Medical Battalion and treated by our surgeons, however, despite all efforts, he failed to respond and expired at 1:00 AM, 22 February. Reggie received the ministrations of our Protestant chaplain, Lieutenant Ray Stubbe.. just before his death."

PFC David J. Tonick (Plt A-1 of 1/26) was two bunkers down from Reggie Vance's bunker playing cards with other Marines when they heard the airplane. "After awhile you know if they're landing or taking-off, but it didn't sound right, so we all popped our heads out like a bunch of little chickens and saw this plane coming at us!"[1881]

While at C Med, "One of the corpsmen asked me to remove the boots from an injured may lying on a stretcher, moaning, covered with blood. The boots were caked with mud and blood, and my hands became completely red from the mixture. As it dried, the coating caused an odd sensation of something living, yet shrinking on my hands. Somehow, not only the sight of the blood, but the feeling of it kept me aware of its presence on my hands. I could not wait to wash them. I rushed to my bunker to wash them in the small plastic basin outside my bunker."[1882]

The Soul Mate[1883]
By Ray William Stubbe

The blood on his hands
So alive with death
Gripped
Drying, dying, contracting, squeezing
Suffocating, suffusing,
Penetrating, transforming
So alive, so real, so near
So always
The brother's cry from his clay in violent shouts in words what is not said in feelings what is not felt in actions what is never accomplished in passing time what always is No washing of hands removes the pain stain interpenetrated soul Within: always present, always shedding, always staining.
Red clay born in violenced mud
New birth bourn
in sacrificed blood:
Unseen on green uniforms darkened;
Unseen in gleam glowed brass, colored medals - ribbons - rank - flags:
the rust of battle's reality stored in time capsule's self Living blood within retained in black hole unremembered memory unseen, unknown, pulling within released

[1878] 26Mar AAR Opn SCOTLAND, p. 8; 26Mar ComdC Feb68, Encl (1), p. 50; 26Mar 211036Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #451.
[1879] Conversation with Gilbert Wall, 26 August 1988.
[1880] Diary entry, Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe.
[1881] Conversation with David Tonick, 3 February 1995.
[1882] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry.
[1883] Poem written 29 April 1996, printed in The Khe Sanh Veteran, Issue #37 (Fall, 1996), p. 5, and in Barbara Menghini Whitmarsh, ed., Incoming!, Issue IV, Aurora, Mo.: Hawk's Nest Publishing, 1996, p. 71.

in lacerations by those who don't know in unhealing wounds that heal:
oasis of life in the valley exceedingly dried, dismembered bones and body parts
The blood of God.

"While washing, I was facing and looked up towards the water point. All of a sudden there was a large blast and large pieces of metal and other debris flew up in the air. A CH-53 had been hit."[1884]

At 1645H, a CH-53 helicopter received a hit from an unknown type of round and crashed on the airstrip killing both pilot and co-pilot.[1885] The pilot, Capt James T. Riley, had earlier received incoming rounds in three blades and also in the cabin of his aircraft, YH-26, on 4 February while hauling a 105mm into a pad at YD676254.[1886] On 22 February 1968, Captain Riley, flying in YH-21, departed Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 463 at the Marble Mountain Air Facility, DaNang, on mission DIMMER THREE TWO and proceeded to Quang Tri Air Base where they were assigned a re-supply mission to deliver approximately 8,000 pounds of needed materiel to Khe Sanh. The weather between Quang Tri and Khe Sanh was particularly bad for flying; a heavy overcast blanketed the area. Approaching KSCB, the pilot, Capt James Thomas ("Rex") Riley, and the co-pilot, 1/Lt Cary Carson Smith, attempted to find a hole in the cover through which he could descend and deliver the equipment and supplies. Finding one—as well as an area not zeroed in by NVA gunners who were plastering the base, he dropped the external load.[1887] NVA shelling of KSCB had steadily intensified with a steady volume of mixed rocket, artillery, and mortar fire. "Enemy gunners had laid in and adjusted their weapons to deliver a devastatingly accurate concentration of fire across the ramp and runway areas. Within seconds of landing every aircraft arriving at Khe Sanh became a target as rockets exploded within the perimeter and mortars walked the runway. All approach corridors to the field were registered by enemy heavy caliber anti-aircraft weapons."[1888]

Upon taking off, Capt Riley was advised of a medical evacuation. The area was well-known to be registered by NVA gunners, and after the fire subsided, one of the air controllers, Sgt Rick Rasmussen, ran out to walk ahead of the chopper and guide the pilot using the phone jack in front of the aircraft. Just before the plane could embark the wounded, it came under a heavy mortar and rocket attack. Completely disregarding his own safety, Capt Riley bravely remained as the Marines struggled to place the wounded aboard.[1889] Within seconds, the NVA gunners scored a direct hit on the aft portion of the CH-53.[1890] Capt Riley shouted for a damage assessment and directed loading be discontinued. The Crew Chief, Sgt William Michael Sullivan, Jr., critically wounded, staggered forward into the cabin. His ICS [Interior Communication System] had been blown away and he was unable to communicate by that means with the pilot. The aft pylon was hit, there were numerous holes in the aircraft, and fluid sprayed throughout the interior.[1891] Capt Riley took the only course of action available: he attempted to save his aircraft and crew from almost certain destruction by flying clear of the area. As he lifted, severe vibrations developed, and he was forced to land immediately, flying only about 30 yards (to the area between recon and the airstrip). Although he landed in a level, near-normal attitude, as the bird contacted the ground, the vibrations increased and caused the main rotor blade to sever the cockpit from the fuselage, killing both Captain Riley and Lt Smith.[1892]

Inside the cabin, Cpl Murgallis thought he was about to be buried, pinned down in the forward corner of the cabin. "I must have fainted because the next thing I remember is seeing Sgt. Sullivan lean over and carry me out the side door of the aircraft. We went about 15 or 20 feet from the helicopter when he collapsed."[1893]

Sgt Rasmussen ran down to the aircraft, pulled out about four passengers, noticed the blade had decapitated one pilot and sliced the other through his chest, then cried

---

[1884] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry.
[1885] 3rd MarDiv COC 230146Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #455, Para 4.F; Aircraft Mishap Flash Report, 221645H/Feb68 in III MAF COC Journal and File, 22/23 Feb 1968 #387.
[1886] Aircraft Mishap Flash Report 041630H in III MAF COC Journal and File, #264.
[1887] Silver Star Medal Citation, Capt James Thomas Riley; Comments of Sgt Karl R. Leech, USMC Oral History Tape #3278, 13 Sep 1968. (Sgt Leech was port gunner on the aircraft).
[1888] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation in Silver Star Medal file, Capt James Thomas Riley.
[1889] Silver Star Medal Citation, Capt James Thomas Riley; Conversation with Rick Rasmussen, 10 March 1984.
[1890] Sgt Leech states this was from an artillery round [Oral History Tape #3278]; the official Opn SCOTLAND SITREP notes "an unknown type round" [SITREP #455, Para 4.F.]; Rick Rasmussen thought it was a recoilless rifle round "that went right over my shoulder, about 4-feet above my head causing a pink, then a purple and black smoke" [Conversations with Rick Rasmussen, 22 May 1995 and 26 May 2003]; 1/Lt Ernie Spencer, who had run to the aircraft from the 1/26 COC bunker with the 1/26 Air Officer, Capt Jeffrey E. McElroy, recalls it as a 82mm round [editor's note in The Khe Sanh Veteran 2:1 (Fall, 1995), p. 19.
[1891] Statement of Cpl P.M. Murgallis and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, Bronze Star Medal file of Sgt William Michael Sullivan, Sr.
[1892] Silver Star Medal Citation, Capt James Thomas Riley.
[1893] Statement of Cpl P.M. Murgallis in Bronze Star Medal file of Sgt William Michael Sullivan, Sr.

and vomited without stopping.[1894] SSGT Charles H. McCormick, at his bunker about 35 yards from the crash, raced to the crash and pulled surviving passengers to safety, disregarding impacting mortar rounds, splattering engine oil, and the imminent danger of the situation.[1895]

2/Lt Nicholas S. Romanetz (Platoon Commander of Second Platoon, C/1/26), only about 50 yards from the crash, recalls that the next morning—foggy and chilly—his Platoon radioman "went out to make a head call and take a leak in the weeds, which wasn't supposed to happen—there were artillery canisters banged into the ground to be used as the urinals. He came back and informed me that there was an arm laying out in the weeds. I went out into the weeds and sure enough there was an arm severed at the shoulder; it obviously belonged to one of the pilots. It had a wedding band on the left finger. We threw it in a mail sack and sent it down to Graves Registration."[1896]

The Souvenir[1897]
By James Epps

An aviator friend of mine gave me a pair of sunglasses standard issue pilot's type M1A1
He had four kids
was the flight leader would stop and shut down in the LZ at Dong Ha he didn't really want to fly there just weren't any joy rides to Khe Sanh—only artillery rounds and land mines under fire touching down an extra time for the wounded.
He took in whole blood.

Did his four children flash in his eyes was he blind in the sun
when the 152 millimeter artillery round got his tail rotor and sent him spinning into an aircraft revetment broke his blades off like drumsticks sent them splintering through his cabin cut his co-pilot in two shattered his 50 caliber bulletproof vest tore his cockpit out?

I kept those sunglasses for five years had a replacement lens ground they were in a car that got stolen from me taken for a joy ride, abandoned without those sunglasses.

At 1725H, one incoming rocket from an unknown direction hit in a trench (in vicinity of XD848419) at the LSA Shore Party area off the western end of the runway causing 15 casualties of which 6 were KIA.[1898] Casualties started pouring in from 2/26; others went directly to Graves Registration.

Among those who died was Sgt Billie Ray McCall. "We were both promoted on January 15, 1968. I remember walking back down the street to our hootch at Phu Bai and how happy he was that he had made Sergeant."[1899] Also killed was PFC David Arthur Cramer whose brother, Joseph, was on the USS RANGER in the Gulf of Tonkin when David was killed. The brothers had grown up on a farm. Joseph recalls his younger brother was wilder, hung out with a rough crowd in high school, wanted to play sports, but growing up on farm, was unable. When he arrived in boot camp, David wrote home about his DI; he realized what he had lost with the family. "He wrote letters home, I think more affectionate than I did. He was just a kid."[1900]

Also killed was LCPL Julius ("Corky") Cartwright Foster who had walked 404 miles from his home in Welch, West Virginia, to Camp Lejeune to re-enlist in the Marine Corps at 29 years of age. (He had first enlisted in February, 1961). He walked 17-18 miles a day, carrying a 35-pound pack, registering "the intent of the American people to win the war in Vietnam. In a ceremony naming a boulevard at Camp Geiger, Camp Lejeune, after him, his mother noted his 404-mile walk and stated: "People tried to get him to say he was protesting the war in South Vietnam. He was very forceful in letting them know that he was making the walk to show support for the Marines in South Vietnam and that he wanted the United States to definitely get in there and win the war... He said, 'I want to emphasize the effort and sacrifice that so many others have made. I want to register the intent or prove or show the intent of the [1894] Conversation with Rick Rasmussen, 10 March 1984.

[1895] Statement of SSGT Edward M. Evans (who was in the bunker with SSGT McCormick, also occupied by LtCol John A. Wachter).
[1896] Taped comments of Nick Romanetz, undated (although it must have been in 1987 since he states he is 42 and he was born 22 January 1945).
[1897] Poem in A Walk in Golden Gate, undated; printed in The Khe Sanh Veteran 2:1 (Fall, 1995) p. 19. Lt Epps had served in C/1/26 and during the Siege battle served in 3rd Shore Party at Dong Ha where external loads were affixed to helicopters enroute to Khe Sanh.
[1898] 1/26 ComdC Feb68, S2/S3 Log for 22 February, Serial #76.
[1899] Letter from William T. Mitchell, III, 13 June 1983.
[1900] Conversation with Joseph Cramer, 9 October 1998.

American people to win the war, not buy it out or bargain, or talk it out, but to win!"[1901]

Also killed were the 2/26 Battalion Chaplain, 32 year-old LTJG Robert R. Brett, and his Chaplain's Assistant, PFC Alexander Scheleph Chin, an African/Chinese-American.[1902] PFC Chin was in college studying art when he entered the Marine Corps.[1903] LCPL Laurence A. Ballard recalls that sometimes Chin would "..come, crawling through the grass, slide on into the hole, and he talked about God, and that's when he told me that God had told him he shouldn't be killing anymore, and he put down his rifle and told his Captain that he was going to get killed."[1904] He was assigned to the Chaplain. Chin, who already had received three Purple Hearts, was scheduled to return home and was engaged to be married. "We had a banner stretched outside the door that said, 'Welcome Home, Alex,' recalled one of Chin's sisters. We had saved all his presents from Christmas, and we were going to celebrate all over again. Then we got the knock at the door telling us he'd been killed."[1905] Chin, who said, "I won't take a life, but I'll put my life on the line for another,"[1906] had volunteered to go to Vietnam to keep his younger brother, who was already in the Army, from having to go there.[1907]

Chaplain Robert Brett was born 3 January 1936 in Morton, Pennsylvania, and ordained 4 February 1962. After teaching Latin in high school and seminary, he volunteered to enter the Navy Chaplain Corps[1908] and volunteered to go to Vietnam because "..he wanted to help people in dire situations."[1909] On the cloth cover of his steel helmet he had written: "Some men are waiting until the eleventh hour to believe, but die at 10:30."[1910] On 5 March 1968, LCPL James A. Everidge (G/2/26) was in a bunker that was struck by NVA artillery that killed PVT Holliman, wounded Everidge and another Marine. "When he woke up, he had a vision of [Chaplain Brett] with that slogan on his helmet, had a religious conversion, and decided to become a minister. He was raised in a very strict Christian family, and when he got in the Marine Corps he became like a Prodigal Son, and that was his turn-around in life."[1911]

Chaplain Brett hopped a re-supply helicopter to Hill 861-A and visited the Marines of E/2/26. The CO of that unit, Capt Earle G. Breeding, recalls: "Bob Brett was probably one of the best all-around people I ever met. He was up at the company's position 4 – 5 days and went on a patrol [through mine-fields] to Company K's position [on Hill 861], holding masses for everyone regardless of denomination. He was one outstanding individual. He walked around the trench lines and stayed at night in the CP. He was very concerned about the troops. He made sure everyone had enough food before he ate himself. He stayed up one night and we talked. We didn't go to bed before five o'clock and philosophized all night. It was very stimulating. I thought the world of Bob Brett."[1912]

While with E/2/26, he baptized Michael Delaney. "He asked if I had a sponsor, somebody that could help me through this. I said, 'Yeah,' and I introduced him. They talked and he said, 'OK, I'll baptize you,' and he did. I felt like, from my toes up to my head, my hair was tingling. I felt so in touch with God. I felt like something had left my body and something entered my body."[1913]

HN Thomas C. Stott frequently reflected on being blown to smithereens while on patrol in Vietnam. He had frequent conversations with Father Brett and had focused on the empty tomb, that the total annihilation of the body now reflects the resurrection, that the effects of the resurrection have already begun. So, when he heard that Chaplain Brett's body had been disintegrated in the explosion he almost blurted out to his fellow Marines, "That's great!" He felt this to be a continuation of the resurrection.[1914] He later became a Catholic priest.

SGT James B. Mink [G/2/26] was going to replace the Right Guide. Both he and the Sergeant he was replacing, Sgt Billy Ray McCall, were in a trench in the Shore Party logistics area off the western tip of the airstrip. Sgt McCall was awaiting a chopper to go home. Chaplain Brett and PFC Chin were there since there was no direct helicopter flight from Hill 861-A to the 2/26

[1901] Clipping from the Camp Lejeune Globe, "Foster Boulevard Dedicated." Dedication was on 26 May 1968. Interestingly and appropriately, Major General Rathvon McClure Tompkins was the CG of the base at the dedication and had been the CG of 3rd MarDiv during the Siege, flying in to KSCB almost daily.

[1902] LtCol Gerald F. Kurth, Walk With Me, A Vietnam Experience, Leawood, KS: Leathers Publishing, 2000, p. 132. (This chapter was reprinted in Khe Sanh Veterans: Red Clay 49 (Spring, 2001) 10-11.

[1903] Leef Smith, "A Reunion at Arlington," The Washington Post, 27 May 1999, p. A22.

[1904] Conversation with Larry Ballard, 18 May 1999. Ballard served with 81s of 2/26.

[1905] Quote by Lottie Chin Benyard, quoted in "A Reunion..," op. cit., pp. A22-A-23.

[1906] Quote by RADM Barry C. Black, Deputy Chief of Chaplains, quoted in "A Reunion..," op. cit., p. A1.

[1907] Press Release, 23 May 1999; Conversation with Larry Ballard, 18 May 1999.

[1908] Office of the Chief of Chaplains, Dept. of the Navy, Items of Interest, 6:3 (1982) p. 14.

[1909] Quote by his brother, Rev. Frank Brett, who also served as a Chaplain in Vietnam, quoted in "A Reunion..," op. cit., p. A22.

[1910] Kurth, op. cit., p. 130

[1911] Conversation with Ed Rouse, 19 November 1999. James Everidge did, in fact, become a clergyman.

[1912] Conversation with Earle G. Breeding, 18 July 1984.

[1913] Conversation with Michael Delaney, 21 Oct 1989.

[1914] Conversation with Father Tom Stott, 9 September 1991.

battalion area, Hill 558; they were awaiting another chopper to take them to their final destination when a sole rocket round landed in the trench. The men in the trench were sitting alternatively back and forth, facing each other. With no warning, the sudden explosion tossed dirt and dust as a tremendous concussion filled the trench. "I was told that the one that was sitting next to me lost one leg, and the one next to him lost two legs, and the next seven were dead."[1915]

Many of those in the trench were brand new in country, according to PFC Joseph P. Gibney who dashed to the trench: "It landed in a guy's lap, blew his head off. The guy across from him—totally disintegrated his body, but left his uniform there intact, boots and all. The guy next to him—there were three or four, maybe even five guys, that had their heads completely blown off, and about two or three guys that had their bodies totally disintegrated. In this whole muck, this whole mess of blood and bones and bodies, the only thing was a chalice as clear as the day, not a scratch on it, just lying there in the trench-line, shiny as could be."[1916]

Chaplain Walter Driscoll, the Roman Catholic Chaplain on KSCB, had recovered Chaplain Brett's missal and pondered whether or not to send it to his mother. It was bloodied and shredded. He felt it might be too disturbing and tossed it on the pile of clothing that was stripped off casualties at C Med to be burned.[1917]

Chaplain Brett was posthumously awarded the Legion of Merit. In 1999, at the behest of Brett's family and with the permission of Chin's family, Chin's body was removed from his family plot in the town of Princess Anne, Maryland, and reinterred next to Chaplain Brett at Arlington National Cemetery.[1918] On 8 August 2000, the U.S. Navy Chaplain Corps School, Newport, RI, was officially dedicated as "Brett Hall," and the main lounge named in honor of Chin.

Corpsman Emil Wurtz of 3/26 had temporarily taken refuge in a hole during incoming when a round exploded, killing him.[1919] It may have been the same trench.

HN Wurtz's good friend, Jim Fisher, writes: "Emil Wurttz and I met while we were both stationed at the Great Lakes Naval Station. Emil was from Chicago and the only child in his family. He was a great guy that would do anything for anyone. When we had weekend leave, Emil would always return home rather than go out and party with his peers in the Navy. It was very late in the year of 1967 when Emil told me that he had received his orders to go to Vietnam. It wasn't a surprise; as medical corpsmen, it was our inevitable fate to end up in Vietnam. Emil had waited to tell me of his ordrs until the night prior to his departure. It must have been about 9:00 or 10:00 PM when he told me of his orders and he asked if I would like to go into North Chicago, which was a town just off the base, to have some coffee or soup. It was snowing heavily. The temperature must have been in the low teens or single digits, and the wind was blowing about 20 miles per hour. But given Emil's circumstances and the fact that he was a very good friend of mine, I agreed and we made the trek. We ate a bowl of soup and drank a cup of coffee and just talked about life and our pasts. Emil then advised me that he knew that he would not return from Vietnam alive. I told him that was crazy talk, but he advised me that he just knew. We made the journey back to the barracks about 1:00 AM in the morning and I wished Emil the best and told him not to consider his fears. With that we parted and the next day he was gone. About two or three months later, I was assigned to his honor guard for his funeral in Chicago."[1920]

23 February 1968

BIRCH, CPL Thomas H	A/1/26
BRYANT, PFC James Roy	K/3/26
BURGESS, PFC Ruben Anthony	B/1/9
CHISHOLM, PFC James	H&S/1/26
JOHNSON, 1/Lt Kim Williams	H&S/1/26
LEASURE, CPL Delbert Louis	C/1/13
McKEEVER, LCPL Michael E	H&S/1/26
MOTTOLA, PFC Vincent Antonio	B/1/26
RAY, PFC Franklin Daniel	A/1/26
ROBITAILLE, GYSGT Paul Edward	M/3/26
THORPE, CPL Gary Wilford	H&S/1/26
WIRE, GYSGT Eugene Charles	M/3/26

"I got up at 0700 to check on the 1/26 staff and officers meeting, but as land line phones at C Med weren't 'up' I just walked to the 1/26 COC bunker at the east end of the base. It was very foggy. Passwords: Hammer lamp/Chair topaz. Hill 950, out of water, dispatched a patrol, made contact 100 meters outside their wires. Incoming yesterday: 155 82s, 30 120s, 21 recoilless rounds, 17 arty, total: 400. Low flying C-130s this morning are seeding the clouds to clear away the fog. It didn't work. There were 6 medevacs yesterday, 17 TPQs, 12 175mm missions. The Supply Officer, 1/Lt Kim Johnson, spoke of weapons reconciliation reports. 2/26 had 15 men in a trench close together on our Shore Party LSA, waiting for several days to get to 558. A rocket landed by C Co, then one inside their trench. I walked past the CH-53

[1915] Conversation with James Mink, 23 May 1993. Sgt Mink had less than six months remaining in his enlistment when he was sent to Vietnam due to a shortage of Sergeants. His Platoon Commander was 2/Lt Robert D. Winn.

[1916] Conversation with Joseph P. Gibney, 21 September 1987, taped comments of Joseph Paul Gibney, Eisenhower Center, University of New Orleans, LA, 25 September 1990.

[1917] Recollection of Chaplain Ray William Stubbe.

[1918] "A Reunion at Arlington," op. cit., p. A1.

[1919] Email from James Fisher to Barbara Smith (a distant cousin of Wurtz) contained in her letter of 6 March 2006.

[1920] Ibid.

wreckage just behind the 1/26 COC. The entire front was missing up to the pilot's seat. There is blood all over, pooled in crevasse or angled sheets of metal. The tail is crumpled. As I took cover during incoming at the Regimental MPs, they requested worship services. Visited the regimental COC and talked with the S-2, Maj Jerry Hudson. Someone brought in a few pieces of shrapnel with threads. They want to determine the artillery. "We really don't know what they're giving us," he said.[1921]

Third Platoon of Co A/1/26 defending Hill 950 (XD844456, which was actually 963.29, according to a survey by 2nd Topographic Company in the summer of 1967) under the leadership of 2/Lt Maxie R. Williams had been without re-supply for nine days and suffered a major shortage of water. LtCol James B. Wilkinson [CO, 1/26], during the 1/26 staff and officers morning briefing on 24 February said that we have only 500 gallons of water remaining on the combat base itself and that the water point had not been receiving water for about three days. Hill 950 was down to two gallons; they have been "out" of water for about three days. Plans are being made to have a rifle company from 2/26, with one platoon humping water, to scale the hill and re-supply them, or, we might drop 155mm canisters with plastic bladders filled with water on them, or, we might just abandon the position if we can't get water to them.[1922] At the 1/26 morning staff and officers meeting, the S-4 was chewing out one of his men for using potable water this morning. Defensively, the Marine replied, "Sir, I only used a thimble full!" The S-4 replied, "Do you realize we might not get another drop out of the water point?"[1923]

At 2200H on 21 February, the 1/26 COC radioed A3 on Hill 950, "In view of present weather, it is impossible to re-supply your position. Request your comments concerning water patrol." At 2310, A3 replied, "It is feasible.. Will submit water patrol route."[1924] LtCol James Bascom Wilkinson [CO, 1/26] authorized a squad to conduct a patrol off Hill 950 for the purpose of obtaining water from a small stream about 2 hours distance [towards Hill 1015].[1925]

PFC Robert A. Harrison, a member of the patrol, recalls that Lt Williams had ordered SSgt. Ronald P. Zeiss to select a fire team from each squad plus a gun team, a total of about 15. The Marines selected talked among themselves and concluded that the chances of moving undetected were not good. The slopes of Hill 950 are so steep, that patrols prior to the siege to Hill 1015 to the east were made by sliding down a tree trunk, then grabbing the top of the next tree and sliding down its trunk, and so on, with return a matter of climbing a tree to its top and then grabbing the bottom of the next tree trunk. The morning of the 23rd was cold and foggy. The patrol departed loaded with empty canteens through the wire perimeter which caught on their clothing; their departure was anything but one of stealth as they noisily made it through the wire. In addition, noise from falling resulted from rains for the past several days had made the ground muddy and slippery. On the other hand, dense foliage and fog shrouded their departure. PFC Robert A. Harrison, towards the end of the patrol column, recalls that PFC Anthony Weaver, just in front of him, turned, looked at Harrison, and just rolled his eyes; Harrison shrugged his shoulders, and they continued. With Sgt Zeiss and the gun team in the middle, Cpl Birch's fire team walked point. The patrol had moved about 70 meters when they ran into a dozen or so NVA[1926] smoking near 3 bunkers at XD847454 armed with AK-47 and colt action rifles.[1927]

CPL Robert R. Spurgeon's 2nd Squad (of 3rd Platoon, A/1/26) was running point for the patrol. His second fire team leader, Robert Ickes, was a point, followed by CPL Birch and then CPL Spurgeon, followed by LCPL Frank L. Scott who was the 3rd fire team leader. Spurgeon recalls:

"We were not making any noise whatsoever, and that's why we walked up on them. We went down into the saddle between 950 and 1015 and had taken a right, going down to the ravine where the water would be. Scott was the last man to make it, and SGT Zeiss and the radioman, LCPL Richard Higuera [WIA on 10 Apr 1968] were right there in the break of the hill. That's when we heard the sneeze and everybody stopped. It may have been a cough. It came from my right front and I thought, "No, no!" And then he coughed again. We could see. The fog was there, but we could see, O shit, maybe 75 feet away. My point man, LCPL Ickes, saw them and he motioned back that they were smoking. There were two of them. I motioned back to SGT Zeiss and filled him on what it was, and I asked him if it would be all right for us to lay down a base of fire and let the rest of the platoon assault becauwse they couldn't see them, and we could. Sgt Zeiss overruled me and said we would assault. So I went down and informed Birch and went back and informed Ickes, and Ickes opened up

---

[1921] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 23 February 1968.

[1922] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 24 February 1968.

[1923] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 26 February 1968.

[1924] 1/26 ComdC Feb68, S2/S3 Log, 21 February 1968, Serials #52 and #54.

[1925] Statement of LtCol James B. Wilkinson, 19 December 1968 to Capt Moyers S. Shore, Historical Branch, G-3 Div., HQMC, in Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file.

[1926] Conversation with Robert A. Harrison, 16 July 1989, at Khe Sanh Veterans Reunion; Letters of Robert A. Harrison, 7 March 1986, 31 March 1986, and undated, furnished by Mr. Harrison; Harrison letter postmarked 2 March 1989.

[1927] 1/26 ComdC Feb68, S2/S3 Log, 23 February 1968, Serial #36.

on them. Then Ickes hit the deck and stayed hid the rest of the time while Birch and I assaulted.

"Then seven of them jumped up. Later on, I found out that SGT Zeiss and Higuera had shot two of the enemy to our left rear. They were about to kill Birch and I, and they killed them instead. One of them shot Sergeant Zeiss' helmet off, as a matter of fact. They were in black pajamas. I didn't see them.

"So Birch and I, when the seven jumped up, assaulted and just started killing them. CPL Birch got hit with an automatic burst that went under his right leg and he went down. Then I killed that one. Corpsman Thomas R. Richards was already attending Birch by this time, and I walked over and saw a bullet hole about two inches below his belly button, and I said, 'O, Birch!' He had died; his eyes were—.

"The reason Birch got killed was because my gun malfunctioned, and a man that I had already shot six times in the chest killed Birch. He was about to kill me, because his head—in my view, when I killed him, I hit him in the head. That bothers me, because if I had killed the man, he wouldn't have killed Birch.

"A husky guy in first squad came up and picked Birch up and carried him up the trails.

"Birch was a magnificent young man, and he was an only child. When I told Birch [we were going on the patrol] he came to me and told me, 'Corporal Spurgeon, I wish the Chaplain would have made it'—which would have cancelled our patrol. 'I don't think I'm going to make it out of the patrol alive.' Of course, I didn't know what to say to him."[1928]

Cpl Birch sustained mortal wounds to his leg and groin at 0805H.[1929] The NVA force was unshaven and had long hair but their equipment appeared to be in good condition and was clean. As the remaining NVA withdrew under covering fire from the south and east one of their bunkers was searched. It was empty except for leaves spread over dirt in the sleeping area.[1930] The Marines withdrew, four carrying Birch, and about five badly wounded (loss of fingers, an eye)[1931] as they leap-frogged with one man setting up a tail-end defense, and then the man behind him, with the former one withdrawing behind him. "One of the things that sticks in my mind: I was carrying Birch by the shoulder and lost my grip. It was extremely muddy and everybody was wet. His head hit a large rock. I thought to myself, 'that must of hurt,' and then I realized how dumb it was to think that."[1932]

Khe Sanh[1933]
By Robert A. Harrison

Touch the wind, blowing the gray veil over the memories.
A curtain to hide the Dimming light.
Seventy-Seven days and
Four hundred gone.
Touch the wind, and remember the hope
Of life, and pray
that one cannot die in vain, forgotten beneath the pallor of time.
Touch the wind, and feel the grief of those who knew and cared.
Searching the reasons...why..,
and speak not of futility,
but of the silence.

At 0945, K/3/26 (Hill 861, XD 803443) received four incoming rockets from XD799446 killing PFC Bryant.[1934]

At 0955, a Marine with C Battery forward on Hill 881-S was killed by a NVA sniper.[1935] "I had one good friend that died up there. He was killed right in front of me by a sniper. In fact, when the round hit him, he didn't fall. He ran, and he ran right—he put his arms around my neck. The round hit him in the right shoulder and completely passed through his upper chest. I couldn't talk for love nor money for about two or three days after that; my voice box was gone and I just sat there on the ground, never moved. I just sat there until I finally, slowly came out of it. The bullet hit him, and he immediately turned and let out an awful scream and he ran straight into me, charged me, pinned me right up against the wall, and put his arms, trying to hold me—desperate. Then he started to fall, and I was trying to help him down and saw the wound... Someone called for a corpsman, and the corpsman come running up and commenced to pound his fist on Leasure's chest, and one of my other best friends gave the corpsman a punch. Every time the corpsman punched Leisure, my friend punched the corpsman. When the whole thing ended, I remember the corpsman—his face was bleeding. My friend and everyone was just kind of out of it... I had spent the whole

[1928] Conversation with Robert R. Spurgeon, 03 Feb 2007.
[1929] 1/26 ComdC Feb, S2/S3 Log, 23 February 1968, Serial #14.
[1930] Ibid., Serial #36.
[1931] Conversation with Keith Gum, 27 February 1996.
[1932] Conversation with Robert A. Harrison, 16 July 1989.
[1933] Enclosed in letter of Robert A. Harrison, postmarked 19 December 1988.
[1934] 3rd MarDiv COC 231641Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #459, Para 4.B.
[1935] 3rd MarDiv COC 231640Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #458, Para 4.B. The SITREP indicates the action on Hill 861, but three tubes of 105s from C/1/13 were atop Hill 881-S, not 861.

night up with him before he got killed. In fact he told me, a couple of hours before he was killed, that he knew he was going to die. He played this card game on me. He kept shuffling, and he kept drawing this Ace of Spades, Ten of Diamonds, and telling me what they meant: The 10 of Diamonds was the $10,000; the Queen of Hearts, he was, was his mother who would get the Ten Grand cause he didn't have a girl friend. I remember I got really ticked off at him. He was talking so serious, and it scarred me. He was on his second tour in Viet Nam. We stayed up all night on watch in the trench lines, and then the sun came up. Him and I walked out, following the wall, thinking we were safe. It was real quiet. There was kind of a pop in the distance. Then he just let out this awful scream and ran right into me... It went in his right shoulder, through his upper chest. When it came out the other side, it actually broke his left arm, the bone going through the bicep. I remember saying to myself: I can't believe what I'm seeing."[1936]

1/Lt Kim Johnson, our 1/26 Supply Officer (and LDS Lay-leader along with Chief Rees of CBMU-301 Det B) had returned from the 1/26 briefing to his bunker in the western section of KSCB and was in his bunker with 1/Lt Charles A. Bourgeois, the 1/26 Motor Transport officer. During the monsoon rains of October or November, he had given Chaplain Stubbe his own Marine- Corps-issued dark green woolen shirt to keep warm. He was married to the former Miss Arizona, Mrs. Evalyne Johnson. He had a premonition of his own death, not when he would die, but that he would die relatively unmarked.[1937] He was going to travel "to the rear" the next day (in connection with the weapons reconciliation reports he had mentioned at the morning staff meeting). LCPL Leopold ("Lee") R. Burger had been in the bunker with another Marine "to get some stuff," and then left. "The way the dug-out was built, you had a little, tiny path that led out and then it made a turn before it hit daylight. We had just made the bend headed out, which shielded us fro the explosion. When the bunker was hit, we were the first two men back in there and we dug them out. We were digging frantically. I remember as soon as I saw his face, I cleared the dirt from his face and I touched his hand and went for a pulse, but I could already see that the color and everything else was out of him. There was not a mark on him"[1938] One of the other men with Burger was Joseph R. Murray who recalls that the Motor Transport Officer in the bunker while alive had a broken arm.[1939] When told of Lee Burger, Murray called him and later remarked: "That was one of the most important phone calls I've ever made in my life! Perceptions are different, and my perception screwed me up for a long time. It was a real therapeutic phone call. I always thought that I dug in slow motion—because of fear, and he told me that was not his perception. He was right next to me. I always blamed myself for that guy's [Johnson's] death. I felt if I had dug a little faster—. But according to Lee, I dug as fast as anybody. That phone call that I made to you, and then you called back—I can't tell you how much that helped!"[1940]

A third person involved in digging out Lt Johnson, Cpl Robert A. Parker,[1941] recalls "He was sitting in his bunker, waist-deep in dirt. The round that hit him came from the back of the bunker and he died from a broken neck... I recall loading Johnson on a mule and taking him over to Graves Registration. I don't think he had a scratch on him. In fact, when I first got down to where he was, I really just thought he was unconscious and was buried waist-deep in the dirt. But the force of that concussion, I guess, had broken his neck."[1942] Parker "liked him very much. I absolutely thought he was a wonderful man. His death seemed so unfair. Here was a man who had everything going for him. He was so devout. I was crushed."[1943] "We would talk religion and had different opinions about things. We simply forgot we were in the Marine Corps and that I was an enlistedman and he was an officer, and that's the thing I remember most about Kim Johnson, the thing I remembered the most as I was trying to dig him out. I was just suddenly crushed because all of a sudden I realized that I was loosing this friend. It was devastating."[1944] "He could maintain his dignity as an officer and yet make an enlisted man feel like a brother and a friend. Three or four of his guys would come over to visit from time to time and they just couldn't stop talking about what a great guy he was."[1945]

1/Lt J. Thomas Esslinger (CO, M/3/26 01 Feb-23 Mar 68) had two Gunnery Sergeants on the western knoll of Hill 881-South: Gunny Wire, the Company Gunny, and Gunny Robitail, the Weapons Platoon Commander. Both were killed on 23 February 1968. "Gunny Wire and Gunny Robitail had dug themselves a nice-sized foxhole down in the middle of one of those 2,000-pound bomb craters, so they were already 16 feet below ground. Then they dug another six feet down. They were sitting down in there, and one of these things came in and landed right

---

[1936] Conversation with James E. Payne, 24 April 1988.
[1937] Conversation with Kenneth Pipes, 11 January 1988.
[1938] Conversation with Lee Burger, 06 June 1993.
[1939] Conversation with Joseph Murray, 06 July 1993.
[1940] Ibid. Many veterans of combat report that everything happens in slow motion.
[1941] Worked in B/1/26 supply. The Company supply tents along with the 1/26 battalion supply tents were all located together.
[1942] Conversation with Robert A. Parker. Parker died 5 November 2001.
[1943] Conversation with Robert A. Parker, 15 June 1994. Note the thought of "crushed" concerning Parker's spirit and its parallel with the crushing of Lt Johnson's breath—in Hebrew and Greek, "breath" and "spirit" are the same word, and in Hebrew thought, the "soul" (nephesh) has its physical locality in the throat.
[1944] Conversation with Robert A. Parker, 10 February 1997.
[1945] Letter of Dennis Smithy, 25 June 1990.

in that hole! They both were killed, and we just found little bits and pieces."[1946]

LCPL Timothy C. Sims, the CO's radioman (later a Navy Chaplain) had known Gunny Wire for many months, when he carried the radio to call in helicopters and direct bomb runs. "He [Wire] was our dad. Nobody could believe it [when he was killed]. I had to go and look at the body. I could not believe it. I kept expecting him to show back up. Well, I was 19."[1947] LCPL David M. Anderson, the M-2 Platoon radioman, remembers that the two Gunnys were having lunch together in their foxhole when the round came right in the hole. "It was incredible, because the Gunny had just come up on the hill with us. He was an older fellow. At first I thought, 'Gees, he's too old to be in the Marine Corps,' but he was just like everybody's dad. He came around the hill and said, 'Hey, listen guys, it's alright. It's the pits, but it's alright; you'll make it.' He was real well respected... He had come up on the hill at just the right time, when we were really getting down on morale, cause we were all awfully young."[1948]

Sgt Ronald E. Harriman took over the responsibilities of Mike Company Gunny after Gunny Wire was killed.[1949]

On 23 February 1968, the KSCB and outlying outposts received 1307 rounds of incoming mortar, rocket, and artillery fire.[1950] Most were rocket and artillery.[1951] The incoming exceeded the record single-day previously held by Con Thien (1,233 rounds on 2 July and 1,203 rounds on 25 September 1967).[1952] LtCol Wilkinson, at the 1/26 staff and officers brief, reported 1,407 (although the quantities he gave—476 artillery, 15 60mm, 372 82mm, 4 120mm, 437 122mm, and 5 recoilless rifle—total 1313), and Major Smith, CO of FOB-3 claimed over 1,700 rounds.[1953] Col Lownds sent a message[1954] to Major General Tompkins: "A total of 1307 arty, rocket and mortar rounds were received at KSCB and outlying facilities resulting in 6 KIA, 19 WIA (medevaced) and 19 WIA (minor). Considering the total number of rounds fired I consider the casualty rate extremely low... A fire broke out in ASP Number 3 where 1100 rounds of 90mm, 560 rounds of 106mm beehive and some 57mm recoilless rifle ammo was destroyed.. Air Force representative of Khe Sanh has indicated unless fires are suppressed the Air Force will not fly in any aircraft.. Only resupply to the hills conducted today was 1600 lbs of concertina to Hill 881. Hill 950 has 5 gallons of water remaining.." The incoming knocked out the communications link with 3rd Marine Division for 3 ½ hours. "Division.. was in the dark. They didn't know what we were doing or anything about it.. whether our COC was still operating.. They just stood by and waited until we came back up. And if we didn't come back up eventually, I guess they would have guessed we were blown off the face of the earth."[1955]

At 1615, one of the rounds struck the 106mm position near C Med in the GRAY Sector of the perimeter instantly killing four Marines, three from the 106 crew and one infantryman from BRAVO Company.[1956]

Diary entry for Wednesday, 7 February 1968: "Went down to the 106 bunker on the lines near the 'C' Med area. There were about 6 men here and there was an empty rack. I did this to be with the men and also because it's probably the safest place: if there's an attack, the base will be receiving numerous artillery, rockets, and mortars first, but not the lines, because that requires pinpoint accuracy, and they wouldn't want to waste rounds outside the trench. The men were most appreciative. They received the word on the tanks [that had overrun Lang Vei]. It's interesting the fear that is present. Although cool and hard on the outside, the bunker presented all the warmth and quiet and security of returning to the womb. The most obviously safe place was out on the lines, in the trenches. The bunker, on the other hand, is above ground, a visible target, has a large area of vulnerability, and the ceiling could easily collapse. I spot one Marine outside with the small prayer book that I had previously distributed, reading from it. It was cool, even cold, outside. I woke up at 0230; one man was due to relieve another. Before he went out, he had to heat up some cocoa and breakfast. This took exactly one hour! From that time until 0730, there was always somebody coming in to prepare cocoa, or coffee, or chili con carnie. The base started taking incoming. At 0430 the base went on red alert and there was 100% manning the perimeter instead of 50%. At this time the men started playing the record player they had, a very jumpy song [Credence Clearwater's "I heard it on the Grapevine"]. The procrastination in the 'womb' became more pronounced. At 0730

[1946] Conversation with J. Thomas Esslinger, 28 July 1993.
[1947] Conversation with Rev. Timothy C. Sims, 27 August 1989.
[1948] Conversation with David M. Anderson, 13 July 1990.
[1949] Letter from Ronald E. Harriman, 23 March 1994.
[1950] 3rd MarDiv COC 231640Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #458, Para 4.C.; 3rd MarDiv COC 231641Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #459, Para 4.A.
[1951] III MAF COC 232155Z/Feb68 to MACV CIIB, Doc #363 in III MAF COC Journal and File.
[1952] CG, FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, February, 1968, p. 23.
[1953] Conversation with Major Smith at Khe Sanh, 24 February 1968. He claimed the increased total was from additional rounds that landed within his area, however, he may have counted rounds that "cooked off" from the exploding ASP #3. The official Sharp & Westmoreland report indicates 1,307 [Report on the War, p. 164].
[1954] 26Mar 231330Z/Feb68 in 26Mar ComdC Feb68.
[1955] Comments of Sgt H. E. Stroud, HQMC Oral History Tape #2452.
[1956] 1/26 ComdC Feb68, S2/S3 Log, 23 February 1968, Serial #110

the word was that they'd fill 50 sand bags and then turn in—to sleep!"[1957]

It was this bunker, this crew, these men, that were hit by incoming on 23 February 1968. "I went down there to assist loading the dead into the 'crackerbox' [ambulance]. The Catholic Chaplain [Walt Driscoll] was also there. The dead were not all together. There were pieces—arms, bodies. There was one body without a head; it had completely vanished. We looked for it but couldn't find it. There were small pieces of flesh all over the place. I knew them all. These were the nervous ones that played, 'I Heard it on the Grapevine.' Parts of one of the man's body hung out as I held him in my arms carrying him into the truck—a hand, an arm, a stringy piece of flesh intertwined with cloth and caked with mud. The 106 gun itself was completely untouched, but three of my friends were gone [plus one more from "B" Co.]. In the letter to the next of kin: 'Lieutenant Ray W. Stubbe, U.S. Navy Chaplain Corps, offered a prayer for Gary [Thorpe] shortly thereafter."[1958] What an under-statement! I offered a passionate prayer—I still am!

Others were deeply affected also, including one corpsman that lost two good friends. "The kid broke down and was later evacuated... Here you are, seeing some of your best friends, some of your best comrades, people you really feel for, care for.. they're lying dead, and you have to sit there and take more."[1959]

PFC James E. Griffin, a clerk typist (MOS 0141) with H&S Co., 1/26, recalls Gary Thorpe who had a little hole not far from the 1/26 H&S Company bunker. Griffin remembers going down to talk with Thorpe who told him about an earlier Nam tour.[1960] "I do not remember which unit he served with on his first tour, only that, as with so many Marines, he immediately volunteered to go back... During that first tour Gary was called on to fire in support of a squad of Marines that had been ambushed and pinned down. Close to the ambush site on the slope of the hill there was a shallow cave and the surviving Marines had managed to scramble into this cave and it was from there that they were desperately radioing for fire support. According to Gary, the NVA soldiers were almost at the mouth of the cave, lobbing grenades and firing almost directly into it when he was given the order to open fire. He said he remembered what happened in slow motion, that he could see it in his mind in great detail, that since that day he had seen it over and over and over again. The first round took out the NVA soldiers attacking to those right of the entrance and the second round was aimed at those approaching the mouth of the cave to the left. Gary said he knew as soon as he had fired that the second round was going into the cave, that he could see it, that he could see the faces of the Marines in the cave and that he knew they that they were going to die and that it was Gary Thorpe who was going to kill them. There were no survivors."[1961] As he and Jim Griffin sat talking, Gary said he was ready to die. The scene haunted him and he was ready to go.[1962]

Michael McKeever played football and basketball while in high school and was active in his Catholic church as an altar boy and sang in the choir. Active in Boy Scouts, he achieved Eagle Scout. His father had served as a Marine in the Korean War and his dream was to become a combat photographer for the Marine Corps. He enlisted 13 June 1966.[1963]

24 FEBRUARY 1968

AGUIRRE, CPL Carlos Cruz	E/2/26
BECK, PVT John Theron	C/1/9
BORRELL, PFC Clifford Glenn	E/2/26
DISTEFANO, 2/Lt Ferdinando	E/2/26
JEFFRIES, LCPL Gerrie George	E/2/26
JONES, LCPL Howard Lemuel Jr.	FLC (POL)
NELSON, LCPL Max Alvin	E/2/26

As an example of under-counting of KIAs, the Operation SCOTLAND SITREPS for this date indicate 5 friendly KIA, 11 WIA (evacuated) and 9 friendly WIA (minor).[1964]

In the early morning hours, "..one of our own artillery rounds landed short. It was a direct hit on my machine gun bunker and caved the bunker killing Cpl Carlos Aguirre and LCPL Gerrie Jeffries. I drew the short straw, so I slept in the trench outside the bunker (it was only big enough for two to sleep in)."[1965] The bunker containing the two, machine-gunners, took a direct hit by the errant artillery round, causing the bunker to collapse, suffocating them. "We could not get them out. I heard a muffled scream. It was terrible! It was night. A new Gunnery Sergeant vomited in my canteen, and I got very, very upset because we had so little water."[1966] The Com-

---

[1957] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry, 07 February 1968.
[1958] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry, 23 February 1968.
[1959] Comments of Sgt Patrick J. Fitch, HQMC Oral History Tape #2498. Sgt Fitch was a radioman with B/1/26 from 10 Jan – 27 Feb 1968.
[1960] Conversation with James E. Griffin, 16 May 1996.
[1961] James Griffin, letter postmarked 18 May 1996, forwarding a letter he wrote to two school teachers; printed in Khe Sanh Veteran, Issue No. 37 (Fall, 1996), pp. 16-17.
[1962] Conversation with James E. Griffin, 16 May 1996.
[1963] Don Ward, The Faces Behind the Names, Minnesota: The Memorial Press, 1996, p. 278.
[1964] Reported in 3rd MarDiv COC 250052Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #463. (3rd MarDiv COC messages 241328Z/Feb68, 241517Z/Feb68, and 250053Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREPs #s 461, 462, and 464, respectively, report no KIA.)
[1965] Khe Sanh Message Board, email by James Kaylor posted 28 March 2002.
[1966] Conversation with Michael Thomas Lucas, 08 June 1991; the quote is from a letter he received from James Kaylor. Lucas was a Squad Leader in 3rd Platoon.

pany Commander, CAPT Earle G. Breeding, questions whether there was much moaning or suffering: "If my recollection is correct, it was only like thirty seconds after the round landed that they found that it caved in, and it didn't take very long to dig them out—maybe twenty minutes to dig, but twenty minutes of not breathing—... When they dug them out, they were both lying flat on their back, and they were motionless."[1967] PFC William Griffith [later a Major, USMC] was in an adjacent bunker when the round exploded. "In fact, I was on watch and yelled 'incoming!' I hit the dirt and the rounds hit a few feet behind me and caved-in the bunker and killed them."[1968]

Howard Jones had relieved Joseph Lola (who was severely wounded on 21 February)[1969] as a fork-life driver. "Needless to say, he was one of the most 'shot-at' people during daylight hours because he had to get the [pallets of ammunition for the] 105s, 155s moved. And he got pretty well shell-shocked. He was scarred to death. The afternoon that he got killed, there was a pretty heavy dose of incoming, and he jumped off the fork-lift and dove into a culvert near the POL area near Graves Registration. He panicked. He felt so exposed laying in that ditch that he got up and tried to run across the road into one of the bunkers. A shell went off, and a piece of shrapnel tore his throat out, and that was that."[1970]

Some of the 275 rounds of incoming also struck Hill 861-Alfa, defended by Company E/2/26. The Marines there were still developing their position, still taking incoming, still taking casualties. PVT Larry E. Jackson vividly recalls the day:

"On February 24th we were still stringing wire and concertina. I remember this particular day. It was the first time that I got wounded. I was so scarred I didn't even know I'd been wounded; somebody had to tell me. I was hit by shrapnel behind the leg and was bleeding. We were stretching barbed wire. We wrapped it around the post four times, then continued to the next post and did the same on that. The weather was so hot it was just almost unbearable. We had shifts. We would stay out maybe 45 minutes, maybe an hour, and then we rotated with different members of the squad. On this particular day, they [the NVA] had got back to dropping one shell a day. This started on the 16th or 17th of February. On this particular day I'd wrapped the wire around a post twice and a Black Sergeant gave the command to trade off and we could go back to our trench line. The man who replaced me right on the particular pole that I was on—I mean right in my footprints—the first shell came in [pause]. The first shell that came in landed just behind him. His name was Borrell. It decapitated his legs at the knees, and that was the first shell that came in. And naturally they began to pound us with mortar shells. It was unbelievable, and the guys were caught outside the wire. We had just one particular place to where you could go out through the wire, and it was on down the front of this particular place. These guys were trapped outside the wire, trying to run through the wire, trying to crawl through the wire just to get back the best way they could, and shells hitting in the wire, outside the wire. The next thing we heard was 'First Squad get out and get 'em' or something, I don't remember exactly."[1971]

PFC Borrell was nicknamed "pops." He was older—had been in the Navy four years.[1972]

PVT Jackson continues: "We had to cut through the wire, and as we'd be out towards the wire, the shells started hitting up in the trench line and inside the perimeter. Then, when we finally got through the wire to get a hold of some of the wounded, we pulled them back through the wire and up to the trench line and the shells started hitting outside the wire and in the wire, again like it started. We were real fortunate because they would hit in the trench line when we were out of the wire, and then we pulled a wounded Marine back to the trench and they would be hitting back in the wire again, wounding more... I was the first one to get to Borrell. I was trying to drag him along and he was such a big person. He was a big, strapping man. Just a little bit after I got to him, one of the corpsmen came by and I saw that he [Borrell] was bleeding excessively, so he commenced to put tourniquets on each one of his legs. I laid the weight of my body, which was 165, 170 pounds [on Borrell], and he just raised up like I wasn't even laying on him. He got one look at his legs that had been blown off, and he just fell back, turned white, and died."[1973]

LCPL Max Nelson, the CO's radioman of E/2/26, was one of the heroes of the battle of 5 February on 861-A, maintaining radio comm. with the platoons of Co E, with the platoons of Co K/3/26 (on the nearby Hill 861), and assisted in calling in supporting fire. He fearlessly moved about the fire-swept terrain to skillfully assist other radio operators who were experiencing transmission difficulties.[1974] Max's dad, who had been a POW in World War II and got out of the Army as a Major, taught art in the high school Max attended in Walker, Minnesota, and Max himself was a good artist. He had

---

[1967] Conversation with Earle G. Breeding, 18 September 1991.

[1968] Conversation with William Griffith, 19 February 1993.

[1969] Conversation with Joseph Lola, 16 November 1996.

[1970] Conversation with Philip Wright, 12 January 1995. Joseph Lola reports the same information [Conversation with Joseph Lola, 16 November 1996]. During the period 1200-1800, KSCB and outlying outposts received approximately 275 rounds of incoming. [3rd MarDiv COC 250052Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #463].

[1971] Taped comments of Larry E. Jackson, November, 1984.

[1972] Conversation with William Griffith, 19 February 1993. Griffith and Borrell had gone through training together in California prior to going to Vietnam.

[1973] Taped comments of Larry E. Jackson, November, 1984.

[1974] Bronze Star Medal Citation, LCPL Max Alvin Nelson taken the 1:50,000 tactical map and drew 861-A and surrounding areas on a much larger scale on the sleeve of a C-ration carton and then superimposed the grid over it, all to scale, greatly helping Captain Breeding to conduct the defense against the assault of the outpost on 5 February.[1975]

Max Nelson was one of those who rushed to rescue the trapped, wounded Marines. "He wouldn't be dead today, probably, because I wouldn't of let him go out there. But I happened to be checking the lines and they came in on the other side of the Company perimeter. I wouldn't of let anybody go out there to get those people until the rest of those rounds stopped landing,"[1976] laments Breeding.

2/Lt Ferdinando Distefano, the Executive Officer of E/2/26, was not on Hill 861-Alfa when it had been hit on 5 February. Upon returning to Khe Sanh, he had seen (and had a confrontation with) Major Royce L. Bond, the 2/26 Battalion Executive Officer. He said he had a premonition that if we went back on 861-Alfa, that he was going to die. He pleaded with Bond. He was in tears. "I'm going to die!" Major Bond ordered him to return to his unit. Today he died. "Lieutenant Distefano went out not as a hero, but just doing the things that people do. Here's this Second Lieutenant, almost fresh out of Basic School, not dry behind the ears, and he went out to help one of my troopers, an artillery FO, and a Navy Corpsman, all of whom he didn't know they're all dead, and he 'bought it.' Strange thing is, I viewed his body. He didn't have a mark on him! I have discussed this with the medical personnel, and they say probably what happened was a round landed close, and the concussion.. splits everything apart inside you in pieces, and you just die instantly."[1977]

Ferdinando, his parents' only child, had emigrated with them and settled in New York where his parents ran an Italian grocery store. His premonitions of death were evident from the time he boarded a plane that would take him eventually to Vietnam. At the airport, he told his good friend, Ralph DiToro, "I don't think I'm coming back." There were other portends. His mother always kept a candle lit in her son's room and when she got up the morning of his death, the candle was blown out. On the way to the store, one of her neighbors stopper her. "I had a dream about Freddy," she said. Sometime later, she saw Marines walk into the store and immediately (before they uttered a word) she got on the telephone and called DiToro's friend: "Vinny, get over here, Freddy is dead." "Nine months after Freddy died, his father died. His mother became a wandering nomad: she would go to California, she would go to Italy, go here, go there, and finally she passed away... She never recovered."[1978]

[The 24th of February brought the first Supergaggle. While the USAF re-supplied the Combat Base itself by fixed wing landings (along with USMC fixed wing air-landings, of course), para-drops into the Drop Zone, and LAPSE, the outlying outposts could only be re-supplied by helicopter. The commitment was assigned to MAG-36A and MAG-39.[1979] Helicopter pilots encountered the same ground fire as did fixed wing, perhaps in an even more disadvantageous manner because of their slow speed and vulnerability. When the siege battle began, 26th Marines had a support package of 2 UH-1E, 2 to 4 CH-46, and 2 UH-34 helicopters, whose primary mission was re-supply and medevac support of the hill outposts, coordinated by the 26th Marines ALO [Air Liaison Officer]. As the battle progressed, the increased tempo of operations resulted in control passing to the DASC.[1980] Hill 881-South was continuously bombarded by 120mm mortars, particularly during medevacs. Capt Dabney attempted to diminish this vulnerability by use of several different LZs, directing helicopter landings by last-minute popping of smoke at the designated LZ. Tactics evolved. Supplies were never dropped twice in the same place consecutively. Feinting a drop at one hill and then dropping off at another hill was another tactic. Approaches were always low-altitude and high-speed. Aircraft had only 30 seconds to enter, drop supplies, and de-

[1975] Conversation with Earle G. Breeding, 20 January 1990.
[1976] Ibid. Two of Nelson's brothers also served in the military. As of 1997, one was a Major and one a Lieutenant Colonel. The father, upon his return from WW II, started the Reserve Company in Walker, Minnesota, where the two sons served as Company Commander prior to its decommissioning in 1995. [Conversation with James Best, 26 May 1997]. Max Nelson's sister, Jamie Woodruff, recalls that during childhood there was no TV, and the six brothers and sisters of the family played war, cowboys and Indians, or games of softball and kick-the-can in the alley, rode bikes to the beach and enjoyed a stop at the local Dairy Queen (if they had a little money). Their dad died in 1971. "Max was always the clown. Not an inspired student, he enjoyed extra-curricular activities more than school.. He played drums in the band and sang in the choir." He and his friends formed a quartet and performed in school concerts. Max went to movies and dances with his girlfriend, Jean, and joined the Marines directly after graduation from high school. He died two days after his 19th birthday. [Tribute by Jamie Woodruff in Don Ward, The Faces Behind the Names, Minnesota: The Memorial Press, 1996, p. 298].

[1977] Comments of Earle G. Breeding at Khe Sanh Veterans reunion, Denver, CO, printed in Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue #2 (Fall, 1991), p. 4.
[1978] Conversation with Ralph Di Toro, 11 February 2005.
[1979] Comments of Maj Wm. A. McGaw, Jr., HQMC Oral History Tape #3293. Maj McGaw was S-3, Aviation Safety Officer, and NATOPS Officer of VMO-6.
[1980] Comments of Maj William J. Sullivan, HQMC Oral History Tape #2935. Maj Sullivan was XO, MASS-3.

part before mortars began to explode. Low altitudes greatly increased vulnerability to small arms and .50 caliber machineguns.[1981] Since it was assumed the NVA were monitoring our radios, Shore Party Marines at the KSCB LSA indicated the hill to be re-supplied by a sign they held up. Pilots acknowledged they understood by a "thumbs-up" signal and the UH-1E gunships, not knowing to which hill the re-supply birds were headed, simply followed, covering the transport helicopter as it landed.[1982] Despite these and other tactics, NVA fire made use of parked helicopters at Khe Sanh landing on LZs of hill outposts untenable. In some cases, it took the pilots a longer time to move from their bunker on KSCB to their helicopters than it would take a helicopter from Quang Tri to fly to Khe Sanh! Maj Arthur B. Crane, S-3 of MAG-39, "..spent as much as 45 minutes trying to make it from the bunker.. to the aircraft, diving in ditches and laying in culverts on the way.."[1983] Sometimes the trip from bunker to plane took as long as an hour to an hour and a half.[1984] The situation deteriorated proportionately as enemy fire intensified. Far too many aircraft were being lost and taking hits. No amount of bombing seemed to diminish the intensity and accuracy of the numerous hidden NVA weapon positions, and it became necessary to coordinate fixed-wing air strikes with helicopter drops.

Thus Col Joel B. Bonner, LtCol Richard E. Carey was conceived and termed "Supergaggle" by the author of the Operation Order, LtCol Carey.[1985] Supergaggle commenced 24 February 1968 at Khe Sanh.[1986] "We always referred to a formation flight of helicopters as a gaggle, like a 'gaggle of geese.' Well, when you get as many aircraft in the sky as we had on our Khe Sanh resupply runs, it's a supergaggle."[1987] The quantity of aircraft was formidable. The plan included 12 A-4s, 1 TA-4, 12 CH-46s, and 4 UH-1E gunships.[1988] Supergaggle involved a resupply of about 32,000 pounds per hill. By the time Supergaggle began on 24 February, HMM-262 had lost more than half of their CH-46D helicopters.

Execution of Supergaggle involved (1) softening up known NVA positions by 4 A4s; (21) saturation of known enemy anti-aircraft and automatic weapons positions by 2 A4s armed with CS gas tanks; (3) laying of a smoke screen 30-40 seconds prior to final run by the CH-46Ds along the selected avenues of approach; (4) fire suppression during the final runs by 4 A4s equipped with CBUs, rockets, and 20mm.[1989] Ordnance used included DELTA-2 (500-lb. bombs), DELTA-5 (rockets), DELTA-9 (napalm), DELTA-11 (CBU-1AA), DELTA-14 (CBU-24), DELTA-15 (CBU-21), DELTA-21 (smoke), DELTA-24 (gun pod), and DELTA-32 (CS gas). Most effective was the DELTA-21 and DELTA-32 was not as effective as anticipated. DELTA-11s were very effective, being laid in a string 1100 meters long. After 4 or 5 days, DELTA-15s were used instead of the DELTA-11s since they possessed the effect of detonating anywhere up to 2 hours after being laid, an effective method of keeping the enemy off-balance. A combination of DELTA-14 and DELTA-15 appeared to provide optimal coverage.[1990] Helicopters descended from their patterns with their 4,000-pound loads. Supergaggle proved effective: only 2 CH-46s were downed enroute to the hill outposts during Operation Supergaggle, whereas prior to Supergaggle, as many as 3 helicopters were shot down in a single day.[1991]]

25 February 1968

AKINS, LCPL Ronald Paul	B-3/1/26
BAPTISTE, PFC Michael Bradford	B-3/1/26
BATTLE, PFC Joseph Chriss	B-1/1/26
BILLINGHAM, LCPL Frederick A Jr.	B-3/1/26
BRELLENTHIN, PFC Michael J	B-3/1/26
BRUDER, PFC James Robert	B-3/1/26
CLAIRE, CPL Kenneth William	B-3/1/26
CLAY, PFC Doyle Gregory	B-3/1/26
DODSON, LCPL Jerry Lee	B-3/1/26
GELLER, LCPL Charles Gregory	B-3/1/26
HAYES, LCPL Phillip III	B-3/1/26
HUFF, CPL William Edward	K/3/26
JACQUES, 2/Lt Donald	B-3/1/26
JONES, LCPL Bruce Edwin	B-3/1/26
LADEROUTE, PFC Michael John	B-3/1/26
LASSITER, PFC John Alfred	B-3/1/26
McCLELLAND, SSGT George	B-3/1/26
McDONALD, PFC Henry III	B-3/1/26
McKENZIE, LCPL Richard W	B-3/1/26
MEADS, PFC Kim Elmer	B-3/1/26
MOORE, HN Lloyd Whitfield	B-1/1/26
RIVERA, PFC Arnold Javier	B-3/1/26
RUFF, PFC Willie Jerome	B-3/1/26
SCARBROUGH, PFC David Clinton	B-3/1/26

[1981] Comments of Maj William A. McGaw, Tape #3293, cited.
[1982] Comments of LtCol Melvin J. Steinberg, USMC Oral History Tape #3423.
[1983] Comments of Maj Arthur C. Crane, USMC Oral History Tape #3294.
[1984] Comments of LtCol Bertram A. Maas, USMC Oral History Tape #3422.
[1985] Letter of MGen Keith B. McCutcheon, AAJ-1-jap, HQMC HistDiv, Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file. McCutcheon was CG, 1 MAW.
[1986] VMO-6 ComdC Feb 1968, Encl (1), p. 2; FMAW OpPlan 3-68 in I MAW ComdC Feb 68 G-2 Sec App 6, Tab 48.
[1987] LtCol David L. Althoff, "Helicopter Operations at Khe Sanh," Marine Corps Gazette 54:5 (May 1969) 47.
[1988] Ltr of MGen McCutcheon, cited.
[1989] Ibid.
[1990] Comments of LtCol Robert W. Rasdal, HQMC Oral History Tape #2627.
[1991] DFC file on Capt Wesley H. Birt; MGen McCutcheon letter, cited.

SKINNER, PFC Walter Francis	B-3/1/26
SMITH, PFC Douglas Wayne	B-3/1/26
SZMANSKI, PFC Frank Adam IV	I/3/26
THEYERL, PFC Clayton Joseph	B-3/1/26
WHITAKER, CPL Donald Eugene	B-1/1/26
WIEDEMAN, CPL Robert Arthur	I/3/26
WOOD, LCPL James Anthony	E/2/26

The 20 year-old "youngest Marine Corps Lieutenant to complete TBS [The Basic School] in 18 years,"[1992] 2/Lt Donald Jacques, commanded Third Platoon of Company B/1/26. He had joined the Marine Corps while attending college. His parents had little money and he didn't want to ask them for more to attend school.[1993] Arriving in Vietnam in early October, 1967, he wrote home: "Tonight I had a 19 yr-old come to me for help and advice. He is married to a 18 yr-old and he was having problems. If he knew I was only 20 I wonder if he would have come."[1994] The evening of 24 February 1968, he wrote his parents, wishing them a happy anniversary and adding: "The days go by quite quickly but the nights are long around here. I haven't been getting much sleep.. I stay awake all night sometimes and others not. We get our sleep in the day a couple of ours [sic] at a time. That is if the work load isn't to great. It is a constant digging deeper and the work really never stops. It can't."[1995] In what was to be his last day, he also wrote his sister, Jeanne, and her family: "We're just sitting here waiting for all hell to burst loose with each day that goes by the incoming increases and the 3d Plt digs deeper. We are already for them in my opinion but no matter how well prepared you think you are there is always something more you can do. We have been lucky so far and I hope that the good fortune holds for us. Although my platoon has had 30 wounded since Jan 21st none have been too serious and the majority of the men are still on duty and all healing. One or two have made it home early but that is all to the good. For they have done their part. They seem to think that Khe Sanh will be the turning point to the negotiation tables. I hope so but if not we will go on until this is over... I just hope we can do our part well enough so that your Billy and Mark and Matt don't have to come... I'm fine and still kicking. I'll write again soon. Love brother, Don."[1996] 2/Lt Donald Jacques was as "green" as the piece of camouflaged parachute he always wore as an dickey.[1997]

For 18 year-old PFC Ronald Lewis Ridgeway, the morning of 25 February began with his squads leader, LCpl Kenneth Claire, briefing his men that they were going on a sweep, not to exceed 1000 meters from the combat base perimeter.[1998] It was basically to be a perimeter wire check to determine if the wire had been cut or sabotaged, or if there were any NVA forward observers. They were instructed not to go out of sight of the base perimeter. "He said we were looking for any trench positions that were being dug towards our perimeter and for Bangalore torpedoes. He said there was a possibility of receiving enemy mortars because it was open terrain."[1999] The patrol was to be far from a normal patrol for Ridgeway; it was the beginning of a 5-year nightmare as a POW.[2000] Ridgeway turned 18 in boot camp and went straight over to Vietnam, arriving in November, 1967.[2001] In early February, 1968, he got knocked out during a mortar barrage. "I did a foolish thing. I jumped into the trench line to get away from the mortars and I broke my nose."[2002] He woke up in a helicopter in DaNang. "I got medevaced, I guess, because they said I was out, unconscious, for so long. Then I came back up [to KSCB]. I got my in-country R&R!"[2003]

LCpl Kenneth Claire, the tall, rugged squad leader, probably thought of his family and home in California. He had spent his summers in the 7200-foot high Sierras at [1992] Comment by his sister, Jeanne, quoted in Brandon, Heather, Casualties, New York: St. Martin's Press, 1984, p. 63. Donald Joseph Jacques was born 23 March 1947 in Rochester, New York, and entered on active duty in the USMC 24 March 1967 at Quantico, Va.

---

[1993] Ibid., comments by his other sister, Vallette, p. 61.

[1994] Donald Jacques, letter to his parents, 14 October 1967. Jacques was born 23 March 1947 in Rochester, NY, entered on active duty 24 March 1967, and arrived in Vietnam 09 Oct 1967 [Casualty card, HQMC, Historical Division, Washington, D.C.]

[1995] Donald Jacques, letter to his parents, 24 February 1968. In a letter to his parents dated 14 February 1968, he wrote: "Always tired but when this is over I'll get all the sleep I need."

[1996] Donald Jacques, letter to Jeanne, Bob and Billy, 24 February 1968.

[1997] Conversation with Jeff Culpepper, 23 July 1984.

[1998] Orders were to maintain visual sight of the perimeter (400 meters max from the perimeter) and the patrol was to last 2 hours. [26Mar 251114H/Feb68, from Col Lownds to CG 3rd MarDiv, in III MAF SPECAT Exclusive msgs, #30, forwarded to CG III MAF by CG 3rd MarDiv in 252120Z/Feb68]. As further evidence that the patrol was to be close to the KSCB perimeter, Ed. Prendergast was told to remain at KSCB with his 60mm mortars from where he could better protect the patrol. [Conversations with Ed Prendergast, 14 March 1986 and 5 June 1986].

[1999] CMC Rpt AO2A-THM-bfh, 3461, 17 July 1973, Subj: Homecoming Marine Debriefing Report; case of Sergeant Ronald L. Ridgeway, USMC, Debrief Tape #5.

[2000] Returned to US control on 16 March 1973. Interestingly, while training, Ridgeway and the brother of James Schemelia [I/3/26 on Hill 881-S during the siege battle] successfully escaped and evaded in a training exercise at Camp Pendleton. Others were dispatched to locate them. They were unaware the exercise had terminated! [Conversation with James Schemelia, 31 July 1984].

[2001] Conversation with Ronald Ridgeway, 05 July 1991.

[2002] CG MARCORB CAMPEN CA 100244Z/Apr73, Subj: Returnee Press Conference, Sgt Ronald L. Ridgeway.

[2003] Conversation with Ronald Ridgeway, 05 July 1991.

Silver Lake with his great-aunt where he would get up each morning and greet it with a Tarzan yell—for which he became quite famous at Khe Sanh before the siege battle. His younger brother (by 7 years), Richard, recalls their 4-hour treks up the 9,800-foot high Thunder Mountain and the sheer 2,000 foot drop to the 7,300-foot high Silver Lake. "Ken would climb right up to the top and stand there with the wind howling around him, pound his chest and give out this wild Tarzan yell! I think it was at that point Ken got the idea of giving a Tarzan yell whenever he got to the top of a mountain. Unfortunately, he started doing the same thing every morning on our front deck and scared the heck out of our kids. On our last trip up there, he planted a post on the peak and tied his sweatshirt to it. The post stayed there for over 30 years through all the storms and the high winds."[2004] His niece, Laura, recalls how terrified she was as a little child when Ken placed her on his shoulders and tossed her into the air. "I used to be scarred to death because he was so big."[2005] While in schools before high school, Ken was a very good baseball player, made the All Star team for the Fair Oaks Little League and Babe Ruth League every year he played, and when he went to Sequoia High School, he made varsity as soon as he started on the team. At high school, Ken "..got the reputation of being one of the toughest and fairest kids in the school. Nobody fooled around with him and whenever he saw someone picking on someone else he immediately stepped in and settled the argument. He also had a reputation of being a real fun guy.. was extremely well-liked and respected."[2006] Following high school he briefly attended the College of San Mateo and played football for them (at 6-2 and 245 pounds), but found the academic world not to his liking and joined the Marine Corps.

LCpl Ken Claire was well-known for his Tarzan yell as well as other atavistic demeanor and actions. When re-supplied with loaves of bread, he would grab a whole loaf and tear off a piece with his mouth and yell.[2007] During a battalion-size sweep in late December, 1967, LCpl Claire led his squad (PFC James Hebron, PFC Ronald Ridgeway, PFC Edward C. Rayburn, PFC Jeffrey E. Culpepper, and others), together with another squad and a machine-gunner up a creek bed of about 6 inches of mud. Suddenly they spotted four NVA soldiers at XD803495 carrying a wounded man. When the NVA saw the Marines, they dropped their wounded officer comrade and ran. Claire and Hebron fired 29 M-79 rounds, killing the officer. Ron Ridgeway and Jeff Culpepper threw the dead enemy officer in a poncho. "He was bleeding like crazy and the blood was sloshing around in the poncho and got all over us. When we got back we finished our chow and went on."[2008] Upon returning, Lt. Jacques took the officer's pistol. "It should have been Claire's,"[2009] but the issue became academic since both Jacques and Claire were to die on 25 February 1968. Lt Jacques asked LCpl Claire, "Is this a fresh kill?" Claire responded, "Of course," and took the blood on his finger and licked it.[2010]

LCpl Claire had a reputation for being "hard" but fair; he took care of his men. He was very strict about falling asleep on watch and ensuring sufficient separation between people while on patrol. If someone walked with his head down, looking at the ground, he'd come by and let that person know it—physically as well as vocally! "But then in quiet times when you'd be standing watch or something he'd come around checking lines. He'd apologize to you and say, 'I'm not trying to give you a hard time; I'm just trying to instill in you're the importance of what we're doing. He did care for us."[2011]

When the Combat Base was hit the early hours of Sunday, 21 January 1968, PFC Alexander Tretkiakoff fell while returning from a listening post and became hung-up on the wire. LCPL Claire dashed out amid the hail of exploding ordnance which was concentrated in that particular area of KSCB due to proximity to the exploding ammunition dump, along with NVA mortars and rockets, to rescue Tretkiakoff and bring him back to safety.[2012] He also continuously moved through the trench line while shrapnel and pieces of unexploded and semi-exploded ordnance fell around him to encourage his men and assist casualties.[2013] PFC Jeffrey L. Culpepper had just completed his watch when a rocket shrieked by and he dove into a trench next to PFC Edward C. Rayburn. The trenches at that point weren't very deep: "we were side by side, practically laying on top of each other." Big chunks of shrapnel made whizzing sounds overhead and then landed into the mud, sizzling. One chunk, "..a great big, huge, jagged, steaming-hot piece of shrapnel stuck in the mid right in between us, sizzling,

---

[2004] Letter from Richard Claire, 5 November 2004.

[2005] Conversation with Mrs. Laura Claire Bueno, 7 December 1986. In high-school, Ken was 6-1 and 225 pounds. [Letter from Richard Claire, 5 November 2004].

[2006] Letter from Richard Claire, cited. Ken's father had been a professional football and professional baseball player [Conversation with Richard Claire, 7 December 1986].

[2007] Memory of Ray W. Stubbe.

[2008] Conversations with Jeff Culpepper, 23 July 1984 and 30 January 1987; Letter from Jeff Culpepper to Mrs. Madalyn Culpepper, 01 January 1968. The action is documented in 1/26 ComdC Dec 1967 S2/S3 Log 29 December 1967, Ser #18, 19, and 28, and appended list of captured gear; 26Mar 290410Z/Dec67, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #234; 26Mar 291125Z/Dec67, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #235; Letter of Maj Kenneth W. Pipes, undated, in Khe Sanh Monograph File, HistDiv, HQMC, Washington, DC.

[2009] Conversation with Jeff Culpepper, 23 July 1984.

[2010] Ibid.

[2011] Conversation with Jeff Culpepper, 30 January 1987.

[2012] Statement of Cpl Alan S. Ragio in Bronze Star Medal file on LCPL Kenneth William Claire.

[2013] Statement of 2/Lt Donald Jacques in Bronze Star Medal file on LCPL Kenneth William Claire.

and we both just scrunched down a little bit lower! Corporal Claire came around, walking above the trenches and said, 'Don't be in the trench like sissies, face down; they're probably coming to overrun us!"[2014]

For Cpl Gilbert Wall, the 81mm FO and a Blackfoot Indian from Montana, the day began with the Second Platoon Commander, 1/Lt John William Dillon, telling him he was to accompany Third Platoon on today's patrol.[2015] Wall already had two Purple Hearts and was due to be rotated out of Khe Sanh, but he pleaded with LtCol James B. Wilkinson [CO, 1/26] to stay at Khe Sanh.[2016] Only a few days earlier, during a night in which KSCB received heavy mortar fire, the First Platoon Corpsman, Richard Blanchfield, was about to medevac Wall, noting that Wall's eardrums had been blown. Wall refused. He said, "I'll stay. The hell with it." Doc Blanchfield (at 27 far older than most at Khe Sanh, having served 1963-65 with Tom Dooley in Laos previously)[2017] notes, "What a wild man!"[2018] Wall had been on the patrol along Route 9 on 21 July 1967 which collided with NVA preparing ambush positions—the day the 175s were coming from Camp Carroll to KSCB—as part of the 81mm mortar section (along with Sgt Jose Castillo and Cpl Bruce Jones) that accompanied 1/Lt Benjamin L. Long's Second Platoon, B/1/26. On that patrol Sgt Castillo was shot twice in the chest and immediately died, Cpl Jones was shot through the throat, and Cpl Wall: "The bullet went through up by my shoulder and it went through lung and it broke two of my ribs and they cut it out of my back. I took a ricochet in the face and they shot me right under the eye. I spent July 21st to the last part of September in Yokosuka. That was my second [Purple] Heart and they sent me orders to go back to the 3rd Marine Division Headquarters to be a MP. I didn't want to go. I had to talk with Captain Pipes, who was H&S Company at the time, and then I had to go talk with [Lieutenant] Colonel Wilkinson. I didn't want to go back to the rear, and Wilkinson said, 'OK, well, we'll keep you.'"[2019]

Cpl Wall had not had time to clean his M-16; ironically, this was to save his life today. The previous night he was with the ARVN Ranger Battalion and participated in shooting possible probing NVA: "I shot almost 700 rounds from my rifle. The carbon had built up on it, and it would jam after firing three rounds."[2020] Wall walked over to Lt Jacques' CP in the Third Platoon portion of the Gray Sector:

"When I arrived Lt Jacques came out of his bunker and invited me in to breakfast and some coffee. Lt Jacques and I had been on many patrols together and knew each other pretty well. He introduced me to the new platoon sergeant [who] asked me to call him 'Mac' [SSgt George McClelland]... I started talking to some of the Marines on the line.. Most of the guys were new. You could tell; they were 'white faced!' [none yet dyed with the red clay pigment of Khe Sanh]. Everybody was in a surprisingly good mood. They all were happy, loose and relaxed. It was a nice day, and just to move out of the base for awhile gave you a good feeling. I checked my gear. I had 25 magazines and 9 grenades. Then I looked over my map and had my radio man get a radio check, then looked out to the area we would be patrolling. I knew the area very well."[2021]

PFC Michael J. Laderoute, a Canadian citizen, had enlisted in the USMC. His younger brother, Thomas, recalls him as not particularly athletic, but he did like to play ball, hockey, and was healthy and strong. The family called him by his middle name, "Jack."[2022] Michael Laderoute was part of a family with a rich military history. His paternal grandfather fought in WW I and his great uncle, John, died in the same war. His uncle, Michael John, was a radio operator on a bomber during World War II who volunteered as a tail gunner in a bombing raid over Germany, was hit with flak, and killed. Laderoute's mother served in the Canadian Woman's Army Corps during World War II, attached to the Signal Corps as a radio operator. Laderoute's cousin, James Connolly, fought in Korea as a member of the Black Watch. Laderoute's brother, Tom, recalls that Michael John was very adventuresome and liked the outdoors. Even at a young age, his bravery was demonstrated. "One time while Jack and I were walking across a field near home, a herd of cattle was in the same field free ranging. A bull charged across the field at us. Ahead of us there was a steep bank where there were lots of young trees growing. Jack grabbed my hand and we ran for the edge of the field. I was afraid and crying and tried to duck behind a small spruce tree. Jack said 'No,' and held me in front of himself. The charging bull was almost on top of us when Jack jumped sideways and pulled me with him behind the tree. The bull had no time to react and stumbled over the bank through the saplings. I was seven years old at the time. Jack was ten. When Jack was 13, he took me camping about five miles back in the woods to a place called Lyons Lake. That night there was a thunderstorm. Lightning struck all around

[2014] Conversations with Jeff Culpepper, 26 June 1991 and 23 July 1984.
[2015] Letter from Gilbert Wall, 09 September 1988.
[2016] Conversation with Gilbert Wall, 26 August 1988.
[2017] Conversation with Richard Blanchfield, 23 July 1990; Blanchfield's Vita forwarded in letter of 17 April 1990.
[2018] Conversation with Richard Blanchfield, 01 October 1988.
[2019] Conversation with Gilbert Wall, 13 May 1989.
[2020] Conversation with Gilbert Wall, 26 August 1988.
[2021] Letter from Gilbert Wall, 09 September 1988.
[2022] Conversation with Thomas Laderoute, 05 May 1991. His middle name is actually "John," but by convention, "John" is called "Jack." Thomas Laderoute claims there were about 1500 men from New Brunswick Province, Canada, and maybe 2600 from the 4 maritime provinces that served in Vietnam. [Ibid.]

us. We got soaked and so did our matches. It was after midnight when Jack walked back three miles to a lumber camp to get dry matches. It was pitch dark, but that didn't stop this brave 13 year-old."[2023]

In his last letter home, dated 22 February 1968, Michael Laderoute wrote: "..We haven't had any mail in four or five days. The place is fogged in and no planes landed. A few today. For here is hoping for mail. Not much else to look forward to except mail and chow and hoping for contact. As soon as the NVA attack and we beat them off the wire, we will go on a sweep through the mountains and jungles to Laos and Cambodia after the remainder of their forces."[2024]

Culpepper recalls PFC Arnold Javier Rivera as "..a real good-looking Mexican-American, kind of quiet, easy-going, soft-spoken, and real friendly," and PFC Walter F. Skinner as a "kind of hippie-type, free-spirit, kinda cocky, Marine from San Francisco."[2025]

Staff Sergeant George McClelland enlisted in the USMC at 17. He was married and raised a family prior to his first Vietnam tour. On 12 August 1967, he celebrated his 25th birthday and soon thereafter deployed for his second Vietnam tour.[2026] When KSCB was attacked on 21 January 1968, igniting the ammo dump which strewed exploded and semi-exploded ordnance concentrated in the area occupied by B/1/26, SSgt McClelland, while walking the lines to check on his Marines, was told by Cpl John N. Tracey that his squad area, near the 106 bunker, was covered with numerous dud rounds. "Even though the shrapnel from the incoming rounds was still heavy, SSgt McClelland did not hesitate [to clear them away] until the entire area was secure from dud rounds."[2027] 2/Lt Don Jacques witnessed him "repeatedly leaving the cover of the trench line to carry rounds a safe distance from the rest of the Marines. His actions throughout the attack inspired the men of the platoon to fight and stand tall at any cost. He heightened the morale to the extent that they began to make a joke of a very bad situation."[2028]

LCpl Frederick Billingham was remembered decades later by Ed Prendergast: "I've had friends since then, but never the best friend that Fred was. Now double his age, I still haven't lived life the way he did! Sometimes I think he knew he'd only be here a short time."[2029]

PFC Michael John Brellenthin was married [on 19 August 1967] three weeks when he departed for Camp Pendleton and then to Vietnam.[2030] His letters written from Vietnam to his wife, Ruth, attempted to reassure her. "I know that everything is going to work out right... There is nothing to fear. I believe now more than ever that a person who thinks enough can shape his own fate.. An intelligent man who uses his training can easily survive. Don't worry about me Ruth... I've decided that I'm going to be an architect when I get out of here.."[2031] After the siege battle erupted: "Things started popping on the 21st of January. It all should be over pretty soon. The way I understand it we could end the war here... Don't worry about me Ruth. I have much waiting for me at home to let anything happen to me here... I got your package today. The one with the rum in it. I'm saving it until all this blows over... I love you boocoo."[2032]

HN John A. Cicala, Jr., was 19 and one year out of high school, working for Chrysler, when his draft notice arrived. He went to the Navy recruiter a week before the deadline and enlisted in the U.S. Navy. Following bootcamp, he trained at Corpsman "A" School for 14 weeks and was at home on leave when the FBI arrived at his family home while they were eating dinner with a warrant for his arrest for draft evasion!"[2033]

The patrol consisted of 41 men including B-3 led by 2/Lt Donald Jacques and SSgt George McClelland second in command. The squad leaders were: in charge of 2nd squad, Cpl Robert E. Matzka and in charge of 3rd Squad, Cpl Kenneth Claire. Lt Jacques accompanied 2nd Squad who was first in the line of march; 3rd Squad was second in the line of march. Attachments included the 81 FO (Cpl Gilbert Wall) and his radioman, one S-2 Scout, and one Kit Carson Scout, 2 machineguns, and one rocket team.[2034]

Not all of Third Platoon went on the patrol. Although LCPL Edward Prendergast, a 60mm mortarman, pleaded to come along, he remained because Lt Jacques decided the 60mm mortars could protect them better from the perimeter lines on KSCB. "Our range was 1400 meters and he joked about definitely not going out that [2023] Letter from Tom Laderoute, undated [but from October, 2000].

---

[2024] Letter from Michael John Laderoute, 22 February 1968 to "Dear Mom and family," sent by Tom Laderoute, 16 November 2000.
[2025] Conversation with Jeff Culpepper, 28 July 1991.
[2026] Information provided by Richard Delotto in letter postmarked 06 July 2004.
[2027] Statement of Cpl John N. Tracey in Bronze Star Medal file of SSgt George McClelland.
[2028] Statement of 2/Lt Donald Jacques in Bronze Star Medal file of SSgt George McClelland.
[2029] Note in card to Earle G. Breeding forwarding a donation to Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.
[2030] Letter of Mrs. Ruth Brellenthin, undated [postmarked 02 October 1986].
[2031] Michael John Brellenthin, letter to his wife, Ruth, dated 11 October 1967.
[2032] Michael John Brellenthin, letter to his wife, Ruth, dated 26 January 1968.
[2033] Robert Pisor, "The Motown Doc," undated essay.
[2034] Comments of HM3 Frank Calzia, HQMC Oral History Tape #2621. Calzia was KIA 05 May 1986.

far."[2035] By now, most Marines, cooped up on the combat base and enduring the daily death of minatory incoming rockets, artillery, and mortars—as well as sniper fire, were more than eager to remove those sources of death, "slay the dragons," and "put a hurt on" that which afflicted them and their buddies! Although Prendergast suggested he carry rocket rounds for the 3.5-inch rocket man (and his friend), LCPL Frederick A. Billingham, (who was short two men), Prendergast's Section Leader, LCPL William M. Woolman, disapproved. "I was the gunner and he wanted me to stay on the guns. My Section Leader was getting ready to rotate home and he sort of had plans for me to be the Section Leader, and didn't want me going out."[2036]

LCPL William David Holliman had been wounded 24 February and did not accompany the patrol; a round had split his helmet and creased his skull.[2037] PFC Jeffrey E. Culpepper was wounded superficially on 13 February and not medevaced. Instead, he received orders on 17 February to attend Infantry Weapons School on Okinawa and departed Khe Sanh with PFC James Hebron on 23 February.[2038]

The mission of the patrol was to locate a NVA 82mm mortar position[2039] supposedly 1200 – 1300 meters from the base perimeter and learn whatever they could. Ronald Ridgeway recalls the mission to check for Bangalore torpedoes, to see if the wire had been cut or damaged, to spot any positions, NVA forward observers, and not to make contact unless it was a FO. It was to sweep around the platoon area and not proceed beyond 1,000 meters of the wire, and to remain within sight of the perimeter.[2040] By now, the NVA had crept close to the base perimeter as part of their Phase II operation. Phase II (10 February – 31 March 1968) involved the encirclement of KSCB to end re-supply overland and eliminate re-supply by air.[2041] In the historical account of the battle of Khe Sanh by the Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense, "After attacking Lang Vay and being unsuccessful in drawing in enemy reinforcements, the Campaign Headquarters decided to surround Ta Con [i.e., KSCB] in order to forced the enemy to send in reinforcements to lift the siege.. The old plan to surround Ta Con was re-organized into an effort to attack the enemy even harder, from surrounding the enemy expanded into a siege; the units in siege were required to construct strong positions.. forces had to be mobile and prepared to attack enemy counter-attackers or those who would land by air... forcing the enemy to become more and more unsettled as the days went on and forcing them to bring in forces [to lift the siege]."[2042]

According to the official NVA History of the 304th Division, the 9th Regiment was ordered to encircle KSCB by the Front Headquarters [B5-T8]. "Before carrying out the mission, cadre from Platoon Commanders on up had discussed and agreed upon the tactical guidelines to be: to stress the political factor, bravery and steadfastness in the encirclement, tying down the airfield so it could not be used for re-supply.. The encirclement of a large American base system was being set forth for the first time. Not only did the US troops not have to go to 'search' and 'destroy' our forces, but we would be face to face, attacking a large American base system."[2043] Prior to the 9th Regiment's move to encircle KSCB, while the 2nd Battalion was moving into regrouping positions, it was hit by 3 B-52 strikes on the night of 6 February, causing nearly 200 casualties while it was along the Hoc Coc Giang Stream. Despite the casualties, the battalion officers argued that "the entire battalion wanted to directly attack the Americans in order to get revenge for their unit."[2044] On 10 February, the 9th and 66th Regiments of the 304th Division together with the 95C and 101D Regiments of the 325C Division and local force troops from Huong Hoa District established 13 positions that encircled KSCB.[2045] "The enemy didn't dare permit the heavy transport aircraft, like the C-130 to land and re-supply Khe Sanh and become a target for our small arms and artillery fire.. This created a shortage of food, ammunition, and an increasing number of wounded and dead that could not be removed and this caused the morale of the troops to suffer.. The American Marine commander at Khe Sanh, LAO-DO [Col Lownds], together with his staff organized continuous counter-attacks in hopes of breaking our encirclement."[2046]

One of the 13 positions, Strong Point #3, was the responsibility of the 8th Company, 2nd Battalion, and was

---

[2035] Edward Prendergast, "Biography," 8 November 1988.

[2036] Conversations with Edward Prendergast, 14 March 1986 and 05 June 1986. The rockets man, LCPL Billingham, was KIA; had Prendergast accompanied the patrol, he too would probably have been KIA.

[2037] Conversation with Jeff Culpepper, 13 July 1984.

[2038] Ibid.

[2039] Comments of HM3 Frank Calzia, USMC Oral History Tape #2621.

[2040] CG MARCORB CAMPEN CA 100244Z/Apr73, Subj: Returnee Press Conference, Sgt Ronald L. Ridgeway.

[2041] Cong Tac Hau Can: Chien Dich Duong 9 Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [Rear Service Operations: 1968 Spring Summer Khe Sanh Route 9 Campaign], Hanoi: General Directorate for Rear Services, 1988, Chapter on "Military Medical Operations, Highway 9/Khe Sanh Front (B5-T8) from December, 1967 to July, 1968," p. 267. Trans. Sedgwick Tourison.

[2042] Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign], Hanoi: Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense, pp. 30, 31. Trans. Sedgwick Tourison.

[2043] Su Doan (Ky Su) (Tap II) [304th Division (Chronology) (Volume II)], Hanoi: People's Army Publishing House, 1990, p. 88. Trans. Sedgwick Tourison divided into three areas. The principle strong point of the position was 600 meters southwest of KSCB's barbed wire perimeter on an unnamed high point opposite Khe Sanh and separated by a dry streambed with banks on each side from where they could clearly see the entire Khe Sanh base area. A secondary strong point 400 meters southwest of the primary strong point was established at Chau Long Chan, and 300 meters southeast of the main strong point was another. "All 3 strong points were like the three legs on a stool and this was one of the most advantageous points of the encirclement. From this group of strong points we dug a communications trench for about 300 meters toward the enemy and at many places it even entered the enemy's barbed wire defenses. From this position 82mm mortars, B40, B41, recoilless rifles, and particularly a 12.7mm heavy machinegun operated by Bui Xuan Chuc created continuous casualties.. on the enemy... The encircling position of the 8th Company, 2nd Battalion, was like a thorn in the enemy's eye. The 8th Company's Strong Point here had 32 weapons of which there were 2 60mm mortars, 3 B41s, and after 10 days of combat 20 men remained and if one adds the fire support detachment, the strength as of the 25th of February, was 39 people."[2047]

[2044] Ibid., p. 90.

[2045] Ibid.

[2046] Ibid., p. 92.

By its proximity to KSCB, the encircling NVA units avoided devastating artillery and awesome B-52 Arc Light strikes that were kept a safe distance from friendly forces (3 KM in the case of Arc Lights). Within and from this sanctuary, NVA gunners continued to harass friendly aircraft as well as KSCB itself. At 1300H on 21 February, the entire GRAY Sector manned by Co B/1/26 (XD850418) came under medium to heavy mortar and rocket fire, approximately 50 rounds of mortars and 10 of 122mm rockets.[2048] Then, late in the morning of 22 February, Co B/1/26 received 20 recoilless rifle rounds, 121 82mm mortar rounds, 15 122mm rockets, and 15 artillery rounds (suspected 130mm), and numerous small arms fire from NVA forces, most of which were in close proximity.[2049]

Of greater alarm was the NVA trench network that was reported to be approaching the KSCB perimeter. The 1/26 CP had received a Spot Report from 26th Marines at 1230H, 16 February from the U.S. Army Advisor to the 37th ARVN Ranger Battalion, Capt Walter A. Gunn, that a platoon-size element of his unit encountered an extensive, well-developed bunker complex in the vicinity of XD851402 capable of supporting a regiment.[2050] On 22 February, Capt Gunn reported that an analysis of reports from his LP and OP elements during the prior 2 days indicated that the NVA forces were constructing a defensive trench network between XD858408 and XD855416 which would support a very large unit in a defensive posture.[2051] On 23 February, 1/Lt John William Dillon led Second Platoon, B/1/26, and followed the general trace of the patrol of B-3 today (25 February) and found nothing unusual. In one day, the trench system had been constructed, in places only 100-200 meters from the perimeter lines manned by B/1/26 and the 37th ARVN Ranger Battalion.[2052] Finally, on 24 February, a Visual Reconnaissance report indicated large trenches, 3-ft. wide, 4-ft. deep and approximately 1000 meters long, sighted from XD848407 to XD855400, parallel to the road with 2 adjoining parallel trenches forming a trench complex. The trenches had numerous off-shoots containing bunkers. The report noted the enemy was trenching from present locations towards KSCB.[2053] To the AOs, the NVA trenches were like a sinister hand reaching towards a prey, ready to grasp: "From the air, these enemy trenches looked like long, thin arms reaching for the wire. In a few cases, they were over 500 meters in length, all dug in one night."[2054]

The Marines of B-3 were unaware of recently-learned intelligence of the trenches constructed in one day. GySgt Patrick E. Duffy (MOS 0239) in the 1/26 CP had gone to the 26th Marines COC the night before to learn current information. "I was told there was nothing out there, just to send them out there to see what was going on. When they got hit and really got chewed up, I ran back up there and said, 'How come? What happened?' And they had aerial photography taken by an AO that showed that position. It was on a Major's desk that night and I didn't get to see him because he was asleep and I didn't get to see it."[2055] Being a Sunday, the 1/26 Battalion staff brief was scheduled for 0930H, but the diamond-shaped patrol[2056] of B-3 departed 0806[2057] and proceeded

---

[2047] Ibid., pp. 92-93.

[2048] 1/26 ComdC Feb 1968, S2/S3 Log, 21 Feb 1968, Ser #37.

[2049] 1/26 ComdC Feb 1968, S2/S3 Log, 22 Feb 1968, Ser #59. The recoilless rifle was at XD856407, the small arms from XD859405, a .50 cal. machinegun at XD859403; enemy troops massed at XD856402; a FO at XD844440, and a mortar site at XD845409. Suppressive friendly fire was returned with 29 HE and 2 WP rounds, 5 rounds of 106mm recoilless rifle, and 5 rounds of 90mm tank.

[2050] 1/26 ComdC Feb 1968, S2/S3 Log, 16 Feb 1968, Ser #13.

[2051] 1/26 ComdC Feb 1968, S2/S3 Log, 22 Feb 1968, Ser #75.

[2052] Letter of Maj Kenneth W. Pipes, undated, in HQMC, HistDiv, Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file.

[2053] 3rd MarDiv COC 241635Z/Feb 1968, Daily VR Rpt, in III MAF COC Journal & File, 24/25Feb68, #289.

[2054] Comments of LtCol W.J. White, HistDiv, HQMC, Khe Sanh Monograph File.

[2055] Conversation with Patrick E. Duffy, 10 April 1990. Duffy died in 1999.

[2056] 26Mar 251114H/Feb68, SPECAT Exclusive from Col Lownds to MGen Tompkins in III MAF CPC SPECAT Exclusives #30. Interview of James B. Wilkinson by John Wright, 14 July 1989 (also refers to it as "the diamond-shaped patrol"). While the patrol has been variously labeled, "The Doomed Patrol," "The Lost Patrol," the "Jacques Patrol," and so on, designation as "Diamond-shaped patrol" apparently was the original designation.

through the trash pit. They immediately noticed a trench built by the NVA that half-encircled the trash pit and went down the face of a small hill, across a river, and up the face of another small hill. "We proceeded down this trench for approximately 30 meters, then decided to move out of the trench and continue our patrol as planned. We moved down the slight side of this small hill into and across a small creek and across an open slope which led up to a heavy tree line. When we reached this tree line we were in a single column and spread out very well, and we stopped, got down on one knee, and a couple of fire teams were moved up to the front."[2058] PFC Calvin E. Bright, running point[2059] was "..scarred to death!"[2060] PFC Clayton Theyerl told Bright, "This is your first patrol and I think you and I ought to switch." Bright recalls, "Probably 20 minutes later he was laying on the ground [dead] and I was still standing. I think if it wasn't for him, I'd be in his position and he'd be in mine right now."[2061] By 0831, B3 was at XD849414 and by 0840 at XD847416.[2062] Just as the NVA's contact with KSCB was something they could not release hold of, so also the intriguing trench became something B3 couldn't release. Like killing electricity from holding a wire and being unable to release that which kills, imprisoning compulsions or memories of traumatic experiences that will not disappear from the psyche, evil from which one can't let go that enslaves, imprisons, and kills, so also the fascinating evil invited B3 to proceed.

The NVA's 304th Division's history records "Early in the morning of 25 February, the enemy sent two companies of Marines and a company of Vietnamese who took advantage of the fog to come along the dry stream bed, directly in front of Strong Point Number 3... At 0850, the lead elements on the left encountered two of our troops guarding the forward area. The enemy opened fire and these two were killed on the spot, and it was at that point that we first discovered the enemy... Platoon Leader Nguyen Quoc Thang, upon observing many US troops advancing, motivated the troops and assigned men missions and waited for the enemy to approach closer before opening fire."[2063]

As the patrol advanced to the tree line, 3 North Vietnamese soldiers dressed in camouflaged utilities and helmets were spotted at 0845H running along the road.[2064] Lt Jacques moved up along with HM3 Calzia, and the NVA soldiers turned off the road and disappeared after the Marines shot at them. Jacques requested permission to attempt capture of a live prisoner. POWs are always an intelligence prize since NVA soldiers almost always willingly supplied vital information on units present, morale, weapons carried, disposition and location of headquarters and rear supply areas, future planned actions, etc. BRAVO-6, Captain Kenneth Pipes, thinking they were on the road that led from the trash dump, not the parallel road further to the west that was the usual road used by Marine vehicles—Felix Poilane's private plantation road, told them to be extremely careful not to get sucked into an ambush, a tactic as old as warfare itself and one which LtCol Wilkinson had repeatedly cautioned in battalion staff and officer briefings during the previous months, but if they could make a capture, to do so. The B3 patrol was, however, much further out than they were supposed to be and thought to be by Captain Pipes; Captain Pipes assumed they were near the base defensive perimeter, on the road closest to the KSCB. They were, in fact, about 600 – 700 meters from the KSCB.[2065] For some reason—disorientation and confusion by Lt Jacques (who had complained in his letters home of little sleep), the shrouding fog, negligence of some radio operator, mis-interpretation of check points, being too aggressive, not being able to restrain further examination of the trench system which fascinated and attracted, the desire to capture a live POW—the patrol was not where they were assumed to be by those in the command bunkers at KSCB. The Kit Carson Scout accompanying the patrol warned that it was a trap.[2066] and HM3 John A. Cicala, knowing it was an ambush, said, "Are you crazy?"[2067] Cautiously, Lt Jacques moved his patrol across the access road [the Poilane road] and stepped into the brush.

CPL Steven Wiese's squad was walking point as the Vietnamese jumped up and ran towards the Marines and then dashed into a treeline. "Jacques told me to take my

---

[2057] 1/26 ComdC Feb68, S2/S3 Log, 25 February 1968, Ser #7.

[2058] Statement of HM3 Frank Calzia, cited. Cpl Gilbert Wall's account corresponding in all details with Calzia's adds that the trench was about 2 – 3 feet deep and about a foot wide, just wide enough for an American Marine to stand sideways up to his waist, but through which the NVA would be able to run. [Conversation with Gilbert Wall, 26 August 1988].

[2059] Conversation with Calvin E. Bright, 01 August 1988.

[2060] Ibid.

[2061] Calvin E. Bright, comments at Khe Sanh reunion, 13 July 1989, printed in Khe Sanh Veteran, Issue #9 (Summer 1989), p. 6.

[2062] Ibid., Ser #11 and 13.

[2063] 304th Division history, op. cit., p. 93. The official NVA history's exaggeration of the American strength not only includes one platoon suddenly being 2 companies, but also the one Kit Carson scout suddenly becoming "a company of Vietnamese!" The basis of the NVA estimate of 2 US companies may lie in the dispatching of B1 once the contact began. However, B1 did not enter the battle scene but was dispatched to assist WIAs and removal of KIAs.

[2064] 1/26 ComdC Feb 1968, S2/S3 Log, 25 February 1968, Ser #47.

[2065] 26Mar 251114H, cited.

[2066] Comments of HM3 Frank Calzia, USMC Oral History Tape #2621.

[2067] Conversation with John A. Cicala, 22 March 1987.

first team and go investigate, and I told him he was out of his fricking mind. This is an ambush! This was my second tour in Vietnam, and I'd been there for almost 16 months. It was in an open area, so there's no way in the world that these guys would jump out in the road and run in our direction, then dive off in the treeline, other than they're trying to suck us over to there. I told him I wouldn't take my squad. It was suicide. So he got pissed off and told me I was relieved of command. He took my first team leader and told him to take the squad and check it out. I remember him saying, 'Sir, with all due respect, if Wiese isn't going, I'm not going either.' So at that point, he told us to 'take a knee.' He was pissed. He told me 'to take a knee,' and I was on report."[2068]

From his position, Cpl Wall noticed the Marines in front of him "..were talking fast and loud. They looked confused. Lt Jacques ended the confusion by shouting 'Let's go get them' while his pistol was in the air and his hand was forward in the charge manner. Then he turned and looked at me and we both smiled at the same time. It was like the same thought went through our minds: 'This is what we want.' We started moving after them and the fire began."[2069]

Suddenly, the NVA opened up with heavy automatic weapons and machinegun fire. As soon as the patrol crossed the road and stepped into the brush at XD847408 they were fired upon with heavy automatic weapons and machinegun fire from fortified positions in trenches in two tree-lines, one running north-south, the other east-west, forming a L-shaped ambush at XD849409.[2070]

"He [Jacques] took the Platoon, made a 90-degree turn, right into the treeline, and started sweeping into the treeline. All of a sudden there was just a huge roar of gunfire. There's no question the reason I survived and most of the guys in my squad survived is because we were at the very left end of this line and it put us out of the main killing zone."[2071]

By 0915H, B-3 was in contact with NVA at XD849409, receiving heavy automatic weapons fire; B-3's unit leaders were the first hit.[2072] PFC Alexander Tretiakoff, a rifleman, suddenly found himself face to face with a NVA soldier. "I wanted to shoot him, but my rifle wouldn't shoot. So I.. took the magazine out and throwed it away and put another one in. To my right, LCPL [Richard W.] McKenzie was shot. The Lieutenant crawled up to him and took his weapon. The enemy was firing from my right and from my left."[2073] Sgt Patrick J. Fitch, a radio operator with B/1/26, upon hearing they were in a fire fight, "..left the command bunker to see where, precisely, they were, and they were almost out of sight. They were far beyond where they were supposed to be."[2074]

Lt Jacques immediately dispatched Cpl Claire's 3rd Squad accompanied by the Platoon Sergeant, SSgt George McClelland, along with one of the machineguns, to move to the right and hook around the rear of the NVA position and remove the flanking action. The maneuver might have succeeded, but Cpl Claire did not hook sufficiently far enough to the west before turning back in on the NVA positions. Instead of hitting the tender flank, the squad walked into more blistering frontal fire.

The NVA history records: "With strong fire power and experienced troops, the first fire left enemy [American] bodies at the strong point. Light machine-gunner Nguyen Van Lang fired off two series of rounds and eliminated 19 of the enemy. The Americans were tall and big and because they were so slow, many died. However those who remained alive continued the attack. Now they became the target for our mortar fire which fired into the troops and the counter-attack by the two companies of Americans... We only began to fire when the enemy was about 20 meters from our Combat Trench #1. Having killed a number, but with the enemy having a large force and having entered our position, they occupied a portion of the combat trench. They intended to use our trench to continue the attack. But because the Americans were so big and because they carried so much equipment, in a trench of ours that was so narrow, they could not move easily and in some cases were forced out of the trench. In the fact of this situation, the company sent Comrade The's squad to move in from the south and the squad of Comrade Chuc to move along the communications trench attacking from the north. Being attacked unexpectedly on their flanks by two squads, the [American] commander [Lt Jacques] and the radio operator were eliminated."[2075]

PFC Edward C. Rayburn, next to CPL Claire, was shot in his jaw and watched as several others were hit, kncluding Claire, who grabbed as many men as he could and pulled them into the trenchline. Claire continued firing for about an hour from the trench and was again hit a second and a third time, killing him.[2076]

Initially, the Marines had fire superiority. HM3 Calzia noticed from his position with 2nd Squad that the

---

[2068] Conversation with Steven Wiese, 17 March 2005. The phrase "take a knee" is explained by Wiese: "Like, kneel down, sit down, in other words. Basically he told me to fall in the back of the platoon, and then he would talk to me later for disobeying a direct order."

[2069] Letter from Gilbert Wall, 09 September 1988.

[2070] 1/26 ComdC Feb68, S2/S3 Log 25 February 1958, Summary.

[2071] Conversation with Steven Siese, 17 March 2005.

[2072] Ibid., Ser #4., Ser #49 and Summary of Period's Action.

[2073] Comments of PFC Alexander Tretiakoff, USMC Oral History Tape #2621.

[2074] Comments of Sgt P.J. Fitch, USMC Oral History Tape #2498.

[2075] Su Doan 304, op. cit., p. 94.

[2076] Conversation with Richard Claire, 25 June 2004. Rayburn had visited the Claire family just before he committed suicide and reported the details of Claire's last moments.

Corpsman with the 3rd Squad had been wounded and was not on the road. "When I went down to get him, I noticed that the 3rd Squad [Cpl Claire's], from all indications, had been wiped out. There was no one left. He [the Corpsman, Doc John A. Cicala] was the only person left, and he was wounded."[2077] Sgt Fitch, radioman with B/1/26, remembers B3 lost one fire team and sent out a squad to envelop to the left which was in turn enveloped, and one of these men were never again seen alive.[2078]

HN John A. Cicala, the wounded Corpsman, had accompanied 3rd squad which charged into a mouth of a crescent of bunkers and were immediately cut down by fire from three sides. Doc Cicala treated one dying Marine, LCPL Jerry Dodson. "I ran over to him and I took care of him. He had caught a round through his left eye. Believe me; I'll never forget it. It came out the side of his head, but he was still conscious. There was nothing I could do. I put a dressing on him and he told me—it totally freeked me out—but the last thing he said to me was, 'Doc, make sure I got my weapon.' I gave him his piece back and I laid a couple of clips by him."[2079] and then dashed to another who cried, "Corpsman!" A NVA soldier fired and hit Cicala. The round struck his taped neck chain that included his dog tags, a large St. Christopher medal, a GI can opener, and pushed everything into his windpipe. Another round ripped into his flak jacket, tore through his chest and right lung. He fell backwards and, to his horror, realized he had one of those dreaded sucking chest wounds. The NVA attempted to kill him with a grenade which landed between the Doc's legs and blew away his kneecap, shredded his thighs and calves, and tore into his groin. Despite this, Cicala lived, and covered his sucking chest wound with cellophane torn from a cigarette pack. He began crawling towards the KSCB perimeter.[2080]

PFC Ronald Ridgeway recalls the action in vivid detail: As the Marines pursued the 2 NVA, they ran through a three line into a Montagnard village [Clong Sareh] and an adjacent field that had been ploughed by the Montagnards. The field was bare and approximately 50 by 50 meters. They came upon a newly-dug trench—the dirt was fresh—approximately 6 ft. long and 4 ft. deep into which the Corpsman, Lt Jacques, radioman, and SSgt McClelland moved for protection. SSgt McClelland, back inside the tree line, told Cpl Claire to get his squad up and moving. While one squad occupied the trench to provide a base of fire, CPL Claire stood in the middle of the field and directed the squad to move in fire team rushes through the barren field towards a series of interconnecting trenches to their front.[2081] When Rayburn didn't move, Claire turned around and said, "Rayburn, what's the matter with you? Get up and move! Are you hit?" Rayburn replied, "No, I'm just laying here for my health."[2082] "We began our fire team maneuvers across the field, receiving 2 or 3 rounds here and there. Off to our front we could see a trench running the full length of the field. The trench was approximately.. 50 – 60 meters long curving off to our left, back around the end of the field, against waist-high shrubbery. We couldn't see anyone as we started across. We picked up fire until we had just a full hail of fire coming in on us. We were caught in the open about half way out, and we kept our assaults up.. The first man hit was to my left. The Corpsman came and got him when he started screaming.. Another man was wounded off further to my left."[2083] "When we assaulted, Claire was standing up in the middle of this field telling us to move, hollering and ducking bullets. He told us.. to just get up and run, forget maneuvers, that we were to try to get to the trench. So we got up and ran, three of us."[2084] The three were PFC Ridgeway, PFC Bruder, and LCpl Geller.[2085] In a later personal conversation, Ridgeway noted there were actually two fire teams of 3 each for a total of 6 that made it to the trench and that they had started with fire team rushes because it was a plowed-up field.[2086]

Once they got into the trench, Ridgeway, Bruder, and Geller moved through the trench under cover of the machinegun fire of the other fire team, until they arrived at another small trench with a small bend. As they advanced, a grenade exploded and they returned to their initial trench, engaging in an exchange of tossing grenades.[2087] LCPL Geller stood up, attempting to locate the rest of the squad when a round was fired creasing Geller's forehead and knocking him back into the trench. "Geller rolled back into the trench and said, 'Everybody's dead.

[2077] Comments of Calzia, Tape #2621, cited.
[2078] Comments of Fitch, Tape #2498, cited.
[2079] Conversation with John Cicala, 22 March 1987.
[2080] Pisor, "The Motown Doc," cited. Despite wounds in the groin area, Doc Cicala was able to father a child.
[2081] CG MARCORB CAMPEN CA 100244/Apr73, Subj: Returnee Press Conference (Sgt. Ronald L. Ridgeway); Asst Chief of Staff, G-2, report AO2A-BFH-bfh, 3461 of 1 May 1973, Subj: Debriefing Summary, case of Sergeant Ronald L. Ridgeway, USMC, with appended FMFTMCMDR FIRST CIT I MAF CAMPEN CA 290300Z/Mar73, Daily Summary 005 for 23 Mar 73, debrief of Sgt Ronald L. Ridgeway; I MAF CAMPEN CA 200300Z/Mar73 to CMC, Subj: Message Summary Homecoming Marine; 1st Counterintelligence Team Report 16-9X-73, Operation Homecoming-Marine detailed report debrief of R. L. Ridgeway, Sgt, USMC; CMC letter AI2A-THM-bfh, 3461, 17 July 1973, Subj: Homecoming Marine Debriefing Report, case of Sergeant Ronald L. Ridgeway, USMC.
[2082] CMC Report, cited.
[2083] CG MARCORB CAMPEN CA 100244/Apr73, cited.
[2084] CMC report, cited.
[2085] FMFTMCMDR FIRST CIT I MAF CAMPEN CA msg, cited.
[2086] Conversation with Ronald Ridgeway, 05 July 1991.
[2087] CMC report, cited.

Everybody behind us is dead. There's nobody left alive. What are we going to do?' We had been down below ground level for awhile and the NVA had taken it for granted that all of us were dead."[2088] Ridgeway and Geller stood up and, spotting four NVA approaching them, Ridgeway fired a burst from his M-16 killing 2 and forcing the other 2 to cover while Geller killed one with his .45 pistol. After Ridgeway and Geller jumped back into the trench, Bruder stood up catching a round that came through the dirt in the side of the trench and penetrated his chest, instantly killing him.[2089]

Geller, the Fire Team Leader, told Ridgeway they had to move. "We had to try to get back inside the perimeter because there was nobody left but us. He got out and took off running back across the field. At first I got stuck in the trench because it was so small with my pack on. I pulled loose, got out, and started back out across the field."[2090] Geller came upon a black Marine, PFC Willy Ruff, who had a broken arm and was lying on his back. Geller knelt beside Ruff and was hit on the right side of his face. The round took out the whole left side. "He was spitting teeth all over the place. Just as I ducked, another round came from the back and I got hit in the shoulder. I dropped down to the ground and just laid there."[2091] Ridgeway checked Geller, finding him alive but in shock. The three (Ridgeway, Ruff, and Geller) decided to wait for a reactionary force and to play dead until dark and then try to make it to safety.[2092] "We were surrounded by NVA, so we decided to stay where we were. We laid there talking."[2093]

While this was happening, Lt Jacques and Cpl Wall moved to the left of a little access road and became pinned down. Cpl Wall moved away from Lt Jacques and managed to reach a tree where he finally became pinned down and could move no further. "We were right in front of their trenches and bunkers. The air was filled with screaming, shouting, open fire, and blood." It was fortunate that Cpl Wall's rifle jammed: "My jammed rifle probably saved my life, because it would jam about every three times [I shot it], and I would get back and [then] they [the NVA] would just chew up the tree."[2094] As Cpl Wall took out his map to call in fire missions from the 81s, he realized that trees obstructed his sight of the other Marine squad and he feared calling a mission that was too close. While he could hear the initial registration round exploding, he was unable to see where it struck. He couldn't move, due to intense fire, until another Marine gave him covering fire. As he moved he noticed wounded screaming for help everywhere—as well as NVA: "I couldn't believe how many of them were there. I threw a grenade in their trench and killed 3, but they filled the spot in no time. The more we killed and got killed, the more they came. The screaming and shouting was so loud you couldn't hear your own voice. By this time I was terrified and could see the deep trouble we were in clearly. We just didn't have enough men to match their fire power."[2095]

Meanwhile, 2nd Squad under the leadership of Cpl Robert E. Matzka was on the left flank, further down the road. Cpl Matzka was seen exposing himself to enemy fire with no regard for his own safety as shrapnel and heavy machinegun and small arms fire showered the area, going from man to man to direct fire and encourage them.[2096] Observing one of his comrades fall mortally wounded while attacking a NVA machinegun, PFC Calvin E. Bright, ignoring the intense NVA fire, crawled to within a few meters of the hostile position to retrieve his fallen comrade and move him to a covered position.[2097]

Although HM3 Calzia (with those in 2nd Squad) moved to the area where 3rd Squad was slaughtered and assumed all were killed, one of those in Claire's squad was still alive. PFC Edward C. Rayburn, the first one in 3rd Squad to be hit, had his jaw shot off. Cpl Claire placed him in a trench from which Rayburn, in a state of physical (but not mental) shock witnessed the entire sequence as he observed his entire squad being killed in minute detail. Writing from a hospital shortly after the action, he told Captain Pipes: "I saw and heard them die for three hours."[2098] PFC Thomas A. Detrick was part of the machine-gun crew that accompanied 3rd Squad. When the gunner was hit, Detrick picked up the weapon and was firing when he also was hit. "I was on the verge of blacking out, then I yelled 'machine gunner out of action, replacement up' and crawled into a crater and passed out. When I came to, a Marine [PFC Rayburn] had joined me and he had his lower jaw blown off. This Marine and I spent the next several hours in agony and hell. We came to realize that either the patrol had been wiped out, or had been pulled back."[2099]

[2088] CG MARCORB CAMPEN CA 100244/Apr73, cited.
[2089] 1st CIT Report 16-9X-73, cited.
[2090] CG MARCORB CAMPEN CA 100244Z/Apr73, cited.
[2091] CMC Report, cited.
[2092] FMFTMCMDR FIRST CIT I MAF CAMPEN CA msg, cited; 1st CIT Report 16-9X-73, cited; CG MARCORB CAMPEN CA 100244Z/Apr73, cited.
[2093] CG MARCORB CAMPEN CA 100244Z/Apr73, cited.
[2094] Conversation with Gilbert Wall, 26 August 1988; Letter of Gilbert Wall, 09 September 1988.
[2095] Ibid.
[2096] Bronze Star Medal Citation, Cpl Robert E.Matzka.
[2097] Bronze Star Medal Citation, PFC Calvin Edward Bright.
[2098] Letter of PFC E.C. Rayburn to Captain Kenneth Pipes, undated (ca. Mar or Apr 1968). Ed Rayburn visited the Claire family around 1970 and related the battle in detail. He watched Ken Claire shot three times in a hour or so of battle. [Conversation with Richard Claire, 30 January 1987; Letter of Richard Claire printed in Khe Sanh Veteran, Vol. I (Fall, 1992), p. 15.
[2099] Letter of PFC Thomas A. Detrick to Captain Pipes, undated [ca. March or April 1968].

Cpl Wall, moving back to KSCB, heard a wounded Marine by a tree. "He was screaming at me, hollering, 'Marine, Marine, help me!' So I ran back to get him and two other Marines came running, and they took him. They gave me his rifle because mine was jammed and I had already thrown my rifle away and had taken the dead Marine's rifle. They gave me his rifle, and I turned around and was using both rifles, just shooting them both. Marines in front of us were feeling a little relief because of getting closer to the base. Then they ran into another ambush as they entered the tree line. We were under their fire again.. Bullets were flying all over the place. I thought of calling a fire mission and laid on my stomach to get the map and realized that I had lost it, maybe when I was carrying the wounded Marine. Anyway, the fire mission was out of the question. Bullets were cutting up the big banana leaves above my head to pieces. Everyone was lying there dead or wounded, and there was no time to be scared of death."[2100]

Next to Wall, a Marine who was shot in the chest was moaning, obviously in deep pain. Wall placed a bandage on his chest, but he was bleeding too profusely. He was dying. Then Wall came upon Lt Jacques. When he attempted to put a field dressing, "all the blood went through the bandage and ran down my fingers.. I couldn't do anything to stop the bleeding. All this time he was trying to talk to me, but I couldn't understand him."[2101] At this point, Wall was hit by NVA fire "on my flak jacket on the shoulder and knocked me on my ass, and the other one went between my arm and my ribs and left a hole in my sleeve."[2102]

Doc Cicala had been with Lt Jacques when he was hit. "When I was wounded, Jacques come running by me. I was just laying there. The grenade had just gone off, and I was stunned. He came by me and said, 'We got to get out of here!' He said, 'Get out of here the best way you can. We're getting wiped out.' I just started crawling, left my rifle and just had my .45 with me. As I was going back, I heard him. I looked over and he stood up for some ungodly reason, and that's when he got it. He got hit, I crawled over to him. He caught it right across his femoral arteries, and he was dead within minutes. There was nothing that could be done. It looked like he got hit with machinegun fire and it caught him just below the groin area. It severed both arteries.[2103]

Beginning at 1005H, KSCB came under heavy rocket, mortar, and artillery fire.[2104] By 1800H, KSCB had received approximately 350 rounds, well-directed, from several positions around KSCB and aircraft in support received intense small arms, automatic weapons, and anti-aircraft fire from numerous sites circling the base. Casualties from this fire included 3 KIA, 24 WIA (evacuated) and 17 WIA (minor).[2105] The G-2 of III MAF, Col Kenneth J. Houghton, visited KSCB amid this incoming, and at his FMFPAC Debrief three days later stated: "I'm probably the only Colonel in the Marine Corps that got a 100-gun salute on landing. No 21-gun salute for me!.. We always get fired at. They wait until the planes land and then the mortars fire. They are just zeroed in on the runway and they follow you right down the runway. It's a right interesting trip if you want to make it!"[2106]

When B3 made contact, Capt Kenneth Pipes realized that, for whatever reason, Lt Jacques and his patrol had veered several hundred meters from his assigned patrol route. Capt Pipes requested permission from battalion [1/26] to deploy the First Platoon as a reaction force, an assignment B1 had received the previous night. They were ready. The request was granted. "Within minutes, the First Platoon, commanded by 2/Lt Peter Weise, was moving out the wire between FOB-3 and the Gray Sector. As they reached the access road to Route 9, they were subjected to extremely heavy small arms, RPG, mortar, and machine-gun fire. They were unable to advance, but were able to maintain their position."[2107] Pipes then requested assistance from the tanks, which was approved, and the tanks provided excellent fire power.

B-1, manning the south-east perimeter near FOB-3, plus one squad from B-2[2108] moved out of Gate 42 at 1115H with its 1st and 2nd squads.[2109] PFC Donald E. White, Point, moved the patrol out to the access road and moved parallel to it for about 300 meters when it was immediately pinned down by two machineguns approx. 600 meters from Bunker #42 (XD846416) along with mortar fire. LCpl George William Jayne went looking for a radio and found the radioman, the squad leader, and the corpsman killed along with 3 MIA. "We were separated from Lt Weise and the rest of the platoon, and I just felt like we needed to have a radio. I figured he [the radioman] must have been wounded and started to crawl back, and ran into part of Delta Company which came out also. I led them back to where we had been. By the time we got there, there was nobody [2100] Conversation and letter from Gilbert Wall, cited.

---

[2101] Ibid.
[2102] Ibid.
[2103] Conversation with John Cicala, 22 March 1987.
[2104] III MAF COC 252317Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #466, Para 4.C.
[2105] 3rd MarDiv COC 260105ZFeb68,Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #467 in III MAF COC Journal and File, #190. By 0900H, 26 Feb, the casualty count from the 350 incoming rounds had caused 3 KIA, 52 WIA (32 evacuated), 2 UH-1E destroyed, 2 CH-46 damaged, and the runway's condition was poor. [III MAF COC 260443Z/Feb68, Daily Report on Khe Sanh for period ending 260900H Feb68, in III MAF COC Journal and File, #55.
[2106] Debrief of Col. Kenneth J. Houghton, USMC Oral History Tape #2528.
[2107] Maj K.W. Pipes letter, cited.
[2108] 1/26 ComdC Feb68, S2/S3 Log, 25 February 1968, Ser #47.
[2109] Ibid., Ser #51.

there. People had started to pull back, and so we started to pull back."[2110]

The Corpsman, HN Lloyd W. Moore had fearlessly moved through the heavy barrage of fire to provide medical aid to the seriously wounded and saved the lives of at least 3 Marines. As he was moving to a fourth wounded Marine, an incoming mortar round took his life.[2111] One of those he rescued, LCpl Johnny F. Bellina, had been next to a buddy who was shot through the forearm—"just like a paper punch"—while Bellina rolled on his right side with his left leg sticking up in the air. A NVA shot him across his leg. "I saw the muzzle flashes keep shooting and I put a couple of magazines in that [position] about 100 yards off. I stopped him. He didn't shoot anymore. I rolled down in a ditch and I was bleeding so bad I thought I was going to pass out. I thought they'd run up and bayonet me or something. I just laid and a corpsman got out to me, gave me 4 or 5 morphine syrettes in the leg. He threw me across his shoulders and carried me back."[2112]

Capt Pipes then requested deployment of another line company to break the NVA ambush and blocking positions and to recover the wounded and dead. "The request was denied. I was at first extremely bitter at this decision, however reflections indicated that it was a wise one."[2113] 1/Lt William F. Smith, an artillery FO recalls that within the 1/26 there was "a lot of fighting, a lot of recriminations, a lot of bad things said; everybody was at each other's throats. It was total confusion and it took a long time to get it unscrewed. It was even a question of who went and was actually on the patrol... We couldn't give any close support or direct support because we still didn't know exactly where they were. We didn't really know until we started to get some word from the patrol itself that they had crossed the 'Brown Line,' which was code for the [access] road. There were two roads; which road did they cross? It was totally confused. Then we had to figure out not only which road they crossed, but where were they along the road. We really didn't know. Everything was going real fast. Hours went by in seconds, it seemed. Then the stragglers started to come in. It was wild! It was so wild you had to get out of there... Everybody was at a loss for what to do. Half the people wanted to send out a heavy relief force, but we were under orders not to run any combat patrols out of the base at that time. Everybody wanted blood, and at that time I think we would have very hastily run a battalion minus out there and gotten really in shit.. gone piecemeal to our oblivion."[2114]

LtCol James B. Wilkinson rapidly thought: Do I send a squad or are we going to send a company? Apparently, Delta Company, 1/26, was ready to go, to relieve and reinforce the two platoons.[2115] "It was the most difficult decision a commander has to make, and the decision I made was: we would not send out the force or go to the aid of those Marines. Now that violates all the Marine principles that I was taught from my first day at Parris Island in 1948. When a Marine gets in trouble, you go out and help him and bring him back. My decision was based on the fact that the casualties had been inflicted rapidly. The Marines went into a killing zone and were either killed or seriously wounded. Then, the history of the Vietnamese War was filled with [instances in which] you get a squad in trouble, you send out a platoon; the platoon gets in trouble, you send out a company; you send out another company. Before long night falls and you've got half a battalion out in a very tenuous position. My mission was to defend Khe Sanh Combat Base. I was thin. That's why I did not send aid to the Bravo Company patrol."[2116]

In a SPECAT EXCLUSIVE message from Colonel Lownds to Major General Tompkins [CG, 3rd MarDiv], Colonel Lownds reported, "Due to difficulty in interviewing members of Bravo 3 it is difficult to determine status of 25 MIAs. However, it is surmised a considerable number were hit in the initial ambush. Naturally it is my desire to recover the 25 MIAs but am sure it would take a minimum of two companies and probably a battalion which as you know I can not afford to use at this time."[2117]

The agony of the commanders was not only the decision not to reinforce, but also the decision to bomb the area of contact. "Heavy suppressive fire was placed on the ambush site and suspected NVA mortar positions. These fires, along with our own friendly .50 cal, 106RR and 60mm mortars undoubtedly caused friendly casualties, but did, I feel, enable both platoons to break contact and return. The airborne controllers controlled airstrikes into the area consisting of rockets and napalm."[2118] Ordnance expended into the trench system for the period 251300H – 260600H included: 3 rounds of 60mm mortars, 235 rounds of 81mm mortars, 47 rounds of 4.2-in. mortars, 11 rounds of 106mm RR, 25 rounds of 105mm howitzer, 75 rounds of 175mm, 2 rounds of 90mm tank, and in addition there were 35 CAS [Close Air Support] missions flown by the Air Force and 13 TPQ-10 flights expending 210 DELTA-2s (500-lb. bombs) and 8 DELTA-

---

[2110] Conversation with G. William Jayne, 01 Oct 1988.
[2111] CG, 3rd MarDiv 021051Z/Sep68 to CG, FMFPAC, in Bronze Star Medal file (post) of HN Lloyd W. Moore.
[2112] Conversation with Johnny Bellina, 08 February 1987.
[2113] Letter of Maj K.W. Pipes, cited.
[2114] Conversation with William Smith, 16 March 1985.
[2115] Comments of Sgt Patrick J. Fitch, USMC Oral History Tape #2498. Sgt Fitch was a radio operator with B/1/26 at the time.
[2116] Interview of James B. Wilkinson by John Wright, 14 July 1989.
[2117] 26Mar 251114Z/Feb68, in III MAF SPECAT EXCLUSIVE file #30.
[2118] Maj K.W. Pipes letter, undated, cited.

26s (M-117 750-lb bomb with a 1-second delay enabling it to penetrate 16-ft. before detonation).[2119]

By noon the battle broke.[2120] 1/Lt Thomas F. O'Toole, Jr., flying as an AO for G-2, 3rd Marine Division (Radio call sign SOUTHERN OSCAR) observed and reported the trench extending due north to within 30 meters of the KSCB perimeter. The new trench was an extension of a trench network in the vicinity of XD848404 to XD850405 and represented approx. 700 meters extension in less than 24 hours. The new trench was 2-ft. wide and approx. 4-ft. deep and terminated in a trench approx. 50 meters long running parallel to the KSCB wire. A large trench complex was observed containing 2 parallel extensions of trench network running northwest to within 15 meters of the KSCB wire at XD854417 and containing 50 – 100 NVA soldiers.[2121]

O'Toole had other, sadder, things to report: 15 or 20 Marines near the trenchline at XD853409 to XD854409, bodies in helmets and flak jackets. Three of the bodies were lying together as if a machinegun crew [perhaps Ridgeway, Ruff, and Geller]. One man was bandaged on chest and another lying close by, as if a corpsman, giving aid. On the second pass, the AO received fire from nearby and from one figure who stood up from among the bodies, probably a NVA who was searching the bodies and had dropped to the ground to avoid detection. The bodies were in the center of the trench complex, in open area.[2122]

O'Toole accompanied a Marine Birddog piloted by John L. Clark of VMO-6, sat right over that platoon when it got wiped out.[2123] The next day, 26 February, as he landed he was met by a Colonel from the Division staff and led into the CG's office where a stenographer took down his statement on one of those little courtroom machines:

"There were about 15 Marines in the trench trying to make it back and although I couldn't see it, I thought they were taking fire because the rear man was shooting to the rear. I informed the 26th Marines and asked what was going on. They said they had a unit out there that had made contact. They had lost communication with them. I told them I had at least 15 of them about 100 meters outside the wire, and I was worried that the extension [of the trench system], which went parallel to the perimeter, would be a NVA ambush... We went back to the area of the bunker complex and in the middle of a field surrounded on all sides by the trenches.. there appeared to be 15 to 20 Marine bodies. I advised the pilot and we turned around and I did identify them as Marine bodies because of the flak jackets, helmets. Three men lay together as if they had been a machinegun crew. One man was bandaged on the chest while another may lay beside him as if he were a corpsman. I didn't get a good look, so we came around again. This time a figure from among the bodies stood up and fired at us, and with that the entire trench line opened up and we received three hits on the aircraft. The grids would be approximately XD853-854409. The pilot said that they were probably NVA trying to trick us, but I told him at that time that maybe [while] all weren't Marines, I was thoroughly convinced that the majority were... Later in the afternoon we were shot out of the area by .50 caliber machine guns from Hill 471 to the south [and] we could not fly over that area any further.. We ran air strikes.. on an area about 600 meters south of where the bodies were, trying to hit the ville at XD851404 and the ville at XD848403 when a yellow smoke came out of the area where we had seen the bodies. We could not go out and check. I called 26th Marines. They said they had no friendlies further than 200 meters from the perimeter. We continued the air strike around that position."[2124]

Survivors of B-3 trickled back to the base throughout the afternoon and night through an open area that afforded no cover. Those who returned did so singly—Doc Cicala, Ed Rayburn, Johnny Bellina, Thomas Detrick—and could say little. "They didn't know what was going on. They were all shell-shocked. For some of them, it was their first fire-fight. You'd ask them what happened and they'd just say, 'I got knocked out;' 'a gre-

---

[2119] 3rd MarDiv COC 260741Z/Feb68, Spot Rpt #99, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 26/27 Feb 1968 #232.

[2120] III MAF COC 260443Z/Feb68, Daily Report on Khe Sanh for Period ending 260900H Feb 68, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 26/27 Feb 1968, #55.

[2121] 3rd MarDiv COC 250905Z/Feb68, Enemy Trenches at KSCB Perimeter, in III MAF COC Journal and File 25/26 Feb 1968, #150; also filed in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc File, Feb 1968, Encl (54). On 26 February, an IPIR [Initial Photographic Interpretation Report] based on a photo run over the area disclosed: (1) A trench system oriented NE/SW at XD855400, XD850414, XD855405, and XD857404; (2) A trench system with numerous supplies at XD856395, XD854385, XD854393, and XD856383; (3) 4 anti-aircraft/automatic weapons positions, 2 possibly occupied, at XD846397; (4) 4 occupied anti-aircraft/automatic weapons positions at XD849398, (5) a trench system in circular pattern and 5 bunkers at XD820338 [this is about 1200 meters south of Hill 552]. [FMAW COC 261530Z/Feb68, III MAF PHOTO IPIR MSN NR 1-5-02-68, Sortie 0552, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 26/27Feb68, Ser #245; III MAF COC 290811Z/Feb68, SUPIR #438-68 (same mission), in III MAF COC Journal and File 01/02 March 1968 #13. [SUPIR=Supplementary Photo Interpretation Report].

[2122] 3rd MarDiv COC 261551Z/Feb68, AO Debrief, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 26/27 Feb 1968 #245.

[2123] Conversation with Thomas O'Toole, 08 August 1990.

[2124] Statement of 1/Lt Thomas F. O'Toole, Jr., 093732/0302, G-2 (AO) on flight of 25 Feb 1968. Copy furnished by Mr. O'Toole. The low passes over the bodies were at 60, 70 miles per hour, 15 or so feet off the ground. [Conversation with Thomas O'Toole, 08 August 1990].

nade went off,' or something like that, and woke up, and 'here I am.'"[2125]

HM3 Thomas E. Casey had just arrived at Khe Sanh and, along with a few others, ventured outside the perimeter to assist any returning WIA. They came upon PFC Edward C. Rayburn, not far from the perimeter. "He walked to us as we walked to his aid. I was surprised to see the lower jaw was completely gone! I examined him quickly and saw that he was not bleeding and did not appear to be in shock. One of the Marines wanted him to lie down. He didn't want to do that. The Marine said to me, 'Shouldn't he be laying down, Doc?' I said, 'Well he made it all the way back here and it's hard to carry a guy out of here, so if he wants to walk, let him.' I don't recall putting any dressing on him. At that time I had no serum albumin which may have been good to start. He did not want to leave and kept looking back from where he came. I asked him then if he was trying to tell us something and he nodded his head 'yes.' I asked him if there were others still alive out there and he seemed relieved and very much shook his head 'yes.' Once he had communicated that to us he was ready to be helped back to the base, but only then! We found no others that day and darkness was coming. We looked for awhile and returned. That wounded Marine did all he could possibly do for his buddies that day!"[2126]

When B-1 became frozen in place, other Marines from B-1, including LCPL William H. Woolman, LCPL Edward I. Prendergast, CPL Wood N. Lathrop, and one or two others, moved down the trail.[2127] A civilian photographer, Robert Ellison, had lived with the Marines of B/1/26 in their trenches for several weeks. Wood Lathrop recalls, "He was in the trenches with us every day. When we went out there to rescue the 3rd Platoon, we didn't know how to get through the mine field. He led us through the mine field! I'm serious! He was out there with a camera in one hand and a .45 in the other. He was something else. He was probably the bravest man there as far as I was concerned."[2128] Ellison snapped a photo of Marines dragging back the body of Lt Jacques which appeared in a 2-page, full-color spread, in the 18 March 1968 issue of Newsweek. Wood Lathrop is standing a few feet off to the side, and "Chief," PFC John P. Washa, is dragging Lt Jacques. Prendergast helped carry the Lieutenant. "I couldn't get a pulse. On our left flank the NVA were moving up a trench we had passed on our way out. A machinegun team from our wire was keeping them occupied and waving frantically for us to get behind the wire. The Chief [Washa] thought everyone was dead because they were out in the open when it happened. Capt Pipes came on the radio and ordered us to come in. I knew by the tone of his voice that he was upset and probably following orders from someone higher to pull back. By now air-strikes were hitting the area... About 4 PM down the trench line to my right someone was firing at something moving outside the wire. It looked like a wounded Marine. Wishing it was Fred [Billingham, Prendergast's friend], I ran out the opening in the wire that 3rd Platoon had gone out that morning. When I reached the body I was in front of the 1st Platoon's machine gun pit, next to the old trash dump. It was the Corpsman from 3rd Platoon I only knew as 'Motown Doc' (John Cicala). He had a sucking chest wound with cigarette wrapper on it, face and leg wounds. Doc was white as a ghost mumbling deliriously that everyone was dead."[2129]

PFC Calvin E. Bright, a survivor of B-3—and not wounded!—spotted a Marine walking back "like he was in a daze. I hurried up real quick and went back out. As soon as I went out to him, it looked like the back side of him was smoking, like a fire in a trash barrel, and the fire had gone out and all there is, is smoke. When I brought my hand up to touch his shoulder to help him along, part of him and his clothing came off in my hand. I peeked over the side of him and realized he had just been hit with a napalm strike. We had to stand a stretcher up to him, get him to lean on it, then try to get him to grab hold if it, then lay him down. I remember him say, 'God, it hurts!' He kept saying this over and over."[2130]

GySgt Patrick E. Duffy (S-2 Chief in the 1/26 COC) and 1/Lt William F. Smith both recall that in succeeding days, Capt. Ken Pipes sat up all night on the radio and cried.[2131]

[2125] Conversation with Ted Golab, 22 April 1986.

[2126] Letter from Thomas E. Casey, 02 February 1995. Casey died from an abdominal aneurysm 01 March 1998. James Hebron notes that Rayburn had been a very handsome guy, but after this, his girl friend left him. His jaw was fastened to his shoulder and he used his two front teeth to mash French fried potatoes. He became addicted to drugs, and committed suicide in 1979 while in a VA hospital. [Conversation with James Hebron, 26 March 1987.] Tom Winston, who had been badly burned during the Khe Sanh siege on 09 April 1968, spent a year in the U.S. Naval Hospital, Balboa, along with Ed Rayburn. According to Winston, the doctors took a rib out of Rayburn in order to construct a jaw and also made a graft on his chest to look like a chin. The doctors failed, however, to clean the jaw bone where it was shot off, and after gangrene developed, they had to remove it, repeat the procedure, and Rayburn became very depressed. Winston recalls that he was a fantastic person. "He used to blow smoke rings out of his trach!" [Conversations with Thomas Winston, 30 July 1996 and 23 August 1996. Sometime around 1997, Winston died from Huntington's Disease].

[2127] Conversation with Wood Lathrop, 12 March 1993; Edward I. Prendergast, "Biography," 8 November 1988.

[2128] Conversation with Wood Lathrop, 12 March 1993.

[2129] Prendergast, "Biography," cited.

[2130] Conversation with Calvin E. Bright, 01 August 1988.

[2131] Conversation with Patrick E. Duffy, 10 April 1990; Conversation with William Smith, 16 March 1985.

Still alive, Ridgeway, Geller, and Ruff, wounded and surrounded by NVA, moved in and out of consciousness. Ridgeway remembers a birddog aircraft flying over them. "My left arm was broken. Geller's right arm was broken and he was on his back. He reached down to the man that was wounded [Ruff] and pulled off a smoke grenade. We used this to notify the birddog that someone was alive. I held it and he pulled the pin and I threw it to the right, looked up and all I could see was a jet coming straight down. We ducked and the napalm hit back behind the NVA trench lines. We got small fragments of the napalm on us but we were able to knock it off as we laid there.. I came to in the afternoon around 3 or 4 o'clock. Both men were still alive. The man with the broken arm and I talked just to keep each other's morale up because we didn't know what was going to happen. The other man was delirious. All he wanted was a cigarette. He kept moving around. We told him to be still. He was afraid we were going to leave him. We told him that we weren't going to leave him."[2132] Geller came up on his knees, and as he did, grenades were thrown, one of which killed him. When the grenades ceased, Ridgeway saw small arms fire from the right front traversing the field from right to left, firing into the bodies. A round hit between Ruff and Ridgeway causing Ridgeway to flinch. Another burst was fired in his direction. A round ricocheted off his helmet, hitting him in the left buttock and Ruff received a round in his leg, breaking the bone. Ridgeway lost consciousness.[2133]

Ridgeway woke. It was dark. Ridgeway decided they should attempt to reach the trench. However, Ruff could not crawl due to his broken arm and broken leg wounds and pleaded with Ridgeway not to leave him behind. Ridgeway tried to calm him down, bolster his morale and said he would not leave him. Both Marines curled up under their flak jackets and helmets and decided to wait until morning in hopes that a reaction force would find them. Incoming artillery continued to fall about them and Ruff complained that he had been hit in the head by shrapnel and bleeding badly. Ridgeway was unable to assist him and told him to place his hand over the wound to stop the bleeding. During the shelling, Ridgeway lost consciousness and did not again awaken until early morning.[2134]

"At first light Ridgeway became aware that someone was tugging at his wristwatch. As he opened his eyes, a NVA soldier was standing over him. Apparently the NVA had thought him to be dead and Ridgeway's movement startled him. The NVA jumped back and locked and loaded his AK-47 which caused Ridgeway to think that his death was imminent. Instead, the NVA motioned him to get to his feet, but due to his wounds he was unable to comply. More NVA soldiers appeared, stripped him of his flak jacket and pack and lifted him to his feet... As Ridgeway started toward the trench, he observed Ruff lying with his head in a pool of blood. A NVA soldier kicked Ruff's head to make sure that he was dead. Ridgeway also noticed several bodies including Baptiste, Geller, the demolitions man, a black Marine named 'Stoney' and others he could not identify."[2135]

"When they captured me and moved me, I could look at the trench and see the Americans walking around inside."[2136] From there, Ridgeway was walked through Khe Sanh Village and then to a large rear area of NVA in Laos. He eventually met with some of the American POWs taken from the battle at Lang Vei (SSGT Thompson, Specialist McMurray, SFC Brande, and SP4 Young who had been captured on 30 January).

On 8 March, between 0630H – 0815H, a patrol from the 37th ARVN Ranger Battalion encountered one Marine body at XD855404. Identification was missing and the patrol was unable to retrieve the remains. It was assumed this was one of the un-recovered KIAs or MIAs from the B-3 patrol.[2137] Captain Pierce Durham of FOB-3 led a patrol to the area of contact in early March. Accompanying Durham were 3 to 5 Americans who had never before been in combat and an equal number of Bru, a total of about 10. They reached the KIA Marines and suddenly were showered with grenades. "I reported back that the bodies were there. They were in the best condition they could possibly be. The only thing missing were flak jackets, helmets, and the gas masks. We got in contact and had to get out of there. Colonel Lownds wanted me and my 10 men to carry the 25 bodies back!"[2138]

On 30 March, when Lt John Kaheny returned to KSCB following an emergency leave, he "ran into Ken Pipes who I think is one of the best Marines I've ever had to serve with and who was woefully distraught over the fact that his Marines had been left to stay outside the wire for 30 days. I found out later from [1/Lt] Walt[on F.] Chapman, who was the [Marine Corps] Commandant's son, who had been in Delta Company [1/26], that the order not to bring back those bodies had come from the White House itself. Walt, as the Commandant's son, was privileged to get in on some briefings back in Washington when he got home in February, and later when I served with him again at MCRD he related that story to me... My own personal feelings were then that if President Johnson had one-tenth of the courage of the Marines at Khe Sanh, the siege wouldn't have lasted as long as it did."[2139]

[2132] CG MARCORB CAMPEN CA 100244Z/Apr73, cited.
[2133] 1st CIT Report 16-9X-73, cited.
[2134] Ibid.
[2135] Ibid.
[2136] Conversation with Ronald Ridgeway, 05 July 1991.
[2137] 3rd MarDiv COC 080738Z/Feb68, 26th Marines INTRIGUE SITREP for 080900H/Mar68, in III MAF COC Journal and File 08/09 March 1968 #136.
[2138] Conversation with Pierce Durham, 13 February 1989.
[2139] Conversation with John M. Kaheny, 30 November 1986.

On 06 April 1968, Co D/1/26 moved to the NVA trench/bunker complex parallel to the Route 9 access road, at XD848407, securing it at 0730H. Co B/1/26 moved in trace of Co D and together with the assistance of Co D, policed the battlefield.[2140] The area was strewn with battle detritus including NVA headsets for calling in mortars and rounds with Chinese and Russian writing on them. "I walked over to a boot and picked up the boot, and there's the rest of the bone in the leg. At least on the boot was a dog tag. A lot of the guys at that time used to put the dog tags on the boot. And there were a couple of guys scared. They didn't want to touch them cause these guys were laying there a month. I said, 'Put them in the bag; let's get out of here. I don't like this anymore than you do, but these are Marines.'"[2141] Seventeen Marines previously declared MIA on 25 February and 30 March 1968 (the first rescue attempt) were recovered.[2142] The recovery team put the bodies and body parts in Willy Peter bags, sand bags, ponchos—anything else that would carry them. All the remains were in bits and pieces.[2143] Officially this patrol "..recovered the bodies of all the Marines listed as MIA, and their bodies returned to Graves Registration Khe Sanh."[2144]

The task of attempting to identify the almost totally decomposed bodies left in the hot, humid jungle, filled with bacteria, rats, fell to the company commander, Capt Kenneth W. Pipes. "The shock of loosing 25 men MIA for a month and a half, then going to graves registration several weeks later to help identify the decomposed remains is indescribable."[2145] All but 9 bodies were positively identified. The remaining pieces of bodies were so badly mutilated that identification was impossible, so they were placed in a group grave at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., on 10 September 1968.[2146]

Bill Jayne,[2147] writes that the family members came from as far away as Massachusetts, Florida, and Texas, to witness the unusual burial of the remains in two separate caskets laid to rest in a common grave with one monument to mark the grave. When Ridgeway was returned, a new stone was ordered and placed on the grave without Ridgeway's name. While the Army mortuary command and the Marine reporting process had evidence of 9 MIA, the anatomical evidence disclosed a count of 8 as the "minimum number of individuals." Jayne writes, "They always tried to identify the greatest number of individuals. It stands to reason. Even though the anatomical evidence indicated 8 sets of remains, they had no evidence that would allow them to rule out any of the 9 identified by other evidence. They were faced with a dilemma: name all 9 or leave all unknown. The decision was made to name all 9... My source says it was the only case in the Vietnam War in which the military made such a mistake of identification. Another distinction for Khe Sanh."[2148]

[Hills 881-South and 861, 25 February 1968]

John P. Kilbride was being medevaced off Hill 881-South when two of his buddies, PFC Frank Szmanski and Cpl Robert Wiedeman, came to him; Szmanski asked for his .45. "He was from Pennsylvania, had a couple of kids, a coal miner or whatever, a real sweetheart of a man, one super guy. I left the hill and they were standing in the trench line right behind my gun hole and a round came in right between them. Szmanski got hit behind the leg and Wiedeman took some shrapnel through the head and chest. A Corpsman asked Szmanski, 'You alright?' He said, 'Yeah, I'm alright.' So he went to work on Wiedeman. He turned around when he realized Wiedeman was dead, and Szmanski had bled to death."[2149]

E/2/26 on Hill 861-A took incoming instantly killing LCPL James A. Wood.[2150] "He was with rockets, my best friend in Nam...Minutes before we were talking about home, watching through the binoculars. And the 82s started coming in, and he was completely disintegrated—no head at all."[2151] Another Marine wounded in the same barrage had both of his feet blown off. He said, "Stand me up; I saw where they came from." "We strapped him to a stretcher, shoved him up against the side of the trench, and he called in artillery and air-strikes on the mortars that blew his feet of. We knocked them out."[2152]

On 24 February, Cpl Huff had departed Hill 861. The 6-2 Marine that weighed about 200 pounds initially confused Cpl Dennis M. Mannion into assuming that from his size (and from what he said) that he was related to the football staff, Sam Huff. Huff had just been selected as Corporal and was being sent to the 5-day NCO School on Okinawa as a way of giving him an R&R that

---

[2140] 1/26 ComdC Apr68, S2/S3 Log, 06 April 1968, Ser #23.
[2141] Conversation with Ted Golab, 22 April 1986.
[2142] 1/26 ComdC Apr 1968, S2/S3 Log, 06 April 1968, Ser #23.
[2143] Comments of HN James R. Brown, HQMC Oral History Tape #2810.
[2144] 3rd MarDiv COC 160702Z/Apr68, Opn SCOTLAND Final SITREP, in III MAF COC Journal and File, April 1968, #101.
[2145] Maj K.W. Pipes, undated ltr, in HQMC HistDiv, Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file.
[2146] These were: LCPL Frederick A. Billingham, Jr.; LCPL Michael J. Brellenthin; PFC James R. Bruder; LCPL Jerry L. Dodson; LCPL Bruce E. Jones; PFC Ronald L. Ridgeway; PFC David C. Scarbrough; PFC Michael B. Baptiste; and PFC John A. Lassiter. [CMC 061506Z/Sep68. Ronald Ridgeway was, of course, not dead, but a POW].
[2147] LCPL George William Jayne was a member of B/1/26 and later became head of the Veterans Administration Cemetery system.
[2148] Bill Jayne, "The Bravo Company Group Burial," 6 July 1997, printed in Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay 40 (Fall, 1997), p. 19.
[2149] Conversation with Jack Kilbride, 31 July 1994
[2150] Letter from Lawrence E. McCartney, 21 April 1995.
[2151] Conversation with Michael Thomas Lucas, 08 June 1991.
[2152] Conversation with James Kaylor, 08 April 1991.

didn't count as such. Sometimes, during the night, Huff brought his civilian radio to Mannion and they listened to Armed Forces Radio (which they couldn't pick up during the day). Eventually, Mannion "requisitioned" some land line set which wasn't being used and ran it between their bunkers: Huff left the handset next to his radio and Mannion could also listen to it. When Huff departed, Mannion bought the radio.[2153] A couple of weeks later, in a letter home, Mannion wrote: "..I gave him $25.00 to buy me a radio. He left the hill.. and went into K.S. ..As shitty luck would have it, he 'bought' it. Got hit by a rocket while he was running off the chopper down at K.S. I felt shitty, as we had become good friends – but I still had a 'legal' claim to his radio."[2154]

"Before he went down to the Landing Zone he stopped by the bunker with the radio. So I had the radio. Then the next day, when the word came back that he had been killed, the guys in his squad showed up, to take the radio... We almost had a fistfight there, outside my bunker in the afternoon dusk over this radio. Captain Sneed had to come. He kept the radio overnight and the next day called me in and then he called in the squad leader in Huff's group and heard both sides of the story. 'You gave him money?' I said, 'Yes, Sir, I did.' He said, 'Well, then, the radio's yours.' And so for the rest of the siege we had a radio at night."[2155]

Huff's sister, Marsha, recalls: "I was 17 when Billy was killed, and it was the turning point in my life. It really changed it. I just wouldn't accept it. It was just really hard." Their father had served six years during World War II and signed-off on his son's enlistment since Huff was under-age. "To this day, my father won't admit that he signed for Billy to go in."[2156]

[Well before the NVA's Phase II encirclement of KSCB began in the early days of February or NVA trenches became a specter for all to see, as early as 27 January, Gen Westmoreland, in a message to Gen Momyer [CG, 7th AF, pronounced "mo-meyer"] and LtGen Robert E. Cushman [CG, III MAF], expressed concern over the ever-advancing NVA forces: "In reviewing the targets that have been struck in the Khe Sanh area, it appears there are a number which still remain which are within very close proximity to our own ground forces. I consider it essential all of these close in targets be struck without delay... In the future we must continually strike any target that is in close proximity to our defensive positions. The enemy will try to press as close as he can to these positions in hope of denying air strikes..."[2157]

An accidentally close B-52 Arc Light strike at Con Thien (#P-73) in November, 1967, made close-in Arc Light strikes valid. The strike, 1400 meters from friendly lines, caused no injury to friendly lines, lives, or fortifications, while damage to enemy installations was significant. Secondary explosions indicated the NVA had closed on the Con Thien outer defense line, indicating the main enemy threat to be within 1 to 3 miles of the base.[2158] As early as 29 January, a planning group on the staff of 3rd Marine Division suggested installation of X-Band Radar Beacon at Khe Sanh ASAP to ensure Arc Light delivery within one kilometer of friendly forces.[2159] On 13 February, Gen Westmoreland advised Admiral Sharp (CINCPAC) that the tactical situation at Khe Sanh "may require that full defensive fire be brought into close proximity of defensive positions." He recommended that the previous restriction placed on B-52s forbidding strikes any closer than 3 KM to friendly forces be rescinded. On 18 February, CINCPAC granted permission for the change. In emergency situations, "..minimum separation criterion of three kilometers from friendly combatants may be reduced to one kilometer when circumstances warranted as determined by COMUSMACV. A strike request with less than 3 kilometers separation will be considered a deviation from normal criterion."[2160]

The test for a close-in Arc Light strike was target 'KHE SANH 207 RED," 1.2 kilometers from Hill 881S.[2161] PFC James E. Schemelia on Hill 881-South recalls: "We got word that B52s were going to attack that ridgeline. We kinda looked at each other kinda strange. I mean B52s flying high level, and they were going to drop 500-pounders just across from us! They expected the impact from these bombs to be very severe. Of course, they were. Everyone was ordered inside their bunkers and to stay in there, and it was passed over the radio the moment the bombs were dropped. We were told to place our fingers in our ears and pull our knees up to our chests and scream as loud as we could during the bombing. This, of course, we did. This was to prevent anyone from getting shock. Even though we did this,

[2153] Conversation with Dennis Mannion, 02 May 1993.
[2154] Letter to Joe Doherty, 11 March 1968.
[2155] Conversation with Dennis Mannion, 02 May 1993.
[2156] Conversation with Mrs. Marsha Slack, 30 April 1993.
[2157] Gen Westmoreland 271158Z/Jan68, in III MAF Incoming SPECAT EXCLUSIVE (Top Secret), 19 Jan – 08 Mar 1968, #14.

[2158] 7AF 171400Z/Nov67 and 201800Z/Nov67, in History, 3rd AirDiv, Jul-Dec67, Exhibits #191 and 192.
[2159] III MAF COC Journal and File, 30/31 Jan 1968, #185.
[2160] Maj James B. Pralle, Arc Light June 1967 – Dec 1968, 15 August 1969, p. 29, referencing CINCPAC msg, "Arc Light Basic Operation Order, Chg One," 18 Feb 1968.
[2161] Target box: XD778448 – XED771456 – XD785470 – XD793463; COMUSMACV 241139Z/Feb 1968, Arc Light Strike, in III MAF COC Journal and File 24/25 Feb 1968 #183; COMUSMACV 251730Z/Feb 1968, Arc Light Strike, in III MAF COC Journal and File 25/26 Feb 1968 #270; CG III MAF 251506Z/Feb 1968, Special Arc Light Strikes, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Feb 1968, Encl (57); III MAF COC 260013Z/Feb 1968, Arc Light Strike, in III MAF COC Journal and File 26/27 Feb 1968 #15.

many of us got nose bleeds from the concussion of the bombs being dropped."[2162]

The first close-in Arc Light near KSCB was conducted 26 February 1968. As these continued and were moved as close as 750 meters from Marine fighting positions, and ASRAT TPQ-10 strikes were brought within 500 meters, the results were impressive. "Hundreds of secondary explosions and fires attested to the destruction of ammunition and supply stocks and undoubtedly caused casualties among [enemy] troops maneuvering in the area."[2163]

CG, 3rd Marine Division radioed CG, III MAF: "Visual reconnaissance and electronic surveillance have clearly established that the enemy has concentrated strong forces within the sanctuary provided by the three kilometer limitation. In some instances his trenches and saps have approached to within 100 meters of the perimeter... TPQ-10 directed air strikes and artillery mission cannot match the overall effect of B-52 bombardment. Consequently, the following close arclight strikes are requested for emergency reasons. All troops dug in: Target Khe Sanh 217 Red, 1800 meters; Target Khe Sanh 191 Green, 200 meters; Target Khe Sanh 246 Red, 1500 meters; Target Khe Sanh 119 Green, 2000 meters."[2164]

After a week of these strikes, the NVA forces began to crumble. Prisoners revealed they had been briefed that B-52s were prohibited from bombing within 3 kilometers. The enemy force now moved, not to 3,000 meters, but out to 10,000 meters and his forces were subsequently split up to where he could only mass in battalion size.[2165]]

26 FEBRUARY 1968

BRERETON, PFC Raymond James H&S/1/9
LIVINGSTON, LCPL Billy Dale CAC OSCAR
STEDMAN, LCPL Paul Francis A/3rd Shore Party
STUCK, PVT Ransom Lee C/1/26
SWEENEY, LCPL Thomas James C/1/26
VALENTE, GYSGT Anthony Nicholas C/1/9

[2162] Taped comments of James E. Schemelia, 01 August 1984.

[2163] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, March, 1968, pp. 9-10.

[2164] 3rd MarDiv 260500Z/Feb68, ArcLight Program, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 26/27 Feb 1968 #58. Target boxes were: 217 Red (XD852375 – XD867389 – XD844383 – XD859397); 191 Green (XD793403 – XD807389 – XD800410 – XD814396) 246 Red (XD867389 – XD881403 – XD859397 – XD873411) [III MAF COC 261239Z/Feb68, Arc Light Strikes, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 26/27 Feb 1968 #200. 119 Green (XD793403 – XD807389 – XD800410 – XD814396 [COMUSMACV 260643Z/Feb 1968, Arc Light Strike, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 26/27 Feb 1968, #78].

[2165] Pralle, Arc Light, p. 29; Comments of LtCol Castagna, HQMC Oral History Tape #2770.

WRIGHT, PFC Michael Vincent E/2/26

PFC Wright died of wounds (DOW) received on 19 February. His brother, James, had fought in the Hill Battles at Khe Sanh in April/May, 1967, while a member of G/2/3. James recalls that his brother, Michael, always dreamed of being a Marine. He had read Chesty Puller's book "about 10,000 times."[2166]

A part of the close-in air strikes against encroaching NVA trenches and positions, at 1100H a friendly American aircraft inadvertently fired 2 rockets into the FOB-3 compound, resulting in the death of PFC Billy Dale Livingston.[2167]

"We got a break in the shelling, and all the guys came up and got some sun. I was walking back to the commo bunker and this guy was coming overhead, crossing the combat base. I heard the scream of the jet and looked up. He had already made one pass, and I saw him dump his load over the commo bunker. I said, 'That isn't going to make it!' I started running like hell for the lines because I knew there was going to be people hit down there. As I was pounding down the road, I saw it hit. What happened was the shock wave crushed his 'grape' [skull] first, and then some fragments took off his head. I remember John Roberts, a little time after that, and a bunch of us were sitting around. He had a can of 'beans and balls' [Meat Balls and Beans C Ration], and there was a little piece of Billy had gotten onto the can. John had this sickened look on his face, but he flicked it off and continued eating. I remember that like it was yesterday."[2168]

HN John R. Roberts, the Corpsman from CAP OSCAR-2, was standing with Livingston on his left and a black Marine on his right as all three while drinking some C-ration coffee, yelled, screamed, and cheered Phantoms fired into the area just beyond the perimeter. "Get 'em, guys! Get 'em!"[2169] Roberts and Livingston had frequently talked with each other. Livingston was within days of rotating home and had just been selected for Corporal. "We had a nice, long discussion whenever we had a few minutes, and he was really dedicated to making his life right and going back home and really making

---

[2166] Conversations with James Wright, 28 July 1999 and 04 August 1999.

[2167] 3rd MarDiv COC 260739Z/Feb 1968, spot report from 26 Mar, in III MAF COC Journal and File 26/27 Feb 1968 #230; 3rd MarDiv COC 261029Z/Feb 1968, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #478, Para. 4.G.

[2168] Conversation with Freeman James ["Bagpipes"] Taylor, 08 April 1993. John Roberts was the Corpsman attached to Second Platoon of CAC OSCAR. All of CAC OSCAR occupied the southeast portion of the FOB-3 perimeter after evacuating Khe Sanh village and Ta Cong village. Livingston was to be the only KIA of CAC OSCAR during the siege battle.

[2169] Conversations with John R. Roberts, 13 September 1989 and 17 November 2002.

something of his life."[2170] "He was getting married in two weeks when he got home, and I had written a letter to his fiancée for him; he didn't know how to write too well. He was really a neat kid, real conscientious, worked hard. He didn't know how to express himself. He was very quiet, and when he said something it was worthwhile listening to."[2171]

Sgt John J. Balanco, known for moving about and checking on the troops of CAC OSCAR and their welfare, had just been talking with Livingston about what kind of car he was going to buy when he returned "to the world" [Marine slang in Vietnam for America—or any place other than Vietnam]. He spoke of the hottest car of the day. Balanco had walked about 20 feet when the jet dropped the ordnance.[2172]

A jet from the USS KITTY HAWK—"you could see the name on it"—made a swift, low pass and pickled his rockets, blowing Roberts a good 30 feet into the air. He landed in the concertina wire of the trench line perimeter, and was deaf a good two hours. He spotted Livingston's body, "nothing but raw meat hanging out of his neck." The black Marine had a broken back and was medevaced. Livingston's body was placed on the small mule truck and driven to Graves Registration. Roberts returned to his C-ration coffee. Now cold, he heated it up with some C-4 explosive and "something floated to the top. It was a piece of Livingston's brain, floating in my coffee cup, and it was sizzling. I threw it out and I just went bananas! I emptied a full magazine at one of the planes coming over. Fortunately, it did not bring it down! Sgt Harper hit me with a butt stroke and knocked me out. He told me later, 'Don't mention this. I've talked to everybody else who saw it, and don't worry about it.'"[2173]

After the explosion, Livingston's head was completely gone. Balanco went over to Livingston, took his wallet and dog tags and brought them over to the Gunny [Robert J. Boyda] and then sat down and finished eating his Pork and Beans C Ration, unfazed by what had just happened. Sgt Balanco was not alone in his numb reaction. A few days later, LCPL Howard McKinnis found an eyeball, made a little leather pouch, placed it inside, and carried it around with him.[2174] By this time, many of those at Khe Sanh had become numb, unable to express any emotion, callous and hard—a defense against the insanity we were experiencing, a wall against the flood of terror washing over us.

LCPL Thomas James Sweeney was raised in the steel town of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, which was particularly hard hit economically when the steel industry entered into decline. Sweeney's nick name, "Jitters," referred not to any nervous tic, but to his love with music and dance. He used to "jitterbug" and sang for the local radio station during his high school days.[2175] Sweeney's obituary notice indicates he was wounded by a bullet in the abdomen while in a defensive position.[2176]

From the diary for today: "Air strikes were bombing all morning on mortar and automatic fire positions near the former CAP 3 position [at Ta Con ville]. Napalm and A-1 Sky-raiders and Navy Phantom jets all fired, as did our arty and the 106 near C Med. Two men who were among those MIA yesterday returned last evening. The C Med living hootch took a direct hit where the casualty bags were located. LtCol Wilkinson said that 8 of the MIAs are known dead. Two critical patients were in the OR of C Med from E Co, 2/26, Hill 861A, one having a head wound, the other will loose his right arm and right leg, and possibly will be blind. It was a very ghastly sight—black, charred flesh, hanging down from an open, ripped open, area of the leg to the bone. The hand was off; the arm was a stump. One corpsman walked back to where I was standing. "I don't want to look at that, but I have to," he said, resignedly walking back to aid the patient. Bloody clothes poncho and bamboo poles that had served as the stretcher—all over the deck. At Graves I said prayers over the bodies of B.D. Livingston and R. L. Stuck. The latter had seen be before. He was due to be 'out' this month, but due to 'bad time' had to continue to serve here. He had two scholarships and wanted to be 'out' to attend college in April. Incoming set off the recon area CONEX box, spewing out dense clouds of smoke. There was one casualty due to WP burns. The C Med Chief asked if my flag pole [with the Chaplain Corps pennant] couldn't be taken down; it might be an aiming stake. Three men from the 1/26 BAS came by asking for M-16s that may have been

---

[2170] Conversation with John R. Roberts, 27 June 1990.
[2171] Conversation with John R. Roberts, 17 November 2002.
[2172] Conversations with John Balanco, 30 May 1992 and 24 December 1992.
[2173] Conversations with John R. Roberts, 8 and 13 September 1989 and 17 November 2002.
[2174] Conversations with John Balanco, 30 May 1992 and 24 December 1992. A week or two later, a tooth and part of Livingston's skull were found along the perimeter. [email from Frank J. Taylor to John Roberts, 14 Oct 2002].

[2175] Conversation with Donald Gillespie (member of C/1/26), 5 December 2004; Letter from Donald Gillespie, 23 November 1998. Gillespie's brother, Tim Merlin, wrote in the Khe Sanh Veteran's Red Clay of a memorial service by the Boys and Girls Club in McKeesport to honor its fallen members, including his brother. [Tim Merlin, note in The Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue #47 (Fall, 2000), p. 32.
[2176] Obit. 29 Feb 1968. His parents are listed as Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Merlin, and he was posthumously awarded the Vietnamese Military Merit Medal and the Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with palm. [clipping, "Parents Get Son's Medals," 14 Apr]. He was listed in guarded condition. [Clippings in letter from Donald J. Gillespie, 8 August 1998]. He apparently died 1 March 1968 from his wounds, but the Directory for the Vietnam Memorial Wall lists him as KIA on 26 February 1968 brought in by casualties, saying that 'tonight's the night.' Dr. Demaagd said we intercepted a message to that effect. At 2020 the Arclights and yet strikes really started pouring in close to the base—very loud noise."[2177]

At 1545H, an incoming rocket killed Pvt Ransom Lee Stuck as shrapnel and concussion struck his chest while in the Blue Sector of the perimeter (at XD853418).[2178] 1/Lt Nicholas S. Romanetz, Platoon Commander of Second Platoon, C/1/26, reassured the family through an exchange of emails in 2001, that it was "a day when we got barrages of incoming, and then nothing for awhile. As Randy was walking in the trench line with his helmet and flak jacket on, a round landed quite close to him. Since our trenches were not too deep at the time, he was hit about chest high and probably killed instantly. I'm sure he never heard the round until it was too late. Had he lay down in the trench, he would have survived but as I said, the rounds often came out of nowhere and this was the case. I last saw him moments before his death.. I do recall he was serving 'bad time' and was talking to Rev. Ray Stubbe about it. His infraction causing the bad time happened before I took over the platoon and I never knew what the cause was. I do remember his being upset about having to stay in RVN longer and that, at least, he could be sent to the rear to finish his time. He was real upset about that. However, he was liked by the other men and got along well with them. He was also a good Marine and not afraid of combat."[2179]

Stuck's cousin, Terry, emailed that he and Ransom "..were both simple country kids raised in a small town of 1,000 people in Southern Indiana. The town is named Farmersburg.... I can tell you Randy was not a coward and as a 'kid' would stand up to face any bully."[2180]

As an example of the accounting of KIA, the official Operation SCOTLAND SITREP for the period 0001-0600 for today indicates a cumulative total of 234 KIA.[2181] The official Operation SCOTLAND SITREP 24 hours later indicates a cumulative total of 135 KIA.[2182]

27 February 1968

BERGER, PFC John Edward	B/1/26
NIEBUR, HM2 Edward Leroy	H&S/1/26

At 1350H, PFC Berger was killed by sniper fire which hit his back.[2183] At the time, while visiting the H&S Co. bunker and eating lunch there, initial reports were that the "81mm mortars reported a direct hit. One man was injured. Others jumped on him to protect him. More rounds came in, injuring several others."[2184]

HM2 Niebur was injured and later died from his wounds when a mortar round exploded at 1330 near the 1/26 BAS shitter where he was standing.[2185]

[415 tactical air sorties were flown in support of Khe Sanh today (USMC 157, USAF 153, USN 105). BDA: 11 large fires (numerous small fires), 39 secondary explosions, 39 road cuts. 6 Arc Lights (33 sorties) were flown in support of Khe Sanh. Re-supply of 237 short tons arrived today at Khe Sanh (15 tons of vehicles, 6 tons of mail, 3 tons of medical supplies). In addition 68 passengers were landed at Khe Sanh. 14 C-130 aircraft completed 10 air drops and 3 air landed on the airfield. 28 USMC helicopters delivered passengers and cargo.[2186]

General Westmoreland sent the following message to Colonel Lownds: "You, your Marines, and the associated US Army and Vietnamese troops are at the center of the international stage. You are faced with a military challenge unprecedented in this war. I want you and your troops to know that I have the utmost confidence in your fighting spirit, professionalism, and alertness. These essential qualities, plus the indomitable courage of the US Marines are destined to prevail over the enemy. The enemy will try every trick in the book, but you will defeat him at every turn. Be assured that the chain of command is watching your situation hour-by-hour and providing you fire power never before equaled on any battlefield. My personal compliments and best wishes to you."[2187]]

28 February 1968

BALADES, PFC David Zavala	A/3rd Shore Party
BENIGNI, CPL Alfredo	HMM-262
BRADLEY, CPL Kenneth Robert	HMM-262
CALDWELL,. CPL Robert Edward	H&S/3/26
CHRISTMAN, LCPL Ronald S. J.	HMM-262
COLES, LCPL Kyle "J"	H&MS-36
COOPER, CPL Donald Nathaniel	HMM-262

[2177] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for Monday, 26 February 1968.
[2178] 1/26 ComdC, Feb 1968, S2/3 Log, 26 February 1968, Serial #69.
[2179] Nick Romanetz, email of 16 Jan 2001 to "Rose," printed in Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue #49 (Spring, 2001), p. 34.
[2180] Terry Stuck, email in Ibid., p. 36.
[2181] 3rd MarDiv COC 260312Z/Feb 1968, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #469, Para. 6.
[2182] 3rd MarDiv COC 270618Z/Feb 1968, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #473, Para 6. (for period 270001-270600H Feb68).
[2183] 1/26 ComdC, S2/S3 Log, 27 February 1968, Ser #43.
[2184] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for Tuesday, 27 February 1968.
[2185] Ibid.
[2186] Gen Westmoreland, Report #24 on the Situation at Khe Sanh/DMZ Area for 27 February 1968, in LBJ Library archives, National Security File, Vietnam Country File, 2A(2) I Corps & DMZ 2/68, #5.
[2187] COMUSMACV 270938Z Feb68, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Feb 68 file, Encl (62).

DEMPSEY, CPL Ronald Lee	B/1/13
DWYER, LCPL Matthew Murice	A/3rd Engineers
ELLIS, CAPT John Patrick	MABS-36
GARD, CPL Dany "D"	HMM-262
HARRIS, PFC Earl Wayne	E/2/26
LABONTE, HN Donald Arthur	H&S/2/26
McCABE, SGT Mark Wayne	HMM-262
MEIXNER, Maj Edwin George	HMM-262
MIKELS, SGT James Herbert Jr.	H&S/1/26
PARSONS, SGT Charles Edward	5th Comm Bn
SEVELL, CAPT Robert Lee	HMM-262
SPILLMAN, BU1 Charles Otto	CBMU-301 Det B
STANTON, PFC Emmett Charles	A/3rd Engineers
STULL, CAPT Jay Webster	HQBN, 3rdMarDiv
THOTLAND, LCPL John Alfred	HMM-262
TOTH, SGT John Paul	HMM-262
TURNER, CPL William Oliver	H&S/3rd Shore Party

[Note: All except Harris and Labonte were in the CH-46 plane crash]

Harris DOW received 26 February when he was gravely wounded by NVA mortar fire on Hill 861-Alfa. "Earl was on the northwest corner of the hill which looked in the direction of Hill 861 when the mortar rounds came in. Nobody heard the rounds being fired as we normally did .. because a helicopter was coming in to the landing zone on the southeast side of the hill which was looking down on Hill 558. The Marine he was with, PFC Michael Vernon Wright, died that day and another Marine who was nearby, LCPL Bobby Joyner, was seriously wounded but as far as I know he survived."[2188]

HMM-262, located at Ai Tu Airbase, Quang Tri, not only flew daily missions in support of Khe Sanh, they kept two CH-46 birds and crews continuously at KSCB until it became untenable. William L. Barba [pronounced "Bar- bay"], who had been at Khe Sanh the day the siege erupted, and who vividly recalls times in the FOB-3 bunker, was shot down three times during medevac missions at Khe Sanh and the surrounding hills, was flying re-supply to Khe Sanh on 28 February. He relates:

"The first leg of the mission called for picking up 40 replacement Marines at the Dong Ha LSA, taking them to Khe Sanh, returning to Dong Ha for external cargo loads for Khe Sanh. On this day, weather was marginal with rain showers and overcast ceiling varying between 500 to 800'.[2189] I was disappointed that I wasn't assigned as Section Leader for this flight because I had been flying in the area for the past three months, was one of the most experienced combat pilots in the squadron, and knew the routes and threats into and out of Khe Sanh like the back of my hand...

"Shortly after lunch, we launched 2 CH-46s from Quang Tri and landed at the Dong Ha LSA to pick up 40 troops. After figuring my load computations, I could only safely carry 18 troops, and I passed this info to Maj Meixner. My crew was good for a total of 22 souls on hand. After this incident, I learned that Maj Meixner had 27 souls on board which gave him no capability to hover out of ground effect. Besides his crew and the troops, he also had on board several squadron maintenance personnel who were to be dropped at Khe Sanh to try to fix several battle damaged CH-46s. Bottom line was that he was extremely heavy, exceeding the maximum gross weight in the aircraft. None of the troops we picked up had weapons, for they were to receive their weapons upon arriving at Khe Sanh.

[Concerning the routes we flew into Khe Sanh], after the siege started we initially flew the following route to Khe Sanh: Lifted from Dong Ha, climbed to 3000-ft., flew westbound over Route 9 (pass Cam Lo, Ca Lu) to the Balong Valley, then north to Khe Sanh. As the NVA started placing AA guns on the mountains on the east and west side of the Balong Valley, we changed our tactics by flying higher—5000-ft to 6000-ft., arriving at Khe Sanh and then spiraling down to land at the runway or LSA. As the NVA artillery became more effective (i.e., you would be sitting on the runway, the LSA or fuel pits, and the NVA would start walking artillery rounds toward you), we attempted to mask our arrival by flying the 'back door route' to prevent an artillery round from meeting us as we touched down. The 'Back Door Route' was as follows: Dong Ha over Route 9 to the Rockpile, NW along a river bed and up a cliff to a valley on the east side of the mountain range (Hill 973) east of Khe Sanh, around the north side of this ridge to Hill 552 and low level into Khe Sanh from the north. Well, the NVA got wise to us, and 4 days prior to the incident in question, I received 6 hits returning from Khe Sanh along the 'Back Door Route.' I reported this to S-2, and the squadron determined that this route could only be flown at altitude. In bad weather, we woiuld receive a GCA (radar) climb out at Dong Ha to VFR on top, use our TACAN to navigate to Khe Sanh, and look for a hole to spiral down. If we couldn't get VFR on top, we flew in the weather on instruments to Khe Sanh and flew either a GCA or TACAN approach into Khe Sanh.

---

[2188] Khe Sanh Message Board, email posted by Larry McCartney, 02 March 2002. DOW=Died of Wounds.

[2189] The weather forecast for Khe Sanh for the period 8PM/27Feb – noon/28Feb: "500-ft. scattered, 1000-ft. scattered, 1500-ft. broken, visibility 5 miles, showers. Intermittent thundershowers with ceiling 100-ft., visibility ½ mile during rain" and for the period noon/28Feb – 4AM/28Feb: "500-ft. overcast, visibility 2 miles, drizzle and fog." [National Military Command Center (MNCC) Memorandum for the White House, 27 Feb 1968, 0700 EST, in LBJ Archives, National Security File, Vietnam Country File 2A(2) I Corps & DMZ, 2/68, 1 of 2, #11.

"Back to the incident. After loading troops on board at the Dong Ha LSA I fully anticipated Maj Meixner to request a GCA climb-out; however, instead a westerly departure over Route 9 was requested. I questioned this decision on the FM radio, and recommended a GCA climb-out because of the weather. He stated he wanted to check the weather out in the vicinity of the Rockpile and the 'Back Door Route.' Again, I reminded him that I had taken hits on the Back Door Route, and unless the weather ceiling [changed] dramatically we wouldn't be able to stay VFR and get to a safe altitude. He gave me a Roger and we proceeded over Route 9 to the Rockpile. At the Rockpile, the ceiling was varying between 500-ft. to 800-ft. and we proceeded NW to the Back Door Route. Flying up a riverbed toward the cliff leading to the entrance to the valley/Back Door, there was only a 150 – 200-ft. window between the valley floor and lower cloud layers with the clouds occasionally dropping down to the valley floor. At this point, I thought for sure Maj Meixner was going to turn around, proceed tack to Dong Ha and request a GCA climb-out. However, he didn't. He headed for the valley entrance. I was concerned for 2 reasons: (1) If we entered the valley, we would both end up IFR, in the clouds, surrounded by mountains, which is a No No! and (2) we would be at 150-ft. or lower flying over a known enemy AA area on a routine mission. Again, I yelled over the FM for him to do a 180° turn, that he was entering IFR conditions and was in a known threat area. He didn't answer and proceeded on. One more time I came up on the FM and stated, 'DASH 1, do a 180° turn now!' He didn't respond, so I came up on the radio and told him I was conducting a 180° turn. As I was in my turn to the left, Maj Meixner came up on the radio and yelled, 'We've been hit!' That was the last radio communications they made.

"At this time, Meixner's aircraft did a left turn and appeared to be attempting an autorotation to the river bed below. I could see his left engine was on fire. I tried to join on him, but I couldn't stay with him, even with my collective bottomed for his rate of descent was too great. At approximately 200-ft. above the river bed, he flared the helicopter, struck some large rocks on the bank of the river bed and then crashed into the river bed, throwing bodies and pieces of helicopter over a 200-400 yard area. The terrain at the crash site was extremely rough, so I made several low passes looking for survivors and a place to land. I found neither. I saw no survivors, and judging by the rate of descent of the helicopter, all were killed on impact. I then climbed as high as I could and contacted Khe Sanh DASC telling them what happened and asked for some gunships and a reaction force in order to recover the bodies. Within 10 minutes two UH-1E gunships arrived on scene and took charge. (I still had 18 unarmed Marines on board). Within 30 minutes, a security force and recovery team arrived, landed downstream and hiked to the crash site... All the bodies were recovered... The two pilots' bodies were found in their armored seats, thrown from the helicopter and mangled."[2190]

Dr. Drew Morris, the Flight Surgeon of HMM-262, accompanied the recovery team. His CO recalls, "He was a first-line football player at the University of Texas when he was an undergraduate, and of course [when] he went into medical practice, [he] gave up football. What a wonderful person, a wonderful man!"[2191] Dr. Morris recalls Capt Sevell as "my best friend. All were killed on impact except for one of those who were to repair damaged birds at Khe Sanh, Cpl Danny D. Gard, "who was still alive at the time. We picked up Danny Gard and put him on a Huey, and flew [him] to Delta Med, and he died just as we got there, and they opened his chest and revived him, and I think he lived for another 3 or 4 hours." Dr. Morris recalls there were 2 groups of 20 Marines in 2 CH-46 choppers, but only one was landed as a security force. "I'd gone off [from the chopper] there leaving my rifle on board, had only a .38, and the Marine in charge of the 20 handed me a grenade and put me in the center and said, 'Here, Doc, grab it, and if they start shooting at us, pull the pin and throw it towards the noise!' They thought they [the NVA] had it [the landing site] zeroed in from the hill, and did not even put the other 20 in, expecting we were going to be ambushed from that hill. Fortunately, we were not. We had a lot of fixed wing overhead that deterred them, I guess." There was no fire. The helicopter was in pieces "and I didn't even recognize Bob Sevell. I unstrapped him from his seat."[2192]

Crash of a Pilot[2193]
By Jim Dykes

Now they are reconstructing it,
Putting the fine sticks of fate together
As if they were tinker toys.
Man has never come to terms
With accident, his own birth;
Or its antithesis.
Surprised at miracles, he lives,

[2190] Letter from COL William L. Barba, 3 June 1991. S-2 (Intelligence section or staff); VFR=Visual Flying Regulations; TACAN=Tactical Air Navigation (a system consisting of short-range UHF radio stations); AA=Anti-aircraft; IFR=Instrument Flying Regulations; GCA=Ground Controlled Approach; DASC=Direct Air Support Center; D Med=medical facility of 3rd Medical Bn located at Dong Ha; LSA=Logistic Support Activity (or area).

[2191] Conversation with COL Melvin Steinberg, I November 1990.

[2192] Conversation with Dr. Drew Morris, 5 November 1990.

[2193] Poem printed in Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue #46 (Spring, 2000), p. 34.

Thinking that Order,
Explains everything;
And that Reason is why
Men fly into the trees,
Or sink at sea, or die of disease.
It is difficult to think Nothing.
We grow up thinking our ways
Out of jungles, and often survive
To reinforce thinking Something.

And so, while the crews work
Cleaning the site, I fly
Among fog-caressed valleys,
Forging the wild rivers of faith;
Knowing the chances are Reasonably on my side.

If I should die in flight today
By some malfunctioning of skies
Will there be peace before I cease to be?
Or shall I terror stricken, cling to fear
And wail until this tumbling craft
Defines my destiny?

I can but contemplate how I'll respond
And I'll define that now,
Because I've treated death before;

In truth I do believe that in a tumbling craft,
I'd try to analyze its path
And chart its twisting course.

When fury waned
I'd soar as Angels have for centuries past,
Then seek a lofty plain and cling to it
Until I'd journeyed Home.

CPL Dempsey, "..a very close friend.. was coming back after 30 days leave at home. It would have been his second tour or duty... It was a very bad day for me. We shared a lot of good times together."[2194]

CPL Robert Edward Caldwell had arrived in Vietnam 28 February 1967[2195] and had been a machine-gunner with M/3/26[2196] before he was assigned as the Chaplain's Clerk. According to another Marine from Co M/3/26 at the time, (then) LCPL Timothy C. Sims, "one of the reasons they did that was because they wanted to get him out of the bush. Bob had done his dues! He'd been in battles in '67 and they thought: he's a good guy. They wanted to do something good for him, so they let him go to the Chaplain."[2197]

"Chaplain William Hampton [Chaplain of 3/26 during the siege battle] had borrowed my Greek New Testament and the Arndt & Gingrich Greek-English Lexicon I had borrowed from Mr. John Miller, the Wycliffe Bible Translator missionary in Khe Sanh village. He was teaching Cpl Caldwell New Testament Greek since Caldwell intended to enter the ministry. Cpl Caldwell was a very kindly person, a good-looking young man, mild-mannered, and had been learning and rapidly picking up New Testament Greek."[2198] Caldwell was bitten by a rat and he and the rat were sent to DaNang for rabies test. The test was negative and he caught a chopper to return to Khe Sanh to complete his time in-country.[2199]

Sgt Charles Parsons of 5th Comm, was either reporting aboard or was a courier. The detachment at Khe Sanh sent one or two couriers at a time.[2200]

BU1[2201] Charles Spillman was bringing 40 pounds of mail along with beer and soda pop[2202] to CBMU 301, Det B, at Khe Sanh, which had repaired (and during the siege, maintained) the airstrip. Spillman, one of the older ones at Khe Sanh (born 11 Oct 1928),[2203] had arrived with the main body of CBMU 301 in late June, 1967 at Dong Ha

---

[2194] Letter from Ray Nicol, 12 March 1986.
[2195] "Report of Casualty" card in Library, Historical Division, HQMC, Washington, D.C.
[2196] Letter from Chaplain Timothy Sims, 18 August 1989
[2197] Conversation with Chaplain Timothy Sims, 27 August 1989.
[2198] Diary entry, Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, 08 March 1968 (meeting with Chaplain Hampton upon return to Khe Sanh. Chaplain Hampton returned John Miller's Lexicon: "We won't have any use for that now," he sadly said.)
[2199] Letter from Rev. Wm. R. Hampton, 27 Nov 2004. When meeting with Chaplain Hampton on 8 March 1968, Hampton mentioned that he had sent Caldwell down to DaNang a few days early (he was due to rotate within a month, on his 13 months' tour) and since Hampton was in a static position during the siege, had no need for Caldwell to remain in the embattled base. Those at DaNang, however, returned him to Khe Sanh since he had more time to do before reporting in for processing to return to the States. [Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 8 March 1968]. This was stated in a written memo to the 3rd MarDiv Chaplain, who had requested information on the chaplains clerks at Khe Sanh, all of whom were killed. [Chaplain, 3rd Shore/3rd Recon memo to Division Chaplain, 23 May 1968]. Chaplain Hampton was teaching Caldwell Greek one hour a night. [Diary entry, Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Thursday, 08 February 1968].
[2200] Letter from James Fowler, 2 June 2002.
[2201] BU1=Builder, First Class, E-6. CBMU=Construction Battalion Maintenance Unit
[2202] Diary entry, ENS Martin Kux, 29 February 1968. Hardly any mail ever arrived at Khe Sanh, as Lewis Messner, a member of CBMU 301 Det B, recalls: "They wouldn't pay us and wouldn't bring mail in, so he flew out and went down to get our mail." [Conversation with Lewis Messner, 6 January 1993].
[2203] Bows, Ray A., Vietnam Military Lore 1959-1973, Another Way to Remember, Hanover, MA: Bows & Sons Publishing, 1988, p. 204.

where he was the supervisor in charge of several builder crews. In November, 1967, he arrived at Khe Sanh as the builder in charge of construction.[2204]

During a Change of Command ceremony of CBMU 301 at Dong Ha, the Seabee section was dedicated as "Camp Spillman."[2205]

Official count of KIA as of 0001, 28 February, was 141 KIA.[2206] Despite the 24 KIA for today, the official KIA count as of 1200, 29 February was still 141.[2207]

[During the evening of 29 February/01 March, the NVA mounted a regimental-size assault against KSCB. Col Lownds had made frequent personal reconnaissance walks throughout the entire area surrounding Khe Sanh during the Fall of 1967, sometimes by himself. The information and general "feel" of the area, along with electronic sensors seeded along Route 9 that went crazy, led him to conclude a major assault was about to close on the eastern perimeter of KSCB.[2208] "I figured he's out after something. Well, as it turned out, I felt very strongly about it.. I figured that this might well be the main attack. So as he started down.. I called up Division and said, 'I need a B-52 strike NOW; any later than two hours from now, forget it because he's going to have closed with me.'"[2209] He concluded this to be at least a NVA regiment approaching the Combat Base.[2210] The Arc Light struck the approaching juggernaut and "..this was the only time the kids on the lines told me.. that they actually saw bodies being thrown in the air. I sincerely believe .. that those strikes caught at least two battalions. We were already in contact on the perimeter.. with a battalion, so I feel we had a regiment."[2211]

The main attack—by those remnants of the assaulting regiment that did manage to close—was against positions occupied by the 37th ARVN Ranger Battalion. Three probes were made by the NVA. The first came at 2130H, the second at 2330H, and the third at 0315H. By 010430H the Ranger's front was secured. Results of the attack included at least 71 NVA killed and one ARVN Ranger wounded.[2212] Included among the materiel captured by the Rangers was a large number of enemy devices to be used to breach the wire of KSCB. These crude, but workable, devices were constructed of bamboo strips laced around blocks of TNT. The enemy planned to use these as Bangalore torpedoes but never had the opportunity.[2213] "A physical reconnaissance of the area.. revealed 78 NVA KIA with numerous bangalores and satchel charges.. indicating a major effort to break the wire had been planned. The dead were still huddled in trenches, many in the kneeling position, in three successive platoon lines, as if they had been caught in the assault position. The devastating effect of the 'FIRECRACKER' round was apparent. An Arc Light within 1800 meters of the friendly positions presented a deterrent to enemy reinforcements, and in fact, may have ht him in his assembly areas, thus rendering any reserve elements ineffective.[2214]

Maj Mark A. Swearengen, the Liaison Officer from 2nd Battalion, 94th Artillery, at KSCB to coordinate and plan 175mm gun fire from Camp Carroll and the Rockpile, made the interesting observation that the attack occurred about 40 days after the initial attack against KSCB. 40 days is the length of time feudal armies besieged and soldiers were then paid for their 40-day commitment. Failure to cause a fortress to fall within 40 days, the attacking forces simply departed the siege.[2215]

These Arc Light strikes had, by now, totally annihilated Khe Sanh village. "Khe Sanh Village is in fact a free fire area. Either the entire or major portions of Khe Sanh Village located vicinity of coordinates XD846381 were included in Arc Light strikes on 27 February, 29 February, twice on 1 March and twice on 5 Mar."[2216] LCPL Michael J. Archer, a radioman in the 26th Marines COC recalls the strike of 27 February. Capt Baig took a small piece of cheesecloth, erased the grease pencil marking that surrounded Khe Sanh village, and ordered an Arc Light strike on it, completely obliterating it. Col Lownds "..stormed into the FSCC room that evening. I had never seen him so angry. He shouted, 'Harry, I understand that you just bombed the ville!' Baig courteously replied, 'Yes, Sir.' Lownds reminded him that he had strictly forbidden it. Baig calmly explained the necessity of having to do it: tanks, assault troops [a regimental assault force was massing], and anti-

[2204] Anon, USN Construction Battalion Maintenance Unit 301, Republic of Vietnam '67 – '68 [Cruise book], Dedication page.

[2205] Bows, op. cit., p. 204.

[2206] 26Mar Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #477 (280001-280600H Feb68), Para 6. 3rd MarDiv COC 280241Z/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #477 lists 136 KIA.

[2207] 26Mar 291115/Feb68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #483 (291201-291800H Feb68), Para 6.

[2208] Capt Mirza Munir Baig, Letter of 23 Dec 1968 to Historical Branch, HQMC, Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file, writes, "Sensors clearly foretold the attack on KSCB during the night of 29Feb-1Mar and gave us time to divert two arclights, one of which struck the best part of two battalions, moving up to support and reinforce the assault battalion." [p.10]

[2209] FMFPAC Debrief of Col David E. Lownds, USMC Oral History Tape #3139.

[2210] Comments by Col Lownds, US Senate, Electronic Battlefield Sub-Committee, Hearings, 1971, p. 87.

[2211] Col Lownds, Tape 3139, cited.

[2212] 26Mar ComdC Feb 1968, Encl (1), p. 46.

[2213] Ltr of LtCol James B. Wilkinson, 19 Dec 1968, HQMC, HistDiv, Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file.

[2214] 26Mar ComdC Feb 1968, Pt. 2.

[2215] Maj Mark A. Swearengen, "Siege: Forty Days at Khe Sanh," Marine Corps Gazette 57:4 (April, 1973) 27.

[2216] CG, 3rd MarDiv 081440Z/Mar68, Khe Sanh Village, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Mar68, Pt. 1, Encl (88).

aircraft guns. I will never forget the look on the Colonel's face. It was part anger at the insubordination, and part resignation to the face that it was done, and there was nothing he could now do about it. He looked at Baig for several moments and then said, quite seriously, 'Harry, I wouldn't want to be you when the war crime trials start.' The Colonel turned and left the room."[2217]

The History of the NVA's 304th Division describes the encirclement phase: "Units involved in the encirclement had to prepare carefully so that they could move forces into encircling positions immediately. In order to establish their [field of fire] for one detachment, it was necessary to concentrate the forces of many units close together, establish fortifications to be used in the encirclement, dig bunkers and foxholes to avoid enemy air and artillery fire.. Great amount of work had to be completed immediately at night so that in the morning our positions involved in the encirclement would be established right at the enemy's barbed wire fence."[2218]

The NVA soldiers continuously dug and tenaciously held. The master plan disclosed by Lt La Than Tonc on 20 January was for a diversionary feint attack from the west followed by the main attack approaching KSCB from the east, and thus, from the beginning, the main concern of the 26th Marines command was with that sector. It was also in this area that the NVA established his siege works.[2219] For Captain Mirza Munir Baig, the Target Intelligence Officer for the 26th Marines, "Our entire defense philosophy was to allow the enemy to surround us closely, to mass about us, to reveal his troop and logistic routes, to establish his dumps and assembly areas, his truck parks and artillery positions, and to prepare his siege works as energetically as he desired. The result was an enormous quantity of targets, located in dispersed but common areas. Such complexes were ideal for heavy bombers... Once the enemy had firmly embraced us, we had him fixed. His siege doctrine and battle plan.. forced him to stay.. He had to do certain things and to be in certain places because, given the situation, there was little choice open to him. Arc lights were dropped on all the places where the enemy was known or estimated to be. Bombs were not case into the jungle just for the sake of doing so... 95% of all Arc light strikes were targeted and requested from Khe Sanh, NOT Saigon as certain authorities would have us believe."[2220]

For Capt Baig, the attack of 29 February – 1 March reinforced belief that senior NVA commanders at Khe Sanh had been killed in the air attack of 30 January against their B5-T8 Front Headquarters, "..for if anyone could have changed the attack master plan, in view of our determined opposition, these officers could. Since the plan was never changed, perhaps they died in that building."[2221]

As much as the Marines on the Combat Base were eager to leave their bunkers and trenches and engage the foe,[2222] soldiers of the 304th NVA Division could hardly restrain their impulse to attack the Marines on KSCB, and this may explain their "last fling" attack of 29 February – 1 March. Their history records: "Our forces clung to the enemy's barbed wire.. The cadre and troops who were involved in the encirclement were determined to sacrifice themselves and to accept the ferociousness of the fighting. Each day they had to repair and expand their fortifications by 40 meters. There were times when they had to repair 80 meters of new fortifications because enemy fire had destroyed what they had just built. When the person up front fell, the person behind him moved up front. When a detachment's morale fell, another detachment moved in to replace them. The entire Division moved into the battlefield."[2223] As days continued, "The troops felt that we had the ability to liberate Khe Sanh, so why did the higher command not order an attack? Why continue an encirclement day after day and permit the enemy artillery and air-strikes to cause mounting casualties? Previously when we attacked in Dien Bien Phu, it lasted 55 days and nights and now at Khe Sanh we had also surrounded the enemy for nearly the same number of days. The enemy was fearful.. we were in control of the battlefield, and if the higher command ordered an attack to overrun Khe Sanh we could do it. There were those who asked the question: 'Who knows how much longer the higher headquarters will wait before giving as a gift to [President] Johnson a Dien Bien Phu in Khe Sanh?"[2224]]

01 March 1968

BENGE, LCPL Larry Wayne	H&S/1/9
CUNNINGHAM, PFC William L	D/1/9
FERREN, LCPL Jerry Wayne	VMGR-152
LINK, LCPL Frederick Beard	C/1/9
MARTIN, LCPL Gary Alan	C/1/9
McCLATCHEY, SP5 Jeffrey Jr.	FOB-3

[2217] Michael Archer, Murmurs, Unpublished memoir manuscript, 1 November 2000, pp. 176-177.

[2218] Su Doan (Ky Su) (Tap II), op. cit., p. 89. Trans. Sedgwick Tourison.

[2219] Letter of Maj Mirza M. Baig, 23 December 1968, to Historical Branch, HQMC, in Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file, p. 3

[2220] Ibid., p. 6.

[2221] Ibid., p. 11.

[2222] In a SPECAT EXCLUSIVE message from CG, III MAF, to COMUSMACV, LtGen Cushman interpreted the patrol of B-3 on 25 February : "They know they are not supposed to take such action against the superior dug in forces of the enemy in the vicinity but apparently could not restrain themselves." [CG III MAF 251532Z/Feb68, in III MAF SPECAT EXCLUSIVE (Secret) msgs, #38.

[2223] Su Doan (Ky Su) (Tap II), op. cit., p. 91. Trans. Sedgwick Tourison.

[2224] Ibid., p. 96.

LCPL Ferren DOW by contracting pneumonia due to burns on his body from the C-130 crash of 10 February 1968 at Khe Sanh.

Sp-5 Jeffrey McClatchey, a black soldier from Alabama, was a demolitions specialist attached to FOB-3. Every night, FOB-3 sent Listening Posts outside the wire through an exit half-way between the trash dump and the main gate to KSCB.[2225] On this night, 2 Americans (including McClatchey) and three "indig" left the perimeter, and "McClatchey attached a Claymore mine under his web gear to his stomach and chest—and armed it! There was a grave yard over to the left about 200 meters down the road. They went over and crossed over into the grave yard, heard something, and laid down beside the grave stones. [Russ] Mann was on one side of those large, flat Vietnamese grave stones and McClatchey was on the other side. As McClatchey crawled forward through the brush and underbrush, it activated the Claymore mine and blew him into three or four pieces."[2226]

The 1/9 Battalion Command Chronology indicates, "Total incoming rounds taken by the 1st Battalion, 9th Marines amounted to 6 (60mm), 20 (82mm), and 1 (120mm) mortar resulting in three friendly KIAs and seven WIAs of which two were serious."[2227]

Joseph R. Murray (H&S/1/26, MOS 3041) arrived Christmas Day, 1967, at Khe Sanh and was wounded on 1 March by an incoming mortar round and spent the next year at the Naval Hospital in Bethesda, Maryland.[2228]

02 MARCH 1968

COOL, CPL Mark Douglas	H&S/1/26
HUTCHINS, SGT Frank John	D/1/9
LLOYD, PVT Kenneth Edwin	D/1/9
MEIER, PFC Roy Alan	D/1/9
SCULLEN, PFC Thomas James	D/1/9
WETHINGTON, HN David L Jr.	H&S/1/9

Cpl Mark Cool DOW received on 27 February 1968.[2229] PFC John A. Corbett remembers Mark as his best friend at Khe Sanh. In this incident, PFC James C. Gillam and Cpl John T. Flores of the 1/26 81 mortar section had been wounded by an incoming NVA 60mm mortar and Mark Cool rushed to help them. Another 60mm exploded sending chards of shrapnel into Cool's face. Gillam and Flores were both slightly wounded in their arm, but Cool's wounds were serious.[2230] Immediately, Cool went into a coma, and Corbett lamented that with no officers around to witness his heroism in rushing to aid his wounded comrades, he received no posthumous award for his heroism. Corbett writes, "We who knew him decorated him in our hearts."[2231]

At 1900H, Co. D/1/9 (XD831415) received one incoming 122mm rocket which impacted in a trench killing five Marines and giving two minor wounds.[2232]

As the NVA relentlessly constructed their siege networks, the Marines of 1/9 feared firing mortars on them at night since that would disclose the mortar's position, Claymore mines were stolen, and night ambushes were not permitted. Then, one morning the fog lifted and the light of dawn disclosed four or five moving from the area. The M-79 grenadier spotted them, cornering them on a knoll, and the Marines were given permission to get them; they located three bodies and a blood trail. Although the lead fire team made it safely inside the perimeter, most were caught outside as a recoilless rifle fired on the patrol. HN Wethington and HM3 William G. Gessner [2nd Plt, D/1/9] rushed out to attend to the wounded. During a lull in the incoming, the seriously wounded were moved inside the perimeter. Fixed air silenced the NVA recoilless rifle while on station, but when the plane departed, the incoming resumed. HN Wethington, standing in the 1st Platoon trench line, was hit in his chest and literally blown apart from one of the recoilless rounds.[2233]

[General Westmoreland sent the following to General Wheeler, Chief of the Joint Chiefs of Staff on 2 March: "The following is a reply to the question.. would the evacuation of Khe Sanh and the establishment of a defensive line located further to the east improve or degrade your military situation in I CTZ: Answer: There are no advantages of military significance accruing from abandoning Khe Sanh if it is indeed our purpose to eject or destroy the invading NVA forces from the RVN. On the other hand, the disadvantages of voluntarily withdrawing from Khe Sanh are tactically and psychologically of the greatest significance.

"In the immediate time frame, abandoning the Khe Sanh launch base and withdrawing forces to the east has one overriding disadvantage—to do so under siege would involve abandoning or destroying tanks, artillery, ontos, other vehicles, and great quantities of equipment. To do this, except under the most extreme emergencies, is militarily unacceptable. The better solution would be to relieve the garrison by attack...

2225 Conversation with Harve Saal, 16 February 1991.
2226 Conversation with James Moore, 26 February 1996.
2227 1/9 ComdC Mar68, Encl (1), p. 1.
2228 Letter from Joseph Murray, 28 June 1990.
2229 1/26 ComdC Feb68, S2/S3 Log, 27 February 1968, Ser #40 indicates C2264900 received serious wounds from shrapnel in head and legs from a mortar at 1255H, 27 February 1968.
2230 Conversation with John Corbett, 5 October 1986
2231 Corbett, John, West Dickens Avenue, A Marine at Khe Sanh, New York: Ballantine Books, 2003, p. 152.
2232 3rd MarDiv COC 031132Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #492, Para. 4.C.
2233 Letter of William G. Gessner, 1 October 1987.

"The military advantages of holding Khe Sanh are as follows: A. It is at the confluence of numerous valley infiltration routes leading into the population centers of Quang Tri and Thua Thien. This base inhibits and at best interdicts the unrestricted use of these routes by the enemy to supply and reinforce his attacks on Quang Tri and Hue. B. Retention of Khe Sanh denies the enemy free and untrammeled access to our western flank and the opportunity to envelop our forces north of Quang Tri City. C. Khe Sanh provides a forward launch and recovery base for deep reconnaissance patrols and observation groups in the western mountains of RVN and the Laotian panhandle. D. It provides an invaluable base for patrols and intelligence gathering means of major enemy movement southward from the western reaches of the DMZ and Laotian infiltration routes.. Its retention forces the NVA into using the longer routes of the Laotian panhandle. E. Our presence at Khe Sanh has forced the enemy to divert sizable forces that have become vulnerable to our massive fire power. Although we do not know the extent of his losses from our fire, it is reasonable to assume they are substantial. F. Aside from the political aspects, the retreat of US/ARVN units in the face of NVA forces would send a psychological shock wave of inestimable magnitude throughout the armed forces of RVN. Its traumatic impact on the morale and fighting spirit of ARVN troops would be of major consequence in the further defense of RVN."[2234]]

04 MARCH 1968

MUTZ, LCPL Dennis Howard	K/3/26
SAUNDERS, PFC Donald Baron	HQ/1/13
YAMANAKA, LCPL Roger Kimo	H&S/3/26

As an indication of the dispersion of people and how battle did not permit men to socialize within their area due to incoming and the focus on building defensive positions, PFC James N. Kaylor and LCPL Roger Yamanaka, who had been active in the same church (although they attended different high schools), were in the same unit at Khe Sanh, E/2/26, but unaware of each other at the time! Yamanaka's father had been Kaylor's father's attorney, and Kaylor remembers the entire family as nice people. Not only was Kaylor was unaware of Yamanaka being in E/2/26 with him on Hill 861-Alfa, but he was also unaware he had been killed until he returned home![2235]

PFCs Craig W. Tourte and Donald B. Saunders were with Headquarters Battery, 1/13 when Saunders was ordered by Sgt. Michael Secli to join a working party adding sandbags to their Major's bunker. While there, a mortar round hit him in the ribs. "He never knew what hit him." Tourte collected his personal effects to send to his parents. Although unmarried, Saunders had two small boys.[2236] Saunders had enlisted in the Marine Corps on 28 September, his father's birthday. He had participated in the cross-country team while attending Belleville High School, a team which won the Big Ten Conference Championship in 1965.[2237]

05 March 1968

HOLLIMON, PVT Billy Michael	H/2/26

06 MARCH 1968

ALDRIDGE, PFC Herbert Ray	B/1/26
ANDERSON, PFC David George	H&S/1/26
ANSELMO, SSGT William Frank	APS-15
BEALE, PFC George Eugene	2/26
BEAUFORD, PFC Willis Jr.	B/1/26
BOYER, PFC Charles Goodhue	H&S/1/26
BRIGNAC, CPL Joseph Paul	B/1/26
BUMSTEAD, PFC Donald Royce	H&S/1/26
CLARK, LCPL John Howard Jr.	2/26
CONLIN, SGT Jeffrey Francis	311 ACS
ELLIOTT, PFC George L III	A/1/13
ELLISON, Robert	Civilian
GRAY, PFC Michael Douglas	H&S, FLSG A
GRZEGOREK, PFC James Andrew	H&S/1/26
HALL, PFC Blucher Ray	H&S/1/26
HAMPTON, LTC Frederick Jordan	311 ACS
HELGESON, 1/Lt Ellis Eugene Jr.	311 ACS
HICKS, PFC Paul Everett	G/2/26
HIGGS, PFC Ralph Edward	H&S/1/26
HOLLAR, PFC Howard Eslie	H&S/1/26
HORVATH, PFC Robert John	H&S/1/26
JACKSON, LCPL Andrew	F/2/26
KENNEDY, CPL Larry Scott	A/1/13
LATSHAW, PFC Harry K	G/2/26
MACMILLAN, LCPL Thomas	K/3/26
MARTURANO, PFC Joseph Anthony Jr.	G/2/26
McCOSAR, LCPL Winford	B/1/26
MEAD, PVT Dennis Michael	D/1/26
MEDEIROS, CPL Dennis J	H/2/26
MILES, PFC James Edward	H/2/26
MINCH, PFC Roger Carl	H&S/1/26
MOORE, SGT Dallas Henry	311 ACS
MOORE, PFC James Ezra	G/2/26
MOSS, PFC Thomas John Jr.	H&S/1/26
O'HARE, PFC Richard James	G/2/26
PIZARRO, CPL Vic Manuel	A/1/13
PRESLEY, PFC Ronnie Calvin	H&S/1/26

[2234] General Westmoreland 021045Z/Mar68, MAC 02954. (In Westmoreland v. CBS files).

[2235] Conversation with James Kaylor, 17 January 1992; letter from James Kaylor to Earle Breeding, undated.

[2236] Letter from Craig W. Tourte, 24 November 2003; email on Khe Sanh message board dated 04 March 2003.

[2237] Craig W. Tourte, "Every Single One is Important," Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc., Red Clay, Issue #61 (Spring, 2005), p. 12.

RIOS, SSGT Noel Luis	APS-15
ROBINSON, CPL Samuel Percell	2/26
RODRIGUEZ, PVT Domingo Jr.	H&S/1/26
RUSSELL, PFC John Malcolm Jr.	H&S/1/26
RYAN, CPL Ronald Royce	B/1/26
SEARS, CPL Michael	H&S/1/26
SMITH, LCPL James Herbert Jr.	SupCo, FLSG-A
STANCIU, LCPL Kenneth Allan	K/3/26
STRONG, CPL Stanley Grant	C/1/26
TAYLOR, PFC James Otis	2/26
TAYLOR, LCPL Louis Gains	A/1/26
TERHUNE, PFC Daryl Bert Jr.	G/2/26
TERRELL, PFC William Lee	A/1/26
TONER, HN Louis Joseph	H&S/3/26
VICKERS, LCPL Robert Lee	A/1/26
WALDRON, MSGT Howard Bert	H&S/1/26
WEST, PFC Stephen Alan	H&S/1/26
WIENCKOSKI, PFC David Raymond	L/3/26
WILLIAMS, LCPL Hollis Jr.	H/2/26
WILLIAMS, PFC Thomas Hansford	H&S/1/26

LCPL Thomas J. Tompkins, a communicator with 26th Marines Regiment staff, was sitting in a large group beside two C-123s at the DaNang Air Base lined nose to tail on his right, waiting for transportation to Khe Sanh. After a black Staff Sergeant walked through the middle of the group counting heads and moving people around, he said that the group to his left would get on the first C-123 and told the group to his right that they would return to the R&R Center and fly in the next day. A few hours later, the group that returned to the R&R Center learned that the first plane had been shot down.[2238]

One Marine, LCPL Hector L. Perez [B/1/26] had gone to mail a package to his mother and missed the plane.[2239]

LCPL Bruce W. Stuckey [B/1/26] was assigned #63 on the flight to Khe Sanh, but while he was making a "head-call" someone else answered to his number and boarded the aircraft. Because his name was on the list, his parents were subsequently informed that he was MIA.[2240]

PFC James A. Carter [A-2/1/26] started to get his gear ready to board the airplane when his number was called, but realized someone had picked up his rifle by mistake. He went to the plane to look for it, but was unable to locate it. The plane took off and he was later reported as MIA, and then KIA.[2241] PFC Michael W. Thompson [also of A-2/1/26] accompanied PFC Carter in the search for the rifle, left the aircraft, went to their Battalion supply (rear) to check out another rifle, and arrived too late, missing the flight by 5 minutes.[2242]

Cleophas Kearney was crew chief for the plane, but didn't embark "because I was told it was already overbooked."[2243]

The Marines of MACTU-62 (Marine Air Control Tactical Unit) ran the air tower at Khe Sanh Combat Base who provided air traffic control service and radar ground control approach to all aircraft using the Khe Sanh airfield. Because of this job and proximity to the airstrip, MACTU-62 took numerous casualties to personnel and equipment, including two wounded Marines that took their third Purple Hearts, the death of their Commanding Officer, Capt William Flahive on 31 January, and the destruction of most of their equipment above ground including the original air tower.[2244]

At 1530H on the afternoon of Wednesday, 06 March 1968, LCPL Larry Gaffney was on duty as the "tower flower" and Sgt Robert E. Powell on duty as the "scope dope"[2245] when a C-123K Provider, Callsign BOOKIE 762 (#54-0590) broke out of the clouds, ready to land with its 44 passengers and crew of 5.[2246] Gaffney relayed the visual contact to Powell and then quickly scanned the runway to ensure it was clear of trucks and people.

"Larry also checked the sky west of the runway, and to his shock and amazement there was a little O1E Bird-dog.. turning a steep left base to final for the opposite end of the runway! Head-on into the other plane!!! The [2238] Letters of Thomas J. Tompkins, 5 May 1994 and 25 April 1997.

---

[2239] UPI Release, 6 March 1968, printed in Quincy, Il.: Herald-Whig, "C123 Downed at Khe Sanh, 47 Die," p. A2.

[2240] Statement of LCPL Bruce W. Stuckey in Library of Congress MIA file, Reel #420, Folder #5, Rios, Noel L.

[2241] Statement of PFC James A. Carter, in Library of Congress MIA file, Reel #280, Folder #54, Anselmo, William.

[2242] Statement of LCPL Michael W. Thompson in Library of Congress MIA file, Reel #280, Folder #54, Anselmo, William.

[2243] Conversation with Cleophas Kearney, 17 December 2005.

[2244] Comments of Capt Richard W. D'Ambrosio, USMC Oral History Tape #2621. The air tower received a direct hit early in the siege battle, detonating on a sandbag near the lower corner of the control shack. The next day, a new "tower" which was only about 7-ft. high was constructed to direct air traffic at Khe Sanh. ["Khe Sanh's Traffic Unit Digs Deeper," III MAF: Sea Tiger 4:10 (8 March 1968), p. 12.]

[2245] Letter of Richard G. Rasmussen, 7 January 1985. Sgt Rasmussen served in MACTU-62 during the siege battle at Khe Sanh. "Tower flower"=term used by MACTU Marines for the air tower controller on duty; "scope dope"=term used by MACTU Marines for the radar controller on the GCA.

[2246] 3rd MarDiv COC 061320Z/Mar68, SITREP for 26th Marines for 061800H, in III MAF COC Journal and File #319 and III MAF Journal File, SCOTLAND, Pt. 5 (25 Feb – 8 Mar 68); 3rd MarDiv COC 061402Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #507, Para. 4.E.; Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 140. "BOOKIE 762" is identified in Letter of Richard G. Rassmussen, 7 January 1985. The plane was attached to the 311 ACS, 315 ACW, USAF, Phan Rang, detached to DaNang, with 49 aboard (5 crew and 44 passengers including a civilian photographer).

O1E had descended through the clouds VFR (visually) and didn't contact anyone. It was piloted by a South Vietnamese aviator.. and there was a U.S. Special Forces Colonel riding in the back seat as a passenger.

"Larry immediately transmitted in the blind on all frequencies.. instructing the O1E to take it around in both English and Vietnamese. VNAF pilots were notorious for flying where they wanted without contacting control towers. Larry did the next logical thing in accordance with common sense and procedure; he immediately went to the aircraft that was communicating with the ground. To avoid the collision he instructed Bob to give BOOKIE 672 a go around due to no radio opposite direction traffic.

"All this happened in .. about 30 seconds with incoming artillery exploding on and near the runway. As is standard evasive flight on a go around, the C-123 turned right 90 degrees, pulled her nose up and started to climb adjusting flaps, ailerons and drawing up its landing gear as she tried desperately to climb into the safety of the overcast skies. This was a fatal position for the C-123 because as she climbed her underbelly was exposed to the point blank fire of the enemy guns dug into the mountains just north of the runway. There were several bursts of .50 caliber machine gun fire and some recoilless rifles. Everyone on the base could see her get hit. She lost three of her engines in the barrage but managed to climb to about 4,000 feet and hoped to reach DaNang on the lone prop engine. As she disappeared into the clouds Larry sent as many helicopters as possible (those without external loads and not carrying wounded) about four or five—two HU1Es 2 CH-46s, and I believe one CH-53 hot on the trail of the damaged C-123.

"In the mean time the little O1E did not land, rather it made a low pass down the runway. Larry memorized the numbers on the side of the fuselage. [The C-123].. made it a few miles east of Khe Sanh when it simply lost altitude and crashed into the side of a steep mountain. The choppers that had gone after it caught up to her moments after the impact and there was an immediate explosion and intense fire... The helicopter remained circling the site for a long time and searched intensely for survivors.[2247]

The aircraft crashed on the north side of the DaKrong River at XD933404. Helicopters were at the crash site within 2 – 3 minutes and COVEY-243 and HAMMER-91 (HILLSBORO) went to the crash site and reported complete destruction[2248] and no survivors.[2249] "A forward air controller who had the aircraft in sight saw an explosion and fire on the left wing of the aircraft, then observed it as it rolled into a vertical dive from an altitude of 2,700 feet, and crashed. A huge fireball was seen to arise from the ground. Neither the forward air controller nor the pilot of a helicopter which arrived within a few minutes observed indications that any of the crew or passengers had survived."[2250]

The next day, 7 March 1968, the group that remained at DaNang boarded another C-123 and took off for Khe Sanh, landing at Phu Bai as an intermediate stop. After landing, the pilot of the aircraft drove the aircraft off the airstrip into the sand and walked away. "We were told his buddies were killed the day before and he was in no condition to fly the aircraft. We waited several hours for a new pilot to arrive,"[2251] took off for Khe Sanh, and arrived at Khe Sanh.[2252]

Also on 7 March 1968, the VNAF O1E again appeared over the airstrip at Khe Sanh and rolled out on the runway past the tower. "Larry opened up on it with both barrels of [Major Havlik's] shot gun putting some holes in the side of its fuselage. The next day they medevaced Larry out for mental stress."[2253] 16 years later, Larry was in tears as he related all this to his friend, Rick Rasmussen;[2254] "..convinced—and I must agree with him—that if that damn O1E hadn't broken the rules, if he had called the control tower, [the] C-123 would have landed safely and the 49 young men on board might be alive today."[2255]

Most of the passengers aboard were returning to KSCB from R&R or previous medevacs, and were close friends of the "old-timers" on the base. Lt William Smith lost his two radio-operators, PFC George L. Elliott, III, and Cpl Larry Scott Kennedy:

"PFC Elliott had a photographic memory. He ended up handling the radios the night that the ammo dump flew. I took him to battalion with me and Elliott was unbelievable. He was a Private who told me when I first arrived there, 'What are you grabbing the handset for?' He said, 'All the officers are exactly the same. I went to communications school; I'm carrying the radio. You leave the goddamn radio alone! You tell me what to say.' He said, 'You want to carry the radio? You want to go to radio school? I'll let you carry it. But don't be grabbing

---

[2247] Letter of Richard Rasmussen, 7 January 1985.

[2248] 26Mar ALO Log entry for 6 March 1968. The ALO Log was the regimental Air Officer's notebook used at one time or another by Captains Donahue, Fitzsimmons, and Graves. It remained in the regimental COC the day the 26th Marines departed and one of the radiomen, LCPL Michael J. Archer, retrieved it and kept it with his gear. It had been with his Vietnam memorabilia until it was forwarded to Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe 30 May 2002. UPI press release, 6 March 1968, printed in Quincy, Il, Herald-Whig, 6 March 1968, "C123 Downed at Khe Sanh, 47 Die," p. 2A.

[2249] 3rd MarDiv COC 061400Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #507.

[2250] Letter from Major General Robert J. Dixon, 10 December 1968, to CO, 1st Marine Brigade, in Library of Congress MIA file Reel #420, Folder #5, Rios, Noel L.

[2251] Letter of Tom Tompkins, 5 May 1994.

[2252] Letter of Tom Tompkins, 25 Apr 1997.

[2253] Letter of Richard Rasmussen, 7 January 1985; Conversation with Richard Rasmussen, 10 March 1984.

[2254] Conversation with Richard Rasmussen, 9 March 1984.

[2255] Letter of Richard Rasmussen, 7 January 1985.

my radio!' I said, 'Fine.' And it was the hardest thing for me to learn because when we're under fire, to take the radio was like grabbing a bottle; all officers did it. Once I learned and developed faith in the kid—he was only 17 ½ or something like that, but he had a mind that was like a steel trap. He had an incurable sense of humor. He could remember three or four sets of coordinates that people were throwing at him at once and repeat them flawlessly. He was great."[2256]

Lt Smith recalls one time when he and Elliott had just come off operations from Hill 861 and Elliott went into the Headquarters Battery supply tent for some jungle utility trousers. The Supply Sergeant said, 'We don't have any; the grunts get them all first and we don't get any.' So he walked around the corner from the supply tent, angry. The anger turned into rage when he spotted a Marine carrying 10, 15 pair of brand-new jungle utilities out of the tent. "He went apeshit—out of his mind! He took his .45 and started shooting—holes in that tent like you wouldn't believe! He was crazy, absolutely crazy. He kept screaming, 'I'm a field Marine and can't get trousers, and these goddamn "rear echelon pogues" get all the trousers!' He had just made Lance Corporal and was busted back to Private again!"[2257]

Elliott and Kennedy (who had been assigned to Lt Smith later as a Scout Observer during an operation Smith accompanied out of Lang Vei before the siege) had gone on R&R separately[2258] and, while they were at DaNang, called Smith: "They called me on the land-line, 'Lt can we have an extra day together?' And I said, 'Yes, you can have an extra day together, but get here tomorrow.'"[2259] They should have returned to Khe Sanh on March 5th, but now they were on the flight of March 6th.[2260]

LCPL William Terrell was also an "old salt" of Khe Sanh days. On Thursday, 3 August 1967, he had asked Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe to take a photo of him with a canister with Russian markings on it, and then gave the canister to the Chaplain.[2261] Also on the flight was the mild-mannered clerk typist ("Remington Raider") for C/1/26, Cpl Stanley Strong who had received some shrapnel in his leg. Cpl Strong always attended religious worship services, and was a married man.[2262] After treatment on the hospital ship he was returning for duty at Khe Sanh.

Robert Ellison was a civilian on the flight. Ellison had lived for some six weeks in the trenches[2263] with the Marines of B/1/26, and even assisted the Marines who went out to rescue survivors of the Jacques' patrol on 25 February move through a mine field. Ellison knew where the mines were. He had taken photos of the return of Jacques' body from that patrol along with other photos that appeared on the cover and inside the 18 March 1968 issue of Newsweek ("The Agony of Khe Sanh") while he was working for Evans Photo-Journalism, Empire News, based in Saigon. He had delivered his photos, but felt he hadn't quite captured what he wanted to say visually about Khe Sanh and also didn't want to leave those he had come to know so well until they also left Khe Sanh. So, unmanifested, he was on the flight of the C-123 on 6 March.[2264]

Ellison had studied at the University of Florida in Gainsville to be a herpetologist and got to taking photos of snakes and reptiles and learning photography through the man who was doing the newspaper for the university. He then changed his major to journalism, and subsequently did major civil rights photography during the Selma March with Dr. Martin Luther King. When Dr. King was assassinated, the Ebony magazine was ready to go to press and all was tossed out in order to devote the issue to Dr. King, except for a piece they wrote on Robert Ellison that they left in the beginning of the magazine, a tribute they included for what he did on the Selma march and the voter registration effort.[2265]

Ellison was awarded (posthumously) the Overseas Press Club Award for the photographs that appeared in the Newsweek issue.[2266]

Ellison died at the age of 23, the same age that his father died during World War II (in 1944)—and, there were 23 years separating their deaths![2267] Not only his father (Albert "Jack" Ellison of the 11th Airborne Div, but his entire family had a rich military background. His great-grandfather founded the Western Military Acad-

---

[2256] Conversation with William Smith, 16 March 1985.
[2257] Conversations with William Smith 13 January 1990 and 24 June 1991.
[2258] Conversation with William Smith, 23 March 1985
[2259] Conversation with William Smith, 24 April 1988.
[2260] Of course, given the large number of those traveling on the 6th, it is apparent that passengers were unable to depart from DaNang for several days, and departure on the 5th would not have occurred anyway. During the siege, due to priorities assigned for medevacs and re-supply, as well as foggy weather, getting a flight into Khe Sanh was an exceedingly difficult process.
[2261] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 3 August 1967. Terrill entered active duty 13 September 1966 in Nashville, Tn.
[2262] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 25 January 1968.
[2263] Comments of Mrs. Miriam Eaton at Khe Sanh reunion 3 July 1993, printed in Khe Sanh Veteran 1:4 (Winter, 1993), p. 4.
[2264] Conversations with Mrs. Miriam Eaton, 01 March 1993 and 03 June 1993. Mrs. Eaton is Robert Ellison's mother, having re-married following the death of her first husband.
[2265] Conversation with Mrs. Miriam Eaton, 1 March 1993; Faas, Horst and Page, Tim, Requiem, New York: Random House, 1997, p. 319, "Robert Jackson Ellison," quotes Ebony, Ellison as "the young white photographer who lived free of prejudice, full of understanding and respectful of the rights of all men."
[2266] Conversation with Mrs. Miriam Eaton, 01 March 1993.
[2267] Conversation with Mrs. Miriam Eaton, 29 October 2002.

emy in Alton, Illinois, where Ellison attended high school, and nearly everyone of age, including two of his aunts, served in the military during World War II. "While he was not a proponent of the war, Elliso's passion for the soldiers, sailors, Maries, and airme he covered shows I his photographs, capturing their every thought ad emotion."[2268]

James Hampton had planned a trip to Vietnam for over 30 years: "If you ask me why, I couldn't give you a logical answer. I was looking for a man I can't remember, that I know a lot about. I know his statistics, the facts, figures and history, but I never really got to know him personally because on March 6, 1968, near Khe Sanh, Vietnam, the C-123 he was flying was shot down leaving no survivors. He is my father."[2269] James Hampton returned to Vietnam, and with only two days remaining on his visa and through great difficulties, found himself on the plateau that had once been KSCB. "I tried to imagine the horror of the bloody battles fought here. I walked away from our guide and oriented myself with maps and diagrams of the base... The distant mountains were the key. That was where the anti-aircraft guns had been and that was where his plane was. The last thing my father saw were those mountains rushing up at the end of his life. My throat tightened. I whispered 'Hi Dad' to the mountains. The sound of my voice on that quiet hillside startled me. 'I have come to tell you Dad, how much I love you and miss you and that your son grew up OK. Can you hear me?' Turning away, I wiped the sweat and tears from my eyes. I had come to speak to my father, and I had done it as best I knew how. I climbed back into the car and whispered a quiet goodbye."[2270]

The younger brother of PFC Daryl Terhune—and the whole family—remained perplexed over the death: "In March of 1968 our family was notified that Daryl was officially listed as MIA. Later we were told that he died on 3/6/68 in a plane that was shot down at Khe Sanh. I don't think anyone in the family has ever believed that. His fellow soldiers said that he was not scheduled to be on that plane. There was never an official roster as to who was on the plane. And, we received two calls four months later from an overseas Asian operator trying to connect a collect call that went dead when we tried to accept."[2271] When the death notice appeared in the local paper, the younger brother, Mark, was sent to obtain copies: "One of the longest days of my life was collecting newspapers from the neighborhood. Mom wanted to send copies to relatives and she sent around cause I was the youngest. I had to stop at each walk to dry my eyes before knocking. Then the condolences when I explained what I wanted just made them start back up again."[2272]

Master Sergeant Howard Waldron had served in the Marine Corps during World War II and Korea, and had been away from the Corps sufficiently long that he yearned to return. After he visited all his family members, he rejoined. He had two children from his second marriage—four and six years of age when he died after 26 years of active service. His nephew, David, and one of his sons later also served in the Marine Corps—"it was a family tradition [to serve in the Marine Corps]."[2273]

Victor Pizzaro's brother, Nelson Marquez, was serving with the 26th Infantry, U.S. Army, at Cu Chi at the time of the crash.[2274]

On 6 March 1968, Sgt William F. Anselmo, USAF, and Sgt Noel L. Rios, USAF, were directed to proceed to Khe Sanh to repair 463L equipment, specifically, the steering mechanism of a rough terrain forklift. After they manifested on an aircraft, tail number 662, mission number 701, the aircraft was unable to take-off due to maintenance problems. Another aircraft, mission number 702, departed DaNang for Phu Bai where they embarked Marine passengers, proceeded to Khe Sanh, and crashed. Although it could not be verified, it was assumed that Anselmo and Rios boarded the C-123, tail number 590, 702 mission, after the previous aircraft was unable to proceed to Khe Sanh. They were not manifested. Although not seen by USAF aerial port personnel at Phu Bai, the presence of four or five pallets of beer and sodas which had to be palletized on a speed pallet, while not of great significance, might relate to the four or five pallets of beer and soda that Anselmo and Rios had with them when they departed DaNang for their buddies at Khe Sanh. This gave credence to the assumption that they probably boarded the aircraft after the other passengers had on-loaded.[2275]

At 1133H on 25 March, Co E/2/3 conducted a heliborne assault from XD895406 to an LZ at XD920410 in preparation for recovery operation of the crashed C-123.

[2268] Jeff Kollath, "An Instinct for Light: The Photography of Robert J. Ellison," Wisconsin Veterans Museum Foundation: The Bugle 13:4 (December, 2007). Some of Ellison's photographs were exhibited at the Wisconsin Veterans Museum in 2008. His mother, Miriam Eaton, had donated all his letters, photographs, and artwork to the Museum.

[2269] James Hampton, "Getting to Goodbye: A Homage From a Son to His Father," Tampa Bay Magazine, March/April, 1996, pp. 58-61. (Quote on p. 58).

[2270] Ibid., p. 61.

[2271] Letter from Mark Lee Terhune, 2 May 2000.

[2272] Letter from Mark Lee Terhune, 7 December 2001.

[2273] Conversation with David F. Waldron, 14 May 1997. David Waldron was Howard Waldron's nephew.

[2274] Conversation with Nelson Marquez, 14 March 2002.

[2275] Letter from 15th Aerial Port Squadron, 17 March 1968, Subj: Report of Missing Personnel, Sgt William F. Anselmo, AF17696843 and Sgt Noel L. Rios, AF12576605, in Library of Congress, MIA file, Reel #420, Folder #5, Rios, Noel L. Anselmo and Rios were assigned to 15th Aerial Port Squadron (15 APS) and attached to the 463L Maintenance Section of the 366th Transportation Squadron. The C-123, tail number 662 was "down" due to an inoperative nose wheel.

At noon, they found the remains of the C-123 aircraft at XD933406 and commenced recovery operations until 1745H. A search of the area disclosed the remains of scattered skeletons which made even an estimate of who or how many were on the aircraft impossible, 6 identification tags, parts of seven service record books (partially or almost totally destroyed), and assorted items such as health records, dental records, personal letters, wallets, and so on. All remains and personal effects were forwarded to A-Med on KSCB.[2276]

The crashed aircraft lay in a very steep draw with sides nearly vertical so that recovery personnel were unable to walk but had to crawl. The aircraft was 95% destroyed, approximately 40% by fire. The left wing was completely sheared off and while the right wing was intact, it was totally scorched by fire. The right engine was found in a draw about 35 meters from the body of the wreckage. The wreckage was in a compact area; no part was more than 35 meters from the main body of the wreckage. The area behind the wreckage was plowed up to about 45 meters which indicated the aircraft crashed at a very steep angle.[2277] Human remains had decomposed and only skeletal sections remained. Individual bones were scattered throughout the area with most skeletal parts found in the immediate area badly burned. Clothing was burned and deteriorated and there were signs of prevalent animal life. Axes and machetes were used to ensure access to all areas where documents, remains, or equipment might be located. After 5 hours and 45 minutes of searching, the possibility of locating additional remains, records or equipment was deemed extremely remote.[2278]

Evidently, not all remains were evacuated since, on 25 June, at 1330H, a patrol from D/1/4, came upon the remains of the downed C-123 and 15 bodies. "Graves Registration assistance was used in recovery. Also found were 30 M-16 rifles, 3 SRBs and other equipment including helmets and cartridge belts."[2279]

On 3 July 1968, an operation to recover all human remains and materiel which could assist in the identification of the remains was conducted at the crash site. Graves registration personnel accompanying the operation reported that further recovery operations would be fruitless. Remains were found both inside the aircraft and scattered throughout the underbrush near the crash site. As the recovery force departed, engineer personnel used demolitions to destroy communications equipment and damaged weapons in the aircraft.[2280]

At 1300, 5 November 1968, a C/1/4 patrol found one body at XD931405 completely decomposed and fully clothed with flak jacket. The patrol took the following items for classification: rims of glasses, lower part of jawbone with teeth, one Marine Corps gift pen, part of chain from dog tags and one cross, one stamp pad (Marine type) with initials and two letters of last name and one wrist watch.[2281]

The skeletal remains of 35 unidentified were buried in a mass grave at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Missouri, on 23 November 1968.[2282]

It wasn't until 26 Sep 2003 that the USAF conducted a ceremony for Noel and Anselmo. "The Air Force had been able to identify all the other remains on the airplane well before this ceremony. The only remains left to be buried where Noel's and William Anselmo's. While the Air Force could not definitely say the remains were those of Noel and Anselmo, they had conclusively identified everyone else. Since Noel and Anselmo were known to be on the aircraft and there were 2 sets of inconclusively identified remains, the remains were finally declared to be theirs and the burial ceremony finally set up to take place. There were 30 Marines, 1 Navy Seaman, 4 US Air Force Airmen, and 1 civilian on the airplane."[2283]

[By now Khe Sanh village was totally annihilated. An aerial photo recon mission flown on 06 March reported: "XD841381—Village of Khe Sanh, destroyed and abandoned including triangular fort at XD846377." Also destroyed was the old French Fort to the east of Khe Sanh Village: "XD859385—Square Fort, destroyed."[2284]

Photo recon also disclosed NVA forces using the overrun Lang Vei Special Forces came as a storage depot.[2285] A COVEY FAC noted moderate vehicle traffic along the Santa Fe Trail, XD690507 southeast to XD721493, indicating placement of heavy artillery positions, reported anti-aircraft and automatic weapons positions and mortar positions 1,000 meters between Hills 861 and 881S, digging 150 feet from Hill 861 and a perpen-

[2276] 2/3 ComdC Apr68; 1MAR ComdC Apr68, p. III-A-12; 1Mar Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #42.

[2277] "C-123 Missing Aircraft Report signed by 2/Lt Ernest F. Lusky, 3rd Plt, 3/4, in Library of Congress MIA Rell #420, File #5, Rios, Noel L. (Almost all of the report is illegible, but does contain a legible diagram of the crash site).

[2278] CG III MAF 071350Z/May68 to SecNav, Washington, DC, in Library of Congress MIA file Reel #420, Folder #5, Rios, Noel L.

[2279] Bn 1/4 ComdC, 01-30 June 1968,, Part II, p. 3.

[2280] CG III MAF 060642Z/Jul68 to CMC, in Library of Congress MIA file Reel #420, Folder #5, Rios, Noel L.

[2281] 1/4 ComdC Nov68, Encl (1), p. 5.

[2282] Section 81, Grave 327-329.

[2283] Email dated 16 Nov 2003 contained in letter from William Jayne, 30 April 2008.

[2284] MACV J2 CICV 082010Z/Mar68, SUPIR #0538-68 (MSN #5690) in III MAF COC Journal and File, 09/10 March 1968 #86. The triangular fort was the old Huong Hoa District Headquarters/CAC OSCAR CP compound. SUPIR=Supplementary Photographic Interpretation Report.

[2285] III MAF COC 091247Z/Mar68, IPIR MSN M-03-07-720, in III MAF CIC Journal and File 11/12 Mar 1968 #198.

dicular trench to Hill 558 which was struck by air causing 10-15 meters of the trench to burst into flames.[2286]

Evacuation of Bru Montagnards began on 07 March when FOB-3 spotted a large group of the tribespeople heading for KSCB at 0715H. It was a tense moment, for simultaneously they also spotted a company-size NVA unit of NVA on Hill 471.[2287] On 11 March, 2 large groups of Bru approached KSCB. FOB-3 screened and evacuated 243 with 223 more waiting evacuation.[2288] At noon, 13 March, FOB-3 reported 625 Bru refugees inside their compound and approximately 200 more waiting outside. An AO reported 500 more on a road headed generally toward KSCB.[2289] During the period 09-19 March 1968, 1,247 Bru refugees were air-evacuated from Khe Sanh to the Cam Lo Refugee Center, the majority being airlifted by helicopter to Dong Ha and then trucked to Cam Lo.[2290]].

08 MARCH 1968

CHAMBLIN, SGT Donald Ray Jr.	1/13
JONES, PFC Donald Ernest	K/3/26
STORZ, SGT George William	H&S/1/9

As of 1350 local time at Khe Sanh, the weather report indicated a high of 79, low of 59, humidity at 80%, clouds 600 scattered, 1500 overcast, visibility 5 miles.[2291] At 1030H incoming at Khe Sanh increased from sporadic to heavy. Within 4 minutes 40 rounds of mixed artillery and rockets were received.[2292]

A mortar round landed on the airfield where a CH-46 had just landed causing 40 casualties.[2293]

On 8 March, Sgt Best was at the Khe Sanh airfield to fly to DaNang and begin his processing to return home to be discharged,[2294] along with his friend, Sgt George Storz.[2295] LCPL George A. Johnson (also of 106s, H&S/1/9) remembers Storz coming out in a vehicle to say good-bye to his buddies.[2296] He had enlisted in 1963 and served a previous Vietnam tour in 1965, and in September, 1967, was a Corporal with less than 6 months remaining on his enlistment. At that rank he was ineligible to be ordered to Vietnam. He was promoted to Sergeant and, arriving in Vietnam 26 November 1967, had less than 4 months remaining on his enlistment.[2297] "He did not want to go back. He appealed to his Congressman. His wife was pregnant. He wrote Congressman Clawson who wrote the Marine Corps and got a refusal."[2298]

While at the airstrip, it is assumed that Sgt Storz assisted in loading the wounded on the helicopter that was hit. (It was in this incident that PFC Jonathan Nathaniel Spicer, involved in carrying stretchers of the wounded to the helicopter, received wounds from which he would later die on 14 March 1968).[2299]

Days earlier, George had written home, "My main job now is to save my men's lives no matter how much they dislike it." He added, "I take good care of myself, always in my hole and I'm armed to the teeth, knives, pistol, rifle, grenades, everything." He wrote about how the top of his bunker collapsed—300 pounds of dirt weakened by tunneling ants, fell on him has he lay in the bottom bunk, unhurt. He wrote, "So there I was on the floor with big chunks of dirt pinning me down and about a million ants crawling all over me. All we could do was laugh."[2300]

His mother recalls: "George had written about the time at Khe Sanh when a buddy had shared his bottle of wine with him. He wanted so badly to reciprocate, asking at the end of every letter, 'Where's my wine?' His wife was afraid to send it for fear he would get tipsy and get hurt.. Finally she bought the wine.. and gave it to me to mail. It was very late at night when I popped some popcorn to cushion the bottle, and I went to bed intending to finish the package in the morning.

"That night I woke up about 12:30 and tossed and turned the rest of the night. I felt terrible in the morning, put some cheese and crackers in with the wine and

---

[2286] Telephone call from MACV FWD to III MAF, in III MAF COC Journal and File 07/08 Mar68 #244.
[2287] 3rdMarDiv COC 071605Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #510.
[2288] 3rdMarDiv COC 122101/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #527.
[2289] 26Mar 130421Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #534.
[2290] 3rdMarDiv ComdC Mar68, Encl (1), p. 37.
[2291] 3rd MarDiv COC 082050Z/Mar68, Third MarDiv Weather Report, in III MAF COC Journal and File 09/10 Mar 1968 #327. (ZULU time is 7 hours difference from HOTEL time, the local time in Vietnam).
[2292] 3rd MarDiv, Resume of Telephone Call to III MAF, 081045H/Mar68, in III MAF COC Journal and File 08/09 Mar 1968 #63.
[2293] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for Friday, 8 March 1968. (There is no mention of this in the Opn SCOTLAND SITREPs. SITREP #513 indicates the cumulative KIA number at 0001 as 155 KIA and SITREP #516 indicates the cumulative KIA total at 2400 as also 155 KIA.)
[2294] Conversation with James Best, 26 March 1999. (PFC James A. Best and Sgt Storz flew from the States to Vietnam together and both were with H&S/1/9, 106s).
[2295] Letter from Mrs. Betty Storz, 7 Oct 2005.
[2296] Letter from Betty Storz, 22 December 1998.
[2297] Mrs. Betty Storz, "Article for Red Clay," 23 September 1999. (Mrs. Betty Storz was George's mother).
[2298] Conversation with Betty Storz, 30 March 1999.
[2299] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for Saturday, 9 March 1968. The Corpsmen of C Med said that Spicer had directed in the CH-46 medevac helicopter when it was mortared.)
[2300] Mrs. Betty Storz, "Article for Red Clay," in letter of 17 June 1999. Printed in Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue #45 (Autumn, 1999), p. 8.

took the unsealed package with me when I left to go to my teaching job. As I was driving to work, I listened to the radio as the announcer told about the fierce shelling that had gone on at Khe Sanh during the night. I was overcome with emotion and, crying, pulled over and waited until I could continue.

"When I got to the classroom, I put the package on my desk and left the room for a minute. I returned to find that kids had gotten into the popcorn. I rescued the package and hid it until after school, when I sealed it and mailed it on the way home. Not wanting the package traced to me, I did not include a return address. The next day, I wrote to George telling him I had sent the wine on March 8.

"On the 26th, we got the word that George had been killed on March 8th at about 10:30 A.M. Vietnam time, 12:30 California time."[2301] The helicopter was damaged, but Sgt Storz was the only one outside the chopper to be hit. "He was not killed instantly, but he was unable tol respond, but knew Jim [Best] was there... Jim Best told me that he and George discussed faith many times. He said, 'George was a true Christian. He would not leave the bunker normally, because he was afraid he would get hurt. But whenever we heard that Chaplain Stubbe was coming, George would go to hear him and he was not afraid. He and I took Communion every time he came."'[2302]

At 1220H, "A" Battery, 1/13, received one incoming round severely damaging Gun #3.[2303] Although no personnel casualties are indicated in the official SITREP, Sgt Donald R. Chamblin, Jr., a wire chief of 1/13, was mortally wounded in the attack. Sgt Chamblin was one of the wiremen who frequently worked in the open while rockets, mortars, and artillery rounds exploded around him rather than taking cover in bunkers or trenches, in order to ensure communications by land lines[2304] which were always being cut by incoming explosions (as well as the shovels of Marines digging deeper trenches and bunkers).

Cpl Ernest Frank, one of the wiremen for Headquarters Battery, 1/13, found himself atop a pole holding the black comm. wire—poles fashioned out of welded together metal canisters used to contain artillery rounds. In a letter to his parents he writes: "Friday [08 March 1968] was another hectic day. I was climbing poles all day and splicing power lines.. I had just put one line up on a pole and was starting up with another line when I heard a pop in the distance. I jumped off the pole and crouched behind a bunker.. Then it happened! An artillery round landed about 30 feet away from us. It landed right between 2 bunkers where our Staff Sgt. in charge of the radio operators, our Sgt. who was chief wireman (telephone wires), and our supply Cpl. were crouching. It really was a horrible sight. I won't ever be able to forget that sight. The Staff Sgt. and the Cpl were pretty mauled up but are not okay as far as we know. (They were medevaced). the Sgt was only just 20 yrs. old and both his legs were completely blown off at the upper thighs. Our corpsman got him going for a while but after he was medevaced out of here he died."[2305]

Ernie Frank later added that Sgt Chamblin "..was sitting on his bunker and he was shaving. He had just made the comment to somebody, 'There ain't no Gook around to get me! I've only five days left!'... He was on the way out, and died before he got to Dong Ha or wherever they were taking him. It's something I can't get out of my mind. It's something that lives wit h me to this day... He had one leg completely blown off and the right leg was hanging on by a piece of skin, and he looked up at me like a dead man. He was in complete shock, and he said, 'Am I dead?' I said, 'No, man, hang in there!' The thing that bothers me to this day is that I wasn't able even to help at the time. I was just so devastated. I was in shock. I just went over and puked. Everyone else came over and put him on a stretcher, but after they took him off, we ran one way and found his leg, and we ran that over there. I don't know if it made it out on the medevac with him or not. After a few hours we got the word that he didn't make it."[2306]

09 MARCH 1968

RUSSELL, Sgt David Adams	H&S/1/26
STOVALL, LCPL Wilbur	HQ/1/13
STRAUSBAUGH, LCPL Howard Albert	H&S/2/26
WILLIAMS, CPL Kenneth R Jr.	2/26

"Saturday [09 March 1968] was another hectic day. We were hit real hard by 'MR. CHARLES' (everybody has started respecting the enemy now). Our battery is really getting short of men. A round landed right next to the Bat. Hq. office and the 1st Sgt, a Sgt, and a Cpl got it. The Cpl was killed instantly and the other two were medevaced. We got all our lines back up except one or two to individual bunkers and the generator was working like a charm. Then it happened! An artillery round hit my tech bunker and blew half of it away. Lucky for me I wasn't in it at the time... Everybody around here is pretty well shaken up and some are about to have nerv-

---

[2301] Ibid.

[2302] Letter from Mrs. Betty Storz, 7 Oct 2005.

[2303] 3rd MarDiv COC 090110Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #516, Para. 4.B.

[2304] Sgt. Donald R. Chamblin, Jr., Bronze Star Medal Citation.

[2305] Cpl Ernest A. Frank, letter to "Mom and Dad," 10 March 1968.

[2306] Conversation with Ernie Frank, 31 January 1997. Ernie Frank died 2 September 1997 of a heart attack. Perhaps the reason Sgt Chamblin is not indicated as a KIA at Khe Sanh is that he died leaving it while being medevaced.

ous breakdowns. I know I'm not paranoid but I feel like I'm sitting on a bullseye."[2307]

Cpl Robert Holscher [HQ Btry, 1/13] remembers LCPL Stovall as tall, thin; "Willie was a short-timer, having only about 15 days to go until he rotated back. One of my last memories of him was his statement, 'I can't wait to get some of Ma's fried chicken.' He was really excited and anxious to get back to his family. Another Marine, [Cpl] Paul Turnbull, and I ended up taking Willie to graves registration and helped to survey his gear."[2308]

At 1100H, a LAPES [Low Altitude Parachute Extraction System] drop landed off target killing Cpl Williams.[2309] "On March 9, 1968 about 11:00 AM, we—Corporal Kenneth R. Williams, 2108298, USMC, Corporal Rickey L. Chran, 2285703, USMC, and Lance Corporal John T. Reilly, 2170864, USMC, were working in the mess tent of 2nd Battalion, 26th Marines. I walked out of the tent as I heard a plane approach. The skid pallet came out and started coming toward us. I yelled for everybody to hit the deck. Lance Corporal Reilly didn't hear me. I dove as I yelled, and Corporal Williams pushed Lance Corporal Reilly towards me. Corporal Williams didn't have time to get of the way himself."[2310] Williams had the nickname "Porky."[2311]

As Cpl Williams was killed instantly by the sliding pallet from the LAPSE drop, LCPL Howard A. Strausbaugh later died as a result of injuries from this same incident.[2312]

In 2002 Robert Frey posted an email on the Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board: "Gentlemen, I was involved in the resupply to you all in '68. I was flying C-130s as a loadmaster.. I performed the Low Altitude drops (LAPES) that resulted in one of my missions contacting the ground and leaving a substantial part of the airplane in a bunker. We did make it back to base, however the mission has haunted me in that I was directly responsible for the loss of your fellow Marines.."[2313]

1/Lt Nicholas S. Romanetz [Plt Cdr C-2, 1/26] responded: "My bunker was near the runway and I remember you made a couple of passes trying to line up with the runway in the fog. On about the third pass, the plane came out of the fog headed for a tall, 2-story bunker. The tail ramp struck the bunker and the ramp separated from the aircraft. The ramp came tumbling towards our position, all in very slow motion, and came to rest in a position normally occupied by a twin 40 or quad 50... you guys were doing your job, and as we all know, things like this happened and continue to happen.."[2314]

10 MARCH 1968

MOORE, PFC Lewis Wayne	A/3rd Eng

11 MARCH 1968

BEAN, SGTMAJ Donald Wayne	H&S/1/26
BOICOURT, CPL Jess Burton Jr.	H&S/1/9
MEYSEMBOURG, PFC Daniel L.	B/1/9
RUSSELL, LCPL James Lowell	D/1/9

[Message from LtGen Cushman (CG, III MAF) to Col Lownds: "I thought you might like to know that the support provided Khe Sanh by FMAW [First Marine Air Wing], 7th AF, and 7th Fleet has been greater than any other air support effort in the history of warfare. From 22 Jan to 29 Feb, aircraft committed to Operation Niagara delivered 53,380 tons of ordnance, 2,500 secondary explosions and nearly 1,000 secondary fires were caused, 1,000 structures/bunkers were destroyed or damaged, and in excess of 100 trucks were destroyed. These statistics are attributed to only one-half of the 13,298 sorties flown. Ordnance dropped by remaining sorties was under radar control due to weather, and the damage caused was not directly assessed. This unprecedented support from the sky, combined with your masterful employment of ground weapons and units has caused the enemy to suffer heavy losses. You and your officers and men are making a great contribution. Keep up the outstanding work. Warm regards to all. LtGen Cushman sends."[2315]]

At 1300H, Co D/1/9 received 3 rounds of 82mm mortars into their defensive position causing 5 WIA (3 evacuated). At 1435, an OP from Co "D" spotted one enemy bunker, 4 60mm mortars were fired at the bunker with good coverage of the target.[2316]

Official accounts fail to reflect the reality. Robert Sellick [D/1/9] was in LCPL Russell's fire team and remembers that Russell was known as "Bambi." "During our time in the perimeter we became very good friends and of course discussed going home and going to Detroit to buy a car direct, going to New York City in search of

---

[2307] Cpl Ernest A. Frank, letter addressed "to Mom and Dad," 10 March 1968.
[2308] Letter from Robert Holscher, letter of 19 August 1993, printed in Khe Sanh Veteran 1:4 (Winter, 1993), p. 28.
[2309] 26Mar 091602Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #520, Para 4.B.
[2310] Statement of Cpl Rickey L. Chran in Navy and Marine Corps Medal (posthumous) file of Cpl Kenneth R. Williams, Jr.
[2311] Conversation with Michael Cook, 15 March 2008. Cook served as a cook with H&S Co., 2/26 on KSCB and Hill 558.
[2312] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 15 March 1968, in Navy and Marine Corps Medal (posthumous) file of Cpl Kenneth R. Williams, Jr.
[2313] Bob Frey, email posting, Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board, 25 May 2002.
[2314] Nicholas Romanetz, email posting, Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board, 26 May 2002.
[2315] CG III MAF 111412Z/Mar68 in III MAF Outgoing SPECAT EXCLUSIVE (1-27 Mar 1968).
[2316] 1/9 ComdC Mar68, Encl (1), p. 4. No KIAs are indicated, perhaps due to dying after being medevaced.

girls and just leaving Vietnam. Bambi always finished the conversation with 'if I get out of here.' He had been voted Best Looking in his high school and around his neck wore approximately 12 religious medals which were given to him by girls from his home town... On 11 March 1968, our squad was assigned to an observation patrol outside the perimeter. Bambi went on this detail.. We were on the uneventful OP for several hours before returning to the perimeter. Once inside we went to our hootches to stow our gear. When I exited my hootch I walked to Bambis' and called him out. He came out without his flak jacket on (I was wearing mine) and approached me from my left front... It was approximately 1530. At this time I heard a very loud and sharp explosion from behind me that seemed to echo in my head, and a sharp pain on my back, and was thrown to the ground on my left side. I could see a lot of blood but could not see Bambi. I called to [PFC Philip Trieste] Lindsay, who shared the hootch with Bambi, and he came right out and together with the rest of the squad took us to the BAS. It was so far away that the stretcher bearers had to be relieved several times. Once there I was put on the deck and still could not see Bambi... I found out three days later in a Navy hospital in New York that he had died approximately 1 hour after the mortar hit us."[2317]

At 1755, Co "B " received one round of 82mm mortar into their defensive position killing PFC Daniel Meysembourg.[2318] PFC Michael J. Guess [C/1/9] could hardly believe it; another Marine in the battalion was from the relatively small town of Madison, Wisconsin, an ultra-liberal, anti-war hot bed, capital of Wisconsin, home of the University of Wisconsin, that had put a referendum on the ballot calling for an immediate cease fire and withdrawal of U.S. troops after 9,.400 signed a petition (nearly 20% of the city's eligible voters).[2319] Mike Guess had attended Madison East; Daniel Meysembourg Madison Central. Guess frequently walked the long trench line to visit with his comrade from the same town, and they shared their letters from home, as many of the Marines did at the time. During one of these visits, the bunker took a direct hit and collapsed on them. Then, a few days later, another round hit and killed Meysembourg instantly. He had only been at Khe Sanh about two weeks.[2320]

CPL Boicourt, a mortarman with H&S/1/9, KIA this date, had an older sister, a Benedictine Nun. Lt Walker, the 81s commander, named his son after Jess.[2321]

Nita Bean was only 14 when her father, Sergeant Major Donald Wayne Bean, left for Vietnam. He had already served in WW II and Korea, and "he told me when he boarded the plane that he wouldn't come home."[2322] Was it a premonition—frequently enough mentioned by some of those who died at Khe Sanh to arouse an uncanny suspicion that those who were about to die knew it.

PFC James E. Griffin, after his discharge and earning his Ph.D., wrote of his "Top" to two high school teachers: "..if God shined his grace on you, you had a Top like First Sergeant Donald Bean.. First Sergeant of H&S, 1/26, he was my Top and we all loved him dearly... I do not think I ever knew how old he was then, but he had the kind of youthful face.. that you would like to have when you are that old. Husband and father of two young children, he was also father and friend to us all. Like any good father or Top, his only concern was for the well-being of his boys—his Marines. Oh, he could lay some shit on you if you screwed up and he pushed us hard at times but we understood and rarely complained because we knew that he was always there ready to work with us.

"In the afternoon, when the fog or clouds lifted, Top would come out of the bunker where he and four or five us lived and fill sandbags with us and watch the airstrikes that were taking place... I like to think that Top and I were very close. Maybe that is because I felt such a terrible loss the day he died washing clothes.. He always had a smile for everyone, a kind word of encouragement when the going got tough. In the morning he would sometimes say 'rise and shine boys, pat your ass because we made it through another night,' and that was enough to get the day started on a note of hope. At night or early in the wee hours of the morning when I was on radio watch, sometimes he would join me by the radio, our knees almost touching, and we would make hot chocolate or coffee and chat, not much, but a little."[2323]

Griffin recalls his last days: "He was always with us in the main part of the bunker, by the radios, the typewriters. But in those last 2 or 3 days, he was in another part of the bunker most of the time, and he had a picture of his family. He was very quiet—I would say, almost resignation. Not that he didn't go about doing his thing; he was a wonderful First Sergeant."[2324] "The night before he died he was sitting on his cot looking at some pictures when I got off radio watch. He asked me to sit down, to keep him company while I drank my coffee. We did not talk much, but I know he was thinking about his family,

---

[2317] Letter from Robert Sellick, 13 February 1996. BAS=Battalion Aid Station. Note: PFC Lindsay was KIA 09 April 1968.

[2318] 1/9 ComdC Mar68, Encl (1), p. 4.

[2319] New York Times, Sunday, 3 March 1968, p. 4, "Madison, Wis., Puts War on the Ballot."

[2320] Comments of Michael Guess, April, 1986.

[2321] Letter from Mrs. Boicourt to 1/Lt Mike Walker, 19 May 1968.

[2322] Conversation with Mrs. Nita Bean Brown, 17 February 1996.

[2323] Letter of James Griffin to Brenda Fairbairn and 'Christa Vera, Lafayette High School, Williamsburg, VA, contained in his letter postmarked 18 May 1996 and printed in Khe Sanh Veteran, Issue No. 37 (Fall, 1996), pp. 16-17.

[2324] Conversation with James E. Griffin, 16 May 1996.

thinking of the things he would like to say to them, as we all so often did. I believe that Top knew that soon it would be his time to go home and this was his way of letting me know so that I would remember."[2325]

Apparently Christopher Lane [H&S/1/26] was the last person to speak with Bean: "He told me to go inside the bunker and tell everyone to come outside because the sun was shining, and he stepped inside with two water containers that he had filled from the water buffalo, and set them down. He carried the water to the bunker." The Top was outside, washing his socks. Lane said, "Top, I hope you're planning on drinking that water when you're done because we were rationing it." Top replied, "Oh yeah, that's right; I just want to get this Vietnam dirt out of my socks before I go home." He had something like 3 or 4 days before he left for the States.[2326]

Officially, during the period from noon to 6PM, KSCB and outposts received approximately 150 rounds of incoming mortar, rocket, and artillery fire resulting in 3 friendly KIA, 8 WIA (evacuated) and 12 WIA (minor).[2327]

[PFC Glen B. Rappold [B/1/13] was wounded on 12 March 1968[2328] and at the Khe Sanh Veterans reunion in Nashville, TN, 21 July 1990, told his story: "If it wasn't for our Corpsmen, I'd be dead today. The blast took me 15, 20 feet off the ground. My left leg was under my rear end. I kept screaming, 'O my God! Where's my legs?' I played football, baseball, soccer. I said, 'I'm not going home with only one leg!' I got hit in the left ribs and it looked like a squirt gun, squirting me in the face. I passed out 3 times... Two guys took me off the jeep on a stretcher. One was a soul brother; he had a big patch over his left eye, got hit in the face with shrapnel.. He dropped me off the stretcher because he slipped and fell, and I rolled off the stretcher... That night I had to urinate so bad. I was in an underground bunker. I got up off my stretcher and tried to get up, and I fell down twice. This big Mexican Sergeant—was 6-4, 250-pounds, comes in and says, 'What's wrong, Glenn?' I said, 'I got to urinate.' 'No problem.' Picks me up, takes me out, I do my thing, come back. I'm crying. He says, 'Why are you crying?' [Glenn is so choked up in telling this story, he can barely continue]. I said, 'Because us Marines really stick together!' [pause]. That's all I can say."[2329]

13 MARCH 1968

DELANO, LCPL Jimmy Lynn SptCo, 3rd Eng
MACAGBA, HM3 Edilberto Dula B/1/26

At 1330H, KSCB received several incoming recoilless rifle rounds killing LCPL Delano and causing damage to the water point.[2330] The Support Company, 3rd Engineer Battalion, maintained the pump for the water point; every day they went down to start the pump.[2331]

HM3 Macagba had arrived on KSCB in early March[2332] and ran out of the protective trench to bandage the head of one of the men who had been hit. The mortars continued exploding while he was providing medical assistance to the wounded Marine, one of which exploded near him almost decapitating him.[2333]

[A CIA memo of 13 March 1968 notes that although the 320th NVA Division moved from the central DMZ to coastal lowlands of Quang Tri Province, reducing the possibility that it would be used against Khe Sanh, a formidable concentration of enemy troops, perhaps as many as 20,000, still threatens Khe Sanh. Two battalions of the 325th Division's 29th Regiment redeployed from Khe Sanh to Hue, but additional NVA artillery units have recently moved down into position west of the base, more than compensating for the departure of these infantry units.[2334]

LtCol J.C. Studt relieved LtCol H.L. Alderman as CO of 3/26 on 14 March, and LtCol F.J. McEwan (former S-4 of 26th Marines Regt.) relieved LtCol James B. Wilkinson as CO of 1/26 (who became XO of 4th Marine Regt.)].

14 MARCH 1968

GREENE, SP4 Kenneth John SVC Bty, 8-4
SPICER, PFC Jonathan Nathaniel B/1/26
TYRCZ, PFC Walter Fred Jr. A/1/26

SP4 Greene of SVC Battery, 8th Battalion, 4th Artillery Regiment, 1st Fie,ld Force, US Army Vietnam, died from enemy artillery in an ambush on Route 9 near

---

[2325] Letter of Griffin to high school teachers, 18 May 1996, cited.
[2326] Conversation with Nita Bean-Brown, 5 June 1996 in which she recounts what Christopher Lane told her in a telephone conversation to her.
[2327] 3rd MarDiv COC 122101Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #527, Para. 6.
[2328] Conversation with Glenn Rappold, 4 October 2002.
[2329] Comments of Glenn Rappold, Khe Sanh Veterans Reunion, 21 July 1990; printed in Khe Sanh Veterans Newsletter, Issue 12 (November, 1990), p. 16.
[2330] 26Mar 131030Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #535, Para. 4.A.; Ltr from John J. Pessoni, postmarked 14 December 2001.
[2331] Conversation with Billy K. Stewart, 14 December 2004. Stewart was the Gunny in charge of the Support Company detachment at KSCB, arriving in Khe Sanh in December, 1967, and remaining throughout the Siege. He does not recall the death of LCPL Delano.
[2332] Conversation with Edward P. Pershing, 15 May 1996. HM3 Pershing arrived at KSCB with HM3 Macagba about a week prior to this incident.
[2333] Ibid.
[2334] CIA, Directorate of Intelligence, Intelligence Memorandum, The Continuing Communist Military Threat in Northern South Vietnam, 13 March 1968, SC No. 01936/68, Paras 2, 3, and 24.

Camp Carroll, part of the 175mm gun support to Khe Sanh.[2335]

At 1120H, K/3/26 on Hill 861 (XD803443) reported that a Marine was killed when he tripped an NVA booby trap (made from a US M-26 grenade) that had been placed in their defensive wire.[2336] The Marine, PFC Walter Trycz (pronounced "tears"), a member of Second Platoon, A/1/26, that had been sent to the hill after it was attacked on 21 January, was conducting a wire check (to determine if the wire had been cut or any other evidence that the NVA were attempting to penetrate the perimeter or making preparations for an assault, e.g., placing of Bangalore torpedoes) when he detonated the device, receiving shrapnel in his back, face, and buttocks.[2337] The perimeter was thoroughly checked "because it is believed that NVA are aware of daily morning wire check and set the booby trap."[2338] Trycz, who had recently arrived on 861, was informed the night before that his wife had just given birth, and he was one happy trooper.[2339] Trycz was carried by some Marines to the nearby bunker housing one of the platoon's corpsmen, HN Rick Zunino,[2340] who gave mouth to mouth resuscitation—"my mouth was covered with blood"—but to no avail.[2341]

"On 12 January 1968, PFC Jonathan Nathaniel Spicer saw me concerning an application to be a conscientious objector. He had just arrived at Khe Sanh and said he had asked his chaplain at Parris Island who said, 'Wait until you finish your training;' he asked his chaplain at Camp Pendleton, who said, 'Wait until you get to your permanent duty station;' and here he now is, at Khe Sanh in Vietnam. He said his father is a Methodist minister, that he had never hunted or been in a fight. The chief thing he said was, 'I don't care what happens to me; I just don't want to hurt somebody else.' He said he's not afraid to give up his life and would like to work for the people here. He just doesn't want to kill. We immediately began the paperwork to write up his application."[2342]

His hero was Albert Schweitzer, and when it came time for him to be drafted, he did not feel he should run off to Canada, but enlisted in the Marines where he was told by the recruiter that he would become a dog-handler.[2343]

Spicer was initially assigned to B/1/26 Supply and was picked up at the plane, when he arrived at KSCB, by PVT George Anderson, and to get them their weapons. "Everything was going real good, when the Sgt. told me that one of the guys wouldn't take his weapon.. It turned out to be Spicer. Let's face it, we really got on that kid. But he held on to that big old Bible and kept saying that no matter what we did to him he still loved us. That kinda pissed me off.. I thought he was a coward.. But a few months later, I had a 180° turnabout in how I felt about Spicer. I was watching the CBS evening news from my hospital bed, when a picture of a young Marine in his dress blues, taken while he was in boot camp appeared behind Walter Cronkite. It was Pvt Jonathan Spicer. According to the news report, Spicer gave his life trying to save another Marine. But that wasn't all of the story. It seemed that Spicer wrote to his parents and told them what we did to him."[2344]

Of course, who can blame PVT George Anderson or the others in that group; we were, after all, about to be attacked, the signs of the times were evident in directives that everyone always keep their rifles with them, everyone always wear helmet and flak jacket, the cancellation of general messhall eating, the necessity to dig trenches and bunkers deeper, and so on. Everyone needed everyone else; we all depended on each other to take their place in defending the whole. Naturally, a weak link in the chain of defense provoked intense anxiety, expressed physically by the Marines involved.

Cpl Earl K. Clark [A/1/26 Supply] recalls the day Spicer reported aboard. The Co A and Co B Supply were co-located in the same GP tent: "There was normal conversation at first, business as usual. After a few moments however we heard a raised voice or two. If my memory serves me, it was Capt Pipes that was speaking at the time our attention was drawn to their area of the tent. He was not yelling at PFC Spicer as such. I think his voice raised out of frustration more than anything. He asked PFC Spicer how in the world he managed to get into a combat infantry unit if he was a bonafide conscientious objector. PFC Spicer explained to him his various stops along the way, mentioning that all had been documented in his service record. I remember Capt Pipes looking repeatedly at the record book, looking up now and then, asking a question from time to time. I think the longer Capt Pipes read the contents, the more frustrated he became. He was well aware of how the military bureaucracy worked at times—passing the buck here, let someone else take care of this... PFC Spicer kept his composure at all times. Things were pretty quiet in between questions and answers. You could cut the air with a knife, it was so heavy. We all became very still on our side.. If I were able to read Capt Pipes' mind I would say that he waffled between anger and frustration... I be-

---

[2335] Letter from Mark Swearengen, 09 March 2007.
[2336] 3rd MarDiv COC 150358Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #539, Para 4.A.
[2337] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 14 March 1968, Ser #23 and 24.
[2338] Ibid., Ser #24.
[2339] Conversation with Rick Zunino, 16 December 2004. Zunino was a HN at the time.
[2340] Email posted by Rick ("Doc Z") Zunino, Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board, posted 14 March 2002.
[2341] Conversation with Rick Zunino, 16 December 2004.
[2342] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry, 12 January 1968.
[2343] Conversation with Scott Miller, 18 November 1986.
[2344] Letter of George Anderson to Dennis Smith, 11 February 1991.

lieve in my heart that PFC Spicer was a CO. When he was explaining to Capt Pipes and others his predicament, his expressions were those of sincerity and honesty."[2345]

The First Sergeant of "B" Co., 1/26, approached the battalion Chaplain: "Chaplain, you have to do something about Spicer; he won't take up his rifle." The Chaplain, deserving a Chaplains Clerk, but not having one, suggested that he be transferred to be his Clerk, but since he didn't really need one, since the Chaplain's bunker was in the C Med area, to have Spicer become a stretcher-bearer to move the wounded to awaiting helicopters, as the Chaplain moved about the base. (There was no need to endanger another person in this peregrination nor a need to carry supplies, and there might not even be enough room during panicked dashing into a nearby trench or bunker during incoming). Therefore Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe wrote a note to the Top of "B" Company: "If possible, we would desire Spicer to help out at 'C' Med for such duties as stretcher bearer, holding IV bottles, and other general work. We can use all this kind of help we can get. I understand and appreciate the peculiar problems and circumstances with the men with whom he now is, and make the above request as a positive solution to alleviate the situation."[2346] Within hours, Spicer was at C Med.

With the revolving door of new working parties and Spicer being the one permanent person involved, Spicer soon assumed the job of coordinating the moving of casualties to awaiting helicopters. Working parties from the Recon Company at KSCB ("B" Co., 3rd Recon Bn augmented by a platoon from "D" Co.) came to know Spicer as "..a really hard person—almost crazy—getting stretcher bearers out of protective cover when it came time to move and care for casualties." Although the recon Marines were aware he was a conscientious objector, they all deeply respected his bravery under fire.[2347] During incoming when other stretcher bearers rushed to the protective cover of nearby trenches, Spicer remained with the casualty on a stretcher, reassuring the man, sometimes covering him with his own body. Dr. Edward Feldman [C Med] was quoted at the time, "What no one realized was that he was thoroughly unselfish and wouldn't hesitate to put himself in danger."[2348] "He gradually took on a very authoritarian role and even drew Sergeant stripes on his helmet. It was never resented. He recognized the need for someone to take charge because we would have different working parties every day, and he would just take charge, and I never saw anyone resent him."[2349]

About noon, a NVA mortar had wounded Jurate Kazickas, a free lance correspondent, and Spicer had led a 4-man stretcher-bearer group to carry her to a waiting helicopter for medical evacuation. When he returned to the C Med bunker, he retrieved a pair of small jungle boots in the big metal mount-out tub into which old field dressings, medical waste, uniforms which were cut off by the Corpsmen, and field gear was tossed. Up to this point, Spicer wore black high-top sneakers issued to Vietnamese soldiers—his feet were so small. Gleefully, he picked them up, but then, thinking of Jurate, told the doctor that these should accompany her. The laces hadn't been cut; they were in perfect condition. The C Med Doctor, realizing it was far too dangerous to run the boots out to the chopper, told Spicer to keep them. It was a moment of pure joy for Spicer. Gleefully he laced them up. "I watched the funny, happy, little Marine hopping about, warming us all with his own joy," said the doctor.[2350]

About six hours later, at 081600H, Spicer was helping evacuate the wounded, and while returning to the bunker, was wounded by shrapnel from an incoming mortar. He had ignored an officer who told him to get into a bunker and instead ran to the helicopter where men were having trouble loading the wounded onto a waiting helicopter due to the enemy shelling.[2351] Additionally, two men were wounded by shrapnel from the same mortar while waiting to fly out to Phu Bai.[2352] Although very seriously wounded, Spicer "warned his comrades to remain in their protective positions while he attempted to crawl from the hazardous area to safety by himself."[2353]

Dr. Donald Magilligan immediately opened Spicer's chest as Dr. Joseph W. Wolfe forced a plastic tube into his trachea and began pumping oxygen. Dr. Magilligan, (although unqualified to do so knew that if he didn't act, Spicer would die) suspected that a piece of shrapnel had penetrated the pericardium, the sac surrounding the heart.

[2345] Letter of Earl Clark, 4 March 1999, printed in Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue #46 (Spring, 2000), p. 12.
[2346] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe (1/26 "19") to "B" Co Top, 23 January 1968, Subj: Spicer.
[2347] Conversation with David Doehrman, 4 February 1984.
[2348] Quoted in John T. Wheeler, "Outcast Minister's Son Now a Hero to Marines,:" The Boston Globe, Monday, 11 March 1968, p. 8.
[2349] Conversation with Dr. Donald Magilligan, 1 October 1989. Dr. Magilligan died 20 June 1989 from skin cancer after having been the head cardiac/thoracic surgeon at the Ford Hospital in Detroit and later in a hospital in California. He was survived by his wife and five daughters. He had written a book (unpublished) concerning how his father suffered a heart attack in connection with his time at Khe Sanh during the siege, and how family members generally suffered.
[2350] John Randolph (The Los Angeles Times), "A Few Moments of Joy With His New Boots," Pacific Stars and Stripes, Monday, 15 April 1968, p. 11.
[2351] "Heart Surgery at Khesanh Saves 'Dead' Marine Hero Who Refused to Kill," New York Times, 12 March 1968, p. 14.
[2352] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 08 March 1968, Ser: #64-67, note S2390916 [Spicer], S2276734 [Cpl Joseph R. Sherman], and M2272415 [PFC Harold D. Munger].
[2353] PFC Jonathan N. Spicer, Navy Cross Citation.

As Dr. Magilligan began giving massive blood transfusions, Dr. James O. Finnegan began heart massage, getting the heart to beat, put a finger into the small hole in the heart to stop the bleeding, and stitched up the hole. The heart beat strong, breathing was normal, blood pressure was 92, and all this took place in 15 minutes on the stretcher which served as the operating table. Spicer was then medevaced.[2354]

HM2 Braune, standing off to the side, said he was going to recommend Spicer for the Silver Star. "He did more work than any one of us," he said softly.[2355] Spicer was medevaced to Dong Ha, then DaNang, and finally to Tachikawa, Japan, where he died from infections on 14 March 1968. He was buried by Episcopal Vicar Calvin O. Schofield, Jr., in Miami, Floridca. At the funeral, his parents, his sister Donna (15) and brothers Bill (21) and Rocky (9) were present along with his brother Tim (17) in a US Marine uniform.[2356]

"That boy left us a lesson about living up to our convictions that we would all do well to remember and emulate,"[2357] wrote CPL Dennis P. Smith (who had been one of the Marines in B Co. Supply).

15 MARCH 1968

GAUGHAN, PFC Austin Michael	A/3rd Shore Party
LEWIS, CPL Clarence Henry	B/1/9
WALSH, PFC Charles	K/3/9
WOODARD, SSGT Paul Leroy	A/1/9

Officially, during the period from noon to 1800H, KSCB and outposts received approximately 185 rounds of incoming mortars and artillery fire resulting in one KIA, 3 WIA (evacuated) and 5 WIA (not evacuated).[2358]

LCPL Danny C. Hudson recalls Cpl Lewis: "We called him 'sweet Lou;' he was a big, black, muscle-bound kid, and it was his last day in Nam."[2359]

The Co "A" Gunny, Camille J. D'Hondt, remembers that SSGT Woodard "had more fear than any man I've ever known, but still kept pushing ahead. I talked to the Skipper about it and said, 'Let's try and get him out of here'—not relieve him—but one of the reasons that you could get him out honorably. I really respected the man. He was wanting to live for his little daughter."[2360] The insight of the theologian, Paul Tillich (who was a Chaplain during World War I and whose battlefield experiences determined much of his thought) notes that courage is not the absence of fear, but the affirmation of self in spite of the threat posed by the presence of non-being, of that which annihilates.[2361]

Sgt Carl Oksnee had served with SSGT Woodard 6 years previously in the Far East and was only about 5 feet away when he was killed. They were going out on a local patrol and he was standing in the trench, in the doorway to his bunker when a mortar round exploded on the top edge of the trench sending fragments of shrapnel that killed him. Just moments before, Woodard yelled to Oksnee, "Goddamn it, Carl! Get that helmet on!" as Oksnee was moving towards the wire perimeter. "I was just getting ready to put it on. I said, 'Yes, Sir!' And just then the round came in. What really hurt is Woody—they had just adopted a baby boy. They had tried for years, and Woody used to send home tapes all the time, and he and I had a lot of plans. We were going to get together back in the States. That one really hurt me."[2362]

PFC David W. Moody ("Bill") remembers Woodard as a very good man, "big, tall, black guy, bald-headed, a caring-for-his-troops type person, deep-voiced, rough-sounding person, but who had compassion."[2363] It was his last day at Khe Sanh; his replacement, a Philippino Staff Sergeant, who was in the bunker, was wounded in the same blast that instantly killed Woodard, taking out a part of his head. The trench in front of his bunker entrance did not have the usual "zig" to deflect shrapnel and the force of an explosion.[2364]

KILO Co., 3/9, was dug in on a hill northwest of Ca Lu at XD984485 providing security for reconstruction of

---

[2354] "Heart Surgery at Khesanh Saves 'Dead' Marine Hero Who Refused to Kill," New York Times, 12 March 1968, p. 14. The article notes, "Neither of the three doctors has completed his residency. 'In the United States, we wouldn't even have been allowed near the operating table except to lift the man on and off,' Lieutenant Finnegan said." Dr. Magilligan added, "The operation would have been done by a senior surgeon assisted by 10 to 12 others."

[2355] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 8 March 1969.

[2356] "Kin Bury Gentle Hero of Khe Sanh," Pacific Stars & Stripes, Friday, 29 March 1968, p. 6.

[2357] Letter of Dennis Smith, postmarked 22 Feb 1991.

[2358] 26Mar 151125Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #543.

[2359] Conversation with Daniel Hudson, 2 December 1991. Hudson places Lewis in the 16 April 1968 battle, however, and states that he "walked right up on top of a small group of enemy soldiers. They shot him point blank, and three others were hit." The 1/9 ComdC records that for this day there was a patrol from Co "D" of 1/9 at 1330 that came upon a trench line 20-ft. long with 4 fighting holes and 1 bunker, all estimated at 3 weeks old. An 81mm mission was called which destroyed the position. No casualties are indicated nor is there any patrol from Co "B" mentioned. It may be that Hudson misplaced Lewis in the 16 April battle. The ComdC states: "total incoming amounted to 5 82mm and 31 60mm mortar rounds. Casualties sustained by the battalion was one KIA and 8 WIAs." The 1 KIA probably refers to Woodard.

[2360] Conversation with Camille J. D'Hondt. Gunny D'Hondt died of a heart attack on 13 Jan 2000.

[2361] Cf. Tillich, Paul, The Courage to Be, New Haven: Yale University Press, 1952.

[2362] Conversation with Carl H. Oksnee, 4 July 1994.

[2363] Conversations with David William Moody, 24 April 1994 and 27 June 1994.

[2364] Taped comments of David William Moody, 9 June 1994.

Route 9 and the construction of Ca Lu airfield as part of the plan to life the Siege of Khe Sanh.[2365]

PFC Walsh, a 3.5-inch Rocket Team Leader[2366] died as a result of short rounds from a 4.2-inch mortar that was directed against several NVA running towards tall elephant grass.[2367] The Company Commander wrote Walsh's mother: "After your son was hit, we immediately had him treated by a corpsman and called for a medevac helicopter. Within 20 minutes we had your son on the way to Dong Ha where they have facilities to properly handle any type of wound. Your son made it to Dong Ha but was in too bad of condition for the doctors to save him. We did everything we could to help him before his medevac and we even had a corpsman on the helicopter with your son while they were flying him back to Dong Ha. The flight time is about 10 minutes. The hospital had an ambulance waiting at the airstrip to speed your son to the doctors... We had a memorial service the other day for your son. All the Marines of Kilo Company that could attend were there. We won't forget any of our Marines who are killed because they have given the maximum for their country and displayed the greatest bravery and courage."[2368]

[In what was eventually to cause the death of hundreds of those in the Khe Sanh area, on 17 March 1968, COMUSMACV sent a message to Commander, 7th Air Force: "In order to support planned offensive operations in northern I CTZ, the following urgent defoliation missions must be accomplished without delay in order of priority listed: A. Route 9 from Khe Sanh to Bong Kho..[2369] A report issued by the Comptroller General of the United States shows flight paths of missions flown on 29 March along Route 9 as part of the clearing operations for Operation PEGASUS, and missions flown on 14 and 25 May and 16 June 1968 near Khe Sanh. Within 2.5 kilometers and within 28 days of spraying, an estimated 25,900 Marines were affected.[2370]]

18 MARCH 1968

GOI, CPL Louis Charles B/1/13
PAYNE, CPL Robert Paul A/3rd AT

During the period 1800H – 2400H, KSCB and outposts received approximately 45 rounds of incoming mortar and artillery fire resulting in 1 KIA, 7 WIA (evacuated) and 11 WIA (not evacuated).[2371]

PFC Michael C. Loehrer [B/1/13] recalls the living situation: "People became badly constipated for fear of using the above ground outhouse. I recall not defecating for 10 days because the incoming was so bad. Late one night, even though we had just taken incoming, and even though the night was clear.. I couldn't wait any longer. I scurried to the outhouse. Fortunately I did not take incoming. Others were not so fortunate. Some people just used their helmets, but I shared a bunker with two others that was only 7 x 7 x 5 feet deep. I could not bring myself to use my helmet, even though we were confined to that stinking hole for three months.

"One of the three of us living in that tiny hootch was Cpl Lou Goi. He got tired of the confinement and decided to eat his C-rations just outside our bunker instead of inside, like we usually did. A mortar shredded him from head to foot, killing him instantly."[2372]

Goi was the only Marine in the battery that had been trained on the FADAC computer.[2373] Goi worked in the Fire Direction Center along with PFC Michael C. Loehrer, Sgt Dennis J. Hewitt, LCPL Philip D. Mineer, and a Marine named "Chief." "Lou was a 'sharp cookie' and was also favored by the CO—and for good reason: he was a neat guy."[2374] After Goi was killed, those determining the settings for the 105 and the charge resorted to using slide rules. Loehrer had a friend in LIMA, 3/26, in the western perimeter of KSCB, and received permission to visit him. "So I went up and visited him, and when I got back the next day, Lou had just—hours before, got blown away... The man I visited was one of the 6 that died in the recapture of Hill 881-North [on Easter Day, 14 April 1968]. We took Infantry Training Regiment together in Camp Pendleton and we were real close."[2375]

Captain William J. O'Connor had put out the word: "If you're out of your bunker, your helmet has to be on, your flak jacket has to be zippered. And I remember be-

---

[2365] Shore, Moyers, The Battle for Khe Sanh, Washington, D.C.: HQMC, p. 133.
[2366] Letter of LtCol Edward J. LaMontagne, 17 March 1968. LaMontagne was CO of 3/9 at the time.
[2367] Letter from Ray Felle, 5 January 2002. Felle a Corpsman with First Platoon, K/3/9, at the time.
[2368] Letter of 1/Lt B. E. Bryan, Jr., to Mrs. Walsh, 20 April 1968.
[2369] COMUSMACV 171825Z/Mar68, MAC 07624 from MACCO C7, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 17/18 March 1968, #330. Bong Kho is at XD920420., about 4 miles directly east of KSCB on Route 9.
[2370] Report FPCD-80-23, 16 November 1979, Report by the Comptroller General of the United States: U.S. Ground Troops in South Vietnam Were in Areas Sprayed with Herbicide Orange, sent to U.S. Senator Charles Percy, B-159451, Appendix IV.
[2371] 3rd MarDiv COC 181300Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #556, Para. 4.A.
[2372] Letter from Michael ("Spider") Loehrer, 24 June 2002.
[2373] FADAC=Field Artillery Digital Analysis Computer, used to compute artillery settings and powder charge when fed coordinates.
[2374] Conversation with Michael Loehrer, 21 November 1992.
[2375] Ibid. The Marine KIA on 14 April was Cpl Reuben Carl McMakins, Jr.

ing really angry about that [incident]. [I guess] he thought: I'll do this real quick. Boom! He's dead!"[2376]

Kenneth Bartels [Motor Transport, 1/13] recalls Goi as self-conscious about being bald. "His main goal while he was there was to go to Hong Kong and get a wig or toupee, a custom made toupee to cover the bald spot on his head."[2377]

John Hargesheimer recalls Cpl Payne as "..extremely bright and had been trained in some of the most sophisticated communications schools in the Marine Corps. Somehow, when he was sent to Vietnam, his orders were changed and he was sent to Ontos. Bob was manning the communications bunker when it took a direct hit by a rocket. The bunker was destroyed and Bob was trapped underneath all the debris but still conscious. He had a crushed shoulder and the wound did not seem life threatening. A few days after evacuation we received word that Bob had died from complications of pneumonia. Before joining the Marine Corps, Bob had been a student in a divinity school but felt he was not doing enough for his country."[2378]

[The cover of Newsweek dated 18 March 1968 contains a striking colored photo of the Ammo dump at KSCB exploding and the words, "The Agony of Khe Sanh," along with a collection of photos by the late Robert Ellison inside the magazine.

On 18 March, an estimated 600 NVA assault the eastern perimeter defense manned by the 37th ARVN Rangers. The Rangers held, the perimeter was not penetrated, and 2 NVA were reported KIA.[2379]]

20 MARCH 1968

FELLOWS, COL Allen Eugene	20th TASS
VAN TASSELL, CPL James Warren	D/1/26
[DOW 5 July 1968]

At noon, an incoming mortar wounded Cpl VanTassell, peppering him with shrapnel in his right leg, chest, and right arm.[2380] He was medically evacuated and died of his wounds on 5 July 1968.

Major Fellows launched from Ubon Air Base, Thailand, in a 02A observation aircraft [#6721338] on a solo FAC mission (COVEY 616) to support Khe Sanh. The last voice contact with Maj Fellows was at 1435H with the ABCCC (HILLSBORO) when he was at XD068059, some 50 miles SW of Khe Sanh. Radar contact was maintained until approximately 1500H. Loss of contact at this time did not cause any undue concern since this is a frequent occurrence for aircraft flying at low altitudes. When contact could not be reestablished, a communication check with other airfields was made to determine if the aircraft might have been diverted to one of them, with negative result. Aerial and electronic searches failed to find any trace of the missing aircraft or pilot.[2381] No trace of the pilot or aircraft was ever found.[2382]

22 MARCH 1968

BUSH, 1/Lt Paul William	C/1/26
EGGER, CAPT Walter Jacob	C/1/26
GROHMAN, GYSGT John Joseph	C/1/26
LYON, MAJ Donovan Loren	559 TFS
LYONS, PFC Carl	B/3rd Recon
SHANNON, LCPL Stephen Craig	C/1/26
SISSON, PFC Bennie Joe	C/1/26

[On 22 March the NVA made it patently plain that while their infantry might be departing the battlefield at Khe Sanh, their artillery remained. From 1830H to midnight, NVA guns fired 642 rockets, artillery, and mortars into KSCB, the most concentrated shelling of the Combat Base. The barrage of incoming continued during the early morning hours of 23 March as 534 additional rounds struck the base from 0001H to 0600H. The total was in excess of 1100 rounds in one night.[2383]]

LtCol Theodore Wilson Guy was flying as Aircraft Commander with Major Lyon as rear seat pilot in Number 2 aircraft in a flight of two F4C Phantoms from the 559 TFS, 12 TFW to strike a suspected automatic weapons site and known bunker complex on the road between Tchepone and Khe Sanh, approximately 15 miles west of Khe Sanh, directly across the Lao/SVN border. The flight had made two bomb deliveries on the target, receiving heavy ground fire from his left on his second de-

---

[2376] Conversation with William J. O'Connor, 13 November 1994.

[2377] Transcription of tape from Kenneth Bartels, May, 1986.

[2378] Letter from John Hargesheimer postmarked 17 August 2004.

[2379] 3rd MarDiv COC 180559Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #553, Para. 3.A.; MACV, "Khe Sanh Analysis," 8 July 1968, p. 11.

[2380] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 20 March 1968, Ser #31. During the period 1200 – 1800, KSCB and its outposts received approximately 105 rounds of incoming mortar and artillery resulting in 3 WIA (evacuated) and 8 WIA (non-serious): 3rd MarDiv COC 212550Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #563, Para. 4.A.

[2381] Library of Congress MIA file, Reel #286, Folder #138, Mission Data report, Biographic Report, 366 Combtsptfp DaNang 201730Z/Mar68, Narrative Case 1099-0-01

[2382] Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 142.

[2383] 26Mar 221725Z/Mar68, 230430Z/Mar68, and 230540Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREPs #572, 573, and 574. The incoming was broken down to 418 artillery, 248 mortar, 214 rocket, 12 RR, and 197 unknown caliber rounds. There had been a daily average of 150 rounds, mostly mortars, during the preceding days of March. [26Mar ComdC Mar68, Pt. 2, p. 10].

livery. Guy then made a pass to mark the area with his cannon for the lead aircraft which followed him, but remained at approximately 300 feet above to determine where Guy had fired. Guy's aircraft was last seen at 0925 (local time) coming off the target at about 2000-feet, nose up and climbing. The lead aircraft then rolled in on the target. As he pulled out, he unsuccessfully attempted to contact the #2 aircraft. After searching the area for 30-35 minutes, another flight, HAMMER 01, continued the search, without results. Further search was not practical due to hostile fire and negative findings. The terrain was hilly with heavy vegetation and sparsely populated.[2384]

LtCol Guy, a Korean War veteran with 5,600 hours flying time and 287 combat missions, was captured, became the senior officer of all prisoners captured in Laos, Cambodia, and South Vietnam, at the Plantation POW Camp in Hanoi. Upon his release, 16 March 1973, he brought charges against other American POWs, but was convinced to drop the charges. Initially he was convinced there were no alive POWs but later changed his mind.[2385]

Between noon and 1800H, the KSCB and outposts received approximately 65 rounds of incoming mortar and artillery fire resulting in 1 KIA, 4 WIA (evacuated) and 8 WIA (non-serious).[2386] PFC Lyons was struck by a large chunk of shrapnel in his stomach.[2387]

From 1800 – 2400, KSCB received approximately 515 rounds of mortar, rocket, and artillery resulting in 5 KIA[2388] beginning some of the heaviest action at Khe Sanh in March. "Intelligence officials later estimated that the enemy had planned to stage a major assault against Khe Sanh on 22-23 March. NAIL 35 [a USAF FAC] who flew in the Khe Sanh area during the daylight hours of 22 March reported 'working several flights within 400 meters of the Khe Sanh perimeter.' Each bomb that hit a trench produced several secondaries which were believed to be rockets. The FAC also noted 'small holes' which he said were not foxholes.. about 200 feet from the perimeter and dug at an angle so the bottom could only be seen from the west, i.e., over the strip. NAIL 35 suggested these might be mortar positions."[2389]

At 1900 on 22 March, KSCB initially began to receive heavy fire which tapered off but then resumed into a ferocious barrage at about 2045 causing III MAF to consider it a possible pre-assault barrage. By midnight of 22 March, KSCB had received 300 artillery rounds, 92 rockets, and 250 mortar rounds, a total of 642 rounds. 636 additional rounds were received on 23 March.[2390]

In the preceding days, the Marines of Co "C", 1/26, busily constructed bunkers and trenches in the northern, BLUE Sector, of KSCB:

"We decided that we needed another bunker for our squad—we had too many people grouped in one spot—if that bunker would take a hit we'd lose too many guys. We dug deep into old mother earth and filled sandbags. We did not have airstrip mat for our roof since supplies were very hard for us to get. We knew that the Gunny was building a bunker so we waited until dark and then we went on patrol down the trenchline. There we found our roof! We carried the heavy metal sheets back to our position and placed them on our new bunker—we worked nearly all night to put the sandbags on top of the metal. The next day the Gunny came to us and admired our new addition—he said to us that he knew we were stealing C-rations from the LZ near the airstrip and he knew we stole cases of juice from the supply area—but—when we stole the roof of his bunker we were un-pardonable. 'Your squad are the biggest thieves at Khe Sanh'—He was kind of upset but you could see a kind of amazement of our talent and sly smile on his face. He never demanded that we give his roof back to him and he later moved in with the Captain. A little while—perhaps a couple of weeks later—our Captain decided to build a new bunker and it would be a masterpiece. Everyday each squad would send a work party to build the work of art. Enough supplies arrived for the Capt. to get all he needed for his bunker. Many men worked very hard to build the bunker to our Captain's requirements. The bunker was approx. 15 meters square. It had a double roof. One roof was built and 55 gallon drums were placed on top and another roof built on top of the drums. The feeling was that if a mortar or rocket hit the roof, the first roof would absorb the impact and detonate the round [and] it would not penetrate the second roof. The Company Gunny, Executive Officer, a couple of radiomen and a couple of corpsmen moved into the bunker with our Captain when the bunker was completed. A few weeks later—one night—a terrific noise like aircraft flying low or a train coming—then an explosion directly in front of our bunker—and another approx. 30 meters down the trench—then a third 20 or 30 meters down from the second. The third hit was by far the worse. It impacted on the roof of the Capt's bunker. The roof caved in on the

---

[2384] Library of Congress, MIA microfilm, Reel #464, Folder #4; Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 142.

[2385] Hobson, op. cit. Guy died of cancer on 23 April 1999.

[2386] 3rd MarDiv COC 230305Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #572, Para. 4.A.

[2387] Conversation with James E. Thomas, 6 March 1990. Thomas was a Cpl with the platoon of Co. "D" 3rd Recon Bn that had reinforced Co "B" 3rd Recon Bn at Khe Sanh.

[2388] 3rd MarDiv COC 230304Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #573, Para 4.A.

[2389] Trest, Warren A., Khe Sanh (Operation NIAGARA), 22 January – 31 March 1968, PACAF, Project CHECO, 7AF, 13 September 1968, p. 88. [Trest references, as his source: ABCCC Mission Report by OLB 1, 6250th Spt Sq to HQ 7 AF, 22 Mar 68].

[2390] Ibid., pp. 88-89.

occupants and the sandbags burnt those trapped inside to death."[2391]

When the incoming round detonated at 220342H[2392] LCPL Charles Norman Chamberlin, one of the radiomen, was knocked out: "I know for a fact that Captain Egger, Lieutenant Bush, and Gunnery Sergeant Grohman were within 6 or 8 feet of me. When I woke up, the only one I could see was Gunnery Sergeant Grohman, and he was not yet dead, but I assumed the other two were because the round impacted on their side. The lights went out for me, and when I woke up the place was on fire. I had just filled a Coleman lantern with JP-4 and it drenched my radio operator, [LCPL] John Mattern from his chin to his knees and he got burned real bad. He and I followed each other from Khe Sanh to Dona Ha to the REPOSE to Japan and out here to Oak Knoll Naval Hospital. He pulled through and ended up marrying his Intensive Care nurse and they had a daughter."[2393]

LCPL Chamberlain remembers "waking up and seeing an arm hanging above my head in the wreckage of the bunker. I think one of the officers may have still been alive and trying to get out prior to succumbing to his wounds. All of the men in the west end of the bunker died. I saw a patch of sky and climbed out like a chicken with a broken wing, having suffered no more than a broken shoulder and minor shrapnel and burns to my right arm and left leg. My radio operator, LCPL John Mattern, suffered deep second and third degree burns from his chin to his knees, as well as losing his right bicep and left kneecap."[2394]

Within seconds, PFC Terrell Eugene Fitzgerald alerted his squad and, being unable to enter the bunker, made a hole in the side. Entering wearing his gas mask, he extricated the badly burned LCPL John A. Mattern and pulled him from the bunker. He then pulled out PFC Stephen Jenkins who was badly burned on his left leg and right arm. Returning to the bunker, he uncovered GySgt Grohman, as the bunker began to collapse.[2395]

PFC Charles Dominic Parise meanwhile knocked a hole in the west wall of the bunker. Due to the fire, smoke, and gas, he removed his helmet and flak jacket to get through the hole and donned a gas mask. All during this, NVA artillery, rocket, and mortar rounds continued to strike the area. After he removed the radioman, Charles Chamberlin, he returned to search for others as the roof began to collapse. He remained inside until he grabbed GySgt Grohman and pulled him from the bunker. Despite his gas mask, he had difficulty breathing. When a count revealed that there was someone still inside, Parise started up and moved towards the burning hulk until he was restrained by the corpsman.[2396]

PFCs Fitzgerald and Parise, in addition to facing the incoming barrage (without flak jacket or helmet!), the collapsing bunker, and fire, were unaware "..that several boxes of grenades were inside and on fire."[2397]

Details necessary to note, lest the painful reality of war and its cost be lost and people fail to remember just how ghastly and horrific war really is, include Grohmen (shrapnel and concussion to face, both arms and left leg), Bush (shrapnel and concussion, decapitation of head, loss of both arms and legs and third degree burns), Egger (shrapnel and concussion, third degree burns, partial decapitation of head, loss of right arm and left leg).[2398]

"It took a couple of days to dig out the remaining fried bodies and send their bodies to graves registration... The gunner.. was awarded a Bronze Star for his bravery, but he told me that he'd gladly trade it if it would give back life to those men. Such is not the case in war—heroes happen and corpses are sent home to their loved ones—both are facts of war. If we had no dead, we'd have no heroes, and maybe we'd have no war. Ah but that would not serve humankind as they like it. We love to wave flags, sing sons, and send our young away to face the inhumanity of war. When will we realize that killing and dying does not solve anything?"[2399]

Also killed during the same barrage and in another bunker, were LCPL Stephen Shannon and PFC Bennie Sisson. When both Marines were dug out, they were found not wearing flak jackets or helmets.[2400] Shannon, having been in Vietnam close to 12 months, was short, almost due to rotate home.[2401]

PFC Sisson had lettered two years in football at Lufkin High School in Zavalla, Texas. His coach recalls that he always gave 100%, caught four passes for 43 yards his senior year and intercepted a pass while playing defense.[2402] His close friend, Donald J. Gillespie remem-

---

[2391] George S. Hecknauer, Memoirs [unpublished] sent in his letter of 22 May 1997, pp. 92-93. Cpl Hecknauer was an 0311 with C/1/26 at the time.

[2392] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 22 March 1968, Ser #68.

[2393] Conversation with Charles Norman Chamberlin, 13 Oct 2004.

[2394] Blackbud Charlie [Charles Chamberlain], "Remembering March 22," Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.: Red Clay, Issue #61 (Spring 2005), pp. 7-8.

[2395] Statement of LCPL Calvin E. Wallace in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Terrell Eugene Fitzgerald; 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, Ser #52 (LCPL John A. Mattern, non serious burns to arms and face), and Ser #53 (LCPL Stephen Jenkins, serious shrapnel wounds to left leg and right arm).

[2396] Statements of CPL Michael A. Gallagher and LCPL Daniel J. Brady in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Charles Dominic Parise.

[2397] Hecknauer, Memoir, op. cit., p. 94.

[2398] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 23 March 1968, Ser #54, 55, and 56.

[2399] Hecknauer, Memoir, op. cit., p. 94.

[2400] Letter from Col Nicholas S. Romanetz, 17 January 1998. Romanetz was Platoon Commander of C-2 of 1/26. PFC James M. Marler received shrapnel wounds to his ribs. [1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 23 Mar68, Ser #59.]

[2401] Letter from Donald J. Gillespie, 3 July 1998.

[2402] Obit, 27 Mar 1968, in letter from Donald J. Gillespie, 7 Feb 2007.

bers "Bennie:" "..he had this really big smile and always was there willing to lend a helping hand. I remember he loved country western music and had a small portable reel-to-reel tape player. It only held one song, which he played over and over again. To this day if I hear that song I always smile thinking of him."[2403]

GySgt Grohman, born 27 March 1931, had arrived in Vietnam 3 December 1967.[2404] The Gunny, who normally would have been in a bunker he shared with Nick Romanetz, visited the CP bunker and was there only about half an hour when the incoming round hit. The company radioman, Chuck Chamberlain remembers him: " 'Eee Tai!' Gunny used to say (Japanese for 'it hurts'). Despite many aspersions cast at himn, Gunny Grohman did care about the guys in 'C' Company. Being Company Gunny wasn't a popularity contest, and I saw him cry the day that '53 got shot down southeast of us."[2405]

1/Lt Paul William Bush, born 8 July 1944, had arrived in Vietnam 26 April 1967.[2406]

During his teen years, Bush was an active member of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church and in high school was in the honor society, played baritone in the band, was class treasurer, and was on the golf team. He was intellectually gifted, graduating 4th in his class of 171, and then attended Thiel College where he majored in accounting. He graduated magna cum laude in 1966 and was listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. He had an offer from Price Waterhouse in May of 1966, but told them to contact him after he served his duty with the U.S. Marine Corps, which he entered upon graduation.[2407]

At ceremonies dedicating the Paul Bush Fitness Center at Thiel College, Rev. Martin M. Roth noted: "He was intellectually gifted. He was an excellent student at Thiel and could have gone to graduate school in any of four disciplines. When he got on the plane to leave for the Marines, he walked to the plane with a paperback copy of Shakespeare's King John under his arm. He also had the prayer book his mother gave him. In boot camp the platoon commander confiscated the Shakespeare, but permitted Paul to keep the prayer book. These books, I always thought, were symbolic of who Paul was. Here was a balanced person—one with gifts of intellect and a caring personality, a loving person toward family and friends, a person of deep faith, poetry, gentleness, humor, military tactics and prayer all found a home in this simple yet complex man."[2408]

"Paul Bush—a good Marine, a great guy, a loving husband, a faithful Christian. Just like other men who fall in battle every day. In remembering Paul Bush, we pay tribute to all who place their lives on the line in a cause that they believe just. No matter where it comes, death comes hard."[2409]

LCPL Stephen M. Jenkins writes: "I had 18 days and a wake-up left [when the bunker was hit]. I will always have fond memories of Lt. Bush who was my Platoon Leader when we went to the hills in early May, 1967, to clean up the mess that was left. He was a compassionate and strong leader who would never put his Marines in jeopardy without being there with us. Semper Fi, Paul Bush—you will always be remembered."[2410]

24 MARCH 1968

ENZINNA, CPL John Joseph	A/1/9
GAINES, PFC Bernard Laverne	A/1/9
HALL, 1/Lt William Gardner	VMO-6
HUTCHINSON, PFC Paul Lee	A/1/9
IVES, PFC William Allen	A/1/9
POLT, PFC Erwin Andrew	H&S/1/9

A particularly vexing NVA .51 caliber machine-gunner that fired on fixed-wing aircraft landing on the Khe Sanh airstrip and dropping supplies by LAPSE or on the Drop Zone motivated a patrol from 1/9, originally scheduled for 20 March, then postponed to 21 March, and finally went out on Sunday, the 24th.[2411] A-2, under command of 2/Lt Michael Pym Hayden ran a combat patrol within 1,000 meters to silence it[2412] with check points at XD828423, XD825424, and XD822425.[2413] While these daily patrols usually involved 6 – 8, this particular patrol had 13, 6 of which were new troops on their first patrol.[2414] The Marines reached the check points without difficulty as they crept under a full moon in the early morning hours through a valley with no foliage cover, then on top of a small hill overlooking a valley. The Marines furtively moved under the darkness and fog of the early morning. The plan was to dig in on check point [2403] Letter from Donald J. Gillespie, 7 Feb 2007.

---

[2404] HQMC, Historical Center, Casualty Card on John Joseph Grohman.
[2405] Blackbud Charlie [Charles Chamberlain], "Remembering That Night," Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.: Red Clay, Issue #61 (Spring, 2005), P. 8.
[2406] HQMC, Historical Center, Casualty Card on Paul William Bush.
[2407] Information provided by Mrs. Jill Haer, 5 June 2000, sister of Paul Bush.
[2408] Rev. Martin M. Roth, Remarks, 12 May 2000.
[2409] "Why Paul Bush?" article in National Lutheran Council: A Mighty Fortress, 18:6 (October 1968).
[2410] Steve Jenkins, "Remembering that Night," Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.: Red Clay, Issue #61 (Spring, 2005), p. 8.
[2411] Comments of LCPL Clifford L. Butler, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.
[2412] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.
[2413] 26Mar 241630Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #580, Para. 3.A.
[2414] Lanier, William E., Reflections [unpublished memoir], n.d. (but prior to 1990), p. 11.

3 as a daytime OP and survey the area.[2415] One of the new, peering through binoculars, spotted what appeared to be an American who moved in and out of a bunker on a hill opposite the Marines.[2416] After determining there were no American recon patrols in the area, and an hour or so of surveillance, LtCol Mitchell (CO, 1/9) ordered the patrol to move towards the area of the sighting and report back their findings. "We saddled up and in a single column moved carefully down the hill and up the other side 50 yards short of the location of the 'US trooper'."[2417] The Marines spread out, found cover to provide fire support while four Marines slowly and deliberately advanced.

It was high noon at XD818427[2418] when "All of a sudden there was a burst of automatic rifle fire spraying the four of us... We were caught in cross fire. Briefly hugging the dirt, I did a rapid retreat crawl to a bomb crater to my right rear diving in and feeling a temporary relief with the high walls around me. Erv [Polt], who was to my immediate front, took several rounds throwing him on his back. As he hit the ground, his rifle was thrown about 8 feet from him and he laid still, making no attempt to reach his weapon.. I rapidly discarded my pack.. my deep friendship enabled me to overcome my mounting fear and I pushed myself out of the crater heading toward Erv.. I only made it 6 feet out when a volley of NVA rounds sprayed the area around me."[2419]

PFC Polt, one of the 1/9 Battalion S-2 Scouts, who was immediately cut down had an unusual background. His two sisters were Roman Catholic nuns and his two older brothers were Roman Catholic priests. He himself had studied for the priesthood in Spain for 2 years, but then felt a need to serve God as a serviceman in Vietnam.[2420]

The Squad Leader, CPL John Joseph Enzinna, attempted to rescue PFC Polt, but was also hit in the attempt. Enzinna, shot in the stomach, wasn't dead at first, and PFC Hutchinson rushed to assist, only to be killed. Then Enzinna was again hit, and died.[2421] The complete absence of any racial prejudice in the life of those at Khe Sanh during the siege battle is reflected in the fact that Hutchinson was Black, Enzinna was Mexican-American, Polt was Caucasian, and all were the best of friends; they literally were willing to die for each other. There is no racial distinction in combat; all are brothers. Then NVA mortars showered the small group of Marines, and for awhile, it appeared they were completely surrounded. Lt Hayden, however, had positioned two squads together with a machinegun to their rear. As it was, however, the Marines took fire from three sides and LAWs and the 3.5-inch rockets were unable to annihilate the 5 NVA bunkers. The enemy force, initially estimated at 14 was now estimated at 31 with 20 additional NVA spotted moving down the ridgeline as reinforcements.[2422]

The battle raged into a stalemate: "They had us in a gully and we couldn't really advance or withdraw. We battled on there for about 4 hours at which point we withdrew."[2423] The 3 KIA could not be recovered without sustaining further casualties[2424] and the three dead—a Black Marine, a Hispanic Marine, and a Caucasian Marine—were left on the battlefield as the Marines withdrew back to the 1/9 battalion perimeter under cover of .50 caliber machinegun fire sprayed directly over their heads in an evacuation directed by the Company Commander, Capt H.J.M. Radcliffe.[2425] The NVA buried the three in a shallow grave. In early April, the Battalion 6 called LCPL Lanier over and said, "Look, Lanier, you were on the first ambush. You know where they're at. I want you to go over and find them." So Lanier led a small group and located where the North Vietnamese had buried them, in a bomb crater. "I could smell them. The other people couldn't find them. I told this Lieutenant, 'Can't you smell them?' Anything that hadn't been covered by cloth had decayed. The bodies were intact. Their legs were skeletons and their skulls. I remember digging them up, and the skulls came off the body. The Lieutenant said, 'OK, that's enough; let's go. Let's get out of here!' I almost knocked him down. I said, 'Look! Lieutenant, with all due respect, how would you like your body to go home in a sandbag? We're going to get the whole body out of here if it takes me all day!' We put them in bags. Nobody would get around me and nobody would help because they were loosing their stomachs. They kept telling me, 'How can you do it and not get sick?' And I said, 'When they're your friends, it's a different mission than just digging the bodies."[2426]

About 1430, HIGHBOY 3-1 and 3-2 (2 UH-34 helicopters) and SEAWORTHY 4-22 and 4-23 (2 UH1E helicopters) launched on Mission 53 to Khe Sanh to pick up emergency medevacs from GARDEN VALLEY [Bn 1/9] taken during the battle. The medevacs were located at XD822428, approximately 2 miles NW of the Khe

---

[2415] Ibid.
[2416] Ibid., pp. 11-12.
[2417] Ibid., p. 12.
[2418] 26Mar 241630Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #580, Para. 3.A.
[2419] Lanier, op. cit., p. 12..
[2420] Ibid., p. 4.
[2421] Conversations with Leonard G. Cosner, 3 December 1989, 20 January 1990, and 20 August 1994. This was Cosner's first combat patrol.
[2422] Comments of LCPL Clifford L. Butler, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803; 26Mar 241630Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #580, Para. 3.A. Lt Hayden was KIA 16 April 1968.
[2423] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., HQMC Oral History Tape #2803. Lovely was Platoon Commander, A-1.
[2424] 3rd MarDiv COC 250100Z/Mar68, 26 Mar SITREP for 242230H, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 26/27 Mar68, #26.
[2425] Lanier, op. cit., p. 14.
[2426] Conversation with William Lanier, 26 June 1990.

Sanh airstrip.[2427] The medevac birds orbited while the SEA-WORTHY gunships fired rockets on the NVA positions. The pickup zone was not secure and the ground unit was in heavy contact. After orbiting about an hour, the medevacs were still not ready for pickup, so 3-1 and 3-2 returned to Quang Tri for fuel and oil; the Hueys also returned to rearm while fixed wing continued to strike the NVA positions.[2428]

The medevac birds returned to Khe Sanh, orbiting until the air-strikes were completed. The Hueys made another gun run and the medevac birds were cleared to swoop in for the pickup. Maj Franklin D. Rickey (co-pilot, Lt Larry A. Bartel) in HIGHBOY 3-1 approached low level to the ridge line and picked up one emergency and one priority medevac while Capt Burns (co-pilot Lt Norman) in HIGHBOY 3-2 orbited high.[2429]

Just as 3-2 came in for the next pickup, SEAWORTHY 4-23 (pilot, Capt J.J. Hanley, Co-pilot, 1/Lt W.C. Hall) was pulling off a gun run when suddenly, while at an altitude of 800 – 1000 feet, Capt Hanley felt a jolt and heard a noise "..as if someone had taken a sledge hammer and struck the side of my aircraft. Less than a second later, I discovered that I had absolutely no rudder control and my aircraft began a gentle turn to the right. At this time I broadcast a MAYDAY on FM. I then told my co-pilot, First Lieutenant W.C. Hall, to jettison the rocket pods, which he immediately did. The aircraft at this time was spinning quite rapidly so that I could neither orient myself over the ground nor read my instruments. I then attempted to reduce power in an effort to reduce the speed of spin, but I got the low-RPM audio signal and was forced to come back on with some power which made no noticeable difference in the rate of spin. Then I attempted to put the aircraft into a left slip but this caused it to become momentarily uncontrollable. My only recourse was to try and maintain a level attitude since I still had control of the tip-path plane, and hoped to hit the ground as flat as possible. My last conscious recollection was that when the right skid touched down, I was surprised because I still thought I was at a higher altitude."[2430]

The UH-1E, SEAWORTHY 4-23 (Model WB-23, BuNo 153761), crashed at XD823414, about a mile south of the pickup zone.[2431] Upon impact, the tail boom separated, the rotor head came off and traveled to the one o'clock position about 25 meters, and the aircraft instantly burst into flames, engulfing the aft portion and port side of the cabin.[2432] PVT Marion Cornelius Trivette, Jr., the aerial gunner, who apparently withstood the impact better than the rest aboard, immediately ran from the burning aircraft and attempted to remove Capt J.J. Hanley, the pilot. As he was doing so, he noticed the Crew Chief, Sgt H.G. Clark, was on fire and hurriedly removed him to a position of relative safety away from the fire and then returned to extricate the pilot. He then attempted to remove Lt Hall, but the flames were too intense.[2433]

"I was commencing my approach to the LZ when over the radio we heard one of the gunship pilots (Captain Joe Hanley) announce that he had lost his tail rotor drive shaft. I looked up and to my left and there was his aircraft entering into a flat upright spin. Frank called me and said go after him which was somewhat unnecessary since I had almost automatically started to do just that. Following him down, I just knew that they weren't going to make it since they were descending almost completely out of control and at a very high rate of descent. They crashed on the side of a small bowl-shaped valleyu with a tremendous impact followed by a huge fire ball as the fuel tanks ruptured and I probably wasn't more than 1000 meters from them when they impacted, and I had to do a very rapid quick stop to get slowed down to make my landing. I did a quick right hand button hook approach we call it, and landed about 25 meters from the wreckage which was burning like mad. I didn't expect to see any survivors, but low and behold if out of the junk three of the crew came staggering out under their own power.. They glopped into [our] aircraft and I got out of there in record time. Once we got airborne, I told Frank that we had three of the four crewmen and the other gunships by this time had arrived overhead and after a short look he spotted the fourth crewman, who was a co-pilot. He had been badly burned in exiting the aircraft and had become separated from the other three."[2434]

HIGHBOY 3-2 (piloted by Captain Burns, co-pilot Lt Norman) followed the spinning SEAWORTHY into its crash and landed within 30 meters of the bird as it crashed and burst into flames.[2435] The three crew members who had exited the Huey were assisted into the H-34 y the crewmen, Cpls Morton and Thonen as ammunition cooked-off in the wreckage and was flying in all direc-

---

[2427] Statement of Maj Franklin D. Richey in DFC file of Capt Thomas Victor Burns.

[2428] Statement of Lt Larry A. Bartel in DFC file of Capt Thomas Victor Burns

[2429] Ibid.

[2430] Statement of Capt J.J. Hanley in SSM file of Cpl Robert Charles Rich.

[2431] 26Mar 241630Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SOTREP #580, Para. 3.A.; VMO-6 ComdC Mar68, Encl (3), p. 1. Aircraft Mishap Report in III MAF COC Journal and File 24/25 Mar68, #364, lists the crash at XD822415.

[2432] Statement of Maj R. L. Neff in SSM file of Cpl Robert Charles Rich.

[2433] Statement of Capt J.J. Hanley in SSM file of Cpl Robert Charles Rich.

[2434] Transcript of oral tape made by Major T. Burns, University of New Orleans, Eisenhower Center, no date, p. 9.

[2435] Statement of Lt Larry A. Bartel, in DFC file of Capt Thomas Victor Burns.

tions.[2436] It was necessary for 3-2 to lift out due to the extreme heat and danger of explosion plus the fact that the airborne AO reported a large number of armed NVA approaching 30 meters to the west. 3-2 was safely airborne with the three survivors within a matter of seconds after the crash.[2437]

The AO then reported the remaining crew member, 1/Lt Hall, staggering near the tail section about 20 feet from the crashed helicopter. Maj R. L. Neff, Section Leader flying in SEAWORTHY 4-22, following a U.S. Air Force F-4 (SHARKBAIT 41) dropping 3 tanks of napalm on top of the hill containing the swarming enemy troops, completely engulfing the hilltop in flames, commenced a low-level approach into the zone and was able to retrieve the seriously burned Lt Hall.[2438] The zone was covered with small trees and saplings, and while still 15 feet in the air, Cpl Robert Charles Rich, Crew Chief, jumped out of the helicopter and picked up Lt Hall (who was heavy and made Cpl Rich's movement difficult). Cpl Rich staggered into the aircraft with Lt Hall and yelled to go while he was still on the skid. The 1/9 Air Officer, GARDEN VALLEY-14 reported that there were NVA swarming all over the hill. Lt Hall was still alive as Maj Neff proceeded to "D" Med at maximum power, low level in order to keep Lt Hall as warm as possible.[2439] Two Division AOs, observing the action, saw the NVA open up on Maj Neff's helicopter during the entire pickup. Enemy fire hit within inches of the crew and helicopter.[2440]

Lt Hall, after being given emergency treatment for 2nd and 3rd degree burns over 60% of his body, was immediately sent to the NSA [Naval Support Activity] Hospital in DaNang. "Word was received the following day that Lt Hall had died from his burns at approximately 0400 of the 25th."[2441]

26 MARCH 1968

KAMINSKI, PFC Kenneth	B/1/9
LONG, HN Leonard	H&S/1/9
MOSSO, SGT Robert Bruce	B/1/9

On 26 March, 1/9 again became ensnared in a desperate debacle. Daylight Ops, established to survey surrounding areas, included an OP consisting of a small hill some 150 meters (within M79 range) in front of the lines occupied by B/1/9. This position had been manned as an OP for at least a month with Marines moving to it at pre-dawn.[2442] The morning of 26 March was very thick fog, the kind of fog that made Marines such as CPL Bert D. Mullins, a radioman, think, "My God! They could be on us before we'd ever know it."[2443] After the patrol had been out 5 or 10 minutes, Mullins received a whispered voice over the PRC-25 radio asking if anyone was supposed to be out there. Mullins replied, "Negative." The radio operator of the OP whispered, "I hear noises." Mullins, on his own initiative, said, "Get out of there!"[2444]

Just at that moment, an unknown number of NVA soldiers appeared on the top of the hill (XD825415),[2445] threw a dozen ChiCom fragmentation grenades at the Marines and then quickly disappeared. Fortunately, the point man was able to alert the remainder of the OP to move to safety. "They came scrambling back in. Thank God they made it OK. They told us there were Gooks on the hill."[2446]

2/Lt James R. Talone quickly organized two squads to check out the contact and departed at 0710H.[2447] The hill was small—about 40 meters across—and Lt Talone, in the center, with one squad on his left and one on his right, moved to the summit when Sgt Mosso, on his left, was hit. "The air was full of ChiComs. My rifle jammed as did another 3 or 4 in the squad. [There] was nothing we could do but roll back down the hill, pull pins and throw grenades at them. Luckily we were in defoliate and we had outstanding support from the lines. My three machineguns put in about 6,000 rounds over our head, plus the 60mm dropped another 200 rounds on the reverse slope of the hill."[2448]

The squad on the left managed to retrieve Sgt. Mosso's body, but had to drop him several times when the NVA threw ChiComs at them on the way down. Initially, Lt Talone had estimated only 6 or 8 NVA, but he quickly revised his estimate as the Marines ran out of grenades and were running short of ammo. That, together with jammed M-16s, forced them to retreat to the [2436] Statement of Maj Robert L. Neff in DFC file of Capt Thomas Victor Burns.

---

[2437] Statement of Maj Franklin D. Richey in DFC file of Capt Thomas Victor Burns.
[2438] Statement of Capt J.J. Hanley in SSM file of Cpl Robert Charles Rich; Statement of Maj Franklin D. Richey in DFC file of Capt Thomas Victor Burns; Statement of Maj R. L. Neff in SSM file of Cpl Robert Charles Rich.
[2439] Statement of Maj R. L. Neff in SSM file of Cpl Robert Charles Rich.
[2440] Statement of 1/Lts R. E. Happy and D. R. Kendig in SSM file of Cpl Robert Charles Rich.
[2441] VMO-6 ComdC Mar68, Encl (3), p. 1.
[2442] Comments of 2/Lt James R. Talone, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.
[2443] Taped comments from Bert Mullins, 8 January 1984.
[2444] Ibid.
[2445] 3rd MarDiv COC 261027Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #586, Para. 3.A.
[2446] Comments of 2/Lt James R. Talone, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.
[2447] 3rd MarDiv COC 261027Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #586, Para. 3.A.
[2448] Comments of 2/Lt James R. Talone, HQMC Oral History Tape #1803.

lines.[2449] A NVA company was estimated to be occupying bunkers in the vicinity of XD822416 – XD 824415.[2450]

As the right flank advanced, 2 NVA mortars landed among the lead fire team, seriously wounding the Platoon Sergeant. Hospitalman Leonard N. Long, the platoon corpsman, immediately moved forward to administer medical aid to the wounded Marine. The squad sustained other casualties, and HN Long continued to move through the NVA fire to administer aid. While he was rushing to aid PFC Kaminski, another mortar round exploded, killing both HN Leonard Long and PFC Kenneth Kaminski.[2451]

2/Lt Talone, in his statement recommending the Bronze Star Medal for HN Long, wrote: "This disregard for his own safety in his endeavor to aid wounded Marines was SOP for HN Long. He always managed to be the first to the side of a wounded Marine. H is courage as well as his confident treating of the wounded frequently under fire was an inspiration to the whole platoon. With HN Long beside him, a Marine knew he was in the best possible hands."[2452]

Sgt Robert Bruce Mosso graduated from Wellsboro High School, Pennsylvania, in 1964, and enlisted in the USMC in October, 1964. The 22 year-old Marine was due to be discharged in October, 1968.[2453]

27 MARCH 1968

BIXBY, PFC Thomas Eugene	B/1/26
SOBEL, PFC Irwin Ross	M/3/26

At 0530H, a 81mm mortar H&I short round fell in the 37th ARVN trench perimeter, killing one ARVN.[2454]

PFC Bixby was killed at 1405H from a gunshot wound to his stomach while in perimeter defensive positions at XD851415.[2455]

During the period 1800 – 2400, KSCB and outposts received approximately 20 rounds of incoming rocket and mortar fire resulting in one KIA.[2456]

Harry W. Jenkins, Jr., had just assumed command of M/3/26 on 24 March, having arrived in country on 10 March. The night of 25 March was illumined by a full moon, the light of which permitted the Marines to dig their trenches and bunkers deeper. PFC Sobel was improving his machinegun position when suddenly a tremendous explosion shattered the night calm severing both of Sobel's feet. Jenkins, thinking back on it, opines it may have been the result of Sobel's E-tool striking a buried dud from some time past.[2457] Both MIKE and INDIA Companies on 881-South brought the military crest of their perimeter lines further down the slope to accommodate the larger number of troops manning the position than had been the case with the various 1/26 companies occupying the hill. Also, due to monsoon flooding and consequent trench collapse, the trenches had not been dug as deeply as the siege incoming dictated, and the Marines were always digging deeper and deeper.

28 MARCH 1968

BOYER, SFC Alan Lee	FOB-4
BROWN, SGM George R.	FOB-4
HUSTON, SFC Charles Gregory	FOB-4
KENT, LCPL Gregory Patrick	B/1/26
LACEY, PFC Franklin D.	L/3/26
MAYER, MGYSGT Paul Evans	MWHG-1
McRAE, PFC Jimmie Lefon	B/1/26
WALLACE, LCDR Michael Walter	VFP 63, Det 14

From noon to 1800 today, KSCB and outposts received approximately 70 rounds of incoming mortar and artillery fire causing 2 KIA, 4 WIA (evacuated), and 4 WIA (non-serious).[2458]

In a peculiar way, the cause of PFC Lacey's death occurred several days before the siege battle erupted while he and his friend, PFC Patrick G. Brady, were clearing fields of fire as Co L/3/26 prepared to occupy positions in the western (RED) sector of KSCB near the main gate. The Seabees had sprayed the foliage the previous day. "We were given a break, and we were sitting on one of the piles. The backs of our uniforms were just saturated with this stuff. We got up and the Seabee officer.. said it was just a glorified weed killer that they'd sprayed the day before."[2459] The skin of Lacey's back broke out in

---

[2449] Ibid.

[2450] PCV TOC (Maj Coombs) Resume of Telephone Call 270200H/Mar68 in III MAF Journal File, SCOTLAND, Pt. 6 (9-31 Mar 68), Ser #301.

[2451] Statement of 2/Lt J. R. Talone in Bronze Star Medal file of HN Leonard N. Long. Bert Mullins notes that the round that killed Long and Kaminski was a friendly "short round." [Taped comments from Bert Mullins, 8 January 1984]. The official 1/9 ComdC for Mar68 it as "two rounds of enemy mortar fire." [1/9 ComdC Mar68, Encl (1).]

[2452] Statement of 2/Lt J. R. Talone in Bronze Star Medal file, HN Leonard N. Long.

[2453] Ward, Don, The Faces Behind the Names, The Vietnam War, Vol. II, Minnesota: The Memorial Press, 1999, p. 144.

[2454] 3rd MarDiv COC 270847Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #590, Para. 4.A.

[2455] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 27 March 1968 Ser #12.

[2456] 3rd MarDiv COC 281600Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #592, Para. 4.A.

[2457] Comments of Brigadier General Harry W. Jenkins, Jr., n.d.

[2458] 26Mar 281145Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #595, Para. 4.A.

[2459] Conversation with Patrick Brady, 27 November 1988. Although Patrick Brady's back did not break out in irritation and infection, his shirt was saturated the whole time of the siege, and later, when hospitalized, "it took them a couple of large blisters and he was told to keep his back bare, exposed to the air and sun. Not only did he not wear a flak jacket, most of the time he wore no shirt because the irritation "was massive, but healing."[2460]

Today, Lacey was killed during from an incoming round. "We had to look hard to find anything wrong with him. He had a very, very tiny piece of shrapnel, but it went in and tore up his heart. He had just a little spot of blood in his chest area. I remember we looked at him and couldn't find where he'd been hit—for awhile—before the corpsman came up and found it."[2461]

By the end of March, the KSCB airstrip had begun to look like a junk yard and a team was sent from HQ, 1st Marine Air Wing, to retrieve what might be useable. Master Gunnery Sergeant Paul Mayer, the Wing's Aircraft Maintenance Chief, volunteered to supervise this operation. He had previously volunteered for activation from the Fleet Marine Reserve, volunteered to go to Vietnam, volunteered to extend his normal 13-month tour of duty, and voluntarily relinquished his 30-day extension leave. The team was able to palletize 12 critically needed jet engines, rotor blades, and other gear. After working at Khe Sanh for four days, he was preparing to depart from Khe Sanh, he was struck by shrapnel from a rocket and killed.[2462]

Cpl Quiles Ray Jacobs [B/1/26], a Squad Leader, accompanied a patrol on 21 March to check out the trench line. While his squad provided security, the other two squads of the platoon advanced to check out the area. Just as the patrol left the wire, Jacobs' squad was ambushed from the right with small arms and mortar fire, wounding four of his men while he was shot in the back.[2463]

"I came in and Dr. Demaagd [the 1/26 Bn Surgeon] sewed me up, gave me 106 stitches in my back. I was very fortunate and blessed because the bullet came into the right side of my back, hit my flak gear, and spinned inside my flak gear, over my spine, and out the other side of my back, and then came out. After that day on the 21st I was at the Battalion Aid Station for a few days. And then we were taking some incoming rounds. When the rounds would come in, the doctors would run out and get in the holes and the patients were still stuck. So I asked Dr. Demaagd if I could go back down to my lines, and he let me go back. I was there a couple of days with the stitches in my back, Ace bandages, and a couple of my buddies came to my hootch to see me, see how I was doing. They got called back to their lines. Right after they left my hootch, a round came in right between them—Kent and McRae. The round killed Kent, and I went down there [to the Battalion Aid Station] with McRae, and he died on the table holding my hand."[2464]

LCPL Ronald Exum was wounded in the blast that killed Kent and McRae. LCPL Michael E. O'Hara writes of McRae: "He had been there a while and was liked by everyone. He was a jovial, short, rotund little guy with a smile worth a million bucks."[2465]

LCDR Michael Walter Wallace, a Navy pilot from Detachment 14, VFP-63, on the USS TICONDEROGA, was flying a RF-8G Crusader to strike a target at XD642241 near Ban Tampank, 17 miles southeast of Khe Sanh along with 5 Skyhawks. Either he lost control of his aircraft as he rolled in with the Skyhawks (which normally performed this maneuver at a speed slower than the Crusader) or he may have been hit by ground fire. His remains were recovered and returned to the States for burial in December, 1988.[2466]

The Headquarters of B5-T8, the controlling headquarters for the entire Khe Sanh battlefield, was located in a karst formation of sharp-rising, cliff-like spires and hills, filled with caves. According to the official NVA history of the Khe Sanh battle, it was located at Sap Lit (XD6266).[2467] This location corresponds to the CIA's determination (which indicates the NVA Khe Sanh Area Front HQ located 9 miles west of the western edge of the DMZ.[2468] U.S. tactical maps of that area indicate numerous fortified hills in the karst formations in the general area from N/S grid line 37 to 58 and E/W grid line 63 to 67.[2469]

On 30 January 1968, into the Siege, a massive B-52 Air Light strike targeted the Headquarters, and the assumption at the time was that we may have killed Gen-days to get the thing off. They had to soak it in something because it had actually attached itself to my back. I've had acne in that area ever since. I was also getting a discharge down by my groin that was turning my shorts blue. They ran smears on that and said it was chemicals coming out of my body. Since then, I've become paralyzed." [Ibid.]

---

[2460] Conversation with Donald Ener, 03 December 1996. [His name is pronounced like "energize" without the "gize"].

[2461] Ibid.

[2462] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 22 April 1968, signed by LtCol G. L. Caldwell, in Legion of Merit (posthumous) file of Mastery Gunnery Sergeant Paul Evans Mayer.

[2463] Interview of Quiles Ray Jacobs by John Wright, 15 July 1989; 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 21 March 1968, Ser #15, 16, 22, and 23.

[2464] Comments of Quiles Ray Jacobs at Khe Sanh Veterans Reunion, Chicago, Il., 13 July 1989, printed I Khe Sanh Veteran, Issue No. 9 (Summer, 1989), p. 7.

[2465] O'Hara, Michael E., The Wind Beneath My Wings, mailed 27 April 1995, p. 22.

[2466] Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 143.

[2467] Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign]. Hanoi: Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense, 1987, p. 24.

[2468] CIA, Directorate of Intelligence, The Continuing Communist Military Threat in Northern South Vietnam, 13 March 1968, map.

[2469] U.S. Army Topographic Command: Sheet "Ban Nathon," Sheet 62421, Series L7015, 1970.

eral Giap.[2470] General Westmoreland, however, cautioned strongly against any public announcement "about successful B-52 attacks on the major enemy headquarters" since it "would certainly compromise the source of the information," noting that no valid cover story could be developed since there were no ground recon resources in that area and photo interpretation, while it might confirm a logistics complex, would not support identification of a major headquarters. (The only source of the information would have been from signals intelligence analysis). Furthermore, there were indications that an element of the headquarters was back in communications with Hanoi after 38 hours of silence.[2471]

Capt James Hargreve Knox, a pilot with VMO-3 who flew numerous missions in the Khe Sanh area before and during the siege battle (including the rescue of the three teams on Co Roc in mid-January 1968),[2472] recalls a brief in the FOB-3 bunker after the Siege battle erupted led by several "guys from the CIA or wherever, in their short sleeved, white shirts, looking like IBM execs" in which "they were going to put a team in, up I a very severe geological formation known as karst, north of Khe Sanh, and the idea was to grab General Giap. Nobody liked it. There was a discussion on how big the team would be and the logistics of getting them out in a hurry if they got I trouble. And the decision was made that we would not extricate them at night. Due to the terrain there would be no possible way but to make a bad situation worse if we tried to go in there with a bunch of helicopters at night and get this team out. The team wasn't hot on going. At that point a Second or First Lieutenant who was going on the team, 'You mean, if I'm in there at night, nobody's going to come and get me?' And we [the Marine helicopter pilots] said, 'Look, we'll do whatever we're told to do, but I don't think we can get the whole team out. We'll run an airstrike and that kind of thing.' And around we went. Finally this Lieutenant told the Colonel he wasn't going! Whereupon the Colonel arrested him on the spot and put him on a helicopter and said he was going to be court-martialed. Right on the spot! Right in front of me!"[2473]

On 4 March 1968, Ambassador Sullivan in Vientiane, Laos, approved a request from MACSOG, COMUSMACV, to conduct a wire-tap mission outside the Prairie Fire Zone due to its great urgency.[2474] Wire-tap equipment that arrived in March, 1968, known as CIRCUS ACT,[2475] permitted extended recordings of communications over a period of several weeks, and to enhance the probabilities of clandestine insertion, SOG team ASP was inserted from Thailand rather than the usual insertion from South Vietnam (Kontum or Khe Sanh).[2476] After ASP installed the wiretap gear, two CH-3 Jolly Green Giants piloted by Majors Villotti and Jay Oberg, prepared to extract the team.[2477] The terrain at the extraction point, XD434574,[2478] did not permit a landing, and a rope ladder was dropped. Six Vietnamese on the patrol were able to climb into the helicopter and after the 7th Vietnamese member of the patrol climbed aboard, the helicopter came under intense ground fire and was forced to depart. Sgt Boyer, who had held the ladder steady to ensure the Vietnamese could climb it, was climbing the rope when it broke as the helicopter pulled away.[2479] The medic aboard the H-3, Sgt (E5) David J. Mayberry, turned away for a moment to tend to a crewman who had received a minor wound. When he turned back to the door, he noticed Sgt Boyer and the rope were gone;

[2470] W.W. Rostow, Memorandum for President Johnston, Tuesday, 30 January 1968, 7:50 AM, referencing MAC 01430, in LVJ Library, National Security File, Vietnam Country File, 2A(1) I Corps and DMZ 11/66-1/67, Container 66.

[2471] General Westmoreland 010010Z/Feb68 in LBJ Library, National Security File, Vietnam Country File, 5EE(1) Laos 10/67-12/68, Container 92.

[2472] Maj Ira Snell, Jr., CO, FOB-1, Letter of Commendation, 16 February 1968, in Air Medal file of Capt James Hargreve Knox.

[2473] Conversation with James Hargreve Knox, 4 October 1994.

[2474] AMEMBASSY VIENTIANE 041130Z/Mar68, VIENTIANE 4889, in LBJ Library, National Security File, Vietnam Country File, 5EE, Box 93.

[2475] Capt Hammond Salley, who arrived at FOB-3 into the siege battle from his job as Assistant S-3 of the 4th Psychological Operations Group in Saigon to assume duties as S-2 at FOB-3 had custody of all Top Secret documents, debriefed all the patrols, prepared and sent captured intelligence materials to the rear for inspection, and was custodian for insertions of "Eldest Son," and custodian of "Circus Act" devices and helped determine locations for "Frantic Goat" airdrop of leaflets on the Ho Chi Minh Trail. [Letter from Hammond Salley, 20 June 2002]. "Eldest Son" was an operation of OP-33/35 and involved placing munitions that exploded as they were fired into NVA caches (AK and mortar) to create distrust by the NVA of their own ammunition supplies; "Circus Act," a project of SOG's OP-35/38, was an induction device placed around commo wire to record NVA conversations. [Letter from Hammond Salley, 10 August 2002].

[2476] Conboy, Ken, and Morrison, James, "The Rise and Fall of Recon Team Asp," Vietnam (August 2001) 18.

[2477] Ibid., p. 20.

[2478] Location approximately 4 clicks west of Route 92, a road which starts on Route 9 at XD520398 and proceeds north, then northwest in a loop, then east through the karst formation about the E/W grid line 69 to the western edge of the DMZ. The location of the extraction point is about 23 clicks directly south of the karst formation and the B5-T8 Khe Sanh Front Headquarters. [U.S. Army Topographic Command, Series L7015, Sheets 6242 I, "Ban Nathon," and 6242 II, "Ban Donhai," 1970].

[2479] Narrative of Case 1108-0-01 through 03, in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #346, Folder #51.

the rope wells in the ladder handle had broken and the mounts in the doorway had ripped out.[2480]

On 1 April, SSG (E6) Charles L. Feller, Jr., led a team to search and recover the remains of the 3 Americans. After a search for over 6 hours with no indication of anyone still in the area, along with an absence of expended shell casings, equipment, blood stains, and odor of decaying bodies, and the heavy presence of NVA in the area, it was assumed they had been captured.[2481]

[A last assault by the NVA against the positions manned by the 37th ARVN Ranger Bn resulted in 7 NVA KIA by ground fire and 71 KIA by artillery.[2482]

30 MARCH 1968

ALDRICH, CPL David Alan	B/1/26
ANDERSON, PFC David Bruce	B/1/26
BEASLEY, CPL Luzon	H&S/1/9
BRITT, PFC Ted Dennis	B/1/26
GULA, PFC Paul Richard	D/1/9
HOWLETT, LCPL Norman L Jr.	A/3rd Eng
JONES, PFC Jimmie Lee	B/1/26
KOMAN, 2/Lt Lawrence Ryland	D/1/9
MOORE, LCPL Wayne Paul	B/1/26
NORMAN, 1/Lt Marion Henry	A/1/13
PLUNKETT, CPL Raymond Louis	D/1/9
RASH, PFC Donald Ray	B/1/26
REYES, PFC Ronald	D/1/9
RUIZ, PFC Jose Jr.	B/1/26
SANFORD, CPL Albert Russell	B/1/26
SHAFER, CAPT Francis Leo J.	D/1/9
SMITH, LCPL Author "C"	B/1/26
TOTTEN, PFC Kenneth Romaine Jr.	B/1/26
WARREN, CPL Donald Albert	B/1/26

The specter, terror, and horror of what happened on 25 February became an idée fixe continually gnawing at the souls of those still alive at Khe Sanh, especially within the command and staff of 1/26. Almost immediately, the battalion staff initiated plans for a return to the ambush site to retrieve the MIA.[2483] Reports from the Division's AOs and aerial photography as well as patrols from the 37th ARVN Ranger Battalion, provided daily, up-dated intelligence. Reports indicated that the area was occupied by a reinforced NVA battalion in heavily fortified positions along with a regimental command group which occupied the high ground behind the battlefield area at the Old French Fort position.[2484] Supporting arms plans were prepared utilizing pre-planned artillery concentrations on known NVA assembly areas, routes, reserve and supply areas by Capt Mirza Munir Baig, the Regiment's Target Intelligence Officer along with 1/Lt William F. Smith, an artillery officer from A/1/13 assigned as an artillery FO to 1/26[2485] in which the commander on the ground would call "apples," "grapes," "peaches," etc., to designate a variety of targets to be struck by a variety of artillery, known as "the fruit basket."[2486] Routes of movement through friendly mine fields laid by the engineers and through terrain features were committed to memory.[2487] Originally, the plans called for a full battalion assault; this was rejected by the Regiment "because of the potential exposure to the Combat Base by having so many troops outside the perimeter at one time and because of the potential of getting the battalion in a fight that would be difficult from which to extract."[2488] Indeed, this would have played into the hands of the NVA's master plan of creating a situation into which American troops would arrive in great numbers so

---

[2480] Statement of Sgt David J. Mayberry, Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #346, Folder #51.

[2481] Statement of SSG Charles L. Feller, Jr., in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #284, Folder #116.

[2482] MACV, "Khe Sanh Analysis," 8 July 1968, p. 11.

[2483] Pipes, Maj K.W., "Men to Match Their Mountains," Marine Corps Gazette 58:4 (April, 1974) 22.

[2484] Statement of LtCol Charles E. Davis, III, USMC (Ret), 24 August 2001, Para. 9, Exhibit 14 in Letter from Capt Charles E. Patterson, Subj: Summary of Action in Support of Award Recommendation for Captain Kenneth W. Pipes, for Heroic Action Above and Beyond the Call of Duty in Combat on 30 March 1968 at Khe Sanh, Republic of Vietnam [hereinafter referred to as "Pipes, MOH package."]

[2485] Ibid., para. 13.

[2486] William Smith recalls that Baig would ask Smith, "What will we call this fire plan?" and Bill said, "Grapes," "And what about this?" "Apples." Smith: "We did it for one reason and one reason alone: everybody got a copy, everybody carried it. All they had to do was yell 'Peaches!' and everything was pre-planned, pre-shot, pre-fired. We figured the range of a 82mm mortar, drew a circle ad tried to take I all the possible positions for 82mm mortars. Then we took in all the high ground from which you could observe; we targeted all of that. For the hills, for instance, we would have 'Peaches' up on top of a hill; 'Peaches' would be a combination, let's say, of Battery-6, Fuse VT, which would fling the people off. If you took fire from the hill over there, then 'Peaches' would be an artillery counter-fire which would have in it smoke, white phosphorus, fuse VT, to clean the people off, and would also neutralize all positions on the reverse slope of the hill. So if you just thought you were taking fire, you'd just yell 'Peaches!' and 'Peaches' would take care of anything. Of if you took fire from your front, you yelled 'Apples' and 'Apples would basically take care of everything to 82mm mortar range that we found." [Conversation with William Smith, 16 March 1985]. The term "fruit basket" was used by the artillery FO, PFC Theodore H. Golab. [Conversation with Theodore Golab, 15 August 1985].

[2487] Pipes, Maj K.W., "Men to Match Their Mountains, Marine Corps Gazette 58:4 (April, 1974), p. 22.

[2488] Statement of LtCol Charles E. Davis, 24 August 2001, in Pipes, MOH package, op. cit.,Para. 11.

that they could be annihilated,[2489] a tactic presciently grasped and assiduously avoided by Col Lownds and his staff which precluded sending relief to the attack on the Huong Hoa District Seat in Khe Sanh Village and the attack on Lang Vei, as well as the avoidance by Major General Tompkins in resisting sending reinforcements to the besieged Khe Sanh Combat Base, and an avoidance by General Westmoreland for sending in troops to relieve the siege until well after major elements of the North Vietnamese Army had departed the battlefield (sending the relief in April, after the 325C Division had departed in February/March, with some battalions and regiments departing in mid-February).

In what would be the first offensive action out of the Combat Base, approximately 75 – 80% of the NCOs and enlistedmen from the company had been there only a short time[2490] and although there was no way to rehearse the plan of attack nor train for it, several days prior to the attack, briefings were given repeatedly to the troops in the trenches.[2491] The mission was "to attack a known fortified position with an alternate mission of attempting to establish and if possible recover our comrades who had been ambushed on the 25th of February 1968."[2492] The mission was broken into 2 phases. Objective #1 (XD844411),[2493] a NVA trenchline would be secured by B-2 (led by 1/Lt John W. Dillon). The second phase would be to seize Objective ALFA (XD853404),[2494] a piece of high ground just beyond the area containing the MIA from the 25 February patrol. Just prior to first light, B/1/26 would stage itself outside the KSCB. Following intensive prep fires, B-2 would jump off, securing Objective #1 with 2 squads up and one back. After it was secured, the remainder of Co "B" would jump off in the assault of Objective ALFA which would be taken with 2 platoons up and one back. After securing Objective ALFA, the Company would establish a defensive perimeter while recovery teams searched for the bodies. After the bodies were recovered, the Company would pull back into KSCB.[2495]

By 0001, 30 March 1968, a small unit from FOB-3 had occupied a position near Hill 471 to act as a blocking force.[2496] PFC Theodore H. Golab [A/1/13] and his radioman, "Roach," accompanied this group as an artillery FO, along with an Army Captain, three Army Sergeants and a platoon of indigenous soldiers. When PFC Golab and his radioman, upon arrival at the FOB, were issued black pajama uniforms, he questioned being "out of uniform," but they insisted. Golab was amazed at their gear which included small radios in their helmets—small pads, microphone, and ear plug.[2497]

Marines from Co. "B," 3rd Recon Bn were brought in to man the defensive positions normally occupied by B/1/26.[2498] Reveille for B/1/26 was at 0330, and by 0430, the company had assembled in perimeter trenches. The Marines of B/1/26 were given the order to "fix bayonets!" "I almost shit myself when [Lt] Weiss said 'Fix bayonets!' O gees! One of the things that's stuck in my mind forever was that I told [PFC Ted] Britt, 'Don't worry about nothing; I'll bring your body back.' And he laughed—cause we were all geared. He said, 'No, I'll bring your body back.' I'll always remember that."[2499] A platoon of FOB-3 departed the FOB compound at 0537[2500] to occupy a pre-designated screening position southeast of the raid objective area.[2501] B-2 which departed at 0606 out of the main gate in the vicinity of bunker #42 was followed by the remainder of Co "B" which departed the FOB gate at [2489] Mission of the Highway 9-Khe Sanh Campaign included "..to draw the enemy to Highway 9, the more the better, to pin them down and continue to eliminate them." [Chien Dien Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh-Route 9 Offensive Campaign], Hanoi: Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense, 1987, p. 14. On 9 January 1968, the B5-T8 Command Headquarters issued the mission to the Khe Sanh section of the battlefield: "304th Infantry Division deployed to the south of Highway 9 would concentrate its forces to attack and seize the Huong Hoa district seat (including Ku Boc if the enemy was present). Be prepared to reinforce land forces from Tan Lam and Ca Lu on north if the enemy landed forces by air in the Huong Hoa area; if the enemy did not reinforce, then eliminate Houi San [note, Ban Houei Sane, the location of BV-33 in Laos] and Lang Vay [Lang Vei] and move forces to surround and constrict Ta Con [Khe Sanh Combat Base] in order to draw in enemy reinforcements. [Ibid., p. 21]. Cf also "..to draw out and tie down American and puppet forces, the more the better, and continue to eliminate them" [Su Doan 304 (Ky Su) (Tap II) [304th Division (Chronology) (Vol II)], Hanoi: People's Army Publishing House, 1990, p. 58].

---

[2490] Statement of Capt Kenneth W. Pipes, 21 May 1968, in HQMC Oral History Tape #2810.

[2491] Statement of LtCol Charles E. Davis in Pipes, MOH package, op. cit., Paragraphs. 16 & 17.

[2492] Statement of Capt Kenneth W. Pipes, 21 May 1968, in HQMC Oral History Tape #2810.

[2493] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log 30 March 1968, Ser #20.

[2494] Ibid.

[2495] Statement of 1/Lt John William Dillon, HQMC Oral History Tape #3716.

[2496] Statement of PFC Theodore H. Golab, 1 August 2001, in Pipes, MOH package.

[2497] Conversations with Theodore Golab, 15 August 1985 and 22 April 1986.

[2498] Statement of LtCol Frederick J. McEwan, 30 August 2001, in Pipes, MOH package. The Marines brought with them .50 caliber machineguns they had taken from disabled helicopters—they could hardly fire them from their position in the center of the Combat Base!—and fired them over the heads of the Marines of B/1/26. About 6-8 guns were fired until the rounds no longer fired straight. Firing continuously instead of in bursts, they changed gunners when their thumbs got tired. [Conversation with David Doehrman, 4 February 1984].

[2499] Conversation with Michael McCauley, 9 February 1997.

[2500] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log 30, March 1968, Ser #20.

[2501] Pipes, "Men to Match Their Mountains," op. cit., p. 22.

0612. All units maneuvered to their pre-planned positions behind their LOD [Line of Departure]. An initial delay because of fog and poor visibility[2502] actually aided the force which was able to take advantage of the concealment the fog provided to shroud their movement before it lifted. At 0725, B-2 crossed their LOD followed by Co B (-) (Rein) crossing their LOD at 0734. At 0738, the lead elements of B-2 reached Objective #1 (XD844411) followed by the remainder of B-2.[2503] B-2 (1/Lt John William Dillon) established an intermediate rally point for the rest of the company , set up a medevac station, and skillfully deployed his Marines to provide security for the field medical aid station.[2504] Heavy H&I fires which were pounding the entire area did not eliminate the element of surprise since these fires had struck the same area regularly in previous weeks.[2505] At 0750 the FOB-3 platoon was in position.

Facing the Marines, the North Vietnamese 2nd Battalion, 9th Regiment, 304th Division, was poised on what they referred to as their "Battlefield #3." The Company Commander of the 6th Company in command of the battlefield was killed at the outset.[2506] The NVA position was approximately 600 to 1,000 meters across the front and about 500 to 1,000 meters deep[2507] in the vicinity of XD845429 to XD853404.[2508]

After B-2 (1/Lt Dillon) secured Objective #1, the Company paused momentarily (at 0751)[2509] to link-up and reorganize and then jumped off from Objective #1 toward their final objective, moving out on a line from XD844411 to XD843406 with B-1 (led by 2/Lt Peter William Weiss) in a platoon wedge/squad wedge and B-3 in a platoon "V".[2510] After moving 25 meters beyond Objective #1, at 0800, B-3 came under extremely heavy RPG, 82mm, ad 60mm mortar fire, heavy automatic weapons and small arms, and ChiCom grenades from mutually supporting and very well-built NVA bunkers. The area was "fortified a bit more than any of us had initially anticipated."[2511] The momentum of attack, however, never slackened as B-1 and B-3 assaulted fortified positions.

PFC Ted D. Britt, a fire team leader with the 3rd Squad, B-1,[2512] maneuvered his fire team by individual rushes until his squad secured the outermost defensive position. While consolidating in the NVA trench line, heavy NVA mortar and automatic weapons fire pinned down the squad. PFC Britt immediately left the cover of the trench and assaulted the enemy position from which the largest volume of automatic fire was coming, destroying the position, the weapon, and killing four NVA soldiers. He then moved to attack a NVA spider hole position and was fatally wounded in the process, but not before he had accomplished his mission. "He was greatly responsible for reducing the number of friendly casualties."[2513]

HM3 Thomas E. Casey, responding to the call "Corpsman Up!" continuously moved from casualty to casualty despite mortars and heavy automatic weapons fire around him.[2514] As he jumped into a crater to render medical aid, 3 mortars exploded in and around the crater, killing 2 Marines. Disregarding the danger around him, Casey continued to treat all the wounded in the crater.[2515]

In an official, taped interview conducted shortly after the action, Pipes was to say, "I believe all of the young Marines that we had in the company had been waiting several weeks for this opportunity... Once the kids started, there was nothing, it seemed, that could stop them. From the point of initial contact until we reached our final objective, some 500 to 600 meters, perhaps more, they covered the ground in 20 to 25 minutes. A later body count indicated confirmed approximately 115 North Vietnamese Army were actually killed.. by kids using small arms fire, grenades, bayonets, M79s, all weapons organic to an infantry company."[2516] In addition, a section of flame throwers participated in the attack. Capt Pipes felt these were a complete surprise to the NVA. "When we first used them there was a noticeable slack in their fire. I think the shock effect at that particular time of the NVA seeing the flame throwers, knowing that we did have them with us.. put a bit of fear in them and enabled us to continue the initial momentum of the attack clear through to the final objective."[2517]

[2502] The fog also temporarily obscured the battlefield from the AO and the 1/26 "6" and "3" halted the advance of the patrol behind the LOD temporarily. [Pipes, "Men to Match Their Mountains," op. cit., p. 22].

[2503] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, March 1968, Ser #20.

[2504] Statement of 1/Lt Peter W. Weiss in Bronze Star Medal file on 1/Lt John William Dillon.

[2505] Pipes, "Men to Match Their Mountains," op. cit., p. 22.

[2506] Su Doan 304 (Ky Su) (Tap II) [304th Division (Chronology) (Vol II), Hanoi: People's Army Publishing House, 1990, p. 100.

[2507] Statement of LtCol Charles E. Davis in Pipes, 21 August 2001, MOH package, op. cit., Paragraph 20.

[2508] 3rd MarDiv COC 302100Z/Mar68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #603, Para. 3.A.

[2509] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log 30 March 1968, Ser #20.

[2510] Ibid.

[2511] Comments of Capt K. W. Pipes, HQMC Oral History Tape #2810.

[2512] Statement of LCPL Michael H. McCauley in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of PFC Ted D. Britt.

[2513] Statement of CPL Rickey M. Brunk in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of PFC Ted D. Britt.

[2514] Statement of Cpl Kenneth J. Bragalone in Bronze Star Medal file of HM3 Thomas E. Casey. Casey died of an aneurysm 01 March 1998.

[2515] Statement of PFC James A. Smith in Bronze Star Medal file of HM3 Thomas E. Casey.

[2516] Comments of Capt K. W. Pipes, HQMC Oral History Tape #2810.

[2517] Ibid.

LCPL Thomas N. Quigley, carrying the Company radio in the CP group, recalls being next to one of the Marines with a flame thrower and asking, "Man, how long will one of those tanks last?" "And it really amazed me because there were only so many seconds and the whole thing's empty.. And I said, 'That don't seem like very much,' and he said, 'Well, if you're at the other end, it's an eternity!'"[2518]

PFC Golab, from his vantage point, watched the entire action: "Everything looked like it should be. They all had fixed bayonets. They got flak jackets on. They got helmets on. They looked good. They had all their formations down pat, and they were moving out. You could see the NVA walking in their trenches, just nonchalantly. One guy had a cup in his hand. I called artillery on Khe Sanh ville because I knew something was going to come out of there, to cut off that road. And then there was this mortar round. It lands and doesn't go off. It must of landed 6 yards from me, went into the mud, and its fins are sticking out."[2519]

The assaulting elements reached the limit of advance at 0815 and consolidated their position as planned. As the artillery was pounding the NVA positions, suddenly the command, 'Cease Fire!' 'Cease Fire!' came over the Conduct of Fire net, and the artillery stopped. "This was not according to plan! The battalion forward CP was trying to find out who gave this order. The order apparently had come from the NVA using imitative deception. Before the artillery barrage could be turned back on, the NVA lobbed several mortar rounds into the middle of Ken's [Capt Pipes'] command group."[2520] At the time, the Company's senior radioman, LCPL Thomas N. Quigley, was on the radio. "I had my left hand on my right forehead and my right hand on my receiver, bent over to talk to one of the platoons, and the Lieutenant said, 'Doc's hit.' And he started getting up. As he started getting up, I turned back to look at him, Lt. Norman, and that's when the rounds hit and I saw him get it."[2521] It was now 0830, when the company CP group, moving in trace of the two assault platoons, received an estimated at 20 rounds of 82mm.[2522] The mortar barrage was deadly. 1/Lt Henry Norman, the Artillery FO, was killed, Norman's and Pipes' radio operators were wounded. Pipes was momentarily knocked unconscious, and the ensuing radio silence caused the battalion forward CP to dispatch 1/Lt William Smith, the Battalion Artillery Liaison Officer, and his radio operator, LCPL John J. O'Donnell, to attempt a link and find out what happened to Pipes' command group and resume direction of protective and withdrawal artillery fires.[2523]

The Corpsman hit, Richard Blanchfield, had been a Marine (1955-1963, with 3/3) after which he served with the Thomas A. Dooley Foundation as a medical corpsman to the Hmong and Lao (1963-1965) and then became a US Navy Corpsman in 1967. Initially assigned to the medical facilities at Phu Bai, he was asked by a One Star (Commodore) Navy Doctor to volunteer to serve at Khe Sanh. The siege battle was already well under way when he arrived.[2524] Accompanying B-1 (2/Lt Peter William Weiss) Doc Blanchfield received a large piece of shrapnel in his left shoulder and was placed on a pile of dead bodies; no further medical aid was deemed necessary—he was near death. Blanchfield had distributed 2 morphine syrettes to each Marine and said, "If I can't get to you, only use this morphine for what you need." Now, he jabbed one into his own leg. It didn't work. He jabbed another one directly into his chest near his heart. Chaplain Charles ("Chick") Kelly came by and started giving Last Rites. Blanchfield looked up at him and said, "Kelly, I don't want Last Rites, get me some blood!" "Sure enough he came back; he had the blood. But he didn't tell me he took a bullet right through his leg."[2525] A helicopter landed. The pilot emerged, picked up the naked, blood-soaked Blanchfield in his arms, put him inside the helicopter, and flew off to a medical aid station from where he eventually was sent to the USS REPOSE.[2526] Michael E. O'Hara remembers seeing Doc Blanchfield: "When I found him, he already had two needles in his leg and he was really tore-up. We stopped and put a bandage on him, and then went on. He was so tore-up, and had so much morphine in him, he was laughing! He was phased-out!"[2527]

Meanwhile, PFC Golab, after the mortar incident at his location, had moved to and linked up with Pipes' command group. "At that time I first saw Captain Pipes, who was helmetless and his face white from loss of blood. Captain Pipes was standing alone, propped up against a tree at the edge of a bomb crater. He had apparently lost his helmet (I later learned that a round had knocked the helmet off of his head) and his face was white from loss of blood. I saw that he was severely

---

[2518] Conversation with Thomas Quigley, 11 May 1986. [The Portable Flame Thrower, M2A1, has a burning time of 6 – 12 seconds. Weight empty: 43 lbs.; weight full: 68-72 pounds.]

[2519] Conversation with Theodore Golab, 22 April 1986.

[2520] Statement of LtCol Charles E. Davis in Pipes, 24 August 2001, Pipes, MOH package, op. cit., Paragraphs 24 & 25; Conversation with Charles E. Davis, III, 17 February 1990.

[2521] Conversation with Thomas N. Quigley, 11 May 1986.

[2522] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 30 March 1968, Ser #20.

[2523] Ibid., para. 26; Statement of 1/Lt William F. Smith, III, 1 August 2001, Pipes, MOH package, op. cit.

[2524] Conversations with Richard Blanchfield 15 July 1990 and 23 July 1990; Vita in letter from Richard Blanchfield of April, 1990; Comments by Richard Blanchfield at Khe Sanh reunion, 21 July 1990, Nashville, TN, printed in Khe Sanh Veterans Newsletter, Issue #12 (November 1990) 12.

[2525] Blanchfield, comments at reunion, op. cit.

[2526] Conversation with Richard Blanchfield, 23 July 1990.

[2527] Conversations with Michael E. O'Hara, 23 March 1993 and 28 March 1993; O'Hara, "The Wind Beneath My Wings," n.d. [mailed 27 April 1995], p. 25.

wounded: his left arm and chest were wrapped in blood-soaked battle dressings. Captain Pipes held a .45 caliber semiautomatic pistol in his right hand and was shooting into enemy bunkers at a distance of 4 – 5 meters."[2528] According to the NVA's official history of the 304th Division, they assumed Pipes had been killed: "A newly-assigned replacement, Nguyen Huu Dong, shot and killed the battalion commander and eliminated the enemy's signal section."[2529] Captain Pipes took grievous wounds to his chest and shoulder. Lt Norman's radio operator was hit in the face. Thomas Quigley saw it all close-hand: "Lt Norman, he was just—it was like someone took a machete and split him right down the middle. At the time I was on the radio. I had my left hand on my right forehead and my right hand on my receiver, bent over to talk to one of the platoons. The Lieutenant said, 'Doc's hit," and he started getting up. As he started getting up, I turned back to look at him, Lt. Norman, and that's when the rounds hit, and I saw him get it. He didn't know what hit him. It picked him up and slammed him right back inside the trenchline. It took the whole side of him off. I screamed... It scarred me, because Lt. Norman was one of the best officers besides Capt Pipes and Ben Long that I ever had the privilege of serving with, just a super straight guy, and when I saw him, I screamed. My hand busted out blood. The shrapnel had broke my radio."[2530]

1/Lt John W. Dillon now led some of the Marines from B-2, to Captain Pipes' position to carry the dead and wounded to the field medical station while B-1 and B-3 were engaged with the enemy. 1/Lt Benjamin L. Long, the Company Executive Officer, along with 1/Lt Dillon helped the wounded Capt Pipes to reestablish communication and regroup the remaining Marines in the CP group.[2531] When 1/Lt Long reached Capt Pipes, he observed that Capt Pipes had immediately put battle dressings on one of his radio operators who was profusely bleeding and quickly evacuated the four radio operators to the field aid station as he rapidly regained communications with his maneuver elements, the battalion, the artillery net, and air support.[2532] LCPL Michael E. O'Hara saw the CP group being hit and was one of the few Marines from B-2 to move forward and reach the company CP. He found Captain Pipes "had received a devastating wound from shrapnel in his left armpit which was bleeding profusely. The Battalion Surgeon, LT Harvey J. Demaagd, tried to treat Captain Pipes for his wounds.[2533] Captain Pipes refused any type of pain killer and refused medical evacuation from the field. As Dr. Demaagd was trying to treat him, Captain Pipes gathered up the Company radio, the Battalion radio, and the [artillery] forward observer's radio on his right arm and began to call in artillery fire in support of the advance... He continued, despite his wounds, to press the attack, including directing the individual groups of Marines in their assaults upon enemy trench lines and bunkers, joining, whenever necessary, in attacking fortified positions while continuing to lead the Company."[2534]

HM3 Thomas E. Casey remembers the scene: "I remember him standing still with the radio and his arm wounded. He still stood there, giving orders. I thought he was a really big battlefield commander. [He wasn't crouched down]. He stood by the next bomb crater, giving orders on the radio."[2535] Michael E. O'Hara: Pipes "..stood his ground to call for air and artillery and just wouldn't quit until all of his men were back safe."[2536] "He set an example for my whole life... He was standing up, bleeding like a stuffed pig. He had two [radio headset] handles, one on each ear, controlling. Demaagd couldn't get him to hold still. He was trying to keep him bandaged up, and the blood would just explode out—'pfssh'—I mean I thought the man was going to die. He was tore-up in his armpit real bad, real bad!"[2537] "I was simply in awe of this guy. Here most of his good friends were lying dead or wounded right at his feet, and he was still in control. I bent over and picked up Lt. Norman's body. When I saw who it was, I was devastated. Hank Norman had made friends with everyone in the company, from Private to Captain, and was admired by all who knew him... When I stood up and threw his body across [2528] Statement of PFC Theodore H. Golab, 1 August 2001, Pipes, MOH package, op. cit.

---

[2529] Su Doan 304 (Ky Su) (Tap II) [304th Division (Chronology) (Vol. II)], Hanoi: People's Army Publishing House, 1990, p. 100. The same document notes, "The squad leader of the 82mm mortar squad, Nguyen Huy Hung, fired in support a succession of 110 rounds of mortar fire in order to break up one wing of the enemy." [Ibid.]

[2530] Conversation with Thomas Quigley, 11 May 1986.

[2531] Bronze Star Medal Citation of 1/Lt Benjamin L. Long; Statements of 1/Lt Peter W. Weiss and SSGT Gus Alvarado, Jr., in Bronze Star Medal file of 1/Lt John William Dillon.

[2532] Statement of 1/Lt Benjamin L. Long in Silver Star Medal file of Capt Kenneth W. Pipes.

[2533] Dr. Harvey J. Demaagd and a group of Navy Corpsmen from the 1/26 BAS had established a field medical station in a bomb crater to the rear of the company. As friendly casualties were taken, Lt Demaagd examined each Marine, supervised the treatment and personally attended all cases in which the Marine's life hung in the balance. [Statement of Capt Kenneth W. Pipes, in Bronze Star Medal file of LT Harvey J. Demaagd]. As in the case of attending to Captain Pipes, he left the security of the bomb crater numerous times, with complete disregard for his personal safety, to render medical aid to the wounded. "There is no doubt that the loss of lives would have been far greater had it not been for.. Dr. Demaagd." [Statement of SSGT William S. Dale in Bronze Star Medal file of LT Harvey J. Demaagd]

[2534] Statement of Michael E. O'Hara, 4 August 2001, Pipes, MOH package, op. cit.

[2535] Conversation with Thomas Casey, 16 December 1990. Casey died 1 March 1998 of an abdominal aneurysm.

[2536] Michael E. O'Hara, letter of 1 September 1992.

[2537] Conversation with Michael E. O'Hara, 23 March 1993.

my shoulder, I turned around to look back for just an instant. Lt Mascato was about 50 meters away and Ken Rodgers was right behind him... A F-4 Phantom.. unloaded his napalm so close that I could actually feel the heat. I saw his tail shudder because he was too close to the ground. He nearly blew himself out of the air giving us the covering fire... Lt Norman was a slightly build man, but I remembered he seemed so heavy. My legs were beginning to ache with pain, and I was very nearly ready to drop him. I laid him down on the back of the APC, fell back on my butt, and began to cry. I began to wonder, 'How much can a man take?'"[2538]

1/Lt John William Dillon (B-2) made numerous trips through the fire-swept terrain carrying wounded Marines to the field medical station.[2539] The Marines of his Platoon, B-2, continued the momentum of the assault of NVA positions. LCPL Michael E. O'Hara captures the moment: "When I reached their trenches and jumped in, it was unreal. The trenches were full to the brim with freshly killed NVA soldiers. My foot never hit the ground while I was in their trenches. The rats were everywhere. Those bastards fear nothing and I would later reflect that we had become like rats. We were like sharks on a feeding frenzy. We were passing by wounded Marines on our quest for the kill. We went clear over the top and began charging down the back side before we realized we had inflicted total destruction on an entire NVA battalion. For just a moment, we all cheered like a come-from-behind football team who had just won a pennant or something. We began to pull back and started to realize there was a very high price for our exhilaration. Dead and wounded Marines were everywhere you looked and the danger had certainly not past."[2540]

Cpl Edward I. Prendergast, Section Leader of 60mm mortars attached to B-2 also managed to reach Captain Pipes and saw him "standing in an exposed position under the continuing heavy enemy fire, calling in artillery fire on the forward observer's radio as well as directing the operations of the three platoons of the Company... If Captain Pipes had not acted in the manner that he had, even though severely wounded, and had not maintained the communications with the fire support center, the enemy would have been able to launch a counterattack to our advancement into their fortifications."[2541]

During the next hour and fifteen minutes, the Bravo Co CP reorganized while B-1 and B-3 searched and destroyed the bunkers, killing all NVA in sight.

PFC David B. Anderson, a Marine with the search team, point squad, B-1, upon seeing a Marine laying in an open and unprotected area, rushed to give aid; while administering emergency first aid, PFC Anderson was fatally wounded.[2542] PFC Anderson, like several other KIAs at Khe Sanh,[2543] had a premonition he was going to die and told Capt Pipes before the patrol departed that he didn't want to go. After Pipes explained that he was needed, he agreed to go. He said, "I can understand; I just wanted to talk to you, Skipper, and let you know what my feelings were."[2544] Anderson had less than 10 days left "in country."[2545] While giving emergency first aid to one of the wounded, PFC Anderson was fatally wounded.[2546]

Also with B-1, LCPL Wayne Paul Moore, a rifleman assigned to the point squad, personally assaulted one of the enemy bunkers that was spewing intense fire. Upon reaching the trench, LCPL Moore destroyed 2 NVA fortified positions with hand grenades and continued to kill 2 enemy soldiers. To permit the rest of his squad to proceed, LCPL Moore exposed himself to the intense enemy fire to establish a base of fire with his M-16 and then sprinted to the aid of two WIA. As he exposed himself to draw the enemy's fire and permit his squad to advance, he was mortally wounded.[2547] His Squad Leader at the time recalls: "Lance Corporal Moore jumped up and he charged that line, single-handedly. He got shot three times or four times, went down twice, got back up, and continued to charge this gun bunker and got hit, dropped his rifle, took out a pistol and dove into the trench—threw a grenade in, and dove into the trench line, and the last thing I seen of him was him beating this Gook with his pistol, and then it was literally like a 'John Wayne' movie, everybody just leaped up and charged. [Along with Author C. Smith] these were both two of the best Marines you could ever imagine. These guys were abso-

---

[2538] O'Hara, "Wind," op. cit., p. 26.
[2539] Statement of SSGT Gus Alvarado, Jr., in Bronze Star Medal file, 1/Lt John William Dillon.
[2540] O'Hara, Michael E., "The Wind Beneath My Wings," n.d. [mailed 27 April 1995], p. 25.
[2541] Statement of Edward I. Prendergast, 1 August 2001, Pipes, MOH package, op. cit.
[2542] Statement of 1/Lt Peter W. Weiss in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous), PFC David Bruce Anderson.
[2543] Vide PFC Randy Neal McPhee (30 Apr 67), CPL Delbert Louis Leasure (23 Feb 68), and 2/Lt Ferdinando DiSteffano (24 Feb 68); there were undoubtedly numerous others.
[2544] Conversation with Kenneth Pipes, 11 January 1988.
[2545] Pipes, "Men to Match Their Mountains," op. cit., p. 24.
[2546] Statement of 1/Lt Peter W. Weiss in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file, PFC David Bruce Anderson.
[2547] Statements of LCPL Ezell Green and 1/Lt Peter W. Weiss in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file on LCPL Wayne Paul Moore. Moore's father, SGT Paul Moore, fought in WW II and was wounded on Okinawa 11 May 1945. He writes that his 6-ft., 190-lb. son with sandy hair and blue-green eyes, had joined the Marines 22 April 1966 and returned in Sep 1967 to marry his wife. "His Sgt. at H&S told him if he would sign-up for 6 more months he would not have to return to 'Nam.' He did, and returned Oct 1967 to rejoin his fellow Marines. In his last letter of 29 Mar 68 he stated he had volunteered to go out next morning, 30 Mar, to recover remains of fellow Marines." [Letter of Paul Moore, 11 Feb 1990].

lutely fearless in combat. They weren't crazy, just flat brave! I'm so proud of these guys, you cannot imagine!"[2548]

Moore was a good friend of Tom Quigley and had trained him for Point. "A friend told me later that when 'Charlie' jumped up from one of those spider holes behind him, he shot him right in the back."[2549]

LCPL Moore had, on this date, just returned from the special 30-day "free" leave granted to those who extended six months for additional Vietnam duty. "He was actually listed on the company rolls at Bravo Company HQ as AWOL, as he didn't check-in with Headquarters when he returned to his platoon and no one from his platoon had notified Headquarters that he was back."[2550]

LCPL Author "C" Smith, Third squad leader with B-1 left the trench line which had been secured in the initial battle in order to rush across open terrain to silence a NVA position. Successfully silencing the position, he returned to the trench to consolidate his squad which was by now under intense enemy fire. Again, he leaped from the trench and assaulted another NVA position from which heavy automatic fire was spewing. Again, he silenced the position. As LCPL Smith continued his assault to silence a NVA spider hole, he was mortally wounded.[2551]

His Squad Leader, Steven Wiese, remembers "Smitty" as "..just such an outstanding person. We lived in the same bunker and we were pretty good friends. He was very short and had a dry humor. He never showed any fear at all. It wasn't like crazy; it was just when something happened, he was rock solid. He was there. He knew. If you went over and said, 'Hey, Smitty, how's it going?' he'd have this little smile. I don't ever remember him complaining once. If I had some clean-up detail or sandbags, he'd never bitch. He'd never say, 'O man, it's not my turn; I did it.' Most of the other guys complained.[2552]

CPL Donald A. Warren, the Platoon Right Guide for B-1, volunteered to be one of four men to recover bodies of the KIA of 25 February and was located in the middle of the platoon.[2553] After the initial burst of NVA fire, Cpl Warren led his fire team to the front of the platoon to direct their fire against the NVA positions. He maneuvered them out of the unprotected area, regrouped, and then led the squad in an assault against the NVA position. After knocking out 2 NVA positions, CPL Warren again moved the squad in the assault while under heavy automatic and semi-automatic fire. While directing accurate M-16 fire at the enemy, CPL Warren was mortally wounded by an enemy sniper round.[2554] Cpl Warren had the "body bags" for the KIA. CPL Wood N. Lathrop remembers it as the "suicide squad," and recalls seeing Warren fall after being hit. "I just left him. I was the squad leader and was leading a charge into the NVA trench. I really had no choice. But all these years that has bothered me that here was my best friend. I seen him get hit. I seen him fall. And I don't go to him."[2555]

PFC James Allen Williams, 1st Squad of B-1, although wounded, continued to expose himself to enemy fire to keep the NVA from encircling the squad.[2556]

Five Marines from the Weapons Platoon (60mm mortars) of H&S Company, 1/26, reported to Capt Pipes the night before the assault. They moved immediately behind the Company command group which was about 25 meters behind the two assault platoons, B-1 and B-3, but had left their base plates at the point of contact and were without sites.[2557] As the Marines of B-3 became pinned down by NVA mortars as they advanced on the enemy, Cpl Kenneth A. Korkow left his position of safety and, hand-holding the mortar (there being no base plate), fired mortars at an angle of fire which put himself within the bursting radius of the round, but successfully eliminated the NVA mortar position allowing B-3 to proceed. Due to the accuracy of Cpl Korkow's fire, 4 NVA bunkers and 1 NVA mortar were destroyed. Depleted of 60mm mortar rounds, the mortarmen began moving casualties. While assisting a wounded Marine to move to the field medical position, Cpl Korkow was critically wounded.[2558]

When the Marines of his squad were pinned down, PFC Albert Moguel, the grenadier of the point squad, B-3, assaulted 2 NVA bunkers that pinned down B-3. The range was so short that PFC Moguel was unable to use his M-79 and proceeded to kill 4 NVA with his .45 caliber pistol.[2559] PFC Julio Manuel Miranda, another grenadier for B-3, rose up from his position and made a one-man assault on a NVA position with his M-79, giving cover for the rest of the squad to advance. He leaped

---

[2548] Conversation with Steven Wiese, 17 March 2005.
[2549] Conversation with Thomas Quigley, 11 May 1986.
[2550] McNeely, Milton, "More Web Briefs, March 30, 1968," Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.: Red Clay, Issue #61 (Spring 2005), p. 9.
[2551] Statements of LCPL Michael H. McCauley and CPL Rickey M. Brunk, in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file, LCPL Author "C" Smith.
[2552] Conversation with Steven Wiese, 19 January 2006.
[2553] Statement of SSGT Leo E. Robert in Silver Star Medal file (posthumous) on Cpl Donald A. Warren.
[2554] Statement of 1/Lt Peter W. Weiss in Silver Star Medal file (posthumous) on Cpl Donald A. Warren.
[2555] Conversation with Wood Lathrop, 12 March 1993. Note: Cpl Lathrop was one of those who received wounds sufficiently serious to be medevaced (gunshot to his right side). [1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log, 30 March 1968, Ser #36.
[2556] Statements of LCPL William F. Shafer and PFC Leslie E. Olson in Bronze Medal file of PFC James Allen Williams.
[2557] Comments of Capt K. W. Pipes, Tape #2810, cited.
[2558] Statements of LCPL Richard L. Ward and PFC Vincent R. Tuzar in Navy Cross file, CPL Kenneth A. Korkow; Comments of Capt K. W. Pipes, Tape #2810, cited.
[2559] Statements of LCPL Julio M. Miranda and Sgt William M. Simpkins, in Silver Star Medal file of PFC Albert Moguel.

from the trench on several other occasions to repeat the action and, during the evacuation of the dead and wounded, provided cover.[2560] PFC Lonnie Wayne Morrison, a rifleman in the point squad of B-3, rushed across the fire-swept terrain, firing into NVA bunker apertures and throwing numerous grenades to knock out several enemy positions enabling the rest of B-3 to advance.[2561] PFC Donald Ray Rash, a Marine with the point squad of B-3, overcame 3 NVA positions with grenades and small arms fire. When the Company was ordered to break contact, PFC Rash remained behind to provide effective suppressive fire for the evacuation of KIA and WIA, and was killed when he was struck with shrapnel from one of the NVA mortars.[2562]

PFC Rash has just arrived at Khe Sanh on 20 January 1968, hours before the base was struck. "That night, he spent the night in the supply tent along with several other replacements who had arrived that day. They got in late enough that they had not even received weapons, helmets, or flak jackets. Not a good situation when the incoming poured in on the morning of the 21st.[2563]

LCPL Ferdinandez Ludiveekus Van Eeten, from the Netherlands, had a body bag for the MIA of 25 February, and was able to retrieve the only corpse from the 25 Feb 1968 action. "He was all black skin because he'd been there so long. I started pulling on the guy's flak jacket to try and put him in the 'death bag' and his arms fell back and I fell back, and these thousands of flies came up and attacked me. I came flying out of the trenchline screaming, and I looked down and the whole circle of his back was nothing but maggots, just thousands of maggots about 3 inches long and as thick as my finger—I'll never forget it.. I finally rolled him over and his helmet came off... I wound-up putting him in the body bag, and nobody helped me. Nobody wanted to have anything to do with it. I dragged him to where they were loading bodies... I remember when we got back to the base, I needed to take a shower. I felt so dirty! And there was no place to take a shower."[2564]

Capt Pipes ordered Golab, his radio operator, and 2 other Marines to stand guard over the bodies of the dead Marines, "that we were not to leave our fallen brothers for any reason, but to make our stand there."[2565] The NVA were advancing in their trenches in a counter-attack, and Capt Pipes shot the lead soldier in the face, pushing him back into another soldier, breaking up the attack. He repeatedly ignored advice to seek cover as he fired his pistol at advancing enemy soldiers. When 3 OTTERs[2566] arrived to carry out the dead, Capt Pipes was yelling at the enemy, "You're not going to get our dead again, you bastards!"[2567] At 0945, the Bravo Co CP moved to Objective #1 and assisted in the evacuation of dead and wounded while B-1 and B-3 withdrew assisted by two squads from B-2. B-2 moved forward and made a thorough search of Objective ALFA, evacuating 3 KIA and 2 MIA.[2568] During the withdrawal, Golab radioed Lt Smith to fire a WP round to mark the NVA for an air strike. As Smith replied, "Where do you want it?" a WP round exploded in the midst of the Marines, followed by 2 more WP rounds! Golab asked if Smith had fired the WP. "Negative!" Apparently the NVA, monitoring the net, had fired it. "Had our jets fired on that WP, the Marines would have been annihilated."[2569] Golab hurriedly radioed the jets to ignore the WP marking rounds.[2570] All units were in the vicinity of Objective #1 by 1030, by 1100 the lead elements of Co B were in KSCB, and by 1130, the withdrawal was complete.[2571] Capt Pipes stood at the entrance of the wire until all of the Marines from Co "B" were inside the perimeter wire.[2572]

1/Lt Marion Henry Norman had never received the Bronze Star Medal that was awarded for his actions the day the siege erupted on KSCB, Sunday, 21 January 1968. From the Citation: "Ignoring the heavy volume of hostile fire, he unhesitatingly left the relative safety of his bunker and attempted to observe the enemy firing sites. Although knocked to the ground on several occasions by the concussions from enemy rounds exploding nearby, he repeatedly made skillful crater analyses and relayed the information to the firing batteries. Electing to remain in his exposed position, and disregarding the exploding main ammunition supply point less than fifty meters away, he courageously directed and adjusted counter fire against the enemy firing sites until all the hostile weapons positions that he could locate were silenced."[2573]

[2560] Statement of LCPL Theodore S. Harris in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Julio Manuel Miranda.
[2561] Citation and Statements of PFC Darwin E. Howard and SGT William M. Simpkins in Silver Star Medal file on PFC Lonnie Wayne Morrison.
[2562] Statements of CPL William D. Holliman and 1/Lt John W. Dillon in Navy Cross (posthumous) file of PFC Donald Ray Rash.
[2563] McNeely, Milton, "More Web Briefs, March 30, 1968," Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.: Red Clay, Issue #61 (Spring 2005), p. 9.
[2564] Conversations with "Joe" Van Eeten, 8 April 1994 and 25 March 1995.
[2565] Statement of PFC Theodore H. Golab, 1 August 2001, Pipes, MOH package, op. cit.
[2566] Pipes, "Men to Match Their Mountains," op. cit., p. 23.
[2567] Statement of PFC Theodore H. Golab, 1 August 2001, Pipes, MOH package, op. cit.
[2568] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log 30 March 1968, Ser #20.
[2569] Conversation with Theodore Golab, 15 August 1985.
[2570] Conversation with Theodore Golab, 22 April 1986.
[2571] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log 30 March 1968, Ser #20.
[2572] Statement of PFC Theodore H. Golab, 1 August 2001, Pipes, MOH package, op. cit.
[2573] Citation, and Statements of 1/Lt Denis H. McDonald and Capt Kenneth W. Pipes, in Bronze Star Medal file of 1/Lt Marion Henry Norman.

1/Lt Norman, the second son of Lloyd Eugene and Dorothy Norman, was born 27 Sep 1940 in Livingston, Texas. At Milby High School, he played quarterback on the football team. In 1964 he graduated from North Texas State University and in 1965 married Charlotte Sanders. He joined the Marine Corps in 1966, and after graduating from TBS [The Basic School], he graduated from the U.S. Army Artillery & Missile School, Fort Sill, OK, and arrived in Vietnam July, 1967.[2574]

Chuck Patterson, who shared a locker with Hank Norman at TBS, recalls him as "..the warm one. When the group of us would get together at someone's apartment, Hank could always handle the small problems, like making a barbecue sauce from Karo and catsup or snow ice cream with a little vanilla extract. He always had that dry Texas smile that radiated a quiet confidence."[2575]

Marion Henry Norman Khe Sanh—1968[2576]
By Chuck Patterson

Ca Lu, March 1968

They took your life
As if it belonged to them.
If only they had told me
They needed a life,
I would have given them mine.

I wonder
What they did with your life?
Perhaps,
If they don't need it now,
They'd give it back.

The World, 1983

I saw you dead
But never buried.
In my heart you've lived,
Laughing, smiling Hank.
I would keep you there forever,
In a memorial more perfect
Than hands could build.

Finding an end to my war
I can mourn you now,
And, in sadness, leave
This loving, painful
Magic caretaking.
So I may live
At peace.

To celebrate your death,
To elevate your life,
And its conclusion,
Which was neither sweet
Nor fitting.
Duty's harshest price
For which the consideration
Should have been honor.

Capt Pipes received a Silver Star Medal for his actions this date,[2577] but around 2001, Charles E. Peterson gathered numerous statements of participants, official records, prepared diagrams of the battlefield actions, provided analysis, and forwarded to the Commandant of the Marine Corps a recommendation that the Silver Star Medal be upgraded to the Medal of Honor.

Co B/1/26 was recommended for the Meritorious Unit Commendation.[2578]

Author "C" Smith [2579]
By Mrs. Jo Ann Harrison

"Webster's definition of sharecropper is 'a tenant farmer who works the land for a share of the crop.' I don't think that my brother felt that he ever got his share of anything. Certainly not food, clothes, toys or expressions of love.

"The Smith family with its seven children did not have a problem finding run down shacks in which to live. Fayette County, AL, had an abundance of cotton and cornfields owned by people with the names of Hubbert and Hollingsworth. It didn't matter that William Smith liked drinking more than he liked work. He had seven healthy, strong, hard-working children that were kept home from school to work in the fields. The families with the most children (aka field hands) were sought after by the landowners—the reason is obvious.

"The oldest child of Ruby and William B. Smith was born in 1947 at home, his grandmother serving as midwife. 'C', that is what [2574] David Rogers, "Hank's Family: An 'In Touch' Rendezvous," n.d.

[2575] Chuck Patterson, "Hank Norman," The Khe Sanh Veteran 2:2 (Spring, 1996) 22.
[2576] Patterson notes that he was at Ca Lu when he was informed of Norman's death, and it was then he wrote the first part of the poem. When he returned to the States, he couldn't talk about Vietnam until 1983, when it all came "rushing back" and after awhile, he completed the poem. [Patterson, op. cit.]
[2577] Silver Star Medal Citation and file, Capt Kenneth W. Pipes.
[2578] By CO, 1/26, printed in The Khe Sanh Veteran 1:5 (Spring, 1994) 4.
[2579] Letter of Mrs. Jo Ann Harrison, 1 February 2004.

his brothers and sisters called him. The 'C' has no middle name attached, just 'C.' The misspelling of his first name Author was a result of lack of education I'm sure. Education wasn't high on our Dad's list. Our father was a World War II veteran. We were told that our brother, Author, was named for his best friend that died during WW II. There is a remote possibility that his name was spelled that way, but I doubt it.

"A couple of years later I came along. It seemed that my mother was pregnant my entire childhood. I was 13 years old when the seventh child, David, was born. David's life was short. He was 18 months old when he contracted encephalitis. Maybe he died due to the disease, maybe due to the fact that we had no money and ho hospital insurance. He was the first brother I lost; 'C' was the second.

"Author was a thin kid with unruly hair and a 'tough guy attitude.' Being the older brother, he was 'the boss of us,' as he reminded us on a daily basis. His best physical asset had to be his smile. When I think of him he is always smiling. Every morning when my Dad dropped us off at the field, he put 'C' in charge. Too much responsibility for one so young.

"One of his favorite games growing up was to play soldier. Constantly hiding in the wagon of cotton or rows of corn to wait for me to appear so that he could not only scare me to death but also shoot me with a stick that looked somewhat like a gun. He was the first to drop out of school so that he could work around the farm full time. He had grown tired of what comes with poverty. The kids at school laughing at him because he had little or no lunch, the holes in his shoes and his hand-me-down clothes were just a few of the reasons for giving up.

"I knew that somehow we had to get an education if we were to save ourselves. It took much pleading with the teachers to bend the rules and allow us to do make-up work. Many nights were spent doing homework by moonlight in my room shared by four other brothers and sisters. One of my Dad's rules was that when he went to bed, everyone went to bed.

"It was a hard life: children doing work that they were not physically capable of doing. In retrospect, I do not know how any of us made it to become the people that we are today. It is amazing that we all became fairly well educated, with careers ranging from business owners to healthcare providers. My brother would have made it too, but he must have felt that he had to become the 'man of the family' since our Dad didn't take that role very seriously.

"It is so hard to remember when you have spent your lifetime trying to forget. My brother and I, being the oldest, felt that life was leaving us behind. There were no birthday parties, school functions, running water, inside bathrooms, toys on Christmas morning, heat in the winter, doctors when you were sick, soft drinks and candy and not many words of affection. There were however an endless list of chores and taking care of siblings.

"Our father was in and out of the Veterans hospital all our lives. Most of the time it was after being on a drinking binge for several days. Mom was the most devoted wife I have ever known. Whether it was love or fear, I'm not sure. She was with him until the day he died.... I now know that our father was living with demons, some from the war and some from his life after, that made it difficult to be a good father and husband. I will try to understand and maybe someday forgive.

"I remember the day 'C' came home after joining the Marines. He was finally going somewhere. Having never been past the Alabama state line, he was very excited to be going to Parris Island, SC. That excitement soon turned into what he called 'hell.' By the time he arrived to Parris Island we had a telephone, however we could not accept many of his collect phone calls. We always looked forward to his version of what his sergeant dished out on a daily basis, and how he could take it but many of his fellow Marines could not, always confident that they would be whipped into shape before leaving there....

"Eventually he was home—so handsome in his uniform. I remember the night before he departed to Vietnam as if it were yesterday. Coming home late from a date, everyone was asleep. He came to wake me and ask if I would mind warming dinner for him. He wanted one more home-cooked meal. I remember thinking how unusual of him to do that. I was not accustomed to him asking anyone to do anything for him, but was happy to be the one he asked. When I got to the kitchen he was sitting at the table, head down, crying. He looked at me and said, 'Sis, I won't be coming home.' I immediately began to cry with him and told him that I was sure that everyone going to Vietnam must feel the same way. 'You are the toughest guy I know and I know you will come home,' I said. We talked into the night, about our childhood and things we wanted to do in the future. The next morning he was gone.

"We wrote letters and when I could I mailed packages to him. We watched the news every day. The worst fighting and the most deaths seemed to be Khe Sanh. That is where he was. Every night I would sit glued to the evening news. They would sometimes show pictures of Marines and I would pray that one of them would be him. He was nearing the end of his tour and I was feeling slightly more comfortable since he was still alive and did not have much longer to stay.

"Of course you know the rest. I still cannot talk about him without crying. Sometimes his presence is so strong that I have conversations with him. The anger that I felt toward our country is still there. The manner in which our veterans were treated upon their return is something I can never forgive. I watch people's faces when the subject of the Vietnam War is discussed. It is almost as if I am not to mention that my brother was killed in 'that war' and that I should not be proud. They would like for it to go away. I watch as people are made heroes for much less than the men that fought in Vietnam.

"I hope and pray that one day I will be able to deal with my feelings—maybe writing this will help."

[D/1/9]

During the period 1801 – 2400, KSCB and outposts received approximately 15 rounds of mortar fire resulting in 6 KIA.[2580]

The battle between D/1/9 and the NVA began at 1325 when 2 squads deployed from Co "D" to sweep the area of freshly-dug enemy trenches immediately in front of their company CP; the squads made contact with an estimated 20 NVA. The NVA fired 2 RPG rounds and 4 82mm mortars at the 1/9 perimeter and 2 rounds of artillery along with sniper fire were also received. After firing back with organic weapons, the 2 squads withdrew to the perimeter to permit air-strikes to neutralize the position. Following the air strikes, 2 squads from Co "D" investigated the area and found 5 NVA KIA. Friendly casualties from the contact: 3 minor WIA. At 1800, Co "D" observed one NVA by a bunker, called in 2 rounds of 106mm RR and destroyed the bunker.[2581]

The CO of Co "D", Captain Francis Leo Shafer, Jr., was held in the highest esteem by those who knew him. The 1/9 Battalion Commander, LtCol John F. Mitchell who described Shafer as "..my best Company Commander.. Just a super young man. That guy was so loyal. He impressed me more than anybody else. Unfortunately I didn't get him out in time. I had transfer orders on him for two weeks, but they were never executed. You don't want to get too close, but I was very close to him. He had the toughest position out in my defensive position."[2582] A Corpsman in 2nd Platoon of Co "D", HM3 William G. Gessner, sent a request to his father in the States to have a special plaque made for the Captain.[2583] In a letter of 8 March, Gessner wrote: "The Skipper leaves towards the end of this month. We will forward it [the plaque] to him if he leaves too soon but we'd rather give it to him, you understand. He's saved our ass a few times and we appreciate it."[2584]

The Co "D" CP bunker was a CONEX box that was set down in a cut that had been made by a bulldozer, and everyone felt quite secure in it.[2585] Capt Shafer was sitting in his bunker "all excited. He had this NVA officer's belt on and he was bragging about all the documents and all the NVA his men had killed and all this information they had found on these NVA soldiers."[2586]

Capt Charles B. Hartzell, S-3 of 1/9, later wrote of Capt Schaffer: "Capt Schaffer, I think, had the attitude he was showing the troops how brave he was by strutting around drawing fire then ignoring it as if he couldn't be hit. He had been missed so many times, maybe he thought he couldn't be hit, that there was something different about him. When I tgried to get him to knock off his bullshit, pointing out they were missing him but his troops were getting hit and taken out in much larger numbers than the other companies, he pointed out to me that his unit was on the forward face of the hill under direct enemy observation. He was saying, 'When it was God's will for a man to go, nothing could change that. Hartzell, "no guts, no glory!"' Schaffer would continue his macho walk-about bullshit getting those around him killed and wounded until he was killed by incoming along with his radio man, who always followed him. Major Ringley was with Capt Schaffer on [this,] a clear day around noon on the forward face of the hill in the D Company sector when he was taken out. To me, totally unnecessary. If that walk-about was needed it could have been done at night or under the fog cover we always had until 10 a.m. Others were being hit, but he didn't [2580] 3rd MarDiv COC 010015Z/Apr68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #604, Para. 4.A.

[2581] 1/9 ComdC Mar68, Encl (1).
[2582] Conversation with LtCol John F. Mitchell, 8 January 1998.
[2583] William G. Gessner, letter to "Dear Dad," 12 February 1968.
[2584] William G. Gessner, letter to "Dear Dad," 8 March 1968.
[2585] Taped comments from Bert Mullins, 8 January 1984.
[2586] Taped comments of Lance Larson, no date, Eisenhower Center, University of New Orleans, LA stop until he was dead. After Schaffer was killede, my friend, Capt. Cargile, took over D Company, and the unit casualties almost stopped overnight. Everyone went underground during the day and God's will went somewhere else to kill Marines."[2587]

Colonel Mitchell's "runner," CPL Luzon Beasley, was also liked by all who encountered him within the battalion. He had already "paid his dues" in the Grunts. "You couldn't ask for a better friend than he was."[2588] PFC Lance C. Larson recalls: "Everyone knew Corporal Beasley. He was a black guy who was real good-looking, always by the CP bunker, and every time you saw him, he was eating. He was the nicest guy and we used to kid him all the time. We'd come by and say, 'Gee you really got a rough job, eating C-rations,' and he'd say, 'No, I really work hard.' We always used to raze the heck out of him. He had been a Grunt and everything, and just got picked for that job."[2589] Beasley had requested transfer to the Chaplain's Office of 3rd Marine Division, and was to depart for that assignment. Beasley, who had been in Co "D," came to LtCol Mitchell: " 'Do you mind if I see my former Company Commander [Shafer]?' I said, 'OK, but don't get involved, I want to get you to your new assignment.' So he went up there."[2590]

It was approximately 1900 when the mortars came. Two Marines were hit by the fragments, and Captain Shafer and CPL Beasley ran to the side of one, managing to get him to safety, and while trying to assist another Marine, another round exploded near them resulting in both Capt Shafer's and CPL Beasley's death.[2591]

For LCPL Peter A. Mestas the sequence of events is permanently etched into his memory. "That particular day, basically what happened, there was a MULE that was pulled into the CP bunker [area]. That day was the first day that we received any kind of beer ration. And our radioman, Tommy, received 2 beers and everyone else got one. Well, Tommy and I were very good friends. I drank a beer and he drank a beer, and we split a beer. Then our section leader came to us and said to go to the CP bunker and pick up some ammo. I was in 60 mortars, so we went over across the hill (because we didn't have a trench to the CP bunker) and we picked up the ammo. We came back, put the ammo down, and just kinda enjoyed the beer. About a half-hour later, he came back to us and said we had 4 boxes of the wrong ammo. So Tommy picked up a box and started going across the hill, and I took a box, tossed it over the trench, and I was bending over to pick up a box, and the first rounds that came in were rockets. And one went by and went BOOM! At that point I have the ammo box almost put up on my shoulder and it knocked me back into the trench and the ammo landed on my chest. Well, I got the box off me, and then another rocket came in and it was followed by another, and it just hit me that Tommy's out there, so I basically got up, looked out there, and he was laying there. So I ran out and tried to pick him up, but he was dead weight. I couldn't pick him up. I couldn't see where he was hit. Another rocket came in and knocked me down. Then I started dragging him and a black guy came out and helped and we drug him to the trench.. We called for stretcher bearers. Everybody showed up. There were 6 of us carrying the stretcher, and [Cpl Raymond Louis] Plunkett was right next to me. We're in the rear of the stretcher, and we were going across the hill, and we were running. Plunkett said, 'Slow down.' Then, all of a sudden, BANG. I didn't know that I was wounded. I didn't hear the blast. It was just like I was thrown. I started to get up and noticed that my left leg was flipped completely around. Then I felt something coming off my forehead. I went to wipe it off, and I could see through my left hand and my left arm. So I lost my little finger and a big chunk of my left arm. I couldn't move my legs. I was right at the edge of the CP bunker which was down in a gully that was on top of the hill.

"Captain Shafer came out of his bunker. I saw him and said, 'Sir, I'm hit!' He came up the gully and picked me up underneath my arms and said, 'You're going to be all right.' He dragged me down off the hill, down into the gully. He walked away. He got maybe 10 feet away from me, and I heard another one come in. They sound like WHOOSH-WHEW-SHH. I covered up and that thing went off, almost like a dead-on hit. Nobody else was around me and I was trying to move my right arm. I was trying to get to him, but I blacked out because I was bleeding so bad. I saw Lieutenant Koman running across the ridge of the gully, and then I blacked out again. I didn't know that Lieutenant Koman was killed. I didn't know that half those guys were killed."[2592]

LtCol Mitchell was standing next to his relief, LtCol Cahill, when he learned of Capt. Shafer's death and broke down.[2593]

Luzon Beasley, born 4 Sep 1946, had entered the USMC on 27 July 1966 after attending Higgins High School in Clarksdale, Mississippi.[2594] He played basketball and played in the band. He was a paperboy that delivered papers among all the more wealthy, white areas of the city. While tossing the papers, he'd hum or sing. When his body came back and at his funeral, there were

---

[2587] Charles B. Hartzell, Memoir, pp. 56-57.
[2588] Taped comments from Bert Mullins, 8 January 1984.
[2589] Ibid.
[2590] Conversation with Col John F. Mitchell, 23 November 2004.
[2591] Statement of LCPL Russell W. Mayes in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) of CPL Luzon Beasley.
[2592] Conversation with Pete Mestas, 22 May 1996.
[2593] Conversation with Col John Mitchell, 23 November 2004.
[2594] Obit., and Memorial Service bulletin, furnished by his brother, James.

so many people present, the church rigged outdoor speakers to accommodate the crowd. "Everybody showed up. He brought everybody together—black, white. People we didn't even know in Clarksdale showed up. It brought the whole community together. His girl friend, who had moved to California, came back. There were 5 limousines at the funeral. It was almost like for the President. Then they blew the horn [trumpet "Taps"] and shot the guns and gave my mom the flag—something you never forget."[2595]

Paul's Poem[2596]
By Keith Cochran (D/1/9)

A mother's torture she did grieve.
A bit of pain, at last, he breathed.

A little bundle of squirming joy.
So proud they were, a baby boy.

A doctor, a lawyer, an Indian chief,
Of future plans, his folks did speak.

From knee high to fully grown.
By his smile, he was known.

He grew up happy with love abound.
A war did come his time around.

To a foreign country he was sent.
To fight for freedom, we thought it meant.

Within sandbagged bunkers we did talk,
It was life and love that we stalk.

Our own warning we did not heed,
"Don't get too close, painful loss you'll breed."

The captain and I did see,
The mortar round, death to be.

A scream of terror on it's descent,
And then the blast was hell sent.

Hazily I saw the heave,
Was it the last Paul would breathe?

Still not sure he bit the dust,
Have to know: become a must.

Back up the hill with a mind a runnin',
It can't be true, gray thoughts a comin'.

Oh, please! a dream make it,
It's Paul's life, don' take it.

Shapeless form beneath a blanket,
I lift a corner, reality, scream it.

A mother, a family, and I now grieve,
A bit of pain, the last Paul breathed.

LCPL Howlett was directing traffic through one of the mine fields near the Rock Quarry area [where 1/9 was located]. Two rounds came in and went over their heads. The next round landed behind Howlett who had only dropped to one knee. He took shrapnel in the back and in his head, and died before getting back to the base.[2597]

[Operation SCOTLAND terminated at 310800 March 1968 at which time 26th Marines became OPCON to CG, 1st Air Cav and commenced Operation PEGASUS.[2598] By the end of March, the formerly enchanted Garden of Eden with all its beauty, perhaps containing species of flora and fauna not yet known, full of wild animals from ocelots to large tigers, koupreys, durion fruit trees, rock apes, wild boar, a thousand shades of green, had been transformed into a moonscape, a wasteland product of human technology, a valley of dry bones. Mountains had been moved, tens of thousands of human lives perished, the lives of survivors, their families and the families of the dead were forever altered. One pilot, flying into Khe Sanh on 26 March 1968 noted: "It was quite evident that the B-52 Arc Light raids had significantly affected the countryside around the Khe Sanh area. It appeared to me that there's a major bomb crater every 200, 300 feet surrounding all the hillsides and surrounding terrain."[2599]

Support by artillery and air reached new records during the siege battle at Khe Sanh. The battle saw the first employment of strategic B-52 bombers on a sustained basis for tactical support. In 70 days of operations, 96,000 tons of bombs were dropped, nearly twice as much as was delivered by the Army Air Corps in the Pacific during 1942 and 1943.[2600] The USAF records this in terms of sorties while the USMC records this in terms of strikes and tons of ordnance. USAF documents note 9,684 tactical air sorties and 2,567 SAC [B52] strikes by the USAF, 5,167 tactical air sorties by the USN and 6,385 tactical air

[2595] Conversation with James Beasley, 13 December 2004.
[2596] Printed in Khe Sanh Veterans Newsletter, Issue #11 (April, 1990) 6. Cochran notes that the "Paul" in the poem is PFC Paul R. Gula, the Captain is Capt. Francis Leo Shafer.
[2597] Letter from John J. Pessoni postmarked 14 December 2001. Pessoni was a member of the engineer company on KSCB during the siege battle.
[2598] 3rd MarDiv COC 010640Z/Apr68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP #606, Para 4.
[2599] Comments of Maj Kenneth H. Wilcox, USMC Oral History Tape #2661. Wilcox was Asst S-3, MAG-16, pilot of a CH-53.
[2600] LtGen John J. Tolson, Airmobility, 1961-1971, Washington, D.C.: Department of the Army, 1973, p. 167.

sorties by the USMC, for a total of 23,803 sorties.[2601] USMC documents record 1,169 close air support missions delivering 36,161 tons, 4,989 TPQ-10 strikes delivering 32,500 tons, and 430 B-52 strikes delivering 79,575 tons.[2602] CG, FMFPAC, reported 7,078 sorties flown 20 Jan – 31 March 1968 with over 6,000 sorties (approximately 85%) delivered against targets located within a 9-mile radius of the KSCB perimeter.[2603]

With all the accumulated garbage on KSCB—accumulated because the high saturation of enemy incoming made usual trash removal an almost sure way to kill Americans, the rat population multiplied in geometric proportions. Then, suddenly, the rats disappeared—not due to death from eating C-rations, but, it was assumed, to all the enemy bodies and body parts strewn so close to the base which made for better food.

NVA losses on the Khe Sanh battlefield reflect the tenacity with which they pursued their objectives. It was almost as if Khe Sanh had become a large piece of flypaper, a gigantic spider web, from which they could not extricate themselves. They grabbed the tail of a tiger, the end of a high voltage electric wire, could not release it and were being killed by it. Their loss was obviously heavy. Bru from villages south and west of Khe Sanh reported at least 2,000 and possibly 10,000 were killed by bombing. Casualties due to secondary explosions and fired from destruction and damage to guns, bunkers, supply dumps, headquarters, and structures, although not capable of being accurately counted, must have been high. Assuming 2 NVA soldiers per secondary explosion, with over 6,000 secondary explosions and fires, 12,000 may be estimated. Some of these explosions continued several hours. Approximately 900 bunkers were destroyed, some of which must have been occupied. 300 gun positions were destroyed. Forward Air Controllers flying O1 and O2 aircraft counted 1,400 bodies, and approximately 1,000 bodies were killed on the wires of KSCB from the three attempted assaults on the combat base in March, 1968.[2604]

During Operation PEGASUS/LAM SOM 207A, 13,890 tons of enemy supplies were found of which 13,626 tons were food. The NVA left over 1800 dead bodies on the hills around Khe Sanh, a dreadful thing to do in their culture.[2605]

Col Donald A. Gruenther, Director of MACEVAL, COMUSMACV, analyzed the probable number of NVA KIA using a formula by which the NVA suffered: an estimated 15,760 casualties (3550 KIA + 12,210 wounded and evacuated) from delivered fires plus 8880 casualties (2000 KIA + 6880) from ground action, for a total of 24,640.[2606]

Official (classified "Mat"="Secret") documentation of casualties at Khe Sanh during the siege battle[2607] indicate the: following numbers participating in combat: from 325th Division (15 Jan): 28,440; 304th Division (20 Mar): 25,580; Front Rear Services (30 Jun): 25,124. 325 Division suffered 398 KIA and 689 WIA (20 Jan – 3 Jul 68), 304th Division suffered 1,342 KIA and 2,527 WIA (20 Jan – 31 May 68), 45th Regiment (artillery) suffered 21 KIA and 53 WIA (20 Jan – 29 Mar 68), 675th Regiment suffered 54 KIA and 57 WIA (20 Jan – 10 Jun 68), 241st Regt suffered 22 KIA and 60 WIA (20 Jan – 30 Apr 68), 7th Regt suffered 42 KIA and 94 WIA (20 Jan – 27 Mar 68), and Front Rear Services suffered 73 KIA and 115 WIA (20 Jan – 15 Jun 68), for a total of 2,270 KIA and 4,219 WIA.[2608]

[2601] Trest, Warren A., Khe Sanh (Operation Niagara) 22 January – 31 March 1968, PACAF: Directorate, Tactical Evaluation, CHECO Division, pp. 112-114.

[2602] HQMC (Code ARA) letter, 22 Jan 1969, in Khe Sanh Monograph File, HQMC Historical Branch, Washington, D.C.

[2603] CG, FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, March, 1968, p. 13.

[2604] MACV, "Khe Sanh Analysis," 8 July 1968, p. 13; Gen. Wm. C. Westmoreland, speech of 13 June 1968, to 3rd Air Division, in History, 3rd Air Division, Jan – Jul 1968, Vol. I, Exhibit #180; MACV, Command History, Vol. 1, pp. 423-424.

[2605] MACV, "Khe Sanh Analysis," 8 July 1968, pp. 14-15.

[2606] MACEVAL: "An Analysis of the Khe Sanh Battle," 5 April 1968, in ACofS, MACV, letter to Chairman, JCS, 10 April 1968, in OJCS File 091, Vietnam, April, 1968, p. 3. An egregious under-counting of US KIA renders the value of "K" erroneous. According to the formula, KIA = K times the number of troops divided by the square kilometers of the battlefield times the tons of ordnance. "K" is a constant of proportionality based on the friendly experience at Khe Sanh for the period 27 January through 31 March with troop strength of 6085, tons received: 99.25, friendly KIA: 167, and area in sq. km.: 4.8. If the US number of 563 KIA is factored in instead of 167, the result is a "K" factor of 0.0044746, and, using the formula, 11,932 NVA KIA.

[2607] Cong Tac Hau Can: Chien Dich Duong 9 Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [Rear Service Operations: 1968 Spring-Summer Khe Sanh Route 9 Campaign], "For Distribution within the Army—Luu Hanh Trong Quan Doi, classified MAT, [Secret], Hanoi: Tong Cuc Hau Can [General Directorate for Rear Services], June, 1988, Medical Section, pp. 264ff.

[2608] Ibid., Appendix 2, p. 327. Specific battles: 154 KIA/486WIA on 20 Jan, Battle of Huong Hoa by 3rd Regt, 304th Div; 15 KIA/95WIA on 20 Jan, Battle for Hill 832 [Hill 861, XD803443] by 6th Bn, 2nd Regt, 325th Div; 20 KIA/68WIA on 20 Jan, Battle of Hill 845 [Hill 881, XD777438] by 4th Bn, 2nd Regt, 325th Div, 54 KIA/80WIA on 7 Feb 68 for Battle of South Lang Vei by 3rd Bn, 1st Regt, 325th Div; 36 KIA/140 WIA on 7 Feb 68 in Battle of North Lang Vei by 2nd Regt, 304th Div; an unknown number of KIA and 982WIA from the encirclement of KSCB by 1st Regt., 304th Division, etc. [Ibid., p. 330]. By units: 325th Division suffered 398 KIA and 698 WIA, 304th Division suffered 1,342 KIA and 2,527 WIA. [Ibid., Appendix 3, p. 331].

While 26th Marines Regiment records indicate 205 American KIA for the siege battle,[2609] the Command Chronologies of 1/26 and 2/26 and the After Action Reports for Operation SCOTLAND of 3/26, 1/9, and 1/13 report a total of 274 KIA. In addition, there were 219 KIA sustained in the Lang Vei battle (10 Americans), and the following KIA from other units: 13 from Co "B", 3rd Recon Bn; 6 from Hq Co, 26th Marine Regiment; 4 from "A" Co, 3rd Shore Party Bn; 4 from "A" Co., 3rd Engineer Bn; 2 from FLC (POL); 2 from HMH-463; 3 from VMGR-152; 8 from HMM-262; 5 from FOB-3; 3 from MACV Det-19 and 282nd AHC; 3 from the 37th Signal Bn; and one each from: HqBn, 3rd MarDiv; H&S Co., 3rd Shore Party Bn; SptCo, 3rd Eng Bn; 5th Comm Bn; CBMU-301 Det "B"; HQ, 12th Mar; CAC "O"; Co A, 3rd AT Bn; MASS-3, I MAW; MWHG-1; MABS-36; MACTU-62; VMO-6, and the USAF 20th TASS, for a total of 70 from other units. This gives a grand total of American KIA for the siege battle at Khe Sanh of: 354 Americans and 209 Vietnamese (not including those from the 37th ARVN Ranger Bn), for a total of: 563.

During the battle, 2,541 patients were seen and treated in the medical facilities at Khe Sanh. Of these 2,031 were wounded in action and 490 were non-battle casualties. 2,249 patients were evacuated by fixed wing very early in the siege, but later entirely by helicopter. Of these, 292 were returned to duty.[2610]

Concerning the local Montagnards of the Bru tribe, when the siege battle began on 21 January 1968, the 1200 Vietnamese of Khe Sanh Village were evacuated but the I Corps Commander, General Xuan Lam, prohibited the local Bru from departing, saying there was no place to settle them in Vietnam.[2611] The Bru were told to return to their villages, which were soon burned and abandoned. Bru were forced to carry supplies for the NVA and thus strafed and bombed by our own planes who were unable to differentiate between them and the NVA. Eventually many were flown out by helicopter from FOB-3 in mid and late March. Those who were able to depart the battlefield were settled in a refugee village south of Cam Lo called Cua. Among the refugees were many who had still been in the hills and not resettled in the strategic villages close to KSCB in 1962. Official Marine Corps records indicate 10,000 Bru located within a 5 km radius of Khe Sanh ville.[2612] Another official Marine Corps document indicates 21,000 total indigenous persons located in 9 villages of Huong Hoa District,[2613] a much larger area than the 5 km radius. Since there were 1200 Vietnamese, the figure of approx. 20,000 Bru in the total area and 8800 in the immediate area reflects the census. The population of the Cua refugee center as of June, 1968, was approx. 6,000,[2614] although usually 3 or 4 were dying a day from starvation, dehydration, and wounds and illness. Therefore, somewhere between 2800 to 12,800 Bru perished during the first three months of 1968 at Khe Sanh. The figure may be higher. In early March, 1968, there were 1,643 Bru at the Ca Lu Combat Base (before their movement to the Cua center).[2615] The disparity may be from Vietnamese refugees also at the refugee center making up the rest of the 6,000.

During the siege battle at Khe Sanh, the NVA strength was from 20,000 – 25,000 in some 21 battalions plus supporting forces, about 50% of the NVA forces in I CTZ, plus another 24,000 readily available in nearby Laos. US forces at Khe Sanh numbered 5,700 Marines and about 500 Vietnamese, representing about 3% of the total friendly forces in I CTZ. Within a radius of 10 miles of Khe Sanh there were 3,800 more Marines and 500 Army and within 40 miles, 37,000 more troops. Fire support, in addition to 18 105s, 5 155s, 10 Ontos, 32 individual 106mm RR, 5 tanks, and 98 mortars included16 175mm guns and 6 155mm howitzers at Camp Carroll and Thon Son Lam, at least 45 B-52 sorties available per day and 300 or more tactical air sorties per day. It was not uncommon to drop as much as 1,800 tons of bombs in the Khe Sanh area in a single day. During the siege battle, an average of 194 short tons of supplies and 70 troops

---

[2609] 26Mar, AAR SCOTLAND, p. 15. General Tompkins gave the same figure, 205, in testimony before the U.S. Senate, Electronic Battlefield Subcommittee of the Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee of the Committee on Armed Services. [Investigation Into Electronic Battlefield Program, 91st Congress, 2nd Session, Nov 18, 19, and 24, 1970, Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1971, p. 95]. It is intriguing to note that if the 1/9 KIA total (72) is subtracted from the 274, one arrives at 202, almost the 205 figure. Was 1/9 considered ADCOM to another regiment, although OPCON?

[2610] CDR Brown, Robert A., "Dateline: Vietnam," Pennsylvania Medicine (August, 1968), pp. 45-53. CDR Brown was CO, 3rd Medical Bn. and frequently visited KSCB during the siege battle.

[2611] 26Mar 191316Z/Feb68, Disposition of Displaced Personnel, in 26Mar ComdC Feb68; Vide p. 127 of this book.

[2612] 26Mar, AAR Operation SCOTLAND, 31 May 1968, p. 10, notes 1250 Vietnamese in Khe Sanh Village and approximately 10,000 Bru "primarily resided in a dozen small villages and resettlement areas located within a 5 kilometer periphery of Khe Sanh Village."

[2613] Citation and statement of LtCol Clark in Bronze Star Medal file of Capt Henry Lebaron Preston. Preston was the 26 Marines S-5 (Civil Affairs)

[2614] Journal kept by CPL Daniel Kelley, entry for 17 April 1968, records: Total Bru: 5,668 (1,026 families, 758 families with no money, 92 deaths) and 1225 Vietnamese (353 families, 25 families not paid, 8 deaths). [Recorded in Ray William Stubbe, Khe Sanh, unpublished manuscript, 7 October 1971, p. 1345, Encl (1) to CNO letter Ser 10516P942. CPL Kelley (from CAC "O"), along with Mr. Robert Handy (civilian) and SFC James Perry (Medic from MACV Det 4, Huong Hoa) were three Americans permanently assigned to the Cua Refugee Center to manage it.

[2615] GySgt Ed Brey, "Ca Lu," III MAF: Sea Tiger 4:11 (15 March 1968) p.3.

per day were air delivered to Khe Sanh, for a total of 14,356 short tons of supplies and 5,180 troops. US forces fired a total of 117,643 rounds of artillery (including 12,441 rounds of 175mm). B-52 sorties averaged 35 per day delivering 1,022 tons per day of bombs. 533 sorties delivered ordnance within 3 km of friendly ground troops. Tactical air supported Khe Sanh with 15,266 attack sorties with a daily average of 184. US aircraft losses in support of Khe Sanh (1 November 67 – 1 April 68) were 8 fixed wing and 13 helicopters.[2616]]

31 MARCH 1968

FERRARI, SGT Arnold Jay	C/1/26
GREENIDGE, LCPL Michael R	D/1/9
PRUIETT, PFC Thomas Pierre Jr.	K/3/26
WHEELER, PFC Joseph Keith	C/1/9

1/9 received 13 60mm mortars, 9 82mm mortars, and 2 RPG rounds, resulting in one KIA and 4 WIAs.[2617]

At 1325 a 82mm mortar exploded on the southern tip of Hill 861 killing Tom Pruiett.[2618] CPL Dennis M. Mannion, the Arty FO for K/3/26, was on top of the hill position when the mortars exploded and, listening on his PRC-25 heard a request for a routine medevac, not priority, meaning someone had been killed, not wounded. "An hour or so later, just by chance, I was sent down the hill past the LZ because some sniper activity was going on. Capt Snead sent me down to see if the sniper location could be pinpointed and some artillery be brought to bear. I dropped into the trench [and] someone (a Marine unknown to me) was on my left. I said, 'I heard you guys had a KIA earlier.' He said, 'Yeah, a guy about 6 foxholes up the line—almost took a direct hit on his position—didn't have much of a chance.' Since I knew 5 or 6 guys in the [3rd] Platoon, I said, 'Who was it?' He said, 'Tom Pruiett, but I didn't know him too well. I'm glad it wasn't me. He got it in the neck, shoulder, side.' I said something to the effect on the bitch of not knowing how or when you'd meet your death and moved down the trenchline. I passed the foxhole—a lot of dried blood, some small flesh fragments, bandage wrappings, etc. The 82mm mortar doesn't make a big hole (no more than 5 inches around and 3 inches deep in solid dirt) so there was no noticeable damage to the foxhole."[2619]

PFC Thomas P. Pruiett, born 16 November 1967, was a good athlete in high school where he played basketball 3 years, but "He didn't make it into his senior year cause he failed 11th grade. I believe he was failing again and I believe that's why he enlisted in the Marines in April [6 April 1967] because I believe it hurt him to see us graduated and he didn't make it."[2620] Pruiett arrived in Vietnam 18 September 1967 and was transferred to K/3/26 the next day.[2621] In December, 1967, he wrote: "I am over here because I have to protect those who are in school and those who like to burn draft cards, and all the families. I realize this, and I am proud to fight for my country, even if it does mean death. At least, I can say I fought for my country."[2622]

A high school sweetheart wrote: "The year 1967, we were just kids in high school and we knew about the war going on in that faraway place called Vietnam. You and I [were in] high school together. We were having the time of our lives and making plans for our future.. Yes it was only yesterday and you were by my side and I was in your arms feeling the closeness of you and your warm kisses. While you were away you wrote me letters telling me what it was like over there and I waited for you to come home again. Then came the telegram saying you had been killed... It was only yesterday and now you are gone from me forever, but I'll always have those happy memories of our time we had together."[2623]

At 1830H, a mortar exploded in the northern, Blue Sector manned by C/1/26, amputating the legs of Sgt Ferrari, killing him[2624] and wounding PFC Jerry W. Slaughter (laceration of left side of head, non serious) and CPL Bradley O. Evans (non serious wounds to right arm and both hands).[2625]

1/Lt Nicholas S. Romanetz, Platoon Commander of C-2, 1/26, had made Sgt. Ferrari his Platoon Right Guide, responsible for supplies to the platoon. On his own initiative, not going through the regular channels of the Company Gunny, Gunny Grohman, he had contacted the battalion S-4 and ordered 3 cases of grenades to be delivered to the platoon lines. Prior to coming on active duty, Sgt. Ferrari had played college football and was a muscular, handsome, action-seeking Marine, sometimes talking with Lt Romanetz about wanting to earn a Bronze or

---

[2616] Memorandum for the Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff, DJSM-448-68, 17 Apr 1968, Subj: Khe Sanh Fact Sheet (prepared by CDR J.H. Cullen, USN, LtCol J. McG. Bohen, USA, Maj R.C. Lyons, USAF, Combat Analysis Group, J-3), in OJCS File 091, Vietnam, April, 1968.

[2617] 1/9 ComdC Mar68, Encl (1). Obviously there are 2 KIA; it is possible one might have died of wounds.

[2618] 3/26 AAR, Operation PEGASUS, Para 9. 2 Marines were also WIA.

[2619] Letter from Dennis Mannion to Diedrie Hulshof, 24 Mar 1987.

[2620] Letter from Diedrie Hulshof, September, 1985.

[2621] Letter from Mr. Danny Crawford, Marine Corps Historical Branch, HQMC, 5750/1222, HDH-2/AAF, 19 Jul 1985.

[2622] Article in Coloma, Michigan, paper [unidentified], "Coloma Marine Pays Full Price," 5 April 1968.

[2623] Diedrie Hulshof, "It Was Only Yesterday," clipping in Reflecting (May, 1987), p. 32, in her letter of 9 July 1987.

[2624] 1/26 ComdC Mar68, S2/S3 Log 31 March 1968, Ser #44.

[2625] Ibid., Ser #45 & 46.

Silver Star Medal. One day a mortar round exploded in the trench and severed both of Sgt. Ferrari's legs. Both of his legs were placed on the stretcher with him, and it was apparent he wasn't going to survive. About an hour later, C Med reported he had died. "The thing that was sad about it: here was a guy that didn't have to be there. He volunteered to come over from where he was a draft-exempt guy. He wanted to do something, win himself a medal, and instead got himself killed. Shortly after we took him away we found his boot lying outside of the trenchline. Still had his foot in it, and [since] he'd been gone for awhile, we just buried that boot somewhere in the dirt out in front of us, and I guess to this date, that boot with his foot is still in there."[2626]

[On 31 March 1968, President Johnson announces he would neither seek nor accept the nomination for another term as President.]

[On 01 April 1968, the B5-T8 NVA commanders began Phase III operations at Khe Sanh lasting to 7 May 1968. The mission of Phase III was to "attack enemy forces (endeavoring) to (lift the siege on) Ta Con [i.e., KSCB]. Our forces were transformed from troops encircling (the enemy) to mobile attacking forces which carried out combat operations such as raids, ambushes, attacking lines of communication, indirect artillery fire."[2627] By the beginning of April, the eastern half of the battlefield was detached and placed under the direct command of the PAVN High Command and the area of the campaign focused on the Khe Sanh area. NVA forces at Khe Sanh consisted of: the 304th Division (minus one battalion), the 8th Independent Infantry Battalion, one 122mm artillery battalion, one 122mm rocket regiment, and one anti-aircraft artillery regiment. The NVA Campaign Headquarters, aware of American engineers, reconnaissance, and road repairs from Ca Lu to Huong Hoa, determined that a large operation in the direction of Khe Sanh was being planned. It was unclear to them, however, whether this was intended to lift the siege and then withdraw or to rotate forces and attempt to hold Khe Sanh. In any event, the Americans would have to deploy forces along Highway 9, and this created "an advantageous situation for us to eliminate them outside their fortifications... There was an immediate requirement to rapidly reorganize forces so that forces could be sent to establish strong points blocking Highway 9. The 8th Battalion (minus one company) moved to the west of Ca Lu to attack the enemy aimed at wearing them down and tying them down during an advance along Highway 9. The element laying siege to the strong point at Ta Con had to maintain its control of the battlefield, to move in closer to the enemy, to attack the enemy counter-attacks and to isolate them within their base. Mobile forces had to be prepared to attack enemy landing by air close to the base complex."[2628]

Operation PEGASUS/LAM SON 207A was conducted 310800H March, 1968, to 150800H April 1968. At noon, 22 January, within hours of the attack on KSCB (Sunday, 21 January 1968), the US Army 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) [abbreviated "I ACD" in this book] had moved from the Bong Son (49P BS8090) in the II Corps Tactical Zone to the Hue-Phu Bai base (at 48QYD8020).[2629] Pegasus, the flying horse in Greek mythology, was an apt name for the operation in which the I ACD, whose symbol is a horse's head, was the symbol. On 25 January, CG, III MAF (LtGen Robert E. Cushman, Jr.) directed the I ACD to prepare a contingency plan for the relief and/or reinforcement of the Khe Sanh base,[2630] Other events, including the NVA's TET Offensive (29 January – 14 February), the Battle of Hue City (31 Jan – 25 Feb), the establishment of HQ, MACV Forward (13 February) and its conversion into Headquarters, Provisional Corps Vietnam (PCV) on 10 March diverted planning and execution of the planned relief operation,[2631] (and saved the American force from falling into the trap of the NVA plan to lure Americans to the Khe Sanh battlefield in order to annihilate them piece-meal). Major General John J. Tolson, III, Commanding General, 1st Cavalry Division, briefed General Abrams on 2 March on his concept for an operation to open Route 9 into Khe Sanh and relieve pressure on the base. The concept was approved. PCV was placed under OPCON of III

[2626] Comments of Nicholas Romanetz, no date [but it must be 1987 since in the conversation he said he's 42, and he was born 22 Jan 1945].

[2627] Cong Tadc Hau Can: Chien Dich Duong 9 Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [Rear Service Operations: 1968 Spring-Summer Khe Sanh Route 9 Campaign], classified "Mat" [Secret], restricted "for distribution within the Army," Hanoi: Tong Cuc Hau Can [General Directorate for Rear Services], 1988, Military Medical Operations Highway 9/Khe Sanh Front (B5-T8), p. 268.

[2628] Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign], Hanoi: Vien Lich Su Quan Su Vietnam, Bo Quoc Phong [Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense], 1987, pp. 35-36.

[2629] Waldron, Maj Miles D. and Beavers, SP5 Richard W., The Critical Year, 1968, [Part 2], HQ, Provisional Corps Vietnam, 31st Military History Detachment, May, 1968, Historical Study 3-68, "Operation PEGASUS," pp. 1-2.

[2630] Ibid., p. 2. Ref: HQ, III MAF 251428Z/Jan68, Subj: Contingency Planning.

[2631] Ibid. Gen Creighton W. Abrams, Deputy Commander, MACV, commanded the MACV (Fwd) CP. On 28 Jan '68, LtGen William B. Rosson, CG, I Field Force Vietnam, was directed to prepare a contingency plan for a Provisional Corps Headquarters to move to I CTZ and assume OPCON of designated US Army units. Upon implementation, Gen Rosson would be the Provisional Corps Commander. LtGen Rosson reported to MACV FWD on 01 March and was appointed Deputy to General Abrams.

MAF.[2632] At 1201, 10 March 1968, Provisional Corps Vietnam became operational at Phu Bai under the command of LtGen William B. Rosson, and assumed OPCON of 1st Cavalry Division, 3rd Marine Division, 101st Airborne Division with the 3rd Brigade, the 82nd Airborne Division, and Task Force CLEARWATER.[2633] Starting 12 March, an airstrip was constructed at Ca Lu capable of handling a C7A aircraft.[2634] The airstrip and compound became known as "Landing Zone STUD."[2635] On 21 March the base at Ca Lu (48Q YD0145) was established with 5515 short tons of supplies. Ten days later, 80% of the supply level was achieved.[2636]

On 28 March 1968, "..the 26th Marine Regiment.. was instructed to conduct limited attacks out of Khe Sanh Combat Base to determine the enemy's posture, his intention, and to fix the enemy in position."[2637]

The basic concept of the operation: the 26th Marine Regiment would attack south and west of the Combat Base against NVA positions west of Khe Sanh and north of Route 9, the 1st Marine Regiment would launch a ground attack west toward Khe Sanh along Route 9 with 2 battalions accompanied by USMC engineers(11th Engineer Bn) and Seabees and heavy construction equipment, while the 1st Air Cavalry air-assaulted the high ground. All elements would continue moving west toward Khe Sanh and on D+3, the 2nd Brigade of the 1st Cav would land three battalions southeast of Khe Sanh and attack northwest.[2638]

Operation PEGASUS was the largest III MAF operation of the war, involving 18 infantry battalions (7 USMC, 8 USA, 3 ARVN Rangers),[2639] a total of some 19,000 Army soldiers, 10,000 Marines, 300 helicopters and 114 heliborne artillery pieces.[2640] Major units were divided as follows:

- 1st Brigade, I ACD (1st Bn, 8th Cavalry; 1st Bn, 12th Cav, and 2-19 Artillery);
- 2nd Brigade, I ACD (1st Bn, 5th Cav; 2nd Bn, 5th Cav; 2nd Bn, 12th Cav, and 1-77 Artillery);
- 3rd Brigade, I ACD (1st Bn, 7th Cav, 2nd Bn, 7th Cav, 5th Bn, 7th Cav,, 1-21 Artillery, 37th ARVN Ranger Bn, 1/13 USMC artillery, and all KSCB support detachments);
- 26th Marine Regt (1/26, 2/16, 3/26, and 1/9);
- 1st Marine Regt (1/1, 2/1, 2/3, and 1/11 artillery);
- 3rd ARVN Task Force (3rd, 6th, and 8th Airborne Bns, C Btry, 12th Artillery).[2641]

Personnel strength at KSCB and its outposts at this point included: 239 USMC officers, 5,632 USMC enlisted, 10 USN officers, and 287 USN enlisted, for a total of 6168.[2642]

The Area of Operations was defined as XD9766 to YD0334 to the Laotian border at XD7726, north along the border to the southern boundary of the DMZ, and east along the DMZ to XD 9766.[2643]

In addition to relieving the defenders at KSCB, successful completion of Operation PEGASUS/Lam Son 207A would mark, for the first time since September, 1967, the opening of Route 9 over the 42 road miles from Dong Ha to Khe Sanh.[2644] The task of opening Route 9

[2632] Ibid., Part I, pp. 19-20.

[2633] Ibid., p. 23. Ref: HQ, III MAF 041128Z/Mar68, Subj: Command Support Forthcoming Deployments.

[2634] Ist Air Cavalry Div, AAR, Operation PEGASUS, p. 4, Para. 7; Waldron and Beavers, Critical Year, op. cit., Part 2, p. 3.

[2635] Tolson, LtGen John J., III, "Pegasus," Army 21:12 (December, 1971) 15.

[2636] HQ, PCV, AAR Operation PEGASUS, p. 19.

[2637] Waldron and Beavers, op. cit., Part I, p. 33; FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, April, 1968, p. 7.

[2638] Tolson, "Pegasus," p. 14.

[2639] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, April, 1968, p. 7.

[2640] Cutts, Bob, "Reds Booted Off Khe Sanh Hill," Pacific Stars & Stripes 24:150 (31 May 1968) 9, 12-13.

[2641] HQ, I ACD, AAR Opn PEGASUS, Tab C.

[2642] FMFPAC SITREP #1102.

[2643] III MAF COC 300205Z/Mar68, Concept of Opn PEGASUS, in III MAF COC Journal and File 30/31 March 1968, #36.

[2644] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, April, 1968, pp. 7, 64. In September, 1967, torrential monsoon rains washed out the road bed in many places, swept away 3 bridges, and loosened overhanging bluffs which tumbled landslides across the road. Additionally, NVA forces occupied the area and 10 bridges were damaged or destroyed, innumerable trenches and craters were cut into the road. The 42-mile route (Dong Ha-Khe Sanh) has 49 bridges, 27 of which are along the 15-mile stretch between Ca Lu and Khe Sanh. [FMFPAC, Operations, April, 1968, op. cit., p. 64]. The status of bridges and road as of early January, 1968, included 26 bridges posing blockages: YD009453 (20 x 8-ft. bridge intact, by-pass difficult), YD002453 (60 x 20-ft. bridge intact, by-pass difficult), YD000452 (117 x 20-ft. bridge intact, by-pass difficult), XD997448 (60 x 24-ft. bridge intact, by-pass fair), XD994445 (90 x 30-ft. bridge badly damaged, by-pass fair), XD993443 (90 x 30-ft. bridge badly damaged, by-pass difficult), XD989443 (90 x 24-ft. bridge out, by-pass impossible), XD987441 (bridge intact), XD983438 (intact, possible culvert), XD981436, XD979436, and XD977434 (bridges intact, possible culvert), XD976434 and XD973433 (bridges out, by-pass impossible), XD971432 and XD970432 (bridges intact, possible culvert), XD965429 (37 x 12-ft. bridge intact by damaged, by-pass impossible, XD959429 (16 x 16-ft. bridge intact, by-pass good), XD957428 (bridge intact, possible culvert), XD956428, (bridge out, by-pass impossible), XD942428 (bridge out, by-pass difficult), XD941422 and XD925421 (bridges out, by-pass impossible), XD921419 (bridge out, by-pass difficult), XD918416 (bridge out, by-pass impossible), XD913403 (60 x 14-ft. bridge intact), and the following road conditions: XD950427 (road out), XD934422 (rectangular hole in road), XD955428 (landslide), and XD996447 (numerous craters in fell to the 11th Engineer Battalion which received a warning order on 16 February. On 8 March, Co "A" of 11th Engineers had moved from Dong Ha to Ca Lu in order to open Route 9 from Ca Lu to the Rock Pile and participate in the building of LZ STUD (later named LZ CAMEO due to its proximity to the Khe Meo River, but a name which caused chagrin to Marines, and later changed to Vandegrift Combat Base).[2645] Third Platoon, 3rd Bridge Company, 7th Engineer Battalion, handled the actual construction of the bridges. The motto of the unit was "Erections are our Business."[2646] The CH-54 "Flying Crane" helicopters of the 1st Air Cavalry Division's 470th Flying Crane Co. were used to insert M4T7 bridges into 3 sites, one 30-ft. bridge which weighs 16,500 pounds and two 38-ft. bridges which assembled in a skeleton fashion weigh 16,000 pounds.[2647]

LtCol Roy Bahr became CO of FOB-3 on 01 April 1968.]

01 April 1968

DARDEN, LCPL Larry Euel	E/2/3
GIAMBRONE, 1/Lt Richard Lawrence	1-7 Cav
RIDENHOUR, SSG Darwin Bruce	8th Eng,
SIMOES, SP4 Anthony	1-50,
STAYER, SP4 Harry Sherman	8th Eng,
VANDERSHANS, HN Donald Ed	H&S/1/9
WILSON, PFC Ronald Eugene	2-5 Cav

Persistent low clouds and fog shrouded Khe Sanh through late morning[2648] in what was to become an almost daily pattern during Operation Pegasus.[2649]

Commencing at 0700, Cos E and H/2/3 attacked southwest to seize Objective #6 (YD016431), securing it at 0720H. Units continued the attack toward Objective #7 (YD009428) until 1500. At 1340H, while attacking west toward Objective #7, E/2/3 received rocket and machine gun fire from a friendly UH1B/C killing LCPL Darden and causing 18 WIA (medevaced) and one WIA (minor).[2650]

On 01 April 1968, 1-7 Cav air assaulted into LZ MIKE (XD937409).[2651]

02 April 1968

PATTON, LCPL Barry Michael	H&S/2/3
SANTISTEVAN, PFC Benny Manual Jr.	I/3/26
WHITE, LCPL Wesley William	E/2/1
WILLIAMS, PSGT Doyle	1-8 Cav, I ACD

PFC Santistevan died of wounds received while in a defensive position (Hill 881-South) on 02 March 1968.

Commencing at 0645H, Co E/2/1 continued to attack toward Objective #3 (XD988452), seizing and securing it at 1220H. E/2/1 then commenced a heliborne assault into LZ ROBIN (XD960445) in conjunction with G/2/1. The lift commenced at 1530H and was completed at 1725H and Cos E and G consolidated night defensive positions and commenced night defensive operations. At 0745H, at LZ ROBIN, LCPL White detonated an unknown type explosive device rigged as a mine. Immediately after the explosion, E/2/1 was taken under fire with small arms by an unknown number of NVA at XD963448. Following organic and supporting fires (from 2 UH1B/C from I ACD), the Marines assaulted the NVA positions. In addition to LCPL White, there were 5 USMC WIA (evacuated).[2652]

03 April 1968

BOYD, PFC Wayne	C/2-7 Cav
BRADY, 2/Lt John James	C/2-7 Cav
CHAMBERS, PFC David Wayne	A/2-7 Cav
CRANEY, PFC Leslie Lee	F/2/1
DILLON, CPL Raymond Lawrence	A/1-5
FAHRENBRUCH, SGT Richard L	D/2-7 Cav
GILLIAM, PFC George Harvey	C/2-5 Cav
GONZALES, PFC Robert	H&S/2/3
LANGFORD, SP4 James Minter	A/2-7 Cav
MIRACLE, PFC James	C/1-8 Cav
RUSH, LCPL Ervin Lee	H&S/2/3
RYDEN, PFC Gary Ardean	D/1-5 Cav
SMITH, PFC Harold Roger	A/1-5 Cav
STREET, PFC Lenard Jr.	H&S/2/3

At 0705H, Co F (vicinity of XD987427) called in a prep fire to the south of the company position. Whiskey Battery, 1/11 (155mm)[2653] fired the mission and 2 rounds impacted inside the perimeter and 3 outside the perimeter road). [3rd MarDiv, "Intelligence Estimate of the Route #9 area," 071500 Jan 1968, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc. Jan 1968 file, #14, map following p. 7.

---

[2645] Comments of LtCol Victor A. Perry, USMC Oral History Tape #2755. Perry was CO of 11th Engineer Bn.

[2646] Comments of Maj Joseph C. Thorp, USMC Oral History Tape #2775; Diary of Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe.

[2647] Ibid.

[2648] Gen Westmoreland 021028ZApr68 to Gen. Wheeler (CJCS) and Adm Sharp (CINCPAC), MAC 04443, Khe Sanh Report #58.

[2649] Tolson, op. cit., p. 17, notes "Seldom were we able to get in high gear before 1300."

[2650] 1st Marines AAR, Opn PEGASUS, pp. 13, 14.

[2651] I ACD AAR, Opn PEGASUS, p. 5.

[2652] 1st Marines AAR, Opn PEGASUS, pp. 15, 17.

[2653] 1/11 had a HQ Battery, A Battery, and a W Battery (155s) and also two 4.2-inch mortars at LZ Stud designated as "Wy" and another mortar battery detachment at LZ Ca Lu consisting of one 4.2mm mortar and 2 107mm Howtar mortars, designated as "Wx." [Letter of Ron Taylor, 1 November 1989].

causing 3 USMC KIA and 19 USMC WIA (evacuated).[2654] F/2/1 was providing security for uncovered bridges and engineer upgrade efforts along Route 9.[2655] "The FO with F/2/3 called a prep fire mission on a target. W/1/11 fired for effect. The volley fell short by 500 meters and impacted in the F/2/3 perimeter... After the check fire the data on the guns and in the FDC was checked and found to be correct. While an investigation was underway, the same FO with F/2/3 called in another mission with 'danger close' of 600 meters. Due to the incident involving the same FO a safety factor of plus 400 meters was figured into the data at the FDC. The first round fired landed approximately 800 meters short of the target and the FO realized that the grid that he had given for the fire mission was only 100 meters from his position. It relieved us to hear that it wasn't our fault, but it didn't help knowing that our guns had killed Marines."[2656]

On 03 April (D+3 of PEGASUS), while 1st Marine Regiment continued to attack west along Route 9, the 3rd Brigade continued to establish LZs. 2-7 Cav, attacking west along Route 9, made contact with an estimated company-size blocking position at XD890404. Due to lack of significant enemy resistance, the 2nd Brigade air-assaulted one day earlier than planned with 2-5 Cav into LZ TOM (XD900345) and 2-12 Cav into LZ WHARTON (XD880360). 1-5 Cav was then airlifted into LZ WHARTON. Both LZ TOM and LZ WHARTON received incoming NVA artillery fire during the air moves. Additionally, LZ WHARTON received approximately 20 rounds of 130mm artillery during the night.[2657] At 1500, LZ TOM received 30 rounds of unknown size artillery resulting in 1 KIA and 7 WIA. At 2215, LZ TIMOTHY received 20 rounds of 105mm or 155mm artillery resulting in 6 KIA and 17 WIA. At the same time, B,D/1-5 Cav received 7-8 rounds unknown size artillery resulting in 3 KIA, 14 WIA.[2658]

[The new CO of FOB-3, LtCol Barr (who took command 01 April) said their S-4, Lt Garrett, had been badly wounded, that the Frenchman's house had become a known meeting place or CP for the NVA and was therefore completely blown apart, and that Hill 471 was one of the first objectives of the NVA on 21 January who occupied it before they attacked the District Headquarters. One of the Sergeants at FOB-3 said that all the buildings at "Fort Dix" (the "old French Fort" east of Khe Sanh Village) were now destroyed. The CAC OSCAR Marines inside FOB-3 compound now number 26; they began here on 22 January with over 50.[2659]]

04 April 1968

BAXTER, SP5 Terry Lee	HHC, 2nd Bde
BRIDGES, SGT Ernest Larry	C/1/9
BUONO, PFC Matthew Joseph	B/1-77
CAVAZOS, PFC Ronald Thomas	H&S/1/9
CHAMBERS, SP4 John Luther	A/1-5 Cav
HOLLOWAY, LCPL James Owens Jr.	A/1/9
JACOB, PFC Robert Michael	A/1/9
JONES, CAPT Walter Chapman III	H&S/1/9
LINDBERG, LCPL Brian Victor	A/1/9
MILLER, LCPL Charles Claude	H&S/1/9
PECKHAM, LCPL George Robert	F/2/1
PERILLO, PFC Donald Lee	G/2/3
PHEARS, WO Ronald Gene	HHC, 2nd Bde
RUNKLE, LTCOL Robert Leslie	1-5 Cav
SMITH, PFC Dennis	D/1/26
TAYLOR, SFC Robert L	RT BEAR, FOB3
TOWSLEE, PFC Edward Lawrence	A/1/9

On the evening of 3 April, 1/9 prepared for their patrol to Hill 471, a high ground overlooking Khe Sanh village, 2 miles south of the Combat Base. From this hill, a full view of KSCB is possible along with most Bru villages in the area along with Khe Sanh village, Route 9, and even the outskirts of Lang Vei.[2660] NVA forward observers were frequently spotted here by Marines on the Combat Base during the siege and it had been the site of a bloody skirmish on 29 January when a patrol from FOB #3 was forces to leave an American MIA at this location (SSG Gary Lee Crone).[2661] "They brought us beer.. and we had to pack just an enormous amount of equipment.. canteens, sleeping gear, rifle-cleaning gear, entrenching tool, flak jackets, helmets, grenades, 20 magazines of ammo, radios, extra batteries, C-rations. Then every man was assigned extra ammo—a can of gun ammo, 200 rounds for machineguns, extra mortar rounds."[2662]

Reveille was at one o'clock in the morning, pitch dark,. and the battalion column was at their LOD [Line of Departure] at 0230H for a 0600H jump off.[2663] In addition to darkness, a misty fog enshrouded the Marines.[2664] The scheme was to proceed under the cover of

---

[2654] 2/3 ComdC April 1968; 1st Mar AAR OPN PEGASUS, p. 20.
[2655] 1st Mar AAR OPN PEGASUS, p. 19.
[2656] Letter from Ron Taylor, 1 November 1989.
[2657] I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 6.
[2658] Ibid., Tab G, Mortar/Rocket Attack.
[2659] Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 3 April 1968.
[2660] Personal experience of Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe who accompanied patrols from CAP O-3 to this position.
[2661] Vide pp. 138-140, supra.
[2662] Taped comments of Lance Larson, no date, Eisenhower Center, University of New Orleans, LA. PFC Lance C. Larson was a radioman attached to H&S Co., 1/9, as the S-3's radioman.
[2663] 1/9 AAR Operation PEGASUS; Larson comments, cited.
[2664] Conversation with Lance Larson, 13 February 1994; Comments of Capt Charles B. Hartzell, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803. Capt Hartzell was the 1/9 Bn S-3A officer.

the morning fog, use no prep, and move by stealth to an attack position just under Hill 471, hoping to catch the NVA before they could reinforce the position and create heavier casualties.[2665]

"We had to go through a mine field.. It was a single-line path, and the whole battalion's marching at night. We're trying to keep quiet, and you could hear our equipment rattling and the shuffling of feet. There isn't a light anywhere. I remember, suddenly my whole pack fell off my back! I had it on a packboard—all these straps—and it came undone and collapsed down, and no one could go around me because of the minefield. It was narrow. Suddenly I got the whole column halted. Here's this huge operation, big movement, and everyone is watching, and here Lance Corporal Larson is holding up the whole operation because I had it blocked!"[2666]

B/1/9 remained behind at the Rock Quarry to guard that position. D/1/9 led the formation, followed by C/1/9 and A/1/9, which proceeded towards Hill 471 with no resistance until the Marines arrived about a click from 471 at which time they received a few rockets.[2667] By noon, 1/9 was in position on high ground overlooking Hill 471.[2668]

The Battalion Alfa Command group (LtCol John H. Cahill, the Bn CO, and his radioman, Capt Walter C. Jones, III, the Bn One-Four (Air Officer) and his radioman, the radioman for the 81s, Maj Ted R. Henderson, the Bn S-3 and his radioman, Lt J. LeBlond, the Two-Four officer (arty FO) and his radioman) gathered in a bomb crater. PFC Cavazos, a real good friend of Lance Larson's was on Larson's right side, talking, kidding-around, throwing little rocks at Larson's leg because his radio wasn't busy, "and he was trying to make me goof-up on the radio so I'd look like a fool."[2669] Arty was not forthcoming due to helicopters in the area and as Capt Jones, the Bn One-Four, stood up with his binoculars, ready to call in air strikes, the CP group started to receive incoming rockets. For Larson, it was the most terrifying moment of his life despite having experienced numerous times of incoming during the siege and numerous fire-fights during his entire Vietnam tour. PFC Cavazos, the 81s radioman, was killed along with Capt Jones.[2670] Maj Henderson "was all blown to bits. He wasn't killed; he was just a mess. On the other side of him was my best buddy, [PFC Samuel W.] Saxon, was really critically wounded. The artillery officer was wounded. His radioman was wounded. The Colonel was wounded. It was just chaos. I lost two of my best friends. Regiment's calling, wanting to know what the hell's going on. The Alfa Company Commander's trying to call the Colonel and get reinforcements."[2671] Cpl Anthony C. Borja, Jr., the CO's radioman, described the scene as "a regular Dante's Inferno."[2672]

"Since we did not have time to dig in, we had no place to hide. The next thing I knew was hearing an explosion and then I was airborne [and] then I crashed to the ground. I had flown some 20 feet down the hillside... The Colonel was nearby bleeding from a wound to his right hand. I placed a field wrapping on his hand. He said he was okay and told me to get the PRC-25 which was not on my back. I returned to the radio and found that the 14 was dead and his radioman wounded. Both the 24 FO and his radioman [were] wounded. The 24 radioman was a friend. We had spent many hours in the COC on radio watch together. His name was "Chico" Cavazos and he was a 'short-timer.' He wore a raggedy flak jacket with a drawing of snoopy on the back which he used as a calendar, coloring in portions as his time in country grew shorter. Snoopy was almost fully colored. Chico was on his back, gasping for air and crying out in Spanish for his mom. I went to his left side and began to check for injuries. None were observable. I rested his head on my lap and as I did, he gave me a look that I can't describe and mumbled something in Spanish. His body convulsed and shuddered. He then died as I held him. I remember feeling so helpless and afraid."[2673]

Lance Larson recalls that when he and Cavazos were on watch together, he used to tell Larson, "Stop by my hole and we'll have a beer and listen to some tunes." "And I'd say, 'Yeah, sure!' He said it to me all the time. So one day I happened to be kinda running along this trenchline and he stuck his head out of his hole and said, 'Hey, come in.' I said, 'Alright.' He was living by himself in this hole. He had a real nice hole—went way down in the ground. He had the parachute in there, and it was real nice. Sure enough, the guy had a record player! I said, 'Where in the hell did you get this?' He told me he got it from a guy on the main combat base that had gone home, and he was using batteries. I re-

---

Weather at Khe Sanh was low overcast with fog until 1100H when ceilings improved to 3,000 feet. [Gen Abrams, Dep COMUSMACV 051108Z/Apr68, MAC 04567, Khe Sanh Report #61].

[2665] Comments of Hartzell, cited.

[2666] Comments of Larson, Eisenhower Center interview, cited.

[2667] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[2668] 1/9 AAR Opn PEGASUS.

[2669] Comments of Lance Larson, Eisenhower Center interview, cited.

[2670] LtCol John H. Cahill, letter of 8 January 1968 to Historical Branch, G-3 Div, HQMC, in Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file.

[2671] Comments of Lance Larson, Eisenhower Center interview, cited.

[2672] Cpl Anthony C. Borja, Jr., "Khe Sanh Memories," printed in Khe Sanh Veterans Red Clay, Issue #43 (Fall/Winter, 1998), p. 32.

[2673] Ibid.

member that some batteries were missing from the H&S inventory for the PRC-25s, and the gunny was complaining that he couldn't figure out where these extra batteries were going. Here's Cavazos in his hole; he had taken all these extra batteries and taped them together and was using that for the power. I remember him playing this Rolling Stones album, and he pulls out a couple beers. I said, 'Where in the hell did you get this?' And he wouldn't tell me. He said, 'Some secret source," and he just had this big grin that he always had. There I was in his hole, drinking a beer and listening to the Rolling Stones, and I couldn't believe it. It was like a dream come true."[2674]

Now Cavazos was next to him in the bomb crater. "The shrapnel went right through the radio on his back and went into his lungs, and he asphyxiated, turned blue, and he was looking—I can still remember his face looking at me, and he turned blue and died."[2675]

PFC Daniel E. Beckham ("Lurch"), MOS 0341, had volunteered as a mortar FO with A/1/9 and became good friends with the radioman, LCPL Charles C. Miller. His account of the action while attacking Hill 471:

"As Alfa Company attacked, the NVA started pouring on their own supporting fire. They blasted us with 122mm rockets and a mixture of 82mm and 60mm mortar fire. At this time, a radioman and myself had moved to the right crater leaving the rest of the group of 5-6 Marines in the left bomb crater. As the incoming landed, shrapnel flew everywhere. You could hear it hitting the dirt everywhere around, and then one round hit really close. Although we were hit with hot pieces of metal, the radioman and I were unscathed, and I flew over the rim of the bomb crater to check on the other group. What I saw I still remember vividly today. There was a cloud of dust hanging in the bomb crater, and I could see that everyone was wounded and called out for the corpsman. I ran to Miller, the FO radioman, and grabbed him to check his wounds. He was still kneeling on both knees like I had left him a few minutes ago, but slightly bent over. The radio that he had fastened to his pack on his back was now gone. As I looked down, it was apparent that the round had hit just behind him, the impact crater was visible on the ground. As I pulled him back, I yelled his name and realized he had been killed instantly. All the shrapnel had cooked off the bandoleer of ammo he carried across his chest. I let him go and went to help the others. The Captain had a neck wound and everyone helped to cut off the flow of blood. The Sergeant just lay there moaning. He was in a great deal of pain. His flak jacket was nowhere in sight, and shrapnel had hit him quite severely all over his back. I tried to talk to him and comfort him, but he was in shock, and moaning. It's a horrible feeling seeing your buddies hurt'n real bad and you just can't do much about it. One rocket had wiped out almost the entire command group."[2676]

A lingering fragment of the battle's effects was discovered by the daughter of a best friend of Kevin Macalay of B Co., Recon, many years later. She and her hustand were clearing some brush on a large property they owned in central Islip on Long Island, New York, when they came upon a grave headstone. They brought the name to the attention of Macaulay who recalled the name from reading the Khe Sanh casualty list and who had recalled the action on Hill 471 as he had watched it from atop the bunkers. Kevin Macaulay then called the various cemeteries on Long Island, but found no evidence he had been buried on Long Island, in the national cemeteries, or Catholic cemeteries. He looked up the family in the telephone book and spoke with a lady: "I said, 'I'm not a crank. I'm a former Marine, and friends of ours found a headstone for what I believe might be your brother-in-law out on Long Island.' About a week later, the husband called and verified that the headstone of his brother was still standing." Perhaps this was an imperfection that had been tossed by the makers of the markers. The husband had graduated two years before Kevin from the same high school. His brother flew Crusaders for the first half of his Vietnam tour and then transferred to be the ALO of 1/9. Kevin brought the stone over to the man who was most appreciative.[2677]

A/1/9 moved through with the mission of taking 471 as D/1/9 took up a position on the hill before reaching 471. The hill's slope was so steep that it was necessary to proceed on all 4's.[2678] At about 1500H, "A" Company initiated its assault on Hill 471 across a narrow approach with "D" Company providing a base of fire.[2679] A-1 (2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr.) was given the mission of securing the hill. As they proceeded, a heavy NVA barrage caused Lt Lovely and his right guide to receive slight concussions, and the "A" Co CO, (Capt Henry Duane Banks) committed A-2 (1/Lt Michael Pym Hayden) and A-3 (1/Lt Paul H. Wallace) to take the hill. Following an air and arty prep, A-2 moved up on line followed by A-3, receiving very little resistance until they got to about 15-20 feet from the crest at which time they received a heavy 82mm barrage, rifle grenades, ChiComs, and heavy small arms fire, and became bogged down.[2680] As A-2 took numerous casualties, Sgt Gary Nathan Wiggins, a squad leader with A-2, maneuvered elements of his squad to reinforce and hold the platoon's position while the NVA attempted to envelop its right flank.

[2674] Comments of Lance Larson, cited.
[2675] Ibid.
[2676] Dan Beckham, "Next Time I'll Go!", 1/9 Network: The Proud Warrior, Spring, 2002, p. 17.
[2677] Comversation with Kevin Macaulay, 21 October 2006.
[2678] Conversation with William Lanier, 8 December 1968; personal experience of having been on Hill 471.
[2679] 1/9 AAR, Opn PEGASUS.
[2680] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

When the Marines became depleted of grenades, Sgt Wiggins moved forward in the face of the enemy fire to capture and use the NVA's own grenades in repulsing a counterattack.[2681] A-3 then was brought up to help in the assault, but was also held up. Cpl Barry L. Thoryk fearlessly rushed and destroyed a NVA machinegun position, grabbed the enemy's gun and used it against them. He also moved forward to retrieve NVA grenades to throw back at various enemy positions. All of this was done despite painful and multiple fragmentation wounds which he received and for which he refused to be medevaced until the hill was secured.[2682] The Platoon Commander of A-3, 1/Lt Paul Harvey Wallace, although severely wounded by an enemy AK-47 which completely penetrated his neck, refused to be medevaced in order to retain command of A-3.[2683]

LCPL William E. Lanier, a 1/9 Bn Scout accompanying the assault, was crawling up the steep hill on all 4's, like everyone else when he veered off to the right of Co "A" and dashed for a bomb crater with enemy fire at his heels. Diving head-first into a bomb crater, he suddenly realized there were already 4 occupants there—young 13 and 15 year-old North Vietnamese Army soldiers, scared and paralyzed with fear, especially upon seeing the 6e-foot, 3-inch "elephant" of Lanier! They immediately surrendered. Lanier called his Kit Carson Scout, placed sandbags over the heads of the NVA soldiers, and took them back to KSCB.[2684]

The 3 NVA, who were from the 66th Regiment, revealed that morale was low and losses had been heavy in their regiment. They were thin, looked anemic, and claimed to have been without food for 3 days.[2685] Hoang Van Khoi said that following a B-52 strike one kilometer from his unit, several men bled from their nose, ears, and mouth, some of whom later died.[2686] Bui Van Tinh said the mission of his unit was to conduct ambushes and attacks against heliborne troops. The third POW, Doan Van Sinh, stated that one of the regiments in the 304th Division lost 75% of its men in B-52 strikes.[2687]

Hill 471 was secured at 1600H with Co "A" responsible for the western half and "C" Company for the eastern half. 1/9 had received 12 artillery, 72 rockets, and 103 mortar rounds and sustained 10 KIA and 55 WIA (medevaced).[2688] Cpl Anthony C. Borja, Jr., his ears still ringing, dug a 2-man foxhole and was given 2 Darvon by the corpsman. He finished his radio watch by informing Regiment of the discovery of the corpse of an Army Special Forces soldier that had been discovered by the Marines.[2689]

From 1720H to 2400H, 04 April 1968, the NVA fired 192 rounds of mixed artillery, mortars, and rockets on the Marines occupying Hill 471.[2690] Three Marines from Co "C," Sgt Ernest Larry Bridges, CPL Timothy J. Haley, and LCPL Thomas K. Allen, were digging holes inside a bomb crater when a NVA mortar landed right inside the crater.[2691] "The concussion was intense. When the smoke cleared there was lots of screaming wounded. Tom Allen, one of the best mortarmen in Nam, was hit in the elbow. He had been standing about 3 feet from me. To my left about 5 yards away was Sergeant Bridges and the weapons platoon commander—blown up. We got the corpsman who took one look and declared them both dead."[2692]

During the early morning hours or 5 April, the LP detected movement and requested illum. PFC Larson, manning the radio, woke up Capt Hartzell, acting as S-3, to inform him. Regiment radioed, "Shot out!" as the tubes could be heard firing the illum and then the rounds flying overhead. The illum popped, lighting up the area, and "Holy Gripes! You couldn't believe it. There were just hundreds of NVA soldiers tip-toeing up this hill."[2693] It was 0430H, and an estimated 2 NVA companies assaulted. Fighting was intense as the NVA, as close as 20 meters to friendly lines, fired small arms, automatic weapons and heavy machine guns, grenades and RPGs. The NVA force broke withdrew at 0630H to a hill southeast of Hill 471 from where they continued to fire sporadic small arms, mortars and RPG fire on Hill 471.[2694] Capt Hartzell noted that the NVA couldn't have picked a worse approach: their approach was exactly the area the Marines had anticipated and the NVA were caught in a vicious crossfire. "They had quite a few heroes; they gave it a real valiant effort. But they were unable to carry off the attack."[2695] After sunrise, 148 NVA bodies were found to the immediate front of the Marines on 471 that could be counted and the AO reported that suppression fire on the approach to the hill caught a couple of NVA companies coming into position to reinforce, which were wiped out.[2696]

[2681] Navy Commendation Medal Citation, Sgt Gary Nathan Wiggins.
[2682] Statement of 1/Lt P.M. Wallace in Navy Cross file, Cpl Barry L. Thoryk.
[2683] Statement of Cpl Barry L. Thoryk in Silver Star Medal file of 1/Lt Paul Harvey Wallace.
[2684] Conversation with William Lanier, 10 January 1987.
[2685] MACV, "Khe Sanh Analysis," 08 July 1968, p. 12.
[2686] FMFPAC 170232Z/Apr68, SITREP #1114.
[2687] FMFPAC 100441Z/Apr68, SITREP #1107.
[2688] 1/9 AAR, Opn PEGASUS.
[2689] Borja, "Khe Sanh Memories," cited. The KIA was SSG Gary Lee Crone, KIA 29 January 1968; See p. 140 of this book.
[2690] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, April, 1968, p. 12.
[2691] Conversation with Timothy J. Haley, 31 December 1995.
[2692] Letter from Timothy J. Haley, 12 December 1995.
[2693] Larson comments, cited.
[2694] 1/9 AAR, Opn PEGASUS.
[2695] Comments of Hartzell, Tape #2803, cited.
[2696] Ibid.; 1/9 AAR, Opn PEGASUS.

The North Vietnamese account of the battle describes the battle in terms of the Marines moving to occupy their high points 3, 4, and 5 at Dong Khe Rieng to the northwest of Hill 471. A small element of the 13th Company, 9th Battalion, 304th Division, plus 4 NVA from the 7th Company, 2nd Battalion, deployed to defend the hill. The Americans lost 2 companies and the NVA shot down 5 helicopters. The Americans were kept from occupying Hill 471, and suffered 250 killed. That night, the 304th Division ordered the 9th Battalion to raid the American's bivouac positions and cadres from the 11th and 12th Companies attacked the Americans on High Point 2 killing 100 Americans.[2697]

Meanwhile, F/2/1, conducting search and destroy operations north of Route 9 between XD988452 and XD966437, to provide security for bridge and engineer upgrade along Route 9 from Ca Lu Combat Base to KSCB, was conducting resupply when a mechanical mule, M274, at XD965429, detonated a 155mm round rigged under a box type mine killing LCPL George Robert Peckham.[2698]

PFC Donald Lee Perillo died from a gunshot wound "when mistaken for the enemy while walking in front of the command post area."[2699]

At 1208H, LZ Stud (Ca Lu) received 11 rounds of 130mm artillery from XD930530 causing 4 KIA.[2700] 2-7 Cav, attacking west along Highway 9 in the 3rd Brigade AO, encountered an enemy defensive position at XD883399; contact was made and continued throughout the day. The battle resulted in 83 NVA KIA, 1 POW, and 121 individual and 10 crew-served weapons captured. The 2nd Brigade concentrated efforts in improving LZs with the 2-5 Cav conducting operations in the vicinity of LZ Tom (XD900345). The 1-5 Cav initiated an attack toward an old French Fort at XD895383 which was occupied by an estimated NVA battalion. In view of the casualties sustained and the apparent futility of attacking the fortress towards the northwest, 1-5 Cav was replaced by 2-5 Cav, who assumed the mission of seizing the objective.[2701] The 1-5 Battalion Commander, LtCol Robert L. Runkle, KIA in the fighting, was replaced by LtCol Clarence Jordan.[2702]

SFC Robert Taylor of Recon Team BEAR from FOB #3, was shot through the head as he climbed over a bomb crater wall to throw a hand grenade at a group of NVA advancing on the team. He rolled to the bottom of the bomb crater, still clutching the hand grenade with the pin pulled. Harve Saal directed a Bru Montagnard soldier to follow his rolling body and take the grenade from him. As soon as Taylor stopped rolling on the bottom of the crater, the Bru was right behind him and grasped the grenade. Saal grabbed the grenade and tossed it just over and outside the rim where it exploded. Taylor had lost much blood, his entire body shook and then went limp. There was no pulse, or any sign of breath vapor on the signal mirror. Helicopters circling overhead refused to land, saying the recon team was completely surrounded. RT Bear then broke for the FOB #3.[2703]

05 April 1968

BUCIOR, Cpl Andrew Zbigniew C/1/9
HENDRIX, SP4 John Russell B Trp, 7th Sqd, 1st AVN Bde
OSTAPCHUK, LCPL Walter Michael A/1/9
WILLIAMS, PFC Richard Earl M/3/26

LCPL Ostapchuk died of wounds [DOW] received on 4 April during the battle when the NVA attempted to retake Hill 471. As the battle ended (about 0600-0630), CPL Bucior raised from his hole to ensure the NVA were not regrouping. Just then, a mortar round exploded within 20 feet, instantly killing him.[2704]

At 0035H, Co M/3/16 occupying the western knoll of Hill 881-South received three round "from unknown enemy positions." Actually, PFC Williams was killed from an artillery round fired from KSCB from a gun that had not been properly laid during nightly H&I fires. The round almost completely disintegrated PFC Williams and it was difficult to ascertain his identity so the casualty could be reported.[2705]

On 01 April a new system for coordinating all air assets, known as "Single Manager for Air," was implemented at Khe Sanh. The concept, pushed by the Air Force and resisted by the Marine Corps, involved increased complexity due to additional layers of staff and officers necessary to act on requests for air, as far as the Marines were concerned. On 5 April, the new system almost wiped out the entire 1/9 on Hill 471. Colonel

---

[2697] Su Doan (Ky Su) (Tap II) [304th Division (Chronology) (Vol. 2), Hanoi: Kha Xuat Ban Quan Nhan Dan [People's Army Publishing House], 1990, pp. 106-107.
[2698] 1st Marines AAR Opn PEGASUS, pp. 21, 23.
[2699] HQMC memo from DN to AO1C, Attn: WO Helbringer, Subj: Viet Nam Casualties – HOSTILE DEAD, 15 April 1968, p. 7, in Reference Section, History Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.
[2700] I ACD AAR Operation Pegasus/Lam Son 207A, Tab G, Mortar/Rocket Attack.
[2701] I ACD AAR Operation Pegasus/Lam Son 207A, pp.3, 6.
[2702] Tolson, LtGen John J., III, "Pegasus," Army 21:12 (December, 1971), p. 17.
[2703] Letter from Harve Saal, January, 1989; Conversation with Harve Saal, 29 August 1989. Harve Saal was a radioman with RT Bear.
[2704] Statements of LCPL T. E. Whetten, and PFC W. L. Godette, 1st Plt, C/1/9, in Bronze Star Medal file of CPL Andrew Zbigniew Bucior. 2/Lt William C. Connell, Plt Cdr, noted both of these Marines were in his platoon.
[2705] 3/26 AAR, Opn PEGASUS, p. 3; Comments of Brigadier General Harry W. Jenkins, undated.

Lownds, in his FMFPAC Debrief lamented: "The time of request for an on-call mission just about doubled. We got an echelon of command interposed between us. We had to increase our hours from 12 to 16 hours and also pull guys off radios and let guys double up on radios just to take care of the paperwork involved... If you wanted a pre-planned strike you could have it the next night following the night you put it in as a TPQ strike—in other words, 48 hours afterwards... Air should be more responsive than 48 hours! At Khe Sanh the enemy didn't stand still to wait for you to hit him. He moved around constantly. I think it was on the 5th or 7th of April we had 26 500-pound bombs drop on 1/9. Not a single one went off and not a single casualty, thank God. What had happened was that the bombs had been requested there 48 hours before. 24 hours later, 1/9 had taken their objective and were on the objective, so 24 hours before the strike was going to be held, a cancellation was put in: Don't hit this target because friendly troops made their objective and they're on the objective. Somewhere in the system, one of the echelons failed to notify people, and consequently the bombs dropped."[2706] Fortunately, the bombs had not been armed!

I Air Cavalry Division's official records indicates three KIAs this day (but only one is indicated in the listing of KIAs at the Vietnam Memorial for Washington, D.C.): at 1315 at XD882399, Companies B and C of 2-7 Cav received 60mm mortar fire resulting in 1 KIA, and at 2010 at XD8836 (LZ WHARTON), 9 rounds of recoilless rifle and artillery were received causing 2 KIA.[2707] 2-7 Cav again made contact with NVA at XD883399 which continued throughout the day resulting in 9 NVA KIA.[2708]

06 April 1968

ADAMS, 2/Lt Lee Scott	B/2-7 Cav
BEECK, SP4 Ronald Marvin	D/1-5 Cav
BENSON, PFC Robert John	B/2-7 Cav
BROWN, PFC William Franklin	D/1-5 Cav
DOWNS, PFC Jack Dennis	B/2-7 Cav
GEMMATI, CPL Oronzo	D/2-12 Cav
GRAVEL, SP4 Bobby Joe	C/2-7 Cav
GULLING, PFC Joseph Frank III	B/2-7 Cav
HANCOCK, PFC William Tyler	D/1-5 Cav
JORDAN, 1/Lt Allan Harold	B/1/13
KERCHNER, SGT Robert Bard	B/2-7 Cav
LOHMAN, CPL Herman Augusta Jr.	G/2/26
MASTERS, PFC Edward Ulyses	G/2/26
McGRATH, CPL Edward	G/2/26
MOODY, SSG Charles Wilburn	D/2-12 Cav
NIGHTENGALE, PFC Timothy James	A/1/9
PEPPER, PFC Anthony John	G/2/26
PIAZZA, PFC Robert Gary	G/2/26
ROMERO, LCPL Manuel Villareal	G/2/26
SCARBOROUGH, HM3 Russell	G/2/26
SNYDER, PFC Michael Allan	D/1-5 Cav
SPACH, PFC Jimmy Russell	B/2-7 Cav
SPARKS, PFC Ronald David	D/2-12 Cav
SPARKS, PFC Steven Lee	H&S/1/9
SWANGUARIM, PFC Lawrence Alfred	D/2-12 Cav
TRIMBLE, CPL James Mitchell	G/2/26

At 0230H, 1/9 at XD846393 received a probe from an unknown size NVA force attaching with grenades, rifle grenades, small arms, and mortars.[2709]

1/26 executed a morning assault on the NVA trench system and complex located parallel to the accdess road which runs southeast from KSCB to Route #9 (in the vicinity of XD848407). Co D/1/26 seized the objective against light resistance and policed the battlefield returning to KSCB at approximately noon with the remains of 21 Marines, 4 of which could not be identified. 17 were identified as those declared MIA on 25 February and 30 March.[2710]

On 5 April, 26th Marines approved a long-distance patrol for 2/26 and on 06 April, 2/26 broke out of its fortified position on Hill 558 at dark as Co "G" conducted a company-size combat patrol to the southwest of Hill 558. The mission was to determine if the NVA occupied the high ground (XD806435 to XD823425), approximately 1800 meters west of and overlooking Hill 558.[2711] The terrain was reasonably flat and the elephant grass had been burnt off.[2712] Under the leadership of Capt Lee R. Overstreet, Co "G" moved in a company column, platoon wedge across the flat terrain going up to a ridgeline to Hill 700, just to the south, southeast of Hill 861. Capt Overstreet has been described by one of his troops "as tough as they come, born and raised in Tennessee who, as a teenager fought in Golden Gloves. "I've talked to him a few times in the last 2 years and I always get a chill down my spine when I call him. He still has that command voice. When Golf Company started returning fire on April 6, 1968, I'm sure many NVA got a cold chill down their spines!"[2713]

[2706] Col David E. Lownds, HQMC Oral History Tape #3139. Date of debrief, 29 July 1968.

[2707] I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS/LAM SON 207A, Tab G, Mortar/Rocket Attack. Gen Abrams Report to Gen Westmoreland 070241Z/Apr68/Apr68, MAC 04629, indicates 1 friendly KIA, 4 WIA (minor), and 9 NVA KIA.

[2708] Ibid., p. 6.

[2709] 26Mar, msg to CG, I ACD, Subj: Periodic Opns Summary Rpt #7 (PEGASUS) 052000H-062000 Apr 68

[2710] Ibid.; 1/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 2

[2711] 2/26 ComdC, Apr 1968, p. 4.

[2712] Comments of 2/Lt William M. Wentworth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779.

[2713] email posted 8 April 2002 on the Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board by Joseph Olszewski. 2/Lt Joseph Olszewski, who served in G/2/26 (Sep '67 – Feb '68), notes that

With one G-3 deployed on line, the company continued to advance with G-1 (2/Lt William M. Wentworth) and G-2 (2/Lt Robert D. Winn) as a base of fire.[2714] The terrain was marked by elephant grass ranging from 4 to 10 foot high and an absence of wooded areas except in the draws leading to the hill. In these draws, the vegetation was extremely thick. No resistance was encountered as the patrol moved up a finger running from XD817434 to XD812432.[2715] At 1130H,[2716] the point (G-3) reached a position some 40 meters short of the topographic crest[2717] and came under heavy fire from what was later estimated to be aNVA reinforced company on the ridgeline extending from XD805435 to XD824424.[2718] Large quantities of mortars began dropping throughout the line and ChiCom grenades were thrown from positions that could not be determined. Wounded, PFC Pepper and CPL Trimble took refuge in a nearby bomb crater. A NVA mortar hit right in the crater and both Marines were killed. PFC Romero and PFC Masters then tried to get them back, and were killed in the process.[2719] PFC Masters "gave his life trying to help other fellow Marines."[2720] The crater then came under automatic and sniper fire. Cpl Feger arrived at the crater twice and was in the crater, finding all four dead. NVA mortars requiring him to withdraw.[2721] 2/Lt Peter A. Post (XO, G/2/26) organized a squad to attempt to rescue the 4 KIA in the crater and crawled across the hill almost to the reverse military crest. "As we approached the crater we began taking mortar rounds, hand grenades, and sniper fire. At this time I saw and recognized the 4 men in the crater as Trimble, Masters, Pepper, and Romero. They were all dead. This was approximately 1200H. We sustained 3 casualties at this time which we medevaced back to the friendly side of the hill. We later made 3 more unsuccessful attempts to retrieve these bodies, sustaining casualties each time."[2722]

The NVA had permitted the point (G-3) to advance within their mutually-supporting spider traps and bunkers before firing.[2723] Co "G" immediately sustained several casualties and G-1 and G-2 were called up. LCPL Ronald M. Vivona lost both legs above the knee.[2724]

(Interestingly, the day after the siege battle started, 22 January 1968, G-3 had been deployed to the position later known as "Hill 861-Alfa," occupied by E/2/26, and on their return to Hill 558, "our platoon took the left fork down to the valley. After a period of time, we noticed that Masters and Piazza were missing. We went back and located them. They had taken the right fork. They never could explain how they got lost from the center of the patrol. We left 558 at 10 AM and got back at 6 PM."[2725])

In Loving Memory of "Doc" Scarborough,
Killed in action while serving his country and friends
April 6, 1968
"Greater Love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."
[John 15:13]

By Donald Eutzy, Jr.,[2726]
3rd Platoon, Weapons, G/2/26, Hill 558

"Heidi and I lay in bed talking and laughing. Heidi is my 5 year-old daughter, one of the wonders and joys of life. When Heidi falls asleep in my bed, she asks me to tell her a story about my life. I was silent for a moment and remembered Russell 'Doc' Scarborough. My eyes filled with tears. I could see his face, hear his voice, and feel his kindness. Doc was the kind of man I think Christ wants us to be. I remembered too, that Doc Scarborough lay down his life for his friends. I turned to Heidi and softly began the story.

---

after 2 days of fighting, over half of the company did not return to Hill 558..

[2714] Comments of 2/Lt William M. Wentworth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779. 2/Lt Wentworth was PltCdr of G-1.

[2715] Statement of 2/Lt Peter A. Post, Encl (4) in Investigation report into circumstances surrounding eleven persons listed as mission in action on 6 and 7 April 1968, 10/JWA/mjv, 5830, 14 April 1968. Investigation contained in Library of Congress, MIA files, Reel #284, Folder #106 (James Trimble).

[2716] 2/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS,p. 4; 2/26 ComdC Apr 68, Part II, p. 3.

[2717] Comments of Maj Gerald F. Kurth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775. Maj Kurth was S-3 of 2/26.

[2718] Comments of LtCol Francis J. Heath, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779. LtCol Heath was CO of 2/26.

[2719] Statement of Cpl J. E. Feger in Investigation, op. cit.

[2720] CG, 3rd MarDiv 090153Z/Aug68 to CG, FMFPAC, Subj: Recommendation for individual award (posthumous), in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file, PFC Edward Ulyses Masters.

[2721] Ibid. Cpl Feger led his men on 3 occasions to the crater to retrieve the KIA, only to be repelled by the mortars, sniper fire, and NVA grenades. [Statement of 2/Lt Peter A. Post in Bronze Star Medal file of Cpl Jacob E. Feger, II].

[2722] Statement of 2/Lt Post, op. cit.

[2723] 2/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 4; 2/26 ComdC Apr 68, Part II, p. 3.

[2724] email by Joseph Olszewski, Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board, posted 6 April 2002.

[2725] Letters from William T. Mitchell, III, 13 June 1983 and 28 April 1996. From personal experience, in the thick vegetation of the area, unless one maintains visual contact with the man before and behind, it's entirely possible to get lost in the high elephant grass and bamboo thickets near Hill 861.

[2726] Printed in the Khe Sanh Veterans Newsletter, No. 8 (June, 1989), p. 7. PFC Donald E. Eutzy served in Weapons, 3rd Platoon, G/2/26. Eutzy wrote another account of how his Christian faith was strengthened in the midst of the horror of battle ["Reflections," The Khe Sanh Veterans Newsletter, Issue #7 (October, 1988), pp. 6-7].

"I had a friend in Vietnam. His name was Russell 'Doc' Scarborough. The first time we met was on hill 558 at Khe Sanh. I had a bad infection in my trigger finger from a cut I received stringing barbed wire. I needed to see a corpsman and Doc was the corpsman for my platoon, so I went to see him.

"Doc was an odd-looking fellow. His clothes were baggy and his helmet sat lopsided on his head. He had dark hair, pale skin, a few days' bear growth, black-rimmed glasses, and an incurable smile he couldn't hide under his scraggly mustache. Actually, he looked like he was in the midst of a drinking binge, but of course, he wasn't.

"Doc welcomed me and asked for the problem. I showed him my finger. He studied it like a well-trained physician. Doc said, 'You have jungle rot. I'll have to lance it and give you something for the pain.' After a few weeks of treatment, my finger became normal. Over those weeks Doc Scarborough and I became very good friends. We talked about everything—our families, our friends, Vietnam, what we would do after the service, and we even shared our goody packages from home. But lancing fingers and talking about home wasn't all Doc did.

"He went on patrols and ambushes; up the hills we assaulted; quinine was passed out so we had a better chance of avoiding malaria. The water had to be checked for disease. Our feet had to be inspected for immersion foot. We needed salt tablets because of the heat. There was dysentery and hepatitis, and Doc never stopped. He took care of us, body, mind, and spirit—'a real good man!' I won't ever forget a friend like him.

"Heidi seemed contented with the story, snuggled closer and dozed off to sleep. I was silent again and thought about Russell—his face, his voice, and his kindness. I remembered our conversations and sharing our goody packages. I thought of the patrols, ambushes, and hills. I can't forget the quinine or salt tablets, and especially Doc's caring. I also remembered and will never forget that 'Doc' Scarborough lay down his life for his friends."

PFC Piazza was on top of the ridge directly west of the bomb crater at XD81264324 or slightly backwards from it, about 25-30 meters. It was 1030 or 1100. "I was looking directly at him when the burst from an AK-47 or small machine gun opened up. PFC Piazza closed his eyes and slumped forward very easily as he fell to the ground on his face."[2727]

After G-1 (2/Lt William M. Wentworth) and G-2 (2/Lt Robert D. Winn) reached the top of the hill, the Marines' 60mm mortar fire immediately eliminated a NVA machinegun and mortar position. All then withdrew.[2728]

1/Lt Jordan, an artillery forward observer from B/1/13 was killed while accompanying this patrol. He had only been with G/2/26 for one day[2729] and was some 30 feet from the 81s FO with G/2/26, LCPL Eric F. Smith. Smith had spotted a NVA mortar site and Jordan came to verify it. Lt Post, meanwhile, had given the order, "Let's get outta here!" and Smith took off as Lt Jordan continued to check the NVA mortar site, "and bang; he took a direct hit."[2730]

After Co "G" withdrew from the top of the hill, supporting arms were called from JACKSONVILLE (1/13), "..and we had a 2-hour wait, I repeat, a 2-hour wait, due to the fact that supply helicopters flew through the area and they wouldn't move out of the way. We had 2 hours under mortar fire. All this time we're sitting there, getting mortars and getting casualties, and nobody would fire for us."[2731] The Marines returned several times to attempt to retrieve their KIA, but took additional casualties each time. 15 NVA were spotted, very lightly armed and in plain view. They were taken under fire by M-60 machinegun fire. "I believe they were trying to lure us out into the open area. We found out later that their bunkers faced down in that direction which means that we would have been wiped out had we gone out there."[2732]

After going up and down the hill for 8 hours, G Co returned to Hill 558. "Since the contact occurred late and there were many delays in delivering fire support, the position was not secured prior to darkness. It was the policy of the Regiment to recall units prior to nightfall. The 6 Marines felled within the enemy's position were therefore not recovered."[2733] Casualties for the action: 4 KIA, 36 WIA (evacuated), 11 WIA (not evacuated), and 6 MIA.[2734] The position was bombarded by friendly fire throughout the night as plans were made for a 2-company assault on the position by Companies "F" and "G" the next morning.[2735] Bombardment "throughout the [2727] Statement of PFC Patrick A. Lidrick in Investigation, op. cit.

---

[2728] Comments of 2/Lt William M. Wentworth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779.

[2729] email from David Caldon, posted 15 August 2002 on the Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board.

[2730] Conversation with Eric Smith, late August 1996.

[2731] Comments of 2/Lt William M. Wentworth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779

[2732] Ibid.

[2733] 2/26 AAR, Opn PEGASUS, p. 4.

[2734] Ibid., p. 8.

[2735] Comments of LtCol Francis J. Heath, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779.

night" did not mean extensive prep as Lt Wentworth bitterly complained: "The area should have been bombed before we went back up there, and I don't mean just diddly bombing; I mean blowing the hell out of the place. Those people were dug in, and three or four rounds of artillery shells aren't going to do a damn thing, and that's all we got."[2736]

Units of the 1st Air Cavalry Division continued operations along Route 9. The heaviest fighting occurred in the 3rd Brigade's AO as 2-7 Cav continued its drive west on Route 9. NVA forces blocking the advance offered stubborn resistance, but in a day-long battle eventually abandoned their positions and fled to the west. Results of the fighting included 83 NVA KIA and 1 POW captured.[2737]

Meanwhile, 2-12 Cav was airlifted to Hill 471 to relieve the Marines of 1/9 on that position, permitting them to scour the land to the west. While 2 companies of 2-12 remained on Hill 471, 2 companies initiated an attack to the south toward Khe Sanh ville (XD846381). Also during the day 1-5 Cav, continued its attack on the old French Fort position. The 1-5 soldiers, receiving a heavy volume of NVA mortar fire, withdrew to LZs Wharton and Tom and the mission of seizing the French Fort was given to 2-5 Cav.[2738]

At 1320H, the 84th Co of the 8th Airborne Battalion, 3rd Airborne Task Force, was airlifted by I ACD aircraft into KSCB and linked up with elements of the 37th ARVN Ranger Battalion, marking the first link-up of forces at Khe Sanh[2739] (other than that which occurred on Hill 471).

One of the I ACD soldiers killed, PFC Ronald David Sparks, had married (12 August 1967) just prior to leaving for boot camp on 21 August 1967. Both he and his wife were 19. He had grown up in the Wolf Creek area of Narrows, Virginia, in Giles County. The 6-1 tall Sparks had excelled as a high school athlete (track, baseball, basketball, and a football full back) and his future wife was one of the cheerleaders. His wife was later to note that as she took him to the Roanoke, Virginia, airport on 12 January 1968 to begin his journey to Vietnam, "I felt, in my heart, I would never see him alive again. I certainly didn't want to think that, but I 'just knew.' Over 20 years passed before I found out that his mother had felt the same way."[2740] Sparks had been wounded 21 February during the Battle of Hue City, hospitalized in Japan, and then returned to duty.[2741] The CO of 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry, LtCol Richard S. Sweet, wrote in his condolence letter to Sparks' parents: "At approximately 2 AM, the base camp came under heavy enemy rocket and mortar fire. Your son was mortally wounded when his head was struck by fragments from an enemy rocket which landed almost directly on his position.. he died quickly.."[2742]

07 APRIL 1968

ADAME, PFC Gilbert Jimmie	G/2/26
ADKINS, CPL John	A/2-7 Cav
BAYES, PFC Thomas Joseph	G/2/26
CRASE, LCPL Lionel Russell	H&S/2/26
DOLBY, PFC Melvin Lester	F/2/26
GAINES, PFC Allen Joseph	G/2/26
JOHNSON, LCPL Eugene Melvin Jr.	G/2/26
LESAGE, LCPL Armand Paul	K/3/26
MARSON, PFC Rickey Joe	2/26
MC CASKEY, Maj Robert Walter[2743]	11th GS AvnCo
MC MURRAY, 1/Lt Fred Howell Jr.	Trp B, 1st Sq 9th Cav
MEADOWS, CPL Artis Wilbur Jr.	G/2/26
MOSES, PFC Clifton	F/2/26
MOUNT, LCPL John Edward	E/2/1
NASH, PFC Thomas Steven	E/2/1
NELSON, HN Roger Miller	H&S/2/26
OESTERREICH, CPL Tilo Rudolf	E/2/1
PEDA, 1/Lt Robert Charles	A Trp, 1stSq
QUATTLEBAUM, PVT John Franklin	F/2/26 9th Cav.
RANSBOTTOM, CPL Michael Lee	C/2-7 Cav
RICHARDSON, PFC James Douglas	F/2/26
SAMUELSON, SGT Robert L	A/2-7 Cav
SCHROEDER, CPL Donald Ray	F/2/26
SEE, SFC Otto William	A Trp, 1st Sq 9th Cav
SNYDER, LCPL John Marshall Jr.	G/2/26
WELLS, LCPL James Randall	F/2/26
WILEY, LCPL Gilbert	F/2/26
YOHN, LCPL William Leon	G/2/26
ZERBST, PFC Gilbert Leroy	F/2/26

The weather on Palm Sunday, 7 April 1968, was clear to partly cloudy skies with a visibility of 5 miles or

---

[2736] Comments of 2/Lt William M. Wentworth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779.
[2737] I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 7.
[2738] Ibid. [At 1152H, D/1-5 Cav at XD8637 received 70 rounds of unknown size mortar from XD847363 causing 1 KIA and 47 WIA. [Tab G, Mortar/Rocket Attack]].
[2739] Ibid.; Waldron and Beavers, op. cit., p. 43; Tolson, op. cit., p. 18.
[2740] Carolyn Sparks Edwards, "Ronald David Sparks," in Don Ward, The Faces Behind the Names, The Vietnam War, Vol. 2, Minnesota: The Memorial Press, 1999, p. 198.
[2741] Letter from Carolyn Sparks Edwards, 18 June 1997.
[2742] Letter from LtCol Richard S. Sweet, 7 May 1968 to Mr. and Mrs. Claude S. Sparks.
[2743] While Maj McCaskey is listed in the "green book" published by the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, Washington, D.C.: Vietnam Veterans Memorial, Directory of Names, 1982, p. 474, (listed on the Wall at 48E 44), he is not included in the "Coffelt Database" of Vietnam Casualty with Unit Designations, June, 2002, prepared by Richard Coffelt.

more.[2744] More important, it was to become extremely hot. "The sun was extremely bright and before noon the companies were bogged down, climbing the high ground with people who were about to experience heat exhaustion, so the movement was extremely slow, extremely difficult, and the time schedule was not met."[2745]

Plans were for 2 companies of 2/26 to continue the assault of the NVA-held hill where Co G became ensnared yesterday. "We called it Ridgeline 720."[2746] Co. "F" left Hill 558 under cover of darkness at 0500H and moved to an attack position on the northeastern flank of the NVA position (at XD810433), and at 0700, Co "G" departed Hill 558 and moved to attack the position from the western flank of the enemy-held objective.[2747] The mission of Co "F" was to lay down a base of fire for GOLF Company.[2748] "We moved out. It was a long hump. It was hot. We had a lot of people who got heat stroke. Everybody was tired—real tired."[2749] "It was quite hot, very hot, in fact. Our water was very low. The humping was very hard and rough, but the men were up to it.. We wanted to kick Charlie's ass."[2750] About a third of the way to the objective, the F-3 Platoon Commander (1/Lt Don A. Haggard) became a victim of heat exhaustion and the Platoon Sergeant was hurt in his leg; both were medevaced, and Sgt Robert H. Scott took over as Platoon Commander of F-3.[2751] The plan for Co "G" was to have G-1 approach up the north side and G-3 go up the east side. "We were supposed to be at the top of the ridge by light. About 11 o'clock in the morning we (3rd Platoon) three-fourths up the ridge. We were definitely not going to surprise anyone."[2752]

Although originally planned to reach a Line of Departure by noon, the Marines were not in position until approximately 1530 in the afternoon at which time a probing attack by GOLF Company was made to determine whether the NVA still occupied the position. If hit, they were to pull back, call in supporting arms, and then FOXTROT Company would move down the ridge into the attack, hitting the NVA position from their flank. The NVA permitted GOLF Company to reach almost the topographic crest at which time they unleashed a vicious volume of fire on the Marines including a mortar attack which was extremely accurate and difficult to avoid.[2753] "We [G-3] were to wait until the 1st Platoon reached the top. Their job was to chase? scare? the NVA toward us or 2nd Platoon. We could now see 1st Platoon moving onto the ridge top. Then it happened. Incoming was tremendous, small arms fire erupted. 1st Platoon was down. We were told to move up. As we stood for our assault, we were hit. Some of us dove into bomb craters. The incoming was unbelievable. We were pinned down in the crater. We had dying and dead Marines all over the ridge... Me and my best Marine friend went and got to Sgt Connell. He was hit and could not move. My friend was putting him on my back so I could carry him back. Then he was shot in the chest... I got to a machine gunner who had lost both legs. I gave him some water, he then died. [PFC Moses]. I took him to the crater. My friend and I then got to another gunner [Schroeder]. He was the 1st Platoon's gun squad leader. He was dying but alive."[2754]

G-2 was the point platoon moving with 1st squad on the left side of the finger and second squad on the right with 2/Lt Robert D. Winn, Jr., the Platoon Commander of G-2 and his radioman, PFC Gary W. Rodd, centered between them,[2755] when they came under automatic weapons fire and grenades, wounding PFC Rodd. LCPL Thomas J. Vinson, III, a fire team leader in 2nd Squad, G-2, volunteered to creep up on a ridge overlooking the bunker from which the fire came that wounded PFC Rodd and hit it with a LAW.[2756] The first LAW failed to fire—as did the second. The third time LCPL Vinson moved to retrieve a LAW and move to a position to fire it was successful. Shortly after firing it, LCPL Vinson was shot through his chest and received several other fragments in his body.[2757] LCPL James P. McCormick maneuvered his 3.5-in. rocket squad to a position dangerously exposed to the NVA fire to provide security for G-2. Ignoring hostile rounds impacting near him, he repeatedly advanced across the fire-swept terrain while as-

---

[2744] Gen Abrams 081058Z/Apr68, MAC 04709, Khe Sanh Report #64

[2745] Comments of Maj Gerald F. Kurth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775. Maj Kurth was the 2/26 S-3.

[2746] Letter from Joseph F. Beebe, undated [May, 1990]

[2747] Comments of LtCol Francis J. Heath, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779.

[2748] Comments of LCPL Anthony S. Tisler, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[2749] Comments of Cpl Rudy De La Garza, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775. De La Garza was a squad leader of F-1.

[2750] Comments of Cpl Winfield Trivette, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775. Trivette was a squad leader of machineguns attached to F-1.

[2751] Comments of Sgt Robert H. Scott, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775. Scott was Platoon Commander of Weapons Platoon, FOX-4 Actual.

[2752] Letter from Joseph F. Beebe, cited.

[2753] Comments of Maj Gerald F. Kurth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[2754] Letter from Joseph Beebe, cited. (Sgt Connell is listed as KIA on 8 April, undoubtedly having DOW; His Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) Citation notes: "Observing two injured Marines lying in an area dangerously exposed to the enemy fire, he fearlessly rushed across the hazardous terrain.. and was mortally wounded by the North Vietnamese fire.").

[2755] Statement of CPL Kenneth R. Evans in Bronze Star Medal file of LCPL Thomas J. Vinson, III.

[2756] LAW=M72 Light Anti-tank Assault Weapon.

[2757] Statement of 2/Lt Robert D. Winn, Jr., in Bronze Star Medal file of LCPL Thomas J. Vinson, III.

sisting casualties to covered positions. He also aggressively assaulted NVA bunkers on 2 occasions.[2758]

HASTY FOOT GOLF, Capt. Lee R. Overstreet, was up on the ridgeline maintaining constant coordination of the 2 assaulting platoons as he repeatedly exposed himself to hostile small arms fire and grenades to lead the charge, although painfully wounded twice.[2759] The NVA had set up machineguns and other small arms in much greater numbers than the previous day, and the Marines of Co "G" were unable to dislodge the enemy force.

About 1630, PFC Adame was killed by a sniper round through his chest while lying down.[2760] CPL David Donald Dumas was wounded three times attempting to reach Adame, and when he did, told 2/Lt Peter A. Post, "He's already dead" and HM3 Greg L. Bahny medevaced Dumas.[2761] At 1630, LCPL Eugene Johnson was killed trying to take a spider hole and LCPL John Snyder was killed by a bangalor torpedo while trying to retrieve Johnson. At 1700, CPL Artis Meadows was shot in the head while trying to kill a NVA sniper and at 1830, PFC Thomas Bayes was shot through the chest and killed by a sniper while pinned down.[2762] Adame, Bayes, Johnson, Meadows, and Snyder were all attached to G-1.[2763] LCPL William Yohn of G-2 was moved by 2/Lt Peter A. Post along with 5 other Marines to the crest, attempting to secure the left flank. Yohn said there were some bodies about 10 meters ahead of him that he thought he could reach. He crawled out, followed by PFC Charles J. Mack, and was near the body when he was hit in the left breast by sniper fire. PFC Mack shouted back to Lt Post that YOHN was dead.[2764]

As Co. "G" was unable to dislodge the NVA, it was withdrawn back down the slope into a supporting position to permit Co "F" to continue the attack along the long axis of the ridge.[2765] Following 12 sorties of fixed wing and napalm in addition to heavy artillery prep fire placed on the position, Co "F" commenced its attack.[2766] At 1530H, FOXTROT Company moved through the objective under heavy NVA 82mm mortar fire with two platoons up and one platoon back: F-1 (2/Lt Terry P. McNulty) on the left, F-2 (2/Lt William K. Wonders) on the right, and F-3 in the rear with 60mm moving just in front of them and the Co. XO and Gunny moving in the rear.[2767] Moving by fire team rushes, the Marines moved extremely fast and seized the right half of the high ground and moved down the ridgeline with initially light casualties. Their fire and maneuver was good, but they ran into trouble as they advanced the last third of the objective from mortars and small arms fire from a piece of ground that ran to their west, and sustained numerous casualties.[2768] "We started going across the top of the hill and beaucoup mortar rounds and shit was coming in."[2769]

PFC Michael F. Dagner captured the chaos: "Up we go – 'Move, there's men dying up there.' – Shit your pants and throw up. Mortars walking right down to us – down! – funny noises – gurgling of a body 5 feet away – roll him over – no holes – fear and shell shock – he's completely lost it – medevac – back up the hill – more mortars – man just ahead – he's missing his abdomen and everything else below – keep on moving – bodies all over the hill – Marines and gooks – corpsmen running around nuts – groups of walking wounded coming down, alone or with 1 or 2. 'I don't want to die, I don't want to die!!' His knees smashed open, helped down by two other Marines wounded also – his left leg bent back, locked in – heel pushed tight to his ass. Utilities still shiny green, no red mud worked in yet – what a baptism – keep moving up."[2770]

During the assault, both F-1 and F-2 lost their platoon commanders from NVA fire; they had been up front with their troops. When they became casualties, subordinate commanders continued the assault. Cpl De La Garza, who had only just been assigned as a squad leader, ended up as the acting Platoon Commander by the time the assault concluded.[2771] LCPL Paul M. Keast, a squad leader, took over as Platoon Commander of his platoon.[2772] CPL De La Garza, now in charge of G-1, moved the squads forward in fire team rushes, throwing grenades ahead of them. "We got to about a hundred to

---

[2758] Statements of 2/Lt Peter A. Post and LCPL Robert E. Chesnut in Silver Star Medal file of LCPL James P. McCormick.

[2759] Statement of 2/Lt Robert D. Winn, Jr., in Bronze Star Medal file of Capt Lee R. Overstreet.

[2760] Statement of PFC John A. Ambrifi, Encl (6) in Investigation, op. cit.

[2761] Statement of 2/Lt Peter A. Post, Encl (4) in Investigation, op. cit. 2/Lt Post was the Co "G" XO.

[2762] Statement of PFC John A. Ambrifi, Encl (6) in Investigation, op. cit.

[2763] Statement of J. W. Arnn, Jr., Investigating Officer, Encl (1) in Investigation, op. cit.

[2764] Statement of 2/Lt Peter A. Post, Encl (4) in Investigation, op. cit.

[2765] Statement of LtCol Francis J. Heath, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779.

[2766] Ibid..

[2767] Comments of Capt Charles F. Divelbiss, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775. Capt Divelbiss was CO of Co F/2/26.

[2768] Statement of Maj Gerald F. Kurth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775. CPL Rudy De La Garza noted, "This is the first time I've seen fire team rushes work as well as it did. I believe if we hadn't used fire team rushes we would have probably been totally annihilated. It worked out fine, but as soon as we got more than half-way, we found out that our Platoon Commander was gone; he was hit by a mortar." [Comments of CPL De La Garza, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775].

[2769] Statement of LCPL Stanley J. Jarczewski, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[2770] Letter of Michael Dagner, 19 Oct 1987.

[2771] Ibid.

[2772] Bronze Star Medal file on LCPL Paul M. Keast.

fifty meters from the top of the hill and I got a call to pull off our platoon on the south slope of the hill. I knew how it'd feel that we pull off then. We'd take more casualties and then fell useless, and I knew the men could take it. Most of the guys were yelling to Charlie to come out of his hole and face us hand to hand. I called back and told them, hell, we can take this damn hill and we want it. The 'six' (that is the Captain [Overstreet]) called up and asked who it was, and I said it was the PAPA ONE ACTUAL, my call sign, and he said, 'Well, take your hill then.' So we got back on line, moved on fire team rushes again, and we moved right over the top of this hill, real fast. We started getting set in and the mortar barrage was coming in pretty heavy by then. We had to move through the mortar barrage and we couldn't stop. Some of the men would yell over to me that somebody was hit. We'd just throw a battle dressing on him, yell for the 'squid up,'[2773] and the 'squid' would take care of him.

"We had this one 'squid,' Doc [HN Roger] Nelson [who] did an outstanding job running from one Marine to another, just kept bandaging them up and taking them to the LZ and come running back up and never seemed to stop to think that somebody was out there trying to kill him. Bullets were bounding all around him and he just kept going."[2774]

Sgt Robert H. Scott, the Weapons Platoon Commander who had taken over G-3 when the Platoon Commander was evacuated, was working on a wounded Marine when the NVA dropped 3 mortars into the hole where he was, wounding his radioman who caught a big piece of shrapnel in his face. While working on both of them, Doc Roger Nelson took over caring for the two wounded, freeing up Sgt Scott to lead his platoon.[2775]

HN Nelson was killed while medically assisting another wounded Marine.[2776] "He went down to help one of the Marines out and got hit in the leg, bandaged up his leg, turned around, started helping the Marine out again, and he got shot in the back and was killed."[2777]

PFC Michael F. Dagner later wrote: "Running down the hill now – damn, hot & sweaty – 'Hey you guys, here's one – hurry' – grabbing his head, what's the hurry, he's dead!' Flip him on the ground, thud – just a lifeless, bump – staring, shaking – shocked – Look at your damn utilities – blood soaked – puke. A kid yells, 'Hey, what the f--- you doing, that's our corpsman.' 'F--- you man, he's dead!' Cross words – 2 punches – both going up the hill – more, countless wounded – all day."[2778]

The other Navy Corpsmen with Co "F" also were heroes of the day. The G-3 Platoon Corpsman, HM3 James E. Updike, while pinned down by sniper fire from 2 directions and not being able to move, attended to 5 wounded while standing on his knees directly in the line of fire.[2779] HM3 Miles Edward Constantine, the G-1 Platoon Corpsman repeatedly exposed himself to enemy fire to recover and aid the wounded, although seriously wounded himself.[2780]

Contact continued until 2030H with the Marines at XD814434.[2781] As the NVA presence remained, the Marines were exhausted, and it was becoming dark, 2/26 requested Regiment to permit Cos "G" and "F" to remain on the objective for the night, but were denied the request and the companies returned to the 2/26 CP on Hill 558.[2782] The move was completed at 0030, 08 April.[2783] 12 Marine MIA from Co "G" remained on the objective. CPL Joseph F. Beebe, moving the KIA, had arrived at the LZ only to discover everyone had already departed! "We were alone, it was now dark and we were both paralyzed with what had happened. We thought that we should dig in to the side of the crater and stay for the night but decided against it. We then decided to get back to Hill 558 which was approximately 1-2 miles to the northeast of our position. We made it back somehow."[2784]

Fortunately, they departed the enemy-held position, for over the next two days (April 8th and 9th) it was struck with fixed wing air strikes, artillery, and mortar fire. During the night of the 9th alone, 1202 rounds of artillery were fired on the position. At 0630 on 10 April, three companies of 2/26 moved against the position, finding it abandoned.[2785] Captain David L. Caldon, the 2/26 Battalion Air Officer ("HASTY FOOT ONE FOUR") air-evacuated from the position (XD812432): 8 whole bodies, 1 partial torso (no legs, 1 part arm), 1 leg, 1 arm, 1 hand, and miscellaneous pieces of flesh and bone.[2786]

[2773] "Squid" was Marine slang in Vietnam for a Navy Corpsman.

[2774] Statement of CPL Rudy De La Garza, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[2775] Statement of Robert H. Scott, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[2776] Statement of Capt Charles F. Divelbiss, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[2777] Statement of CPL Rudy De La Garza, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[2778] Letter of Michael Dagner, 19 October 1987.

[2779] Statement of LCPL Steven E. Miller in Navy Commendation Medal file of HM3 James E. Updike.

[2780] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 30 Jul 1968, in Bronze Star Medal file, HM3 Miles Edward Constantine.

[2781] 26Mar, Periodic Opns Summary Rpt #6 (PEGASUS) 062000H-072000H APR 68, Para 8.C.

[2782] Statement of Maj Gerald F. Kurth, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[2783] Statement of LtCol Francis J. Heath, HQMC Oral History Tape #2779.

[2784] Letter from Joseph Beebe, undated. Beebe was a squad leader of machineguns with F-3.

[2785] Comments of LtCol Francis J. Heath, HMC Oral History Tape #2779.

[2786] Statement of Capt David L. Caldon, Encl (2) to Investigation, op. cit.

PFC Michael F. Dagner of F/2/26 wrote: "Back up the hill – My God – bodies – many – bloated already – beetles – stink – battle's over."[2787]

Co. E/2/1, pushing westward along Route 9 towards Khe Sanh was helilifted from LZ KIWI (XD966465) to Objective #21 (XD947444). When the lift was completed and the objective secured at 1510H, Co E established a company patrol base on the objective and conducted search and destroy operations until darkness. At 1615H, while in the vicinity of XD955493, E/2/1 requested 81mm fired on suspected NVA routes of withdrawal at XD944487. The WP marking round was on target and the unit requested "fire for effect" using HE. The rounds impacted on the Marines at XD955493 causing 3 friendly KIA and one WIA (evacuated) NBC.[2788]

By 7 April, engineers working on Route 9 had completely reconstructed over 8 kilometers of the road and had replaced or rebuilt 5 of the 9 bridges to Khe Sanh.[2789] The 2nd Brigade continued its attack on the French Fort as the 2-5 Cav air assaulted to XD883382 and then attacked west into the fort, seizing it.[2790] 2-7 Cav continued moving west on Route 9. 2 Army helicopters crashed at XD927497 and XD780559, killing three US soldiers.[2791]

1/Lt Fred McMurray was the pilot of an OH-13S observation helicopter (63-9084) on an armed reconnaissance mission in the vicinity of Khe Sanh. An AH-1G chase ship accompanied him on the mission. Capt McMurray, flying low level, reported spotting camouflaged bunkers. As he marked the target with a smoke grenade for the AH-1G to shoot its rockets, he reported enemy troops and began engaging them with his door gunner. At 0716 Capt McMurray's aircraft was then struck by enemy weapons and crashed at XD925512 and burned. Sgt James J. Powers, the door gunner, was spotted in a bomb crater and air-lifted from the area. Although thrown clear of the aircraft, he was badly burned. The next morning a search party found 2 badly burned chest protectors and one flight helmet belonging to Sgt Powers. "There were definite signs that someone had been through the wreckage. No evidence of Capt McMurray's fate or whereabouts was found except for footprints and a freshly made trail leading away from the aircraft. Since the observer, Sgt Powers, received extensive critical burns prior to being thrown clear of the aircraft, it is reasonable to assume that Capt McMurray received the same or possibly more critical burns. Evidence at the scene indicated that he was probably taken from the aircraft or crash site by enemy personnel. Since no information has ever been received to show that he was captured, it may be presumed that he died of his burns, if not killed in the crash, and was buried by the enemy some distance from the crash site at an unknown location."[2792]

08 APRIL 1968

CONNELL, SGT Edwin Douglas	F/2/26
GROSHONG, HN Allen Eberly	F/2/1
LINDSAY, PFC Philip Trieste	A/1/9
PHELPS, PFC Randall Carl	A/3rd Eng
PRUITT, CPL George Alan	H&S/2/26
SEDILLO, CPL Juan Natividad	H&S/1/9
SMITH, HN Richard John	B/3rd Recon

SGT Connell, although listed as KIA this date, received mortal wounds on 07 April.[2793] Joseph F. Beebe (Squad Leader of machineguns with F-3), recalls carrying Sgt Connell, still alive. "Sergeant Connell—he made it to the [hospital] ship. We got him to the ship that was off the coast. I think he died a day or two later. When I carried him back to the chopper, he was still alive."[2794]

At 0400H, the 3rd Airborne Task Force received a ground and mortar attack at LZ SNAKE (XD808378). Contact was broken at 0630H with 72 NVA KIA and 11 KIA for the ARVNs.[2795]

At 0600, with C/1/9 as point platoon, Bn 1/9 crossed the LOD [Line of Departure] and moved to take Hill 689. By 0720, 1/9 had secured Hill 689 without making contact. Between 1500 and 1630, the Marines of 1/9 on Hill 689 received 38 rounds of 82mm mortar fire causing 9 KIA, 27 serious WIA, and 1 NBC.[2796] Capt Charles B. Hartzell, the S3A of 1/9 reported it as a "registered mortar barrage [giving] us very heavy casualties—about 20 wounded and killed in a very short time by shooting a heavy concentration in on us before we could knock that position out."[2797] Capt Ralph H. Flagler (CO of C/1/9 from 15 Feb 68) notes that Hill 689 "had been previously zeroed in by enemy mortars ranging all the way from 120s down through 60s. Once our position was estab-

---

[2787] Letter from Michael Dagner, 19 Oct 1987.
[2788] 1st Mar AAR Opn PEGASUS, pp. 28 and 29. WP=White Phosphorus; HE=High Explosive; NBC=Non-Battle Casualty.
[2789] Waldron and Beavers, op. cit., p. 46.
[2790] I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, pp. 3, 7.
[2791] FMFPAC SITREP 110325Z/Apr68, SITREP #1108.
[2792] I ACD 090945Z/Apr68, Subj: Bright Light and "Summary of Casualty Status Events" in Library of Congress MIA microfilm, Reel #284, Folder #107.
[2793] Vide notes for 07 April.
[2794] Conversation with Joseph Beebe, 09 February 2006.
[2795] I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 8; Waldron and Beavers, op. cit., p. 47.
[2796] 1/9 AAR Opn PEGASUS; 1/9 ComdC Apr68. Note: only 2 KIA are listed in the Wash, D.C., Vietnam Memorial. The 1/9 AAR indicates that for 09 April, the battalion received 18 rounds of 82mm mortars causing 2 KIA and 3 serious WIA. The 9 KIA, however, remain unexplained. The error might possibly be attributed to the 9 WIA of A/1/9.
[2797] Comments of Capt Charles B. Hartzell, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

lished.. we were taken under fire."[2798] The mortar barrage wounded Capt Flagler, and he was medevaced that afternoon. Also wounded and medevaced was the Company Executive Officer, and Co C was down to 2 Second Lieutenants and 2 staff NCOs.[2799]

PFC Randall C. Phelps (a combat engineer attached to C/1/9 to do demolitions) perished in the barrage while helping to load wounded Marines aboard a medevac helicopter.[2800] Another Marine of C/1/9, PFC Richard R. Richey, assisted the Co. Corpsman to move WIA, refusing to seek cover as he moved them to the LZ, although wounded in the initial barrage himself. Although wounded a second time while moving the WIA, he ignored his painful wounds to assist in moving the casualties until all had been evacuated.[2801] PFC Victory M. Lamas, Jr., also wounded in the barrage, nevertheless assisted in moving the WIA to the LZ.[2802] PFC Richard R. Richey and HM2 Robert J. Gaspard (both serving with C/1/9) were recommended for the Silver Star Medal.[2803] The initial mortar barrage wounded approximately 33 Marines.[2804] A call went out to the platoons to send their Corpsmen to the Company CP. When the first chopper arrived, HN Kenneth A. Plock, was wounded, but after dressing his own wound, HN Plock remained in the LZ to treat the wounded despite a continuing mortar barrage. When a second chopper arrived, HN Plock was again wounded, this time more severely, but again, after dressing his own wound, he continued to direct the treatment of others and was one of the last men to be evacuated.[2805] HM3 Daniel P. Baker likewise attended the WIA for more than an hour, undaunted by continuous NVA mortar fire around him. After all the casualties had been evacuated, he continued to search the area for additional wounded men, ensuring all were accounted for.[2806]

2/Lt Francis Brian. Lovely, Jr.'s First Platoon, A/1/9, secured the northwestern slope of Hill 689 and notes that Co C, while digging in their mortars high on the hill, unfortunately bunched up a few people and thus took casualties. Lovely's A-1 took 9 WIA and 3 KIA from that mortar barrage.[2807]

PFC David William Moody (A/1/9) remembers a large round landed between the feet of one of the Navy Corpsmen, HN D. A. Roberts (H&S/1/9), but it didn't detonate! The squad took a break in a large crater, probably from a 1,000-pound bomb, a good 25-ft. in diameter and approximately 7-ft. deep. CPL Dewey E. Troup told the squad to stand down and spread out as he crested the top of the crater. Suddenly an explosion temporarily blinded Moody: "I remember saying, 'O my God, I'm dead—but I can't be dead if I can talk to myself! I couldn't see, but my sight came back to me like in 3 or 4 minutes. I could feel the warm fluids coming down off my head. When my sight came back, I looked down at my arm, and it was ripped open. [PFC John M.] Silenovich was looking at me and said, 'Well, I won't see you no more! He tried to put a bandage on top of my head, and it just wouldn't stay. I had blood on my jaw, blood on my leg, and my arm was ripped open. I looked up, and there was [PFC Thomas Francis] Campbell. I kept talking to him, but Campbell didn't move. I could see [PFC George E.] Einhorn in graphic pain, tormented by the pain. His legs looked like they were doubled under him. Actually, most of it was just skin. It was just skin, dangling off of his legs and back. [CPL David R.] Ford was with him. Troup was trying to pick himself up because the explosion had blown him over the side of the hill."[2808]

LCPL Anthony C. Borja, Jr., the Bn CO's radioman, wrote of the mortar barrage: "There was a large bomb crater; the '14' [air officer] radio operator, an American Indian nicknamed 'Chief', another radio operator, and I used as a ready-made foxhole.. We were lounging and enjoying the break when I suddenly got that 'itch,' an urge to move—something bad was going to happen. I obeyed that feeling and climbed up the side of the crater and sat down along its rim. The two down below said I was crazy and remained in the crater. As I yelled down, the whooshing sounds of two 82mm mortars could be heard from the west., I flattened myself and then heard the sounds of incoming rounds.. The bomb crater was filled with smoke and a cloud of dust.. The 82 round had hit almost directly in the center of the crater. The shrapnel flew up at such an angle as to catch both Chief and the other radio operator in the head area. The other radioman was headless and at first glance, Chief appeared

---

[2798] Comments of Capt Ralph H. Flagler, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[2799] Ibid.

[2800] Statements of 1/Lt Paul C. Hopper and Sgt Harold W. Hudson in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file of PFC Randall C. Phelps. The award Citation notes that on 3 February [should be 5 February] during the NVA counterattack against Hill 471, PFC Phelps bravely remained in his position on the perimeter despite NVA white phosphorus and small arms fire hitting near his position, delivering accurate and devastating fire on an estimated squad of NVA.

[2801] Statements of CPL Robert S. Applebaum and CPL Timothy J. Haley in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Richard R. Richey

[2802] Bronze Star Medal Citation, PFC Victory M. Lamas, Jr.

[2803] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, HM3 Daniel P. Baker.

[2804] Bronze Star Medal Citation, HM3 Daniel P. Baker.

[2805] Statement of 2/Lt William C. Connelly in Bronze Star Medal file of HN Kenneth A. Plock.

[2806] Bronze Star Medal file on HM3 Daniel P. Baker.

[2807] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., HQMC Oral History Tape #2803. (The "3 KIA" figure might refer to 3 A/1/9 KIA listed for 9 April: PFCs Campbell, Lindsay, and LCPL Mulgrew, who may have been reported the next day).

[2808] Taped comments of David William Moody, 9 June 1994. Note: Campbell is listed as KIA the following day, 9 April, perhaps DOW. Campbell was Lt Lovely's radioman.

to be unhurt—but he was not... I noticed that the right side of his head was bloody with the brain fully exposed... Chief grabbed my hand and asked if he was going to die—his last coherent words... For the next 45 minutes, I sat by him as he talked nonsense, crying and mumbling. I placed dressing after dressing on his wound as the brains began to slowly ooze out... Chief, despite his horrendous injury, was still alive, holding my hand and mumbling. I soon ran out of dressings.. The corpsman showed up as did some other Marines. Using ponchos, they loaded up the one dead Marine, then we loaded up Chief and carried him up the steep side of the crater to an awaiting CH-46. Chief was still hanging in there. The corpsman had to pry his hand from mine."[2809]

CPL Juan Sedillo (nickname, "Chico") was the radioman for the 1/9 XO, Maj. J. A. Donnelly, standing next to him when he was hit. Donnelly had taken him as his radioman because he was going to leave in about 2 days for a special communications school, Communications Security School. "He didn't know why he was going or anything else, but I knew. He just got it, in that crater. He took his helmet off, and got hit right in the head. I said some prayers with him, but I knew he wasn't going to make it... He was very bright, a good man."[2810] Like the man in World War I who reached out for a butterfly and was killed, Sedillo undoubtedly was in touch with the day, wanted some fresh air, and had momentarily removed his helmet.

One of his fellow Marines remembers: "He was a great Marine and the sad part is, he had less than 2 weeks left and could have gone to the rear, but he knew we were short-handed on Pegasus, so he stayed out in the field. He was that kind of individual. I shared a hole with him for 2 nights after we took Hill 471, so I heard an earful of his immediate plans for when he was to arrive home from Nam. He had many relatives and they had an eat planned."[2811] PFC Lance C. Larson, another radioman with 1/9, recalls the scene in which Co "C" passed through the Bn CP group at the base of Hill 689: "I saw 'Chico' standing there next to the Major [Maj Donnelly], and I said, 'Hey, Chico, what'd you say? You'd expect him—because he's standing next to the Major—to say something like, 'Yeah, too bad!' or something like that. He says, 'This sucks!' Just as loud as he could, and right next to the Major! I just about died laughing."[2812] About 15 minutes later, the mortar barrage struck the Marines and "Chico" was killed. PFC Larry Allen Jones (H&S/1/9) had both his legs blown off when a round landed in his hole.[2813] PFC Jones died of wounds on 24 April.

At approximately 0900, the staff and officers of Co "B", 3rd Reconnaissance Battalion, were meeting while their corpsmen were outside to burn garbage out of the trenches, one of whom was HN Richard J. Smith. Following a tremendous explosion and tremendous commotion outside, HN Smith dashed into their meeting, screaming. He was in flames. Several Marines attempted to catch him, but he continued to run wild. SSGT Delbert G. Weidler, calmly caught and restrained him, sustaining numerous burns over his own body.[2814] Smith "was burnt very, very badly. About the only thing he had left on him was the bottoms of his boots; everything else was just about burned off. I can remember peeling skin off of him. He was burnt from his head to his toe."[2815] Smith had been using kerosene but needed some more and took JP-4 which he threw on the fire. The wind changed and it blew back on him.[2816] HN Smith kept yelling, "Get me to the Philippines!" His parents worked there at Clark Air Force Base. He was conscious, talkative, but died of shock at DaNang.[2817] HN Smith was his parents' only child.[2818]

Co F/2/1 made a helicopter assault from LZ KIWI to Objective #20 (XD951480) from 1010 to 1026H where they established a patrol base from which they patrolled the area.[2819] One of the company corpsmen, HN Groshong, was killed when his mule hit a mine.[2820]

At 0800H, soldiers of 2-7 Cav successfully cleared Route 9 to KSCB and effected a link-up with the 26th Marine Regiment.[2821] The 3rd Brigade airlifted its command post into KSCB and Col. Campbell was given the mission of securing the area, which was done after the 2-7 Cav successfully cleared Route 9 to the base and linked up with the 26th Marines.[2822] Also today, the remains of WO1 Gerald L. McKinsey of the 282nd Assault Helicopter Company, who had been MIA on their assault on the Old French Fort on 21 January 1968, were recovered. The entire area of the crash was searched by Sgt Farmer,

---

[2809] CPL Anthony C. Borja, Jr., "Khe Sanh Memories," written for his daughter, Elizabeth; printed in Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue #43 (Fall/Winter, 1998), p. 33.
[2810] Conversation with Joseph Donnelly, 30 August 1994.
[2811] Letter from Lance C. Larson, 9 February 1994.
[2812] Interview of Lance C. Larson, no date, Eisenhower Center.
[2813] Ibid.
[2814] Statement of 2/Lt Michael M. Waddell and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Navy and Marine Corps Medal file of SSGT Delbert G. Weidler.
[2815] Conversation with Richard D. Hagewood, 11 June 1988. Hagewood was one of the Recon Company Corpsmen.
[2816] Ibid.
[2817] Conversation with David Doehrman, 4 February 1984 and 1 March 1997.
[2818] Letter from Mrs. John Smith, 27 May 1968.
[2819] 1st Mar AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 30.
[2820] email from SSGT Charles V. Thompson, Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board, posted 10 August 2002.
[2821] I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 8; FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, April, 1968, p. 10.
[2822] Tolson, "Pegasus," op. cit., p. 18.

SP4 Wallace and soldiers of Co C, 2-5 Cav, searching 2 hours for remains and other identification media.[2823]

09 APRIL 1968

CAMPBELL, PFC Thomas Francis	A/1/9
FERRY, LCPL Ray Leonard III	A/3rd AT
FRANCAVILLA, LCPL John F.	I/3/26
FRAZIER, LCPL Ronald Leon	C/1/9
GARBER, CPL Charles W. Jr.	C/1/9
GREEN, PFC Claude Hewitt	E/2/1
JACKSON, SSGT Billy Lee	F/2/1
KIDD, PFC Phillip Meridith	C/1/9
KISSLING, CPL Benjamin Kaon	D/2/12
LANE, SGT Louis Michael	K/3/26
LINDSAY, PFC Philip Trieste	A/1/9
MULGREW, LCPL Kevin Spear	A/1/9

(For PFC Campbell, PFC Lindsay, and LCPL Mulgrew, see notes for 8 April 1968). PFC David William Moody, while acknowledging the date of 9 April for Campbell, claims "I'll put it this way: the reason I'm alive today is because he was in front of me. When I could finally open up my eyes, he was dead. There were no signs [of life]. He died that day. I think what happened was, because of all the medevacs, they didn't do anything about it in the morgue [Graves Registration] until the next day."[2824] PFC John M. Silinovich (A/1/9) recalls being at the bottom of the crater and Campbell up on the top rim when the shrapnel came right up and got him. Silinovich remembers how Campbell helped other Marines as they moved up hill: "Here he is, carrying a radio, and he's still helping people go up the hill. He was just a good guy."[2825]

At 0720H, 1/9 on Hill 689 received 18 rounds of NVA 82mm mortar resulting in 2 KIA and 4 WIA.[2826] CPL Timothy J. Haley remembers: "Perimeters were set up and I busily placed my gun squads in strategic locations with instructions to dig in fast. Secure in the knowledge that this was being accomplished, I jumped into a NVA gun pit and was eating a can of chicken and noodles when we were mortared with BIG STUFF. Still, unconcerned, I continued to eat. Next thing I knew, [CPL Robert S.] Applebaum from Weapons Platoon was leaning over my hole crying that I had to come quick—I had just lost my whole section. My reply was 'Bullshit, they're all dug in.' He said, 'No,' that I was to come quick! I left the safety of the hole to view a sight of wholesale carnage—wounded everywhere. First Garber's Squad, Garber dead, 2 or 3 more wounded. Next, Frazier's squad: Frazier dead, Doc torn up bad. The X.O. was hit, the Gunny was hit (who passed the company ledger he kept to me), and the Captain was hit. My last squad was decimated. Some officer had moved them from where they had dug in and now they were wiped out. I cried harder than I ever had. I was responsible for these guys and they were all gone."[2827] Both Frazier and Garber were Squad Leaders. "Frazier had gone to Australia on R&R and came back and gave me one of those Australian military logos that I think goes on their hats, and I had it for 20, 23 years, and when I went to the Wall, I put it down on the ground by his name, and a Purple Heart there for those guys."[2828]

At 1115H, 3/26 received enemy machinegun and 120mm mortar fire from NVA positions southwest of XD777437, damaging one CH-46 helicopter and causing 1 KIA and 13 WIA (evacuated).[2829] HM3 David Steinberg shared a bunker with LCPL John F. Francavilla, a mortarman. "We had spent the entire 77 days talking. He'd come down the hill from the top of 881 and we talked and we talked."[2830] One day the cry came, "Corpsman up!" Steinberg left Francavilla in the bunker to attend to the WIA. When Steinberg returned, the bunker was gone and so was Francavilla: it had taken a hit; his friend was dead. "When I came back to that area where I had spent most of my time, they were putting what remained of Francavilla in a plastic bag. A mortar round had come right into the trenchline. I spent the next 16 years denying I knew Francavilla was killed, that there by the grace of God probably my name would have been next [to] if someone hadn't needed a Doc Dave. I've never forgotten that."[2831]

General Westmoreland may have reported that 9 April was the first time since 20 January 1968 that Khe Sanh received no incoming enemy fire,[2832] but John

---

[2823] DD 896, Field Search Record, signed by Sgt Jackie Farmer of 625th S&S Co (DS), dated 9 Apr 1968.
[2824] Conversation with David William Moody, 27 June 1994.
[2825] Conversation with John Silinovich, 28 August 1994.
[2826] 1/9 AAR Opn PEGASUS.
[2827] Tim Haley, "Brief Synopsis of My Khe Sanh Experience," in his letter of 12 December 1995. Haley was with 60mm mortars. Note: the description seems to apply to events of the previous day. Again, as with Campbell, Lindsay, and Mulgrew, it may be that the KIAs were not officially recorded until 9 April, but were killed on 8 April.
[2828] Conversation with Tim Haley, 31 December 1995.
[2829] 26Mar, Periodic Operations Report (PEGASUS) 082000-092000H APR68, Para 8.D. The 3/26 ComdC for Apr68 notes that at 1030H, 9 Apr 1968, Co I received approx. 35 82mm incoming rounds causing 2 USMC KIA and 11 USMC WIA. The same information is reported in the 3/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 3.
[2830] Conversation with David Steinberg, 21 May 1989.
[2831] Taped comments of David Steinberg, no date [ca, December, 1987]; Comments by Steinberg at Khe Sanh Veterans reunion at Nashville, TN, 21 July 1990, printed in the Khe Sanh Veterans Newsletter, Issue #12 (November, 1990), p. 16.
[2832] Gen Westmoreland 101130Z/Apr68, MAC 04795, Khe Sanh Report #66, para. 3. In an official listing of USMC KIA, LCPL Ferry is listed as killed: "Frag wds body from undetermined explosion while helping to load truck with Hargesheimer was standing next to LCPL Ray Ferry when one round came in and exploded, wounding 6, none seriously except for Ferry. "He lived for 3 – 4 minutes... I still think of Ray. He was just 18 and the closest friend I had at Khe Sanh. I still remember him lying there gasping for breath."[2833] Later, Hargesheimer wrote that "Ray was one of the funniest guys I ever met. No matter how terrible the situation, Ray would say something funny and make life at Khe Sanh a little more bearable. As he was unloading some old 106mm ammo crates, a lone NVA mortar round landed just a few feet away. Most of the shrapnel was absorbed by the old ammo, but Ray was struck in the aorta by a single, small piece of shrapnel. Despite heroic efforts by doctors at Charlie Med, Ray died of his wounds."[2834]

From 0725H, Co E/2/1 conducted search and destroy operations from Objective #21 (XD947496) to Objective #22 (XD961497), and at 1718H, the Company was helilifted from Objective 22 to LZ STUD and at darkness consolidated defensive positions at XD997482.[2835] At 1640H, while moving toward a hill at XD967500, E/2/1 at XD966500 suffered several heat casualties: 1 KIA NBC (PFC Claude H. Green) and 2 NBC (medevaced).[2836]

On 9 April, 1-12 Cav seized the old Lang Vei Special Forces Camp (XD795360) in the face of limited enemy resistance.[2837]

10 APRIL 1968

BRANAM, SGT Ronnie Franklin	A/2-7 Cav
ROBINSON, CPL Lionel Lareu	A/1/9
WALKER, SP4 Tommy Dale	C/1-12 Cav
WILLIAMS, 1/Lt Maxie Raymond	A/1/26

CPL Robinson died of acute barbiturate intoxication.[2838]

The weather at Khe Sanh was clear to partly cloudy skies with good ceilings and visibility.[2839]

1/Lt Maxie Raymond Williams, Jr. (known to Marine peers as "Ray" and to his family as "Spike"), 22 years old during the Siege battle, was the son of Col Maxie R. Williams, Sr., who served in the Marine Corps during World War II, first as Assistant Operations Officer of 1/2 where he served in Tulagi and Guadalcanal, and then as Company Commander of B/1/2 where he participated in the assault and seizure of Tarawa for which action he was awarded the Navy Cross and his first Purple Heart. In 1944 he was again wounded while leading B/1/2 in the assault and seizure of Saipan.[2840]

Lt Williams, 6-ft, 2-in. tall was admired and respected by all the men who knew him while he commanded A-3.[2841] While in high school at Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico, he became an Eagle Scout and lettered in varsity sports at the high school there. (After his death, the football stadium there was named in his honor). In May, 1967, he graduated as part of Basic Class 5-67 from The Basic School. His father retired from the Marine Corps as a Colonel in August, 1967.[2842] On 10 October, he became Platoon Commander of Third Platoon, Co. "A",[2843] and was to lead approximately 75 platoon patrols and participate in 30 company patrols and 2 battalion operations. He was the commander of the outpost atop Hill 950 during the siege for three months (Jan – Apr 1968).[2844]

On 8 April, 1/26 participated in the general outbreak from the Combat Base, with 1/9 moving to the south towards Hill 689 and 2/26 patrolling to the north. 1/26 moved to the Rock Quarry area and on 9 April, the rifle companies fanned out from this location to sweep the eastern side of the valley. A/1/26 had set in for the night at XD826416.[2845]

CPL Robert R. Spurgeon, 2nd Squad Leader, 3rd Platoon, A/1/26, remembers walking through the area, devetated from B-52 saturation of the area. The Marines were well spread due to the open terrain. "It was really hot. Everybody was getting tired, and then that boy, Pruitt started crying and he flops down and says he's not going anywhere else. I looked at him and I said, 'Boy, tell me what the NVA will do to you if you get away!' So I start to take off [on him], and the Lieutenant, off to my left, said, 'Corporal Spurgeon, you can't do that.' So I went back and I slapped Pruitt's helmet off and grabbed him by the hair and started dragging him, and the Lieutenant said, 'Corporal Spurgeon, you can't do that either!' I said, 'I'm not going to carry him and I'm not going to make any of my men [carry him] because they can just ammunition," in the "Viet Nam Casualties Non Hostile dead" category. [HQMC Memorandum from DN [J.F. Hogsett, Jr.] to AO1C, Attn: WO Helbringer, 15 April 1968, Subj: Viet Nam Casualties, p. 7.

---

[2833] Letter of John Hargesheimer, 20 July 1985.

[2834] Letter from John Hargesheimer, postmarked 17 August 2004.

[2835] 1stMar AAR Opn PEGASUS, pp. 32-33.

[2836] Ibid., p. 34.

[2837] I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 3.

[2838] HQMC Memorandum from DN [J.G. Hogsett, Jr., By Direction] to AO1C, 6 May 1968, Subj: Viet Nam Casualties, p. 10

[2839] Gen Westmoreland 111231Z/Apr68, MAC 04845, Khe Sanh Report #67.

[2840] Wayne, Patrick R., "Alpha-Three Actual, First Lieutenant Maxie Raymond 'Spike' Williams, Jr., USMC, A Khe Sanh Platoon Commander," unpublished manuscript, 7 December 1996.

[2841] Stubbe, Ray William, Khe Sanh Chaplain, 1970, p. 529 (entry for 21 January 1968).

[2842] Wayne, op. cit.

[2843] "Chronological Record of Duty Assignments," in Service Record Book, Maxie R. Williams.

[2844] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 4 May 1968, signed by Ray G. Snyder, CO, A/1/26, in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file, 2/Lt Maxie R. Williams, Jr.

[2845] Wayne, op. cit.

barely make it, too.' He said, 'Leave him with me.' I said, OK. Well, about that time, the Battalion Commander told us to get in a single line because he had already found the area he wanted to set in for the night.

"So we formed a single line. We hadn't gone very far, and the grenade [blast] knocked me on the ground. LCPL Scott was behind me and he got wounded in the ankle. The Lieutenant—it was around a little bend; I couldn't see anything yet. When I set the men up, I thought we were getting ambushed. So I set the men up facing one way and then the other, and I went back to see, because my men are back there. I had Higuera and another man—I can't remember his name—he had one fair eye and one good eye. And I looked down on him [the other man] and he had a piece of steel coming out of the pupil of his good eye. It stuck out about an inch. Higuera was just a bloody mess. What had happened was—Pruitt wasn't anywhere around. So I think that he was hanging on to the Lieutenant and he pulled the Lieutenant's cotter pin [of the grenade]. The Lieutenant was dead on us bending our cotter key so it couldn't be pulled easily, and so I know his were right. Probably that boy got hung up in it, jerked away, and when he did, pulled it. He was the only one who wasn't wounded. He knew what he did, and he had taken off. That is exactly what happened, and I've always felt guilty about that."[2846]

PFC Robert A. Harrison remembers humping the patrol through dense vegetation. PFC George R. Pruitt, ahead of Harrison, was having trouble moving through the vegetation and Lt Williams had "come back from his position near the front of Third Platoon to offer 'words of encouragement' to Pruitt," and then returned to his position in the column.[2847] Suddenly, an explosion and the cry, "Corpsman Up!" pierced the silence. "My fire team was called up to help. We moved up to where the explosion had occurred and found that a booby-trap had gone off. Don't know for sure wht type of booby-trap it was. Lt. Williams was killed outright and PFC Richard Higuera, his RTO [radioman], was wounded.[2848] "It was obvious that one of the Lieutenant's grenades had gone off. One of the pins must have worked loose."[2849] Yet, the manner of the cause of the explosion was difficult to determine. "It's very peculiar because he actually had it [the M-33 grenade] on his belt and his jacket, of course, was over that. And you know how they strapped [taped] those spoons so that they would not come off. So it's a real mystery as to what exactly happened there."[2850]

One of the platoon's corpsmen, Keith Gum (then HM3) later wrote:

"The business about Lt. Williams does not rest easy on my mind. We dug our holes in rock hard ground just NNW of the base, maybe a mile out or even less. Doc [HN Thomas R.] Richards and I were assigned a spot near 2 dead NVA that smelled to the high heaven! Was on radio watch as usual through the night. No sleep of course. We mounted up.. Moved through the thick underbrush. Hot as hell. Dripping in our own sweat. I was in the rear and Doc Richards was forward, closer to Lt. Williams. Not sure about the time, but think it was early afternoon. Very near exhaustion from sweltering heat and full pack. An explosion about that of a 60 mm mortar was heard some hundred yards up the line. We thought it was incoming and hit the dirt. 'Corpsman Up! Oh God, what now! The vines were thick and caught my pack repeatedly as I made my way forward. I was being cleared of entangling brush and pushed by grunts along the way, it was that thick. I simply could not get through it without help. I arrived on a scene grotesque as any I was to see during my tour: The wounded lay in a pocket of brush, rather dark and choked with dust. Lt Williams was on his back, upper torso elevated. From groin to throat, he was open. Yes, open like a cadaver being observed by medical students. I paused over him. Surprisingly little blood. He was still alive! 'Doc, help' were his last words, words that will ring in my ear forever to be sure! From the moment the grenade exploded until I arrived must have been no more than minutes. Certainly less than 5 minutes. There was nothing to do for him. He was finished. Others were lying about screaming. [HN] Richards was working like a mad man. I was about to help him with Higuera whose fingers were barely hanging with a thread of skin, an eye badly hurt, and a dozen other wounds... Richards and I used nearly every battle dressing we had between us. I remember this lesson well. From then on, I carried bandoleers full of battle dressings.

"How did it happen? To this day, I can't figure it out. It was one of those deadly baseball shaped grenades. Why was he carrying it? We were just ordered to collect them. Even if the pin was ripped out by thorns or brush, the strap on his 782 gear should have held the spoon. I remember Lt. Williams did not carry his gear sloppily (like me!). It would seem a very rare thing for both strap and pin to give way simultaneously... What really happened.. is still a matter of speculation, a haunting mystery. I have even thought that somebody might have held a grudge and tampered with the grenade. Not likely, considering the Lt. was never alone and would certainly take a number of random victims along with him. Another senseless death in a strange war... They put him on a stretcher with the side of his belly dangling nearly a foot or so to one side. I stopped the stretcher

---

[2846] Conversation with Robert R. Spurgeon, 03 Feb 2007.
[2847] Letter from Robert A. Harrison, 31 March 1986.
[2848] Ibid.
[2849] Conversation with Robert A. Harrison, 16 July 1989.
[2850] Conversation with Keith Gum, 27February 1996. Many days prior to this patrol, Lt Williams had given the order to collect all the newly-issued COFRAM M-33 grenades.

bearers to replace it and watched them carry him off to Graves."[2851]

His Service Record Book records that it was a booby trap.[2852] It is possible that while moving through the bamboo with his radioman, a NVA may have mistaken him for the Company Commander and exploded a command detonated mine which, in turn, detonated his grenades as a secondary explosion. The location of the incident: XD811418. Lt Williams is buried in Arlington National Cemetery in grave 9101-C, Section 6.

In September, 1968, CPL Robert L. Spurgeon, 2nd Squad Leader, 3d Platoon, A/1/26, met Higuera at Balboa Naval Hospital: "He was messed-up bad. I mean, his left arm was crushed. He had been drafted by the [New York] Giants. He was a lefty, and his left arm was crushed. He couldn't make his eyes look in any one direction. They went in two different directions. He was in pitiful shape."[2853]

Today, 1-12 Cav encountered stiff resistance from enemy elements as they attacked the new Lang Vei Special Forces camp (which fell to friendly forces on 12 April).[2854]

Also today, a helicopter was hit on Hill 881-South causing 5-10 casualties. 1/Lt Dennis Dee Andrews (M/3/26), without regard for his own safety, rushed to the LZ to assist the wounded, moving them to the I/3/26 position on the hill. He remained on the LZ which was under constant mortar fire until it was cleared of all wounded.[2855]

Lt Gen Robert Cushman sent the following SPECAT EXCLUSIVE message to Col David E. Lownds this date:

"Your resolution to win, the courageous example of your heroism, and the professional pride of your men had caused the enemy to withdraw in bitter defeat. They had no choice. Khe Sanh will long endure in the minds of the Marines, soldiers, sailors, airmen, and ARVN who served there as an example of determination in the cause of freedom. The victory is ours because of devotion to Corps and country. Many times in the face of grave danger, you risked your personal safety to bolster the confidence of your men, assist with the wounded, and supervise activities throughout the combat base, all this and more, under continual enemy fire. You and your troops have done an outstanding job. Because of this, Khe Sanh will be added to the list of unforgettable names in Marine Corps history. Well done!"[2856]

[Col Bruce F. Meyers, the father of USMC Force Reconnaissance units, arrived at KSCB on 10 April 1968 with the mission of destroying and abandoning KSCB. As G-3 of 9th MAB, he had spent some time each month at Khe Sanh from August, 1967, up to and including January, 1968,[2857] since RLT26 was a unit of 9th MAB, not 3rd Marine Division. Ens Martin Kux, the Officer in Charge of CBMU-301, Detachment "B" at Khe Sanh, was sick and angry that KSCB would be abandoned; in a diary entry he wrote: "Can't quite believe that the US will abandon KS—after loosing 500-1000 lives here (2500 casualties since 21 Jan) and spending millions of dollars defending it. But maybe it's better to admit the mistake now than to continue the mistake!"[2858] Brigadier General Jacob E. Glick, the ADC [Assistant Division Commander], 3rd Marine Division, was sent to KSCB by verbal orders of Major General Tompkins to command the forces there upon departure of LtGen Tolson, including the 1st and 26th Marine Regiments and supporting units.[2859] Task Force GLICK was activated 110800H/Apr68 for planning purposes in conjunction with the deactivation of KSCB.[2860]]

11 April 1968

ADDICE, HN Frank Paul	MAG-36
ALLEN, CPL Paul James	VMO-6
BELCHER, CPL Robert Winslow	H&S/3/26
DAVIDSON, PFC Dennis Robert	A/3rd Tk Bn
DEMARCO, LCPL Michael Gregory	VMO-6
DICKEN, LCPL Perry	E/2/1
ERWIN, PFC Richard Eugene	H&S/3/26
FINLEY, PFC Charles Richard	M/3/26
GANNON, CAPT Eugene Richard	HMM-163
GRATEN, CPL Frederick Dunham	VMO-6
HOLDEN, 2/Lt John Parker	HMM-163
MC MILLAN, CAPT Bruce Francis	VMO-6
NIXON, CPL John Arleigh	VMO-6
POWELL, SP5 Peter Earl	HHC, 8th Eng
RIEDE, 1/Lt Ronald Edgar	VMO-6
THOMPSON, PFC Kenneth David	A/1-8 Cav
WOODEN, SGT Charlie K.	B/1-7 Cav

[2851] Letter of Keith Gum to Patrick Wayne, undated, contained in Letter from Patrick Wayne, 25 May 1996.
[2852] Combat History – Expeditions – Awards Record.
[2853] Conversation with Robert R. Spurgeon, 03 Feb 2007.
[2854] I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 3.
[2855] Statement of Sgt Michael J. Rooney in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) of 1/Lt Dennis Dee Andrews. Lt Andrews was KIA 14 July 1968.
[2856] CG III MAF 110112Z/Apr68, to CO TWENTY-SIXTH Marines, Info LtGen Rosson andMGen Tompkins, in III MAF outgoing SPECAT EXCLUSIVE 28 Mar – 11 Apr 68.
[2857] Comments of Col Bruce F. Meyers, HQMC Oral History Tape #2777.
[2858] Ens Martin Kux, Diary entry, 12 April 1968.
[2859] Comments of BGen Jacob E. Glick, USMC Oral History Tape #2777.
[2860] CG, 3rd MarDiv 120310Z/Apr68, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Apr68 file, Encl (90).

Today, Khe Sanh experienced a significant increase in low cloudiness as a cold front advanced into the area from the northeast. Ceilings and visibility approached zero conditions.[2861]

During the night, M/3/26 dispatched an ambush at the foot of Hill 881-South, off the westernmost finger. It had long been suspected that NVA had camped in this location in order to avoid bombardment all around the hill. This was to be the first patrol departing the hill since the beginning of the siege battle, and LCPL Terry Stewart (M/3/26), on his third Vietnam tour, led his squad. A Lieutenant also accompanied the ambush which departed slowly and cautiously down the steep slopes about midnight. LCPL Stewart heard some noises. The Lieutenant, without informing Stewart, had dropped off two Marines as a rear guard to cover their "back door." Odors of NVA cooking fires were detected along with rustling in the bushes to their front. LCPL Stewart recommended to the Lieutenant that they pull back 100 meters to determine what was in their area. Instead of inverting the patrol (where the last man would become the point, and vice versa), he had the point of the patrol move back. Neither the point nor LCPL Stewart, of course, knew of the two Marines that had been stationed in the rear. When the point man noticed a boot sticking out, touched it, and it moved, he opened fire. Stewart dove for cover and happened to face the second Marine that had been left behind who was whispering, "Are you alright?" LCPL Stewart, hearing the safeties of the M-16 clicking off "safe" to "semi-automatic" suddenly realized these were Americans and shouted "Cease Fire!" The Marine whose boot had been sticking out of the bush had been badly wounded, and the ambush, now compromised and with a seriously wounded Marine, returned up the very steep slope of the hill.[2862]

It was early morning by the time the medevac helicopter was called, and the wounded Marine, PFC Finley, seemed to be doing OK; all thought he would survive.[2863]

PFC Dennis R. Davidson was another medevac, picked up at Khe Sanh and killed in the mid-air collision. PFC Davidson had been shot in the chest by another Marine during an altercation which later resulted in his death. "The accused Marine was tried by General Court Martial and was acquitted."[2864] PFC Erwin was also a passenger.

The weather at Quang Tri was drizzle.[2865]

At 0705H, SEAWORTHY 4-5 and 4-6, led by Captain B. F. McMillan, launched as armed escorts for HIGHBOY 6-1 and 6-2 to pick up PFC Finley. The two sections launched separately and joined at Khe Sanh, then both headed for Dong Ha in separate sections. Seven miles west of Dong Ha, with a 1500-ft. broken cloud cover, Capt McMillan's aircraft and Highboy 6-1 collided in mid-air. The H-34 came apart before reaching the ground and the UH1E burned upon impact. No survivors of either aircraft were found and all personnel were accounted for. 1/Lt Ronald. E. Riede was the co-pilot of the UH1E, Cpl Paul. J. Allen the crew chief, and LCPL Michael. G. Demarco the gunner.[2866]

CPL Allen, the Crew Chief, was born 12 November 1946 in Woodstock, Illinois, then moved with his family to Rochester, Minnesota, where he attended and graduated from John Marshall High School in 1965 after participating in track, and known for his love for driving (even racing) and repairing cars, especially a '63 Chevy and a '65 Mustang. He was described as "a determined young man who held strong beliefs about what was right." He joined the Marine Corps in September, 1965 and took great pride in being a Marine, even to buying a set of dress blues and escorting his girl friend to the Homecoming Dance while on leave. His father had been a Marine in World War II, and he grew up making friends at a nearby Christian Servicemen's Club.[2867]

Although CPL Belcher had an exotic communications MOS, 3/26 didn't have the equipment he was trained to operate, and he humped the PRC-25, spent time on watch in the CommO and in the line companies. Belcher and PFC William G. Jabusch became good friends, frequently talking with each other, and Jabusch remembers Belcher as one "who belonged on a recruiting poster. "He looked the part. He looked like he came out of a 'John Wayne' movie. He looked good uniform, and he was one of the nicest people I ever met."[2868] "I always felt good after I'd seen him. I feel good now knowing I had his friendship at one time. The whole world would have benefited from knowing him."[2869] "It was pure chance that I found out he'd gotten killed. I was on the end of

---

[2861] Gen Westmoreland 121148Z/Apr68, MAC 4897, Khe Sanh Report #68.

[2862] MSGT Terry Stewart, "Life in General on Hill 881," pp. 5-6; partly quoted in Hammel, Eric, Khe Sanh, Siege in the Clouds, An Oral History, New York: Crown Publishers, Inc., 1989, pp. 445-446. Master Sergeant Stewart notes that this is not "throwing rocks at the Lt, [it was] just an unfortunate thing."

[2863] Comments of Brigadier General Harry W. Jenkins, Jr., undated.

[2864] HQMC, Report of Casualty, Library, Historical Center, Washington, D.C. notes CG, FMFPAC's 3rd Endorsement, 17/11t, 5830 of 20 Jun 1968 on 1/Lt Hatcher's ltr CCH/mmd, 5830, 3 June 1968.

[2865] Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 11 April 1968.

[2866] VMO-6 ComdC April, 1968, Encl (3), p. 1.

[2867] Mary Lou Capelle, "Paul James Allen," in Ward, Don, The Faces Behind the Names, The Vietnam War, Vol. 2, Minnesota: The Memorial Press, 1999, pp. 3-4.

[2868] Taped comments of William Jabusch, 8 March 1990. Jabush, at the time of this taping, was dying from leukemia.

[2869] Letter from William Jabusch, 6 January 1990.

the perimeter opposite where our lines met Highway 9 doing some little task. I guess I must have been near the Commo bunker because some of the people there came to tell me he'd gotten killed while laying wire."[2870] Apparently it was a new and more powerful NVA artillery, for the crater it left seemed bigger than those left by 152mm artillery.[2871]

Co E/2/1 continued providing security for the 2/1 rear at LZ STUD until 1430H when it was moved by helicopter to Objective 19 (XD970479) to relieve the lines with Co. "G." The lift was completed at 1613H.[2872] At 1655H, while in the vicinity of XD971479, Co "E" received 5 rounds of small or medium artillery from unknown positions, killing LCPL Dicken.[2873]

Beginning late in the morning of 11 April, Companies "A," "B," and "C" of First Battalion, 12th Cavalry, began moving toward the "New Lang Vei Special Forces Camp" (XD783358), receiving artillery fire as they approached. By dusk (1800H), Co B/1-12 Cav made contact with approximately 30 NVA. Artillery and tactical air was called on the NVA positions, resulting in 27 NVA KIA with 2 U.S. soldiers wounded.[2874]

On 11 April, the 37th ARVN Ranger Battalion departed Khe Sanh for DaNang.[2875] 2-12 Cav moved by air to Camp Evans and 2-8 Cav moved to LZ BETTY.[2876]

[Bravo Company, 3rd Recon, had moved from KSCB to Quang Tri Combat Base, co-located with the other companies of the battalion in one encampment with all the companies forming a long line of tents. Being in the relatively safe area was unnerving for the Marines who had just emerged from the bulls-eye of KSCB, sandwiched between the airstrip and the regimental headquarters, and having taken over 70% casualties. The Marines of B/3rd Recon gave all their captured souvenirs (NVA belt buckles, canteens, etc., to the Seabees and had them dig a large slit trench for the entire length of their tents.[2877]]

12 April 1968

BIERLEIN, PFC Patrick M. R.	A/1/26
HELMKE, PFC Darrel Bruce	A/1-8 Cav
MC GARVEY, CPL Patrick George	H&S/1/26
MILLS, PFC Arthur Lee	C/1/26

[At 1300 today, Col Bruce F. Meyers relieved Col David Edward Lownds as CO, 26th Marine Regiment].[2878]

At 1245H, a friendly WP round killed PFC Bierlein at XD808414.[2879] PFC George M. Spunar (A/1/26) remembers PFC Bierlein had just finished digging his foxhole and sat down to have a C-ration, while his buddy was still digging. A short round from KSCB hit him in the head, only about 50 yards from Spunar. Bierlein had only about a month and a half to go before he rotated out of Vietnam.[2880]

PFC Mills and CPL McGarvey were killed at 1600H from shrapnel from 6 NVA 82mm mortars while in defense of the night defensive position.[2881]

PFC Helmke, a native of Cokato, Minnesota, attended the Cokato, Minnesota, High School, and had only been in Vietnam three weeks when he was killed by mortar fragments. He was 18 and loved to hunt and fish.[2882]

13 April 1968

POILANE, Felix Civilian

[The senior USAF officer at KSCB, LtCol Zane G. Brewer, attended a planning 26th Marines Regimental meeting at 1030 on the proposal to move out of Khe Sanh and destroy the base. The Marine plans called for complete evacuation of Khe Sanh beginning on 17 April 1968.[2883] On 15 April, he learned at the 0700 Regimental Brief that the plans to evacuate and destroy Khe Sanh had been disapproved in Saigon.]

Weather today was marginal with low ceilings except during late afternoon and early evening.[2884]

At 1405H, A C-130 aircraft (#61-0967), Mission #603, landed "after one missed approach. He left the runway (to the left), crashed through GPES Twister equipment, 6

2870 Ibid.
2871 Ibid.
2872 1stMar AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 37.
2873 Ibid., p. 38.
2874 Waldron and Beavers, op. cit., p. 57; I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 9.
2875 I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 9.
2876 Ibid.
2877 Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 11 April 1968.
2878 26Mar 121445Z/Apr68, Periodic Opns Summary Report #13 (PEGASUS) 112000H-122000H Apr68, Para. 10.
2879 1/26 ComdC Apr68, S2/S3 Log, 12 April 1968, Ser #3 and 14.
2880 Conversation with George M. Spunar, 23 September 1989.
2881 1/26 ComdC Apr68, S2/S3 Log 12 April 1968, Ser #8, 11, 12, and 13. McGarvey, at XD806423, received shrapnel to his arm, abdomen, and head. Mills, at XD808423, received shrapnel to his head and left hand.
2882 Darlene C. Davidson, "Darrel Bruce Helmke," in Don Ward, The Faces Behind the Names, Minnesota: The Memorial Press, 1996, p. 147. Darlene C. Davidson was the sister of Darrel Helmke.
2883 LtCol Brewer, Mission Commander's Report (12-26 April 1968), Document #133 appended to Pollica, TSGT Bruce W. and Rickey, TSGT Joe E., Monograph of 834th Air Division Tactical Airlift Support for Khe Sanh, 21 January – 8 April 1968, n.d., 834AD-DXI-69-001.
2884 Gen Westmoreland 141124Z/Apr68, MAC 4976, Khe Sanh Report #70, Para 2.

abandoned GPES loads, a Marine truck, a fork lift, then burned."[2885] The crash was attributed to engine failure.[2886] Major Walter Thomas Cook [S-4, 26th Marines] was standing next to the runway when the crash occurred. He recalls that the pilot reversed his props before touching his wheels, and when the wheels touched down, "he just started weaving all over the runway and ended up in a somewhat of a heap down at the end of the runway. He wasn't shot down. I really think that he just reversed his props a little soon."[2887]

Adolph ("Steve") Novotny [MACTU-62] immediately saw the huge blaze. The MB-5 Crash Truck was inoperable due to damage it had sustained during an ammunition dump fire of 22-23 March. As a result, he was forced to use the Navy structural fire truck which did not have foaming capacity to fight fuel fires.[2888] He almost ran over some newsmen on the way who were in the way; he was determined to get to the fire ASAP and wasn't about to slow down.[2889] The crew fought the blaze with the Navy truck—just water, no foam. "We had a heck of a time."[2890]

Meanwhile, LCPL David Gilliam, Jr., and PFC Charles George Smotzer [Headquarters Co., 26th Marines] rushed to the aircraft and boarded the burning hulk, pulling wounded and stunned passengers and crewmen from the smoke and flame-filled fuselage.[2891]

The only person who died as a result of the crash was the civilian, Monsieur Felix Poilane, who had managed the coffee plantation established by his father, Eugene Poilane, since 21 December 1957 when he arrived with his new wife, Madaleine. The Poilanes, with their two children, along with Father Poncet, had departed KSCB on 22 January 1968 and sought refuge in Hue, where Father Poncet was killed. By 9 April, Felix learned that Khe Sanh was liberated, and by means of a Philippine nun who spoke perfect English, he requested to return to Khe Sanh to survey the condition of his house and plantation. The Americans were reluctant to give authorization, cautioning it was still a dangerous place. His wife was also apprehensive and hid his passport. Felix was determined and his wife acquiesced. "I did not want him to leave without any identity papers, but I was really against his decision. The departure was postponed until Holy Saturday, April 13th, 1968. There was a departure, but alas, no return. Felix was supposed to return in the evening. On Saturday evening, nothing. Easter Sunday, still nothing. I did not stop crying, having the presentiment that something had happened. On the evening of Easter Sunday, Mother Angel was notified of the tragedy by a journalist of the AFP. She did not want anybody to tell me because she wanted me to sleep. On Monday morning, she had someone call me. I saw her. She was pale [and after returning to the Consulate] she informed me of the horrible news, the death of Felix. The Americans brought back Felix's body to one of their hospitals at DaNang. It was necessary to find out which one. Sister Angel, accompanied by American officials, began a search, making the rounds of these hospitals. She found him... Fortunately for me the nuns were there to take care of everything—official papers at the Consulate and with the American authorities, the ordering of the coffin, telegrams to his mother and to the family... While waiting, the Americans kept the body and embalmed it. They turned it over to us on April 17th. He rested there in this coffin in his Navy blue suit. A small drop of blood and water at his right ear fell from time to time. One might have said that he had fallen asleep the day before. A long tri-color ribbon on the coffin and a simple bouquet of flowers. On April 18th at 10 o'clock there was the funeral at the

---

[2885] LtCol Brewer, Mission Commander's Report, op. cit. GPES=Ground Proximity Extraction System. GPES arrived at KSCB on 30 March due to the destruction wreaked by LAPES in which sleds crashed into the last 750 feet of the runway's west end, the portion which had not received the crushed rock subbase during the overhaul of the runway. Also, LAPES drops were free-flying, a danger to persons nearby, and some components of the LAPES system were, by now, scarce. The USAF began a world-wide search for other delivery systems. GPES had been in storage since 1966 and was sent from CONUS to SEA. GPES involved the use of a cable, similar to that used for arresting an aircraft landing on a carrier at sea, stretched across the runway. The aircraft flew in low over the cable, with a hook down. When the hook, attached to the cargo, engaged the cable, the cargo platform became extracted. Loads up to 27,000 pounds, on single or tandem connected platforms, were capable of being delivered on one pass of the aircraft. [Letter of Col Robert D. Brown, HQMC Historical Center, Washington, D.C., Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file; Pollica and Rickey, op. cit., pp. 36-40 and Doc #2; BGen Burl W. McLaughlin, "Khe Sanh: Keeping an Outpost Alive," Air University Review (Nov-Dec68) 63-64; Capt Ken Kashiwahara, "Lifeline to Khe Sanh," Airman (Jul68) 6.]

[2886] Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 145. Hobson notes that although Nos 3 and 4 propellers were placed in a cargo sling and extracted by USMC helicopters, the load was unbalanced, swung wildly, and had to be cut loose due to danger to the helicopter. Since it landed in an enemy-controlled area, the cause of the accident remained undetermined.

[2887] Taped comments of Major Walter Thomas Cook, November, 1987.

[2888] Conversation with Adolph Steve Novotny, 26 November 1994; Letter printed in the Khe Sanh Veteran 2:2 (Spring, 1996) 16.

[2889] Conversation with Adolph Steve Novotny, 19 November 1994.

[2890] Conversation with Adolph Steve Novotny, 26 November 1994.

[2891] Statements of 2/Lt Robert E. Boylan and LCPL Henry M. Robinson in Bronze Star Medal file, PFC Charles George Smotzer; NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 3 May 1968, in Bronze Star Medal file, LCPL David Gilliam, Jr.

Cathedral of DaNang. 9 priests concelebrated the Mass said by the Vietnamese parish priest, all friends... Around us the French authorities and the American Lieutenant who had given the authorization for the plane and who was very distressed, feeling himself almost responsible for this death. Felix was hardly 37 years old. His birthday was on April 30th. Born at Khe Sanh, he also died at Khe Sanh."[2892]

[During the period 1152H – 1425H, Companies "A" and "B" of 1-12 Cav moved in and occupied the site of the Lang Vei Special Forces Camp, finding 11 NVA bodies killed by artillery along with extensive NVA weapons and munitions.[2893] 5th Special Forces had requested an element of 6 soldiers from A-101 (the detachment that had defended Lang Vei) accompany the sweep of the Lang Vei camp (XD785356).[2894] With the extensive search which located no American bodies, it is improbable that any remaining American MIA that had been left at Lang Vei when it was overrun, remained.

The new camp Lang Vei (XD784357, located approximately 500 meters west of the old Camp Lang Vei, XD795362) was also searched on 23 April. Those searching the camp found mostly rubble from the heavy bombardments of February and March as well as at least one B-52 strike which covered a portion of the camp "..causing widespread damage to the bunkers and obliterated the evidence of previously existing fortifications."[2895]]

14 April 1968

ALENCASTRE, PVT Anthony Albert	L/3/26
ANDERS, PFC Richard Alan	B/1-5 Cav
COCHRAN, PFC James Clifford	B/1-5 Cav
EDMONDS, LCPL Joseph J.	L/3/26
GREB, SGT James J	B/1-5 Cav
JANOWICZ, SP4 Joseph Anthony	B/1-5 Cav
KING, LCPL DeWayne	M/3/26
MARIN-RAMOS, SGT Hector Ramon	B/1-5 Cav
MC MAKINS, CPL Reuben Carl Jr.	L/3/26
NIELSEN, LCPL Charles Joseph	L/3/26
PETTITT, SP4 James Allen	B/1-5 Cav
QUAMO, MAJ George	FOB-3
SHERIDAN, LCPL Phillip Francis	C/1/13
TAYLOR, PVT Steven Earl	L/3/26

Weather today: low clouds and fog produced ceilings and visibility near zero during the night and early morning hours. Between 1130H and 1800H, weather was generally good.[2896]

Between 0240H and 0255H, 1-5 Cav received 8 unknown size rockets, 10-15 mortars, satchel charges, small arms, and automatic weapons fire at their position southeast of Khe Sanh (XD828321), killing 6 soldiers and wounding 9. At 0410H, the 1st Battalion received 7 more rounds of mortar, causing negative casualties.[2897]

Easter Sunday, 14 April 1968, was the occasion for the Marines of 3/26 on Hill 881-South to be resurrected from the tombs of their underground bunkers and ascend northward to sweep the Hill 881-North area (XD775459). As the last elements of the First Air Cavalry Division flew away from Khe Sanh, the Marines ended the siege battle at Khe Sanh where it had begun, Hill 881-North. The Marine troops referred to it as their "Easter Egg Hunt," and were determined and anxious to eliminate the cause of so much of their suffering. During the siege, Hill 881-South, manned by INDIA and MIKE Companies of 3/26 had seen 167 of their men medevaced, either dead or seriously wounded, while everyone lived beneath 8-ft. of sandbags, logs, and earth, attempting to survive the daily pounding from 120mm mortars.[2898] During the siege battle, over 5,000 rockets were fired from Hill 881-North. Moreover, ever since 4 April, patrols from 881-South sweeping to the north and northwest of their positions had taken fire from Hill 881-North. "The enemy troops still clung tenaciously to that piece of real estate."[2899]

The entire battalion, 3/26, assembled on Hill 881-South on 11 April after Co K/3/26 had been relieved on Hill 861 by Co E/2/26, in preparation to assault Hill 881-North. Co K/3/26 moved to Hill 800 on 12 April, slightly northeast of Hill 881-South. The physical condition of the Marines, having been cooped up in their bunkers on

---

[2892] Letter from Madame Madeleine Poilane, 18 July 1988, "Memories of Vietnam, 1957 – 1968."

[2893] Waldron and Beavers, op. cit., pp. 62-63; PCV [Provisional Corps, Vietnam] Resume of Telephone Call to III MAF COC 131945H/April 1968, in III MAF COC Journal and File, Doc #135. Among the items found: 40 crew-served weapons, [I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 10] and the following American munitions: 113,000 rounds of small arms, 5,000 81mm mortars, 1,000 57mm RR rounds, 300 rounds of 4.2-in. mortars, 400 M-79 rounds, and 50 rounds of 106mm RR. [PVC 131945H/Apr68, cited.]

[2894] CO Co C 5th SFGA 130025Z/Apr68 in III MAF COC Journal and File, Doc #15.

[2895] MACV, Lessons Learned, No. 69, "Analysis of Enemy Positions at Khe Sanh and Evaluation of Effectiveness of Weapons Systems Against Enemy Fortifications Study," LBJ Library archives, National Security File, Country File: Vietnam, Box #187.

[2896] Gen Westmoreland 151106Z/Apr68, MAC 05009, Khe Sanh Report #71, Para 2.

[2897] Waldron and Beavers, op. cit., p. 64; I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, Tab G, Mortar/Rocket attacks.

[2898] LtCol J. A. Studt, "Battalion in the Attack," Marine Corps Gazette 54:7 (July, 1970) 40.

[2899] Shore, Moyers, op. cit., p. 141.

the hills, was a concern of those who planned the attack.[2900]

The mission for the patrol of 14 April, aside from eliminating the NVA, was to clean out these positions and make helicopter operations to 881-South less hazardous.[2901] Rockets had been fired from the western and northern slopes of Hill 881-North as late as 10 April.[2902]

Since 881S was well zeroed in by enemy gunners and was still taking daily incoming 120mm mortars and occasional rockets, all attacking elements moved off the hill and into attack positions at the base of 881S at night. "Thus the battalion not only avoided a probable plastering while moving off the exposed slopes of 881S, but achieved a tactical surprise from which the enemy never really effectively recovered."[2903] Three companies comprised the assaulting elements: LIMA on the left flank, MIKE and KILO. INDIA Co was battalion reserve.[2904] The attacking companies moved precisely the same as Captain Dabney's platoons moved on 20 January, except that now the units were companies, not platoons.[2905]

KILO Company (Capt P. L. Snead) initiated the assault on 12 April by seizing Hill 800 (XD778445).[2906] At midnight, DUNBAR COUNTY LIMA [L/3/26], commanded by Capt William F. Hurley (an old hand at Khe Sanh, having commanded the KSCB LSU 14 July 1967 – 26 January 1968),[2907] moved down the northern slope of 881S to avoid being spotted by the enemy. At 0030H on 14 April, MIKE Company (Capt W. C. Jenkins) seized Objective 3 (XD773447) from which it blasted Objective 2 (XD773451) with intense 81mm mortars and artillery fire.. LIMA Company, to the west of MIKE Company, seized Objective 1 (XD769451) and then moved to seize Objective 4 (XD769451).[2908]

2/Lt Charles W. King, Platoon Commander of L-3, was then directed to move his platoon and attack a hill just behind Objective #4, known to contain dug-in NVA. An enemy force, about squad size, had just been spotted there. Following a prep fire, Lt King, standing in a large bomb crater, ordered his platoon forward, up the hill. "Almost immediately I had several men shot—killed and wounded. They dropped where they were. The attack continued. As we progressed up the hill, a rain of Chinese Communist grenades began falling on us so heavy that it appeared it was just raining grenades. All this time, enemy fire was sweeping the hill. Men were dropping all around us. All we could do was just keep pushing forward. We got about to the crest. I received word from my Company Commander that we had to pull back, that there was just too much fire. At this time I knew I had too many casualties. I couldn't leave them on the hill. I just said, 'Negative, Sir; we can't pull back."[2909] All the KIAs involved in this operation (other than LCPL DeWayne King) were from LIMA Company. When the sudden burst temporarily halted the momentum of the assault which proceeded slowly because of the many casualties LIMA Company sustained, it was then that Lt King led the assault once more while under heavy fire. One of the only men still standing, he started upward, without stopping until he was over the crest, all the while encouraging the men by yelling, 'Come on Lima 3, let's get 'em!' It was quite a sight.. to see our Lieutenant take charge of a perilous situation."[2910]

The Marines were fiercely determined. Maj Matthew P. Caulfield [S-3 of 3/26], who had worried about the physical condition of the Marines, noticed that some of the troops were further out than he thought they should be, and told the Company Commander to pull them back. "And his answer—I'll never forget it—was, 'Sir, I can't stop them; they won't stop.' They had bayonets on their rifles and the troops were really pissed off."[2911]

When L-3 was finally able to seize the hill, 10-11 enemy bodies were left behind along with numerous weapons and much gear. The enemy force had been as determined to hold the hill as the Marines were to seize it. "The people that were left up there.. evidently meant to fight to the death because we killed each and every one of them. There was no chance of taking prisoners. They just fought to the end. My troops did an outstanding job taking it. I was real proud of them. They went up the hill screaming, yelling, and really kicking ass."[2912] "CPL Eldridge Patterson, Jr., the 2nd Squad Leader in L-3, was shot in the head by a NVA sniper, but by sheer intestinal fortitude, he got up and regained control of his squad. He charged up the hill rallying his men and inspiring them to the top. Though painfully wounded in his head

---

[2900] Comments of Maj Matthew P. Caulfield, 4 Jan 1969, HQMC Oral History Tape #6157. Maj Caulfield was S-3 of 3/26 at the time.
[2901] Letter of LtCol J. C. Studt to HQMC, Historical Branch, 24 December 1968, in Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file.
[2902] Comments of 1/Lt John T. Esslinger, HQMC Oral History Tape #2776.
[2903] Letter of LtCol J. C. Studt, 24 December 1968, cited.
[2904] Comments of 2/Lt Daniel T. Madison and Capt Lawrence A. Luther, HQMC Oral History Tape #2776.
[2905] Comments of Maj Matthew P. Caulfield, HQMC Oral History Tape #6157.
[2906] 3/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 3.
[2907] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation in Bronze Star Medal file of Capt William F. Hurley.
[2908] 3/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 3.
[2909] Comments of 2/Lt Charles W. King, HQMC Oral History Tape #2776.
[2910] Statement of LCPL James C. Gray in Silver Star Medal file of 2/Lt Charles W. King.
[2911] Comments of Maj. Matthew P. Caulfield, HQMC Oral History Tape #6157.
[2912] Comments of 2/Lt Charles W. King, HQMC Oral History Tape #2776.

and badly bleeding, Cpl Patterson located and killed the same enemy who had shot him."[2913]

During the assault, a rifleman in LIMA Company, PFC Anthony A. Alencastre, spotted a NVA sighting in on the Marine to his right. PFC Alencastre jumped up, making himself a target, which would enable the others to move forward. It cost him his life.[2914] "He gave his life to save another Marine."[2915]

LCPL Sheridan had made a special request to his Battery Commander, Capt O'Connor, to accompany LIMA Company on the operation to Hill 881-North, switching with PFC Glenn E. Prentice who was assigned this radioman duty. Before leaving, Prentice reminded him to put his antenna down his sleeves, not to carry a .45 or field glasses, and to put his radio in his pack. "He did not take my advice [and] was killed by a sniper, hit in the heart, died instantly. I was on radio watch when 3/26 called and told me how he died."[2916]

PFC Michael C. Loehrer [B/1/13] had gone through Infantry Training Regiment (ITR) at Camp Pendleton, California, with CPL Reuben McMackins. Since Loehrer lived near Camp Pendleton, the two took weekend passes to his home and became very close.[2917] "He was a great guy! A grunt's grunt. An Expert rifleman, machinegunner and weapons specialist. He didn't get to Khe Sanh until March 5th. I got to visit with him once before I was medevaced out on April 4th."[2918] McMackins, a 3.5-inch rocket man attached to Co "L," was unable to employ his rocket launcher due to the proximity to the Marines. Disregarding his own safety, he armed himself with hand grenades and daringly maneuvered forward to assault the NVA positions until he was mortally wounded.[2919]

A Tribute[2920]
By Michael C. Loehrer

Mac, you knew you weren't coming home.
I didn't believe it when you told me.
Maybe death in war was meant for some,
but not for you, Mac, not for you.
Why didn't someone prepare me for death?
Who prepared you Mac, God?
Maybe He's using your death to prepare me.
Thanks Mac. I miss you.

As LIMA Company seized its objective, KILO Company attacked and seized Objective 6 (XD777453) and, after lifting its preparatory fires, MIKE Company continued the attack and seized Objective 2 (XD773451).[2921] The point man of one of the lead platoons of Co "M," LCPL King, was shot in the head, forcing a temporary halt in the progress up the hill until he could be retrieved.[2922]

Results of the battle for Hill 881-North: 6 USMC KIA, 19 WIA (evacuated), 2 WIA (minor), 106 NVA KIA (confirmed), 2 NVA POW.[2923] LtCol J. C. Studt notes, however, that in addition to the 106 NVA bodies actually counted, air strikes and artillery were delivered against 3 different groups of fleeing NVA, platoon and company size, with excellent coverage. Due to the dense vegetation and the fact that time did not permit a ground search into the area into where the NVA fled, no number could be determined, and the number of NVA who perished must have been considerably greater.[2924]

Maj George Quamo, the Special Projects Officer, FOB #3,[2925] was born 20 June 1940 in Lynn, Massachusetts, and grew up in a section of the city known as the "Brickyard. His brother, James, about two years younger than George, recalls "We lived in a third floor flat. We didn't have any money and really everybody was kind of poor, but we didn't realize it back then."[2926] His parents were born in Terin, Albania (his father in 1895, his mother in 1905)[2927] and emigrated to the United States in the 1930s. They were hard workers and family values were important. His father worked long hours as a factory worker and his mother spoke about half a dozen [2913] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, Silver Star Medal file, Cpl Eldridge Patterson, Jr.

[2914] Statement of LCPL Robert M. Ware in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file of PFC Anthony A. Alencastre. LCPL Ware was 1st Squad Leader of L-3. [HQMC Oral History Tape #2776].
[2915] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file of PFC Anthony A. Alencastre.
[2916] Letter from Glenn Prentice, 22 July 1997.
[2917] Conversation with Rev. Michael C. Loehrer, 21 November 1992.
[2918] Letter from Michael "Spider" Loehrer, 18 July 1993.
[2919] Bronze Star Medal Citation, Cpl Reuben C. McMackins, Jr.
[2920] Letter from Michael C. Loehrer, postmarked 19 Feb 1998; printed in Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue #44 (Summer, 1999) 14.
[2921] 3/26 ComdC Apr 1968, p. 4; 3/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 3, Para 6.c.(2).
[2922] Taped comments of Brigadier General Harry W. Jenkins, Jr., n.d.
[2923] 26Mar 141435Z/Apr68, Periodic Operations Summary Report #15 (PEGASUS) 132000H-142000H APR 68, Para 8; 3/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS
[2924] Letter of LtCol J. C. Studt, 24 December 1968, in Historical Center, Khe Sanh Monograph Comments file.
[2925] MACJ2 Form 34, "US Personnel, Missing/Captured in Southeast Asia, Biographical Data," in records of George Quamo. There were four men assigned to the Special Projects at FOB #3: Maj George Quamo, SFC Charles Minnicks, MSG Gilbert A. Secor (medic, KIA 23 Aug 68 when CCN was overrun in DaNang), and William Harris (radioman). [Conversation with Harve Saal, 30 March 1991].
[2926] Conversation with James Quamo, 2 January 2003.
[2927] DD398, "Statement of Personal History," in Service Record, George Quamo.

languages, but English was not one of them. When George was 12, his father died and the family moved to Averill Park, just outside of Albany, New York.[2928] George was a very good athlete in high school (football, basketball, and baseball), either the Captain or Most Valuable Player in all three. He was a class President and colleges sought him.[2929] Instead, he enlisted in the Army 23 October 1958[2930] and at age 19, was commissioned a Second Lieutenant (18 December 1959).[2931] He was promoted to Major on 6 October 1967[2932]; he was 27. Capt Lee Dunlap recalls George Quamo as a "movie-star-looking guy, absolutely handsome."[2933] George Quamo was proficient in Vietnamese and, after attending a 47-week course in Thai at the Defense Language Institute (1965) he was given a 2-year college equivalency.[2934]

Major David "Bulldog" Smith, who was later to command FOB #3 (February, 1968) and George Quamo made plans at SOG Headquarters in Saigon in December, 1967, to slip into Laos, develop a guerrilla force of Bru to operate in the area from the Mu Gia Pass to Tchepone.[2935] Apparently, Smith and Quamo were prepared to go in and be declared "Missing in Action" as a cover, and when Smith later heard that Quamo flew off and couldn't be found, he exclaimed (to himself), "That son-of-a-gun left without me!"[2936] George Quamo, of course, had extensive ties with BV-33 at Ban Houei Sane, and had been involved in the lengthy Co Roc operation in mid-January, 1968.[2937] The patrol stopped at Lang Vei before proceeding to the FOB-3 compound on KSCB, and informed them that they were in danger, that the patrol had spotted and encountered large numbers of NVA moving east on Route 9 and that Co Roc was honeycombed with caves full of munitions and supplies.[2938] For leading the three patrols on Co Roc 7 – 17 January 1968, Quamo was awarded a Silver Star Medal.[2939] Once the siege battle erupted, Maj Quamo personally ensured the installation of a land line to communicate "real time" intelligence (FOB #3 had Vietnamese listening in on NVA radio traffic and translating it, as well as information from agents, etc.) to Major Jerry Hudson, S-2 of the 26th Marines—a wire from the FOB-3 TOC all the way to the Marine COC. He wasn't supposed to do that, of course, but thought it was stupid to have the raw information sent to Saigon and then, several days later (when it was really history) sent to the Marines.[2940]

When Lang Vei was overrun, it was Maj George Quamo who led the relief force to extract their survivors,[2941] "He went to the Colonel there at the Marine base [Col David E. Lownds] and asked for a force in the morning to go in and get those people out, and the Colonel refused. From the Colonel's viewpoint [it was] a perfectly legitimate reason. He didn't know what he was getting into and felt there were two regiments there at that precise spot. So Major Quamo came to me and said, 'Let's get a force together and go in and bring out whoever's left. It has to be explained to everyone: we'll go in; we may not come out.'"[2942] The Americans were evacuated, as were the Laotian officers of BV-33. The Lao troops, however, "..had thrown away their weapons. For all purposes, they had surrendered,"[2943] and therefore were not extracted. "When we came out we were thrilled to death! We really didn't [pause] think we were coming out of there. When we went in, we didn't think we was coming back. The Laotian Commander [LtCol Soulang Phetsomphou] ran over, hugged and kissed Quamo, hugged and kissed me, and told us we had saved him. Then, they found out that we didn't bring his people out. That's when the dirt started about Major Quamo. There was—I don't know what that Colonel [Soulang] sent to his headquarters across the [Laotian] border, to the Ambassador [Sullivan]. He and Westmoreland and those people got together. We got a very terse message addressed to Quamo. All it said was—this is quote and unquote—'The General will not be embarrassed.' That was all that was ever heard about it, and then, very soon thereafter Major Quamo is dead."[2944] SFC Charles "Skip" Minnicks later lamented, "My biggest hurt over that situation was—honest to God, I thought the man should of got a Medal of Honor for what he did at Lang Vei, but it was down-played."[2945] Quamo was awarded (posthumously) Distinguished Service Cross for this action[2946] [one award under the Medal of Honor]

[2928] Conversations with James Quamo, 2 January 2003 and 15 January 2003.
[2929] Conversation with James Quamo, 4 June 1995.
[2930] DA Form 20, "Enlisted Qualification Record," Service Record, George Quamo.
[2931] DA Form 66, "Officer Qualification Record," Service Record, George Quamo.
[2932] Ibid.
[2933] Conversation with Lee Dunlap, 25 November 1990.
[2934] DA Form 66, "Officer Qualification Record," Service Record, George Quamo.
[2935] Conversations with David Smith, 15 September 1990 and 27 July 1995; Conversation with James W. Moore, 12 December 1995. Moore comments: "Now, that was daydreaming if there ever was!"
[2936] Conversation with David Smith, 27 July 1995.
[2937] See pp. 189-191 of this book.
[2938] Conversation with Charles Minnicks, 26 December 1991.
[2939] Silver Star Medal Citation, signed 13 November 1974. He was also awarded a Silver Star Medal for actions on 27 March 1963, the Legion of Merit for his service from September 1967 to April 1968 as Special Projects Officer and Executive Officer of FOB3.
[2940] Conversation with Jerry Hudson, 4 May 1996.
[2941] See p. 163 of this book.
[2942] Conversation with Charles Minnicks, 26 December 1991.
[2943] Conversation with Charles Minnicks, 26 December 1991.
[2944] Ibid.
[2945] Conversation with Charles Minnicks, 5 May 1990.
[2946] Citation dated 13 November 1974.

LtCol Roy Bahr took over command of FOB #3 on 1 April 1968 after arriving in mid-March. Although he knew George Quamo less than a month: "But that man impressed me. You know he was only about 25 years old. I was 37, going to be 38. I see George Quamo, and by God, he's a Major and 25 years old! And this guy is sharp! I mean, he was outstanding."[2947] "I'd like to go to the exact place where George Quamo died. I'd like to say, 'Hey, you were a great guy!' I was asked to write—I didn't mind because I wanted to—I wrote him up for a Legion of Merit. I said, 'Hey, I've only known this guy 14 days, but this is a man who did so many things, so much, and had such respect, he deserves this. He did ten things ten times faster than I ever did. His ability to communicate was so great."[2948]

Bahr was the last one to see George Quamo alive. "I took George down to the airfield there at Khe Sanh and put him on board. There were two Vietnamese pilots, and they took off April 14th."[2949] He was placed aboard a U-17 aircraft that departed from Khe Sanh at 1535, 14 April, enroute to DaNang Airfield.[2950] Bahr had his acting S-2, Hammond Salley, type up a Top Secret report, so sensitive that he didn't want an enlisted clerk typist to do it, nor did he trust the encrypted secure electronic transmission (and, for good reason, as it turned out: during the Walker spy affair, it was learned that the KY secure communications had been sold to the Russians). The report was then handed to Quamo to deliver personally.[2951]

In a covering letter, addressed to LTC John S. Warren, Bahr, alarmed at the news that 1st Air Cav was leaving and that KSCB would be abandoned and destroyed, but having received no notice that FOB 3 would not be withdrawn, wrote: "I am sending Maj. Quamo as my personal representative in this matter. The subject is important enough to warrant my personal appearance, but I feel my place is here, no matter what decision is reached... Believe me Col. Warren, no one is pushing the panic button here. However, I do not feel that you, Col. Johnson, Col. Singlaub nor any others within our channels has fully grasped the situation here... As you know, I have no assigned mission at this time in support of other forces.. nor do I have the assets to carry out missions assigned by our higher headquarters... If my mission is to defend in the Khe Sanh area with the forces available to me and in conjunction with any small, air transportable 'stay-behind' unit, I will be forced to change the physical location of FOB3 to more defensible terrain... There are many questions that must be answered if we stay: (a) What are my orders in reference to destruction of material? (b) For how long do I defend the terrain I shall occupy: (c) When will I be authorized to make a decision to begin an overland withdrawal? (d) What support can I expect from air and artillery? (e) When do the RF/PF forces leave? the CAG Marines? (f) How can a forced of 80 US and possibly 200 Bru defend in an area that previously required a reinforced Marine regiment? (h) What is my mission?... If the decision is reached that FOB 3 will stay, then the withdrawal presently planned by the 1st Air Cav Div and the 26th Marine Brigade may place this organization in the position of another 'Lang Vei.'"[2952]

The statement is historically significant, reflecting the situation at that point in time:[2953]

"1. Lack of significant enemy contact; discovery of cache sites with abundant weapons and ammunition; failure of enemy to employ AA against friendly forces; non-identification of 'hard core' troops; continued enemy rocket and artillery capability; and continued high utilization of FM radio communications; all tend to indicate that the enemy has been merely 'pushed out' of the AO or has faded into unoccupied areas in small groups which can be reformed into fighting forces within a short period of time.

"2. It is believed that once the enemy becomes aware of the evacuation of the Khe-Sanh area by the 1st Air Cav Div, the enemy will, once again, close on the Khe-Sanh Combat Base with the intentions and capability of denying the use of the airfield and attempting to defeat friendly forces found here. This belief is based upon the indications stated in paragraph 1 above.

"3. There are numerous advantages which could accrue to the enemy if he were to once again concentrate and attack Khe-Sanh. These are as follows:

"a. The enemy could 'prove' that Operation Pegasus did not really hurt him.

"b. The enemy would have an opportunity to destroy the force which prevented earlier victory (i.e., the 26th Marines and FOB #3). This would 'save face'.

"c. The enemy realizes that the name of Khe-Sanh still holds considerable world attention which gives it a psychological and political value, even though its military value is negligible.

[2947] Conversation with Roy Bahr, 28 February 1993.
[2948] Conversation with Roy Bahr, 9 December 1993.
[2949] Conversation with Roy Bahr, 28 February 1993.
[2950] MACJ2 Form 34, US Personnel, Missing/Captured in Southeast Asia, Biographical Data, in MIA file, George Quamo; Statement of LTC Roy W. Bahr, 18 April 1968, in MIA Board Proceedings, 22 April 1968, C&C Det, 5th Special Forces Group (Airborne), 1st Special Forces, LTC Ira Snell, Jr., President, in MIA file, George Quamo. MSGT Billy Waugh notes that the U-17 was a fixed-wing aircraft with immense wings enabling it to fly very slowly—even at about 5 miles an hour!—from which one could almost rappel down, and belonged to "the Agency" (i.e., CIA). [Conversation with Billy Waugh, 3 September 1989].
[2951] Conversation with Roy Bahr 28 February 1993.
[2952] LTC Roy W. Bahr, Letter to LTC John S. Warren, C&C Det, 14 April 1968.
[2953] LTC Roy W. Bahr, Letter to CO, C&C Det, 5th SFGA, 13 April 1968, Subj: Study of Khe-Sanh Situation.

"d. An attack on Khe-Sanh could relieve military pressure on other forces presently engaged in other AO's or planned for in future offensive operations.

"e. The Provincial area in which Khe-Sanh is located can serve as a future guerrilla base area south of the 17th Parallel.

"f. Khe-Sanh Combat Base will provide him with equipment, spare parts, demolitions (explosives) material and other 'raw' materials which can be effectively utilized in future operations.

"g. The realization that maintaining sizeable forces at Khe Sanh are extremely costly for allied forces due to dependence on air resupply.

"4. These advantages could prove to be of significant value to be worth an inexpensive gamble which would be of high overall value if successful.

"5. The area occupied by FOB 3 is considered untenable unless: (a) Friendly forces occupy flank positions and (b) sufficient artillery fire support is readily available and responsive. Minimum forces required are judged as: (a) One reinforced regiment and (b) one artillery battalion consisting of two (2) 105MM batteries and one (1) 155 battery. In addition, engineer, quartermaster and medical units would be required to support the troops in Khe-Sanh Combat Base."

This analysis and the covering letter were handed to George Quamo to deliver, and was the reason for his trip to DaNang. There were other speculations as to his trip as well as other facets. He was carrying Bahr's dirty laundry to be washed[2954] along with an odd, unexploded piece of ordnance that had fallen into the FOB-3 camp. James W. Moore, in the operations section of FOB-3, states: "He was going down to personally answer for his failure as Officer in Charge of Special Projects,"[2955] alluding to the fiasco that developed once LtCol Soulang Phetsomphou's complaints had reverberated in the embassy halls.

Soon after take-off, the U-17 pilot made contact with PANAMA air control (on Monkey Mountain, DaNang). Contact with the aircraft was lost at 1645H when it was in the vicinity of AT9887.[2956] At approximately 1845H, FOB 3 was contacted to determine whether or not the U-17 had returned to Khe Sanh since it didn't arrive in DaNang.[2957] The area was extensively searched by air[2958] Since DaNang is on the ocean coast, it was presumed that the aircraft may have plunged into the sea without trace.[2959] Some CIA analysts stirred up a hornet's nest among those at FOB-3 by suggesting that since Quamo was carrying Top Secret materials and since the plane was piloted by a former North Vietnamese as pilot, that Quamo was a spy and had flown to North Vietnam![2960] Saal recalls that Minnicks was livid with rage at such an egregious accusation against Quamo. "What they claimed was beyond our comprehension and it just made everybody irate!"[2961]

LTC Roy Bahr wrote a statement on behalf of George Quamo:

"Major George Quamo, OF 114482, served under my command as Executive Officer of Special Forces Forward Operational Base #3 during the period 1-14 April 1968. Although this period of time was tragically shortened by his disappearance on 14 April 1968 during a flight from Khe Sanh to DaNang, Republic of Vietnam, I feel that I had the opportunity to know and appreciate his outstanding capa bilities. I consider Major Quamo to be one of the most outstanding officers with whom I have served in my military career and he performed the duties of Executive Officer in the most superior manner that I have observed. This officer had a complete and detailed knowledge of the personnel, intelligence, operational and logistical fields which made him invaluable to me as the new commander during a complex combat situation. Major Quamo was highly respected by seniors and subordinates alike, and devoted his utmost attention to the welfare of the US and indigenous troops alike. His interest in learning the language and emotions of the Bru, his concern for the care and evacuation of the Bru refugees, and the patience, kindness and understanding displayed by him at all times are worthy of emulation by all."[2962]

Quamo's remains were discovered commingled with two Asians on 28 June 1974[2963] by a Vietnamese woodcutter clearing an area in the mountains.[2964] The woodcutters wrote a letter to Quamo's family in which they wrote "We are looking forward to receiving a letter from you; in we know your address, we will be able to correspond with you, to tighten the bonds of friendship between our

---

[2954] Conversation with Roy Bahr, 28 February 1993.

[2955] Conversation with James W. Moore, 12 December 1995.

[2956] Refugee Report & Evaluation, 19 Apr 1982, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #123, Folder #283, Case #01201.

[2957] Bahr statement, 18 April 1968, cited.

[2958] The route of the aircraft was searched in the area roughly bounded by YD700100, YD700400, BU000000, and BT000800 by a total of 25 VNAF fixed wing sorties and 16 helicopter sorties on 19 April. Each aircraft had 2 observers, and the air search effort totaled some 80 hours. [Statement of Capt Donald T. Ward, 21 April 1968, in MIA Board Proceedings, cited.

[2959] Mather, Paul D., M.I.A. Accounting for the Missing in Southeast Asia, Washington, D.C.: National Defense University Press, 1994, p. 32, note 12.

[2960] Conversations with Harve Saal, 14 August 1989 and 14 July 1991.

[2961] Conversation with Harve Saal, 14 July 1991.

[2962] LTC Roy Bahr, "Eyewitness Statement," 4 May 1968, in letter from Bahr, 22 April 1993.

[2963] Hand-written note on "Report of Casualty," 2 March 1971, in MIA file, George Quamo.

[2964] Sally Buckley, "Medal to family of a hero," Rochester, N.Y., Democrat and Chronicle, Mon, 11 August 1975, p. 3B.

two peoples."[2965] With the fall of South Vietnam, however, James Quamo was reluctant to respond, feeling it might jeopardize their welfare.

The Quamo family was notified on 15 August 1974 and the remains of George Quamo were released the next day for transport to the United States.[2966] He was buried in Arlington National Cemetery on 21 October 1974 "as his family and several Army officers and soldiers looked on. There were no bands, no generals, and no parades. He died at age 27."[2967]

On 14 April 2007—the exact date of his disappearance—the Post Office building in his home, Averill Park, NY, was dedicated as the "Major George Quamo Post Office Building," in a special ceremony. The renamed Post Office was authorized by Public Law 109-311, signed on 6 Oct 2006, which reads: "To designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 2951 New York Highway 43 in Averill Park, New York, as the 'Major George Quamo Post Office Building.'"[2968]

[As of Sunday, 14 April, work was progressing to abandon KSCB. The word was that everything would be removed by Friday or Saturday (19, 20 April). Lt Cole, USN, a Navy Gunfire Officer at KSCB, had scheduled 7 Arc Light strikes to destroy the base. The general attitude of people on the base is that it's wrong to abandon the base after fighting so long for it. The plan, approved by General Westmoreland, was to adopt a mobile posture, reducing the combat base to less than 1,000 men—mainly a supply base for operations—while retaining a stronger deployed force moving throughout the area. The airstrip would remain intact, but many of the trenches and bunkers would be destroyed. The extent of destruction would depend on what the North Vietnamese do.[2969] What the NVA did was to move at least 9 tanks into the area.[2970] Then, suddenly, the plan was reversed. On 15 April the decision was announced at Khe Sanh that the base would not now be destroyed. Ens Kux, the Officer in Charge of the Seabee detachment, wrote in his diary: "Today at the meeting [0700] I received a very great shock. Late last nite word came down from 'high levels' (I suspect LBJ was just then informed about 'retrograde') that Khe Sanh Combat Base would not be abandoned!.. It'll take at least a week to get our area built-up again."[2971] Those at C-Med had also prepared to depart. The doctors were more than a little confused and disturbed. Would they be moving or not? Suddenly, artillery rounds woke us up to the reality of Khe Sanh. It was about 1020H, and the fire was to continue all day—every 15 or 20 minutes for a total of about 200 rounds, mainly artillery and some rockets. It was cruel but a source of some amusement to recall the article in the Stars & Stripes, the headline reading, "Quiet Ending to a Long Battle," regarding Khe Sanh.[2972]]

15 APRIL 1968

CORRY, SP5 Charles Michael	FOB-3
FORDHAM, 2/Lt Benjamin S.	K/3/26
MATTHEWS, LCPL William Lawrence Jr.	H&S/3/26
PATTERSON, PFC Patrick Chasie	K/3/26
SANDOVAL, SP5 Daniel Flore	FOB-3
THORPE, SGT Dennis Ray	FOB-3

[Operation PEGASUS terminated at 0800H, 15 April, and Operation SCOTLAND II commenced at 0801H.[2973] 3rd Marine Division assumed control of remaining American units at Khe Sanh (4 USMC and 2 USA battalions).[2974] Facing them were 10 NVA maneuver battalions in the Khe Sanh area.[2975] The command at Khe Sanh was Task Force GLICK, and the "concept of operations" for SCOTLAND II was to continue "..offensive operations in SCOTLAND II AO. In conjunction with offensive operations the 26th Mar will be relieved by the 1st Mar through a coordinated phase in, phase out plan. Maximum emphasis will be placed on tactics that emphasize flexibility and mobility in order to close with the enemy with concentration of forces decisive points with a view to denying him freedom of action and inflicting maximum enemy casualties in personnel and equipment. Minimum forces will be employed in the protection of fixed installation and/or strong points commensurate with security required."[2976]

Casualties for Operation PEGASUS: KIA: 59 (USA), 51 (USMC), 33 (ARVN) for a total of 143 KIA. WIA: 236 (USA), 459 (USMC), 187 (ARVN) for a total of 882. There were 5 MIA (all USA). There were 638 NVA KIA (by USA), 404 NVA KIA (by USMC), and 260 NVA KIA (by ARVN) for a total of 1302 NVA KIA. There were a total of 18 NVA captured.[2977] 26th Marine Regiment lost

[2965] Letter (original in Vietnamese plus an English translation) dated 5 September 1974, in possession of James Quamo.
[2966] Conversation with LtCol James G. Cole, 20 September 1991. LtCol Cole was Chief of POW/MIA Affairs in the Pentagon.
[2967] Tom Haggerty, "The Perfumed Prince."
[2968] Dedication Ceremony brochure.
[2969] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary Entry for 14 April 1968.
[2970] UPI release in Stars & Stripes, 17 April 1968.
[2971] Ens Martin Kux, Diary Entry, 15 April 1968.
[2972] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry.
[2973] CG Prov Corps Vietnam 170731Z/Apr68 in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Apr 68 file, Doc #136.
[2974] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, April, 1968, p. 11.
[2975] Gen Westmoreland 161310Z/Apr68, MAC 5058, DMZ/Northern ICTZ Report #1, 150900-160900 April 1968.
[2976] CG Task Force GLICK 151610Z/Apr68, Operation Order 2-68, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc. Apr 68 file, Doc #119.
[2977] I ACD AAR Opn PEGASUS, Tab D, Losses. These are broken down to 7 officers and 52 enlisted KIA, 2 officers and

43 KIA, 287 WIA (evacuated), 80 WIA (not evacuated) for a total of 367 casualties.[2978] 1st Marine Regiment lost 5 KIA, 30 WIA (evacuated), 7 WIA (not evacuated) and 0 MIA.[2979]]

Lt Fordham was killed around noon.[2980] PFC Wayne E. Shumaker [K/3/26] recalls: "It was a sad day. He was my platoon commander and one of the finest officers I ever served with. I happened to be one of the Marines who pulled his body onto the CH-46 in a hail of mortar fire. He was to be our last casualty in Khe Sanh."[2981] CPL Dennis M. Mannion notes that he was probably the last person to speak with him: "He got hit just as he was running for the helicopter after I ran for mine."[2982]

FOB 3 had requested more personnel to man their perimeter, and the Special Forces headquarters at Nha Trang had sent up 22 extra soldiers. "Now they were all Special Forces, but they were what we called 'candy stripers'. They had that little, pencil-thin [yellow stripe] on their berets for personnel who do not have Special Forces training [but are assigned to Special Forces units], like supply or personnel. We had three people that came up—no combat experience or anything, and one of them was my man, the only guy that could type fast enough to do all the things we had to. His name was Sandoval. He asked me one day if he could go out to the line where the road came between [Bn 1/9] and FOB-3, what we called 'bunker six one' to visit his buddies Corry and Thorpe. I was 45 then and already had 3 tours in Korea. So I said: 'Son, I'm gong to tell you right now, you'd better stay here in this bunker where you got 12 by 12s between you and the rounds coming in. 'O, I wanna go and see my buddies!' I said, 'OK, [but] if you get out of the trenchline, if you don't have on your helmet, or if you take off your flak jacket, I'm going to fine you a hundred dollars if I catch you.' So I let him go out there and the three of them had jumped up on the side of the trenchline and were sitting side-by-side talking, with Sandoval in the middle. The round hit Sandoval. It blew out a 20-foot chunk of our trenchline. We had smoking legs and boots, pieces of torso, and hamburger meat, and all three of them were just annihilated... They were highly misplaced people stuck into a position that they shouldn't of been allowed to be in. I look back on it now and I wish that we'd never asked for them. We could of handled it with our combat troops."[2983]

Larry Payne remembers that the incoming round hit a small steel post that stuck a foot or 18-inches above the trenchline to hold the sand bags in place and sprayed the whole trenchline. "Really, there was nothing to be found."[2984]

Charles Almy, the S-1 of FOB-3 made out the casualty reports and sent them out. "All I could think about was Sandy's family getting the news. The whole war was getting to me; we could not get back at the enemy... All I could do was duck rounds."[2985]

16 April 1968

ADAMS, SWF2 Edward Cody	CBMU-301/B
AMMON, 2/Lt William Resor	M/3/26
AVERITTE, CPL William Clayton	D/1/9
BOYNTON, HM3 Charles B Jr.	H&S/1/9
BROWN, PFC David Dee Jr.	C/1/9
CHRISTIAN, LCPL Daniel Keith	A/1/9
CICIO, PFC Robert Daniel	C/1/9
COLEMAN, PFC William Frank	D/1/26
CRAIG, PFC Bruce Keith	A/1/9
CRAUN, PFC Gale Eugene	C/1/9
GUILLORY, PFC Wendell	C/1/9
HABERMAN, PRC David	A/1/9
HAGARA, SGT Leslie Paul	A/1/9
HAYDEN, 1/Lt Michael Pym	A/1/9
HIMMER, CAPT Lawrence	C/1/9
HINKLE, PFC Jack Lee	D/1/9
HURLBERT, CPL Roy Douglas	C/1/9
JACKSON, CPL Nathaniel Earnest Lee	C/1/9
JOHNSTON, HN Dennis Neil	H&S/1/9
JOHNSTON, PFC Richard William	C/1/9
KILGORE, PFC Danny Ray	C/1/9
LE BLANC, CPL Alfred Leroy	D/1/9
LITTLEFIELD, CPL Robert Henry	A/1/9
MARTINEZ, PFC Mauro	C/1/9
MC CLELLAND, PFC Aubrey David	D/1/9
MEDEIROS, LCPL William Correia	A/1/9
MOISE, PFC Herve Jean	A/1/9

3 enlisted MIA, 20 officers and 216 WIA. [Ibid., Tab K, Casualty and Medevac]. Provisional Corps Vietnam lists 41 USA KIA, 51 USMC KIA, 33 ARVN KIA, for a total of 125 KIA; 207 USA WIA, 459 USMC WIA, and 187 WIA, for a total of 853 WIA; and 5 USA MIA. [Provisional Corps Vietnam AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 16, [2978] 26Mar, Periodic Opns Summary Report #16 (PEGASUS) 142000H-150800H APR 68 (Final Report). The 26 Mar AAR Opn PEGASUS lists the same number of KIA, but has 293 WIA (evacuated) and 82 WIA (not evacuated) [26 Mar AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 9]. 1/26 reported 6 KIA and 66 WIA. [1/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 3]. 2/26 reported 23 KIA, 125 WIA (evacuated), 31 WIA (not evacuated), and 2 DOW. [2/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 6]. 3/26 reported 12 KIA and 42 WIA [3/26 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 6]. 1/9 reported 23 KIA and 133 WIA. [1/9 AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 8].

[2979] 1st Mar AAR Opn PEGASUS, p. 45.

[2980] Dennis, email, Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board, posted 15 April 2002.

[2981] Wayne Shumaker, email, Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board, posted 15 April 2002.

[2982] Conversation with Dennis Mannion, 31 August 1986.

[2983] Conversation with James W. Moore, 12 December 1995.

[2984] Conversation with Larry Payne, 17 September 1988.

[2985] Charles Almy, "Recollections of the Defense of Khe Sanh, Viet Nam," 14-28 June 1971, unpublished paper.

MOORE, PFC Larry Gene	C/1/9
OWENS, CPL Robert Franklin	D/1/9
OWENS, PFC Timothy Eugene	C/1/9
RAMPULLA, LCPL Terry James	A/1/9
REDENIUS, CPL David Gary	C/1/9
RICE, SGT Robert	A/1/9
RUIZ, CPL Jose	C/1/9
RUSH, PFC Marvin Gene	D/1/9
SCHAVELIN, LCPL Hugh Ernest	D/1/9
SWEET, PFC Jerry Alan	C/1/9
WELLS, PFC Robert James Jr.	A/1/9
WEST, SSGT Seth Lee Jr.	C/1/9
WILLIAMS, PFC Nathaniel Mearlo	C/1/9
WILSON, HN Wilmer Dwayne	H&S/1/9
WRIGHT, CPL Robert	C/1/9
WYMER, PFC William Wayne	A/1/9

On 16 April, 1/9 occupied the high ground of Hill 689 (XD803409) with Companies A, C, and C. Co B/1/9 was positioned on Hill 552, southeast of 689. Other friendly forces which had previously occupied the high ground to the northwest of 689 and the low ground to 1/9's north (Lang Ta Tuc), had departed. It was rapidly becoming time for the 26th Marines Regiment and its battalions to depart, relieved by 1st Marine Regiment and its supporting battalions (1/1, 2/1, 2/3, and 3/4).

On 13 April, Co A on a routine search and destroy mission to the west made contact with remnants of a NVA platoon at approximately XD788405 resulting in 3 NVA killed and 2 POW captured.[2986] On 15 April, a routine company-sized patrol made contact at XD814396 resulting in one NVA killed.[2987] From these contacts, it appeared enemy FO teams were returning into 1/9's AO with small sized units. Also during these patrols from 08 – 16 April, numerous caches of enemy equipment and munitions were located.

On 16 April, Co A/1/9 was ordered to conduct a search and clear operation to the southwest of Hill 689, near the area of Co A's previous contact on 13 April, the high ground from XD793399 to XD788404.[2988] The assumption was that there would be little or no enemy soldiers remaining in the area. The mission was to secure the high ground and check it out for forward observer teams.[2989]

At 0900H, Capt Henry D. Banks (A/1/9) moved out of the 1/9 perimeter on Hill 689 with two reinforced platoons: A-1, commanded by 1/Lt Francis B. Lovely, Jr., and A-2, commanded by 1/Lt Michael Pym Hayden. There were also 2 60mm mortars and a total personnel strength of 85 men in the patrol.[2990] A thick fog blanketed the area, causing Co A's advance to hold up a short while.[2991] Following prep fires on the objective (XD794398) of 12 rounds of 81mm mortars,[2992] the patrol proceeded through their first checkpoint (XD805404), almost directly south from Hill 689 using as much terrain and concealment as possible. The Marines regarded this as "just a normal, routine patrol."[2993]

Co "A" then reached XD797397 where A-1 set in 2 squads and dispatched the remaining squad (3rd) to XD795398. (A-2 was following in trace of A-1).[2994] The plan was to stay on the reverse slope of the ridge line with only a small observation element sent to the top to survey the area.[2995] Two squads were dispatched forward to secure the ridgeline, one squad on one side, one on the other side of the ridgeline.[2996] After the squad moving up the forward face of the hill reached this high ground, the squad leader, LCPL R. L. McClausen sent out a fire team proceeding by law crawl to check out the low ground on the western side of the ridgeline. This squad took sniper fire from their direct front (XD794399) which Lt Lovely at the time (1045H) estimated as a single sniper. The squad deployed on line and, under a base of fire from 2 fire teams, the A-1 Platoon Sergeant, SGT Robert Rice, moved one fire team on line in an attempt to clear the sniper position. He was shot in the head by small arms and instantly died while 2 other men of the fire team were severely wounded by small arms fire. Capt Banks ordered Lt Lovely to deploy his 2 remaining squads to assist 3rd Squad. In doing so, all came under heavy small arms fire which Lt Lovely now estimated to be an enemy squad.[2997] Again, extremely accurate sniper fire from an estimated eight bunkers set up in a horseshoe shape, killed three or four Marines instantly with head shots.[2998]

[2986] 1/9 ComdC Apr68; Statement of Capt Hartzell in CG, 3rd MarDiv 6/RMcCT/bjw, 20 May 1968, Subj: Informal Investigation of an operation conducted by 1st Battalion, 9th Marines in the vicinity of Khe Sanh, RVN, 16-18 April 1968 while attached to and serving with the 26th Marines (Rein), including statements and testimony. [Hereinafter referred to as: Investigation]

[2987] 1/9 ComdC April 1968; Statement of Capt Hartzell in Investigation.

[2988] Statement of Capt Hartzell, in Investigation.

[2989] Comments of Capt Charles B. Hartzell, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[2990] Statement of Capt Henry D. Banks in Investigation; Statement of 1/Lt Francis B. Lovely, Jr., in Investigation.

[2991] Statement of HN Richard M. Itezak, in Investigation.

[2992] Findings of Fact, Para 7, and Banks Statement, in Investigation.

[2993] Statement of SGT Paul J. Cogley, in Investigation. SGT Cogley was Squad Leader of 1st Squad, A-2.

[2994] A-2 was in the rear because it had taken casualties the previous day. [Statement of HN Richard A. Itezak, Corpsman with A-2, in Investigation. [The 1/9 ComdC for Apr 1968, however, does not indicate any contact by Co "A" on 15 April].

[2995] Statement of Capt Banks in Investigation.

[2996] Comments of Capt Charles B. Hartzell in HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[2997] Statement of 1/Lt Francis B. Lovely, Jr., in Investigation.

[2998] Comments of Capt Charles B. Hartzell, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

The first Marine KIA was CPL Robert H. Littlefield: "The first shot that was fired went through Littlefield and almost hit me. I thought he was going to live. I was carrying down the body of a wounded guy—I did that so many times, and toward dark, I saw Littlefield still laying there, but by then he was dead. The only thing I can figure is that the helicopters couldn't get in there and he just bled to death. But he was walking under his own power, under a lot of pain, but walking down the hill with a corpsman. It looked like it [the round] went through his upper arm or chest."[2999]

A Letter and a Poem from a Wife
By Suzi Littlefield

"Bobby was next to the youngest of five children. His mother became very ill when Bobby was still in grammar school. He and his siblings were placed in an orphanage for a period of two years due to this. Due to many hardships growing up, Bobby was mature way beyond his years. Bobby and I met, fell in love and a year and eight months later we were married. Bobby came to me and told me had joined the Marine Corps for me. He wanted to make something of himself. All his interests, all his dreams were of making a life for us.

"Bobby's two older brothers were already in the Marine Corps when he joined. We were married three months when he came to me with orders for V.N. in his hand for his older brother Earl and himself. Bobby said he should go... Bobby's decision only made me love and respect him more... Bobby's middle older brother, Ernie, was only back from V.N. two weeks when Bobby left to go. Bobby arrived V.N. June 1st, 1967. He only had 45 days left when he was killed.[3000]

Bobby
I was so blessed to find you
The person I was born to love
The special kind of love we shared
If only for a short time

You changed my life with just one kiss
You surpassed my everything
You gave your all in life and love
If only for a short time

You were all I ever wanted
You are all I'll ever need
I wish everyone could know this kind of love
If only for a short time

Life is not forever
Love is
Your wife
If only for a short time. Suzi.[3001]

Capt Banks then deployed A-2 (Lt Hayden) to a position to the right of A-1 to sweep the ridge area from which A-1 was receiving fire. Based on the quantity of fire received and the small area, the enemy force at this time was estimated to be a fire team, certainly no more than a squad. The enemy had, however, held his fire. When A-2 assaulted, they were cut down by small arms fire. "It appeared that when the Second Platoon had got into position to assault, that they [NVA] were just waiting for them, and just cut them down with small arms fire."[3002]

Because of their situation, Lt Hayden said that the only thing they could do now was to take the hill, to attack.[3003] Lt Hayden, in front of the assaulting A-2 and covered by a machinegun team, advanced some 50 – 60 feet when he was hit and mortally wounded.[3004] "We didn't move 15 feet when Lt Hayden got hit and was killed. Suddenly they opened up and everybody it the ground. We stayed that way for at least an hour."[3005] While the machinegun team attempted to spot the source of the enemy fire, SGT Homer D. Compton was hit (about 15 feet behind Lt Hayden), and the Marines withdrew "because we didn't have anyone around to cover us."[3006] Lt Lovely took over both platoons since both Lt Hayden and the Platoon Sergeant were now dead.[3007] Capt Banks attempted to withdraw at this point, but was informed by his platoon commander that the Marines were wounded within 10 meters of some of the enemy bunkers.[3008] Due to the close proximity of the enemy force and the extremely accurate sniper fire, Co A was unable to extract their casualties. At this time (1130H), Co A estimated they had 10 men killed and 20 wounded. Capt Banks requested assistance to extract casualties and break contact.[3009] Co A established a LZ at XD794402 to [2999] Conversation with David Ford, 16 May 1992.

[3000] Letter from Suzi Littlefield, 6 July 1999.
[3001] Poem printed in Khe Sanh Veterans' Red Clay, Issue #47 (Fall, 2000), p. 44.
[3002] Statement of Capt Banks in Investigation.
[3003] Ibid..
[3004] Statement of PFC Jesus A. Santiago in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file of 1/Lt Michael Hayden.
[3005] Statement of SGT Paul J. Cogley, in Investigation.
[3006] Statement of PFC Jesus A. Santiago in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file of 1/Lt Michael Hayden.
[3007] Statement of 1/Lt Francis B. Lovely, Jr., in Investigation; Comments of 1/Lt Lovely in HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.
[3008] Statement of Capt Banks, in Investigation.
[3009] Ibid.

medevac its casualties which were not under direct observation of the enemy position.[3010]

The A-2 Platoon Corpsman, HN Richard R. Itezak, spotted LCPL James A. Hunt. "I had to put a dressing on his stomach before I took him back because his intestines would fall out if we didn't block them."[3011] HN Itezak was then informed of more casualties in a nearby bomb crater. Among the WIA there was LCPL Rampulla, KIA. By this time, the Platoon Sergeant, Cpl Homer D. Compton, had been wounded and "after that I was informed of many KIA and WIA. At the time, I wasn't aware of the number because everybody was sufficiently excited. Nobody was really sure of themselves, then. There were 3 that told me that they knew for sure Lieutenant Hayden, [the] first squad's M-79 man, PFC Haberman, [and] our platoon's right guide, who is Lance Corporal Herve Moise [were KIA]. This will give you some idea of that condition the platoon was in... I couldn't get to the dead and the wounded who had fallen right by the machine-gun site [due to a NVA sniper]... I was going to make a try and the Marines that were left said they were dead so don't worry about them."[3012]

Soon after Co A began to take fire (at about 1000H), LtCol John H. ("Blacky") Cahill, CO of 1/9, was informed that Co A was in contact with enemy in bunkered positions which allowed the point elements to enter the complex before opening fire. Cahill asked Banks if he needed assistance; Banks stated he could handle the situation. Nevertheless, Cahill placed one company on alert and moved the Battalion Command Group to a forward position on Hill 689 (XD803409) to observe and control the situation. At this time, Capt Banks requested no fire due to his men intermingled with the NVA and that he was pinned down by small arms fire, grenades, and mortars. Hill 689 began to receive rockets.[3013]

At 1215H, GARDEN VALLEY 6 ACTUAL, LtCol John M. Cahill,[3014] ordered Co D/1/9 (Capt John W. Cargile) to prepare to assist A/1/9. At 1245H, Co D saddled up and moved out with 2 platoons: D-1 under the leadership of 2/Lt David W. Tuckwiller, and D-2, under the leadership of 1/Lt Kenneth J. Wilkinson. D-3 remained on Hill 600, just south of Hill 689, for security. Total strength of the Co D group was D-1 (37 + 1), D-2 (30 + 1), and Headquarters (7 + 1) for a total of 74 enlisted and 3 officers.[3015] With D-2 leading followed by the headquarters element and D-1 in the rear, the two platoons of D/1/9 arrived at their jump-off location (XD799401) at approximately 1430H. D-2 then moved up the northwest slope to assist A/1/9 evacuate its dead and wounded.[3016]

CHARLIE Company was given the mission to sweep the area of the bunker and sniper complex from the rear and clean out enemy resistance. [3017] and sweep to the north and east along the high ground Co C [Capt Lawrence Himmer] departed Hill 689 with 2 platoons: C-1, led by 2/Lt David O. Carter, and C-2, led by SSGT Seth Lee West, Jr., and proceeded to its attack position (at XD794398), a large bomb crater where LtCol Cahill, Capt Banks, and Capt Himmer gathered. Capt Banks reported that his men remained within the area of contact, pinned down by enemy in bunkers in a U-shaped area. LtCol Cahill proposed a pincer movement with Co D approaching from the right and Co C from the left.

At about 1600,[3018] C-1 [Lt Carter] got on line and moved through a wooded portion of the hill (XD795398), moving to about 20 meters from the top, with C-2 on line behind him. Lt Carter only had 2 squads, one being on OP.[3019] They were to run into another bunker complex from which the Marines to this point had not taken fire.[3020] Lt Carter, at the head of his platoon, led the assault. His left flank squad was taken under fire from enemy in spider traps, bunkers, and bomb craters to his front and left flank, and he took 4 casualties. Lt Carter received a shattered forearm from the fire and shrapnel in his jaw, but continued to lead the assault.[3021] PFC

[3010] Statement of 1/Lt Francis B. Lovely, Jr., in Investigation. According to Capt Banks, Cos C and D arrived about 1600 and Co A was, by that time, no longer involved in taking the objective as it was retrieving and rescuing its WIA and KIA and securing a LZ. At approx. 1830, the CP group of Co A was hit by a 60mm mortar and Capt Banks was evacuated. [Banks statement in Investigation.]. Lt Lovely assumed command of Co A. It became dark, and LtCol Cahill ordered withdrawal. Co D withdrew through Co A while Co A held the position until about 0005H on 17 April when it moved to Hill 689, arriving there with 51 of its original 84 men. [Statement of Lovely, in Investigation].

[3011] Statement of HN Richard M. Itezak, in Investigation.

[3012] Ibid.

[3013] Statement of LtCol John H. Cahill, in Investigation.

[3014] Cahill was an enlisted Marine during World War II and commissioned through a meritorious promotion program as an officer in 1947. He served in Korea as a Platoon Leader and Executive Officer of a rifle company. Following his service as G-4 of FMFPAC (forward), he requested service in Vietnam and served 2 months as the G-3 Plans, Division, prior to being assigned as CO of 1/9. [Testimony of Cahill in Investigation.].

[3015] Statement of Capt John W. Cargile, in Investigation. The Headquarters element included LCPL Louis R. Johnson (FAC), HM3 William E. Gessner (Corpsman), PFC Ferris (Arty FO), PFC Tunstall (Arty FO radio operator), PFC Carey Wayne McGiffin (Bn Scout), PFC Kenneth Seebach (Bn radio operator), and LCPL Raymond L. Balzan (Co radio operator). [Statement of Cargile, in Investigation.]

[3016] Statement of Cargile, in Investigation.

[3017] Comments of Capt Charles B. Hartzell, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[3018] Statement of CPL John S. Kocsis, in Investigation.

[3019] Statement of 1/Lt William C. Connelly, C/1/9, in Investigation. Lt Connelly was XO of Co "C".

[3020] Comments of Capt Charles B. Hartzell, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[3021] Statement of HM3 Daniel P. Baker in Bronze Star Medal file of 2/Lt David O. Carter. Baker was the Corpsman for C-

George Cimmerman and Lt Carter's radioman, LCPL Michael J.; Fedorawicz, were also hit, and of the casualties, 3 were killed: Cpl Roy Douglas Hurlburt, PFC Larry Gene Moore, and PFC Richard William Johnston.[3022] Lt Carter spotted some NVA positions on the southeast slope as he moved into position.

Noting that Co D was pinned down, Lt Carter was later to relate "..the only choice for CHARLIE Company was to get on line in classic Marine fashion with bayonets and whatever we had and come up the hill at them... We got to the top of the hill. They were everywhere. They were dug in bunkers. I was hit three times. I went up to [there with] 32 men and only 8 men didn't get hit. We did one helluva job up there. I think the only thing that saved us was basic aggressiveness at this time."[3023]

Capt Himmer then directed SSGT West to move C-2 to protect the left flank where the positions were located. SSGT West designated one fire team and one gun team together with a M-79 man to cover this area.[3024]

At the same time, Lt Carter's right flank squad had advanced forward 75 meters and taken 4 casualties: CPL Jose Ruiz, the Squad Leader, and PFC Wendell Guillory; both were killed, and LCPL Smith, a new man, was wounded.[3025] When the Platoon Sergeant and Platoon Commander were wounded, CPL Jose Ruiz had taken charge of the platoon, moving about the fire-swept area, oblivious of the danger, to render first aid to the wounded. Cpl John Kocsis later wrote: "..he got down and gave each and every one of them the best medical care he could. After this he and his men continued on the assault. There he gave his life by jumping in front of a wounded Marine to save his life."[3026]

At this time, Capt Himmer told SSGT West to bring his platoon forward and pass through Lt Carter's platoon and continue the assault. As SSGT West's platoon cleared the crest, they took fire from their front but could not locate the enemy positions. His left flank squad saw enemy reinforcements assaulting from their left flank. They were taken under fire. PFC Robert Daniel Cicio was killed in this deadly encounter and PFC George Panykaninec was seriously wounded; Cpl Nathaniel Earnest Jackson was wounded, and the squad was pinned down.[3027]

ROBERT CICIO: A MOTHER'S LETTER, A CLIPPING[3028]

"Bobby loved his family, friends, school, but he loved his country best. When I pleaded with him to finish school before enlisting, he said he was needed now. He believed in the war. He said a people were fighting for its freedom and we had to help, just as we were helped by other countries when our country fought for its freedom. When I told him to be careful, he said, 'I'll be careful, mom, but I'll never run. In his last letter home [dated 14 April] he wrote 'I really feel I helped defend Khe Sanh which will help to end the war sooner.'"

"The Robert Cicio Memorial Peace Scholarship has been instituted.. The award will be made.. to a second semester sophomore with a major or concentrate in Math.."

"Known as 'Chico', Cicio, 20, left school after the Spring 1967 semester, having completed his sophomore year. He was an original brother of ITK, having helped in its formation last year.."

"Bobby joined the Little League and was in the Boy Scouts... As a guard and a tackle, Bob Cicio lettered all four years of high school; he also received two letters playing defense on the lacrosse team. In 1965, 'Chico' Cicio went to the State University of New York at Oneonta. One of his first acts there was to form a fraternity with some other freshmen in his dormitory.. Iota Tau Kappa...[His roommate] Bob Hoch, said, 'Everyone really respected

---

1. Lt Carter later received another wound, this time in his hip, while jumping into an enemy bunker complex. Baker writes: "He was helping evacuation procedures on his wounded men when he was finally ordered to go to the LZ himself. He could not find the LZ, so he returned to Hill 689 on foot, alone. When he reached Hill 689 he was in shock from loss of blood and the exertion from his trip. He would not succumb to medical treatment until he had reported to his superior officer about the condition of his men." Lt Carter's life had been saved by PFC Eddie R. Pritchett, a machinegun ammunition carrier attached to C/1/9. Although himself wounded, PFC Pritchett continued in the assault. He knocked down Lt Carter to keep him from being hit, and immediately placed him in a protected place to prevent further injury. Then, with complete disregard for his own safety, he boldly jumped into an emplacement occupied by NVA and aggressively engaged them. [Statement of CPL John S. Kocsis in Bronze Star Medal file on PFC Eddie R. Pritchett].

[3022] Statement of 1/Lt William C. Connelly, in Investigation.

[3023] Comments of 1/Lt David O. Carter, 24 March 1969, HQMC Oral History Tape #3950.

[3024] Ibid.

[3025] Ibid.

[3026] Statement of CPL John C. Kocsis in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file on CPL Jose Ruiz.

[3027] Statement of 1/Lt William C. Connelly, in Investigation.

[3028] Letter from Nellie Cicio, 4 February 1997; Joseph M. Treen, "Robert Cicio;" various clippings furnished by Nellie Cicio. Cicio's last letter home was printed in the Khe Sanh Veteran's Red Clay, Issue #44 (Summer, 1999), p. 20.

him and looked up to him because of his physical strength and personality. He attracted people... At the end of his sophomore year, Cicio dropped out of school and joined the Marines

SSGT West was moving with Cpl David G. Redenius's squad in the center when they were pinned down. SSGT West, observing a wounded Marine lying in a forward area, ignored the danger to his own life as he dashed across the fire-swept area to reach the WIA Marine, dodging rounds of a deadly sniper who had already taken a great toll of Marines. While administering first aid, he was mortally wounded by the sniper. "This Marine gave his life trying to help another and was in fact a great man and Marine."[3029] SGT Leslie Paul Hagara, the Platoon Sergeant of C-2, was killed. Hagara had extended his Vietnam tour so that his son could have an operation. He had been "short" but said the operation his son needed was expensive and if he extended, the military would take care of it. He had gone up to locate the NVA sniper and took a round in his face.[3030] When the SSGT Platoon Commander was killed, CPL John S. Kocsis took over as Platoon Commander.[3031] From this squad, PFC Aubrey McClelland was killed and CPL Earl R. Best, LCPL Parris E. Joyce, CPL Jose A. Kosaka, and PFC Lawrence E. Hutson were wounded. CPL Redenius was MIA[3032] (later determined to be KIA). Reacting instantly, CPL Melvin R. Curry "took charge of the platoon and fearlessly maneuvered about the fire-swept terrain deploying the Marines into a defensive perimeter and directing the delivery of a heavy volume of fire on the hostile emplacements."[3033]

Charlie Company's attack had enabled Alfa Company to extract all of their WIA and most of their KIA and returned them to a collection point.[3034] Co A had established a LZ at the bottom of a relatively steep hill, out of direct mortar fire, but still taking occasional sniper fire. Co A evacuated its casualties from about 1600 until 2400, getting its last casualties out about 0030 on the 17th of April.[3035] LCPL Gerald Wayne Post, a Forward Air Controller with A/1/9, used a cigarette lighter to bring in helicopters for 6 hours after darkness precluded use of smoke to guide them.[3036] Capt Banks was wounded about 1600, and 2/Lt Lovely assumed command of A Co.[3037]

Cpl Hubert H. Hunnicutt's squad (3nd Squad in C-2)[3038] on the right flank made the best progress, advancing about 100 meters across the top of the hill. (But it was this good advance that was to prove to be tragic). Cpl Hunnicutt was wounded along with PFC Darwin G. Rice; PFC Nathaniel M. Williams and PFC Mauro Martinez were killed.[3039] PFC Martinez had thrown his body over Cpl William P. Holland in order to shield him from the rounds. In doing this, he was fatally wounded. "He paid the supreme sacrifice in order that one of his buddies would live."[3040]

Then Captain Himmer was hit. "We tried to take care of him and bandage him up. We were pinned down by a sniper, I would say about 6 feet in front of us. I told Capt Himmer not to get up and he just got up and started walking right on top of the sniper, and the sniper shot him and he fell right beside a bomb crater. He sat right straight back up and looked over, and the whole right hand side of his face was torn up. I tried to get to him at that point, but I couldn't because of the sniper.. This was about 1800. Myself and 2 more men went up there and tried to get him. The 2 men had a stretcher, ready to put Captain Himmer on the stretcher. The sniper popped up and killed one of ours and put some rounds in the back of Captain Himmer."[3041]

Meanwhile (at about 1630H), Capt Cargile moved Co "D" over the crest of the hill but had negative sighting of anyone from "C" Company. D-1, which was to hook up with Co C, was on the back side of the hill, but could not make contact with them. D-2 was called to move up to D-1, but couldn't, due to accurate sniper fire and mortars. There were dead and wounded Co D was trying to extract. It was getting darker and helicopters weren't arriving.[3042] HM3 William G. Gessner, senior corpsman of D Co, attended LCPL James C. Lee who had been hit in his hand and assisted HM3 Hurtz [D/1/9] in the treatment of the seriously wounded PFC Floyd R.

[3029] Statement of CPL William T. Parr in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file on SSGT Seth L. West. SGT West was married and had two sons. [Conversation with Mark S. Miller, 28 December 1989]. The remains of SSGT West were recovered on 22 April. Already badly decomposed, the mortuary in DaNang was "unable to determine specific cause of death due to condition of remains." [CG 3rd MarDiv 250530Z/Apr68, Report of Death, to SecNav, in Bronze Star Medal file of SSGT West.

[3030] Conversation with Ed Troup, 28 March 1993.

[3031] Bronze Star Medal Citation for CPL John S. Kocsis; Statement of Capt Hartzell in Investigation.

[3032] Statement of 1/Lt William C. Connelly, in Investigation.

[3033] Bronze Star Medal Citation, CPL Melvin R. Curry.

[3034] Statement of Capt Hartzell in Investigation; Comments of Capt Hartzell, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[3035] Comments of 2/Lt Francis Brian Lovely, Jr., HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[3036] Statements of HM2 James F. Ray and 2/Lt Francis B. Lovely in Bronze Star Medal file of LCPL Gerald Wayne Post.

[3037] Ibid.

[3038] Statement of CPL H.H. Hunnicutt, II, in Investigation.

[3039] Statement of 1/Lt William C. Connelly, in Investigation.

[3040] Data from NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 30 May 1968, in Navy Cross (posthumous) file on PFC Mauro Martinez.

[3041] Statement of CPL John S. Kocsis, in Investigation. CPL Kocsis was 3rd Squad Leader, C-1.

[3042] Statement of SSGT Carl O. Stucker [D-2], HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

Reno.[3043] As they moved over the crest, they came under mortar fire and very accurate sniper fire. The First Platoon moved quite well despite the fire. The terrain was not what they expected. Once over the crest, they ran into a slope that plunged into a draw. D-1 found themselves on a finger covered with heavy shrubbery. There were no sightings of Co C.

It was now about 1745. HM3 Gessner made it to a bomb crater along with CPL Peter W. Johnson and PFC Carey Wayne McGiffin. "An AK-47 was to our left front and he was raising havoc. After we had been there 15 minutes we decided to scrape out some hasty holes inside the crater. At this time LCPL William John Dolan crawled up to the crater (he had been a stretcher bearer). Then for some reason he stood up and started running to the right front. After taking 3 steps we saw a bullet hit his head. He went down and we heard him moaning. PFC McGiffin said he would get him. He crawled out of the crater and one minute later a mortar round landed in the depression he had made. I was knocked out. When I came to, I heard Johnson asking for me. I crawled over to him and put battle dressings on his wounds."[3044] Gessner and Johnson helped each other to the LZ, arriving about 1915. HM3 Gessner then gave Johnson a shot of morphine and, assisted by HM3 Hurtz, gave mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to one Marine for an hour and a half until the Marine died. Helicopters retrieved the wounded, and HM3 Gessner lefrt at 2230H.[3045]

Capt Cargile testified: "Our movement in any forward direction was nominal due to intense fire and extremely accurate sniper fire. Already, I had 5 KIA of my own and could see that I would have my hands full getting my own KIA/WIA out, let alone A and C. We were receiving the sniper's fire from 2 to 3 directions. Still we could not pinpoint the source. The snipers or sniper were very good. Four out of my five KIAs had been shot in the head. To continue to charge an unseen enemy would obviously be foolish. So, with darkness approaching, I consolidated and attempted to retrieve all the dead."[3046] The Marines were able, by slowly crawling forward, to pull back three of their KIA, and were about to move out again to retrieve a fourth KIA, but with darkness, they were ordered to leave him. "To attempt to get the last man, further out than the other, was a definite risk of 2 or 3 lives at least. The man left, CPL Robert F. Owens, was reported dead by several men, specifically, Sgt Fielding, Plt Sgt 1st Plt, and 1st Lt Wilkerson."[3047] Co "D" walked back to Hill 689 that night under illumination flares.[3048]

The KIA that were retrieved were, from D-1: CPL Alfred L. LeBlanc (KIA by sniper wound to head), Cpl William Averitte (KIA by sniper round to head), LCPL Hugh E. Shavelin (KIA by sniper wound to head), PFC William John Dolan (WIA, sniper wound to head—but later DOW on 17 April), HN Charles B. Boynton, Jr. (MIA, last seen helping the wounded HN W. R. Harper to the LZ) and from C-2: PFC Jack Lee Hinkle (KIA by shrapnel wound to chest), and PFC Marvin G. Rush (MIA, last seen helping PFC Floyd R. Reno to the LZ and was returning to his machinegun team, but did not arrive).[3049]

At 1830H, with Co D pinned down unable to advance, and with dusk, Lt Connelly was told to extract all the wounded and any of the dead they could and pull back. By 1915H, all the wounded had been pulled back except CPL Hunnicutt who was in a bomb crater in front of the line.[3050]

LCPL Ross M. Kasminoff [C/1/9] was in a bomb crater along with several other Marines, including PFC Antonio Borjas (who was in the process of bringing a paralyzed Marine back into the lines) setting a base of fire when he heard Cpl Hunnicutt yelling to them from another crater about 125 meters to their right front.. Hunnicutt yelled that he had with him 2 WIA and 2 KIA and that the WIA were unable to move. Kasminoff yelled to him, asking if he could run. Hunnicutt replied he could, but didn't want to abandon the 2 WIA.[3051]

It was now about 1940H as 11 men of Co C protected the others moving 3 KIA which were to be extracted by helicopter. It was obvious that the choppers wouldn't get there for some time. Lt Connelly called the S-3, Capt Hartzell, and said he thought he was about to be overrun and that he had all the Co C WIA. Capt Hartzell told him to withdraw.[3052]

In the crater with CPL Hunnicutt, CPL Redenius was shot in the head, bleeding profusely, and was going into convulsions. "He must have lost 2 quarts of blood in about 10 seconds. I got him down in the bottom of the crater and put his head up a little bit, sort of stop the bleeding, but then he started throwing up dark blood."[3053] Everyone in the crater had been hit except Martinez. Cpl Hunnicutt told everyone to stay away from the rim of the crater so that their silhouette would not disclose their position to the enemy. Hunnicutt heard Kasminoff behind him on the ridge but by now he was very weak, "..and I didn't know what would be the best thing to do in order to get these men out of here." Then Hunnicutt realized he and those with him in the bomb crater were

---

[3043] Statement of HM3 William G. Gessner, in Investigation.
[3044] Ibid.
[3045] Ibid.
[3046] Statement of Capt John W. Cargile, in Investigation.
[3047] I bid.
[3048] Comments of SSGT Carl O. Stucker, HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.
[3049] Ibid.
[3050] Statement of 1/Lt William C. Connelly, in Investigation
[3051] Statement of LCPL Ross M. Kasminoff, in Investigation.
[3052] Statement of 1/Lt William C. Connelly, in Investigation.
[3053] Statement of CPL Hubert H. Hunnicutt, II, in Investigation. The following paragraphs are all from his statement. CPL Hunnicutt was later awarded the Navy Cross.

alone. He waited until dark and told Martinez to go. "If I had been physically able we could have dragged both men down and gone down to the gulch and gone back up to the machine gun position behind us, however, I couldn't pull with my arm. I was weak." Martinez left and then, later, realized that the NVA must have got him. With the two WIA now "almost gone" he decided to crawl out of the crater, and came upon Capt Himmer who "was laying on his side. He had been shot in the mouth and shot in the arm and back of the neck. He had apparently lost a lot of blood because he could barely speak. He called to me. He said, 'Marine, help me.' I said, 'Skipper, we got to get out of this place, but we can't move right now; we'll just wait about another 5 or 10 minutes.' He said, 'OK.' About that time I moved away from him a little bit, and an AK opened up on me and hit me in the leg and hand and elbow." Hunnicutt managed to pull a grenade and toss it, but by then was so weak he was unable to do much more. He played dead for about 5 hours. Some NVA passed by, kicking his canteen. He managed to get closer to Capt Himmer.

At first light (on 17 April) he yelled for Kasminoff, but nobody answered. About 8 o'clock he yelled real loud, and heard someone answer him back towards Hill 689 who said they were going to rescue him. Hunnicutt and Himmer then slid down hill until they reached a ledge that dropped sharply (about 10 or 15 yards of sheer drop off) into a valley. Capt Himmer's face was covered with blood, his legs were very weak, and he was much heavier than Hunnicutt who was therefore unable to carry him. A voice of a Marine yelled, "Preacher,[3054] is that you?" Hunnicutt replied, "Can you come and help?" They replied, "Yeah, we're coming." No one came that day. At night an air strike dropped ordnance almost on top of Hunnicutt.

About noon, an Army Huey dropped a red smoke on Hunnicutt "and scarred me to death. I thought they were going to blow me away." The helicopter set down and snatched Hunnicutt. At the medical facilities, he was asked if there were any more alive. He was asked if Capt Himmer had been killed, "and I said, 'He couldn't be dead. I had him with me for two days.'"

It was about midnight that Companies A, C, and D were enroute back to the 1/9 perimeter on Hill 689, and by 0310, all remaining members of these companies were returned to their positions on Hill 689.[3055] After all the survivors had made it back in the very late hours of 16 April, the company commanders immediately began to assess their casualties. Companies A and D were able to provide a fairly accurate report, but Co C, due to breakdown of communications within their company, had a difficult time trying to account for their personnel; it was only after Lt Connelly (XO, Co C) returned that the full impact of the casualties was realized. Co C did not arrive at the battalion position until 0300 on the 17th.[3056] What had happened to Co B/1/26 on 25 February was again repeated at Khe Sanh: "We were forced to do something we had never done before—just leave bodies out, to report people as missing. I don't feel this was through carelessness of the individuals. It was simply that there weren't enough walking bodies left to carry the limp bodies out."[3057] LtCol Cahill felt "..that additional casualties would have resulted if I had chose to remain on the hill. Plans were formulated by me to recover the KIAs on the 18th but other plans by higher headquarters had been made preventing the battalion to do this job."[3058]

CO	KIA	WIA	NBC	MIA
A	5	13	4	7
B	[negative casualties]
C	1	22	0	25
D	3	5	1	2
H&S	0	6	7	2

About noon on the 17th of April, one of the AOs, checking the area of contact, reported spotting one Marine in a crater approximately 50 meters down the slope from the enemy U-shaped bunker complex. He appeared to be alive, but the AO was unsure whether he was a Marine or a NVA dressed in a Marine flak vest and helmet to lure rescuers. Two CH-46s were loaded with volunteers, one carrying a fire team of 1/9 augmented by a Corpsman, the other carrying a dozen 1/9 Marines. After considerable suppressive rocket and gunship attacks, the first CH-46 landed on top of the bunker complex and the fire team emerged with guns blasting, killing approximately 4 NVA just exiting their bunker. Unfortunately, they searched the area on the wrong side. "They went around the left side of the helicopter and checked the bomb crater. There was 5 Marines, it was reported to me later, that were in there. Two of them had been partially decapitated, one of them disemboweled and the other two they checked out, they were dead. After checking these 5, they got back into the helicopter, and the Marine that was alive was off to the right of the chopper."[3059]

Major General Tompkins arrived at KSCB at 1500 and at 1615, a U.S. Army unit (Callsign "BIRTH CONTROL 3") came up on the 1/9 "push" and [3060]offered its assistance in rescuing the Marine. At 1840H, BIRTH CONTROL 3 dispatched BLUE MAX, Air Cav ARA [Aerial Rocket Artillery] gunships consisting of a flight

---

[3054] "He's a preacher. He's over here fighting along with us." [Comments of SGT Thomas E. Debroy [C-3], HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[3055] 1/9 ComdC Apr 1968, Encl (1).

[3056] Statement of LtCol John H. Cahill, in Investigation.

[3057] Comments of 1/Lt Kenneth L. Harman (XO, C/1/9), on HQMC Oral History Tape #2803.

[3058] Statement of LtCol John H. Cahill, in Investigation.

[3059] Testimony (cross-examination by Investigating Officer) of Capt Hartzell, in Investigation.

[3060] "Push" refers to the radio frequency.

of 9 Huey gunships to the area. While 8 of the helicopters circled in 2 orbits, saturating the area with continuous rocket and machinegun fire, the 9th, "BLUE MAX 48," alighted and rescued the Marine. Amazingly, the man rescued was not CPL Hunnicutt, but PFC George Panyaninec (also of Co C).

On 18 April, CPL Henry Casteneda could again hear CPL Hunnicutt at about 0715H, calling for help. A rescuing patrol was launched but halted some 300 meters from Hunnicutt's location by the regimental commander. The reason was that all of the infantry battalions of 26th Marines were due to be CHOPed to 1st Marines as of 0800H, 18 April. Over 1700 troops were soon to be in the process of being heli-lifted from Khe Sanh. Col Meyers requested BGen Glick to delay the CHOP so the rescue could be completed prior to Col Hughes assuming responsibility as Commander, 1st Marine Regiment. The rescue was assumed to require more than a day. BGen Glick, being in receipt of orders from MGen Tompkins to move 26th Marines to Quang Tri in anticipation of a forthcoming operation would not delay the CHOP. Col Meyers did not want to commence an operation, and in the middle of it, not be able to see it through. The matter became academic, however, as BLUE MAX repeated the performance of the previous day, swooped down, and successfully snatched CPL Hunnicutt.

KIAs PFC Danny A. Kilgore, PFC David D. Brown, Jr., and PVT Robert H. Collins, had all arrived at Khe Sanh on 15 April 1968.[3061]

Bn 2/3 was given the grisly task during April, 1968, of recovering decomposed, dead Marines. On 19 April 1968, 2 USMC bodies were found at a bridge at XD956428 and 2 USMC bodies were recovered on Route 9 at XD962437.[3062] Of greater impact, 2/3 was given the task of recovering the 1/9 KIA from 16 April. David Brombaugh, one of the Marines in the recovery unit later recalled: "We were the ones who went up Hill 689 and recovered the 1/9 bodies... We took the hill at a great loss of men. They only let us take our weapons and one E-tool per fourth man. They didn't give us much of a chance. 1/9 was caught in a U-shaped ambush and wiped out and they figured we were headed for the same fate. All our gear was left behind as they said they didn't want to give the gooks any more gear than what they got from 1/9."[3063] Another Marine from H/2/3, Ben Williams, remembers seeing three bodies at the foot of Hill 689. "I distinctly saw the NVA belt buckle with the red star in it and the bodies were really very badly decomposed. The first thing I saw was that red star, so I thought they were 3 NVA. But I got a little bit closer and saw the jungle boots, the size, and the 782 gear, and it was a Marine. He had just taken a NVA buckle. They were so decomposed, black, and again there was enough that I couldn't recognize they were Marines until I got closer. We moved on. We went up the hill. As we went up the hill we were exchanging rounds and we were taking mortar fire on our end. We fanned out across this hill and we jumped into little bunkers the NVA had built all along, and then we started maneuvering a little bit and we got a mortar. The mortar round hit right behind me, and I got hit in the back with shrapnel.[3064]

The next day, the Marines of 2/3 recovered the bodies. "My squad moved down a little trail off the ridge and there was nothing but American grenades, Russian grenades, there were RPGs, there were rounds, there was a mix of gear of the NVA and the Marines and there were bodies. I would say in the little section I was in there was probably 15 or so bodies. We moved down and we could see—the first bodies we could see were in a bomb crater and they were all lined up side by side, about four guys. And when we got down there, it was obvious that they had been taken prisoner and then killed because they had their hands tied behind their backs with LIMA LIMA wire. They looked like they hadn't moved, but one guy with his hands tied behind his back was about 15 or 20 feet out of the bomb crater. It looked like he had tried to run and they shot him down. At first we tied ropes to their legs and pulled the bodies. We didn't know if there were mines or booby-traps. We did that to a couple and then we just stopped that. We used their E-tools to turn them over into ponchos and carried the bodies back to the top of the hill where we could medevac them out. They were in advanced stages of decay, and I have a weak stomach, and I threw up. I'd put my gas mask on and thought I'd be able to do it. I threw up in the gas mask."[3065]

One of the Marines from C/1/9 was later to experience an unusual benefit from having served with Captain

---

[3061] Investigation.

[3062] 2/3 ComdC Apr 1968

[3063] Letter from David Brombaugh, 17 February 1997. Brombaugh was with H/2/3 at the time. Letter was later printed in the Khe Sanh Veterans, Red Clay, Issue #40 (Fall, 1997) pp. 30-31.

[3064] Conversation with Ben Williams, 8 December 2002. Officially, from 1630H to 2000H on 21 April 1968, Companies E, G, and H, while attacking the objective at XD795396 received 60mm mortar fire, small arms fire and grenades from an estimated company of NVA dug in on the reverse slope of the hill in bunkers and spider traps. The objective was seized and held resulting in 21 NVA KIA. One Marine was KIA and 49 WIA. [2/3 ComdC April 1968].

[3065] Conversation with Ben Williams, 8 December 2002. During the search and recovery mission, 5 rounds of heavy caliber fire were received by the Marines at 1050H on 22 April. By 1130, 10 USMC MIAs had been recovered, bringing the total recovered to 30. At 1230, a NVA bunker complex was attacked resulting in 4 NVA KIA, and by 1406H, a total of 38 MIA had been recovered from 1/9's casualties. 2/3 had sustained 6 KIA, 55 WIA (major) and 31 WIA (minor) in the operation, and 34 NVA were KIA. [2/3 ComdC April 1968]. LIMA LIMA= Land line wire, black plastic covered communication line.

Himmer in the battle of Hill 689: "I got promoted because of Captain Himmer! I was in Staging Company, going back to Nam for my second tour. I was a Lance Corporal and got in a small bit of trouble, and the Gunny wanted to write me up. I was lying down on the rack during the day with my boots on, and he didn't like that at all, and he was going to make an example out of me. So he takes me to the First Sergeant and tells him what I did. The First Sergeant—like I really broke the big commandment... The First Sergeant takes me into the Captain's office. He starts reading me the riot act—just because I'm going to Vietnam doesn't mean—you know—I have to obey all the orders, I'm a Marine—and he goes on and on. Finally he opens up my Record Book and goes, 'Charlie, 1/9?' I said, 'Yes, Sir.' And he goes, 'Delta, 1/9. Captain Himmer was the Best Man at my wedding.' And he gave me Meritorious Mast to Corporal right there. It's a true story, and it's so weird."[3066]

[Casualties other than 1/9, 16 April 1968]

A rocket exploding on KSCB at 1430 took the life of SWF2 Edward C. Cody, a Steel Worker with CBMU 301, Detail BRAVO, and wounded BUH2 Tennis and CN Scott.[3067] "Adams was killed by shrapnel which went through his helmet. No other marks on his body. The round hit about 10-ft. from him, and about 30 – 40-ft. from where Tennis and I were standing, talking. All I remember is a big explosion & finding myself on the ground... I was next to Tennis on the ground, but I was so stunned that I didn't realize right away that he was hurt... Again we're wondering what kind of an asinine war we're fighting here – where we sit tight and let him shoot! .. It really hit home today. Adams was one of the best liked guys in the Detail and the best SW2 we've ever had. Nothing seemed to shake him. We've all suffered a great loss."[3068] SWF2 Adams arrived in Vietnam on 3 November 1967[3069] and was posthumously awarded the Navy Commendation Medal for his outstanding efforts in repairing the airstrip at Khe Sanh.[3070]

From 15 January to 15 April, 2/Lt William Resor Ammon, Platoon Commander of Second Platoon, MIKE Company, 3/26, had been on the western finger of Hill 881-South during the siege battle where he repeatedly exposed himself to the large 120mm mortars and artillery, watched Marines get blown away, struggled with a paucity of supplies, and yet, according to the Commanding Officer of Co "M", "his inexhaustible efforts to make the best of the situation and his ability to extract maximum effort from his troops bespoke a level of leadership seldom attained by officers of his rank."[3071] Lt Ammon's radioman, LCPL David M. Anderson, admired his platoon commander.[3072] Anderson comments: "I knew him very well, intimately you might say. He was well respected by the troops because he was not only a professional, but he cared about his men too and when he got orders to do things that's absolutely asinine, he would question them. He wasn't afraid to question and say, 'Wait a minute; there's probably a better way to do this. Let's look at it again.' He got a lot of respect for that."[3073]

Lt Ammon had written his parents who published some of their son's letters in the Cincinnati Enquirer, letters which raised specific logistic deficiencies. General Krulak sent a SPECAT EXCLUSIVE message to the Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Chapman, responding to these comments. "The majority of Lt. Ammon's complaints are attributable to the difficulties of providing resupply at Hill 881 S solely by helicopter. These difficulties, in turn, are directly related to weather and enemy interdiction... Except for 7 days, the month of February was characterized by marginal flying weather. During the month there were 24 cloudy and 5 overcast days. Fog and rain were experienced throughout the month. Although the average visibility for the Khe Sanh area during the month was 3 miles, the higher elevations such as Hill 881S were frequently shrouded in clouds or fog. Humidity averaged 87 percent during the month. During the first 19 days of March, there were 13 cloudy, 2 partly cloudy and 4 overcast days... Visibility in the general area averaged only 4.7 miles... Humidity averaged 89 percent during March. 33 helicopters have been permanently disabled or destroyed in resupply operations in the Khe Sanh area since 21 January 1968. This reduction of helicopter assets has, of course, further eroded our ability to conduct such resupply operations... Specific comments: Statement: 'Hasn't had a whole lot of chow and went 2 days without supplies.' Comment: Hill 881S did run out of rations on 20 February and was not resupplied until 22 February due to bad weather... Statement: 'Put part of platoon on line and swept through garbage dump. Everyone got plenty to fill stomachs..' Comment: 'When subsisting on "C" rations troops are likely to discard the less favored items.. it was to be expected that previously discarded, but still sealed, cans of food would be recovered and consumed.... Statement: 'No combat gear or ponchos to sleep in, not to mention mail..' There has never been any shortage of [3066] Conversation with Richard H. Bryant, 25 May 1990.

---

[3067] Diary entry, ENS Martin J. Kux. Builder Second Class Tennis received serious wounds to his chest (punctured lung), back, and right thigh; Constructionman Scott received minor wounds.

[3068] Ibid. A clipping notes that Adams was 23 and joined the Navy in December, 1965, for a 4-year tour.

[3069] Dedication, in Cruise Book, USN Construction Battalion Maintenance Unit 301, Republic of Vietnam '67 – '68.

[3070] Bows, Ray A., Vietnam Military Lore, 1959 – 1973, Another Way to Remember, Hanover, Massachusetts: Bows & Sons Publishing, 1988, pp. 204-205.

[3071] Statement of 1/Lt John D. Esslinger in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) on 2/Lt William Resor Ammon.

[3072] Conversation with Rev. Timothy Sims, 14 May 1994.

[3073] Conversation with David Anderson, 13 July 1990.

combat equipment which would affect his unit's combat efficiency... Conclusion: Lt Ammon has been guilty of minor exaggeration.."[3074]

While waiting for a helicopter with his platoon, one round came in and killed Lieutenant Ammon.[3075] The round which killed Lt Ammon wounded the Platoon Sergeant, radioman, and Corpsman HN David M. Sarley. HN Sarley, after dressing his own wound, crawled to the aid of the other seriously wounded.[3076] The radioman, LCPL David M. Anderson, remembers the round, probably a 152mm artillery round, made a direct hit on the Lieutenant. "I was only about 10 feet from him. When I got medevaced out, I had a big plastic sandwich bag with his 2 feet and his 2 hands in it. That's all that was left. He vaporized. It was on my stretcher. I remember vividly when the chopper landed on the [hospital ship] SANCTUARY and they went to move my particular stretcher off the chopper, a kid came up and I handed him this bag. It was a clear bag. It was obvious what was inside of it. The kid just bent over and started peuking right there. At that point in time we'd been 3 months up on 881 and had seen that daily."[3077]

David Anderson had also written home about the lack of supply, and when his parents showed their minister he was so appalled that he contacted Senator Mike Mansfield who inquired and received a letter that after a thorough investigation, no such thing had happened.

Conversation:

Anderson:"I found that real disappointing, when the leader of the nation can tell a mother and a father that their son's a liar."

Stubbe: "In that combat situation, a lot of the lack of supply was understandable. They could admit it without loosing face."

Anderson: "I agree."

Stubbe: "I know that Captain Dabney is still livid, still angry over the fact that he lost people because of a lack of bunker-building materials."

Anderson: "O absolutely!"

Stubbe: "And utilities rotting off. They couldn't even get body bags or stretchers to evacuate the wounded."

Anderson: "I remember sleeping among the dead more than once because we had nowhere to put them, and just watch the rats eat them at night and smell them rotting during the day. It's quite an experience, let me tell you!"[3078]

At 2230H, Co D/1/26 at XD849416 reported "one man killed by unknown explosion."[3079] It was PFC William Frank Coleman.

17 April 1968

DELAPLANE, HN James Charles	H&S/2/26
DOLAN, PFC William John	D/1/9
HOUSTON, PFC John Davis Jr.	L/3/26
LAGENFELD, HM3 Charles T	H&S/2/26
LAMON, PFC Francis William	G/2/1
LAWRENCE, PFC William Aubrey	G/2/1
MC NAMAR, HN Jim Carl	H&S/3/26
RUSSELL, LCPL Larry Gene	L/3/26
WILLIAMS, PFC Tommy Dorsey	L/3/26

PFC Dolan died of wounds received yesterday, 16 April, when at about 1745, after carrying casualties as a stretcher bearer, he crawled up to a bomb crater and then, as he stood up and started running, was shot in the head.[3080]

[Effective 1246H, 1/26 departed Operation Scotland II and came under control of 3rd Marine Division. Effective 1916H, 3/26 departed Operation Scotland II and came under control of 3rd Marine Division.[3081]]

At 1112H, Battalion 2/1 commenced a helicopter displacement to Khe Sanh Combat Base, with the Command Group CHOPed to 26th Marines at 1400. By 1405, 1st Marines CP closed at Ca Lu Combat Base and the forward command group commenced displacement from Ca Lu to Khe Sanh via motor vehicle convoy. By 1430, the displacement of 2/1 was completed and at 1600, 1st Marines CP opened at KSCB. As of 0800, 18 April, 1st Marines assumed responsibility for the 26th Marines portion of the Scotland II AO.[3082]

During the displacement of 2/1, a helicopter lost power and landed in a minefield instead of the normal helicopter landing zone.[3083] "The personnel on the chopper panicked, thought the bird was on fire and began pushing people off the rear into the friendly mine field. One man, our Artillery Forward Observer, was killed, and approximately 10 were wounded including the Company Executive Officer, Company Gunnery Sergeant, Weapons Platoon Commander, one Marine from 81s, 2 from the Helicopter Support Team, and so forth."[3084] In an entry for 17 April in a diary kept by Don Dennis, a

---

[3074] CG FMFPAC 220314Z/Mar68, Subj: News article from Cincinnati Enquirer, in file at Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C. titled "HQMC: Supply Situation, Khe Sanh."

[3075] Conversation with J. Thomas Esslinger, 28 July 1993.

[3076] Statement of LCPL Richard T. Tomlinson in Navy Commendation Medal file, HN David M. Sarley.

[3077] Conversation with David Anderson, 13 July 1990.

[3078] Ibid.

[3079] 1/26 ComdC April 1968, S2/S3 Log, 16 April 1968, Ser #28 and 29.

[3080] Statement of HM3 William G. Gessner, in Investigation.

[3081] FMFPAC 2102477Z/Apr68, WESTPAC SITREP #1118

[3082] 1st Mar ComdC Apr68, Encl (1), p. III-A-8.

[3083] 26Mar Operation SCOTLAND [II] SITREP #10, 171201H-171800H APR 68, Para. 3.A. The SITREP indicates 4 friendly WIA (medevaced).

[3084] Comments of 1/Lt Lawrence E. Beeson, HQMC Oral History Tape #2781. Beeson was acting XO of G/2/1.

Marine with 3rd Platoon, G/2/1: "We to Khe Sanh at 1435. The helicopter behind us landed in a mine field. They had 1 KIA and a couple of WIA. The WIA had their feet blew off. It's a waste of lives. Khe Sanh is dumb. Trash everywhere."[3085]

PFC Lamon was called "Butch" by his family and friends, one of which later memorialized: "We were childhood friends and I think of him often... I remember the day 'Butch' came over to my house to tell me that he had enlisted in the Marine Corps. I remember telling him, 'Are you crazy, they will send you to Vietnam.' He said, 'That's what I want to do, fight for my country.' I begged him to reconsider. He did not, and that is why his name is listed here. I will never forget you, Butch my friend or the others that lost their lives in the Vietnam War."[3086]

At 1645, Co E/2/26 received 2 rounds of 122mm rockets killing two.[3087] LCPL Derek E. Brockway of E/2/26 recalled the sequence that led to this horror. "We left 861 [A]. A lot of people that I'd come over with weren't there and a lot of people that had come after I'd got there weren't there [either], so I was feeling pretty good about the fact that I was still there. We started humping down from 861, going to the battalion area... We got down to 558, and there's a lot of people playing basketball, football, no helmets or flak jackets. So we thought, well, we're in a secure area now, might get to rest... We got set in for the night. The next day they passed the word that there was a stream down there that they used to take baths and things. So they passed the word that we could go down. We was all really happy about that. Spirits were up. We moved down there, and I was walking point. Everybody got all cleaned up, and we was coming back. I was walking point on the way back. There was about 20 of us, and I didn't even have my helmet on. I had just washed my hair [and] I wasn't too happy about getting it dirty again. I figured we were in a secure area. About half way back, something made me put my helmet on [as] I was talking along. The next thing I knew, all I could feel was hot air and I was flying through the air. I landed and scrambled after my helmet. Got my helmet back on, and I was waiting for some part of me to start hurting because I could see the cloud of smoke. The round hit to my right front, but I didn't get a scratch. I turned around, and there was about 4 more rounds come in... The man behind me—about 5 foot behind me before I went flying—he was dead, and the rest of them were missing legs and things."[3088]

PFC James N. Kaylor remembers this incident on the very last day they were at Khe Sanh. The Marines went to the stream in squad groups, "but the Corpsmen could do basically what they wanted."[3089] "We're spread out the way we're supposed to. I remember the first round hit the top of this little hill closer toward 558. The kid in front of me, Deleplane, a Corpsman: it blew his head right off his shoulders. The kid behind me, a black Marine: I remember his femor sticking out with no knee, and he lost his leg. I looked back, further down the hill where the other rocket hit, (and all the corpsmen were interspersed too). It was really peculiar. It killed only Navy guys. Not one Marine got killed in this. All the Marines got wounded, except the very first guy [LCPL Derek E. Brockway]. The Navy guys were all interspersed. Nobody knew it was coming. There was no warning."[3090]

PFC William J. Griffith remembers going to the stream in staggered squads. As each squad was washing up, another squad was enroute and another squad was returning. "It was our turn to go next when this other squad jumped in front of us, the Headquarters section, and we had to wait a little bit longer, and then it was our turn to go next. We went down, and we were in the water. It was ever so small, but it was adequate. As the Headquarters was coming back—which included the Corpsmen, some radiomen, and others—they were coming back and the rounds came in... That would have been us coming back [if the Headquarters group hadn't gone ahead of them]."[3091]

LCPL Brockway remembers the problem of getting medical help: all the Corpsmen near them were dead. "All the jolly feelings were gone. Everybody was feeling kinda bad because we figured that the Khe Sanh ordeal was over and that we wouldn't be loosing too many more people, and yet we were still loosing, getting out of it... The thing I learned mostly in the Khe Sanh which really impressed me is the fact that you neer know when you're going to go. You have to be on your toes at all times no matter what anybody tells you—how secure an area is or not, that there's going to be times when you're going to be there and the next minute you're not. you loose a lot of [3085] Printed in We Remember, The Vietnam Stories of the Men of 2nd Battalion, 1st Marines, Vietnam Era 2nd Bn, 1st Mar, 1993, p. 218.

---

[3086] Diane M. (Koller) Butcher, email, posted on the Vietnam Virtual Wall, 01 June 1999.

[3087] 26Mar, Operation SCOTLAND [II] SITREP #10, 171201H-171800H APR 68, Para 3.D. lists the source of the rockets as XD798463; 2/26 ComdC, Apr 68, Encl (1), p. 12, lists 7 incoming rocket rounds from vicinity of XD774479 and the friendly group at XD821444. In addition to the 2 KIA, there were 15 WIA (14 of which were evacuated).

[3088] Comments of LCPL Derek E. Brockway, HQMC Oral History Tape #2775.

[3089] Conversation with James Kaylor, 8 April 1991. Corpsmen, while having a strong bond to the Marines with which they lived and died, were Navy and naturally had a bond with each other and most probably would have wanted to be with each other at a time like this.

[3090] Ibid.

[3091] Conversation with Major William Griffith, 19 February 1993.

buddies. You learn a lot of things that maybe you shouldn't learn."[3092]

One of the KIA Corpsmen, HM2 Charles T. Lagenfeld, had very heroically served his men during the attack of 5 February 1968 on Hill 861-A when he "..personally treated the numerous casualties and directed the activities of other corpsmen. Repeatedly exposing himself to intense enemy mortar, rocket, and automatic weapons fire, he moved throughout the fire-swept area to aid fallen Marines and assist in their evacuation to the company aid station."[3093]

His youngest sister remembers playing badminton with Charles, "but more important, what we would do is that he would get a new record of the Beatles. We would go downstairs in the basement and sing the Beatles songs together over and over and over again. Any time he would go driving, we would sing songs together. Chuck's mother always thought that he could do no wrong. Little did she know that he skipped about a month of school of play poker and drink beer with his friends. I'd come home from school and the kitchen would be smoke-filled and there'd be empty beer bottles and poker chips laying all over the kitchen table. I was sworn to silence."[3094]

Mr. Terry Redlin, a world-renowned artist of nature scenes, remembered his brother-in-law and good friend, Charles Lagenfeld in a painting, "His Last Good-Bye." Mr. Redlin recalls that although he was 10 years older, the two of them loved to hunt and fish and enjoyed Chess and other board games, spending hours together.[3095]

On 18 April, as of 1500H, 2/26 departed Operation Scotland II and came under the operational control of 4th Marines, joining Operation Lancaster II.[3096]

3092 Comments of Brockway, cited. Underscoring provided.
3093 Navy Commendation Medal Citation for HM2 Charles T. Lagenfeld; Statement of 2/Lt Donald E. R. Shanley in NCM file on HM2 Lagenfeld.
3094 Taped comments of Jill Palmquist, September, 2004.
3095 The painting portrays a snow-covered house and landscape at night. "Dad has just finished hanging the homecoming banner. He has been busy all day getting ready for his son's return. The cars are all washed and the garage straightened. Mom has the tree decorated and lit; and from the house wafts the aroma of freshly baked chocolate chip cookies, his favorite. From the window, she sees a car slowly pull up to the front walk. As she opens the door, expecting to embrace her son, she is horrified to see a representative from the Navy and a Chaplain walking up the snowy steps. At this moment, our hearts sink as we realize it is not her son, but the devastating news that he has been killed in war. As her body begins to crumble from the inside out, she finds herself unable to speak... unable to even breathe." Mr. Redlin most graciously will donate all proceeds from "His Last Good-Bye" to Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc. [From brochure]. Tom Eichler, "A Trip Worth Remembering," Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.: Red Clay, Issue #59 (Fall, 2004), p. 19.
3096 FMFPAC WESTPAC SITREP #1118.

18 April 1968

CLARKE, PFC James Phillip G/2/3
LOPEZ, HN Jose Angel Jr. H&S/2/26

Corpsman Lopez may have died of wounds from the rockets that killed the corpsmen yesterday.

PFC Clarke died from fragment wounds to his head while on patrol.[3097] G/2/3 on this day was providing road security along Route 9.[3098]

[Co H/2/1, while on a perimeter patrol of KSCB, found a bunker at XD849419, previously a perimeter position, destroyed by artillery. Inside were remains of one M-16 rifle and other 782 gear, a boot with part of a foot in it, a right hand severed at the wrist, a piece of intestine, camouflaged cover with bits of brains and scalp in it, part of scalp with black hair, part of spinal column, and other unidentified pieces of meat and remains of camouflaged utilities. The Marines also found letters written in Vietnamese dated April 7 and one set of ARVN dog tags.[3099]

[At 180800H, 1st Marines (-)(Rein) assumed OPCON of 1/1, 2/1, 1/9, and 2/26 from the 26th Marines and assumed responsibility for the 26th Marines portion of the SCOTLAND II AO. The units were assigned the following missions: 1/1 was on Hills 881S, 861, 950, and 558. 2/1 provided defense of KSCB and reserved one company as BALD EAGLE reaction force. 1/9 maintained positions on Hill 689. 2/3 continued to provide road security for Route 9. 2/26 prepared to depart (except for H/2/26).][3100]

[At 190930H, three vehicles from 2/3 headed east on Route 9 discovered 2 USMC bodies at the bridge at XD956428. At 1530 the same date, 3 tanks and 1 squad from F/2/3 went to the assistance of an ambushed convoy on Route 9 at XD936423 and received mortar, machine-gun and small arms fire from XD962437. The relief force recovered 2 USMC KIA, 3 USMC WIA, and 1 tank.[3101]]

20 April 1968

CLAYTON, LCPL Michael Marshall A/1/1
REYNA, CPL Samuel A/1/1

HN Charles David Bunner (assigned to First Platoon, Alfa Company) recalls LCPL Clayton:[3102]

3097 HQMC Memo, 29 Apr 1968, Subj: Viet Nam Casualties—HOSTILE DEAD, in HQMC, Historical Center, Washington, D.C., p. 6.
3098 1stMar ComdC Apr68, Encl (1), P. II-C-7.
3099 2/1 ComdC Apr68, S-2 Journal, 18 April 1968, Ser #1.
3100 1stMar ComdC Apr68, p. II-C-6.
3101 2/3 ComdC Apr68.
3102 Letter from Charles David Bunner, 8 September 1995.

"We went out from Hill 861 on patrol looking for mortars on our second patrol. [LCPL Michael Marshall Clayton] was hit by mortar fire after the jet pilots blasted the area where the spotter pilot had dropped his flare... The only problem being the spotter pilot missed by 500 yards. After the jets flew away, their mortar .. opened up on us.

"LCPL Clayton was in a crater hole with his machine gun attempting to hit the mortar.. from a distance. When the mortars opened up on his position, he was hit along the left side of his body and head. Doc Tura and I both responded.. when we heard the call for 'Corpsman Up.'

"We got to him and decided immediately to move him back about 15 yards where we had more room in a 500 pound crater hole in order to work on him. After we moved him and was attempting to keep his airway open and bandage him up, I happened to look up at the top of the crater. I saw a stunned Marine standing there looking down at us. I immediately yelled at him to get down before he drew the enemy fire down on us. As I was saying this, I realized that it was too late because the mortars were encircling our position. Then a mortar.. landed about 5 yards to my left.

"We had 2 Marines standing by waiting to transport LCPL Clayton once we had him stabilized. They were hit down their backsides. Doc Tura was hit down his right side. I was hit down my left side. I was the only one left conscious and called out for other corpsmen for help.

"I could only watch LCPL Clayton breath his last breath. Due to the seriousness of my wounds, I couldn't get to the 2 Marines or Doc Tura to check them out. Finally other corpsmen came in and attempted to check me out first. I refused being treated first since I didn't know the status of the other three. By the time I was treated I was crying because of my concern for them and I couldn't stand not knowing how they were.

"LCPL Clayton was the first man I ever had to die in front of me in which I felt powerless. I couldn't have handled it if the other three were also dead. Later on, I found out that only LCPL Clayton had died. Doc Tura's injuries resulted in him losing 18 inches of his small bowel. One of the Marines had to wear a leg brace on his leg. The other Marine's injuries I'm not sure of. My injuries were the worse of the lot which resulted in my eventually being medically discharged....

"I hope that by telling you what happened on the day I was wounded that perhaps LCPL Clayton's family will find out how their son died on that hill a long time ago...

"Maybe as the story is being told about Khe Sanh, all of the truth will come out about all the KIAs so that their families can also have finally peace of mind.

"It has been hard for me to sit down to write this letter.."

MEMORIES OF A WOUNDED CORPSMAN
By Doc Bunner

I had just turned twentyone a few days before I entered Nam, never dreaming that all my beliefs would be left there on the fields while endless nightmares even though buried would come back to haunt me without relief.....
MEMORIES

I remember th inking
as I entered the country, foolheartily that I only had twelve months to do before I would be back to the world
Never dreaming that my life would be changed forever....
MEMORIES

The Good, the bad
some you remember some you bury trying to hold onto your sanity.
You remember the events
when you joined your platoon of why you're out in the field so that a Marine won't take a life that would result in him having....
MEMORIES

You attempt to do what is right in order to save all lives.
You risk your life
putting to work all that you've learned, so that others would not be harmed.
You save most and get them out so that they won't have
MEMORIES

After the first fire fight you know that you did prevent when they came up to you, pounding you on the back, telling you what a good job you did only to compound the problem when in reliving the fight they mentioned things that you never thought about resulting in you having
MEMORIES

You thought that you could save the world
Or at least that's what you were taught.

You tried to do what was best while you were there trying only to remember the good and attempting to forget the rest.
But when you least expect it something comes along....
MEMORIES

Days pass
some good, some bad
you make new friends and experience that comradeship that guys that had been under fire get as you wonder about the greenies wondering if they would be there in the heat of battle protecting your back as you attempted to patch them up to get them to survive to get them home to their loved ones in the real world....
MEMORIES

Yet the day finally comes that makes you face the truth you are only a mortal attempting to bring a little compassion an d act of kindness leaving you to question God
After you get wounded
Watching a Marine friend take his last
'Why God, oh why do you insist on leaving me alive...'
MEMORIES

To this day
I still remember that last 'Corpsman Up' cry running up as I always did attempting to save another life never dreaming that this would be my first.
His name I can't remember,
even though I have it written down
His face haunts me today questioning me with a puzzled stare
MEMORIES
Questions of hope because 'old Doc's here' that things will be alright that he'll treat me right.
But Doc
how did you get wounded,
you weren't suppose to get hurt,
after all we looked out for you now who is going to take care of us, better yet, who is going to save me?
MEMORIES

Watching him die breathing his last knowing that all your training could not stop his fate.
Yet you and three others are now wounded wondering your fate
as you hear again that cry of 'Corpsman Up' coming from your own throat still trying to do your job.
MEMORIES

Now almost Thirty years later thinking that you had put it all behind you
you find yourself being put in a similar situation
Unfinished business that you have to get straight of that fateful day when you lost your first and only one....
MEMORIES

You almost lost it yet realized before you did that you needed the help that you had given to others in order to get through those.....
MEMORIES

The Marine's name:
Michael Marshall Clayton
KIA April 20, 1968.

SSGT Thomas E. Murphy, Platoon Commander of A-1, 1/1, crawled forward under intense small arms fire until he came within hand grenade range of the NVA mortar that had wreaked havoc on his platoon. Raising up, he threw a grenade into the emplacement, killing the 2 NVA manning the mortar tube. At this point, SSGT Murphy was fired on by other NVA in an adjoining bunker. After being knocked back by a NVA grenade, he threw his remaining grenade into the enemy bunker, killing the NVA soldier.[3103]

[3103] Statement of 1/Lt Allen W. Courtney in Silver Star Medal file of SSGT Thomas E. Murphy.

BARROWS, PFC Irving Donald	E/2/1
CASSELL, PFC Kevin Ray	H/2/3
CHABERT, PFC Gary August	G/2/3
COLEMAN, PFC John Lee	G/2/3
HUGHES, SP5 Samuel Reuben	FOB-3
KEARSLEY, PFC Ronald Charles	H/2/3
NEELEY, PFC William Merritt	H/2/3
RUDD, PFC Richard John Jr.	H&S/2/1
SPINDLER, 2/Lt John Gates	G/2/3
STRONG, PFC Gridley Barstow	H/2/1
TURNER, LCPL Michael Glenn	G/2/3
ZIMMERMAN, LCPL David Paul	G/2/3

[At 0600H, 1st Marines CHOPed 1st Battalion, 11th Marines to CG, Task Force GLICK.[3104]]

Prior to being killed this date by shrapnel wounds, SP5 Samuel Hughes had received four Purple Hearts for minor injuries during the siege battle of Khe Sanh. Upon his death, he held a dubious FOB record: he had received 5 Purple Hearts.[3105]

Commencing at 0700, 1st Marines continued plans and preparations for a helicopter lift into Hill 689 (XD806409) to recover the MIA dead from 1/9's battle on 16 April. At 1040H, 2/3(-) with a command group and Companies E, G, and H, 2/3 moved by helicopter from XD792393 to Hill 689, completing the lift at 1115H. At 1300H, 2/1 (-) with a command group and Companies E and F, 2/1, assaulted by helicopter from XD833425 to LZ EAGLE (XD787413), completing the lift at 1525H. 2/3 (-) attacked to the southwest at 1400H, securing Objective 1 (XD800405) at 1450H, 2/1 (-) secured LZ EAGLE at 1525H and commenced to attack west toward Objective 3 (XD777405). At 1655H, 2/3 (-) secured Objective 2 (XD796396) and commenced search and destroy operations and recovery operations for the 1/9 MIA.[3106]

At 0830H, G/2/3 at XD927443 received 2 incoming rounds believed to be 122mm rockets. The rockets ignited a pile of ammunition that had been staged in the LZ resulting in 4 USMC KIA and 8 WIA (7 medevaced).[3107]

Doc [Corpsman] Jerome E. Thomas lost his best friend, LCPL Michael Turner, in this explosion. "Up until that point, the lookout post duty on the hill (at XD927443) had been pretty good. The hill sat between Route 9 and a river... The river served as both a water point and a place to bathe. A bath was a real luxury for the grunts. That morning we got the word to rejoin the rest of the company. It was light and we had a small bonfire going in the bottom of one of the bomb craters on the top of the hill. I was by the bonfire heating up some mocha (a mixture of C ration coffee, cocoa, sugar, and creamer) when the two rockets came in. We had no warning. I heard nothing until this terrific explosion. Something hit me in the back of my shoulders, almost knocking me into the fire. It was Turner. I looked across the fire at him; he was dead. Our lieutenant was also killed [2/Lt John Spindler]. We found a piece of what we believed was his foot, put it into a radio battery bag, tied a medical tag on it, and sent it out with the rest of the body bags. Later that morning, we were picked up by helicopters, flew from the hill to KSCB, and rejoined the rest of our battalion at KSCB. I had been weapons platoon corpsman. I believe the reason I had been on the hill was because the 60mm mortar section was attached to 2nd platoon to provide additional firepower for the lookout post."[3108]

Although the LZ had been adequately prepped, at 1330H, shortly after 2/1 moved into LZ EAGLE (XD787415), the battalion began receiving approximately 150 – 175 mortars, mainly 82s, and took several casualties.[3109] One of the Corpsmen of 2/1, Ralph ("Doc") Daniello, recalls one of the KIA, PFC Gridley Strong as "..a very intelligent and caring person who hated killing of any kind. We used to stay up late on the line or in a bunker and just talk about life and living. He was killed by a mortar round. I tried to revive him with mouth to mouth resuscitation, but he just lay there with his eyes closed and one lens of his glasses cracked and the other completely out of the frame. I'll never forget his face both when he was alive and sadly as he lay dead. He was a beautiful human being who continues to inspire me. Thanks Gridley."[3110]

From 1630H – 2000H, Companies E, G, and H of 2/3, while attacking an objective at XD795396 received 60mm mortars, small arms fire and grenades from an estimated NVA company dug into the reverse slope of the hill in bunkers and spider traps causing one Marine KIA and 49 WIA.[3111]

G/2/3 was the point company for the assault and as soon as the lead elements of the company reached the crest of the hill, they started taking small arms fire and yelled for everyone to run to the top of the hill. Once atop the hill, the Marines began to receive mortars. Doc Thomas, suddenly the senior corpsman for the company (Doc Quick, the senior corpsman, having departed earlier in the day)[3112] had found a bomb crater on the reverse

---

[3104] 1stMar ComdC Apr68, Encl (1), p. II-C-7.
[3105] Saal, Harve, SOB, MACV Studies and Observations Group (Behind Enemy Lines), Vol. III, Legends, Milwaukee, WI: Jones Techno-Comm, 1990, p. 286.
[3106] 1stMar ComdC Apr68, pp. II-C-7 & 8.
[3107] 2/3 ComdC Apr68.
[3108] Letter from Jerome E. Thomas, 15 June 1992.
[3109] 2/1 ComdC Apr68, S-2 Journal, 21 April 1968, Ser #3 and 7; Comments of LtCol Billy R. Duncan, HQMC Oral History Tape #2781.
[3110] Ralph Daniello, email in Khe Sanh Guest Book, Record 60 posted 9 July 1997.
[3111] Letter from Jerome E. Thomas, 15 June 1992
[3112] Ibid.

slope for an aid station for casualties when the Company Gunny, Kenny, advised him that one of his corpsmen was hit. Somewhat surprised that the Gunny would move through all the mortar fire to inform him, Doc Thomas discovered that although there were two corpsmen with each platoon, all the others were either dead or wounded![3113]

The one KIA, PFC Cassell, was David Brombaugh's (of H/2/3) friend: "We left this ridge walking. Just weapons and ammo. Still no water or food. Told us to write last letter home, no gave us much of a chance. Each 4th man had an E-tool. They said we don't want the gooks to get much off of us if we were wiped out too. It was April 21, 1968, going after 1/9 who were wiped out April 16. We just got to the base of the hill and Co Roc hit us with incoming. Lt Bill Henry was hit bad, partial foot loss. We dragged him back and proceeded up 689. We found a few dead here and there, mutilated grossly, privates cut off and in their mouths, ring fingers cut off, etc. We made it to the top and I was 10 yards behind Cassell. We were down and all got on line. I was behind a little because I was 3.5 rockets. They just called us up to try and hit a bunker. Cassell stood up and was cut down by A.K. He was right at a spider hole and didn't know it. His back was smoking from tracers as he lay in front of me. The next was an explosion. We feel the gook blew up himself with a satchel charge or could have been grenades on Cassell. His leg flew over me and Jim Fosaid had a baseball size chunk of flesh hit him in the face. His body got mixed up somehow."[3114]

It wasn't until about a year later that Cassell was identified. Cassell had landed on top of a spider hole, and the NVA soldier shot right through his body. "The only thing we found were his legs—blew over the top of me. I can see his leg right now as I tell you this story. We found what was left of him—the chest on up. [But then] he got mixed up with those bodies from 1/9, and a guy named Roy Peck and I went over [to Nam] together and came home together—right at the end of our tour they were going around asking if anybody knew a Kevin Cassell. 'Yeah,' We told them the story. 'Well, they got his remains in DaNang, frozen, and they need somebody to go down and make a positive identification.' He [Peck] went down and identified him, and after all that, O, it just tore him up terrible."[3115]

Kevin Cassell was Roy Peck's best friend in Nam. "When I came back off R&R they were circulating a picture—if anybody knew who this was to come down to the morgue. I was with him every minute for 5 months that we were over there together... The bullet that he was shot with entered his body from his stomach. He was lying on the ground. I could actually see it coming out of his back. In fact, the tracers caught his flak jacket on fire. Then there was an explosion and all we found was his head and his leg. It was a satchel charge or something because we could see him put whatever it was on him. I couldn't believe he was dead."[3116]

After Cassell was blown up, "We didn't go any further. We stayed on here and tried to dig in, two men together. We were next to a bomb crater that had about 20 1/9 bodies in it. It appeared these were the dead and wounded and survivors and where they fought to the last. E-tools were out and made into picks, few 16s found and were broken stocks, no ammo, fought till overwhelmed. The gooks were all around us in the ground. As we tried to dig in you'd see an arm come out and throwing grenades at us.. I had my .45 and tried to shoot their arms and hands. We'd start scratching some more [digging a hole], and Kearsley started up towards the NVA that was throwing the grenadews. A mortar team leader—Bentley—kept telling him to get back, 'Get back; you don't know where they're at.' He got back about 2 different times. And Kearsley said, 'I'm going to get him!' He started out there and took a couple rounds in the top of the head from that bunker. Bentley run up there and threw a grenade in and killed him [the NVA]. We found the 2 gooks the next day. But dark was setting in. Kearsley was still alive. He was lost and the Corpsman brought him back three or four times. A 46 tried to come in at dark, foggy, and came close but couldn't see our signal light and gave up. He died in the middle of the night. The gooks came for us, even talked to us, 'You die, I'm coming in Marine,' etc. At this time I had 3 rounds left for the .45.. We found 46 bodies the next day as I recall. We were after 49. We found Cassell's remains, rib cage up."[3117]

By 1406H, 38 of 1/9's MIAs were recovered. The recovery operation had caused 6 Marine KIAs, 55 WIA (major) and 31 WIA (minor), and 34 NVA were killed.[3118]

"We were all given 1 or 3 body bags. We had to lay out the body bags next to the body and then try and roll the body into the bag. I grabbed one Marine by the foot and the whole foot and boot came away from the body. The smell was terrible. We could hardly stand the smell. We finally got that all done and then we saw about 6 more Marines at the bottom of the hill. We got on line and started down the hill, but every time we tried, the

---

[3113] Letter from Jerome E. Thomas, 1 June 1992.

[3114] David Brombaugh, letter of 28 June 1992. Another Marine with H/2/3, Ben Williams, recalls seeing the 1/9 Marines, very badly decomposed. One group was in a bomb crater, lined up, side by side. "It was obvious they had been taken prisoner and then killed because they had their hands tied behind their backs with comm. wire." [Conversation with Ben Williams, 8 December 2002].

[3115] Conversation with David Brombaugh, 24 March 1990.

[3116] Conversation with Roy Peck, 28 August 1994. Peck had the nickname of "Bird." "The first time we was ever mortared, they said that I actually flew to the hole; my feet never touched the ground."

[3117] Ibid.; Letter from David Brombaugh, 28 June 1992.

[3118] 2/3 ComdC Apr68.

NVA would shoot a couple rounds of arty at us. We tried this about 3 times and they did the same thing... We decided to try and send down a squad of about 8 men. They moved down the hill to the bodies, put them into the body bags and then we called in choppers to come in and get the bodies. The choppers came in, picked up the bodies and then our 8 men came back up the hill, and the NVA never fired a shot. I guess they saw that all we wanted were the bodies and nothing more... We were short of food, as usual. We found food from the dead. Most had been burned. It was the first time I had burned peaches for desert. It wasn't too bad."[3119]

Doc Thomas [G/2/3] recalls the night at Hill 689 as very difficult. The Marines continued to receive mortars. He was almost depleted of morphine and other medical supplies. At dawn of 22 April, reveille was provided by the NVA through 152mm artillery screaming over them and exploding in the valley. The next rounds landed on the other side of the hill, wounding more Marines, including a head wound with arterial bleeding on a young lieutenant from H/2/3. Later in the morning, helicopters arrived to evacuate the dead and wounded as well as 1/9's MIA.[3120]

22 April 1968

GUSTAFSON, HM3 James Ernest	G/2/3
PARCEL, LCPL John William	G/2/3

G/2/3 (along with Companies "E" and "H" of 2/3) while continuing to search and recover the 1/9 MIA on Hill 689 this date continued to receive NVA incoming. Total casualties for the operation (21-22 April) were: 6 friendly KIA, 55 major WIA and 31 minor WIA.[3121]

23 April 1968

MURPHY, Cpl David	D/1/1

CPL Murphy was KIA by fragment wounds to the head while on operations.[3122]

24 April 1968

JONES, PFC Larry Allen	H&S/1/9

PFC Jones legs were blown off on 8 April; today he died of his wounds.[3123]

25 April 1968

[Task Force GLICK assumed OPCON of M/3/4 and K/3/4 effective 241630H and passed OPCON of these companies to 1st Marine Regiment.[3124] Effective 250001H TF Glick is redesignated TF HOTEL.[3125]]

BALKIT, PFC Donald	G/2/3
DENNIS, LCPL Paul Leslie	D/1/1
JAYNES, LCPL James Oakley	C/3rd Tanks
NOVEMBRE, CPL Carmine	D/1/1

[At 1133H, Co E/2/3 made a helicopter assault from XD895406 to a LZ at XD920410 in preparation for recovery operation of a downed C-123 in the vicinity of XD934405. By noon, E/2/3 had arrived and commenced search and recovery operations. By 1745H, E/2/3 had recovered: "Unknown number bodies (skeletons) (scattered remains made even an estimate totally impossible), 6 pair of identification tags, 7 service record books (partially or almost totally destroyed), assorted items such as health records, dental records, personal letters."[3126]

At 1220H, D/1/1 at XD778438 (Hill 881-South) received 2 rounds of 82mm mortars with one round scoring a direct hit on a bunker, killing three Marines.[3127]

At 252110H, a squad from G/2/3 accompanied by a tank (C-21) patrolling Route 9 was hit with satchel charges, RPG rockets and grenades in the vicinity of XD904398 (near Lang Kat) resulting in 8 USMC WIA and 4 MIA (tank crew).[3128] The tank crew of four consisted of: CPL Gary Lee Hall (tank commander), PFC Charles Wilson Tucker, Jr. (loader), LCPL John Rodriguez, and LCPL James Jaynes (driver).

"Prior to going on this night patrol we were mortared while in our base camp near Landing Zone HAWK (XD892405). Because of this Cpl Garry Hall, the tank commander of C-21 sensed the danger of the patrol and

---

[3119] Torrence, Carl, "In Country 1967 – 1969," written in February, 1984.
[3120] Letter from Jerome E. Thomas, 1 June 1992.
[3121] 2/3 ComdC Apr68.
[3122] HQMC Memo from [illegible] AO1C, 6 May 1968, Subj: Viet Nam Casualties, in [illegible]C, Historical Center, Washington, D.C., p. 4. D/1/1 occupied and operated from Hill 881-South.
[3123] HQMC Memo from DN to AO1C, 29 Apr 1968, Subj: Viet Nam Casualties, in HQMC, Historical Center, Washington, D.C., p. 5. The Vietnam Memorial records indicate H&S/1/26, but the H&S/1/9 Monthly Personnel Diary lists him as a member.
[3124] CG Task Force GLICK 241110Z/Apr68 in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Apr68 file #187.
[3125] CG 3rd MarDiv 241450Z/Apr68 in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Apr68 #188.
[3126] 1stMar ComdC Apr 1968, Encl (1), p. III-A-12; 1stMar 251615Z/Apr68, SCOTLAND II SITREP #042 (251800H to 252400H) Apr68, Para. 3.B.
[3127] 1stMar 251011Z/Apr68, SCOTLAND II SITREP #041 (251200H to 251800H) Apr 68, Para. 3.D. Although the SITREP indicates 3 KIA, only two are listed (It is possible that CPL James DODD, who died 29 April 1968, may have DOW and be the third Marine). The SITREP indicates NVA fire from XD790450, XD772432, XD774459, and XD792452.
[3128] 2/3 ComdC Apr68.

therefore gave us a thorough briefing in case we should be ambushed.

"At 2100 we began the patrol with a squad of infantry riding on the tank. The night was extremely dark and we hadn't gone more than 300 meters before the NVA hit us. We were rounding the first bend in the road when they hit us from the front and sides. The first hit was a RPG which was deflected off the front of the tank and down on the driver. Corporal Hall began firing the cal. 50 machine gun and was radioing for help at the same time. When the cal. 30 machinegun jammed Cpl Hall had us fire canister after canister into the enemy position. At this time the tank began moving again and we all thought our driver had regained consciousness and was pulling out of the killing zone. The tank then left the road and careened down a steep embankment to the bottom of a ravine.

"When we landed in the ravine, Cpl Hall tried continuously to get help, but all radios were out. He had us spraying the immediate area with the cal. 45 'grease gun,' grenades, and cal. 45 pistols. He worked to shut off our engine because it had already started to spread fire along the suspension.

"We remained to fight [in] the tank as long as possible, but when the small arms rounds began cooking off Cpl Hall had us remove all available weapons and designated a foxhole to go to. After Cpl Hall had tried but failed to recover the driver's body from the burning tank he joined us in the foxhole. When the 90mm rounds started to cook off throwing debris all over the area, Cpl Hall had us set up a watch in a location further from the tank until first light when we met with friendly troops."[3129]

[The next day, at 260700H, Co H/2/3 arrived at the ambush site, XD904398, and recovered the three alive tank crewmen (2 with minor wounds and one unhurt), recovered the Marine KIA and also found one NVA KIA with RPG rocket launcher and rocket at the side of the road, apparently killed by 90mm canister rounds. The tank was a total loss.[3130]]

26 APRIL 1968

BURGESS, PFC Russell David	F/2/3
FIX, PFC William Leroy	F/2/3

[A platoon from G/2/1 while conducting a road sweep discovered portions of a head and a body at XD845407 (the site of the B/1/26 ambush on 25 Feb 1968), believed to be from a U.S. serviceman, 10 badly decomposed NVA bodies in unmarked green utilities, various U.S. and NVA gear and equipment littered throughout the area, and no weapons. Also discovered were 25 – 30 living bunkers (5 x 10- ft.) containing approximately 2000 pounds of rice.[3131]]

From 1530H – 1830H, Co F/2/3 had sporadic contact in the vicinity of XD901390, receiving small arms fire, automatic weapons fire, and RPG rounds from an estimated platoon of NVA, resulting in 2 USMC KIA.[3132] This official account does not reflect the chilling, haunting memory of one of those who were involved:

"We got word that there was movement in the ravine off to the left of the road. Two platoons went down to investigate. First platoon was in front and my platoon was behind. When we reached the ravine, 2nd platoon turned right into the ravine. First platoon did not enter the ravine. When we turned it was as if we were about to walk in front of 1st Platoon. As I remember, Pvt Fix, Cpl Echart, Pvt Dave Burgess, and I were the first to reach a clearing that had been bombed out long before. All four of us were more or less in line when automatic fire opened up from our right. David [Burgess] took one round in the side. Private Fix took three rounds across the side of his neck almost taking his head off. Being the FNG I was and plus the fact I was trained with a M-14 and had never seen a M-16 til I got to Viet-Nam, I didn't know the difference between the sounds of an AK-47 as to an M-16. I later found out that difference but not that day. From the direction of fire we took the only place it could have come from was 1st Platoon. I think David Burgess and Pvt Fix were killed by friendly fire. Later when I did learn that distinct difference between sounds of weapons I know we were not fired upon by the enemy. I think the whole thing was a horrible fatal mistake. We went back to the ravine and found no evidence of enemy activity in the area. No spent shell casings, no holes, no trampled down elephant grass, nothing. I stayed up the rest of the night talking to another Pvt named Willie Peoples about what could have happened. He told me it was best that I never say anything more about it. I never have until now. I know what happened. There was never any enemy down there... I've lived with it for 27 years and I can't do it any more. I never told anybody this because I felt like I waited too long."[3133]

[3129] Statement of PFC Charles W. Tucker in Bronze Star Medal file of CPL Garry Lee Hall. After the tank rolled into the ravine and came to rest and burst into flames, "PFC Tucker made no attempt to abandon the vehicle but, instead, picked up the cal. 45 sub-machine gun [grease gun] and began spraying the immediate area to fend off the enemy. He kept firing and throwing hand grenades thereby allowing me to attempt radio communications with our unit in the rear." [Statement of CPL Garry L. Hall in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Charles Wilson Tucker, Jr.]

[3130] 2/3 ComdC Apr68.

[3131] 2/1 ComdC Apr 68, S-2 Journal, 26 April 1968, Ser: #1 and 5.

[3132] 2/3 ComdC Apr68.

[3133] Letter from George M. Atwood, 13 December 1994.

29 APRIL 1968

DODD, CPL James William D/1/1

CPL Dodd be the third KIA from the action of 25 April 1968.

30 APRIL 1968

TERRY, CPL Allen Lee H/2/3

CPL Terry died from fragment wounds to the body while in a defensive position.[3134]

[NVA activity in May in the Khe Sanh area "..focused repeatedly on the area south of Route #9. It was estimated that enemy forces consisted of at least 12 battalions of the 304th Division and the 102nd Regiment of the 308th Division. There was also increased evidence of a new enemy road leading from Laos across the far southern extremity of the Scotland II area of operations."[3135]]

[Effective at noon on 01 May 1968, Brigadier General Carl W. Hoffman relieved Brigadier General Joseph E. Glick as CG, TF HOTEL.[3136]

01 MAY 1968

BOSHEERS, LCPL James Larry K/3/4
OLSEN, PFC George Charles B/1/1

LCPL Bosheers died when a friendly grenade exploded while burning trash. PFC Olsen died from gunshot wound to the body from friendly rifle fire when he walked in front of an ambush site.[3137]

02 MAY 1968

LAFOND, CPL Roland Robert H/2/3

03 MAY 1968

CHANEY, WO1 Arthur Fletcher A/1-9 Cav
MC KAIN, CWO Bobby Lyn A/1-9 Cav

An AH-1G helicopter (#66-15332), departed LZ SHARON (YD336492) with CW-2 McKain as pilot and WO-1 Chaney as copilot with the mission of armed escort for a recon team operating west of Khe Sanh. At about 1405H, their plane was hit by 37mm AA fire at XD708388 (about 1500 meters north of Lao Bao) and exploded in mid-air at about 1500-ft. above ground. The tail hook and one main rotor separated from the aircraft as it spun to the ground out of control and on fire. The aircraft impacted at XD685382. Seconds later the ammunition on board detonated.[3138]

04 MAY 1968

[Task organization at Khe Sanh: 3rdMarDiv(-)(Rein) [Major General Tompkins], TF HOTEL [BGen Hoffman], 1st Marines (Rein) [Col Hughes], HqCo 1st Mar, 1/1 [LtCol Gravel], 2/1 [LtCol Duncan], 2/3 [LtCol Davis], 3/4 [LtCol Bourne], 1/11 [LtCol Hughes], 2nd Brigade (-) 1st Air Cavalry Division [Col Kinnad, USA], 1-5 Cav [LtCol Jordan], 2-5 Cav [LtCol Leary, 1-77 Arty [LtCol White]; Additional U.S. Forces in TF HOTEL: SU-2 (LSU), Det HqBn 3rd MarDiv, Det 1st RadioBn, Det MASS-3, Det MACTU-62, Det VMGR-152, Det WERS-17, Det H&MS-29, Det H&HS-1, Det 3rd ForceRecon, Det CBMU301, Sec Btry C/1-144 Arty (USA), Sec Btry G/65 Arty (USA), FOB-3 (USA), Det 37th Signal Bn (USA), Det 15th Aerial Port Sqdn (USAF), Det 1st Mobile Unit (USAF). Indigenous: FOB-3 has 328 indigenous personnel.[3139]]

[The 2nd Brigade, 1st Air Cavalry Division consisted of two infantry battalions, the 1st of the 5th and the 2nd of

[3134] HQMC Memo from DN to AO1C, 6 May 1968, Subj: Viet Nam Casualties, p. 9.

[3135] "History of Task Force HOTEL," appended to ComdC Ju69.

[3136] CG 3rdMarDiv 010500Z/May68, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc May 1968, Encl (2).

[3137] HQMC Memo from DN to AO1C, 6 May 1968, Subj: Viet Nam Casualties, in HQMC, Historical Center, Washington, D.C., p. 10.

[3138] Statements of Capt Harry E. McCloud and 1/Lt William H. Dunavant, and Circumstances of Loss, Case #1155, Library of Congress MIA microfilm reel #284, Folder #120. McKain and Chaney were flying in the wing position to Capt Harry E. McCloud. When McCloud received heavy automatic weapons fire from XD708388, McKain and Chaney made a fire pass and then were hit. Immediately following the crash, Lt William H. Dunavant and his wingman, WO-1 Dayle A. Kasner (other helicopter pilots in the area) immediately flew to the scene of the crash and observed the helicopter engulfed in flames. They were driven from the site by heavy automatic weapons fire.

[3139] CG 3rd MarDiv 040750Z/May68, Annex A (Rev) to OPORD 11-68 SCOTLAND II, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc May 1968, Encl (20). Locations: 1/1 (XD820450), A/1/1 (XD802444), B/1/1 (XD820450 and a plt on XD843456), C/1/1 (XD779439), 2/1 (KSCB), E/2/1 (KSCB), F/2/1 (XD885397), G/2/1 (KSCB), H/2/1 (XD876383), 2/3 (XD895406), E/2/3 (XD906385), F/2/3 (XD895406 and a plt at XD902399), H/2/3 (XD892423), 3/4 (XD802409), I/3/4 (XD802409, K/3/4 (XD806409 and a plt at XD922402), L/3/4 (XD802409, M/3/4 (KSCB), 2nd Bde 1st ACD: 1/5 (LZ PEANUTS, XD 810393), A/1-5 (LZ PEANUTS), B/1-5 (XD793373), C/1-5 (XD793373), C/1-5 (LZ BUTCHER), 2-5 (LZ SNAPPER), A/2-5 (XD878349), B/2-5 (XD868353), C/2-5 (XD848331), and D/2-5 (LZ SNAPPER). [3rd MarDiv COC 070340Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #77 041201H – 041800H.

the 5th, each with four infantry companies, Alfa, Bravo, Charlie, and Delta. They were supported by 1st Battalion, 77th Artillery, which had 2 105mm batteries and one 155mm howitzer battery. The 3 batteries were organized on 2 fire bases which were also landing zones to facilitate helicopter delivery of ammunition. LZ SNAPPER (XD845344) had the 155 battery and one of the 105 batteries and LZ PEANUTS (XD808395) had the remaining 105mm battery. The 155mm battery fan of the Brigade reached about 4 clicks into Laos and was able to render some counter-battery fire into Co Roc (center of mass, XD7530).[3140]]

CLARK, CPL Jimmy Ray	A/1-77 Arty
COTTRELL, LCPL Darrell Wayne	G/2/1
FOWLER, SMAJ Robert Allen	C/1-5 Cav
GALINDO, CPL Edwin Gene	C/1-5 Cav
GARIEPY, CPL Robert David	A/1-77 Arty
HURST, PFC Ronald Lynn	C/1-5 Cav
JOHNSON, LCPL Charles Timothy	G/2/1
LEAGUE, SGT Roy Barry	C/1-5 Cav
YERION, PFC Jeffrey Allen	E/2/3

From 041412H to 041750H, the 105mm howitzer battery of 1/5 Cavalry at LZ PEANUTS (XD810393) received a total of 14 rounds of 120mm mortar and 122mm rocket resulting in 1 soldier KIA and 10 WIA (evacuated).[3141] At 1705H, 1-5 at LZ PEANUTS received 1 incoming round and then 10 more of mixed 122 rockets and 120mm mortars resulting in the death of another Army soldier and 9 WIA (evacuated).[3142] At 1730, the ammo dump at LZ PEANUTS suffered a direct hit; secondary explosions prevented immediate assessment.[3143]

At 041605H, G/2/1 on KSCB received 6 rounds of 120mm rockets, one of which made a direct hit on the 60mm mortar pit resulting in 1 KIA[3144] (Actually, there were two)

05 MAY 1968

CHERVONY, SGT Eddie Edwin	A/1-77 Arty
DUNDAS, SGT Jerry Richard	A/1-77 Arty
FLEMING, PFC Morris Lafond	A/1-5 Cav
GUENTHER, SSG Carlyle Lloyd	A/1-50, 173Avn
HAEFNER, CPL David Allen	A/1-77 Arty
HARRELL, PFC Lenwood Thomas	A/1-5 Cav
JOHNSON, PFC Gerald Lee	A/1-77 Arty
LOCKETT, PFC Lloyd	A/1-77 Arty
MOCK, PFC Donald Ray	H&S/1/1
MONTGOMERY, CPL Michael Mallory	A/1-77 Arty
POTIER, CPL Milton Phillip	A/1-77 Arty
WALTERS, SP4 Craig Collins	B/1-5 Cav

At 0230H, the 1-5 CP at LZ PEANUTS noticed NVA in their perimeter near the location of the burning ammo dump. NVA were spotted to the west and suspected in the east. SPOOKY flareship on station and NVA engaged with mortars. Contact was broken at 0445H. As of 0530H, the ammo dump fire at LZ PEANUTS continued and crews were unable to approach their guns due to the fire. 5 105mm howitzers have damage to their optics.[3145] Total casualties from the attack on LZ PEANUTS included 9 friendly KIA, 19 friendly WIA (evacuated) and 15 NVA KIA (confirmed).[3146]

PFC Mock died of fragment wounds to the body while on an operation.[3147]

SSG Guenther grew up in Garfield, Minnesota, and was drafted into the Army at age 17 while still in high school. He was awarded "Soldier of the Month." He died on 5 May 1968 as a result of gunshot wounds while protecting a LZ. His mother wrote: "Oh what bitter grief and pain!.. Everyday is Memorial Day for us war casualty mothers and families."[3148]

06 MAY 1968

HAMMONS, PFC James Luther	H&S/3/4

At 1522H, the 3/4 CP at XD803409 received 6 rounds of 120mm mortar fire resulting in 1 WIA (evacuated). From 061500H – 061800H, 2-5 Cav at LZ SNAPPER received approximately 50 rounds of 122mm rockets and recoilless rifle fire causing 1 KIA and 4 WIA (evacuated).[3149]

[At 071830H, TF HOTEL passed OPCON of 2nd Brigade, 1st Air Cav Division to CG, 3rd Marine Division.[3150]

[3140] Comments of Maj Walter J. Donovan, HQMC Oral History Tape #2781. Maj Donovan was G-3, TF H.

[3141] 3rdMarDiv COC 070340Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #77, Para 3.F.

[3142] 3rdMarDiv COC 070342Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #78, Para 3.K.

[3143] Ibid., Para. 4.A.

[3144] Ibid.; Para 3.A.

[3145] 3rdMarDiv COC 070343Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND SITREP II #79, Para 3.A. and 4.A.

[3146] 3rdMarVid COC 071500Z/May68, Opn SOCTLAND SITREP II #80, Para. 3.A.

[3147] HQMC Memo from DN to AO1C, 13 May 1968, Viet Nam Casualties, p. 7, in HQMC Historical Center, Washington, D.C.

[3148] Article in Ward, Don, The Faces Behind the Names, The Vietnam War, Vol. II, Minnesota: The Memorial Press, 1999, p. 75.

[3149] 3rdMarDiv COC 081930Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #85, Para. 3.G. and H. The 1 WIA may be the KIA indicated; no KIA from 2-5 Cav are listed in the Vietnam Memorial for this date.

[3150] 3rdMarDiv COC 081941Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #90, Para. 4.A.

[About 60 men gathered this date at Wunder Beach for a memorial service for those killed from 1/26 during the siege battle. "They stood silently, dressed in flak jackets and helmets. Could it be these were all that remained from 1/26 who were at Khe Sanh, all the rest of the battalion being new arrivals? It was Monday, 06 May 1968, and the place was an old concrete building that had been blown, burnt, destroyed. The walls remained, jagged silent witness to the horror of destruction they witnessed. There was no roof, no wood at all. The hulk of the war's desolation and destruction was the container of our souls, oddly mirroring damaged bodies. There were so many of them, one could not help remember them—always...The new Commanding Officer of 1/26, LtCol McEwan, said a sentence of two: 'The Memorial Service for those who died at Khe Sanh will begin with the reading of the names by the battalion Adjutant'—and said he had to be off to a regimental brief for tactical purposes, and departed. As long as one was busy, one did not have to face the real demons and dragons of death, grief, sorrow, frailty of life and fragility of friendship. Lt Fitzgerald read off all the names. There were so very many, so very many. Men so young, just really boys, playful with so many dreams, men married with babies they had not seen, men whose names appeared on boxes of cookies sent by a loving mother not yet grieving. Enlisted representatives from the 4 letter companies read various parts of the liturgy. 1/Lt Ben Long read the lesson from First Thessalonians 4.13-18. Chaplain Charles T. Kelly, the Chaplain of 1/26, gave a prayer and a short but deeply thought-out homily in which he emphasized that the real saints are those who enter situations in which they sacrifice all for others... The closing remarks were ready by the 1/26 Executive Officer: 'In this service we have honored not only those who have died at Khe Sanh, but all those who were there. We have fulfilled our promise to the families of our Marines killed in action. Equally important for you men of this battalion is the fact you will always remember the Battle of Khe Sanh. You will live with it for the rest of your lives, and in so doing you will always remember those who gave their lives. To each of you men who were there I have this to say. For three months the eyes of the world looked at you and the enemy who was unable to claim success. At another outpost and milestone in Vietnam's history this same enemy claimed success at the Battle of Dien Bien Phu and with it fell half of Vietnam. Had Khe Sanh fallen there would have been far reaching effects. But Khe Sanh held. You held Khe Sanh living in the trenches, constantly subjected to heavy bombardments of mortars, rockets, artillery, recoilless rifles and sniper fire. You held it because of your fighting spirit and indomitable courage. May God bless you and return you safely home."[3151]]

[3151] Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, Diary entry for 6 May 1968.

[From 7-11 May, Task Force HOTEL conducted Search & Destroy Mission #5, an attack on Hill 881-North and hills northwest and northeast of 881-N. 1/1, occupying positions at 881-South and 861, attacked on 7 May by ground movement towards their north and northwest and established a series of blocking positions, while 2/1 made a helicopter-borne landing on Hill 881-North screened by extensive use of smoke. The NVA had withdrawn, although they harassed the Marines with 82mm mortar fire resulting in several KIA and WIA.[3152]]

08 MAY 1968

CONNOR, PFC Glenn Marshall	F/2/1
FLETCHER, LCPL David Foster	L/3/4
MEISTER, LCPL David William	H&S/3/4
NORTON, CPL Kenneth Bradley	F/2/1
PRESTON, PFC Alvin Lewis	H&S/1/1

At 081029H D/1/1 (Capt H. L. Haley) at XD774437 received 2 120mm mortars resulting in 1 KIA.[3153] From 081043H to 081300H, 2/1 at XD777457 received mortars of unknown caliber or origin while conducting a heliborne assault on Hill 881-North resulting in 1 KIA and 9 WIA (evacuated).[3154] "On the 8th of May we were lifted to 881-North into a LZ right on the hill itself as the 3rd company in, on another battalion search and destroy mission... At the time we landed, the LZ was hot—incoming mortars. We took one KIA, a squad leader in the 3rd Platoon, and moved out of the LZ to the west.. swept on out approximately 1500 to 2000 meters to the west of 881 North."[3155] The area had not been patrolled in some time.[3156]

[On 8 May, the B5-T8 Front Headquarters controlling the operations of the NVA on the Khe Sanh battlefield, began Phase IV of their operation which continued until 15 July 1968.[3157] On 9 May, the 308th Division was assigned the mission to "make Khe Sanh once again be isolated overland, force the enemy to come to relieve [Khe Sanh], create favorable conditions for us to eliminate part of the enemy's forces outside of their emplace-

[3152] Comments of Maj Walter J. Donovan, HQMC Oral History Tape #2781.
[3153] 3rdMarDiv COC 082025Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #92, Para. 3.E.
[3154] 3rdMarDiv COC 082033Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #93, Para. 3.B.
[3155] Comments of Capt Troy R. Oliver, Jr., HQMC Oral History Tape #2781. Oliver was CO of F/2/1. Oliver was KIA 19 May 1968.
[3156] Comments of 1/Lt Lawrence E. Beeson, HQMC Oral History Tape #2781. Beeson was acting XO, G/2/1.
[3157]: Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign], Hanoi: Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense, 1987, p. 45. Trans. Sedgwick Tourison.

ments, bring pressure on the enemy at Ta Con [Khe Sanh Combat Base], force them to withdraw forces in other areas in order to augment Ta Con, tie down the greatest number of enemy possible, the longer the better."[3158] Additionally, "The primary thrust is to attack the enemy outside of their fortifications, coordinating small and intermediate size attacks, and to create conditions for large attacks.. Based on the enemy's continued defense from within the base, we decided to conduct small and intermediate scale attacks, attacking in every way possible in order to draw the enemy out and eliminate them."[3159]]

09 MAY 1968

DAUGHERTY, LCPL James	H&S/2/1
HORSLEY, CPL La Monte Van	H&S/2/1
JOHNSON, LCPL Charles William	A/1/1

From 091145H to 091215H, E/2/3 on KSCB received 14 rounds of artillery, 8 of which impacted in the vicinity of the 2/1 CP resulting in 2 KIA and 6 WIA (3 of which were evacuated).[3160] CPL Horsley and Michael P. ("Skip") Matey were reinforcing a bunker, putting on more sandbags, when a 122mm rocket exploded about 6-feet away sending shrapnel into Horsley's spine and the bottom back of his head. "A Sergeant got a 'mighty-mite' from somewhere and they took him down to C-Med, but we already knew."[3161]

At 091645H, a patrol from A/1/1 (Capt J. P. McHenry) at XD787450 discovered a NVA bunker complex and was engaged by small arms fire and grenades. The patrol returned fire, calling in artillery and fixed wing which destroyed two NVA mortar sites, U-shaped bunkers, 60 meters of trench and killed 8 NVA. During the battle the Marines lost 1 Marine killed by gun shot to his body and 2 wounded (evacuated).[3162] The patrol, originally scheduled for one day, ended up 7 days long. The contact was on the second or third day as Third Platoon of A/1/1 went up a hill to check on a suspected mortar site. Nothing was noticed as they advanced to the summit other than bunkers all over the top. About ten meters further, the patrol began to receive grenades and machinegun fire, hitting one of their men. 1/Lt Allen Wesley Courtney, Jr., Platoon commander of A-3, attempting to rescue the wounded man and keep others from being hit, had everyone else run off the hill as he personally threw grenades and shot into the bunkers, attempting to keep the NVA down so they wouldn't fire on the Marines of his platoon. "He was the only one on top of the hill at the time. He had ordered the rest of the men off the hill. At this time, our man that was hit, [LCPL Charles] Johnson, was hit in the legs. Lt Courtney suggested he crawl into the bunker because we had already fragged the bunker. There was one NVA dead. So Johnson crawled around to the side. Lt Courtney said, 'No, no, go ahead and just lay there.' Instead, Johnson, I guess in a state of shock, just crawled into the bunker thinking he was safe. [He] got inside the bunker. [We] heard a scream. There was one live NVA in there that had shot him. Lt Courtney, in order to save us also was right by the bunker, had to throw a grenade in to protect the rest of his men. Johnson was already dead, but it was quite a hard thing for Lt Courtney to do—throw a grenade in on his own man in order to protect the rest of us. But he did it. He had to do it, and if it wasn't for him doing that, there would have been a lot more of us hurt and killed. We retreated back down off the hill, went back over to our position.. approximately 100, 200 meters away, and called in air strikes on the hill. The next day we went back to the hill, not finding any NVA bodies but many, many bunkers. We got our man Johnson out of the bunker that had been shot."[3163]

12 MAY 1968

RIZO, CPL Albert Martinez	H&S/2/3

At 121700H, G/2/3 (1/Lt C. L. Woodard) at XD907391 engaged a NVA squad armed with automatic weapons and semi-automatic weapons. The NVA squad appeared to be waiting in ambush for the convoy moving from LZ STUD to KSCB. One Marine was killed in the contact.[3164]

14 MAY 1968

LOWE, LCPL Louis Cardell	K/3/4

15 MAY 1968

AMESCUA, PFC Steven Epefanio	L/3/4
BYRNES, CPL Robert Howard	K/3/4
DIAZ, PFC Francisco	F/2/3
FURTADO, PFC Edward Jr.	E/2/3
JASNOCHA, LCPL Alfred Ladislaw Jr.	L/3/4
LOFSTROM, LCPL Leland Eddy	L/3/4
MIDTHUN, PFC Roger Wayne	D/1/1
MUELLER, LCPL Marco Francisco	F/2/3
MURDOCK, LCPL Carl Thomas	H/2/3

[3158] Ibid., p. 47.
[3159] Ibid.
[3160] 3rdMarDiv COC 091930Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #97, Para 3.D.
[3161] Conversation with Michael P. Matey, 26 July 1996; letter from Michael P. Matey, postmarked 1 March 2003.
[3162] 3rdMarDiv COC 100706Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #98, Para. 3.D.
[3163] Comments of HN David W. Allen, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081. 1/Lt Courtney was KIA at Khe Sanh on 17 May 1968.
[3164] 3rdMarDiv COC 130841Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #110, Para. 3.A.

PAGAN, PFC Miguel	F/2/3
WHITTED, SGT Joe Ray	H&S/2/3
ZIEGLER, GYSGT Lawrence Goric	F/2/3

Beginning 15 May 1968, contacts with the enemy became more frequent and reflected a new determination by NVA units to hold the area of Khe Sanh, perhaps indicating an influx of new units and now operating in the area. At 1045H, while ferreting out 4 or 5 snipers encountered on a patrol 4 KM east of Khe Sanh village, security elements of Co E/2/3 (Capt W. E. Russell) at XD883383 uncovered a large NVA force (estimated to be 50) which poured automatic weapons fire from bunkers and trenches. At 0917H, Co H/2/1 (Capt F. J. Mahady) had commenced a helicopter movement to Hill 471 (XD846393), planning to relieve Co E. Co E, reinforced by Cos F (1/Lt W. C. Dishman) & H (1/Lt T. R. Thompson) , 2/3, attacked the NVA positions under cover of extensive airstrikes and artillery fire and, after 7 hours of heavy fighting, the NVA withdrew. Co. E (in the vicinity of XD883383) suffered 1 KIA (PFC Furtado) in the battle (1100H – 1600H). Co. H, fighting in the vicinity of XD885385 received fire from an estimated NVA platoon (rein) dug into bunkers and spider traps, and suffered 1 KIA (LCPL Murdock) during the battle (1430H – 1700H) "Our orders were to move rapidly across the hill.. on to the next knoll.. An air strike on the forward knoll was enroute, and we were to attack as soon as the air strike was completed. My orders to LCPL Murdock's squad were to attack fast across the top of the knoll .. to the next knoll. LCPL Murdock was the point man, and as soon as he crossed the top of the knoll, he was hit by fire from a NVA soldier in a spider hole on the forward slope of the next knoll... He remained there overnight, and we recovered his body the next morning."[3165] Co F (in the vicinity of XD886381) encountered intense automatic small arms fire and 1 RPG resulting in 5 KIA during their battle (1400H – 1700H). The total cost of the battle was 7 Marines KIA and 17 WIA (and evacuated). A search of the area disclosed 15 large bunkers with overhead cover that could hold 4 – 5 men each. Among the items of gear abandoned by the NVA were: 1 light machinegun, 1 map case, 2 diaries, and 20 sets of NVA uniforms.[3166]

Earlier on 15 May (at 0805H), the Second Platoon of L/3/4 at XD792419 on patrol west of Hill 689 received heavy automatic weapons fire from an estimated 9 NVA well dug into covered bunkers (XD792416 and XD788418). L-2, unable to take the objective, consolidated their position and prepared their casualties for evacuation while the Company Command Group (Capt John L. McLaughlin) and 3rd Platoon, commanded by Lt Charles D. Raper, reinforced them under cover of artillery and mortar fire. Although L-3 had suffered many casualties and Lt Raper was hit seriously in both arms, he continued the attack taking all the enemy positions and security the area. The objective was seized at 151154H and began moving back to Hill 689, receiving 120mm mortars while enroute. Suppressive fire was called by friendly artillery, and the firing ceased. The Marines suffered 4 KIA, 34 WIA (evacuated), and 4 WIA (not evacuated).[3167]

16 MAY 1968

ADDINGTON, LCPL Zach Taylor	M/3/4
BURNLEY, HM3 Earl Rosemond, Jr.	M/3/4
CLAYBORNE, LCPL Milton Gay	M/3/4
KNIGHT, PFC Hubert Charles	M/3/4
MC CLAIN, SGT William David	K/3/4
MENTON, LCPL Charles Russell Jerome	K/3/4
PAMPLIN, CPL John Mac	M/3/4

A platoon patrol from K/3/4 was sent out to check the area where Co L/3/4 had made contact yesterday, and at 1020H made contact with NVA dug in at XD788419 and XD792416 (the same area where L/3/4 made contact). The platoon returned fire, called in supporting arms and Huey gunships. At 1335, the patrol started receiving heavy 82mm mortar barrages. The patrol called in counter-mortar artillery and the incoming ceased at 1530. At 1515H, the remaining units of Co K/3/4 (Capt S. E. Thomas) linked up with the patrol, and by 2020, Co K/3/4 returned to Hill 689, leaving one MIA and evacuating 10 wounded.[3168]

The MIA, Sgt William D. McClain, Platoon Sergeant of K-2, was wounded in the initial contact of small arms and grenades from approximately 5 NVA well dug in on the hill. Refusing to be medevaced, he remained and led his Marines in a withdrawal to permit the supporting arms to strike the enemy. He kept telling his men, "We're going to take this hill," and following the supporting fire, he led the assault up the hill with Second

---

[3165] Letter from Charles S. Gaede, 2 December 2003. Gaede is a LtCol (Ret).

[3166] 2/3 ComdC May68, FMFPAC 170418Z/May68, WESTPAC SITREP #1144; 3rd MarDiv COC 170540Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #120, Para. 3.E.; 3rd MarDiv COC 170541Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #121, Para. 3.A.; 3rd MarDiv COC 170600Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #122, Para. 3.E. and 3.E.

[3167] 3rd MarDiv COC 170540Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #120, Para 3.A.; 3rd MarDiv COC 170541Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #121, Para. 3.F.; 3/4 ComdC May68, Encl (1), p. IV-6; Statement of Sgt Earl E. Spencer, III, NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation signed by Capt John L. McLaughlin (CO, L/2/3), and Citation in Silver Star Medal file on 2/Lt Charles D. Raper.

[3168] 3/4 ComdC May68, Encl (1), p. IV-6; 3rd MarDiv COC 170645Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #124, Para. 3.E.; 3rd MarDiv COC 170648Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #125, Para. 3.H.

Fire Team, Second Squad. Despite his wounds and the enemy opening up with small arms fire, he stood up yelling and firing his rifle to direct the throwing of grenades to distract the enemy as his troops advanced. His rifle malfunctioned and he operated it in a manual bolt action manner. Upon reaching the crest of the hill, Sgt McClain was fatally wounded through his neck.[3169]

Earlier on the 16th of May, Co I and M of 3/4 manned the perimeter of CHARLIE-3 near Cam Lo, and departed upon relief by 1/9 and were CHOPed back to 3/4 at Khe Sanh (from where they had departed on 4 May). At 1600H, after their return to Khe Sanh, they moved out for Hill 689 with I/3/4 dropping off enroute to reoccupy the abandoned position on Hill 552 and Co M/3/4 continued to Hill 689 when it made contact with the NVA at 1900 at XD817402. The lead platoon was separated from the two rear platoons.[3170]

The temperature was in the high 90s and the slopes of the hills were steep, 55 – 65 degrees. Two heat casualties required medical evacuation while enroute to Hill 552.[3171] (Lt Rait writes that the temperature was over 100° and that many troops suffered dysentery during the approximately 7,000-meter route from KSCB to Hill 689.[3172] Second Platoon (M-2, led by 1/Lt Donald M. Rait, Jr.) had the point.

The platoon, moving in tactical column formation after reaching Hill 552 had moved about 400 meters beyond Hill 552 and the point had just crossed a saddle between two high places of terrain when it was taken under extremely heavy machinegun and automatic weapons fire. The Point squad (Third Squad, M-2, under the leadership of Cpl Randall Theodore Planchon, II) immediately took 2 KIA and 1 WIA.[3173]

"My guess is that there were 20 or more of them [NVA]. It was an L shaped ambush. They were across the trail to our front and all along our left side. They waited 'till we were fully in the killing zone and then opened up on us. We lost most of our casualties right away; they also started mortars in on us within a few minutes. We were cut-off and trapped as the rest of the Company and some of the Platoon pulled back. We consolidated in a huge bomb crater [and] called in mortars, artillery, and did our best to stop their fire. We had several hand grenades explode close to us but no further casualties."[3174]

When M-2 became ensnared in the NVA ambush, the next platoon, M-1, was hit with mortar, small arms, and automatic weapons fire along with grenades, was taking many casualties and was effectively pinned down. Following M-1, the last platoon, M-3, was also effectively pinned down by the NVA fire.[3175]

1/Lt Donald M. Rait, Jr., commanding M-2, disregarded his own personal safety as he repeatedly exposed himself to the enemy fire to maneuver his platoon into a better position and engage the enemy, establishing a base of fire and deploying a maneuver element. As his casualties mounted, it became apparent that there were insufficient able bodied men to remove the wounded and the dead. Rather than abandon his dead on the battlefield and withdraw, Lt Rait chose to hold his ground and continue to inflict heavy casualties on the enemy.[3176]

HN Burnley "had moved forward into the 'killing zone' of the ambush and was wrapping the head wound of a tall Black Marine.. when he was killed. What I remember to this day was BURNLEY was a bit of a redneck and professed to hate Blacks, [but] when it came time to work, color didn't matter. I have told this story a number of times over the years as an example of sacrifice, and man's lovingness in the midst of the horror of war."[3177]

CPL Planchon tried to carry LCPL McLean, the wounded point man, and with the help of CPL Adamson, who had maneuvered his way to CPL Planchon, managed to move the two KIA and the one WIA into the cover of a bomb crater. CPL Planchon was blown back into a crater by a booby trap which was in a stand of trees, returned to help the wounded, was again knocked down by concussion of a grenade, got up and continued to coordinate extraction of wounded and dead.[3178] CPL Planchon's squad remained cut off for approximately one and a half hours, during which time CPL Planchon kept moving among his squad encouraging his men, redistributing ammunition and adjusting 81mm mortar fire. It was af-

---

[3169] Statement of CPL James M. Mathews and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, signed by l/Lt Bradley E. Place, Jr., Executive Officer, in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file on Sgt William D. McClain.

[3170] 3/4 ComdC May68, Encl (1), p. IV-7; 3rd MarDiv COC 181306Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #126, Para. 3.G. and Para 4.

[3171] Statement of 1/Lt Edward N. Fiertz and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Silver Star Medal file of 1/Lt Donald M. Rait, Jr. 1/Lt Fiertz had been CO of M/3/4 1-4 May, and Capt J.D. Carr was CO 5-13 May 1968 [3/4 ComdC May68, Encl (1), p. I-1].

[3172] Statement of Donald M. Rait, Jr., to LtCol R.W. Kalm in support of award recommendation for 2/Lt John Leffen, 22 Nov 1982.

[3173] Statement of CPL Richard C. Kasprowicz in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of CPL Randall Theodore Planchon, II.

[3174] Letter of Donald M. Rait, 31 March 1999. M-2 suffered 4 KIA and 7 WIA immediately when the ambush was sprung, and they found refuge in an old 1,000-pound bomb crater. [Rait, Statement of 22 Nov 1982, cited.]

[3175] Statement of 1/Lt Edward N. Fiertz in Silver Star Medal file of 1/Lt Donald M. Rait, Jr.

[3176] Statements of 1/Lt John S. Leffen, Jr., and 1/Lt Edward N. Fiertz in Silver Star Medal file of 1/Lt Donald M. Rait, Jr.

[3177] Ibid.

[3178] Statements of CPL Raul Morin and CPL Richard C. Kasprowicz in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of CPL Randall Theodore Planchon, II.

ter dark before the first and second squads were able to link-up.[3179]

When the Point (3rd Squad, M-2), was pinned down by heavy fire and had heavy casualties, CPL John Mac Pamplin, the Platoon Sergeant, worked his way to the wounded. While carrying out the wounded under fire, Cpl Pamplin was seriously wounded in his back, but disregarding his wound, he continued to aid the wounded Marine and removed him from the intense line of NVA fire. When asked if he were hit, he replied, "I'm all right; it doesn't hurt now." At this point he was killed by a NVA grenade.[3180]

Upon learning of CPL Pamplin's death, CPL Planchon was appointed Platoon Sergeant and began aiding in the consolidation of the platoon's defensive position.[3181]

HM3 Donald E. Ballard, while in the rear of the platoon with the heat casualties,[3182] was not immune from the heat of the battle. Indeed, it was precisely in this situation in which his heroism was to result in being presented the Medal of Honor. "Observing a wounded Marine, Petty Officer Ballard unhesitatingly moved across the fire-swept terrain to the injured man and swiftly rendered medical assistance to his comrade. Petty Officer Ballard then directed four Marines to carry the casualty to a position of relative safety. As the four men prepared to move the wounded Marine, an enemy soldier suddenly left his concealed position and, after hurling a hand grenade which landed near the casualty, commenced firing upon the small group of men. Instantly shouting a warning to the Marines, Petty Officer Ballard fearlessly threw himself upon the lethal explosive device to protect his comrades from the deadly blast. When the grenade failed to detonate, he calmly arose from his dangerous position and resolutely continued his determined efforts in treating other Marine casualties."[3183]

It was well after darkness as 1/Lt Rait with his men assembled into a 360 in a large bomb crater had been told to pull back and leave his dead behind, "but he refused to do so and prepared to spend the night after accounting for all his men."[3184]

[Major General Rathvon McClure Tompkins, CG 3rd MarDiv, realized the influx of new NVA forces in the Khe Sanh area portended another attempt to attack fixed bases in the Khe Sanh area. In a SPECAT EXCLUSIVE message he warned: "Pattern indicated by all intelligence sources, recent ground contact and arty/rocket fire by enemy in Khe Sanh area is similar to that experienced during late CY [Calendar Year] 1967. The enemy continues to maintain forces in the general area of Khe Sanh which can rapidly close on the base and seriously threaten its land lines of communications to the east. This capability exists irrespective of whether or not his main objective would be to again attempt to seize Khe Sanh itself or to compel a major diversion of our forces, especially our tactical and logistic air, to coincide with a major operation elsewhere. As a measure of prudence I have decided to deploy an additional regimental HQ, another infantry BN and 1 105mm howitzer battery to the Khe Sanh area within the next four days. This will bring the forces under CTF [Commander Task Force Hotel] in the Khe Sanh area to 5 infantry battalions, 4 105mm howitzer, 1 battery 4.2 inch mortars and 1 155mm howitzer battery. These are all the forces I consider can be made available for KSCB at this time. I again urge that early resolution be reached regarding our long term force commitment in the Khe Sanh area. I believe we should further reduce to a helicopter-mobile, light infantry battalion size force functioning primarily in a reconnaissance role or provide forces sufficiently large to clear and hold both the land LOC to the east and a deep AO surrounding KSCB itself."[3185]

LtGen Robert Cushman, CG, III MAF, responded: "I cannot concur that Khe Sanh needs any reinforcement at this time. As I read the intelligence picture, there are probably nine enemy battalions in the area which at full strength would be about 4500 men. We have four battalions at Khe Sanh which should total about 4000 men backed by a battalion on the road behind them, plus our air-artillery power. I consider this entirely sufficient to maintain the offensive in that area."[3186]]

By O what havoc "about 4500" NVA could wreak! A sufficient force to scour the large area, still dense with vegetation, caves, and numerous places where NVA could lurk, to cleanse the area from NVA was not to be the case at Khe Sanh. The reality was to be one of continual reinforcement and audacity of action on the part of the NVA, and continual bleeding on the part of Marine defenders. Khe Sanh continued to be "hell in a very small place."

17 MAY 1968

ALLEN, PFC Richard James H/2/1

[3179] Statement of PFC Jack B. Jones, Jr., in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) of CPL Randall Theodore Planchon, II.

[3180] Statements of LCPL James W. Shores, PFC Jack B. Jones, Jr., and CPL Randall T. Planchon, II, in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file on Cpl John Mac Pamplin.

[3181] Statement of CPL Raul Morin in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) of CPL Randall Theodore Planchon, II.

[3182] Letter of Donald M. Rait, Jr., 31 March 1999, who writes: "I was left with no Corpsmen and a pile of KIA and WIA to care for the rest of that night."

[3183] Medal of Honor Citation, HM3 Donald E. Ballard, USN.

[3184] Statement of Capt William J. Macardle in NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Silver Star Medal file of 1/Lt Donald M. Rait, Jr.

[3185] CG 3rdMarDiv 160725Z/May68 for LtGen Rosson, Info LtGen Cushman and BGen Hoffman, Subj: Khe Sanh, in III MAF SPECAT EXCLUSIVE, 1968, #25.

[3186] CG III MAF DNG 170030Z/May68, SPECAT EXCLUSIVE for LtGen Rosson Information MGen Tompkins and BGen Hoffman, in III MAF SPECAT EXCLUSIVE file.

CAMPESTRE, PFC Albert John	E/2/1
COURTNEY, 1/Lt Allen Wesley, Jr.	A/1/1
DAGGER, CPL Carl Richard	I/3/4
FONTENOT, HN Chester Joseph C.	2/1
ISLER, HM3 Reid Allen	2/1
KELLY, CPL Eddie Jr.	B/1/1
MARSHALL, PFC Roland Trent	M/3/4
MC MULLIN, PFC Charles	H/2/1
PERKINS, GYSGT Charles Harold	K/3/26

GySgt Perkins had replaced GySgt Melvin Lewis Rimel as Company Gunny for K/3/26 when the latter was KIA on 21 January 1968. Gunny Perkins was wounded by a .51 cal round on Hill 861 on 28 March 1968 and medevaced with extensive damage to his internal organs. CPL Dennis Mannion, the FO for K/3/26 at the time, had received some pins bearing Irish slogans, "Irish Power," and "Kiss Me, I'm Irish," which he proudly placed on his helmet. Gunny Perkins "was always on my case about snipers and providing them with a target (the buttons). It became a daily thing, 'Mannion, take those – ucking pins off. Sure and shit you're gonna get sniped!'" Then, during the dense foggy morning of St. Patrick's Day, 17 March, Mannion heard a noise outside his bunker. "It was Perkins voice with the words, 'Here you go, you Irish bastard,' and a large can landed in our bunker. It had a green blanket roll strap wrapped around it like a ribbon and on the can was a Magic Marker [with] the following: Happy St. Patrick's Day—1968.' It was a can of hamburgers... My bunker guys and I made a fire and cooked them for breakfast using C-rat bread as rolls! I never have a beer (or two or three) on St. Pats day without thinking of those burgers and him. Sometime later on.. the word spread around the hill that he had been shot by a sniper... The reaction of many of us was, 'Wow! For all the getting on our cases about snipers and being careful and not taking risks, he was the one who got hit that way."[3187]

Just past midnight on 17 May, 2/Lt John Leffen called Lt Rait: "We're coming to get you—hang in there." On his own initiative, he brought out his platoon through the "unknown environment of the location of the NVA who initiated the ambush" to help Lt Rait's M-2 carry out their dead and wounded.[3188] Lt Rait later wrote, "The only reason I am alive today is due to his initiative and courage in coming to our assistance that night."[3189]

At 1000H, H/2/1 on a recon in force near XD826387 (about a mile west of Khe Sanh village) spotted 5 NVA with helmets, flak jackets and M-79; at first they were assumed to be Marines. When the unit called to them, the NVA fled into tree line at XD840380 and the unit swept through the tree line with negative results. At 1430H, H/2/1 at XD 832380 was brought under fire at close range by an estimated NVA company in a bunker complex. After the Marines broke contact to permit air and artillery strikes they swept through the area finding 52 NVA KIA while they sustained 6 USMC KIA and 8 USMC WIA. During the sweep of the area following the air and artillery, enemy wounded were heard moaning and one voice was heard to say in English "Die Marine!" as the unit departed.[3190]

One of those killed, PFC Richard J. Allen, a rifleman with H/2/1, was part of a squad directed to destroy a NVA emplacement that was halting the platoon's advance. PFC Allen volunteered to attempt the dangerous mission and, along with several others, maneuvered across the fire-swept terrain when he was mortally wounded by the fire.[3191]

1/Lt Allen Courtney had bravely remained alone atop a hill on 9 May when LCPL Johnson was killed (having ordered the rest of his men to safer positions) while he single-handedly threw grenades and fired into NVA positions to keep them from firing on his men. On 17 May, his platoon was to act as a blocking force for others patrolling from Hill 881. "We were supposed to go through this field that was supposedly an area that had been mined. We didn't know for sure. Instead of the point man walking, Lieutenant Courtney took it upon himself to walk point, feel out the path, to protect his own men. As he was walking through the supposed friendly minefield, he was out approximately 20 meters in front of the platoon when he stepped on a 'Bouncing Betty.' The Bouncing Betty hit him. Called 'Corpsman Up.' I ran down. We had 3 people hit. Lt Courtney was laying approximately 20 meters into the mine field. The rest of the men were standing back, lying down. One man, Cooper, our radioman, was injured pretty badly. I ran down to take care of my men. The first I ran into was Cooper who was hit in the left leg by a piece of shrapnel which had torn quite a hole. I went on over to the next man hit, Rodriguez. Then I saw Lt Courtney lying in the path. When I first saw him, I didn't know he was hit. I just couldn't believe he was hit. He was lying on his pack and his head straight in the air... I began to make my way down through the mine field to take care of Lt Courtney. I got approximately 5 meters from him and he wasn't moving. I tried to tell myself that he was alright, but I got down there and he was lying on his

---

[3187] Dennis Mannion, email to James Wodecki, 2 February 2005; Conversation with Dennis Mannion, 8 February 2005.
[3188] Donald M. Rait, Jr., "Statement Regarding the Actions of 2nd Lt. John Leffen May 16-17," sent to LtCol R. W. Kalm, 22 November 1982.
[3189] Letter of Donald M. Rait, Jr., to LtCol R. W. Kalm, 22 November 1982.
[3190] 2/1 ComdC May 1968; 3rd MarDiv COC 201230Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #129, Para. 3.B.; 3rd MarDiv COC 201402Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #135, Para. 3.A.; 3rd MarDiv ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. 19; 1st Mar ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. II-C-5.
[3191] Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) Citation, PFC Richard J. Allen.

back. The Bouncing Betty he had stepped on had hit him right straight in the buttocks. He was blown up quite a bit... There wasn't anything I could do for Lt Courtney. He was killed instantly.... Alfa Company, when they lost Lt Courtney—naturally it was a great loss to have such a fabulous person and great leader killed, so time went slow and things were pretty bad there for awhile."[3192]

Early in the morning, at 0415, Co I/3/4 observed 8 NVA digging at XD818401 and called in 81mm mortars with illumination. At 1000, Co I received heavy small arms and automatic weapons fire from that same grid coordinate and called in 6 flights of fixed wing on the enemy in preparation for an assault on that position. At 1525, Co I/3/4 began their assault, encountering heavy small arms and automatic weapons, and pulled back to strike the area with 60 and 81mm mortars. At 1700, I/3/4 resumed its assault on XD818401 and secured the top of the hill. The battle had wounded 20 Marines and killed 22 NVA.[3193]

18 MAY 1968

DAVIS, PFC Gary Ray	H/2/3
ENSIGN, PFC Walter Lyman Jr.	E/3rd Recon
FORBES, PFC Kevin Lynn	H/2/3
PADILLA, LCPL David Esequiel	E/3rd Recon
SCATES, PFC Charles Edward Jr.	H/2/3
SULLIVAN, CPL Neil Brian	E/3rd Recon
THOMAS, CPL Gary Joseph	E/3rd Recon
YOUMANS, PFC James Nelson	K/3/4
YOUNG, PFC James Ray	E/3rd Recon

At 180515H, H/2/3 at XD883387 (about 1500 meters northwest of Khe Sanh village) received a probe from the south and southeast (from Route 9) by an estimated NVA platoon using RPG rockets, heavy small arms fire, grenades and 60mm mortars. The Marines called in 244 rounds of 105mm artillery and 181 rounds of 81mm mortars (night defensive fires) and on routes of withdrawal. As a result of the NVA probe, 3 Marines were KIA and 7 WIA (3 evacuated).[3194]

The hilltop was the same hill that the platoon (H-3) from H/2/3 had occupied right after LCPL Carl Thomas Murdock was killed (15 May 1968) and was attacked every night for several days. PFC Kevin Forbes was killed while he slept by a round to his head. Forbes had been in country 18 days before he was killed and, after taking away processing rear time, couldn't have been in the field more than a week.[3195] Despite the short time with his platoon, "In one particular incident with total disregard for his own safety he crawled through a hail of bullets to pull a wounded man to safety no doubt saving that Marine's life. Third Platoon had been on the hill where Kevin died for three days on the 18th of May and every night we were there the NVA attacked us. On the 18th they opened their attack with a burst of machinegun fire from an adjacent hill and Kevin was hit by the first bullets fired while he was asleep under his poncho."[3196]

Kevin's sister, Susan Shannon, named her son after her deceased brother: "I was in seventh grade when he died. I will always remember his sometimes warped sense of humor. He always made us laugh. Besides my 19 year-old son, Kevin, I also have a 14 year-old daughter, Kathryn 'Katie'. It's incredible to think that Katie is about the same age I was when Kevin was killed and my son Kevin is the same age that my brother was when he died."[3197]

Before dawn, at 0335H, Co M/3/4 observed 7 NVA sitting on a hill at XD819402 (about 300 meters directly west of Hill 552) and called in an artillery mission on them. At 0620, Co M discovered and captured an injured NVA inside their perimeter. Upon interrogation, the NVA said he thought he was entering his own perimeter![3198] At 180725H, the 3/4 CP at XD802406 (the southern slope of Hill 689) received 2 rounds of 82mm,[3199]

On 18 May, en entire recon team was killed. At approximately 1100H, the patrol came under heavy small arms and mortar fire. A large explosion occurred where LCPL Padilla was sitting, and a later search of the area revealed parts of his utility jacket and utility belt around a 12 – 15-inch hole caused by the explosion.. There were no remains; his body had disintegrated.[3200] 1/Lt Nels C. Youngstrom, CO of ECHO Company, 3rd Reconnaissance Bn, stated that the men were killed at XD885512 after they had run into the point of a supposed NVA platoon. They took evasive action, but ran into a squad of NVA. They finally reached their extraction LZ, and it was there they were killed.[3201] Padilla had just turned 21 (birthday 01 May 1947).

[3192] Comments of HN David W. Allen, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081, 13 July 1968. A "Bouncing Betty" mine is activated by stepping on a triggering mechanism which sends a grenade upwards about 4-5 feet which then explodes, sending shrapnel into the chest area.

[3193] 3/4 ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-7.

[3194] 3rd MarDiv COC 201405Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #132, Para 3.A.

[3195] Letter from Charles Gaede, LtCol, USMC (Ret), 9 August 2002.

[3196] Ben Williams email to Susan Shannon [Forbes' sister], 14 March 2002, 1:04AM, in letter from Ben Williams, undated.

[3197] Susan Shannon email to Ben Williams, 13 March 2002, 9:48PM, in letter from Ben Williams, undated.

[3198] 3/4 ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-7.

[3199] 3rd MarDiv COC 201405Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #132, Para 3.C.

[3200] CG 3rd MarDiv 211330Z/May68 to SecNav, Report of death—Hostile (1068-68) in Library of Congress MIA microfilm, Reel #286, Folder #143.

[3201] Conversation with Nels Youngstrom, 20 May 1968 in diary entry by Chaplain Ray W. Stubbe, same date. There are no patrol reports included in the 3rd Reconnaissance Battalion Command Chronology for May, 1968, but there is a notation

19 MAY 1968

BRAUN, PFC Harry Walker Jr.	F/2/1
BURLESON, LCPL Michael Finnie	F/2/1
BURNHAM, PFC Joseph Francis	F/2/1
CAUDILLO, CWO Pedro Jaime	3rd ITT
COLEMAN, PFC Lynn Bailey	F/2/1
COOPER, PFC James William	F/2/1
EWING, PFC Lon Barry	F/2/1
FOSTER, CPL James Lester	I/3/4
GILLESPIE, PVT Albert Aloysius	F/2/1
GRIMSTAD, PFC Sigard Richard	E/2/1
JOHNSON, PFC Donald Vern	F/2/1
KRISELL, LCPL James Lee	H/2/3
MOLAISON, CPL Gordon Thomas	E/2/1
MONTZ, PFC Roger Ellis	F/2/1
MUVICH, 2/Lt Dennis Robert	E/2/1
OLIVER, CAPT Troy Robert Jr.	F/2/1
REECE, SGT Walter James	F/2/1
RIORDAN, PFC Patrick Carlisle	F/2/1
SACHEN, LCPL William George	H/2/3
TRANTHAM, LCPL Raymond Farley	F/2/1
VALRIE, PFC Dwight Theodore	F/2/1
WILKINS, LCPL Gary Lee	H/2/3
WILLIBER, CPL Gerald Paul	F/2/1

At 0230H, Co I/3/4 at XD825404 (half-way between Hills 552 and 689) reported their lines were probed by 10 – 15 NVA who fired small arms, threw grenades and fired 2 RPG rounds. Co I returned fire with small arms, automatic weapons, and supporting arms. At 0440, Co I received 60mm mortar fire and were assaulted on the east and west flanks by an estimated company-sized unit. At 0455, the enemy began digging in south and west of Co I at Hill 552 and Co I was receiving heavy small arms fire. At 0845, Co I had repelled the attack and was preparing to move out and sweep the area in front of their position. As the company moved out, the lead elements made contact with 6 NVA approximately 15 meters in front of their lines.[3202]

It was during this battle that CPL James Foster was KIA.

The major action of the day, however, was the ambush of a road sweep detail of Co F/2/1 0700H-1830H just outside the KSCB perimeter on the access road to Route 9 near the former location of the Frenchman's house! It was Ho Chi Minh's birthday, and the NVA had planned a bold attack to overrun KSCB—finally! The plan was to position a NVA battalion near KSCB and permit the daily road sweep patrol to pass through as well as the daily resupply convoy to LZ STUD. The resupply convoy would be stuck through the jungle near LZ HAWK as a reaction force from Khe Sanh would be ambushed by the NVA battalion along the road. By this time, it would be dark and another force would not be able to reinforce the KSCB perimeter. KSCB would be defended only by support troops, no infantry; it was a lucrative target.[3203]

It was a clear, sunlit day. The NVA battalion (a unit of the 304th Division)[3204] waited in a well dug-in complex of trenches, spider holes and bunkers approximately 25 meters off the side of the road. Large bomb craters made from B52 strikes during the Khe Sanh siege pocked the earth on either side of the road, while woods and tall bamboo shoots along with elephant grass bordered both sides of the road. The NVA battalion had been reinforced with a larger than normal amount of RPG teams in order to destroy Khe Sanh's armor capability.[3205]

While Third Platoon of F/2/1 was preparing to debark on the convoy run to Ca Lu for supplies (along with tanks B12 and B15),[3206] Second Platoon, F/2/1, providing security for the engineers performing the road sweep for mines, reached XD851405 at 190710H when they observed 2 NVA, and the ambush was sprung— prematurely.[3207] The NVA battalion commander, who did not wish to ambush these particular Marines, was now committed; he had to fight. He later said he had a tiger by the tail and couldn't let go.[3208]

Second Platoon's flank security received one casualty during the initial heavy enemy automatic weapons fire, and their advance was brought to an abrupt halt. The lead element was separated from the main body. Two Marines from the lead element attempted to regroup with the main body but were gunned down in the process. Not that Co "E" suffered a total of 5 KIA during the month. [p. 4]. The Joint Task Force—Full Accounting, "Narrative, Case 1180-0-01," lists the coordinates of the action at XD8040 (about 900 meters directly south of Hill 689)

---

[3202] 2/1 ComdC, May 1968; 3/4 ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-7; 3rd MarDiv COC 201402Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #135, Para 3.D.; FMFPAC 230311Z/May68, WESTPAC SITREP #1150.

[3203] Comments of 1/Lt John A. Schmid, HQMC Oral History Tape #3949. 1/Lt Schmid was a Platoon Commander with G/2/1.

[3204] Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign], Hanoi: Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense, 1987, p. 47. Trans. Sedgwick Tourison.

[3205] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Arden Maurice Conklin.

[3206] Michael A. Pipkin, "Cannon Fodder: A Corpsman's Point of Viet," We Remember, Vietnam Era 2nd Bn, 1st Mar, 1993, p. 259; NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation (signed by Maj C. Samuelsen, XO, 3rd Tank Bn), in Bronze Star Medal file, 1/Lt Harris D. Himes.

[3207] 3rd MarDiv COC 201515Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #136, Para. 3.D.

[3208] Comments of 1/Lt Wayne T. Haaland, HQMC Oral History Tape #3949.

knowing whether his 2 men were seriously wounded or dead, and since there was no Corpsman in sight, Sgt Walter J. Reece, the Platoon Sergeant of F-2 and LCPL Erwin L. Fixley made a rush to their aid. Finding the enemy in one position, he knocked it out with a fragmentation grenade, but did not see another NVA spider hole nearby which then opened up on him with an AK-47 as he advanced further towards his wounded men, wounding him in his legs and then shooting him fatally in the head.[3209] PFC Francisco V. Velo, a machine-gunner with F/2/1, also spotted the wounded flank man, and dashed from the road under heavy enemy fire some 75 meters to reach the wounded Marine. After knocking out a NVA machinegun position with a fragmentation grenade he aided the wounded Marine.[3210]

At about 0800H, a reaction force consisting of the remainder of Co F, reinforced with tanks, reached the beleaguered platoon which was pinned down by intense automatic weapons fire, nearly overrun, and suffering numerous casualties.[3211]

Moving on the left flank of the road, Sgt. Charles V. Thompson, Platoon Commander of F-3, soon took fire which struck Cpl C. W. Elliott, the Platoon Sergeant. "He was medevaced to the rear. I then received my last orders from Captain Oliver to sweep up a slope parallel with the road, towards [the] enemy positions. I had only one radio, and went with Alpha squad and directed them to a bomb crater beside a destroyed 6x6 truck. I hollered down to Bravo and Charlie to set in down the slope to repel the enemy sneaking up on the left flank of us. We were receiving heavy automatic and sniper fire from well concealed enemy positions. I directed the machinegun to return fire, but was unable to knock out the enemy automatic weapon due to obstructing trees and the bunker the enemy gun was in."[3212]

Moving on the right flank of the road, F-1 advanced by fire and maneuver beyond F-2's position. PFC Patrick C. Riordan, a machine gunner with F-1, advanced until he was depleted of ammunition. After returning to the platoon he picked up a wounded Marine's weapon and began to cover the evacuation. The Marines of F-1 made it to safety, but PFC Riordan was killed by a gunshot wound while covering them.[3213]

Within ten minutes, Capt Troy Oliver (CO of F/2/1) and most of the other officers and staff NCOs were killed or wounded. "A relief column was immediately formed up at the base consisting of about anyone who could carry a weapon and was led by Col Duncan himself and Major Wright... Upon arrival at the battle, all was mass confusion."[3214] LCPLs Jackie G. Porter and Wayne C. Renalls, the 81mm mortar FO team, accompanied the F-3 and F-1 and the CP group of Co F and immediately ran to the highest ground in the vicinity to direct 81mm mortars on the NVA positions. During the ensuing 5-hour battle, they adjusted more the 800 rounds into the NVA and were instrumental in breaking the attack.[3215] CPL Daniel Poirier, Jr., an Anti-Tank Assault Team Leader, accompanied F-3. While under heavy fire, he fired 13 LAAW [Light Anti-Tank Assault Weapon], 3 of which he obtained from F-1.[3216]

PVT Gillespie, in a foxhole with Albert Licciardone, was shot in his head and died while Licciardone was hit with a grenade and shot in his right shoulder.[3217] The actions of PFC Leo D. Chichester, Jr. illustrate the sheer determination that imbued the Marines. When his unit advanced to assist F-2, they took several casualties. PFC Chichester ran across the terrain filled with minatory bullets and "..administered first aid to two wounded men. After carrying one of the casualties to a covered position, he returned to his emplacement and continued aggressively forward until he was seriously wounded. While treating his own injury, he observed another Marine fall wounded. Reacting instantly, he moved to the side of the casualty and administered first aid. Unhesitatingly continuing to maneuver forward, he delivered a heavy volume of fire upon the hostile fortifications, but was again wounded by fragments from an enemy grenade. Ignoring his painful injury, he exposed himself to the hostile fire and killed the North Vietnamese soldier who had thrown the grenade... [He] steadfastly refused medical evacuation until his unit was directed to withdraw to a more defensible position."[3218]

Tanks B12 and B13, accompanying the road sweep detail, came under heavy small arms, automatic weapons, and RPG fire at about 0745 as they neared completion of their mission to sweep the road to Route 9.[3219] "We had

---

[3209] Statements of LCPL Erwin L. Fixley and PFC M. V. Cropp and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) for Sgt Walter J. Reece.

[3210] Statements of LCPLs J. C. Losoya, M. V. Cropp, and J. S. Cortez in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Francisco V. Velo.

[3211] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 13 Oct 1968, (signed by Capt W. T. Cassano, Jr., CO, H&S/2/1) in Bronze Star Medal file of LCPL Wayne C. Renalds.

[3212] Statement of Sgt C. V. Thompson in Bronze Star Medal file of Cpl Daniel Poirier, Jr.

[3213] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, signed by 1/Lt Thomas P. Lang, Jr., CO, and Statement of CPL H. Slaton in Navy Cross (posthumous) file, PFC Patrick C. Riordan.

[3214] Letter from Michael P. Matey, postmarked 1 March 2003.

[3215] Statements of LCPL L. Pomazon and LCPL M. V. Cropp in Bronze Star Medal file of LCPL Jackie G. Porter; NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation (signed by Capt W. T. Cassano, Jr., CO of H&S/2/1) in Bronze Star Medal file, LCPL Wayne C. Renalds. (Renalds was the radio operator; Porter was the FO).

[3216] Statement of Sgt Charles V. Thompson in Bronze Star Medal file of CPL Daniel Poirier, Jr.

[3217] Letter from Albert Licciardone, 20 Nov 1995.

[3218] Bronze Star Medal Citation, PFC Leo D. Chichester, Jr.

[3219] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation in Bronze Star Medal file of 1/Lt Harris D. Himes.

just gotten to the wooded area outside of Khe Sanh when through my periscope I saw two NVA in a hole. I told my tank commander but he told me not to fire. At this time we got small arms fire from the left side of the road. I was looking at the NVA on the right side of the road. At this time we got two RPG that hit our gun shield but did not penetrate. Then I was told to fire... Later I was told that we couldn't fire at first because we had some of our troops next to our main gun."[3220]

During the initial stages of the ambush, LCPL Stanley Sylvester Williams deftly drove B-12 among the bomb craters in pursuit of the enemy, informing CPL Fred Raymond Kellogg, the Tank Commander, of the locations of enemy positions.[3221] PFC Carlos Trinidad, the gunner on B-12 was wounded in the back and left arm by the same RPG round which wounded his tank commander, CPL Fred R. Kellogg and the loader, LCPL Charles R. Lehman.[3222] When the RPG slightly damaged the radios and had stunned the loader and rendered CPL Kellogg unable to remain in command, PFC Trinidad assumed command, repaired the radios, and reestablished radio contact. He bandaged CPL Kellogg's wounds and exposed himself to heavy small arms fire to put out a fire on the gypsy rack on the rear of the turret.[3223]

The other tank accompanying F-2 in the road sweep detail, B-13, proceeded about 500 meters from the main gate of KSCB and was behind B-12 when all of a sudden B-12 stopped. PFC Mark S. Anderson, driving B-13, stopped about 30 meters behind B-12 and saw the infantry scrambling for cover around the trees and bomb craters. "We got the word to move up and flush out the snipers [and] moved off the road and up onto a small bank surrounded by bomb craters. We fired about 6 canister rounds and a lot of .30 caliber. By this time, B-12 had [received] 2 RPGs but no damage was apparent to me. We moved back onto the road and started to receive small arms fire from our left side... At the time B-12 was still off the road on our right and about 10 meters in front of us..."[3224] Then a RPG exploded on the Tank Commander's cupola, sending shrapnel into the left side of the Tank Commander, PFC Arden Maurice Conklin's face.[3225] PFC Mark S. Anderson (Driver), PFC Raymond Francis Bardett (Gunner), and LCPL Silvano Camardese kept the tank combat effective and without their cooperative efforts, "the tank would have been a useless hulk and vulnerable."[3226] PFC Bardet assumed command of the tank after PFC Conklin's wounds disabled him.[3227]

B-12 then received another RPG that penetrated the right side of the tank, wounding the Tank Commander (CPL Fred R. Kellogg) and the loader (LCPL Charles R. Lehman), the gunner (PFC Carlos Trinidad). The tank commander fell from his compartment and there was a small fire. The driver, LCPL Williams, moved back, slowly.[3228]

1/Lt Harris D. Hines then led the two tanks that had been scheduled for the resupply run, to the ambush site. As a result of the action, one tank was destroyed, 10 tankers were medevaced and five tanks suffered major damage.[3229]

Cos G and E, 2/3, were dispatched to assist F/2/1. After breaking contact to permit air and artillery to strike the area, Co E/2/3 swept through the enemy position into blocking forces established by Co F and Co G. The enemy force was decimated and left behind 69 NVA KIA (confirmed) and 1 POW. 8 Marines were KIA and 38 wounded (evacuated), but counting those who subsequently died of wounds, the friendly casualty figure was 16 KIA.[3230]

The wounded NVA POW was taken to the Regimental Aid Station, suspected to be the NVA battalion commander. WO-1 Pedro J. Caudillo of the 3rd Interrogator/Translator Team detachment at KSCB immediately moved from the relative security of his bunker and ran through a downpour of enemy incoming rounds to the RAS, a distance of 100 yards. Upon arrival at the Aid Station and conferring with the medical personnel, WO Caudillo learned of the serious condition of the wounded prisoner; he was about to be medevaced as soon as possible. WO Caudillo, acutely aware of the highly valuable intelligence source at hand, was determined to let nothing interfere with an interrogation of this officer, and without the benefit of an interpreter, immediately

---

[3220] Statement of PFC Carlos Trinidad in Bronze Star Medal file of CPL Fred Raymond Kellogg.

[3221] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation in Navy Commendation Medal for LCPL Stanley Sylvester Williams.

[3222] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation in Bronze Star Medal file, LCPL Carlos Trinidad; Navy Commendation Medal Citation of LCPL Charles Ray Lehman.

[3223] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation in Bronze Star Medal file of LCPL Carlos Trinidad.

[3224] Statement of PFC Mark S. Anderson in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Arden Maurice Conklin.

[3225] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Arden Maurice Conklin. As of the date of the recommendation, there was danger that PFC Conklin would loose sight in his left eye. Statement of LCPL S. Camardese in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Arden Maurice Conklin.

[3226] Statement of 1/Lt Harris D. Hines in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Arden Maurice Conklin.

[3227] Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) Citation, PFC Raymond Francis Bardet. Bardet was KIA 28 May 1968. The Vietnam Memorial lists his middle name as "Frederick;" the Citation lists it as "Francis." They are the same man, however, having the same unit and same first and last names and middle initial.

[3228] Statement of PFC Carlos Trinidad in Bronze Star Medal file of CPL Fred R. Kellogg.

[3229] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Bronze Star Medal file of PFC Johnny Clarence Cox.

[3230] FMFPAC 230311Z/May68, WESTPAC SITREP #1150; 3rd MarDiv COC 201653Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #137; 2/1 ComdC May68, Pt. III.

began conducting a preliminary interrogation from which he determined that the POW was, in fact, a battalion commander.

Fully realizing that a battalion commander would possess an abundance of important information, coupled with the fact that this particular officer had been captured in an area through which the 2/3 Marines was to conduct an operation that day, WO Caudillo knew that an effective and timely interrogation would likely disclose key facts concerning locations, weapons, and proposed tactics of the enemy force.

With this in mind, WO Caudillo, although suffering from a badly twisted knee, moved out through the incoming, coolly disregarding the rounds impacting around him, to the area of the 3rd ITT bunker where he summoned SSGT Nguyen Duy Hung, his interpreter. Within seconds they both started back to the RAS through the steady hail of incoming. When they had traveled approximately 85 yards and were within 15 yards of the Aid Station, they were both killed by an artillery round which detonated a few feet from them.[3231]

[At first light on 20 May, 2/1, with companies E, F, G, and H attacked south and southwest to regain contact with the NVA and exploit the contact. 2/1 continued until 22 May but met only minor resistance. Results of the 4-day operation were: 8 USMC KIA, 34 USMC WIA, 113 NVA KIA confirmed, 3 detainees, 22 individual weapons and 14 crew-served weapons recovered.[3232]]

23 MAY 1968

DANBERRY, PFC Charles Labaw K/3/4

Beginning at 0730 when a patrol from K/3/4 located one ChiCom claymore mine and one fresh footprint at XD803407 (about 100 meters southeast of Hill 689), it began to encounter NVA still present in the area. At 1010 it received small arms fire (from XD794398) and returned fire and assaulted the enemy position. At 1125, the patrol received 25 60mm mortars from XD790400, and at 1145 received 20 additional 60mm mortar rounds from the same location. At 1330, the patrol continued to receive small arms fire and more 60mm mortar fire. The NVA force was estimated to be one reinforced squad with one mortar section. At 1430, Co K continued to receive 60mm mortars and 2 120mm mortars resulting in 2 KIA and 9 WIA. They continued the attack and located several L-shaped bunkers and by 1550 had secured the area but were receiving 82mm mortars. At 1800 all of Co K had returned to Hill 689.[3233]

24 MAY 1968

ANDERSON, LCPL Michael Francis	G/2/3
BALDWIN, PFC Clarence Jay	G/2/3
BEAN, PFC Stephen Louis	G/2/3
BOWERS, CPL James David	G/2/3
CALHOUN, PFC Franchot Tone	G/2/3
COOK, HN Ronald John	H&S/2/3
DAVILA, PFC Jose	G/2/3
DISCEPOLO, LCPL Anthony Albert	G/2/3
HILL, PFC Jerry James	G/2/3
MASSIE, PFC George Edgar	G/2/3
RILEY, LCPL Larry Lloyd	G/2/3
STEFFEN, HN Frederick George	H&S/2/3
VRANKOVICH, LCPL Nicholas Samuel	G/2/3

At 1400H, Co G/2/3 at XD884385 (about 3 KM due east of the old French fort and a little under 4 KM east of Khe Sanh village), while sweeping the area made contact with an estimated NVA company well dug in, in spider holes and a bunker complex from XD884385 – XD889380, receiving grenades and heavy small arms fire. The NVA positions had withstood prep fire by air and artillery. Following the initial contact, the NVA attempted to flank the Marines, and Co G responded with small arms, M-60, M-79, and 60mm mortars. An AO was called on station, followed by fixed wing air strikes. The action resulted in 12 Marines KIA and 17 WIA.[3234]

The action involved First Platoon. The platoon was climbing a hill of grass and trees, some 300-400 meters off Route 9 when they were caught in the ambush. Robert Seibert's rifle jammed and he then played dead. The radio had 5 holes, and some 15 or 16 wounded were still putting out fire. The company brought in air support and the hill caught on fire, badly burning the bodies. "One of the men, Anderson, was only identified because they knew he wore size 14 boots."[3235]

Following the air strikes, G/2/3 resumed the attack, again receiving a heavy volume of small arms and automatic weapons fire from the enemy dug into the objective. 3 additional Marines were KIA. The high ground

---

[3231] Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) Citation on Warrant Officer Pedro J. Caudillo with NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation (signed by Capt Peter J. Howe, Team Leader, 3rd ITT) and Statement of Capt F. J. Smith, III.

[3232] 1st Mar ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. II-C-5.

[3233] 3/4 ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-8-9. Only one KIA is listed in the Vietnam Memorial listing

[3234] 2/3 ComdC May 1968; 3rd MarDiv COC 260108Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #157, Para. 3.F. (SITREP #157 indicates 2 KIA and 12 WIA, while the ComdC indicates 12 KIA and 17 WIA).

[3235] Conversation with Robert Seibert, 7 July 2001 at Khe Sanh Reunion, Chicago, Il. Seibert said that there were only 2 men in the platoon who weren't wounded: himself and PFC Kalata.

was secured by 2015. Results of the battle were: 15 USMC KIA and 21 USMC WIA.[3236]

25 May 1968

KNOLL, PFC Anthony	E/2/4

26 MAY 1968

CRICKENBERGER, PFC Richard Way	A/3rd Eng
CROWELL, CPL Arthur Albert	D/1/1
HALEY, CAPT Harrison LeRoy	D/1/1
SHELTON, PFC Henry Earl	M/3/4

At 0930H, Co M/3/4 received sniper fire from XD807399; after calling in artillery on the position, the firing ceased. At 1100H, M/3/4 at XD811395 (in LZ PEANUTS area, about 1000 meters southeast of Hill 689 and 1000 meters west-southwest of Hill 552) received sniper fire from a bunker. They withdrew and called in an artillery mission. At 1130H, Co M at XD811395 observed NVA in bunkers at XD801391 with barbed wire channeling avenues of approach. Co M called in 81mm mortars, artillery and 106mm RR on the bunkers. At 1245H, Co M received one short round of 105mm resulting in one USMC WIA. At 1400, Co M withdrew to XD812398, leaving one MIA (PFC Shelton) in the vicinity of LZ PEANUTS.[3237]

At 1100H, H/2/3 at XD864397 (just east of the junction of the access road from KSCB and Route 9) received an artillery round which impacted near tanks and engineers on a road sweep resulting in 1 USMC KIA (PFC Crickenberger).[3238]

At 1150H, one man from Co D/1/1 at XD806445 (Hill 861-Alfa) stepped on a bouncing betty mine resulting in 1 KIA and 4 WIA (evacuated).[3239]

27 MAY 1968

ALLEN, PFC Eddie Hugh	M/3/4
FOILES, PFC Francis Ivan	M/3/4
HIMEBAUGH, CPL Lee Edward	M/3/4
MARX, CPL Robert Garry	M/3/4
MC NAMARA, LCPL William James	M/3/4
YBARRA, PFC Ricardo	M/3/4
YOUNG, LCPL John Curtis	M/3/4

The morning at Khe Sanh was clear and hot (100 - 110) as M/3/4 moved to the abandoned LZ PEANUTS to recover PFC Shelton killed the previous day. The terrain was hilly with 55 – 65 degree slopes leading up to Hill 542 from the north that precluded visibility of what lay ahead. Perimeter wire around the old U.S. Army artillery position was intact, forcing channelization.[3240]

Marines of M/3/4 and a NVA unit had been engaged in deadly sparring for several days. On the 26th, at 0950H, a patrol from M/3/4 at XD813393 received small arms fire from a sniper. The Marines fired back with a 891mm mortar mission and 10 rounds of 106mm RR HE[3241] The next day, the 27th, at 1300H, M/3/4 at XD805396 received small arms from an estimated NVA squad and returned fire with small arms, M-60 machine-gun, 3.5-in. rockets, M-79 and supporting arms to rear of the enemy position. At 1350H, the patrol began receiving mortars. Contact was to remain throughout the afternoon.[3242]

The forward element of the company had been allowed to reach the military crest of Hill 542 at which time 2 platoons were pinned down by NVA in a well-reinforced bunker complex. "Mortars blew us off the hill. We didn't see or forget Shelton. The NVA had moved his body at night; he was also mutilated. They put his body in front of three bunkers; each had a machine gun. We tried to grab his body and run. We got hit with the machine gun fire and mortars. [LCPL Leonard] was my radioman."[3243] Koontz, a Marine with M-2 (one of the platoons pinned down), gave his radio to his platoon commander (1/Lt Rait) and began crawling on his hands and knees to one of the bunkers that was firing on the Marines. Most of the bunkers had extremely small apertures. LCPL Koontz tossed a grenade inside, neutralizing the bunker, and then proceeded to go from bunker to bunker to knock them out, returning to the platoon only to receive additional grenades and LAAWs. While doing this, 2 82mm mortars landed close to him, the concussion throwing him quite a distance down the hill; he immediately was up, moving back up the hill to give aid to two casualties while still under fire, and removed them to a safer area.[3244] "He single-handedly took out the three bunkers with machine guns. Somehow we [3236] 3rd MarDiv COC 260100Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SOTREP #158, Para. 3.C.; 2/3 ComdC May 1968. The Vietnam Memorial lists only the 13 indicated.

---

[3237] 3/4 ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-9

[3238] 3rd MarDiv COC 270523Z/May 1968, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #164, Para. 3.C.

[3239] 3rd MarDiv COC 270523Z/May 1968, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #164, Para. 3.D.

[3240] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 21 June 1968 (signed by Capt Macardle) in Navy Cross file of LCPL Leonard Koontz.

[3241] 3rd MarDiv COC 270524Z/May 1968, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #164, Para. 3. RR=Recoilless rifle, HE=high explosive.

[3242] 3rd MarDiv COC 290415Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #169, Para. 3.F.

[3243] Letter from Donald M. Rait, 31 March 1999.

[3244] Citation, NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation of 21 June 1968 (signed by Capt William J. Macardle), and statements of 1/Lt Donald M. Rait, Jr. and Cpl Randall T. Planchon, II, in Navy Cross file of LCPL Leonard Koontz.

managed to get off that hill with all our people. Koontz received a well-deserved Navy Cross."[3245]

By 1730H, the patrol reported 5 KIA, 22 WIA (evacuated), 2 WIA (not evacuated), and 2 MIA.[3246] The 2 MIA were recovered by a patrol from A/1/4 at 021210H/June 1968 at XD809393.[3247]

28 MAY 1968

ARTHUR, PFC Lawrence Kenneth	F/2/3
BACOTE, LCPL Moses June	F/2/3
BAKER, CPL Steven Dewitt	F/2/3
BARDET, PFC Raymond Frederic	B/3rd Tk
CUTBIRTH, LCPL Richard Eugene	F/2/3
CUTRI, LCPL Michael John	F/2/3
DRAKE, PFC Michael Leon	F/2/3
GRIST, LCPL William Anthony	F/2/3
HUBER, LCPL Randy "S"	F/2/3
KESTLER, LCPL Gary Lyle	F/2/3
LUEBBERS, LCPL Ralph Joseph Jr.	F/2/3
MAKIN, PFC Woodrow Jr.	F/2/3
OBREGON, PFC Raul Albert	E/2/3
PONIKTERA, LCPL Stanley Francis, Jr.	F/2/3
SCHUCK, PVT Donald Philip	F/2/3
SMITH, LCPL Michael Stephen	F/2/3

1/Lt James Logan Jones, Jr.[3248] assumed command of F/2/3 on 25 May 1968[3249] and took the company to a piece of high ground (XD874383) as part of the battalion's mission to provide security for Route 9. "The reason we wound up going there was kind of accidental... The Battalion Commander [LtCol J. W. Davis] instructed me to find a place that was defensible.. and I selected this ridgeline. It was such a good Observation Point, you could see all the way to Laos. Unbeknownst to us, the valley that were looked over was a major infiltration route, and for several days we saw, through our high-powered binoculars, evidence of large groups moving through the brush. We were basically sitting up there hitting them with artillery, and evidently disrupting them. One time the guns on Co Roc turned on us and tried to knock us off, but because of the orientation of the ridge, the guns either went too far or fell short, so they couldn't hit us. In retrospect, the reason I thought they attacked us was because we were causing major delays in their efforts to move people through that major infiltration route and they decided that they couldn't take us out with artillery, so they launched one of their fresh battalions at us.".[3250] Terrain of the position selected was optimal: "It had vertical slopes on all sides with one prominent piece of terrain on the easternmost boundary. We called this the Crow's Nest. It overlooked our position, and we could see Laos to the south where the enemy had been infiltrating, so it was also a very good OP."[3251]

Soon after occupying the position, the Marines of F/2/3 were supplied with extra claymores, extra grenades, extra ammunition, even sandbags for preparing their positions.[3252] Kevin Howell, a sniper remembers when one squad was detached and went to a LZ that later became the Crow's Nest: "They detached one squad of us and had us drop all of our gear except our weapons and ammo and water, and run like hell to get up on that hill so that

---

[3245] Letter from Donald M. Rait, 31 March 1999. Mr. Rait indicates that Koontz retired as a Sergeant Major around 1999.

[3246] 3rd MarDiv COC 290416Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #170, Para 3.B.

[3247] FMFPAC 080329Z/Jun68, FMFPAC WESTPAC SITREP #1166.

[3248] James L. Jones, Jr., is the son of Major James Logan Jones, the father of amphibious reconnaissance during World War II. When Capt James Logan Jones [Sr.] reported in January, 1942 at Quantico, Va., with another officer and 20 enlisted, he formed "Observer Group," the first unit in the Marine Corps to be organized and trained specifically for amphibious reconnaissance. [1/Lt Leo B. Shinn, "Amphibious Reconnaissance," Marine Corps Gazette 29:4 (Apr 1945) 50]. on 7 Jan 1943, CG Amphibious Corps expanded Jones' unit into Amphibious Reconnaissance Company, Corps Troops, Amphibious Corps Pacific Fleet (ACPF), a unit of 6 officers and 92 enlisted. The Reconnaissance Company performed preliminary beach surveys for amphibious landings on Apamama, Majuro, Eniwetok, and after expanding into battalion strength, Tinian, and Okinawa. [Stubbe, Aarugha!, USMC: Marine Corps Development Command, FMFRP 12-21, 15 May 1989, pp. 20-42]. Maj Jones' brother, W.K. Jones, later became CG, FMFPAC. James Logan Jones, Jr. was commissioned a 2/Lt in the USMC in January, 1967, and upon completion of The Basic School, Quantico, Va., in October, 1967, went to Vietnam where he served as a platoon and company commander of G/2/3 and was promoted to 1/Lt in June, 1968. After a long and distinguished career, he became Commandant of the Marine Corps. [Biography furnished by Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.].

[3249] The CO of F/2/3, 1/Lt Wilbur C. Dishman, had departed to meet his wife on R&R, and during his absence, 1/Lt James L. Jones, Jr., a Platoon Commander in G/2/3, temporarily took command of the company. When 1/Lt Dishman returned, Jones assumed command of G/2/3 for a few months, and then became the Senior Aide to General Davis, CG, 3rd Marine Division, a post "..which was far more dangerous than anything else I had ever done because General Davis was a Medal of Honor winner in Korea and he was absolutely convinced that he was immortal. Unfortunately, that umbrella didn't extend to the Aide! There were far more harrowing stories working with Ray Davis than I ever had as a Company Commander." [Conversation with Major General James L. Jones, Jr., 7 November 1994].

[3250] Conversation with Major General James L. Jones, Jr., 7 November 1994. G/2/3 had suffered 13 KIA in a major contact with the NVA on 24 May 1968.

[3251] Comments of 1/Lt James L. Jones, Jr., HQMC Oral History Tape #2745.

[3252] Conversation with Philip Ball, 20 April 1994.

we could meet those choppers and bring in the ammo. They brought in four extra machineguns too, and a whole bunch of mortar ammo and machinegun ammo, because they knew what we were carrying was not going to be enough... [The position] started off as a LZ but it was deliberately going to be an OP because it was the highest point."[3253]

The NVA's official history of the battle at Khe Sanh states that "the 102nd Infantry Regiment of the 308th Division was given the mission of eliminating the enemy and seizing the hill at Lang Kat. After 2 days of preparations, at 0312 on 28 May, the 8th Battalion of the 102nd opened fire and assaulted the enemy, eliminating an enemy element, but not decisively."[3254]

From the day the position was occupied (25 May) the days on the new position were uneventful. "We weren't probed; there was no enemy contact whatsoever until the night of the 27th . On the night of the 27th, things were proceeding as normal until about 1 AM. The LPs were out... We had claymores. We had night defensives with 81s, 105s, 60s were registered. At approximately 1 AM we were probed on our eastern flank. Due to the very good position I thought we had I wasn't too preoccupied by it at the time. We dispersed the enemy, which was first sighted through a starlight scope by one of the LPs, with 60mm fire. However, this turned out to be a diversionary attack on our position, and within 20 minutes, the complete southern perimeter of my defensive position reported heavy movement coming straight up the hill. And then a really unusual amount of RPGs were fired at us. They hit my position and the Crow's Nest simultaneously. It covered the length of our position. We had a reinforced squad on the Crow's Nest. The attack was triggered by green pencil flares by the enemy leaders."[3255]

For the 14 of F-2 and F-3 Marines manning the Crow's Nest, the fight at began about 0200 was ferocious and close. Kevin Howell was bayoneted through the right arm and both hands and up inside his mouth. His sniper's rifle, good for about 5 single shots, was set aside and he and the others there used M-16s and E-tools to repel the attack. "We went through an awful lot of hand grenades, and we learned how to take a claymore mine and turn it into a frisbie" by taking the primer and spoon from a grenade and inserting it into the claymore and tossing it like a frisbie. "It goes BOOM! real big."[3256] When one side of their tiny perimeter was threatened, PFC Lawrence Kenneth Arthur moved under a heavy base of fire to throw fragmentation grenades at the enemy, turning the tide of the battle at that location. Then, while the enemy ground attack was renewed, PFC Arthur was seriously wounded by a grenade at 0300H. He continued to fire his weapon until it jammed (at 0315H) and, as an enemy soldier approached his position, he leaped upon the soldier armed only with his bayonet and killed him. A short time later, PFC Arthur died of his wounds from the earlier ChiCom grenade.[3257]

1/Lt Jones was confident that the Crow's Nest position would not fall: "They were in a virtually impregnable position. They were surrounded and cut off from us but they had a M-60 machinegun. They had LAWs. They had an arty FO scout team. They had a M-79, and they had plenty of ammunition and they just held them off. They did a magnificent job considering the fact that they were surrounded."[3258]

Officially, from 280230H – 280300H, F/2/3 at XD874384 received a probe from south and north, primarily from the north by an estimated NVA company. The enemy force from the north overran a 4 man LP when 3 NVA jumped in the hole with satchel charges and blew up themselves and 3 Marines. 1 Marine made it back to the perimeter. The enemy attacked on a wide front from the north using small arms and at least 40 RPG rounds.[3259]

Philip Ball recalls the hill configured like a bell lying on its side with the open end facing west and the top of the bell facing east. At the top of the bell there was a gully and then the Crow's Nest. F-1 manned the west sector, F-2 the north, and F-3 the south. In basically 3-man bunkers, F-1 had: Pagen and Watt in one bunker, Paoge, Carver, and Erno in the next (moving south), then Diaz, Swift and Huber, then Quinn, Baker and Grist, then Luebbers and Smith, then Bacote and Sabantino, then Cutri, Poniktera and Chapin. The F-1 LP consisted of Schuck, Kestler, Makin, and Hicks. The Crow's Nest had four bunkers: Richardson and Howell, Blunk and a radioman, Croft and Espejio, and Arthur, Gentry, and [3253] Conversation with Kevin Howell, 21 August 1994. Howell was nicknamed "Canadian," having been born in Kingston, Ontario, Canada, and serving three years in the Canadian army. After his service in the USMC he became a sniper on a police department and worked almost 10 years in Europe with anti-terrorist groups before becoming a nurse.

---

[3254] Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign], Trans. Sedgwick Tourison, Vien Lich Su Quan Su Vietnam, Bo Quoc Phong [Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense], Hanoi, 1967, p. 47.

[3255] Comments of 1/Lt Jones, Tape #2745 cited.

[3256] Conversation with Kevin Howell, 21 August 1994.

[3257] Statement of PFC Reuben C. Gentry and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 11 June 1968, in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of PFC Lawrence Kenneth Arthur.

[3258] Comments of 1/Lt Jones, Tape #2745, cited.

[3259] 3rd MarDiv COC 290417Z/May68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #171, Para. 3.B. A later SITREP reported the incident with the LP: "The 3 NVA with satchel charges reported to have jumped into hole with 4 Marines in fact blew only themselves up. No friendly casualties from this incident." [3rd MarDiv COC 010800Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #173, Para. 3.C. The Marines managed to leap away to safety just before the explosion!

Nichol.[3260] (Those of F-2 and F-3 are not mentioned here since they did not involve KIAs).

Phil Ball ("Butterball") recalls: "My squad leader woke me up shortly after mid-night by whispering the one, alarming word that immediately shocks the most sleepy-eyed grunt into action: 'MOVEMENT!' One of our LPs (4-man listening posts outside the perimeter) using a starlight scope spotted a few NVA."[3261] 60mm mortars began to fire on the NVA who immediately began to attack the Crow's Nest, but this was diversionary, for at 0245 they attacked the opposite end of the ridge, the western slope, which had a more gradual incline than the rest of the hill. "Like a giant finger, it rose from the heavy jungle, approximately 100 meters before leveling-off to an open summit, covered with chest-high elephant grass. We smelled the drugs they were smoking, but we also smelled their rotten body odor. They stunk-up the whole place with their lack of hygiene. The 4-man LP down the finger called in and said, 'We got bookoo gooks comin' straight up the trail at us.' The excited whispers of the grunt [on the radio] from the LP were very familiar. It was my best buddy, Private Donald P. Schuck, a tough country-boy from [Brookville] Indiana who I had first met back in boot camp. Don was as tough as nails, thus the nickname 'nails' suited him well."[3262]

2/Lt Ray Dito, commander of F-1, rallied the survivors of his platoon to a fall-back position closer to the summit of the hill.[3263]

LCPL Randy "S" Huber, manning his position as a rifleman with 1st Squad, F-1 platoon, had given the alert when he spotted the enemy attempting to encircle the company's flank. "At this time, he sounded the general alert which was to prove later to be the most singular cause in the stunning victory for the Marines in that position. After the alert had been given, he returned to his position to direct fire on the enemy. To better observe the fire he was directing, he continued to expose himself to direct enemy fire.. In an attempt to pursue the enemy by fire, LCPL Huber was mortally wounded."[3264] Despite the efforts by the corpsman at his position, he later died of his wounds.[3265]

"Our own artillery pounded away at targets all around the ridge line, but nothing seemed to stop the human wave of NVA, especially up the western finger where Schuck was still trying to get back to the perimeter and where 1st Platoon's lines were beginning to crumble under pressure. After 1st Platoon's machinegun was knocked-out by a RPG direct hit, killing both gunner and A-gunner, things really went down hill fast. The mortar pit, next to the gun hole was next when a ChiCom grenade bounced into their position. The 4 mortar-men leaped out at the last instant... PFC Allen "Chief" Walker, while fleeing the mortar pit, ran head long into 2 of the NVA. He shot one in the head with his .45 while he struggled with the second. More and more Marines were being forced from their holes in 1st Platoon's sector as some 60 to 80 NVA rushed up the finger.[3266]

As the NVA force overran and bypassed the mortar pit, Walker recalls Kinsella fleeing, assuming the others also fled. The remaining Marines "played dead" as the NVA force passed through and around them. Gradually and cautiously, they got up and dashed toward their lines. As additional NVA passed, they'd again "play dead." LCPL Luebbers, of the 3.5" rocket squad, assuming Walker and the others were still at the mortar pit, single-handedly went there, finding it now abandoned. As he approached, he realized it was unmanned and returned under a hail of fire to his own pit. As he jumped on top of his men, he was hit and killed.[3267]

When F-1 was overrun, the NVA got on the radio and were talking over the radio in English. The Marines went to radio silence. "It wasn't that we were afraid they would listen and learn of our strategy, they were playing with the damn thing like school kids on a telephone. I heard them laughing and cutting up, they kept us from transmitting messages because they kept the microphone keyed."[3268]

HN Frank Sarwicki, F-1's Corpsman, had his hands full during the night with the Marines from his platoon. "He kept them alive for many hours. I cannot say exactly how long. They were under siege. He told me that one of his patients gave a groan and the NVA troops heard it and they subsequently put a round through each of the patient's heads and killed them and almost killed my First Platoon corpsman except the round just penetrated his helmet and just grazed the right side of his

---

[3260] Phil Ball, "Foxtrot Ridge," in letter from Phil Ball, postmarked 6 June 1995, Map #1.

[3261] Phil Ball, "Fox 2/3's Foxtrot Ridge," in letter from Ball of 23 June 1997, p. 1.

[3262] Ibid., p. 2. Ball was a radioman with F-3 two bunkers away from F-1. Others in his bunker were Rodrigus and Lampkins. Ball had just arrived in country on 28 April and was in the bush just about a month when this battle occurred. Just that day, 28 May, he had been assigned as radioman and therefore was not on the LP (as he normally would have been). [Conversation with Philip Ball, 20 April 1994]. 1/Lt Jones also recalls the stench and prattle: "These people were acting as though they were under the influence of some medicine or narcotic. They were babbling incoherently, yelling, laughing, screaming, smoking. It was not at all like the tactics we might imagine." [Jones, Tape #2745, cited.]

[3263] Woodruff, Mark W., Unheralded Victory, Arlington, Va.: Vandamere Press, 1999, p. 138.

[3264] Statement of 2/Lt Raymond E. Dito, 10 June 1968, in Bronze Star Medal file of LCPL Randy "S" Huber. ["Dito" is pronounced "ditto."]

[3265] NavPers 1650/6, 11 June 1968, in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file of LCPL Randy "S" Huber.

[3266] Ball, "Fox 2/3's Foxtrot Ridge," op. cit., p. 4.

[3267] Conversation with Alan Walker, 04 October 2005.

[3268] Ball, "Fox 2/3's Foxtrot Ridge," op. cit., p. 6.

face. He just narrowly escaped death. He spent the night out there and came in the next morning very shook up. He did a good job."[3269]

By 0300, F/2/3 was under attack by a NVA battalion-sized force supported by artillery from Co Roc. Approximately 60 NVA had secured the top of the hill, the First Platoon area had been breached, and a 60mm mortar position had been overrun. 1/Lt Jones had no choice: he called artillery on top of his own position after passing the word for all the Marines to take cover. "My arty FO did an outstanding job.. It was within 50 meters of us...this immediately caused approximately 20 enemy KIAs and forced the majority of them that were again pouring on top of the hill back down the slopes. 81s supported artillery. We had a flareship ["BASKETBALL"] on station; we had constant illumination."[3270] "The whole place was lit up like an outdoor sports arena."[3271]

As the Marines of F-1 withdrew into a fall-back perimeter position while under murderous enemy fire, PFC David Ray Kinsella, a mortarman, dashed forward to rescue a wounded Marine lying exposed in enemy-held territory and rescued him, saving his life while endangering his own.[3272] CPL Steven Dewitt Baker, a grenadier with F-1, although wounded in his right leg during the initial attack, after dressing his own wound repositioned himself to an area that was threatened by the NVA assault to harass the enemy with fire from his own grenade launcher. He constantly moved in order to preclude the NVA from getting a fix on his location. While doing this, he came to the aid of a fallen comrade. Exposed to the enemy fire, he returned his comrade to safety. Upon his return, he was mortally wounded.[3273] PFC David Kinsella was the last man out of the mortar pit when the NVA grenade exploded. Although the blast caught him in the soles of his feet as shrapnel penetrated his boots, he made several trips back and forth from the newly-formed secondary line of defense to within 5 meters of where the NVA were setting up their lines and managed to help several wounded to a more secure area.[3274]

Sgt Joseph Michael Quinn was a squad leader in F-1 who became the acting Platoon Commander of F-2[3275] since 2/Lt Greenfield had been medevaced with malaria.[3276]

LCPL Michael John Cutri, a Fire Team Leader in the 3rd Squad of F-1, immediately alerted his team when the alert had been sounded and shortly thereafter, the lines to the right flank of LCPL Cutri were penetrated. As he repositioned his men, he heard cries for help forward of the lines from a Marine of the LP. Exposing himself to the enemy fire, he advanced to within 10 meters of the NVA to rescue the fallen Marine and return him to a covered position. When he had administered first aid, he returned to his team's position. In an attempt to reposition his team to a better firing position, he was mortally wounded.[3277] He was just one month shy of his 19th birthday, and his mother, Doris Ione Kirkpatrick lamented, "What makes it so hard is the fact that he could have gotten out. They offered him officer's training. But he told his commander he couldn't leave his men."[3278]

As this was happening, the Company Gunny, GySgt Ralph J. Larsen, noticing the red pencil flare signals of the NVA, mentioned to 1/Lt Jones that he had a pencil flare. Jones said he had some of the little flares in his pocket, "and just to see what would happen, we fired two or three red flares up in the air. Surprisingly enough, the enemy interpreted this as being a signal from them, and they withdrew temporarily. The amount of enemy activity decreased significantly and we kept on doing this as much as possible. However, eventually I think they figured it out."[3279] "It was 30 minutes before they could get reorganized and by that time we were ready for them—at least more ready than we had been the first time because their diversion was really pretty successful."[3280]

From 0415H – 0620H, the attack against the Marines became ferocious as the NVA regrouped and attempted to overrun F/2/3 using an estimated 500 RPG grounds fired from the high ground at XD880383 in support of the ground troops.[3281] The NVA attack was so well-organized, the NVA had stretcher-bearers to remove their dead.[3282] At 0700H, armed Huey gunships arrived and reported the entire area strewn with dead NVA bodies. At 1045H, Co E/2/3 moved from Bridge #35 (XD862399) to support F/2/3. 2 tanks in direct support delivered 90mm fire on the NVA moving across and up the ridgeline to

---

[3269] Comments of HM2 Emanuel D. Layos, HQMC Oral History Tape #2745. Layos was the senior corpsman for F/2/3.
[3270] Comments of 1/Lt Jones, Tape #2745, cited.
[3271] Conversation with Philip Ball, 20 April 1994.
[3272] Statement of PFC Morris J. Nelson, 10 June 1968, and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 20 June 1968, in Bronze Star Medal file of David Ray Kinsella. (The form indicates he was recommended for the Silver Star Medal, but this was crossed out and "Bronze Star Medal" was inserted).
[3273] Statements of 2/Lt Raymond E. Dito and SGT Joseph M. Quinn in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of CPL Steven Dewitt Baker.
[3274] Ball, "Fox 2/3's Foxtrot Ridge," op. cit., p. 5.
[3275] Statements of 1/Lt James L. Jones, Jr. and GySgt Ralph J. Larsen and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 20 June 1968, in Bronze Star Medal file of SGT Joseph Michael Quinn.
[3276] Ball, "Foxtrot Ridge," op. cit., p. 13.
[3277] Statement of 2/Lt Raymond E. Dito, 10 June 1968 and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 11 June 1968, in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file of LCPL Michael John Cutri.
[3278] Clipping, Elizabeth Perez, "Vietnam Vets Remembered," Marin Independent Journal, 28 Oct 1996, pp. A1 and A10.
[3279] Comments of 1/Lt James L. Jones, Jr., Tape #2745, cited.
[3280] Conversation with Major General James L. Jones, cited.
[3281] 3rd MarDiv COC 010801Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #174, Para. 3.
[3282] Comments of 1/Lt Jones, Tape #2745, cited.

F/2/3's position. At 1130H, fixed wing began to deliver napalm within 20 meters of the Marine defenders and the attacking NVA soon departed as the napalm killed an estimated 30 NVA.[3283] While the first napalm strike was right on target, the second one was carried past the position to the reverse slope and caused a grass fire which caused problems of attempting to extinguish it while still securing the position.[3284] In the process, two of the KIAs taken early in the battle were inadvertently left on top of the hill and the fire charred their bodies.[3285] LCPL Steve Baker, a member of SGT Joseph Quinn's squad in F-1 was killed when he couldn't get out of the way of the napalm dropped on the western end of the perimeter.[3286] Strong winds suddenly picked-up and blew the fire towards the Marines "..so quickly that we had only enough time to grab our weapons and the radio before scrambling over the top of the ridge line and back down the northern slope where 2nd Platoon had their lines dug. Attempts to put the fires out were made impossibly dangerous, not only because we were still taking considerable fire from the retreating enemy, but also because all the extra ammo and hundreds of 'dud' RPG rounds and enemy grenades and satchel charges, lying all over the ground, began 'cooking off' in the extreme heat."[3287]

Phil Ball and the others returned to their bunkers. "Everything looked totally different.. Instead of the tall grass that had previously surrounded my position and restricted visibility to only a few feet.. the entire area was now burnt to the ground.. A black blanket of powdery ash was all that was left. The wind was still blowing, picking up the ash and soot on wet skin and eyes. Dozens of dead NVA were everywhere, burnt to a blackened crisp, contorted in every imaginable grotesque position. Some seemed to teeter on all fours.. apparently burnt alive as they crawled. Then, out of the corner of my eye, one of these God-awful morbid beings looked like it moved.. almost like something out an old horror movie."[3288] The Marines fired their last ammo at the fleeing enemy and yelled typical profanities. A RPG exploded between Mark Woodruff and PFC Richard ("Dickie") Cutbirth's holes with deadly accuracy. The F-2 Corpsman in the hole with Woodruff and Quinn making his 'rounds' knocked him unconscious. After quickly checking Woodruff for wounds and unable to find any, he turned to his good friend, Cutbirth. Cutbirth had taken a fatal wound to his head and was dead.[3289]

Co E/2/3 (Capt William E. Russell), advancing towards F/2/3's position, attacked along a ridgeline routing NVA from bunkers and fighting holes with small arms, M-26 grenades, and M-79. NVA continued to offer resistance. CPL John Arnold Krause, a squad leader with E/2/3, although seriously wounded by a bullet in his arm, led an assault on a NVA heavy machine gun.[3290] After securing the western portion of the ridge line, E/2/3 pushed east where the F/2/3 OP was receiving NVA fire.[3291] At 1150H, E/2/3 arrived at Co F/2/3's position.[3292] At 1500 emergency re-supply arrived by helicopter and the WIA were evacuated.[3293] Contact with the enemy was broke at 1800H. There were 13 Marines killed, 44 wounded (evacuated), and 174 NVA killed—adjusted to over 200 as more were subsequently located.[3294]

Phil Ball located the corpse of his friend, PVT Donald Schuck. "The body was lying face down and I could see the huge opening in the back of the skull, obviously the fatal wound. I knelt down and saw the inside of the head was completely empty of brain matter or blood. I believed then that I was staring at the inside of Don's face, yet it still was not registering fully in my mind. How could it be? All that young life, full of energy and hope only a few hours earlier, gone. I had a very hard time dealing with the loss of my friend, especially so early in my tour. I still had 12 more months to serve."[3295]

29 MAY 1968

SEGINE, LCPL Ronald Eugene A/1/1

[No KIA from A/1/1 are indicated in the 6-hour SITREPS for 29 May 1968]

30 MAY 1968

JEREMIAH, PFC Randall Craig L/3/4

At 0915H, a recon patrol from L/3/4 (XD794415, about 1,000 meters northwest of Hill 689) made contact with an estimated 6 NVA at XD793415 armed with a 51 cal. machine gun. The patrol called in 105s on the NVA and sustained 2 WIA.[3296] At 1100 the remainder of the platoon linked up with the recon patrol and set up a LZ to medevac the WIA and continued to conduct 105mm missions on the enemy position along with 60mm mor-

---

[3283] 3rd MarDiv COC 010801Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #174, Para. 3; 2/3 ComdC May 1968.
[3284] Comments of 1/Lt Jones, Tape #2745, cited.
[3285] Comments of HM2 Layos, Tape #2745, cited.
[3286] Ball, "Foxtrot Ridge," op. cit., p. 13.
[3287] Ibid., p. 22.
[3288] Ibid., p. 24.
[3289] Ibid., p. 25.
[3290] Statement of GySgt Richard A. Moss in Bronze Star Medal file of CPL John Arnold Krause.
[3291] 3rd MarDiv COC 010801Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #174, Para. 3.
[3292] 2/3 ComdC May 1968.
[3293] Ibid.
[3294] Ibid.; Comments of 1/Lt Jones, Tape #2745, cited.
[3295] Ball, "Fox 2/3's Foxtrot Ridge," op. cit., p. 13.
[3296] 3rd MarDiv COC 020001Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #180, Para 3.E.

tars.[3297] A search was made for a MIA sustained, with negative result.[3298] At 1640, the patrol at XD795415 received 3 rounds of 60mm mortars from the NVA at XD776403 and returned fire with 81mm mortar and 105mm howitzers.[3299] At 1801, L/3/4 at XD795415 received sporadic 60mm mortars resulting in 1 KIA (PFC Jeremiah), and at 1815H, the patrol returned to the CP having sustained 1 KIA, 8 WIA (evacuated), and 1 MIA.[3300]

During the night, NVA forces attacked Co E/2/3 occupying the position occupied by F/2/3 when it was attacked on 28 May. The NVA were repulsed as the Marines killed 96 NVA.[3301]

[Noisome NVA artillery fired from Co Roc in Laos continued to make live at Khe Sanh difficult. Particularly vexing to CG TF HOTEL was the inability of artillery positioned at Khe Sanh to reach beyond the Co Roc escarpment to the depth necessary to hit enemy artillery pieces.[3302] The same chagrin was expressed by the average trooper. When H/2/1 moved back on KSCB in May, all knew the place was an extremely undesirable place to be since they'd be sitting targets for NVA artillery which hit almost every day: "We moved back to Khe Sanh for a little rest—in quotes! No one looked forward to sitting inside Khe Sanh base again. The enemy had the artillery capability which he utilized all the time, almost every day."[3303]

CG, FMFPAC, had requested RAP rounds [Rocket Assisted Projectiles] which would extend the ranges of 105mm and 155mm howitzers to 15.4 and 30 kilometers respectively.[3304] The NVA artillery fire was unrelenting, and therefore Operation DRUMFIRE II was planned as an artillery raid against NVA artillery emplacements in the vicinity of Co Roc. 4 175mm guns would be displaced from Camp Rockpile to hastily prepared positions in the vicinity of LZ HAWK (XD896406) and 4 8-inch howitzers would be placed in selected positions in the vicinity of KSCB (XD822428).[3305] 8-inch would fire precision destruction missions; 175s would concentrate on targets beyond 8-inch range, and the firing would be continuous.[3306]

DRUMFIRE II was executed as planned except that highly unfavorable weather precluded observation resulting in a preponderance of unobserved missions. Summary:

	Missions	Rounds
300001H-302400H/May68
8-in.	40	669
175mm	9	162
310001H-312400H/May68
8-in.	13	219
175mm	45	417
010001H-022400H/Jun68
8-in.	6	114
175mm	45	244
TOTAL
8-in.	59	1002
175mm	99	823[3307]

Jerome E. Thomas, a Corpsman working in the 2/1 BAS (the old Charlie Med on KSCB), remembers two 8-inch howitzers moved onto KSCB on 30 May which fired over the next two days on Co Roc. "In addition, each night Co Roc was arc lighted. We took no incoming during this two day period. I recall sitting on top of the bunkers at night watching the arc lights. The explosions rumbled like thunder and the flashes looked like heat lightening reflecting up through the clouds. On the morning of June 1, 1968, the 8-inch guns were withdrawn from the perimeter. About 11 AM the gooks dropped six rounds of 152s on KSCB to let us know they were still there."[3308]

31 MAY 1968

ALLEN, LCPL Robert Christian	B/1/1
BOYE, PFC Henry Joseph Jr.	B/1/1
DICKSON, LCPL Eric Voughn	B/1/1
EVANS, PFC Haydn	E/2/3

[3297] 3rd MarDiv COC 020115Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #181, Para 3.B.
[3298] 3/4 ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-10.
[3299] Ibid., Para 3.I.
[3300] 3rd MarDiv COC 031505Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #182, Para 3.A. (The MIA was found in good condition on 03 June 1968 at 1230H. [3rd MarDiv COC 080152Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #197, Para. 3.G.]
[3301] Navy Cross Citation, Capt William E. Russell.
[3302] Comments of BGen Carl W. Hoffman, HQMC Oral History Tape #2781.
[3303] Comments of 1/Lt Wayne T. Haaland, HQMC Oral History Tape #3949.
[3304] CG FMFPAC 190211Z/Mar68, Subj: 105/155mm Rocket Assisted Projectiles, in FMFPAC Misc Msgs file. The M101A1 105mm howitzer has a max. range of 11,000 meters; the -114A 155mm howitzer has a max. range of 15,080 meters. CG. FMFPAC's message to CMC notes that RAP was under development and requested advice on their availability.
[3305] ADMINO III MAF 281410Z/May68, DRUMFIRE II, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs May68 Etc. file, Encl (175); CG 3rd MarDiv 281410Z/May68, FRAG O 19-68, DRUMFIRE II in 3rd MarDiv Msgs May68, Etc. file, Encl (176).
[3306] FRAG O 19-68, cited. Class V required: 1400 rounds of 8-in positioned at KSCB with 300 additional rounds positioned at LZ CAMEO, 400 rounds 175mm moved to LZ HAWK with the 175mm gun convoy with 800 additional 175mm rounds positioned there the day before the operation commenced.
[3307] 3rd MarDiv 060105Z/Jun68, Opn DRUMFIRE II, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Jun68, Encl (59).
[3308] Letter from Jerome E. Thomas, 20 July 1992.

FERGUSON, CPL Ralph	B/1/1
GATEWOOD, LCPL Charles Hue	B/1/1
GIFFORD, LCPL William Gary	E/2/3
GORE, CPL Harold Douglas	E/2/3
GRAY, LCPL John Patrick	E/2/3
GRAY, PFC Ruzell	E/2/3
HALLER, CPL Leroy Clayton	B/1/1
HICKS, CPL Norman Edward Jr.	H&S/2/3
JOHNSON, LCPL Harrell Wayne	H&S/2/3
KAULBACK, LCPL Peter Jon	B/1/1
MARTORELLA, LCPL Gary Mario	E/2/3
MAYBERRY, PFC Squire Newton Jr.	E/2/3
MC ELRATH, LCPL Winston Jr.	K/3/4
MOORE, LCPL Harry Truman	B/1/1
MORGAN, LCPL Charles Lewis	B/1/1
MORRIS, PFC Wayman Dewey	B/1/1
PLILER, SGT Larry Dean	B/1/1
RAMOS, SGT George Michael	H&S/2/3
ROGERS, CPL Douglas Manuel	G/2/3
SMITH, LCPL Robert Lee	H&S/2/3
TRANTHAM, LCPL Donald Ray	B/1/1
WEST, LCPL James Edward Jr.	E/2/3
WILLIAMS, CPL Samuel	B/1/1

A platoon combat patrol from L/3/4 commanded by Lt Joyner searched out the area of contact on 30 May for Co L's MIA with negative results. Co L later displaced to Hill 881-South.[3309]

At 0400H, Co E/2/3 at XD874382 (the position at which F/2/3 had experienced a savage attack on 28 May) received a ground attack from 4 different directions. The attack was repulsed when Co E fired the final protective fire.[3310] The attacked was launched by the 7th Battalion, 102nd Regiment,. 308th Division.[3311] From 0020H – 1547H, Co E suffered 4 KIA and 48 WIA.[3312]

LCPL James West, John Brain, and two others were at a LP during the night. Brain recalls: "A sister company [F/2/3] had been overrun.. and we were sent to help them and claim their dead... The next day we spent tightening up our perimeter. I could sense something big was about to happen. We four were chosen to go on that LP, a couple hundred yards in front of our lines. Rus [LCPL West] was the senior at that time in that LP [and we were] friends, not just the friends that are maintained in the service, but something that could have continued after the Corps. That night on LP started like most nights on other LPs that we had been on. Nervous, scared but we know what we have to do. Our fox hole was L shaped, only about 5 x 3 and had been badly damaged from fighting.. Four guys, the gear and a radio.. We started our watch at 2 [hours] on 2 off. Well, that lasted till about midnight when we had movement, and then we were all 4 on watch till about three when all hell broke loose. Our company, Echo, 2/3, was hit by a battalion size attack of NVA and the 4 of us were stuck in front of our line calling in mortars and artillery... we heard the frustration in the voice of our 2nd Lt who wanted us back... Our own ammunition was almost gone when a NVA suicide.. dove into our hole (like we had room), we all got wounded with that attack. Soon after, a satchel charge was thrown in the hole but it was caught by one guy. All that I remember is he was black and one of four fighting Marines. He tried to toss it out of the hole when it blew. That charge killed him. That charge killed Russ [LCPL West], and it sent a guy named Earl and myself to hospitals. I believe that Earl lost a lung and was blown out of the foxhole. Next to him was the black guy, next to him Russ and then me. I was hit in the face and left side of my body. We were already in a crowded space when that satchel charge came in. Rus wound up on top of me taking most of the blow that would have hit me. He knew that this was it but seemed to have a peace or togetherness within him when he died."[3313] John Brain later described the scene: "There are dead NVA piled up around us and the second satchel charge comes into our hole, kills the black guy instantly. Rus and I are hit and thrown to the ground. Rus is on top of me and in my arms with his head on my chest. We are both in shock from the concussion... Rus is looking up at me and says, 'O, my God, this is it,' closes his eyes and passes away. I start to say the same thing. I can feel my eyes and body sinking. God as far as 'O my God, this is..' and almost like a voice saying, 'No it's not," I shook my head, thought, OK I can do this. Was able to crawl out from under Rus, head back to our lines, tripping over the 4th guy who had gotten out ahead of me, and crawled up to a machine gun position. Boy were they surprised to see friendlies coming in."[3314]

At 0850H, Co B/1/1 at XD871392, attacking a hill enroute to reinforce E/2/3, had just moved south off of Route 9 when they encountered a dug-in NVA force. The Marines received very heavy small arms fire and RPG rounds from an estimated NVA platoon in spider holes, and returned fire with small arms fire as they con-

---

[3309] 3/4 ComdC May 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-10.

[3310] 2/3 ComdC May68; 3rd MarDiv COC 031501Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #184, Para. 3.A.

[3311] Chien Dich Tien Cong Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign], Hanoi: Vien Lich Su Quan Su Vietnam, Bo Quoc Phong [Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense], 1987, pp. 47-48.

[3312] 2/3 ComdC May68.

[3313] J. S. Brain, email to June Austin [sister of LCPL James "Rusty" West] 17 Jan 2000, 6:56:57 PM, EST., in Letter from June Austin, 2 February 2000.

[3314] J. S. Brain, email to June Austin, 2 February 2000, 9:13:46 AM, EST, in Letter from June Austin, 2 February 2000.

solidated their position. The ambush was deadly: 8 Marines were killed and 22 wounded.[3315]

In the initial burst of fire, the second squad of B-2, walking point, took many casualties. The only 2 left uninjured were the squad leader and LCPL Ronnie D. Taylor, the radio operator. The squad leader, attempting to reach the wounded, also became a casualty, and LCPL Taylor, while calling for aid, proceeded to move forward to the wounded men. He was unable to lay down his own base of fire and carry the wounded to a safer area, and he was completely alone, directly in the face of the enemy. He advanced to within 20 meters of the enemy positions and time after time made the perilous journey forward to remove the wounded Marines to a safer area. At one time he was knocked from his feet by the concussion of an enemy grenade.[3316]

During the battle, SGT Larry D. Pliler, the Platoon Sergeant of Third Platoon of B/1/1, was seriously wounded while trying to aid fellow Marines. LCPL Mark E. Vanderheid was approximately 30 meters away when he noticed SGT Pliler fall from the enemy fire, and with complete disregard for his own personal safety, LCPL Vanderheid rushed across the fire swept terrain to aid Sgt Pliler. LCPL Gary Lee Lefevers summoned HM3 Gary Bauchamp, the platoon corpsman, to where Vanderheid was aiding Sgt Pliler. Approximately 10 minutes later, 3 grenades were thrown into the bomb crater by the NVA wounding Cpl Vanderheid and HM3 Bauchamp.[3317]

The 18 year-old LCPL Charles H. Gatewood, a Black Marine with B/1/1, received a gunshot wound in his back and treated by a corpsman. Since he was ambulatory, he was permitted to talk to a rear area where a helicopter medical evacuation landing zone had been established, and was seen at different times walking to the LZ by CPL Gary L. Lafevers and LCPL Cecil W. Bowser, who remembered he did not show any outward appearance of being in any great pain. It wasn't until 25 August when the CO, 1/1, received a letter from Gatewood's family that they hadn't heard from him since 24 May, that Gatewood's disappearance was evident. An investigation reported that the inordinate delay in reporting his disappearance was due to the Company Commander's transfer, his Platoon Sergeant and Right Guide KIA in the action and added, "Further, LCPL Gatewood was considered a routine Wounded in Action on 31 May and evacuated to a medical facility, location unknown. Once an individual is evacuated from this command under these circumstances, the command looses contact with the man, until Division.. locates him and notifies the command of his whereabouts or the medical facility sends notification of admittance of the individual. In this case, neither were received by this command. Based upon past experience with medevac cases of this nature, it has been normal for several weeks, and even periods in excess of a month, to have elapsed before a casualty would show up on a hospital admittance report or transfer report. For this reason, it was not considered an unusual time element until approximately 26 August 1968, when additional assistance in locating Gatewood was requested from Division."[3318]

The lifting of the siege at Khe Sanh quite obviously had not meant cessation of conflict! During the period 16 April – 31 May 1968, 178 Marines had been killed, 816 wounded (628 evacuated) and there were 3 USMC MIA, 25 US Army soldiers KIA and 158 WIA (124 evacuated), and 32 US Army soldiers MIA. There were 1297 NVA killed and 15 POWs taken.[3319]

During June, 1968, 2/1 retained the mission of defending KSCB and 2/3 retained the mission of road security for Route 9 until relieved on 20 June by 3/4 when 2/3 departed Khe Sanh to provide perimeter defense at LZ STUD.[3320]

TASK FORCE HOTEL

[The month of May, 1968, ended with NVA forces in the Khe Sanh battlefield as determined as ever. Efforts by the Army's brief operation to clean up the area were nugatory. "..earlier reports of enemy departure were not accurate. While the enemy's earlier main effort against Khe Sanh had been deflected, sightings by reconnaissance teams, aerial observers and other intelligence sources revealed that the enemy was still present in considerable strength in the region immediately south of Khe Sanh. By late April his strength there was estimated as 12 battalions, at least. By late May, two distinct enemy build-ups were taking place."[3321] The two concentrations of NVA forces were: (1) south of Route 9 a few miles east of Khe Sanh, evidently poised to sever the overland route between Khe Sanh and Ca Lu; and (2) a new east-west road near the Laos border at the southern fringe of the SCOTLAND II AO. "Extensive road building activity has been noted in the South Vietnam salient south of Khe Sanh. The enemy has been constructing a road which enters South Vietnam about 20 KM southwest of KSCB, extends eastward to a point 20 KM southeast of the base,

[3315] 1/1 ComdC May68, p. I-II-6; 2/3 ComdC May68; 3rd MarDiv COC 031501Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #184, Para. 3.B.

[3316] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation in Bronze Star Medal file of LCPL Ronnie D. Taylor.

[3317] Statements of LCPL Gary Lee Lafevers and SSGT Darold E. Roberts in Bronze Star Medal file of LCPL Mark E. Vanderheid.

[3318] 1/Lt Stuart A. Dorow ltr 1/SAD/jdh, 5830, 14 Sep 1968, Subj: Report of missing; Case of Lance Corporal Charles H. Gatewood, 2381218/0311, USMC, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm reel #286, Folder #146, and miscellaneous documents in this file.

[3319] 3rd MarDiv COC 031504Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #185, Para. 6.

[3320] 2/3 ComdC June 1968.

[3321] Dalby, Col. M.C., "Taslk Force Hotel's Inland Beachheads," Marine Corps Gazette 53:1 (June, 1968) 36.

and then turns northeast to a point 18 KM southeast of the base. The road supports vehicular traffic to this point. Traces of an old trail extend northward from this point to within 14 KM southeast of Khe Sanh."[3322]

To counter this threat, TF HOTEL on 25 May directed the 1st and 4th Marine Regiments to prepare a concept for a multi-battalion helicopter-borne assault designed to slip in behind the enemy, penetrate his supply routes, and destroy him before he could reassemble and reequip his units. The AO had not been previously penetrated by major combat units, and was the first Marine multi-regiment operation supported entirely by helicopters. The operation consisted of two phases. Phase I involved the construction of advanced Fire Support Bases (FSB) at LZ ROBIN (XD913334) and LZ LOON (XD876334) to provide an umbrella of artillery support for Phase II operations further south. The friendly force consisted of 2 regiments (7 infantry battalions), 2 ½ 105mm batteries and 1 155mm battery.[3323] Phase I was conducted 2 – 14 June 1968 while Phase II was conducted 6 – 18 June.[3324]

The mission: "TF HOTEL conducts operations south of Route #9 in SCOTLAND II AO to seek out, fix and destroy enemy forces, supply/logistics caches and fortified positions."[3325] The AO for Phase I was the area bounded by XD940280 to XD940420 to XD840280 to XD840420. Phase II was anticipated to be an extension of Phase I south and west as determined by enemy situation.[3326] D-Day was set for 1 June 1968. 1st Marines conduct operation with 3 battalions and execute helicopter-borne assault into LZ ROBIN (XD917334) and 4th Marines a helicopter-borne assault into LZ LOON (XD876334).[3327]

TASK FORCE HOTEL, originally TASK FORCE GLICK (named for BG Jacob E. Glick, ADC, 3rd) was assembled in early April, 1968, to manage the closing of KSCB and the retrograde of heavy equipment and supplies from Khe Sanh. On 15 April, upon the conclusion of Operation PEGASUS to open Route 9 to Khe Sanh, the mission of the TF was significantly altered: the TF was now ordered to "conduct search and destroy operations throughout the SCOTLAND II AO to kill enemy, detect and destroy enemy positions, supplies, and equipment, hold certain specdified key terrain, and to secure Route #9 from Ca Lu to Khe Sanh." The TF began by launching operations west and south from Khe Sanh. Contact throughout April, 1968, was heavy with continued incoming artillery, rocket, and mortar attacks. In early May, 1968, due to heavy fighting just across the river from Dong Ha, the 2nd Bde of 1st ACD displaced from the SCOTLAND II AO to that area and the NVA focused on the area south of Route #9. It was estimated that NVA forces consisted of at least 12 battalions of the 304th Division and the 102nd Regiment of the 308th Division. There was also increased evidence of a new enemy road leading from Laos across the far southern extremity of the SOTLAND II AO. As a result, TF HOTEL directed 1st and 4th Marines to prepare for a multi-battalion helicopter-borne assault to penetrate the area behind the enemy, sever his supply routes, and destroy him. The concept called for construction of advanced fire bases from which infantry forces could operate under an umbrella of fire support. This became ROBIN NORTH and ROBIN SOUTH.

Throughout June, 1968, the idea of combining the two AOs, SCOTLAND and LANCASTER (to the immediate east of SCOTLAND) gained credence. The decision was made in mid-June to assign both AOs to TF HOTEL and the area between Thon Son Lam and Ca Lu would become the HQ of the TF. On 19 June 1968, Operation CHARLESTON commenced to relocate the 1st Marines and TF HOTEL's CP from KSCB to LZ STUD. The TF officially displaced to LZ STUD on 30 June, and by 6 July, KSCB had been completely deactivated and destroyed.[3328]]

01 JUNE 1968

HANSON, LCPL Robert	W/1/11
ROWE, PFC Arthur Mortimer	F/2/1

At 011013H, the artillery battalion, 1/11, received 20 rounds of unknown caliber artillery fire at XD843417 and XD840417, killing one Marine[3329] (LCPL Hanson) and damaging 1 155mm gun and 1 105mm howitzer (both requiring evacuation to Dong Ha for repair). 4 Marines were WIA (evacuated).[3330]

[3322] PCV TOC CP HOCHMUTH 280235Z/May68 in III MAF COC Journal and File 28/29 May 1968 #52.

[3323] TF HOTEL History, appended as Tab A to 3rd MarDiv ComdC Jun69; Critique SCOTLAND II Campaign (South of Khe Sanh) 2-19 June 1968, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc. June 1968 file, Encl (115), pp. 3-6; 3rd MarDiv ComdC June 1968, pp. 26-27; FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, June, 1968, pp. 7-9; Dalby, op. cit., p. 36.

[3324] "History of Task Force HOTEL," appended to TF Hotel ComdC June 1969, Tab A.

[3325] CG 3rd MarDiv 291300Z/May68, Concept of Operations, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Jun68 file, Encl (185), Para. 2.

[3326] Ibid., Para. 3.E.(3).

[3327] COC 3rd MarDiv 291225Z/May68, Concept for Search,. Fix, and Kill Operation (Phase I). Intermediate objectives for 1/1: (1) XD917344, (3) XD917363, (5) XD903360, (7) XD960373, and (9) XD892378; Intermediate objectives for 2/4: (2) XD882346, (4) XD899347, (6) XD885360, (8) XD863362, and (10) XD880372.

[3328] Information concerning TASK FORCE HOTEL is from "History Task Force Hotel," Tab A to 3rd MarDiv ComdC, June, 1969.

[3329] FMFPAC 080329Z/Jun68, FMFPAC WESTPAC SITREP #1166.

[3330] 3rd MarDiv COC 031605Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #189, Para 3.B.

"On June the first we got a lot of incoming. One Marine was killed and three were wounded on Gun 6 at Tango Battery (155 towed), 1/11. That night a NVA soldier, fully armed and equipped, walked through the lines on the southwest side. He was not challenged at all. The soldier walked over to Tango Battery, walked into one of the living bunkers and gave himself up to the Marines that were in there. The men in Tango Battery were already jumpy that day so you can imagine the shock that they got. This was one of those dark nights that you couldn't see your hand in front of your face. I understand someone burned over that incident."[3331]

PFC Arthur Rowe died of wounds as a result of fragment wounds to his head while on patrol.[3332]

[On 01 June, BLT 2-4(-) was at LZ Stud. Co G/2/4 had been helilifted to KSCB on 31 May. At 0700H on 02 June, BLT 2/4 (-) was placed under the OPCON of 1st Marines and at 0930H that date was helilifted from LZ Stud (XD003476) to LZ Robin (XD913335).[3333]]

02 JUNE 1968

OLNEY, CPL Steven Ira H&S/2/3

[Following 3 days of extensive preparation of the general target area by some 1,000 tons of bombs delivered by 219 fixed wing attack and 30 B-52 sorties, and by over 10,000 rounds of artillery, the 1st Marines initiated Phase I as 1/1 (LtCol Archie Van Winkle) landed 021200H/Jun68 unopposed on LZ ROBIN (XD911334). 1/1 attacked north, hoping to drive the NVA in the area into the 2/3 blocking positions. Bn 2/4 also landed on ROBIN due to the inability of aircraft to burn off the wet elephant grass on LZ LOON. 2/3 elements formed a blocking position at XD874382.[3334]]

CPL Olney died of wounds as a result of fragment wounds to his body while in a defensive position.[3335]

At 021210H, a patrol from A/1/4 found 1 NVA body, one weapon, and recovered 2 USMC KIA (at XD 809393) that had previously been reported as MIA from M/3/4.[3336]

03 JUNE 1968

QUINONES, CPL Edward E/2/1

Cpl Quinones died of accidental injury (DAI) from a gunshot wound to his head from accidental discharge of a .38 pistol.[3337]

[Bn 1/4 was fed into the ROBIN operation as its CP and Companies "A" and "B" were lifted from Camp Carroll by helicopter into LZ ROBIN this date.[3338] BLT 2/4 landed in LZ LOON (XD876334), but the lift was halted twice due to enemy fire. After dropping the first wave, helicopters received fire from the north. Later, troops in the LZ began to receive small arms fire. Heavy air strikes and artillery were called in to neutralize the area. A warning of what was to come occurred at 1345H when 7 rounds of unknown type artillery fire impacted in the LZ from a westerly origin.[3339] The move was completed at 1623H.[3340]

Maj George F. Warren, S-3 of BLT 2/4, describes the site: "Landing Zone LOON was surrounded on all sides by high terrain. It was not a commanding piece of terrain at all and very difficult to defend.. The battalion, three companies and H&S Company—the 4th company having been CHOPed to 2/1 on the 30th of May—defended Landing Zone LOON and set ourselves in a relatively tight defensive perimeter pretty much on the low ground in the area because the high ground had movement spotted on it and we were not able to get a sufficient prep to take the high ground."[3341]

Cumulative casualty statistics for Operation SCOTLAND II at this point were: 192 USMC KIA, 749 USMC WIAE, 191 USMC WIANE, 25 USA KIA, 123 USA WIAE, 34 USA WIANE, 2 USA MIA, 1366 NVA KIAC, 74 NVA detained, 18 NVA POW.[3342]]

[3331] Letter from Ron Taylor to Editor, Khe Sanh Veteran, undated [printed in the Khe Sanh Veteran, I (Fall, 1992, Issue #25), p. 39.

[3332] HQMC Memo from DN to AO1C, 10 June 1968, Viet Nam Casualties, p. 5, in Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.

[3333] BLT 2/4 ComdC Jun68, Encl (1), p. 6.

[3334] FMFPAC, Operations, June, 1968, op. cit., pp. 7-9; 3rd MarDiv, Critique, op. cit., pp. 3-4; Shulimson, Jack, et al, U.S. Marines in Vietnam, The Defining Year, 1968, History and Museums Division, HQMC, Washington, D.C., 1997, p. 321.

[3335] HQMC Memo from DN to AO1C, 10 June 1968, Viet Nam Casualties, p. 8, in Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.

[3336] FMFPAC 080329Z/Jun68, FMFPAC WESTPAC SITREP #1166. (The MIA from M/3/4 were from the contact on 27 May 1968).

[3337] HQMC Memo from DN to AO1C, 17 June 1968, Viet Nam Casualties, p. 13, in Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.

[3338] 1/4 ComdC June 1968, Part II, p. 3.

[3339] 3rd MarDiv, Critique, op. cit., p. 4; 3rd MarDiv COC 080152Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #197, Para. 3.C.

[3340] BLT 2/4 ComdC Jun68, Encl (1), p. 6.

[3341] Comments of Maj George F. Warren, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.

[3342] 3rd MarDiv COC 080152Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #197, Para. 6. WIAE=Wounded in Action Evacuated; WIANE=Wounded in action not evacuated; KIAC=killed in action confirmed.

BORDUAS, PFC Raymond Arthur	G/2/4
DABREU, PFC Daniel John	F/2/4
DAVIS, PFC Randall Mark	K/3/4
HARRINGTON, PVT John Charles	F/2/4
MOFFETT, CPL James Delton	F/2/4
RYDER, PFC Aldo Eugene	G/2/4

At 040600H, F/2/4 near XD881329 received a probe by an estimated company-size force of NVA supported by mortars. "My 3rd Platoon, which was on the right flank on the finger, was hit by approximately a company or 2 companies and possibly a weapons company. They held off the attack, repulsed it, and were not overrun."[3343] 2 Marines from F/2/4 were killed and 17 wounded (and evacuated).[3344]

At 041500H, K/3/4 (XD778438, Hill 881-South) received one round of incoming 60mm mortar from vicinity of XD776445 resulting in 1 KIA (PFC Davis).[3345]

During the afternoon, a patrol from G-2 of 2/4 became misdirected while returning to Hill 861 (XD803443) and accidentally moved into a friendly minefield at XD806447, 500 meters east of Hill 861, while moving up a hill west of the prescribed patrol route. Golf Six Actual, who had spotted them from his position on the hill, told them to halt. The patrol leader advised the actual that he was trying to find a hole in the wire. As the patrol retraced its path, a mine was detonated killing 2 Marines and wounding 4. While moving the casualties out of the minefield, a second mine was detonated sympathetically detonating a 3rd mine, wounding an additional 8 Marines.[3346]

2/Lt William F. Green, the Platoon Commander of G-1, reflects the care most Marine officers had for their troops. When the first mine explosion wounded several Marines, he immediately organized a rescue party and quickly led them to the edge of the minefield. Then, "rapidly assessing the situation, he ordered his men to remain in position as he began using his bayonet to probe for mines. Completely disregarding his own safety, he.. cleared a path to the beleaguered Marines. Immediately administering first aid to the injured, he directed his rescue party along the cleared path to the wounded and then commenced probing and clearing a path to a landing zone for the medical evacuation of the casualties. Although seriously wounded when a second mine detonated, 2/Lt Green refused medical attention in order to complete the clearing of a path to the landing zone. Only after ensuring that all of the casualties were removed from the mine field and evacuated would he allow himself to be medically evacuated."[3347]

When Capt William P. Negron took C/1/4 to LZ LOON on 04 June 1968 (followed by 1/Lt Michael E. Jackson taking D/1/4 there on 05 June 1968),[3348] two under-strength companies relieving a whole battalion (2/4), he was the only officer in Charlie Company. His Executive Officer, 1/Lt Jackson, had been given command of Delta Company, and there was no Bravo Command Group from the Battalion (which was split with Alfa and Bravo Companies sent to LZ ROBIN).[3349] Battalion 1/4 had suffered the loss of many of its officers; on 22 May, the entire command of Bravo Company were killed or wounded on a mission near Con Thien,[3350] and on 26 April 1968, 2/Lt Donald W. Pratt (Platoon Commander of A-1 of 1/4 along with 4 Marines and 2 Navy Corpsmen were killed while attacking a bunker complex at YD096703.[3351] The 1/4 Battalion Commander, LtCol J. H. Maclean, not receiving replacements while also suffering the loss of other officers by normal rotation, had moved the officers from Delta Company to command Bravo Company and directed the new XO of Charlie Company to command Delta Company. Thus, by 5 June, when SMITTY CHARLIE and SMITTY DELTA along with 2 squads of 81mm mortars from H&S Company moved to occupy LZ LOON, both companies were under-strength, lacking normal officers and platoon leader ranks. In addition, a battalion of NVA was poised to attack the position. When 2/4 departed, the position was too large for the arriving, much smaller Marine force, and the distance between foxholes on the perimeter was at least twice what it should be.[3352] The position had fighting holes, but it had no trenches.[3353]

Capt Negron "..was told that we were going to set up a Fire Support Base and that a battery of 105s was going to come in and we were supposed to hold the ground and prepare the ground to bring in the 105 artillery to cover the rest of the operation... They flew in a team of engineers and a backhoe. As soon as the action started, they were evacuated.. and left the backhoe. I was told to protect it at all costs. I took 2 blocks of C-4, put it on the motor and blew it up. I wasn't going to sacrifice my Marines for a backhoe!"[3354]

The arrival of C/1/4 was not without warning of what would follow. During the heli-lift into LOON, a

---

[3343] Comments of Capt James H. Butler, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921. Capt Butler was CO, F/2/4.
[3344] 3rd MarDiv COC 080155Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #200, Para. 3.B.; 2/4 ComdC Jun68, pp. 6-7.
[3345] 3rd MarDiv COC 090515Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #201, Para. 3.I.
[3346] 3rd MarDiv COC 090516Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #202, Para. 4.A.; 2/1 ComdC June 1968, Part III.
[3347] Bronze Star Medal Citation, 2/Lt William F. Green.
[3348] 1/4 ComdC June 1968, Part II, p. 3.
[3349] Conversation with William Negron, 03 December 2003.
[3350] Anonymous, LZ LOON.
[3351] S-3 Journal entry of 1130H, 26 Apr 1968, 1/4.
[3352] LZ LOON, op. cit.
[3353] Conversation with David Bobbitt, 11 August 1997. Bobbit was a LCPL with Co D/1/4.
[3354] Conversation with William Negron, 03 December 2003.

considerable amount of incoming rounds (which, although not actually hitting the zone hit close enough to make it very difficult for helicopter pilots to maneuver) forced a helicopter to land on the very steep reverse slope of the hill. "As the people got off the back of the CH-46 they fell all the way to the bottom of the hill and landed right in the impact zone of the artillery, thereby 2 being killed and about 11 being seriously wounded. The helicopter lift was stopped after this incident and no more helicopters attempted to come in that night."[3355] "We were receiving artillery fire from Co Roc, Laos. They didn't have us pinpointed; they were kinda shooting over the top of us."[3356]

05 JUNE 1968

BARBOUR, PFC James Wesley	C/1/4
CARBAUGH, SGT Woodrow Franklin	C/1/4
CARSON, 1/Lt John Harvey	D/1/4[3357]
CLEAVE, PFC Lonnie Leonard	C/1/1
EATON, PFC Clifford Lyman	C/1/4
FESER, LCPL Jeffrey Evan	C/1/1
GARCIA-GIGUREOA, LCPL Juan F	C/1/4
KING, PFC George Louis Jr.	C/1/4
KLEIN, CPL Joseph	C/1/4
MC MANUS, LCPL Truman Joseph	D/1/4
MORRISSEY, CPL Thomas J Jr.	C/1/4
NOEL, CPL Joseph Paul	D/1/4
ORTIZ, PVT Eliezer	D/1/4
RUBY, PFC Blane Markwood	C/1/1
SIMON, LCPL Michael Wayne	C/1/1
UUTELA, PFC Derris Lee	D/1/4
WALKER, PFC Thomas Edward	D/1/4

On 05 June 1968, the remainder of the second company of 1/4 , Co. D/1/4 landed on LZ LOON this date[3358] completing its movement from LZ EAGLE to LZ LOON at 1100H.[3359] BLT 2/4 (-) moved by helicopter from LZ LOON to LZ CROW (XD898348), completing its move at 1330H.[3360] By this time, the NVA gunners on Co Roc could fire with precision on LZ LOON. "They were really pinpointing us and we lost probably 8 or 9 KIAs."[3361] The NVA were determined that the Marines not occupy LZ LOON! From 051700H to 051730, C/1/4 (XD 882333) received 18 rounds of 130mm field gun artillery from the vicinity of Co Roc resulting in 9 USMC KIA and 3 WIA (evacuated).[3362] At 051755H, C/1/1 at XD899360, while assaulting Objective #5 (XD900360) made contact with an estimated NVA platoon (reinforced) firing from treetops and fighting holes. The enemy was engaged with and then the Marines pulled back to permit air strikes and artillery to hit the area. Three flights of fixed wing from MAG-12 and MAG-13 and the USAF dropped 7 750-pound bombs, 20 500-pound bombs, 4,000 pounds of napalm and 8 2.75-inch rockets. 5 Marines were (officially) killed in the skirmish along with 15 WIA and 12 NVA KIA (confirmed).[3363]

Second Platoon, C/1/4, took the brunt of the artillery barrage. In a half hour period, 7 Marines of the platoon were killed with numerous others wounded. "During the worst of the incoming fire, PFC King left the safety of his fighting hole and ran to the other positions in order to aid his wounded comrades or to assist in removing the casualties to safer ground. Later, when helicopters were summoned to evacuate the casualties, PFC King went to the landing zone to help the wounded. The enemy then shifted their fire onto the landing zone, but PFC King remained there until all the wounded had been evacuated. He then proceeded to carry up the bodies of the dead. It was at this time that PFC King was killed by an incoming artillery round."[3364]

Meanwhile at about 0230, at the position that D/1/4 occupied (some 150 meters away from C/1/4), LCPL David Bobbitt heard sounds of digging. "We thought it was Charlie Company trying to dig in. So we called back and forth. Charlie Company said it wasn't them. They wanted to know if we were digging. No, we weren't digging. So everybody was a hundred percent [alert] to maybe 4, 4:30 when they told us to go to 50%. About 0530, the break of daylight, it was like dark and it was daylight, like a mist, and all of a sudden all hell broke loose. They walked in on us, and they were shooting our guys that were asleep and didn't have a chance. It was just a slaughter. I didn't want to fire because I was afraid I was going to hit our own men. We fought from 5:30 in the morning and we were still going at it at 7:30 at night—all day."[3365]

SMITTY CHARLIE ONE FOUR [the Air Officer for C/1/4] reported that SMITTY CHARLIE and SMITTY DELTA [C/1/4 and D/1/4] were taking heavy casualties from the incoming artillery. Capt Thomas L. Sebring observed from the air that the NVA artillery position was XD680283 and requested soft ordnance to be scrambled. The position was located in a high AAA [ae-

---

[3355] Comments of Maj George F. Warren, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921. Maj. Warren was S-3, BLT 2/4.
[3356] Conversation with Terry Tillery, 05 May 1994.
[3357] The Coffelt database of the Vietnam Memorial listing indicates his unit as E/2/9, but he was with D/1/4.
[3358] 1/4 ComdC June 1968, Part II, p. 3.
[3359] 3rd MarDiv COC 090518Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #204, Para. 4.B.
[3360] BLT 2/4 ComdC June 1968, Encl (1), p. 7.
[3361] Conversation with Terry Tillery, 05 May 1994.
[3362] 3rd MarDiv COC 090615Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #205, Para. 3.Q.
[3363] 3rd MarDiv COC 090632Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #206, Para. 3.B.
[3364] Statement of 1/Lt Stick, NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 3 July 1968, in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file, PFC George Louis King.
[3365] Conversation with David Bobbitt, 11 August 1997.

rial anti-aircraft] threat area and low ceilings and thunderstorms precluded use of high dive ordnance. Maj James Edward Lary, Section Leader of HELLBORN 553 (2 A-4 Skyhawks from Marine Attack Squadron 311, VMA-311) dropped 2 DELTA-9s [Mark 77 500-pound napalm bombs] on the first pass, placing their ordnance exactly on target. NVA 37mm anti-aircraft fired on them, but despite the fire, they made an additional pass placing 6 DELTA-2 bombs [MK-82, 500-pound general purpose bombs] on the target causing two large secondary explosions.[3366]

Maj James Louis Bolton, Section Leader of 2 CH-46 Sea Knights, brought in emergency re-supply and medevac support for SMITTY CHARLIE and SMITTY DELTA. Although Huey gunships and fixed wing aircraft could not suppress the intensive fire the zone was receiving, Maj Bolton led his section four times into LZ LOON successfully dropping all the loads.[3367]

CPL William H. Milner, Jr., aerial gunner in YR-47 (of Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 161, HMM-161) loaded emergency medevacs through the side door since the LZ was not suitable, was able to stop the bleeding of several of the wounded Marines. The aircraft had not been rigged for medevac work.[3368]

The whole "..day was just a total chaos of assault after assault. They just kept coming up the hill at us, and pinned us all down right there during broad daylight."[3369] During the attack, CPL Eugene Herman Veisz, the Forward Air Controller, continuously exposed himself to small arms, artillery, and mortar fire as he moved about to call in air as well as assist the artillery officer in striking NVA targets. Rather than expose his radioman to danger, he shouldered the radio himself.[3370]

General Davis (CG, 3rd Marine Division) radioed Capt Negron directly and asked what he needed. "Do you need reinforcements?" "I told him, 'No, I'm in the V-ring. Any Marines you put up here are going to die.' I took all the compasses in the company and issued one to every 3 men. I was going to escape and evade off LOON, because we all were going to die. I told General Davis that. He said, 'Hold what you got; we're getting you out.' And every airplane and every helicopter in I Corps showed up and they boxed me in with artillery, and then I called a mission in on myself—after we got in our holes, and fortunately we came out on the better end of that... I turned off my radio so I couldn't hear the Battalion Commander and I took my troops. I said, 'Grab your rifles and your ammo; we're going to the high ground. It was about two o'clock in the morning."[3371]

06 JUNE 1968

BRAZIER, SSGT John Kenneth	C/1/4
BROWN, PVT Joseph "L" Jr.	I/3/4
BURGARD, PFC Paul Edward	C/1/4
BURKES, PFC Bruce Wayne	C/1/1
CASARES, PFC Manuel	D/1/4
EBRIGHT, CPL William Raymond O	H&S/1/4
ENIX, LCPL Jack Gene	D/1/4
FLORES, LCPL Felix Frank	H&S/1/4
FRANKENSTEIN, LCPL Jackie	D/1/4
FRAZIER, LCPL Timothy Joseph Jr.	D/1/4
GREGORY, LCPL Frank Edwin	D/1/4
HANNINGS, LCPL William Elwood	H&S/1/4
HARPER, LCPL Ralph Lewis	H&S/1/4
HOWARD, HN James Byron	H&S/1/4[3372]
LANGSTON, PFC Melvin Doyle	C/1/4
LA PLANT, LCPL Kurt Elton	H&S/1/4
MILLARD, HM3 Loren Ray	H&S/1/4
MORELOS, PFC Catarino Jr.	H&S/1/4
PALACIOS, LCPL Luis Fernando	H&S/1/4
PARKER, LCPL William Hill	D/1/4
PORTER, LCPL Lawrence Eugene	H&S/1/4
REED, PFC Larry Bruce	D/1/4
REID, PFC James Alfred	D/1/4
ROBERTS, LCPL Gary Kenneth	D/1/4
SANCHEZ, PFC Jose Ramon	H&S/1/4
SATTER, PFC Donald Stephen	C/1/4
SIMMONS, PFC William	G/2/4
SMITH, LCPL Donald Lee	D/1/4
STOOPS, PFC Jonathan Lynn	H&S/1/4
WILSON, PFC Eugene	C/1/4

At about 0200, Capt Negron moved SMITTY CHARLIE to join with SMITTY DELTA on the higher

---

[3366] Statement of Capt Thomas L. Sebring in Air Medal file of Maj James Edward Lary.

[3367] Statement of 1/Lt Frederick A. Penning in Distinguished Flying Cross file for Maj James Louis Bolton.

[3368] Statement of 1/Lt Frederick A. Penning in Air Medal file of CPL William Hayes Milner, Jr. Others recommended for awards for valor for the same incident: CAPT Richard C. Glover, 1/Lt Brent C. Blair, 1/Lt Frederick A. Penning, CPL Bernard J. Soignet, CPL James C. Withrow, LCPL Paul B. Bevil, LCPL Jeffrey D. Cross, and Donald W. Vaughn. [NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 10 Jul 1968, in DFC file of Maj James Louis Bolton].

[3369] Conversation with Terry Tillery, 05 May 1994.

[3370] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 17 Sep 1968, for Silver Star Medal for CPL Eugene Herman Veisz. Endorsements by the CO of 1/4 (LtCol T. M. Galbraith) and MGen R. G. Davis (CG, 3rd MarDiv) concurred in the Silver Star Medal recommendation, but FMFPAC authorized the Bronze Star Medal.

[3371] Conversation with William P. Negron, 03 December 2003.

[3372] HN Howard, one of the C/1/4 corpsmen, was mortally wounded while treating a wounded comrade in the open. The official paperwork on his Bronze Star Medal notes his name as Dennis William Howard of Bakersfield, CA. There is no such person on the Vietnam Memorial in D.C. There is, however, a HN James Byron Howard of Bakersfield, CA, KIA 6 June 1968.

ground, a distance of about 150 meters up hill through elephant grass, and the two units of Marines defended the hill.[3373] "We took what was left of Charlie Company into us [D/1/4] and when I looked, it was 'dead carrying dead.'"[3374] After dawn, Captain Negron "sent a squad with Staff Sergeant [Brazier] to blow up artillery rounds that had been brought the night before by the artillery people. There were rounds all over the place that I didn't want to get into the hands of the NVA. SSGT Brazier considered himself a demolitions expert, although he was just good at handling dynamite; he wasn't an expert. I gave him an under-strength squad to blow up the ammunition. When they walked down they were ambushed by the NVA. We opened up from the top of the hill to support them, and they all died. In order to prevent the NVA from getting the ammo, I used 60mm mortars and blew it up."[3375]

HN Dennis William Howard [James Byron Howard] was killed while treating a wounded Marine in the open.[3376] LCPL Michael Joseph Kilderry was hit in his side with a small piece of shrapnel that damaged both of his lungs and his liver and some organs. His friend, Terry Tillery, recalls him as a "real nice fellow. He was my best friend."[3377] Kilderry died of his wounds on 6 July 1968.

Prior to the last extraction of C/1/4 at about 1400H, at 0945 a helicopter (SEAWORTHY 4-5) crashed and burned as a result of heavy enemy .50 caliber fire at XD877334,[3378] in such a position that it could not be reached at that time by friendly forces and the remaining forces of C and D companies were extracted later that afternoon.[3379] The helicopter that was downed contained the 81mm mortar section. "It was a sad thing to watch because we were surrounded and the other hill was surrounded, and we really couldn't go down to their aid."[3380] The Marines of C/1/4 sang the Marine Corps Anthem at the top of their lungs to orient any possible survivors of the crash to friendly lines.[3381] Four Marines did manage to escape and crawl to the safety, one of which was Sal St. Angelo.[3382] "He was left down there without a weapon, without anything. I just talked with him at our reunion this summer. He said, 'I thought I was going to die. I didn't have a weapon. I started holding my breath to see if I would pass out and die. I looked around to kill myself. I didn't want to become a POW.' At this point, a helicopter landed, picked him up and got him out of there."[3383]

Although the attack was repulsed, it was decided that the FSB was too lucrative a target for the enemy and was abandoned that afternoon. Results of the attack were 24 USMC KIA, 37 USMC WIAE, and 154 NVA KIAC. The following day, a new FSB (FSB TORCH) was established 12 kilometers southeast of Khe Sanh.[3384] "We started out on the 4th with 168 men in Charlie Company and when we regrouped we had 62 people left. We were only the size of a platoon—the whole company."[3385]

On 17 June 1968, 3/9 was assigned the mission of recovering the bodies from the crashed helicopter, along with C/1/4. The unit landed at LZ LOON at 170900H with C/1/4 landing first, followed by Co L, M. and I and the CP group of 3/9, following extensive TPQ-10 and arty prep. Co C/1/4 secured the LZ and moved to the location of the downed helicopter. Only a few charred remains could be extracted. "The extreme heat of the helicopter fire destroyed almost all evidence of human remains. All pieces of bodies were extracted, tagged, and placed in body bags. Eight other bodies which had been ready for evac during the height of fighting on 6 June were recovered and a thorough search was made of the objective area by all units. Total recovered were 8 complete bodies and 3 body bags filled with partial remains....CG, 1st Air Cav Division sent LtCol Henry to LZ LOON to check his bulldozer and backhoe. We evacuated both these items via U.S. Army crane [CH-54]. He decided to leave the dozer's blade at LZ LOON due to extensive damage."[3386]

[Despite the debacle at LZ LOON, Operation ROBIN SOUTH was launched on schedule on 6 June 1968 with Bn 3/9 landing to the south to locate the new NVA road leading from Laos to Hue. "The battalion located the road and found it to be quite well developed, up to 15 feet wide in places, with stone bridges, culverts, and a surface graded smooth by heavy engineering equipment. The North Vietnamese had concealed the road by bending trees over it and tying them together to form a living archway of vegetation beneath which troops and vehicles could pass unseen from the air. Along the road,

[3373] Conversation with William P. Negron, 03 December 2003.
[3374] Conversation with David Bobbitt, 11 August 1997.
[3375] Ibid.
[3376] Bronze Star Medal Citation and NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 19 June 1968, for HN Dennis William Howard.
[3377] Conversation with Terry Tillery, 5 May 1994.
[3378] Library of Congress, MIA microfilm, Reel #287, Folder #149 [Harper, Ralph L.], Biographic Site Report as of 02/19/88. Also Folders #151 [Sanchez, Jose] and #152 [Palacios, Luis] in came reel; NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 25 June 1968, in Distinguished Flying Cross file of Maj Harvey Elmore Britt.
[3379] 1/4 ComdC June, 1968,l Part II, p. 3.
[3380] Conversation with Terry Tillery, 22 May 1994.
[3381] LZ LOON, op. cit.
[3382] Conversations with Terry Tillery, 5 and 22 May 1994.
[3383] Conversation with William P. Negron, 03 December 2003.
[3384] 3rd MarDiv ComdC June 1968, pp. 26-27.
[3385] Conversation with Terry Tillery, 05 May 1994.
[3386] CG Task Force HOTEL 200920Z/Jun68, Summary of Recovery Operations at LZ LOON 17 June, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc June 1968 file, Encl #122.

the Marines found fighting holes, living bunkers, hospitals, kitchens, and a wealth of equipment, especially tools. Captain Gary E. Todd, who commanded Company I, 3/9 and a former division intelligence officer, observed that the road 'was a virtual clone of the Ho Chi Minh Trail.'[3387] An attached detachment of engineers used approximately 2,000 lbs. of demolitions to blow large craters in the road, using 50-lb. cratering and 40-lb. shape charges. Numerous bunker complexes were found, probably for housing the NVA constructing the road. There were no friendly casualties, no incoming. There were 2 NBC due to wasp stings: one man was bit on his lip, the other in his eye swelling shut his eyelids.[3388]]

REMEMBERING: THE 'COCKY KIDS IN GREEN'[3389]
By William P. Negron

I live among the remains of young dead men, their broken bodies twisting into the shape of where and how they die. Some curled up, some bent around the initial wound, others flat. They die in the open, often reaching for some reason, arms outstretched. They come in all sizes and colors. One has his first mustache, another too young to shave, a third can never grow a bears—he is a Navajo.

They have verses on their steel pots: Mo-Town, Tex Mex, La Rasa, Born to Raise Hell, Peace, Love, War, Hate. Some believe in this war; some don't. A freckle-faced young Marine asks me, 'Why?' Then he dies. That was then; this is now.

Why won't these images fade? I can't remember the face of someone I met at a party last week, but I can't forget the faces of over 30 years ago. Only Jack found me and remembers. Where are all the others? Living well and happy, I hope. Camacho wrote for a while, then he too disappeared. Where is Terry? Where is Tim? Brownie was a good Marine. What happened to him? I'm still 'Charlie Six Actual' and always will be.

I received a letter from Puerto Rico. It was one of the few responses to 32 condolence letters. This young man's dad said he was proud of me and proud of his son. A mother in St. Louis wrote and said she wasn't allowed to open the box, but she was sure that her boy wasn't in it. Well, mom, someone's son was in that box. I hope you treated him well.

I'm over sixty now, but age hasn't dimmed the memory of those young men who believed that being a Marine was the fulfillment of a dream. Well the dream turned into a nightmare and to some the nightmare turned into death. Maybe they were the lucky ones. They don't have to live with the memory of unfulfilled dreams and broken relationships. They don't have to stare into the bottom of a glass and wonder what happened. They don't have to serve time, or disgrace their families with their acts of violence. They don't come to alert mode when a helicopter or a loud noise of a whisper disturbs their sleep. They are gone and I loved them all.

Some nights they call to me. Is it the dead or is it those who are still alive who call me? Someday maybe I'll know. I still see the demons, but only at night now. A whisper hovers above my bed until I shout it away. A banshee walks in the yard. A crow sits on the fence and watches. Something is always behind me. I don't usually turn around, but when I do it is gone.

Who picks who will live and die?

At a memorial service, the Chaplain said that God had chosen these soldiers to join him in heaven. That God had made the decision of life and death. I didn't believe it then, and I don't believe it now. Those deaths came as a result of trying to occupy the same space as a fragment of metal, a bullet, a bomb. What about those who died of fright? What about the young Marine who died from a wasp bite? We had tested him for everything, but who knew to test him for an allergy to wasp? What about the young Marine who drowned in a monsoon stream? We taught him how to swim, but neglected to show him how to stay above water with 50 pounds of combat gear strapped to his back. Whose fault is it when young men die? I was so afraid.

They gave me a medal, and then another, and another. They said I was a hero, but I did what I had to do. I did what I was trained to do. That company was my heart, my soul. There were many battles and many challenges after Viet Nam. Those many months in the heat of Southeast Asia, in the cold chilling monsoon rains, in the grief of losses and the joy of [3387] Shulimson, op. cit., pp. 322-323.

[3388] Comments of Capt Richard A. O'Neill, GySgt Jose M. Padilla, and SSGT W. B. Brown, HQMC Oral History Tape #3084.
[3389] LtCol William Negron, USMC (Ret), written 30 May 1999.

camaraderie, despite all else, I was 'Charlie Six,' the man.

In my heart I'll always be 'CHARLIE SIX ACTUAL' and don't you forget it.

I would give up the time that I have left on this Earth if I could bring everyone back from the dead, out of prisons, out of the detoxification wards, out of corporate offices, out of the classrooms, out of the hospitals and we could be 'Charlie Company' again. I'd give anything I have for just one more day, one more mission, one more chance to walk with and lead those magnificent young men the Corps called 'Charlie One Four, Third Marine Division.'

And may God bless them all.

On 6 June a company (-) patrol by I/3/4 to the vicinity of XD820390 departed KSCB at 1102. The patrol found NVA ammunition and equipment at XD818393. There were no other findings, and the patrol returned to KSCB at 1535. From 1835 to 1920, Co "I" received 42 rounds of 82mm mortars from XD79193926 resulting in 1 KIA (PVT Joseph "L" Brown, Jr.) and 5 WIA.[3390]

07 JUNE 1968

CORCORAN, CAPT Richard Francis	HqCo, 3rdMarDiv
HARTNESS, LCPL Donald Harry	M/3/9
HUNT, 1/Lt Ralphe Edward Jr.	VMO-6
KURILICH, MAJ Robert Vaso	H&S/1/1
LEAHY, PFC Robert Michael	3/9

[On 07 June 1968, 1/4 executed a helicopter-borne assault into LZ TORCH (XD911278), a new fire base to support infantry battalions scouring the southernmost portion of the AO to interdict the new NVA road leading from Laos.[3391]]

Battalion 1/1 was occupying the hill positions at Khe Sanh, and their Operations Officer, Maj Kurilich, unfamiliar with the terrain, ordered a helicopter for an overflight. Maj Gerald Kurth (S-3, 2/26) knew Maj Kurilich and states that a NVA automatic weapon shot down the helicopter. Maj Kurth also relates that a LtCol aboard fell out of the crashing helicopter and broke his back. "While he was in the hospital, his hair turned totally white." The initial message reporting the death of Kurilich was garbled, with only "KUR" legible, making some assume that Maj Gerald F. Kurth, S-3 of 2/26, which had occupied Hill 558 during the siege battle and had a Company (E/2/26) on Hill 861-A, had been killed.[3392]

The incident happened at 0842H at XD909365 (3200 meters S of Rt. #9, S of Lang Kat) and the LtCol was M. J. Gravel, the Battalion Commander of 1/1. Colonel Gravel was injured, retrieved, and medevaced at 0930. At noon, Maj R. L. Walsh, the Battalion XO, and Capt T. V. Barrett, newly appointed S-3, were flown to the battalion CP, assumed control, and continued the attack to seize Regimental Objectives 4 (XD898348) and 5 (XD900359).[3393]

A SPARROWHAWK unit, F-2 of 2/1, was dispatched to the downed Huey helicopter "which apparently struck the top of a ridge and crashed in the vicinity of XD909365. The Sparrow Hawk was lifted into the crash area and proceeded to the site of the wreckage. Three bodies, burned beyond recognition, were found in the wreckage, which was completely consumed by fire... Returned to Khe Sanh Combat Base with the remains."[3394]

Captain Corcoran had been severely wounded in a previous tour of duty in Vietnam while serving as Company Commander of A/1/4 (11 Oct 66 – 11 Jun 67). After being wounded on 23 April and 27 April 1967 in Gio Linh, he received multiple shrapnel wounds to his lower back on 13 May 1967, requiring major surgery. After an intensive 8-week training course in aerial observation, he returned to Vietnam for a second tour on 28 December 1967.[3395]

RICHARD FRANCIS CORCORAN[3396]
By
CPL Gerry Van Reusen, USMC

I'll always remember Capt. 'Skipper' Corcoran as long as I live and be indebted to him for who he was. He was respected as a man and a great officer by his entire company of men and anyone who met him—he is the epitome of a 'Marine's Marine.'

I first met Skipper at the end of 1966. I was a 'hard-charging' 19 year-old Corporal who served as the forward observer for the 81mm mortars attached to 'Alpha' Company commanded by Capt. Corcoran. He met me with a great smile and enthusiastic handshake to welcome me to 'Alpha'

3390 3/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-6.
3391 FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, June, 1968, pp. 10-11.
3392 Conversation with Gerald F. Kurth, 7 December 1999.
3393 1/1 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-5; 1st Mar ComdC, June, 1968, Enclosure (1), p. 1-III-1
3394 2/1 ComdC June, 1968, Part III.
3395 Information from Service Record Book, Richard Francis Corcoran
3396 Gerry Van Reusen, Tribute for the New Jersey Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, 28 September 2001. Sent by Richard Delotto, 6 July 2004.

Company—the best-trained outfit in the Corps! He had such a tremendous appreciation and faith in his troops. As I was to find out much later, he led his men by example...

It's known throughout the Marine Corps that the most dangerous thing in combat is a brand new 2nd Lieutenant, a 'by-the-book' officer who has a know-it-allo attitude. They rarely listened to the advice of their underlings, even combat-experienced ones. Capt. Corcoran was NOT like that. He relied on the trained knowledge and experiences of his Non Coms (privates to sergeants). He listened to the advice, formulated a correct decision and gave the orders. I never had an officer trust me, a lowly corporal, the way he did...

...

I wouldn't be alive today if it wasn't for Capt. Corcoran... It was May 19th, 1967... We were at Con Thien..and I was with Alpha Company when they stormed our wire at 3:30am... Capt. Corcoran could have stayed in his bunker & foxhole that night, but true to form, he traversed his company's perimeter foxholes encouraging his men, directing fire and making sure they were all right. Skipper had 'brass ones' (if you know what I mean!)...

When the enemy breached our lines, it left a big hole in our perimeter.. [and] I joined other Marines who were waiting to enter two Am Tracks to take us over to the breeched area... 'Where are you going, Van?' asked the voice. 'Is that you, Skipper? I was going to help fill the hole in the perimeter,' I answered. 'I need you here with me,' replied Capt Corcoran... Both Am Tracks took off and about 100 yards away, they were both hit... Everybody was killed... If he didn't come at that precise time, I wouldn't be alive today... I always wanted to thank Capt. Corcoran for his timely intervention, divine or otherwise. He was wounded and they medevaced him out before I could talk to him... I never got to express my appreciation for him. [I located his family to let them know that] Richard was a true HERO. All his men, including me, loved him and would have followed him to the ends of the earth... Without him, many men including myself wouldn't have lived through the Vietnam experience. He'll always be in my thoughts, and even after 35 years, I still can see him in my mind with his warm, infectious smile and pleasant voice. He was a tough and disciplined officer but commanded in a gentle, authoritarian way. He commanded, and earned everyone's RESPECT... He is truly what the Marine Corps is all about – Semper Fidelis ('Always faithful')."

At 2030H, 3/9 at XD943283 received small arms fire in the perimeter resulting in 1 KIA[3397] (PFC Robert Michael Leahy).

[After 1/1 concluded its operation, Co A/1/1 returned to its defensive position on Hill 861 (XD803443), Co B/1/1 took defensive positions on Hill 881-South (XD777438), and Co C/1/1 took positions on Hill 558 (XD821449) where the 1/1 CP was located. Co D/1/1 took positions on Hill 689 (XD802409), and a 50-man detachment from H&S Co., 1/1, manned Hill 950 (XD844455).[3398]]

09 JUNE 1968

ALLEN, CPL Terry Lee	H/2/4
BAKER, LCPL Donald	F/2/1
BARRINGER, PVT Ardrey Watts Jr.	F/2/4
BELL, PFC Ronald Eugene	H&S/2/4
BURDICK, PFC William F Jr.	C/1/4
CAHILL, HM1 Edwin Lewis	F/2/1
CHEARNLEY, PFC Joseph Michael	H/2/4
EVANS, SGT Clifford Melvin	B/3rd Tk
FORD, LCPL Clifford Eugene	1st MT
HOUSTON, LCPL Marvin Lynn	F/2/1
IANIERI, LCPL Richard Joseph	F/2/4
KIDD, PFC Melton Lavone	F/2/1
LITTLE, CPL Donnie Hugh	A/1/1
LOWE, PFC Barry	F/2/1
MARTIN, PFC Harry Pemberton	H&S/2/4
MIZNER, PFC Darrell Condie	F/2/1
NASH, SGT David Eugene	F/2/1
PATTERSON, PFC William Anthony	F/2/1
POLK, LCPL Robert Louis	F/2/1
ROMANO, PFC August	F/2/1
VOORHIES, CPL Emory David	H&S/2/4
WENGER, PFC David Allen	H/2/4
WOOLSEY, LCPL Jack Lee	H/2/4

By 1125H on 08 June 1968, BLT 2/4 had completed a move by helicopter to Objective #8 (XD864360) following prep by air and artillery. At 1230H, they took 16 rounds from a NVA direct fire weapon that resulted in 15 Marines wounded (and evacuated), and throughout the remainder of the day continued to receive incoming from [3397] 3/9 ComdC June 1968, S-3 Journal, 07 June 1968, Ser #9.

[3398] 1/1 ComdC June 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-3.

the same weapon.[3399] 2/4 moved there with 3 companies (G/2/4 was not with them at the time) and a command group; the Bn Headquarters and 81s occupied 2 hills adjacent to the hill H/2/4 occupied. Hotel Company was set in on the higher of the hills with Echo Company on its right flank and Fox Company on its left.[3400] The position was a jumping-off point towards the last objective of the operation, and small patrols were dispatched to recon the area.[3401] H-2 (led by 2/Lt John T. Williamson) patrolled to the north and northwest toward Huong Hoa Village, finding extensive NVA fighting holes and spider holes which appeared recently used. After about 5 hours of patrolling, Lt Williamson reported to his Company Commander, Capt Thompson, his conclusion that the NVA were still in the area and in heavy numbers. "That time I took my platoon down and told them I had been in this area. I'd been stationed at Khe Sanh during the Siege, and I was very nervous about it. I said I wanted them to dig their holes deeper and be especially alert during the night. We had our company briefing with Captain Thompson, the 3rd Platoon leader, Gunnery Sergeant Hooper, and the 1st Platoon leader, Lt Isabel were there."[3402] H/2/4 was set on the long finger of a fairly steep hill with H-1 on the left side of the finger tying in with F/2/4, H-2 in the middle, and H-3 on the right side tying in with H&S Co which eventually tied in with E/2/4.[3403]

The night of 08/09 June was cloudy with good illumination early in the night, but the moon set about 0100 and about that time it began to rain. "At one time there were quite high winds and a good amount of rain."[3404] The long finger seemed to be a likely avenue of approach, and Lt Williamson placed a machinegun to cover the point. Some of the 5 to 6-ft. grass was cleared to give a field of fire.[3405]

At 0255 on the morning of 09 June 1968, F-2's position on the point, near where they linked up with H-1, reported movement on the finger. "It was still raining and the wind was really blowing around so that it was hard to discern actual movement, but I was pretty sure also that we heard it so I called a M-79 man over [who].. proceeded to fire M79s down the point. The M-79 must have stirred them up because we definitely heard more movement down there... I believe at this time we triggered their attack a little prematurely because we started getting rifle grenades back in return, but not noticeable small arms right away. The rifle grenades were quite accurate and one of them hit right next to myself and my M-79 man, wounding us, neither one very seriously... At this time I realized it was more than just a probe."[3406] 2/4 was attacked by an estimated company-size force with another estimated company-size unit in one of the draws who had not yet commenced the attack. "It would seem to me that the attack was designed to draw our attention to one side while.. they were going to try to come in with a larger force."[3407] A round exploded right into the H/2/4 company CP (about 40 meters up the hill from Lt Williamson's H-2 Platoon CP) wounding the Company Commander. When Lt. Williamson arrived at the company CP, "they were pulling Captain Thompson out of the hole and it looked like just a mass of bodies in the bottom of it. We eventually found out that they had taken a direct hit from a rifle grenade... Captain Thompson seemed to be in shock. He couldn't see.. and they immediately carried him off."[3408] Lt Williamson, the H-2 Commander, took over command of the company and Sgt Hooper (Platoon Commander of H-3) put Sgt Gary G. Miller, Platoon Right guide for H-3, was put in charge of what was left of H-2. When Sgt. Miller arrived at H-2, he found that in about every hole there were 2 or 3 wounded; only about a dozen men remained in fighting condition. A squad from F/2/4 was brought over to augment him.[3409] F-2's M60 machinegun position was overrun[3410] The 106mm RR was put in the day before, apparently visible to the NVA soldiers "because they knew exactly where to come. 2 men penetrated the lines [and] got to the 106 position and tried to damage [it]. Actually they were not able to put their satchel charges on it and damage the 106.. However, small arms fire and rifle grenade fire did damage the 106 sufficiently enough to have it evacuated."[3411] Lt Williamson's Platoon Sergeant had been killed, his second squad leader was shot though the arm, and his radioman wounded.[3412]

The ONE FOUR, Capt Moore, brought flareships on station and the Artillery FO, Lt Carpenter, worked artillery throughout the night.[3413] "It is believed that the

---

[3399] ComdC 2/4, June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 7. Maj. George F. Warren, S-3 of BLT 2/4, notes that 35 rounds were received and 29 WIA (medevaced) were sustained. [HQMC Oral History Tape #2921. Interview conducted 13 June 1968].
[3400] Comments of 2/Lt John T. Williamson, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.
[3401] Comments of Maj George F. Warren, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.
[3402] Comments of 2/Lt John T. Williamson, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.
[3403] Ibid.
[3404] Ibid.
[3405] Ibid.
[3406] Ibid.
[3407] Comments of Maj George F. Warren, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921..
[3408] Comments of 2/Lt John T. Williamson, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.
[3409] Comments of Sgt Gary G. Miller, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.
[3410] Comments of Cpl James A. Summey, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.
[3411] Comments of Maj George F. Warren, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.
[3412] Comments of 2/Lt John T. Williamson, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.
[3413] Ibid.

artillery night defensive fires prevented the enemy from massing and thus broke up the attack."[3414] Medevac helicopters came in before dawn, guided by a strobe light and started evacuating casualties in the dark.[3415]

The attack resulted in 7 KIA and 41 WIA (evacuated).[3416]

A 1st Marines convoy with F/2/1 providing security was taken under fire in the vicinity of XD924404 and XD926404 by an unknown size NVA unit who fired intense small arms and then threw satchel charges, grenades and fired B-40 rockets from both sides of Route 9. One platoon was deployed to the high ground on the left side of the road and swept through the area encountering light contact. The convoy returned to KSCB. The contact resulted in 8 KIA, 9 WIA, and 11 NVA KIA.[3417]

10 JUNE 1968

SMITH, LCPL Jimmy Herman H&S/2/1

On 10 June, a patrol from Co F/2/3 thoroughly searched the area of yesterday's ambush site (XD925402) of the 1st Marines convoy, and located 1 USMC KIA near a disabled vehicle along with 1 NVA KIA, NVA weapons and grenades. The USMC KIA had a map with thrust points on his body. The search of the area was completed at 0940H and the Marine KIA was tagged and sent to KSCB.[3418]

11 JUNE 1968

ALLERBY, HN Milton Richard	A/1/4
ANDRUS, LCPL Daniel Francis	A/1/4
CASTELOT, PFC Robert Sheehan	A/1/4
DICKERSON, CPL Bernard W Jr.	A/1/4
EWING, PVT Michael Lee	C/1/12
IRWIN, LCPL Robert Joseph	A/1/4
JONES, LCPL Sam	A/1/4
MONROE, LCPL Wilber Dean	A/1/4
PHIPPS, PFC James Alvin	C/1/12
PRICE, PFC Dwight Anthony	A/1/4
SNEAD, PFC Bernard James	A/1/4
WHITE, LCPL Charles Clinton	A/1/4
WRIGHT, GYSGT Edward Taylor	A/1/4

When A/1/4, commanded by Capt Richard R. Mannila, landed on LZ TORCH there were no holes. Elephant grass was chest-high; it was fresh territory, out of the artillery fan from KSCB. The LZ, not on the high ground, was chosen because helicopters could land on it.[3419] Major General Ray David (CG, 3rd MarDiv) personally inspected the position at the time of the artillery insertion. He regarded it as good defensive terrain, and instructed the CO of the artillery battery (C/1/12) to "dig in and prepare the position with all possible speed in view of the enemy artillery/mortar capability."[3420]

The day after landing, the 1/4 Battalion Commander (LtCol J. H. Maclean) ordered Capt Mannila to conduct a company-size patrol: "Go as far as you can to the north, follow the stream out of here, and then when you can't go any further, turn around and come back. Be sure you get back before dark." Mannila recalls, "I went out for about 5 hours. I don't think we made it a mile [because of] the brush in that area; it was virgin area. We were cutting with machetes to go along there. Coming back, I was very concerned. When I came in to the company position, I didn't come right up the nose of the finger where I felt they were going to come; I purposely brought the company another 150 yards in front of the company position, then hooked back in so that I wouldn't disclose that we had good fields of fire from that defensive position. [I] reported in to the Battalion Commander and said, 'It's almost impossible with a company out here, Sir, we're going to have to break into smaller units on patrol."[3421]

The patrols reported NVA and squads-sized units of NVA were seen moving from helicopters. "We knew what happened on LOON and that we were going to get hit." On the night of 10/11 June 1968, Capt Mannila went outside the position just before dark carrying a M-16 (with his .45 under his flak jacket, so that he didn't appear to be an officer). "Right before it got dark, I told [SSGT Norman "Kip"] Kiplinger, the First Platoon Commander, 'I'm going forward in the jungle to see how we look. Be careful you don't shoot me when I come back in,' and I disappeared into the jungle along this kind of wide path.. I stayed within the jungle canopy and there was a 5, 6-foot bank on my shoulder. I'm moving fairly rapidly, then stopping and listening to see if I hear anything. I got out to about 75, 100 yards and I looked back to see how we're looking as it gets dark, and I'm satisfied that we weren't showing anything from the company position. Then, all of a sudden, a chill goes up my back: there's no sounds in the jungle. There's nothing. I thought, They're here! I flipped my 16 on automatic, stayed against the bank again, and worked my way back again as rapidly as I could, but not running... I get back inside the perimeter and I tell Kiplinger, 'They're out there. We're going to get hit, so make sure when we set

---

[3414] 2/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 7.
[3415] Comments of 2/Lt John T. Williamson, HQMC Oral History Tape #2921.
[3416] 2/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 7.
[3417] 2/1 ComdC June, 1968, Part III.
[3418] 2/3 ComdC June, 1968.
[3419] Conversation with Richard R. Mannila, 5 September 2003.
[3420] CG 3rd MarDiv 120920Z/Jun68, Subj: 1st Bn 4th Mar Contact of 11 June at LZ TORCH, to LtGen Cushman, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc. June 1968 file, Encl (89).
[3421] Conversation with Richard R. Mannila, 5 September 2003.

the trip flares and the Claymore mines, we do a good job.' It gets dark and all of a sudden the wind starts to blow hard, and there was no moon; it was a perfect night for an attack.. Everyone's alert, and no one's sleeping."[3422] A/1/4 had not been at the position sufficiently long to build substantial bunkers or string concertina wire, but all were well dug in and friendly arty was registered.[3423]

At about two o'clock in the morning, Capt Mannila and First Sergeant Crawford went out to check the lines. Crawford was like a big "John Wayne" character who had seen quite a bit of combat. Capt Mannila had just returned to his CP when two shots were fired in the dark followed by three rapid explosions—big satchel charges exploding. "All hell breaks loose in front of us, and there's a pretty good-sized force out there... It was wild. I knew we had a problem because I heard the explosion, then I heard a couple more explosions. The .50 [caliber machinegun] gets red hot. It goes crazy. Now we're getting 81 illumination... My radioman yells, 'Skipper, where in the hell's the artillery?' When they hit us, they hit our artillery position at the same time.. so we didn't have any artillery... The radioman comes on the horn again. All the front is lighting up. He yells, 'The First Squad is all dead—all eleven, with the same squad, just totally eliminated."[3424] "The NVA crawled up in the elephant grass and threw satchel charges into foxholes of the 1st Platoon, killing 10 Marines and were able to overrun our perimeter on the finger of the hill."[3425] One Marine, Robert Gutierrez, was the only man who lived out of A-1. "Robert was blinded by the flash from all the explosions around him and started to make his way back toward the rear. He had 3 Chinese and North Vietnamese mercenaries with satchel charges following him. He was unable to see where he was trying to go. That's when I jumped out and grabbed him and threw him back into the bottom of our foxhole. He told us that 'Alphie' [HN Allerby], our corpsman, had been killed!.. In about 15 minutes it became the longest and loneliest six and a half to seven and a half hours of my life. All I was able to think about was Alphie. The second hand on my watch was moving as slow as the hour hand. I was totally alone with just myself with no one to talk to. It was absolutely the loneliest and longest night of my life."[3426]

HN Allerby had managed to help several wounded Marines before he was shot.[3427]

It was approximately 0215H as an estimated company of NVA assaulted LZ TORCH (XD911278) manned by A/1/4 and the artillery battery, C/1/12, using small arms, RPG, satchel charges and ChiCom grenades.[3428]

The cannoneers of Battery C, 12th Marines depressed the muzzles of their 105mm howitzers to fire point-blank into the ranks of the attackers but the enemy did succeed in reaching one gun parapet.[3429] CPL Gary D. Conner, a radio operator with C Battery, 1/12, seeing the NVA breaching part of the perimeter, immediately deployed several Marines to plug the hole. Although seriously wounded, he was instrumental in reestablishing the defensive perimeter and repulsing the attack.[3430]

LCPL Rudolph Martinez Cortez, a squad leader with A/1/4, seeing that the NVA had rendered two machineguns inoperable, quickly moved his squad along the perimeter and deployed his men along the besieged sector. Although only a PFC at the time, he located a reaction force and led it to the perimeter and directed the men into defensive positions.[3431]

At first light, the Marines of A/1/4 were bringing the wounded to the LZ for evacuation when NVA mortar began to hit in the jungle in front of the lines. The Marines' four mortars returned the favor on the 2 NVA mortars that had been moved up during the night, but then suddenly went silent. The Marine mortar position had taken a direct hit. Capt Mannila, with wounded from the night, without artillery and without mortars, is at the bottom of his hole when "just then, the radioman comes on the air and says, 'Sir, we got 2 A4s in 2 or 3 minutes.' We don't have a target, a position. If we're going to get air, they're going to drop their stuff and they're going to leave. I'm thinking rapidly, faster than I can talk about it. As soon as I stand up, the mortars are going to start firing, and also I'm going to be shot at. The next thing—it's almost as if I came out of my body—I find myself standing up. I tell myself and my binoculars, 'Don't loose it, don't loose it!' To them [the NVA] it must have been: Look at this guy! He's got binoculars. He's an officer or NCO, and he's saying, 'Come, get me!' My heart is just pounding like hell, and sure enough, they start moving the mortars back on me... All of a sudden I spot them. I say, 'I got 'em!'.. Just then the first A4 cleared the top of the hill—15 feet above it. The round [of the NVA] hit 3 to 5 feet behind me! They went through the flak jacket. I wake up at the bottom.

[3422] Ibid. [Most of the time in the jungle the sounds of insects are heard, except when there is something moving; then there is a sudden, unnerving silence].

[3423] CG 3rd MarDiv 120920Z/Jun68, cited.

[3424] Conversation with Richard R. Mannila, 5 September 2003.

[3425] Dick Harris, email to Richard Manilla, 12 May 2003, 12:13AM.

[3426] Gary R. Blankenship email to Larry Bosko [was a LCPL in A/1/4] in documents sent by Richard R. Mannila, 10 Sep 2003.

[3427] Note from Richard Manilla, 10 September 2003.

[3428] 1/4 ComdC June, 1968, Part II, p. 3.

[3429] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, June, 1968, p. 11.

[3430] Bronze Star Medal Citation, CPL Gary D. Conner.

[3431] Bronze Star Medal Citation, LCPL Rudolph Martinez Cortez.

They're firing for effect on me now. I wake up at the bottom of the hole and my radioman—I hear him yelling to the Battalion, 'I think the Captain's dead.'.. I tell him, 'Tell Battalion I'm alive. I've been hit, but I'm alive. I'm not dead!' He radios that, and they're firing for effect... All of a sudden I hear footsteps running.. Father Evan Greco had heard I'd been hit and he knew I'd lost a Corpsman. He picked up a medical kit, had been timing the mortar rounds, worked his way up the backside of the ridge, took off and jumps in the top of the hole. I was getting ready to fight whoever was coming at the top and the next thing I hear his voice and I knew who he was, and I said, 'Father Greco, you shouldn't be here, be quiet.' They're firing for effect again and he lies on top of me. Then he pulls my flak jacket off. And I think: O, my God, don't take that flak jacket off! And he tells me that the flak jacket fell apart in his hands. He sticks cotton in the major big holes in my back. I got, like, 6 holes. Then they fired for effect again and he lays on top of me again. Then he takes off running down the side of the ridge to help some other wounded... The second A4 comes and it was a direct hit; we take out the two mortar positions.... I was medically discharged from the Marine Corps in March, 1969."[3432]

Casualties: 13 KIA and 80 WIA from 1/4 and 1 KIA and 33 WIA from C/1/12.[3433]

[On 11 June, LtGen Cushman, CG of III MAF, provided a rationale for a modified posture in the Khe Sanh area: (1) During the 2-month period following the siege, 4 to 7 maneuver battalions have successfully fought the 304th NVA Division generally to the west and south of KSCB, utilizing Route 9 as the principle artery of support, making the airfield at KSCB unnecessary; (2) Maintaining the security and repair of Route 9, with its many bridges, between Ca Lu and KSCB has been an expensive undertaking requiring between 1 and 2 maneuver battalions. Resupply of company fire bases by helicopters from KSCB could be done with less cost if helicopters were sent from Ca Lu, with a considerable savings of troops necessary to maintain Route 9; (3) The NVA appear to be employing light forces with stand-off artillery and mortar support. When confronted, the NVA resorts to evasive tactics. "In light of the foregoing it is considered highly desirable to adjust our modus operandi in the Khe Sanh area to achieve greater operational flexibility, economize on forces, and deal most effectively with the enemy pattern of activity. Accordingly, it has been decided to: operate in the Khe Sanh area from several randomly positioned and frequently moved fire bases supplied by helicopter from the vicinity of Ca Lu... discontinue use of the Khe Sanh base as a principle combat and logistic support base, terminate use of Route 9 between Ca Lu and KSCB, recovering the tactical bridging for use elsewhere, employ the several battalions saved as a result of the foregoing adjustments to conduct strong offensive thrusts elsewhere in ICTZ."[3434]]

12 JUNE 1968

HUMPHREYS, PFC Larry Don	K/3/4
JOHNSON, PFC Havert Earl	K/3/4
NEWFIELD, LCPL Jimmy Charles	3/4
PADILLA, PVT Ralph Henry	K/3/4
SCOTT, LCPL Edward Drake	K/3/4
WHITE, PFC Michael Matthew	K/3/4

On 11 June, 3/4 (callsign TEMPLE LAKE) was CHOPed from OPCON 1st Marines to 4th Marines. Trucks moved the battalion from their night defensive positions starting at 0750 with all units being lifted from Khe Sanh to XD880295, about one click south of the designated LZ. In the process of securing the LZ, a squad from K/3/4 walked into a bunker complex and made contact with an estimated NVA platoon at XD880289. A squad from the company was approaching the hill up a well traveled path when they were hit from 3 bunkers oriented toward the trail. The first 2 men were felled by heavy small arms fire and the unit had to withdraw so that Huey gunships could work over the area. Once the LZ had been firmly secured and the CP established, CO, 3/4, LtCol F. L. Bourne, directed each company to send out recon patrols to check out the area in front of their lines and for K/3/4 to mark the position of their MIAs.[3435] On 12 June, Co K/3/4 went on a patrol to recover 2 MIA from 11 June.[3436]

At 1400 on 12 June, the battalion was lifted by helicopter to Objective 14 completing movement at 1645. At 1500, 3 estimated 250-pound snake eyes were dropped on the LZ resulting in 1 KIA, 15 WIA (evacuated) and 4 WIA (not evacuated).[3437]

[3rd Marine Division issued a 5-paragraph order ordering the disestablishment of KSCB this date.[3438] Mission: "3rd Marine Division on order conducts operations along Route #9 effecting a transition in the disposition of forces in the Khe Sanh area to a mobile defense posture. Initially, forces of up to one battalion in strength will

3432 Conversation with Richard R. Mannila, 5 September 2003.

3433 CG 3rd MarDiv 120920Z/Jun68, cited. These figures were preliminary, as is reflected in the listing.

3434 CG III MAF DNG 110156Z/Jun68, SPECAT EXCLUSIVE for Gen Abrams Info LtGen Rosson, Subj: Rationale for Modified Posture in the Khe Sanh Area, in III MAF Outgoing SPECAT EXCLUSIVE 11 May – 17 June 1968.

3435 3/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. III-3 and IV-6-7.

3436 Ibid., p. IV-7.

3437 Ibid.

3438 CG 3rd MarDiv 121510Z/Jun68, Subj: Concept of Operations: Transition to Mobile Defense at Khe Sanh, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc Jun68 File, Encl (90).

operate in the vicinity of Khe Sanh with reaction forces available from other AOs. Fire support bases are established to cover movements of forces and to provide support for future operations in the Khe Sanh area." The operation involved 4 phases: (1) "Commencing immediately Task Force HOTEL will perform evacuation/destruction tasks at Khe Sanh.. which can be accomplished without loss of tactical integrity of that position.." (2) "..Selected artillery batteries displace from KSB to fire support bases.. Outlying Khe Sanh hill positions continue to provide area security." (3) "Evacuation/destruction of KSB is completed. Evacuation/destruction of outlying Khe Sanh hill positions commences... Mobile defense posture is assumed.. up to one battalion remains in Khe Sanh area conducting operations to detect enemy presence while remaining within range of artillery support.." (4) "Tactical bridging west of Ca Lu is removed... Mobile defense posture has reaction forces from outside Khe Sanh area up to 2 regiments in size... Support of forces.. is by helicopter."]

[On 12 June, the Joint High Command and Front Command Headquarters, B5-T8 [Khe Sanh Front], ordered the 304th Division to be withdrawn from the Khe Sanh battlefield to the rear to be refitted. "The mission of the siege at Ta Con [KSCB] and attacking the enemy on Highway 9 using the 308th Division and the Viet Bac [Military Region] 264th Regiment replaced [the 304th Division]. Comrade Thai Dung, the 304th Division Commander, was sent by the High Command to command the 308th Division."[3439] The 325C Division had been withdrawn during the middle of February, replaced by the 66th Regiment.[3440] The 308th Division had entered the battlefield in mid-May (minus its 36th Regiment).[3441] Apparently the 304th Division CP was struck by a B-52 mission: "Near the end of the campaign during the period that the enemy was dropping B52 bombs, Comrade Chu Nghi, who was in charge of the Military Region III Entertainment Unit, was martyred at the Division Command Headquarters. Comrade Vu Tao, a reporter for the news agency and two entertainers.. were wounded together with Comrade Nguyen Trong Hop, the Division's Deputy Political Officer, together with a number of staff cadre and soldiers."[3442]]

[3439] Chien Dich Tien Cond Duong 9—Khe Sanh Xuan He 1968 [The Spring-Summer 1968 Khe Sanh—Route 9 Offensive Campaign], Hanoi: Vien Lich Su Quan Su Vietnam, Bo Quoc Phong [Vietnam Institute for Military History, Ministry of Defense], 1987, pp. 48; Su Doan 304 (Ky Su) (Tap II) [304th Division (Chronology) (Vol II) Nah Xuat Ban Quan Nhan Dan [People's Army Publishing House], Hanoi, 1990, pp. 115-116. Trans. Sedgwick Tourison.

[3440] Ibid., p. 32.

[3441] Ibid., p. 64.

[3442] Ibid., p. 115. The B52 strike must have made a direct hit on the 304th Division CP HQ.

14 JUNE 1968

OVERTON, PFC Doyle Wayne L/3/4

PFC Overton died this date from falciparum malaria with renal failure contracted 11 June 1968 in the Khe Sanh area.

15 JUNE 1968

BERTRAM, PFC David Michael	L/3/4
CRUSE, HN James Dale	M/3/4
FITTS, PFC Richard Lee	3/4
HAWYER, LCPL Donald Robert	L/3/4
JOYNER, 1/Lt Stephen Douglas	L/3/4
LAVOIE, CPL Gerald Henry	L/3/4
LOPEZ, PFC Robert Francisco	M/3/4
MC CLINTOCK, PFC Gerald	L/3/4
MC HENRY, LCPL Paul Vincent	H&S/3/4
MERCER, HM2 William Ivan	M/3/4
MURPHY, LCPL Richard Brian	M/3/4
PLANCHON, CPL Randall Theodore II	M/3/4
SMITH, LCPL Charles Daniel	L/3/4
SPICZKA, PFC Aloysius Francis Jr.	K/3/4
THIBAULT, PFC Jeffrey Allen	M/3/4
THOMAS, PFC Nathan	L/3/4
WALLACE, PFC Jackie Elmore	M/3/4
WILLS, LCPL Robert John	K/3/4

The TEMPLE LAKE (3/4) position, about 10 miles south of Khe Sanh (XD880267)[3443] started hearing movement about 0445 in the streambed to the north and at 0545 started receiving an attack from what was estimated as portions of 2 NVA battalions. The attack was preceded by the firing of 30 RPG rounds. At 0550, Huey gunships and an AO were requested. At 0605, 4 flights of fixed wing were on the way. At 0643, an emergency medevac was requested. At 0645, the AO was on station. At 0647, an active enemy mortar was observed at XD879266. About 0635, 5 NVA occupied some of the Co "M" holes. At 0710, Co "M" reported a machinegun set up inside their 2nd Platoon CP. All holes were cleared at 0730. At 0720, Huey gunships were on station. At 0737, a Co "I" FO observed a mortar tube destroyed. At 0853, Companies "I" and "L" observed a green star cluster in the vicinity of the Co "M" position. After the star cluster, the attack seemed to slow down and ceased at 0915. At 0915, a Co "K" platoon was alerted that they would check out the streambed to the north of the Co "M" position. At 1115, units sweeping in front of Co "M" made contact with an enemy sniper at XD877262. At 1128, the Co "K" platoon moved out to check the assigned area. At 1135, Co "M"

[3443] FMFPAC 170442Z/Jun68, WESTPAC SITREP #1175, Para. 2.A.; 3rd MarDiv COC 160700Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #244, Para. 3.F.

reported killing the sniper at XD877262. At 1138, a Co "M" unit sweeping in front of the Co "M" lines reported NVA playing dead and opening up on personnel as they passed by. At 1202, the Co "M" sweep unit made contact with an unknown number of NVA at XD876263 and encountered automatic weapons fire at XD877263. At 1315, Co "I" heard a tube popping and observed 4 NVA at XD867264. At 1350, the Battalion received 7 rounds of 82mm mortars in the area of the old LZ and 81mm mortars. At 1428, a Co "K" platoon made contact with several automatic weapons at XD872262. At 1530, all contact was broken and at 1745, all units had returned to the perimeter.[3444]

Results of the contact: 16 KIA, 58 WIA (evacuated), 3 WIA (not evacuated), 1 MIA.[3445]

"One of the most moving things I ever witnessed was this young kid on the 15th. He was very badly wounded, shot in the gut... This young, blonde-haired kid looked up at me and said, 'Sir, I did the best I could,' and I said, 'Son, I know you did,' and he died right there. They let the poncho down and all the blood ran out of the poncho. I'll never forget it. He was a young kid. He looked about 18, 19. He said, 'Sir, I did the best I could.'"[3446]

Among the dead were two who served in such an exemplary manner a month earlier. CPL Planchon, who had been the Third Squad Leader of platoon M-2 on 16 May when M/3/4 was ensnared in a desperate battle and who became the Platoon Sergeant was killed today as was HN James Dale Cruse who, under heavy enemy fire which caused heavy casualties, treated the wounded without regard for his own safety, and then returned to his position on the line with little or no sleep.[3447]

HM2 William Ivan Mercer was the senior Corpsman for M/3/4 who died trying to save the lives of 2 Marines wounded by a NVA sniper.[3448] HM2 Mercer had voluntarily accompanied the platoon assigned the mission of searching the area forward of the friendly positions when it came under accurate NVA sniper fire.[3449] He rushed to the aid of one Marine who was shot through the abdomen, bandaged him and took him to the LZ for evacuation. "He returned again to treat another Marine wounded in the leg and arm who could not move. He was on his knees leaning over the Marine with his back to the sniper fire trying to bandage the Marine and protect him at the same time, when he was hit by sniper fire and fatally wounded. The wounded Marine also died after receiving more fire from the sniper."[3450]

16 JUNE 1968

BOND, LCPL Theodore Charles F/2/1
GALINDEZ, LCPL Manuel Antonio H/2/4

17 JUNE 1968

CARNEY, PFC Tyrone Edward H/2/4

[On 17 June 1968, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff concurred in III MAF's proposal to adopt a mobile posture in western Quang Tri Province with the concomitant phase down and deactivation of KSCB[3451] Destruction of KSCB was conducted as Operation CHARLIE (17 June – 06 July 1968) with the assigned mission: "On order, the 3rd Marine Division evacuates Khe Sanh Base (KSB) of all operating and supporting units, facilities, and of any material that would be of use to the enemy; decreases the size and type of forces presently committed to the Khe Sanh area; continues extensive reconnaissance in the SCOTLAND II AO and maintains quick reaction capability to exploit any suitable target uncovered by reconnaissance forces."[3452] At 1530H on 17 June 1968, Bn 3/9 was CHOPed OPCON to 1st Marines at KSCB with the mission to demolish Khe Sanh Combat Base and participate in the retrograde movement from Khe Sanh to LSA CAMEO.[3453] The next day, Bn 1/1 commenced Operation CHARLIE while maintaining combat outposts on Hills 950, 558, 861, and 881-South throughout the remainder of the month.[3454]

The task—even aside from increased NVA shelling—was indeed Herculean. The Khe Sanh airfield consisted of 17,000 individual sheets of AM-2 matting with each typical sheet weighing 144 pounds and measuring 12 ft. x 2 ft.. Using 30 men, the estimated removal, bundling, and loading was 30 men working 15 days.[3455] There were 166 large bunkers (bunkers that housed 5 or more men). Complete destruction of all Grade 3 ammunition was essential to ensure it did not fall into the hands of the enemy. 10 days were required to collect loose ord-

---

[3444] 3/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-8.
[3445] 3/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-8; 3rd MarDiv COC 171402Z/Jun68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #246, Para. 3.F.
[3446] Conversation with Frank Lee Bourne, 21 January 1990. (Bourne was CO of 3/4).
[3447] CG 3rd MarDiv 270619Z/Aug68, Recommendation for Individual Award (Posthumous), in Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) file, HN James Dale Cruse.
[3448] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 3 August 1968, in Navy Cross (posthumous) file, HM2 William Ivan Mercer.
[3449] Navy Cross (posthumous) Citation for HM2 William Ivan Mercer.
[3450] Statement of CPL Tandy W. Wells in Navy Cross (posthumous) file, HM2 William Ivan Mercer.
[3451] HQMC Briefing Paper AO3H13-dnw, 11 July 1968 in file: "HQMC: Reduction of KSCB Briefing," Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.
[3452] 3rd MarDiv OpO 20-68, Evacuation of Khe Sanh Base, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc June 1968 file, Encl (72).
[3453] 3/9 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 4.
[3454] 1/1 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-6 and 1-III-2.
[3455] 3rd MarDiv OpO 20-68, Evacuation of Khe Sanh Base, Annex B, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc June 1968 file, Encl (72).

nance. in addition, an estimated 120 tons of Grade 3 ammo was buried in an area south of the airstrip at approximately the 1400-ft. mark of the runway from the eastern approach. If blown, the resulting crater would be an estimated 130 ft. x 300 ft. x 50 ft. This was to be blown by EOD after everyone else had departed.[3456] The hasty protective minefield at Khe Sanh and the surrounding positions would remain in place; no attempt would be made to remove or destroy the minefields due to minimum records and the inherent danger to friendly troops.[3457]

The destruction of KSCB proceeded with Marines just off Operation ROBIN, flew into the base and each company was assigned an area. Each company commander was responsible to ensure all bunkers and trench lines were destroyed and anything salvageable was deposited at a collection point. Many casualties were taken by 3/9 in this operation: "In destroying the bunkers and filling in the trench lines we did away with our only means of protection and the enemy harassed us continually."[3458]

For the trooper at KSCB, it was a nightmare: "Basically it was mass confusion because everybody's worried about incoming artillery and trying to get everything packed away in the jeeps and the trailers and mounted on pallets. You're worried about incoming and you're tearing down bunkers, destroying everything. And we were delayed 2 or 3 days basically because of the fact of incoming and couldn't get the bunkers torn down fast enough. It was really a scary experience... We had quite a few guys messed up because of that... It wasn't because of the lack of leadership.. We had our job to do."[3459] Jeff Loomis recalls: "We were kept busy fighting off the rats so kindly left behind for us by our predecessors (they proved to be a worthy adversary) while we were trying to avoid the sampling of rockets and artillery that the NVA had saved just for us. It was rather disheartening trying to avoid the incoming while we were destroying the bunkers and trenches designed to protect us from that very thing; we were running out of places to hide fast!"[3460]

Despite these obstacles and difficulties, the annihilation of KSCB proceeded as planned:[3461]

DATE	LB	SB	T	W
20 Jun	3 + ½ of 2	77 + ½ of 6	2550	2550
21 Jun	23 ½	178	2920	1360
22 Jun	30	23	890	3675
23 Jun	11	12	345	2650

[LB=Large Bunkers; SB=Small Bunkers; T=Trenchline filled in (in ft.); W=Wire torn (in ft.)]

A news reporter from the Baltimore Sun "leaked" the news concerning Khe Sanh before the base was destroyed and the troops evacuated, thus reflecting the unreliability of news reporters on the battlefield with no regard to the safety of our fighting men. His release was sent from Khe Sanh on 24 June and appeared in the New York Times on 27 June 1968. MACV suspended Mr. Carroll's military accreditation because he had broken the rules that forbade discussion of future plans, operations or strikes, to ensure protection of the troops. Mr. Carroll lost his credentials for 6 months; Marines lost their lives due to his news release. Within 12 hours of the article, there was an immediate increase in NVA artillery on KSCB resulting in several men killed. In addition, there was increased NVA activity directed against Hill 689, with a strong probe on 26/27 June that actually penetrated the wire.[3462] On 29 June 1968, CG TF Hotel reported: "Increased artillery and mortar attacks on 1st Marines and ground contact vicinity FOXTROT RIDGE [location of 3/4 indicates increased enemy activity in Khe Sanh area."[3463] Richard Camp (who had been CO of L/3/26 during the Siege battle and now was Aide to CG, 3rd Marine Division, Major General Raymond Davis, recalls that he became irate when Carroll's article was printed: "There was a dramatic increase in shelling. I al-

[3456] On 6 July 1968, Master Gunnery Sergeant John Pertl Driver returned to KSCB to detonate 120 tons of unsalvageable ordnance near the east end of the runway. Because of the quantity, this could only be done after all troops had left and when there would be no helicopter operations under way. After previously preparing a shot to be triggered by two 500-pound bombs plus 1000 pounds of Grade III ordnance, at 1400 on 8 July, some 18 hours after the last ground troops had departed under cover of darkness, MGySgt Driver returned by helicopter alone and detonated the ordnance lest it fall into the hands of the NVA. [NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 19 August 1968, in Bronze Star Medal file of MGySgt John Pertl Driver].

[3457] CT TF H 180640Z/Jun68, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc. Jun68 file, Encl (114).

[3458] 1/Lt Peter M. Walsh, "Filling Trench Lines," Marine Corps Gazette 54:5 (May, 1969) 11. Walsh was a Platoon Commander with L/3/9.

[3459] Comments of CPL George E. Moore, HQMC Oral History Tape #3165. Moore was with the LSU at Khe Sanh 29 Dec 1966 – 15 August 1968.

[3460] Letter of Jeff Loomis, 23 July 1993.

[3461] 3/9 ComdC June 1968, S-3 Journal entries for 20-23 June 1968. 3/9 was awarded a Meritorious Unit Commendation by CMC for its activities during Operation CHARLIE which notes that 3/9 was also assigned to provide one company during the hours of darkness as regimental reaction force for 1st Marines. "The destruction work was extremely difficult and must of it had to be accomplished by manual labor... The heat and dust were extremely adverse, and constant mortar and artillery attacks by the enemy.. made the assigned mission especially dangerous and hazardous... When completed, the Khe Sanh Combat Baswe resembled a natural and undisturbed piece of terrain."

[3462] Comments of LtCol Billy R. Duncan, HQMC Oral History Tape #3662. Duncan was CO of 2/1.

[3463] CG TF HOTEL 290920Z/Jun68 in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc June 1968 file, Encl (171).

ways thought if I ever ran into that guy, I would kill him. In fact, if I still run into him I won't kill him, but I'll beat the hell out of him. He'll get his come-uppance!"[3464]

CBMU-301 Det B departed 20 June and the Khe Sanh ASRT moved from Khe Sanh to Chu Lai on 24 June. The Khe Sanh DASC was deactivated on 27 June and moved to LZ STUD by truck convoy over Route 9.[3465]

Because of the Carroll leak, the White House was placed under pressure to explain why Khe Sanh was being abandoned.[3466] On 27 June 1968, Gen Abrams sent a message to Gen Westmoreland: "We shall be asked such questions as.. 'General Westmoreland once said that Khe Sanh must be held, if he was correct, why the change?' What I would like to do is to have your concurrence in replying.. as follows: "Some weeks before he departed for his new assignment, General Westmoreland requested.. General Cushman review his deployments in northern I CTZ, including Khe Sanh and make any recommendations he thought appropriate to improve his troop dispositions... General Westmoreland after weighing the pros and cons instructed that this outline be developed in detail. He did not see the detailed plan prior to his departure from Vietnam."[3467]]

18 JUNE 1968

BALL, PFC Robert Lee	K/3/4
CARROLL, CPL Fergus Joseph	K/3/4
DEGNIS, PVT James Edward	H&S/3/4
FAULKNER, PFC Elmer Lee Jr.	A/3rd Eng
GIBSON, PFC William Terry	K/3/4
JOHNS, LCPL Carey Lee	H&S/3/4[3468]
LAVIGNE, LCPL Steven Bruce	K/3/4
MATHEWS, CPL James Michael	K/3/4
MONCAYO, SGT Jose Roberto	M/3/4
OWENS, LCPL Elwood	K/3/4
SCHURRER, CPL Jon Rodney	M/3/4
SILVA, LCPL Rito	K/3/4
TAYLOR, SSGT Albert Russell II	K/3/4

On 18 June, TEMPLE LAKE (3/4) received an attack from an estimated NVA company of the 88th Regiment, 308th NVA Division that began at 0555 when Co "K" received a light probe and called in illumination and HE [high explosive]. At 0610, Co "K" received the main thrust of the attack as the enemy crawled within 30 feet of the lines before launching their attack, supported by 82mm mortars and RPGs. The NVA assault was able to penetrate the FEBA [forward edge of the battle area]. Co "M" was ordered by LtCol Bourne to dispatch one platoon OPCON to Co "K". At 0620, an AO came on station, and upon observing one group of 25 – 30 NVA and numerous smaller groups of 8 – 10 NVA at XD875264, called in fixed wing air strikes and Huey gunships. The attack continued until 0945. The NVA left snipers and automatic weapons behind to cover their withdrawal. During the attack, the fixed wing air strikes and artillery struck Hills 703 (XD878268) and 749 (XD866272) to block reinforcement of NVA units in contact. At 1030, Co "K" (with the platoon from Co "M") was able to reestablish the FEBA and tie in with Co "I". At 1137, the battalion received 12 rounds of estimated 152mm artillery from Co Roc. At 1215, units began to sweep the battlefield and clear out remaining pockets of resistance. At 1417, the sweep was completed and all units were prepared to be extracted by helicopter to new positions. Casualties were 14 KIA and 30 WIA. There were 129 NVA KIA (confirmed).[3469]

Capt Rudolph H. Fahrner, section leader of CATTLE CALL 5-10 and 5-11 on mission 106A, 2 CH-46s assigned to move TEMPLE LAKE to their new Landing Zones (HAWK, FOXTROT RIDGE, and Hill 471), commenced the lift at 1430 at XD879267. The lift needed to be completed by dark since there were no supporting fires available to suppress any night attack. TEMPLE LAKE's LZ was "T" shaped with the north-south ridge being 20 – 40 feet higher than the east-west finger. Unfortunately, the troops in the lower zone had collected all their garbage and set it afire causing an unnecessary hazard of smoke along with "cooking" rounds which had been inadvertently tossed into the fire, while the upper ridge was exposed to sniper fire and mortar rounds throughout the day. As soon as the last trooper boarded, the aircraft was bracketed on both sides by NVA mortar rounds which fortunately hit on the slopes of the zone. Without panic, Capt Fahrner checked to determine that all troops were safely aboard before lifting from the zone.[3470]

During the helicopter extract, 3/4 received 100 rounds of 82mm mortar and 90 rounds of 152mm artillery. The helicopter lift was completed with Co "I" at Foxtrot

---

[3464] Conversation with Richard Camp, 3 June 1989.
[3465] MASS-3 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 3.
[3466] Walt W. Rostow, Memo to the President, 25 June 1968, in LBJ Library, National Security Files, Vietnam Country File, box 67/2, folder "VN2A(S) I Corps 5/68-11/68 (2 of 3), #81.
[3467] GEN ABRAMS MAC 8394, in Rostow, Memo to the President, 25 June 1968, cited supra, Doc #76a. Westmoreland's terse reply: "Agree with proposed replies to press RE: Khe Sanh. Needless to say, your decision on Cushman proposal is sound under current circumstances." [WESTMORELAND 270217Z/Jun68 to ABRAMS, in supra.
[3468] Is listed as a member of H&S/2/4 in the Coffelt database.
[3469] 3/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-10.
[3470] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 31 July 1968, in Distinguished Flying Cross file on Capt Rudolph Hugo Fahrner. The 3/4 ComdC, June, 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-10, also notes the fire and exploding ammunition rounds.

Ridge (XD874383), Co "K" at Hill 471 (XD846393), and the CP group with Companies "L" and "M" at LZ Hawk (XD895407).[3471]

The community of Porterville, California, from where SSGT Taylor lived, lost more young men per capita in the war than any other town in the United States.[3472] Eva Taylor, SSGT Albert Taylor's mother, recalls her son "playing soldier" with the other young boys in the oak-covered hills above Porterville. Albert had 3 children and another one on the way when he went to Vietnam. He wrote home: "I am a Marine and an American. If we stop (Communism) here, it will someday be a help to our children." He wrote home on 13 May of a patrol to Khe Sanh village, "It was really bombed out. There were bodies all over.." The corpse was sealed. His mother says, "I wanted Albert to be identified. A friend of ours said he would identify Albert, but they wouldn't allow it. Kenny [Albert's brother, who also served in Vietnam and accompanied the body back home] said he was pretty sure it was Albert."[3473]

19 JUNE 1968

ALLEN, SGT Herbert Marshall	H&S/1/1
HELMSTRETTLER, 1/Lt Michael David	HMM-161
SHARP, CAPT Lufkin Scott	HMM-161

A flight of 4 CH-46D helicopters of HMM-161 was conducting a troop lift in the Khe Sanh area this date. As the lead helicopter, YR-31, touched down in the drop off zone, a cargo parachute was blown into the air and drawn into the rotor system. In a matter of seconds, it was entwined in the rotor system and caused the rotors and shaft to pull out of the aircraft and crash into the cockpit.[3474]

LCPL Peter J. Despard, the Crew Chief of YR-31, described the incident: "We were coming into LZ TURKEY[3475] with 15 troops aboard when the aircraft came apart on touchdown. Visibility was zero and I was leaning out the upper hatch trying to see the ground through the blowing dirt to direct the pilots in. Upon touchdown the aircraft started violently shaking, so I pulled myself back inside. All the passengers were trying to hit the deck, so I did the same just inside the front hatch. Something, I think it was the upper hatch, fell on my back. As soon as the aircraft stopped shaking I stood up and hydraulic fluid and oil were spraying down from lines ripped loose overhead... I turned around and saw that all the passengers were trying to get out. I jumped out over the lower hatch and checked the aircraft to see if it were burning. The aft pylon was gone and smoke was rising from the area, but it wasn't burning. I took a look into the pilot's compartment and thought both the pilots were dead, so I ran back and with Cpl [William] Cody's help started pulling passengers out of the right-hand fuselage escape hatch. I then looked in through the escape hatch to see if anyone was still in the cabin section. No one was, so I started moving forward and away from the aircraft. It was then that I saw one of Captain [Lufkin Scott] Sharp's hands move, so I ran over to him. He was hanging upside down in his seat hanging out of the escape hatch by the springs below the seat. I started yelling for some help and about 4 people came running up. They held the seat up so we could unhook the seat harness. Then we put him on a stretcher and put a tourniquet on his leg. I then ran over and directed YR-32 [in]."[3476]

Inside the aircraft, Marines from 1st Platoon, K/3/9, who had been picked up from an OP, were being transported to KSCB. Among them was Ray Felle, a platoon corpsman who had been with his unit for 6 months. Felle recalls: "On the initial approach the pilot aborted the landing due to a mule[3477] in the landing zone from what I could see from the window. In the process of circling for another landing we picked up a parachute in the blades. I remember the helicopter shaking violently, then dropping to the ground. This closed the [rear ramp] and made escape impossible.[3478] We tried to open the doors but

---

[3471] 3/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-10.

[3472] Susan Sward, "Immeasurable Losses," San Francisco Chronicle, 27 April 1995. [Clipping furnished by Michael Archer in his letter of 23 January 2004].

[3473] Ibid.

[3474] ComdC HMM-161 June, 1968, Part II, p. 4.

[3475] LZ TURKEY was located at the location of the Bru ville of Ta Cong just outside the main gate of KSCB, XD835417 [3/9 ComdC June, 1968, S3 Journal, 19 June 1968, Ser #2 and 4] [1st Marines ComdC, June, 1968, Encl (1), p. III-A-6, indicates LZ TURKEY at XD832419]. Time of the accident was 1335H. The incident is mentioned in Winter, Ronald, Masters of the Art, A Marine's Memoir of Parris Island and Vietnam, New York: Carlton Press, Inc., 1989, p. 119, although the author mistakenly writes that the Marines were being embarked at LZ Turkey rather than arriving there.

[3476] Statement of LCPL Peter J. Despard in Navy Commendation Medal file of CPL Rodney Everett Weiss.

[3477] M274A1 small 4-wheeled platform type vehicle used to move supplies.

[3478] According to Bruce Lake, who was a CH-46 maintenance test pilot and who tested re-fabricated aircraft in Japan before they were delivered to the USMC, the rear ramp was powered by a very powerful hydraulic system that ran near 3000 pounds per square inch, making efforts by the Marines to oppose that force impossible. He states that the pilots must have seen the parachute, been concerned for the welfare of the Marines, and closed the door to keep anyone from leaving [i.e., being tossed from] the aircraft. [Bruce Lake email to Raymond Felle, Tue., 16 Feb 1999, 12:57PM, in Letter from Ray Felle, 1 March 1999]. He notes that it may be that the 13,000-pound helicopter (weight unloaded of the CH-46) plus another 2000 – 4000 pounds of men and equipment aboard could easily have closed the door from the pressure of landing. [Bruce Lake email to Raymond Felle, Wed.,. 17 Feb 1999, 1:21 PM, in Letter from Ray Felle, 1 March 1999].

couldn't. The whole while fuel was pouring on us from broken lines above and I got a sense of peace thinking this was the end of the line and I was about to die in a fiery crash."[3479]

Jack McKenna, a 60mm mortar Marine with 3/9, saw the pilot in the left seat "working his butt off killing switches. I saw something come through the wind screen that looked like metal. At that time we hit really hard on the front strut, bounced off the ground, and settled down."[3480] The pilot in the right seat was alive, but suffered the loss of one arm and his foot above the boot, while the pilot in the left seat was crushed by the front transmission. "I know now that the pilot in the left seat was killing fuel pump switches and the batteries along with it because I asked a pilot at Ft. Rucker, Al, [who] told me that we could have burned that day and that the pilot was thinking of us all the time."[3481]

Meanwhile, the embarked Marines were desperately attempting to budge the rear door open, all while being sprayed with the hydraulic fluid. "We only went in the front and out the back door; we never even thought of the fact that there were side doors in the thing... It never occurred to us to go out the side. We just tried to get out the back and pretty soon we were just paralyzed by the fact, knowing that this was it, and the whole platoon was in there."[3482]

CPL William Cody, the gunner on YR-31, saw the embarked infantry troops thrown off the seats onto the deck and felt the wet mist of sprayed fuel, and started to climb out from under the gun mount where he had been thrown when the aircraft started to come apart. "I started pulling the grunts out of it because the ramp was still up."[3483]

Felle recalls: "A person called to us from the gunner door telling us to get out before the craft caught fire. Out the door we all went in a big hurry and with hope once more. Tom Parnofiello was having trouble seeing so I washed his eyes out with water and checked my other men for injuries. They were okay except for bumps and fuel burns. I went up to the left side of the helicopter to see if the pilot and copilot were okay and that is when I saw 1st Lt. Helmstretler crushed."[3484]

1/Lt Harold E. Massey lowered his aircraft, YR-32, into the zone directed by LCPL Despard, Crew Chief of the downed YR-31, approximately 75 yards from the downed YR-31 and GySgt Jackie L. Payne and CPL Rodney E. Weiss in YR-32 dashed to YR-31. The co-pilot was dead, and Capt Sharp was being pulled out as they arrived.[3485] Immediately after Capt. Sharp was placed aboard YR-32, LCPL Despard applied pressure to the pressure point of the Captain's upper thigh to retard the flow of blood coming out his left leg and GySgt Payne directed CPL William Cody to apply pressure to the Captain's left upper arm to retard the flow of blood from his left arm. The helicopter landed at Khe Sanh, requesting a corpsman, but as none were in the immediate area, they took off for Delta Med. Although both CPL Cody and LCPL Despard began to get cramps in their hands and fingers as they held the pressure points, they continued to hold the pressure during the entire trip to Delta Med. After two or three minutes of departure from Khe Sanh, GySgt Payne noticed the Captain was experiencing difficulty breathing and CPL Weiss applied a tube used for mouth to mouth resuscitation until he tired, and then and GySgt Payne gave Capt Sharp external heart massage while Cpl Weiss returned to the job of resuscitation. All four Marines of the crews maintained their life-saving efforts until reaching Delta Med and thought the Captain was still alive upon landing.[3486]

1/Lt Michael David Helmstrettler
A Tribute[3487]
By Bruce Lake

"Mike and I were close. He and I went through the infantry training regiment at Camp Geiger together and were then assigned to Casual Company while we waited for our orders to flight school in Pensacola... We had a heck of a good time. We used to sneak into the Sergeants' club (we were Privates and PFCs at the time) and went on liberty together. Mike and I got orders to arrive in Pensacola on the same day. Sometime in February 1966, we flew down on a commercial flight together, got adjoining rooms in the hotel and spent a great day on the beach in Pensacola before checking into flight school. We were only 18 but somehow he managed to buy a bottle of brandy and we celebrated our

---

[3479] Letter from Ray Felle, 14 Jan 1999.
[3480] Jack McKenna email to Ray Felle, 10 May 2000, 9:06:51 PM, in letter from Ray Felle, 30 November 2004 and in Letter from Jack McKenna of 26 May 2000.
[3481] Ibid.
[3482] Conversation with Ray Felle, 7 January 1999.
[3483] Statement of CPL William Cody in Bronze Star Medal file on LCPL Peter J. Despard. LtCol Paul W. Nielsen, CO, HMM-161 recommended the Bronze Star Medal, and CO, Prov MAG-39 concurred in the award recommendation for Bronze Star Medal (signed by W. Sienko, 30 Jul 1968), but CG, I MAW, recommended no award (signed by MGen C. J. Quilter, 9 Sep 1968) and FMFPAC disapproved the award (endorsement dated 29 Oct 1968).
[3484] Letter from Ray Felle, 14 Jan 1999.
[3485] Statement of GySgt Jackie L. Payne in Navy Commendation Medal file of CPL Rodney Everett Weiss.
[3486] Statement of 1/Lt Harold E. Massey in Navy Commendation Medal file of CPL Rodney Everett Weiss.
[3487] Bruce Lake, email to Raymond Felle, 16 Feb 1999, 12:57 PM, in letter from Ray Felle, 1 March 1999.

good fortune in being selected for flight school by raising a few glasses together...

"He and I went all the way through flight school together. Indoctrination (just like boot camp all over again), flight in the T-34s, then in the T-28s, and then on to Ellyson for chopper school. We did everything together.. I even remember some nights at the drive-in theater (we didn't have cars so we walked in and sat on wooden benches) when it was so darn cold we literally hugged each other trying to keep each other warm as we watched the end of the movie... Mike was a guitar player and used to sing with a bunch of guys in the (dry) showers where we trained in Pensacola to get the acoustics right when they played the 'House of the Rising Sun'. I can still hear them play that today in my mind. When I hear the song on the radio I usually stop what I'm doing or slow down in the car and turn the radio up as a tribute to/memory of Mike. He worked at a ticket counter for a commercial airline before going into the Marine Corps. He loved flying and everything about it. We even went to an air show together to see the Blue Angels... I still miss Mike a lot. He was a wonderful friend."

[Throughout June, 1968, the concept of assigning both the Lancaster and Scotland II AOs to Task Force HOTEL gained tactical acceptance. Although Lancaster forces had responsibility for LSA Cameo and 15 kilometers of Route 9, the only military significance of the LSA and MSR was support for Scotland II. The tactical situation created a requirement to be able to move forces and deploy them rapidly over long distances. Furthermore, helicopter and fixed wing assets could be controlled and allocated more productively through a single headquarters along with mutual support by general and direct support artillery. The decision was made to assign both AOs to Task Force HOTEL and the area between Thon Son Lam ("Rock Pile") and Ca Lu would become the headquarters. On 19 June, Operation Charleston commenced to relocate the 1st Marines and Task Force HOTEL CPs from KSCB to LZ Stud. The Task Force officially displaced to LZ Stud on 30 June and by 6 July, KSCB had been completely deactivated and destroyed.[3488]]

20 JUNE 1968

JOHNSON, PFC Gerald Lee C/1/4
LATANOWICH, PFC Thomas Daniel H&S/1/1

From 19 – 30 June, 1/4 was located at LZ Mike (XD937409) with 2 companies in the perimeter and 2 companies screening south of Route #9.[3489]

The CP for 1/1 was at Hill 558 and about 50 men from H&S Company manned Hill 950 radio relay (XD844455).[3490]

[As a result of the ROBIN SOUTH operation, the newly constructed NVA road was examined. It commences in the Scotland II AO on the east bank of the Xe Pone River at XD776237 as an extension of a road leading off Route 92 in Laos. The river crossing appears to be an underwater rock causeway. The road runs almost due east for 14.2 kilometers, generally following old trails, until it swings north at XD900227 where it continues north for 8.4 kilometers along old trails and along the banks of creeks to XD916296 where it again swings east for approximately 2.8 kilometers to XD9428 at which point it abruptly terminates. The total length of the road is 25.4 kilometers and varies from 5 to 6 meters wide. There are numerous feeder trails throughout the entire length. It is estimated that tracked and wheeled vehicles up to 30 tons could be transported on this road. Permanent denial of use of the road to the NVA is impractical and cratering and destruction of fills would have little effect since the surrounding area offers easy by-pass and repairs could be made with minimal delay. Mining of the road would have little permanent effect.[3491]]

22 JUNE 1968

SHAVER, HM3 Ronald Lee BLT 2/4
WEINTRAUB, PFC Neil William G/2/4

On 21 June 1968, Co G/2/4 commenced a lift to Hill 512 (XD954451) at 0915 and throughout the day received incoming 60mm and 82mm mortars from several NVA positions. On 22 June, Co G/2/4 received a total of 12 82mm mortars that resulted in 2 Marines killed and 13 WIA (evacuated).[3492]

[Operation ROBIN SOUTH terminated 22 June 1968. Cumulative casualty figures for ROBIN NORTH were 16 USMC KIA and 130 USMC WIA (evacuated) and 92 NVA KIA (confirmed); total casualties for ROBIN SOUTH were: 77 USMC KIA, 286 WIA (evacuated), 20 WIA (not evacuated), and 604 NVA KIA (confirmed). During the ROBIN operations, supporting heli-

[3488] Task Force HOTEL, History, Task Force HOTEL, appended to Task Force HOTEL, ComdC June 1969.

[3489] 1/4 ComdC June, 1968, Part II, p. 3.
[3490] 1/1 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-3.
[3491] CG TF HOTEL 200923Z/Jun68 in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc June 1968 file, Encl (123).
[3492] BLT 2/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 10.

copters transported 6,164,374 pounds of cargo and 18,767 combat troops, a daily average of 334,946 pounds and 963 troops. 1,118 close air support missions expended 1740.5 tons of ordnance. There were 64 secondary explosions. Artillery fired 13,381 105mm and 2,103 155 rounds. Not one round resulted in a friendly casualty.[3493] Casualties from 01 April to mid-June, 1968 at Khe Sanh were: 431 US KIA and 33 ARVN KIA, 2313 US WIA (evacuated) and 187 ARVN WIA (evacuated).[3494]]

23 JUNE 1968

POWELL, LCPL David Lee K/3/4

At 2200 and 2230, Co K/3/4 picked up enemy movement at XD848383 and XD849381 (Khe Sanh Village) with a SID [Seismic Intrusion Device] at their position.[3495]

[On 25 June 1968, a patrol from D/1/4 "..found remains of a downed C-123 with 15 bodies. Grave Registration assistance was used in recovery. Also found were 30 M-16 rifles, 3 SRBs and other equipment including helmets and cartridge belts."[3496]]

[At noon on 24 June 1968, US Special Forces A Team A-101, which had been at Lang Vei, became Camp Mai Loc (at YD089512) with 13 USASF, 18 VNSF, 114 CSF, and 210 MSF.[3497]]

28 JUNE 1968

GORDON, PFC Richard Dale H&S/1/1
VANDERHEID, LCPL Mark Edward B/1/1

LCPL Vanderheid was KIA on "Hill 881N from incoming mortar round which also knocked down the VC effigy left by 26th Marines."[3498]

29 JUNE 1968

BROWN, LCPL Dennis Lee G/2/1
GERO, CPL John Anthony G/2/3
WAFER, PFC David Earl G/2/4

From the diary of Don Dennis: "June 29:..Tonight about 2130, Brown the Machine Gunner who came over the same time as me shot himself in the head. They don't think he'll live. They don't know how it happened... June 30:... We heard today that Spanky died on the way to Dong Ha. He was a great little guy. It's a shame."[3499]

At 0945H, a patrol from G/2/4 were taken under fire by small arms and 82mm mortars from an undetermined size enemy unit (XD956470 to XD952473). While maneuvering on the enemy, one Marine tripped a booby trap. Supporting arms were called, and the enemy broke contact at 1430H. The Marine unit suffered 2 KIA and 3 WIA (evacuated).[3500]

30 JUNE 1968

BUFFINGTON, LCPL Fred I/3/4
POWELL, LCPL John Dee W/1/11

LCPL Powell, of Weapons Co., 1/11, was killed by incoming on Hill 861 where W/1/11 had 2 4.2-inch mortars, designated as WHISKY XRAY. 4 NVA 82mm mortars hit the area, one of which landed in gun pit #2. Two other Marines, SGT John B. Thomas, Jr., and PFC Michael H. Girton, were WIA (evacuated).[3501]

At 0900 a Co "M" OP observed 5 NVA near XD876393 (2 clicks E of the old French Fort, about 100 meters S of Rt. #9) moving west. The information was passed to Co I/3/4 who had a patrol moving toward that area. At 0935, the I/3/4 patrol made contact with partially dug-in NVA and called in artillery and gunships. A sweep of the area found 7 fresh fighting holes. The patrol continued and discovered 2 USMC bodies about 1 month old (which were sent to 2nd Plt, Co M/3/4 location and later to 1st Marines). The I/3/4 patrol returned to its defensive position (XD874384) at 1830.[3502]

At about 1700H, 6 NVA mortars exploded in the area of I/3/4. These were immediately brought under fire

---

[3493] 3rd MarDiv, Critique, op. cit., pp. 43, 47, and 59.
[3494] CG, 3rd MarDiv 220200Z/Jun68, Personal for LtGen Rosson from MGen Davis, Subj: Operations at Khe Sanh, in 3rd MarDiv Msgs Etc June 1968 file, Encl (130).
[3495] 3/4 ComdC June, 1968, pp. III-5 and IV-11. The official reports do not indicate any KIA.
[3496] 1/4 ComdC June, 1968, Part II, p. 3. [Note: The quantity of KIA and designation of a C-123 argues strongly that this was the 6 March 1968 crash. See pp. 234-235 (footnotes 2182-2186) for other searches of the area.
[3497] HQ, 5th Special Forces Group (Airborne), 1st Special Forces, Operational Report of 5th Special Forces Group (Abn) for Period Ending 31 July 1968, 15 August 1968, pp. 3 & 14.
[3498] Steve Busby email to David Doehrman, 11 June 2003, 6:21 PM.
[3499] Don Dennis, "Thirteen Months in the Life of a Rifleman," We Remember, The Vietnam Sotires of the Men of 2nd Battalion, 1st Marines, Vietnam Era 2nd Bn, 1st Mar, Rockbridge Baths, Va." Leatherneck Cottage Press, 1993, p. 222.
[3500] 2/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 11.
[3501] Unit Diary (107mm battery, 1/11, RUC-11317) for 30 June 1968 (in letter from George Schamberger, 24 Nov 1991); ComdC 1/11, June, 1968, Encl (1), p. 7 (in letter from Ron Taylor, 6 June 1996); Ron Taylor, email posting on Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board, posted 11 July 2001 at 11:37:15 PM; Letter from George J. Schamberger, 24 Nov 1991 [Schamberger was a CPL with W/1/11 at the time]; Letter from Edward M. Landry, 22 Jan 1991 [Landry was with W/1/11 and Powell was a good friend; Landry was transferred on 5 June 1968]
[3502] 3/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-12; 3rd MarDiv COC 011341Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #305, Para 3.A. and I.

by friendly artillery directed by Capt Merlyn Sexton, CO of I/3/4. Between 1700 to 1900, the NVA fired 82mm mortars.[3503] Then, at 2040H, Co I/3/4 received about 15 rounds of artillery from Co Roc and at 2045H, an additional 32 rounds of 130mm field artillery from Co Roc, the latter resulting in 1 USMC KIA (LCPL Buffington).[3504] "Because of Capt Sexton's quick actions and effectiveness he already had his men prepared and ready for the enemy attack. When the enemy artillery came in, the men were deep in their fighting holes. Capt Sexton's foresight of preparing his men prevented many casualties from being taken. After the enemy artillery lifted and an enemy attack was imminent, Capt. Sexton immediately called in supporting arms to cover all avenues of approach and enemy assembly areas."[3505] The battle was to continue into the next day.

01 JULY 1968

GARCIA, PFC Ludin	I/3/4
HESTER, PFC William Walter	I/3/4
LE COMPTE, LCPL John Ault	1/1
RUIZ, LCPL Thomas	H&S/2/1
WILLIAMS, LCPL James Alec	D/1/1

TEMPLE LAKE INDIA (I/3/4) had occupied its position (XD874384, FOXTROT RIDGE) from 19 June in terrain consisting of steep hills and heavy vegetation. The company conducted patrols in connection with the deactivation of KSCB. Then, during the evening of 30 June, the company received incoming mortars and artillery.

At 0020H on 01 July, one NVA was spotted through the starlight scope at the outer edge of the perimeter and taken under fire.[3506] At 0325H, I/3/4 received a light probe by an unknown number of NVA throwing ChiCom grenades at the lines. The company returned small arms and M-26 grenades and called in an artillery mission. At 0406H, I/3/4 spotted 5 NVA near the wire at XD870382, throwing grenades. The Marines again fired back with small arms and grenades, along with 5 rounds of 60mm mortar. At 0430H, the unit spotted 1 NVA at XD877380 crawling towards the LP. The LP fired on the NVA and pulled back 25 yards to establish a new position. At 0455H, the LP observed movement at XD877380 of at least 5 NVA. The LP took the enemy under fire resulting in at least 1 NVA KIA.[3507] The Listening Post then withdrew to the company position having taken no casualties.[3508]

Movement was then detected in the 2nd Platoon area on the eastern hill. Captain Sexton's foresight in adding this hill to the company perimeter on 19 June, now prevented the NVA from gaining a critical piece of terrain.[3509] At 0500H, the main NVA attack struck the southeastern portion of the 2nd Platoon (XD876382) while a supporting attack continued in the saddle between I-1 and I-3 in an attempt to isolate I-2. Some 900 rounds of 60mm mortar and M-79 40mm rounds limited the NVA's penetration to the immediate areas of the inner tactical wire. I-2 quickly repulsed the attack while artillery was brought so close, shrapnel was flying into the perimeter,[3510] as SGT David R. Turnage, the acting Platoon Commander of I-3, left the safety of his own position on numerous occasions to shout encouragement to all his troops and direct fire on the enemy as well as move the wounded to safety.[3511]

At 0630H, I/3/4 observed an estimated NVA company in groups of 5 – 20 outside their wire at XD874382, and at 0725H, received an attack from an estimated NVA company at XD876380 and XD875380 supported by 60mm and 82mm mortars and 130mm field guns from Co Roc, causing 1 USMC KIA and 2 WIA (evacuated). At 0900H, a I/3/4 patrol made contact causing 1 USMC KIA.[3512]

Gunships were requested and fixed wing ran air strikes on the enemy positions. Capt Edward N. Engle, flying as FINGERPRINT 33, the TAC(A), observed I/3/4 on the top of a ridge and the main body of the NVA force on an adjacent ridge about 150 meters from the friendly position (at XD879379). The NVA were dug in well, and artillery and direct fire weapons seemed to be ineffective due to terrain features. Although the weather in the area seemed to prohibit air, Capt Engle requested one scramble in hopes that the weather would improve before the arrival of the flight. About 2 ½ hours elapsed before the air request could be answered and Capt Engle was getting low on fuel with no relief on station. At this time RINGNECK 520 checked in. Although the weather had improved somewhat, it was still 1200-foot overcast

---

[3503] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Navy Cross file of Capt Merlyn Arthur Sexton.
[3504] 3/4 ComdC June, 1968, Encl (1), p. IV-12; 3rd MarDiv COC 011341Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #305, Para. 3.A.
[3505] Statement of SGT David R. Turnage in Navy Cross Medal file of Capt Merlyn Arthur Sexton.
[3506] 3rd MarDiv COC 011341Z./Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #305, Para. 3.E.
[3507] Ibid., Para. 3.I.
[3508] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Navy Cross file on Capt Merlyn Arthur Sexton.
[3509] Ibid.
[3510] Ibid.
[3511] Statements of 2/Lt Richard J. Bartolomea and SSGT Robert F. Fully, Jr., in Bronze Star Medal file of SGT David R. Turnage.
[3512] PCV TOC/III MAF COC 021548Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #306, Para. 3.B.; 1st Mar ComdC, July, 1968, Encl (1), p. II-C-3, Para. f.

with 3-4 miles visibility, a condition especially hazardous in the Khe Sanh area due to the rugged terrain.[3513]

RINGNECK 520 consisted of a flight of 2 F4 Phantom aircraft of Marine Fighter/Attack Squadron 542 with Maj Wales Scribner Dixon leading the flight withy his RIO [Radar Intercept Officer] 1/Lt Bullock. The second F-4 was piloted by 1/Lt Vernon L. Vanhise with his RIO, 1/Lt D. L. Groothuis. Maj Dixon's aircraft was armed with 12 DELTA-1-A (Mk 81, 250-lb. general purpose, low-drag snake eye bombs) while 1/Lt Vanhise's aircraft was armed with 4 DELTA-9 (MK-77, 500-lb. napalm) plus one DELTA-24 (MK-4, gun pod).[3514]

"As we started inland just north of Hue, it immediately became apparent that weather conditions were going to play a large role.. Although the coastal plains were relatively clear.. such was not the case over the mountainous terrain of the Khe Sanh area. There existed a layer of low broken to overcast clouds covering the entire area.. Since visual navigation was impossible, Lt Groothuis quickly and skillfully used TACAN and ADF cuts to direct us to the target area. We made radio contact with FINGERPRINT 33 who started the target brief while we proceeded to the target area. He stated that a well entrenched force of NVA of considerable strength had a group of our troops on the adjacent ridgeline pinned down with automatic weapons fire. Artillery and returned ground fire seemed to have no significant effect on the enemy and he was forced to ask for air support.. He cautioned us that the NVA were dug in on a ridgeline about 300 to 400 meters above the valley floor and there was only about 1200 feet of clearance between the valley floor and the base of the clouds. He also cautioned that many of the surrounding mountain peaks extended into the cloud deck and were completely obscured. He gave us a strict run-in heading of 040° and insisted that we adhere to it because of the close proximity of our troops who were only 50 – 100 meters to the left of the enemy position....

"Major Dixon rolled in hot and I observed heavy ground fire coming from the ridgeline. He dropped a pair of Snake-Eyes right on target and pulled up into the relative safety of the clouds. I rolled in 'hot' right behind him and could see ground fire coming from an old bomb crater. That's where I wanted to put my napalms and I assume that's where they went because after I pulled up into the clouds, the TACA went kind of wild and said that NVA were crawling and running all over the ridgeline. Contrary to existing SOP which dictates that we make no more than 1 or 2 runs when under heavy ground fire, we determined that the existing conditions warranted the risk of additional runs. Major Dixon rolled in on his second and I again got a visual on him just before he released. He accurately placed several more Snake-Eye bombs right on target despite the still existing ground fire. I was right behind him with my remaining napes and scorched 'Charlie' again. Major Dixon made one more run and placed his remaining bombs with devastating accuracy on the ridge. I rolled in again, this time with the MK-4 gunpod and started walking the rounds up the ridge. I fired out about 100 rounds when the gun jammed, so I pulled up through the clouds High and Dry."[3515]

A subsequent search of the battle area on 02 July disclosed 212 NVA KIA, 77 weapons captured, 150 fresh fighting holes, 2 60mm mortar pits (5-ft. diameter) on the forward slope of the hill (XD879379) and one 82mm pit (3-ft. diameter) on the reverse slope, 8 rolls of comm. wire, 8 bloodied helmets, and assorted gear. Friendly casualties for the skirmish were 7 USMC KIA and 35 WIA.[3516]

When a platoon from Co D/1/1 arrived at Hill 689 (XD803409) OPCON to 2/1,[3517] the men were briefed that their mission was to be a security for the hill, provide LPs, and conduct local patrols around the base of Hill 689. "They couldn't send them out much further because of the increase of the mortar rounds that we would be taking in and we would receive quite a few casualties."[3518] D-1 was conducting one of these patrols on 1 July when they ran into a NVA ambush by a reinforced platoon that had been set up at the base of the hill, firing from well-concealed and well-fortified bunkers and fighting holes. The patrol (consisting of only 16 men)[3519] ran into NVA and sustained 2 Marines KIA and 5 WIA.[3520]

A recovery patrol on 2 July made contact with enemy units and simultaneously began to receive heavy incoming 60mm, 82mm, and 120mm mortar fire. One body was successfully recovered but the enemy had set up snipers and prepared an ambush[3521] around the body of LCPL [3513] Statement of Capt Edward N. Engle, in Distinguished Flying Cross Medal file of Maj Wales Scribner Dixon.

[3514] Statement of 1/Lt Vernon L. Vanhise in Distinguished Flying Cross Medal file of Maj Wales Scribner Dixon.

[3515] Ibid.

[3516] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Navy Cross file of Capt Merlyn Arthur Sexton; 3rd MarDiv COC 050931Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #312, Para. 2.A.

[3517] 2/1 ComdC July, 1968.

[3518] Comments of CPL James M. Grimsley, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081. Grimsley was a radioman in D/1/1.

[3519] Comments of CPL James M. Grimsley, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081. Grimsley was a radioman in D/1/1, and notes that the patrol had proceeded about half way around the hill when it was hit by small arms sniper fire and a few incoming 82mm mortar rounds.

[3520] 2/1 ComdC July, 1968.

[3521] CO, 1st Marines 2nd End on CMC SpdLtr DNA/mls, 3 Oct 1968, 1/GMF/eew, 5860, of 20 Oct 1968, Subj: Congressional Correspondence; case of Lance Corporal Jerry D. Dewberry, 2387088, USMC (deceased); in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #177.

John Ault LeCompte,[3522] and the Marines were unable to bring the body back due to heavy incoming. The recover mission resulted in 13 more USMC WIA.[3523] Having sustained numerous casualties, the platoon patrol began to crawl back with the casualties they could drag and carry as mortars on 689 fired smoke to cover their movement.[3524]

LCPL Robert E. Williams left his own fighting position and commenced making his way to assist movement of the WIA. While making his way, he crossed an open, fire-swept area and received a severe wound. Disregarding his own wound, he kept pushing forward and made it to the wounded Marines and then began to carry them to safety. He insisted that others be cared for before his own wounds could be treated. He later succumbed to his own wounds.[3525]

Noticing that the WP [60mm mortar white phosphorus] was ineffective and off target, SSGT Herbert George Baker, the Platoon Commander for D-2, placed himself in an exposed position at the front of the hill to call in accurately-placed smoke screening and high explosive fire on the NVA positions.[3526]

At 1720, H/2/1 on KSCB received 10 130mm field gun artillery rounds from Co Roc killing one Marine (LCPL Thomas RUIZ), wounding 6 (evacuated) and destroying one 106mm RR.[3527]

[3522] Statements of 1st Sgt Philip J. Imbrenda, CPL Andrew A. Ruiz, and SGT James R. Johnson in Library of Congress MIA microfilm file on LCPL Jerry D. Dewberry, Reel #288, Folder #177. Dewberry is officially listed as KIA on 5 July 1968.

[3523] 2/1 ComdC July, 1968, Part III; 3rd MarDiv COC 050931Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #312, Para. 3.F.

[3524] 3rd MarDiv COC 050931Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #312, Para. 2.F.; Statements of SSGT Edward L. Fontaine and SSGT Herbert G. Baker in Bronze Star Medal file of SSGT Daniel J. Bott. Bott was directing the supporting fire from the perimeter when he observed the Marines dragging their wounded. He immediately left his position and advanced toward the casualties, moving through the fire-swept area, and began to assist moving the dead and wounded to the perimeter.

[3525] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, and Citation in Bronze Star Medal file (posthumous) of LCPL Robert E. Williams. Officially, Williams is listed as KIA on 5 July 1968, a date in which D/1/1 lost many KIA in a local patrol at Hill 689. It is possible that Williams DOW on 5 July from wounds received on 1 July. The BSM award file indicates the action occurring on 2 July. The Coffelt database for the KIA of Vietnam lists LCPL James Alec Williams as KIA on 1 July and a member of D/1/1, and lists LCPL Robert Eugene Williams as KIA on 5 July.

[3526] Statements of SSGT Edward L. Fontaine and 1/Lt Daniel L. Anderson in Silver Star Medal file of SSGT Herbert George Baker.

[3527] 1st Mar ComdC, July, 1968, Encl (1), p. II-C-3, Para. n.

02 JULY 1968

OROPEZA, PFC Manuel Garcia G/2/4

On 2 July 1968, G/2/4 was moving in dense jungle, rocky and mountainous terrain[3528] when the patrol discovered a 82mm mortar pit and 10 82mm mortar rounds near XD956464. At 1130, the Company made contact with an unknown sized NVA unit at XD956463 which threw grenades at the Marines and fired 20 rounds of 82mm on the patrol.[3529] PFC Michael G. Castle relates: "After assaulting the bunker and killing one enemy and wounding two others, we started down in a very thick jungle valley.. to get the 2 enemy which we wounded and got away. As First Platoon started into the valley, we had to go through an open area in which the enemy F.O. saw us. When half of First Platoon got down into the valley, we got heavy mortar fire from the enemy. At this time, 3 Marines were wounded, and Corpsman Dipper ran back up through the heavy wooded terrain to their aid. Doc Dipper then called out for help; he said, 'I need 4 men, Oropeza is hit and cannot move.'... As I was coming up the hill I could see Dipper working with Oropeza. When rounds would come in he would stay by his side, laying over him to protect him from being wounded again. I could see Dipper bleeding from his arm bad, and his leg bleeding through his trousers... I could hear Oropeza yelling to get him out of there... Oropeza was fighting him off and would not let Dipper help him... I yelled to him and told him to get out of there, but he wouldn't listen. He stayed right there... He endangered his own life by staying with Oropeza, but he kept this man alive for that period of time anyway."[3530]

[Locations of units at Khe Sanh: 1st Mar (at Ca Lu), 1/1 (XD820450), A/1/1 (XD803443), B/1/1 (XD777437), C/1/1 (XD820450), D/1/1 (XD803408), 2/1 CP (KSCB), F/2/1 (KSCB), G/2/1 (XD822402), H/2/1 (KSCB), 3/4 CP (XD895406), I/3/4 (XD873384), K/3/4 (XD847394), L/3/4 (XD917418), M/3/4 (XD895406, 3/9 (XD844416), M & I/3/9 (XD844416), L/3/9 (XD830415).[3531]

03 JULY 1968

CARTER, LCPL John Lewis D/1/1

[3528] NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 11 Aug 1968, in Bronze Star Medal file of HN Raymond H. Dipper.

[3529] 2/4 ComdC July, 1968, Part III, Encl (1), p. 8.

[3530] Statement of PFC Michael G. Castle in Bronze Star Medal file of HN Raymond H. Dipper

[3531] 3rd MarDiv COC 050935Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #314, Para. 1.

At 0430H, D/1/1 at XD802408 received 4 incoming rifle grenades from the vicinity of XD802411 resulting in 1 USMC KIA.[3532]

04 JULY 1968

BECKWITH, LCPL William Arnold	3/4
FERNANDEZ, PFC Dennis	I/3/4
PINALES, LCPL Lawrence	M/3/9[3533]
SKANSON, PFC Louis James	M/3/9

July began with the CP of 3/4 at LZ HAWK (XD895403) and Co I/3/4 on FOXTROT RIDGE (XD875383) in a defensive position with 2 platoons occupying the main terrain feature and 1 platoon in defense of a small knoll to the east. The two positions were separated by a narrow saddle approximately 100 meters long and not physically occupied. Just past midnight (at 0005H), several NVA were observed skirting the edges of the perimeter and Co "I" began to receive light probes at approximately 0320.[3534] At 0430H, I/3/4 at XD873383 came under attack by an estimated NVA company from the east, supported by RPGs, resulting in 2 USMC KIA and 13 WIA (evacuated).[3535] Movement continued throughout the night and at 0630H, I/3/4 came under attack by an estimated NVA battalion supported by automatic weapons, 60mm and 82mm mortars, and 130mm field gun firing from Co Roc. The Marines responded with 106mm RR, artillery, fixed wing and Huey gunships throughout the night and day, accounting for 54 NVA KIA. A sweep by I-2 accounted for 93 NVA KIA. At 2230H, enemy movement increased and 3rd Platoon reported hearing digging and pounding to the south of their lines.[3536]

At 1130H, a Marine from Co "M" while on a working party struck one dud round with his E-tool resulting in 1 KIA and 4 WIA.[3537] Sgt Robert Nordstrom writes: "I was the Platoon Sgt. of 2nd Platoon that had the task of policing up the area when one of my men used his entrenching tool to scoop up some trash on the ground; instead he hit the 'dud' just under the surface of the ground. Mike 3/9 men killed were: Lawrence Pinales, Louis Skanson, and Dennis Harms (DOW 8/18/68)."[3538] John Bosley "was within 50 yards.. when it happened. I thought 2 Marines were killed and their names were Scanson [should be "Skanson"] and Pinales."[3539]

05 JULY 1968

BAKER, PFC Tony Anderson	K/3/4
BROWN, CPL Richard Samuel	G/2/1[3540]
DEWBERRY, LCPL Jerry Don	D/1/1
DIEUDONNE, PFC Carroll Stephen	K/3/4
DILWORTH, LCPL Arthur William	D/1/1
HEALY, PVT Louis Glenn	F/2/3
HOPKINS, CPL Gary Wayne	H&S/1/1
JONES, LCPL Jack Pahl	K/3/4
JONES, PFC Joseph Richard	D/1/1
LANGLEY, SGT David Francis	D/1/1
REYES, LCPL William	D/1/1
SANDERS, LCPL Gerald Jude	D/1/1
TAYLOR, LCPL James	G/2/1
THOMPSON, LCPL Louis Kenneth	D/1/1
WILLIAMS, LCPL Robert Eugene	D/1/1
WOODARD, PFC Jon Robert	1/1

At first light (0615)[3541] on 5 July 1968[3542] another patrol (consisting of the entire First Platoon, which now consisted of 21 Marines)[3543] was dispatched from D/1/1 to retrieve the body of LCPL John A. LeCompte[3544] (KIA 1 July 1968). Again encountering NVA fire from an estimated NVA platoon dug in at XD679407,[3545] the point man, PFC Danny F. Nelson, remembers "Everybody was dropping. [We] tried to get out the best way we could."[3546] CPL James M. Grimsley: "..the order came down from higher-ups... and our people didn't want to go down [the hill] because they knew it was suicide. They saw that the air strikes had negative results.. So D-1 went down again.. and received the same incoming, ex-

---

[3532] 1st Mar ComdC July, 1968, Encl (1), p. II-C-4, Para. w.

[3533] LCPL Pinales is listed in the Coffelt database as a member of III MAF. Ray Felle and John Bosley both note him as a member of 3/9 (which, of course, is part of III MAF).

[3534] 3/4 ComdC, July, 1968, Encl (1), pp. I-1 and IV-4.

[3535] 3rd MarDiv COC 060203Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #317, Para. 3.D.

[3536] 3/4 ComdC, July, 1968, Encl (1), pp. I-1 and IV-4.

[3537] 3/9 ComdC July, 1968, S3 Journal, 4 July 1968, Ser #3; 3rd MarDiv COC 061353Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #319, Para. 3.G.; 1st Mar ComdC July, 1968, Encl (1), p. II-C-5, Para. aa.

[3538] Quoted in letter from Ray Felle, undated. PFC Lloyd Harms is listed in the Coffelt database as a member of D/1/3 and KIA 18 Aug 1968. (However, there are some other discrepancies in this database, and Harms may have been DOW as indicated).

[3539] John Bosley, email on Khe Sanh Veterans Home Page Message Board, posted 1 July 20o01, 6:52:59 PM.

[3540] Listed as G/2/7 in the Coffelt database.

[3541] 1st Mar ComdC, July, 1968, Encl (1), p. II-C-5, para. cc.

[3542] 3rd MarDiv COC 061352Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #322, Para. 3.C.

[3543] CO, 1st Mar 2nd End on CMC SpdLtr DNA/mls of 3Oct 68, 1/GMF/eew, 5860, 20 Oct 1968, Subj: Congressional Correspondence; case of Lance Corporal Jerry D. Dewberry, 2387088, USMC (deceased) in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #177.

[3544] Statement of LCPL Daniel T. Nelson in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #177.

[3545] 1st Mar ComdC, July, 1968, Encl (1), p. II-C-5, para. cc.

[3546] Comments of PFC Danny F. Nelson, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081.

cept this time a larger increase in mortar fire down around the bodies."[3547]

Sgt David F. Langley volunteered to accompany the patrol, although not requested to do so. D-1 entered a U-shaped ambush that lashed out at the Marines with heavy automatic rifle fire and accurate 82mm mortars, causing numerous casualties. Sgt. Langley, hearing the call for Corpsman, reached the wounded Marines and got them into a secure area. Then he proceeded to a bomb crater in which 5 Marines had sought refuge and were pinned down by heavy automatic rifle and .50 caliber fire. He proceeded to lead these men out to the left flank of the bomb crater, but caught a sniper's round in his left side. Although under intense pain, he continued to crawl and lead his men to safety. Then a burst of automatic rifle fire opened up on him and killed Sgt Langley, but not until he had enabled 5 Marines to live.[3548]

The Corpsman was shot twice in the head but made it back to the D/1/1 lines. Only 4 returned who were not wounded from this patrol; the rest were WIA or KIA. There were 7 more bodies now, abandoned at the base of the hill. A reactionary force was dispatched to assist, "..but there was nothing we could do because every time we sent men down there they just got hit again."[3549]

LCPL Jerry D. Dewberry, a rifleman in the front element of the recovery patrol of D/1/1 (about the 3rd man from LCPL Nelson, the Point and carrying a radio),[3550] had moved about 75 meters from the unit's perimeter wire when he was hit several times in the chest and fell dead in a bomb crater (XD802409) as the remnant of the recovery team returned to the unit's perimeter wire.[3551]

Most of the WIA were able to crawl back to the wires under their own power and assistance from those on the lines. LCPL Nelson (the point man) and 5 other Marines, 2 of which were wounded, "were pinned down for approximately 6 hours in bomb craters, getting up occasionally to fire at the enemy and make our way to the other bomb craters closer to our lines. As we were moving, I spotted LCPL Dewberry's body in a bomb crater. He was dead. He must have got it with an automatic AK-47 burst judging from the straight line of bullet holes from his chest to his neck. The jets started dropping napalm, and I thought this was the last chance we would get to make it back up the hill, so we took it and with the help of God and luck, we made it... All of the men that died on 5 July 1968 died trying to retrieve one body."[3552]

By now there were a total of 8 bodies left at the base of the hill, and Co D/1/1, critically short of "effectives," requested assistance. Co G/2/1 moved its headquarters element and an additional platoon to Hill 689 to assume control of the extraction effort. Just prior to darkness, after all available fixed wing assets had been focused on the target, 2 platoons of G/2/1 maneuvered to the outer edges of the kill zone and managed to recover 3 bodies of D/1/1's MIA. The recovery unit then came under very accurate small arms sniper fire and the decision was made to stop the illumination and withdraw under cover of darkness. This was done; no additional casualties were taken.[3553]

When LCPL Joseph C. Jaynes, monitoring the air net in the COC of 2/1 at KSCB, heard that the D/1/1 Forward Air Controller was killed, he immediately volunteered to take the dead Marine's place. Landing in an unfamiliar zone and under fire, LCPL Jaynes quickly found his way to the dead operator's radio and by 1020H was on the air net talking with the AO, preparing to call in air strikes. Throughout the rest of the day, that night, and the next day, Jaynes controlled numerous air-strikes, gunships, and SPOOKY aircraft, and coordinated the air attack with supporting artillery, continually exposing himself to enemy fire in order to adjust the ordnance and warn the rest of the Marines to take cover as he brought air strikes on the perimeter wire.[3554]

Napalm, 500-lb. bombs, artillery—everything that could be obtained, plastered the area of the bodies. A sampling of the strikes included: 2 A-4s from MAG-13 fired 4 ZUNI rockets and dropped 6 500-lb. snake-eyes on XD801410 at 051700H. At 051715H, 2 A-4s from MAG-13 dropped 8 500-lb. bombs on XD801410. At 051725H, 2 Marine F-4s dropped 12 500-lb. snake-eyes, 6 500-lb. fire bombs, and one 5-in. ZUNI on XD801410.[3555] From 070001H – 070600H, 178,600 pounds of ordnance was dropped on targets around Hill 689 and south of Hill 471 in 43 sorties causing 4 secondary explosions.[3556]

[3547] Comments of James M. Grimsley, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081.

[3548] Statement of PFC Daniel T. Nelson in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of Sgt David F. Langley.

[3549] Comments of CPL James M. Grimsley, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081.

[3550] Statement of LCPL Daniel T. Nelson in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #177.

[3551] Case Summary, RefNo 1223, 16 Dec 1975, in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #177. Both CPL Dennis M. Coelho and PFC Daniel T. Nelson witnessed Dewberry being shot and killed by small arms fire. "They tried to bring body back but could not due to heavy enemy fire. Some bodies were recovered from the rear element but none from the front element of the patrol." [CG 1st MarDiv 270745Z/Sep68 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #177].

[3552] Statement of LCPL Daniel T. Nelson in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #177.

[3553] Comments of CAPT Clyde E. Woods, HQMC Oral History Tape #3662. Woods was CO of G/2/1.

[3554] Statement of Capt Stanley M. Joseph in Bronze Star Medal file on LCPL Joseph C. Jaynes.

[3555] 3rd MarDiv COC 061350Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #324, Para. 3.A., B., and C.

[3556] 3rd MarDiv COC 090250Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #329, Para. 4.

At 2230H, on the night of 11 July 1968, a recovery team consisting of 25 Marine volunteers (most of which came from A/1/1) swept the entire area and retrieved 7 bodies. Two other bodies were observed to be hit and disintegrated by air and artillery strikes on the area.[3557] "As a result of the almost continuous bombardment from artillery and air strikes, which included the use of napalm, most of the bodies were dismembered, badly burned, or mutilated by enemy small arms fire and shrapnel from friendly artillery fire and air strikes. Due to the difficulties involved in a night recovery and the scattered condition of the remains in the area, the recovery team returned with only 7 of the fallen Marines. Three Marine bodies were not accounted for. It is believed that they were completely destroyed by the bombing."[3558]

[At 0630H, Bn 2/1 began its preparations for departure from Khe Sanh. Co F/2/1 began its lift to Quang Tri at 0745H, completing the move by 0815H. At 0830H, the 2/1 Command Group lifted to Mai Xa Thi, completing its move at 0900H, followed by H/2/1's lift-out. At 1715H, E/2/1 lifted from Hill 552 followed at 0805 by G/2/3 from Hill 689 to LZ BLUE JAY (XD998478). E/2/3 lifted out of the LZ to Mai Xa Thi; all units arrived there by 1910H. At 071000H, G/2/3 lifted from LZ BLUE JAY to Mai Xa Thi completing the movement of 2/1 from Khe Sanh.[3559]

The concept was to evacuate KSCB itself first in order to prevent NVA use of hill outposts while it was being evacuated.[3560] The final stand would be on Hill 689, itself a precarious position. "Although Hill 881S was the westernmost hill outpost, Hill 689 was the most exposed and easiest for the enemy to assault, especially if human wave tactics were employed from multiple directions at the same time. Next easiest was Hill 861 becauswe of the great number of protected and hidden approach routes that could only be hit by very high-angle indirect fires while allowing enemy forces to get very close to the position. The hardest to assault was Hill 950, but the NVA kept trying time and again. On Hill 689 there were few usable entry/exit points,m maybe two usable water points, just about all of which could be brought under fire by the NVA from afar and from close in, with little or no friendly "direct fire" support by any other position. Thus it was easy for a small NVA force to invest any Marine patrol coming off the main position, especially if a patrol had to use the same route near the hill many, many times."[3561]]

06 JULY 1968

KILDERRY, LCPL Michael Joseph C/1/4
MAHONEY, LCPL Thomas P III B/1/1

LCPL Kilderry DOW received during the attack on LZ LOON on 5 June 1968 when he was hit in his side with a small piece of shrapnel that penetrated both lungs, his liver, and some other organs.[3562]

At noon, 06 July, CO, 1st Marines directed that the remainder of the regiment lift to Hill 689 to assist Co D as G/2/1 secured a LZ on the eastern slope of the hill.[3563] The lift was scheduled to begin at 1500H; however, at 1515H, Co B/1/1 reported a Marine was missing from the perimeter on Hill 881S.[3564]

The tragic loss of LCPL Mahoney probably began before he enlisted in the Marine Corps. His father, Lt Thomas P. Mahoney, II, USAF, had been killed in the Korean War.[3565] During his high school years, he fell in love with his sweetheart, Linda, and after graduation, Linda's wealthy parents shipped her off to an exclusive Rhode Island school, Vernon Court. For Mahoney it wasn't a high-school fling, but serious.[3566] In May, 1967, as both Mahoney and his good high-school friend, Michael Archer, were about to depart for boot camp, Archer had a dream in which Mahoney was killed on Hill 881. (At the time, the 1967 Hill Battles at Khe Sanh were raging and were in the news, and Archer dismissed the dream as a dream mind's mingling of the news with their departure for service in the Marine Corps,[3567] but like so many other premonitions indicated throughout this book, perhaps there was more to it.) Just days before his death, he received a "Dear John" letter from his sweetheart, Linda, in which she said he was "a baby killer" and "I can't believe I ever cared for you. I never want to hear from you again."[3568] Archer attributes this letter as a probable contributing cause of Mahoney's death: "Knowing his feelings for the girl, I can imagine that he was distracted to some degree. I don't know if it contributed to his seem-

---

[3557] 3rd MarDiv COC 130646Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #347, Para. 5.
[3558] CO, 1st Mar 2nd End on CMC SpdLtr DNA/mls of 3Oct 68, 1/GMF/eew, 5860, 20 Oct 1968, Subj: Congressional Correspondence; case of Lance Corporal Jerry D. Dewberry, 2387088, USMC (deceased) in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #177.
[3559] 2/1 ComdC July, 1968, Pt. III.
[3560] Email from Capt Robert A. Black to Terry Charbonneau, in Charbonneau letter of 11 July 2006.
[3561] Ibid.
[3562] Conversation with Terry Tillery, 5 May 1994. Kilderry was Tillery's best friend at the time.
[3563] 1st Mar ComdC July, 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-6; Comments of CAPT Clyde E. Woods, HQMC Oral History Tape #3662. Woods was CO of G/2/1.
[3564] 1st Mar ComdC, July, 1968, Encl (1), p. l-II-6, Para. (4).
[3565] Letter from Michael Archer, 17 Feb 2004. Archer was a very good friend of Mahoney during these years; both attended St. Mary's High School. Mahoney was 6 when his father died.
[3566] Archer, Murmurs, unpublished memoir, 11 May 2001, Reno, Nevada, pp. 31-32.
[3567] Ibid., p. 206.
[3568] Ibid., p. 210; Letter from Archer, 17 Feb 2004, cited.

ingly poor judgment in going 30 meters outside of the interior wire to defecate. We will never know."[3569]

In the middle of February, 1968, the 325C Division, which operated west of KSCB during the siege battle, was replaced by the 66th Regiment, and on 12 June 1968, the 264th NVA Regiment replaced the entire 304th Division with the mission of operating in that area.[3570] The history of the 264th Regiment,[3571] records that on 5 July 1968, a team led by Nguyen Van Luong advanced close to Hill 845 [on US tactical maps, Hill 881-South], just outside the main tactical wire perimeter. Others in the team included Tran Ngoc Long, Nguyen Van Din, Nong Van Haw, and Nguyen Tien Thanh. "At 1400.. we saw one American walking outside the entrance of the outpost. He wore a cement-colored uniform.[3572] His face was red and his eyes were blue like a mean animal. He was looking towards Mr. Luong's team. The sounds of AK weapons roared immediately, and the American fell. Mr. Luong and Mr. Long jumped out of their positions and dragged the American's body down. They placed the body in front of them to create an ambush for other Americans coming out of their bunkers."[3573]

A NVA squad of seven or less in a spider hole dug into wire on the steep slope of the hill just as it fell off to the northwest, had set up a killing zone covered by a dug-in machinegun to the north of the western gate of Hill 881S Alfa while 82mm mortars dug into deep positions on Hill 881-North covered them. "The location could never have been hit by USMC or Army artillery (even had it been available at KSCB) and it was very difficult to hit with organic 60mm or attached 81mm mortars. The only fire support that could hit it was helo gunships or very, very precise close air by Marine Air."[3574]

Around 1330, LCPL Mahoney (a Marine from the 1st Platoon of B/1/1, manning the western knoll of the Hill 881-South complex) came up to the OP manned by CPL Joe L. Maxedon asking for some toilet paper. Maxedon said he didn't have any and Mahoney left. About 15 minutes later, Maxedon heard Mahoney scream, "Someone help me," after which there was a burst of automatic fire which Maxedon believed to be AK-47.[3575] 1/Lt Francis B. Ahearn, commanding Platoon B-1 of 1/1, upon being informed by his Right Guide, CPL Fernandes, of the incident, ran to the OP on the west end of the perimeter, talked with CPL Maxedon, and immediately ordered a search of the entire hill for Mahoney. When he was not found, Lt Ahearn advised the Company Commander, Capt Robert A. Black, Jr., and a search party crawled outside the wire to search for Mahoney. "We crawled outside of the wire along a trail for about 8 meters and then made a left turn along the trail for about another 7 or 8 meters. It was there that we saw a pool of blood next to some fresh human waste that was Lance Corporal Mahoney's. The first man in the formation, PFC Delucie, looked to his right off of the trail and down the draw that dropped off to the north and said he saw LCPL Mahoney's body about 10 meters away. He started to crawl down the draw to get the body when an automatic weapon opened up and wounded him in the foot. We then pulled back to get the wounded PFC Delucie out and try again. The second time, PFC Bird was the first man in the formation and when he got to the same point as PFC Delucie.. he too saw the body.. the trousers were still pulled down to his feet and he could see the bare legs and buttocks. When PFC Bird started to crawl down the draw to get the body he was wounded in the neck by a burst of automatic weapons fire. We again pulled back to evacuate the wounded PFC Bird. Both times we preceeded our movement by prepping the area with CS riot gas from gas grenades and an E-8 gas launcher but we were unable to spot exactly where the automatic weapons fire was coming from."[3576]

1/Lt Louis T. Pierce, flying co-pilot on a Huey gunship, spotted Mahoney: "The body we spotted was definitely not living.. All that was visible was the lower half of the body (which was nude). The entire upper half of the body appeared to be completely separated from the lower half. I could not locate the upper half from the air."[3577]

Following air-strikes, another attempt was made to retrieve Mahoney's body, and the first man got to within about 1 meter of where he could look off to the right of the trail and down into the draw to see the body, and the NVA started throwing grenades. LCPL Williams and PFC Sherwin had already been wounded by these grenades, it was getting dark, and the word came over the net to evacuate the hill, that helicopters were on the way

---

[3569] Archer, Letter of 17 Feb 2004, cited.

[3570] Vide, note on 12 June 1968 in this book for details and sources.

[3571] Trung Doan 246[246th Regiment], translated in CH. JTF-FA, Honolulu HI 012012Z/Aug2003, in Library of Congress Photoduplication Service, in letter from Michael Archer, 7 August 2004. Note the discrepancy in the number of the regiment. Other NVA documents list it as the 264th, but this message indicates it as the 246th.

[3572] The green jungle uniform obviously soiled with the cream-colored clay of Hill 881-South (not the usual red laterite soil as found on KSCB).

[3573] CH, JTF-FA, Honolulu HI 012012Z/Aug68, cited.

[3574] Email from Robert A. Black to Terry Charbonneau, in letter from Charbonneau, 11 July 2006.

[3575] Statement of CPL Joe L. Maxedon in Library of Congress MIA microfilm, Reel #288, Folder #178.

[3576] Statement of 1/Lt Francis B. Ahearn, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #178.

[3577] Statement of 1/Lt Louis T. Pierce in Library of Congress MIA records, Reel #246. (In letter from Michael Archer, 17 February 2004).

to take B/1/1 to Hill 689 to help out D/1/1.[3578] 3 attempts had been made, and on each attempt, the recovery team, consisting of 4-5 Marines, including Lt Ahearn, a radio operator, and SSGT D. B. Mayotte (the B-1 Platoon Sergeant) had encountered small arms fire and grenades, and on each attempt additional Marines were wounded—16 WIA all together in the attempts. 881-South was also receiving incoming 82mm mortars during this entire time.[3579] Capt Black had been dashing across the open 600-meter space that separated the western knoll of the hill from the main portion of the hill several times while 82mm mortars plastered the area.

It was necessary for 1/1 to exit Khe Sanh, and to avoid a repetition of what happened with 1/9 when 26th Marines had to leave Khe Sanh (also to embark on other operations), the hill outposts of 861 and 881-South were abandoned to provide Marines to fortify "Dying Delta"[3580] on Hill 689. Capt Black received a radio call from Col Barrow: "You will break contact now, you will leave the site, you will leave and go on the choppers and go to the next hill. Period."[3581] Upon leaving Vietnam and during his debrief at Phu Bai, Capt Black recalls being informed that a recon team found a mound, a grave, and had recovered the body. He was therefore surprised that Mahoney was still listed as MIA several years later. He surmises that perhaps the recon team put the body in a body bag and graves registration had no ID tags for it, that it may have become an unidentified body.[3582]

His good friend, Michael Archer laments: "I think the world would be a better place had Tom lived. He was a young man with an already highly-refined sense of duty toward his family, friends, and nation."[3583] "He was outgoing and unselfish. He dressed well, and always drew lingering looks from the girls. He was idealistic, had honor, and was willing to fight for what he believed in. He was loyal to his friends."[3584]

Ironically, the death of LCPL Mahoney may have guaranteed the life of his comrades: "Paradoxically, Lt Frank Ahern and many of his men remain convinced.. that had Tom not walked outside the defensive barbed wire when he did, the close proximity [of the NVA force] to the landing zone would have almost assuredly allowed them to shoot down the evacuation helicopters... Ahern, who, throughout their numerous shared combat experiences, knew Mahoney to be a capable and courageous Marine, had been planning to recommend him for Officers' Candidate School."[3585]

07 JULY 1968

ANTONACE, LCPL John	C/1/1
BATTLE, LCPL William Alfred	H&S/1/1
DODSON, 1/Lt Robert Gerald	C/1/1
HORTON, PFC Robert Bernard	C/1/1
KOPP, PFC Patrick Daniel	H&S/1/1
PINSONNAULT, HM3 Richard Norman	C/1/1
ROWE, SGT Sharber Mayfield	C/1/1
SINGER, PFC Michael Ernest	D/1/1
STROUD, CPL Roger Lee	C/1/1
THOMAS, PFC Joseph Eugene	D/1/1

Co C/1/1 had been on Hill 558 from which it was moved by helicopter at approximately 1300 on 6 July to 689. It had been scheduled to move to Ca Lu, but with the developments on Hill 689, was sent there. The plan was to assemble the entire battalion and use Co B/1/1 (from Hill 881-South) as reserve, Co A/1/1 (from Hill 861) as a blocking force, while Co C/1/1 (from Hill 558) would sweep through the area and retrieve the bodies, then the entire battalion depart the following day. The first chopper to land at 689 received sniper fire, and as soon as Co C/1/1 disembarked from the choppers, 82mm mortars showered the area causing 2 platoons to remain at the base of the hill and 2 platoons on the hill. Divided, the Marines set in for the night, about 4 men to a hole.[3586]

The day began with a low cloud cover which precluded early utilization of close air support to silence the enemy mortars and attack the well entrenched enemy. Furthermore, the location of the enemy positions was such that all but high angle artillery fire could be applied on them. At 1500H, following a 90-minute air strike, Capt Henry J. Trautwein, Jr., CO of Company C/1/1, moved the company through the tactical wire on the southern portion of the perimeter, in front of Company D's lines to recover the bodies.[3587] C-1's 3rd Squad took the point with 2nd Squad in the middle and 1st Squad on the very right flank. C-3 was on line on the left side of C-1 while C-2 and H&S, who brought up the rear, were to retrieve the bodies. The Marines reached the base of Hill

---

[3578] Statement of 1/Lt Francis B. Ahearn, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #178.

[3579] Statement of CAPT Robert A. Black, Jr., in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #288, Folder #178.

[3580] "Dying Delta" was the nickname given to D/1/1 by Marines in 1/1, similar to "The Walking Dead" nickname given to 1/9. [Letter from CPL J. C. Scott, undated, but in response to reaching the Khe Sanh Veteran (Issue of Spring, 1993, chronology). Scott was with A-1 of 1/1, 3rd Squad and machineguns].

[3581] Conversation with Robert A. Black, Jr., 21 July 2004.

[3582] Ibid.

[3583] Michael Archer, letter of 17 February 2004.

[3584] Michael Archer, Mururms, op. cit., p. 32.

[3585] Michael Archer, "To Find a Wandering Soul," essay forwarded with his letter of 2 Feb 2008.

[3586] Comments of 2/Lt Joseph M. Fulginiti; Comments of CPL Stephen J. Dougherty, and Comments of GySgt Kenneth E. David, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081

[3587] 1/1 ComdC July, 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-6, Para. (7); 3rd MarDiv COC 090249Z/July, 1968, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #331, Para. 3.C.

689, paused about 5 minutes, and then moved out in wedge formation. 2 or more mortars crashed, and the company paused to check-out the area. A sniper then fired some rounds on the Marines, but their platoon commander, 1/Lt Robert Dodson, said to move on, watching for spider traps and booby traps.[3588] Initially the Marines of C/1/1 were mortared, but maintained their momentum until they were about 100 meters from the bodies at which time they came under intense small arms fire from NVA in spider traps.[3589]

The C/1/1 advanced over 2 fingers and while on top of the 3rd ran into heavy fire—over 70 rounds of 82mm mortars, causing them to halt their advance.[3590] Lt Dodson and 7 other Marines reached an old bomb crater and remained there for 5 or 10 minutes pinned down by mortar and sniper rounds. "We couldn't hardly get up and move. Lt. Dodson said there were too many of us in this hole, it was crowded, and some of us would have to go. So he moved first, over to a bomb crater 15 to 25 meters to the right of us. Then his radioman, Pvt. Brown, moved, then our Squad Leader, CPL Barclay, then I think it was PFC Hinz, our squad radioman. I [LCPL Gerald C. Hardin] got up and moved, and the guy behind me, PFC [Robert Bernard] Russell moved behind me, but he got shot in the head and was killed. We stayed in the [new] bomb crater for about 2 hours, pinned down. We couldn't see anything because of the mortar rounds and sniper rounds.. The rest of the company were pinned down, too. They took a lot of KIAs and WIAs. They couldn't come and help us. So our Lieutenant [Dodson] said we have to get out of the hole some kind of way because if we stay we'll all be killed. So he said he was going to call for some smoke rounds to try to screen us... The rounds came in and he moved out."[3591] The Marines were wounded as they moved. "So our Lieutenant said he was going to see where most of the rounds were coming from. He stuck his head up 2 or 3 feet from the ground and was hit in the head."[3592]

The death of Lt Dodson deeply affected his men. "Lt Dodson first came to us in October of '67, straight out of OCS. He was kind of quiet. He was more of an observer. he listened to his men. When he came, he came to a platoon that had been decimated on Operation Medina, and the ones he had left were veterans. He listened to them and over time he became a good officer. He knew what he was doing out there; we had no fear being with him whatever. He didn't have that proverbial 'chip on the shoulder' that some Second Lieutenants have. He learned from his men and the guys taught him too. He was a nice guy... Lt Dodson was a Marine officer and when the shit hit the fan, he was what you would expect a Marine officer to be. He was professional, knew his stuff, and very competent, and he never got us lost."[3593]

CPL Roger L. Stroud, a squad leader in the Second Platoon of C Company [C-2], continued to move his Marines through the deadly fire and out of the killing zone while assisting the wounded to safety on four occasions. "As the advance continued under Stroud's leadership, he observed a prominent enemy sniper position that was exacting heavy casualties on the attacking platoon. Without a moment's hesitation, Corporal Stroud ordered his men to cover him. Despite fierce enemy fire he advanced within throwing range and pulled the pin on a fragmentation hand grenade. He then prepared to assault the sniper position, but instead observed that his squad's rifle fire had taken its toll by destroying the sniper. While attempting to replace the pin into the grenade, Corporal Stroud was struck by another sniper and mortally wounded. With his squad now advancing in close proximity to him, Corporal Stroud, through greatly weakened and nearing unconsciousness, realized the great danger from the grenade he held. This gallant and fearless Marine fought desperately to remain alert and held on to the dangerous grenade, while calling for someone to assist with it, and he did not loosen his grip until a comrade reached his side and took it from him. Not until the imminent danger to his men presented by the armed grenade was removed, did he allow himself to collapse, unconscious."[3594] CPL Stroud had taken a shot in his stomach and was kneeling as he called for help.[3595] Such wounds are always excruciatingly painful. The man who took the armed grenade from the Sergeant's hand was PFC Michael E. Gott.[3596]

As soon as the first casualties were taken, the Corpsman of C-2, HM3 Richard N. Pinsonnault, went into action. "This gallant, courageous and fearless corpsman, with complete disregard to his personal safety, maneuvered throughout the fire-swept battlefield rendering medical assistance to casualties. On one occasion, Hospitalman Pinsonnault traversed approximately 200 meters, oblivious to the tremendous volume of enemy mortar fire striking all about him, to gain access to wounded Ma-

---

[3588] Comments of LCPL Gerald C. Hardin, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081.
[3589] 1/1 ComdC July, 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-6, Para. (7); 3rd MarDiv COC 090249Z/July, 1968, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #331, Para. 3.C.
[3590] Comments of 2/Lt Joseph M. Fulginiti and GySgt Kenneth E. David, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081. Fulginiti was the artillery FO with C/1/1.
[3591] Comments of LCPL Gerald C. Hardin, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081.
[3592] Ibid.
[3593] Conversation with Ed Yates, 15 September 2003.
[3594] LtCol Archie Van Winkle's Summary of Action in NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 4 August 1968, in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of CPL Roger L. Stroud.
[3595] Statement of CPL William W. Lomen, in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of CPL Roger L. Stroud.
[3596] Statement of PFC Michael E. Gott in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file of CPL Roger L. Stroud; Letter of Michael A. Newton, 4 April 2003.

rines on the front lines."[3597] While helping others, HM3 Pinsonnault was fatally wounded by an enemy mortar round.[3598] "HM3 Pinsonnault not only spared thoughts of what could happen to him, but saved many lives while risking his own."[3599]

SGT Sharber Rowe, who had been an acting Platoon Commander for about a day, "..was killed by mortar fire while looking over the edge of a bomb crater while trying to determine where the NVA were, despite being told to keep his head down... Sharber [Rowe] was an old man at 25 or 26 or so, and had already served a stint with the Army's 82nd Airborne before joining the Marines. He made the mistake of sporting an 82nd Airborne tattoo on his upper arm, which, of course, was the source of unremitting flack from the rest of us. He married just before deploying for Westpac... We also lost LCPL John 'Russian' Antonace."[3600]

Although the Marines of C/1/1 were able to retrieve one of D/1/1's MIA, they left additional dead on the battlefield as they broke contact at 1730H and returned to the wire.[3601] Results of the contact were 7 KIA, 30 WIA (evacuated), and 40 NVA KIA (C).[3602]

"All was quiet and there were no indications of an impending attack. In an instant the silence was shattered by an overwhelming volume of incoming automatic AK-47 and machine gun fire."[3603] At 2245H, 1/1 reported 20-25 NVA inside their perimeter who had broken through the D/1/1's wire.[3604] Capt Robert A. Black (CO, B/1/1) had just previously (and fortunately!) dispatched a platoon to reinforce the main 1/1 position on the hill.[3605] A quick reaction by 1/Lt Larry E. Perry (CO, D/1/1) and Capt Henry J. Trautwein, Jr. (CO, C/1/1), although both companies had been greatly weakened by losses of men as KIA and WIA, succeeded in containing the penetration,[3606] and by 2345H, the situation on Hill 689 improved.[3607] The attack, however, was unrelenting. At 080100H, A/1/1 reported movement continued, and as of 0253H, NVA were on all sides of 1/1. A force estimated to be 3 reinforced platoons attacked at 3 widely separated points of Co B/1/1's position in an attempt to cut Co "B" off from the main position, surround, and overwhelm it. The attack was made following many probes and in conjunction with supporting mortar and recoilless rifle fires which completely covered the position. Capt Black, without regard for his own safety, continually checked his positions and coordinated with his commanders to ensure the situation remained tenable. He called in extremely close-in 155mm artillery and 81mm mortar fires right on to his lines and directed effective fires of his 60mm mortars onto the attacking enemy.[3608]

PFC Michael Ernest Singer, an artillery Forward Observer with D/1/1, had manned an OP of the Co D/1/1 defensive perimeter when C/1/1 patrolled during the afternoon and came under intense fire after moving about 100 meters. He immediately left his covered position, ran across the fire-swept area, and began to assist the WIA to relative safety of the perimeter. He did this repeatedly, although wounded twice. He refused to be medevaced. During the night of 7 July, when the NVA launched their attack on the 1/1 position, PFC Singer again went into action, going to the rescue of the wounded. While he was assisting a casualty to a more covered position, he was mortally wounded by the enemy fire.[3609]

Despite weather that was closing in, emergency resupply and medevac was completed at 0245H and as of 0340H on 8 July, 1/1 was completely reconsolidated.[3610] The enemy withdrew at 0500.[3611]

During the day, LtCol Archie Van Winkle[3612] held a staff meeting in a large hole dug into the northwest side of Hill 689 to resolve what action would be taken to recover Delta's bodies. During the night, the NVA at-

---

[3597] Statement of LtCol Archie Van Winkle in NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, 7 Sep 1968, and Statement of PFC Hugh E. Mahoney in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file, HM3 Richard N. Pinsonnault.

[3598] Statement of LCPL Charles B. Wolden in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file, HM3 Richard N. Pinsonnault.

[3599] Statement of CPL William W. Lomen in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file, HM3 Richard N. Pinsonnault.

[3600] Letter of Michael A. Newton, 4 April 2003.

[3601] Comments of 2/Lt Joseph M. Fulginiti, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081; 1/1 ComdC July, 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-6; 3rd MarDiv COC Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #334, Para. 3.A.

[3602] 3rd MarDiv COC Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #334, Para 3.A.

[3603] Statement of 1/Lt Dennis J. Curtin in Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file, PFC Michael Ernest Singer.

[3604] 3rd MarDiv COC 090251Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #332, Para 3.E.

[3605] Statement of 1st Sgt Clinton C. Gatewood in Silver Star Medal file of Capt Robert A. Black, Jr.

[3606] Statement of LtCol Archie Van Winkle in Bronze Star Medal file of l/Lt Larry E. Perry; NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, in Silver Star Medal file of Capt Henry J. Trautwein, Jr.; 1/1 ComdC July, 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-6. Capt Trautwein had already been wounded in both arms. [NavPers 1650/6, Award Recommendation, Silver Star Medal file, Capt Henry J. Trautwein, Jr.]

[3607] 3rd MarDiv COC 090251Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #332, Para. 3.E.

[3608] Statement of LtCol Archie Van Winkle in Silver Star Medal file of Capt Robert A. Black, Jr.

[3609] Statements of l/Lt Larry E. Perry, 1/Lt Dennis J. Curtin, and Citation, Silver Star Medal (posthumous) file, PFC Michael Ernest Singer.

[3610] 3rd MarDiv COC 091619Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #333, Para 3.A.

[3611] 3rd MarDiv COC Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #334, Para 3.A.

[3612] Decorated with the Medal of Honor for actions as a SSGT on "No-Name" Hill in Korea.

tempted multiple, coordinated assaults, the main effort focused at the WSW point on the wire of the main hill-top position. The first effort was made by NVA as they attempted to reach the top of the ridgeline (from which they could pour fire onto the hill) where Alfa Company was located and, not realizing the company was there, impaled themselves onto the Marines in fighting holes there." Alfa Co. quashed the NVA effort as they moved down the trenchline from NW to SW, killing and ejecting the NVA they encountered. The NVA had not realized the presence of the sizeable Marine force.[3613]

08 JULY 1968

BROWN, PFC Vaughn Lee C/1/1
GALABIZ, LCPL John Rosalez C/1/1

[The first USMC use of the OV-10 Bronco in combat happened this day at Khe Sanh as a spotter with an airborne FAC in an OV-10 marked targets to the WNW and NW of Hill 689, guiding flights of F4 Phantoms.[3614]]

10 JULY 1968

HERNANDEZ, PFC Robert A/1/1

On 10 July, 1/Lt Haldon D. Bohlen spotted smoke from one of his M-60 gun positions due to a hit by NVA mortars. He ran down and saw the gun with rounds cooking off. Everything was black from the explosion. The gun position had taken a direct hit. "I ran back up the hill to get some water to put on our guns, and gunner Buckler runs over there and he says, 'Hernandez is down there.' So we run back down there and Doc Allen came running over there like mad. There wasn't anything he could do. He was dead."[3615]

His friend, Robert L. Stewart, remembers: "He had a bunker in the side of the wall in the position next to me.. He seemed like a nice kid, and he had told me at one time he was from Texas. He was very quiet but he done his job, and I have nothing bad to say about the guy, and I feel sorry for him. He was on a working party this date. He went down to the LZ to build a hootch or something for the officers down there, and when he came back from the working detail.. he came walking along the skyline which we were told.. you don't do. When he got to about over my head, everybody started hollering at him to get off the skyline. Well, I guess we all make mistakes. He got off the skyline and walked back down the hill to his position. When he got in there, he just went into the hole of the trench and just passed out because he was tired from working so hard. A few minutes after that, somebody yelled 'Incoming!' I don't know how many rounds we had—3 or 4 rounds.. and the second one went directly in front of his hole. He was dead. He was on fire and his M-60 was on fire. It was loaded. Doc was the first one to holler out for someone to bring some water.. to put him out. Well, he was already dead. I came over there and looked at him. I knew he was dead, no doubt about it. We had a hard time getting any water in. I was drinking iodine water already. I don't know how much I had, but not very much. We got water every 3 days or once a week and that was it because the rest of the time they was bringing in stuff to build bunkers or taking out wounded. After that I felt really bad."[3616]

[LtCol Archie Vanwinkle had assumed command of 1/1 during July, 1968, having previously served as CO of 2/1, G-3 Operations Officer of 1st Marine Division, and G-3 of Task Force X-RAY during the Hue City Operation.[3617] The Battalion Surgeon of 1/1, Lt Stephen Howard, MC, USNR, writes of the time on Hill 689: "..living conditions were unusually bad, even for a unit on operation. There were many times when morale threatened to falter or even be destroyed; it was only the leadership of this man which sustained the spirit and fighting ability of the battalion at a Marine level. LtCol Van Winkle was all over the hill, constantly talking and joking with his officers, staff, men raising their spirits by his presence and example, and giving them the will to continue. He was always present when any man was injured, sustaining and cheering that man and his buddies, frequently at great discomfort and personal danger to himself."[3618] Attempts to retrieve the MIA the NVA used as ambush bait had proven nugatory, but LtCol Vanwinkle devised a recovery plan that finally worked. On the night of 11 July at approximately 1930 – 2230, several "body snatcher" teams were dispatched. There were 4 teams of 4 men each, all without flak jackets or helmets, just .45s and K-bars, to retrieve the bodies. Following drops of 550-pound bombs so close they knocked out much of the Marine's wire, the teams departed to retrieve the bodies.

[3613] Email of Robert A. Black to Terry Charbonneau in Charbonneau letter of 11 July 2006.
[3614] Ibid.
[3615] Comments of 1/Lt Haldon D. Bohlen, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081.
[3616] Conversation with Robert L. Stewart, 28 January 1997. Stewart adds that after they departed Hill 689 everyone went to a river to swim, to clean themselves, but that he didn't swim. Several of the men complained that he hadn't cleaned himself. He mentioned the incident of the fire and the water with Doc Pack, the Corpsman. He said, "Don't let it bother you. The guy was dead on impact, before you got there. If I'd of had any water in that situation I probably wouldn't have put it on him either because the guy was already dead, just don't worry about it," but Stewart couldn't get over his guilt of not having poured his precious drops of water on the burning man, to douse the flames, although the man was already dead.
[3617] Bronze Star Medal Citation, LtCol Archie Vanwinkle.
[3618] Statement of Lt Stephen Howard, MC, USNR, in Bronze Star Medal file, LtCol Archie Vanwinkle.

"We found 7 of the bodies. We thought we knew where the other 2 were supposed to be, but there was an air strike just before dusk, and I believe it came pretty close to them, and if not moved them,.. completely disintegrated them, because all the bodies down there were marred and burnt and everything else. But it was the only way we could possibly get to it because there were so many spider holes down there. There was just no other way possibly getting them. After we got these 7 bodies up we sent three more men down.. and we looked over to see where the one of these 2 bodies were missing was moved. They popped illum for us. It was a negative. We couldn't find any traces of the bodies. We came back on up the hill, closed the wires, got inside the trench, and we knew we were on our way out of that crazy-ass hill."[3619] All the while the "body snatcher" teams were out, friendly 81s, LAWs, everything, was fired continuously, like a "basic mad moment" along with over 300 artillery shells during the 2-hour operation. Cpl Strassburg made 6 trips and Lt Bohlen later commented: "It was a dirty job. They had surgical gloves, but these all tore up, and these bodies were—I smelled them as they went by and it about made me vomit."[3620]

1/1 was lifted out by helicopter from Hill 689 on 12 July 1968 in 2 stages, the first to LZ STUD and the 2nd to Quang Tri Combat Base.[3621]

Cumulative statistics for Operation SCOTLAND II at Khe Sanh, 16 April – 11 July 1968: KIA (301 USMC, 25 USA), WIAE (1489 USMC, 123 USA), WIANE (242 USMC, 34 USA), MIA 2 (USA), NVA: 2440 KIAC, 152 detained, 56 POW, 644 IWC and 195 CSWC.[3622]]

13 JULY 1968

BIRD, 1/Lt Leonard Adrian	VMFA-115
HURST, CAPT John Clark	VMFA-115

CAPT Hurst (Pilot) and 1/Lt Bird (RIO) were crew aboard a F-4B fighter (#150650) in a flight of 2 aircraft on a combat mission near KSCB. The aircraft was hit by ground fire, became engulfed in flames prior to bomb release, and crashed in an open area which was too close to enemy forces for a recovery attempt. The plane was in the process of conducting an ordnance delivery run in the vicinity of XD834345, approximately 8 KM south of KSCB.[3623] The target was a mortar.[3624] The aircraft was making a second pass over the target at 500-ft. and 450 knots when it was hit.[3625]

Bird's parents came from Holland and had changed their name from "DeVogel" to "Bird" to conform to the language of their new country. He attended the University of Delaware to study engineering and swam on the freshman swim team. His brother served in the USAF in Korea. He had hoped to attend the Wharton School of Business after his discharge from the Marine Corps.[3626]

While serving with Marine Fighter/Attack Squadron 115, 1/Lt Bird flew 253 missions. "In some cfases, he logged four flights within a 20-hour stretch."[3627]

[Operations in the Khe Sanh area were now completely mobile. CG, 3rd MarDiv Operation Order 23-68 was promulgated 21 July 1968 with the mission of assuming a mobile posture in the SCOTLAND II AO by establishing FSBs [Fire Support Bases] north (FSB CATES) and south (FSB SHEPHERD, XD936409) of Route 9, approximately mid-way between Khe Sanh and Ca Lu, with a battalion normally operating from each. Bn 2/4 remained in the Khe Sanh area, maintaining a platoon on Hill 950 (Plt E-3) and one company on the ridgeline between Hill 950 and FSB Cates, and one company CHOPed to 1/4.[3628]]

[There had been several reports of UFOs flying over Khe Sanh. At 0400H in the morning of 25 October 1966, Special Forces on Khe Sanh base received a flare ship between 0335-0340H which they had not requested and sought to determine who sent it.[3629] About a year later, on 29 October 1967, at 2145H, an unidentified aircraft dropped a flare directly over the Combat Base. The aircraft would not acknowledge a call from the airfield tower nor did LANDSHARK BRAVO, Dong Ha, hold any aircraft in this area.[3630] ENS Martin J. Kux, the Of-

[3619] Comments of CPL Terry A. Strassburg, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081.

[3620] Comments of Lt Bohlen, HQMC Oral History Tape #3081.

[3621] 1/1 ComdC, July 1968, Encl (1), p. 1-II-9.

[3622] 3rd MarDiv COC 121801Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #346

[3623] Joint Task Force-Full Accounting, Case 1225-0-01 and 02, Narrative, in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #292, Folder #9.

[3624] LtCol G. W. Vaughan, VMFA-115, letter of condolence dated 14 July 1968, to parents of Bird, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #292, Folder #9.

[3625] Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 154.

[3626] Vietnam Remembrance Committee and Clifton War Veterans Monument Committee, Program, Memorial Day, 29 May 2000, p. 35; in Letter from Richard Delotto, 6 July 2004.

[3627] Robert Wahlers, "Wings Over 'Nam'," Clifton [New Jersey] Merchant Magazine, 6:5 (May, 2000), p. 26.

[3628] 2/4 ComdC, July, 1968, Encl (1), p. 8.

[3629] Resume of Telephone Call 250400H in III MAF COC Journal and File 24/25 Oct 1966 #J153. The I Corps DASC responded that VNAF did not have flare planes and that none of their flareships were in the vicinity of Khe Sanh the night of 25 October. [Resume of Telephone Call 250915H in III MAF COC Journal and File 24/25 Oct 1966, #22].

[3630] 26Mar 291545Z/Oct67, Opn ARDMORE SITREP #419. Could this be NVA aircraft? SR-71 taking aerial photos for the NPIC [National Photo Interpretation Center] of the CIA? The Red Chinese?

ficer in Charge of the Seabee detachment (CBMU-301, Det B) wrote in his diary during the Siege: "At 1730.. we went into Condition Red because 3 UFOs were headed for us from the DMZ. Dunno what happened there."[3631] And now, on 21 July 1968, the fourth sighting of a UFO flying over Khe Sanh was reported when at 0245H, the platoon from E/2/4 on Hill 950 spotted one near the western end of the Khe Sanh airstrip. The UFO then proceeded to the Hill 950 area and finally turned and flew toward the Co Roc escarpment in Laos. Shortly thereafter, the platoon observed several "V" formations consisting of 3 crafts generally flying in the same circular pattern and in the same area. The UFO was reported to sound like a fixed-wing aircraft, but behaved like a helicopter. A flareship was called on station, however the UFO was not again seen.[3632]

30 JULY 1968

ALMON, PFC William Russell	G/2/4
DELANEY, CPL John Patrick, III	G/2/4
GORMAN, PFC Paul James	G/2/4
PATTERSON, PFC Jerry Leroy	G/2/4
SELLERS, PFC Floyd Eugene	G/2/4

During July, 1968, BLT 2/4 (-) placed one platoon on Hill 950 and one company on Firebase CATES (XD927437) in connection with the evacuation from KSCB.[3633] On 12 July, Co G/2/4 was lifted from LZ STUD to Co E/2/4's position on Hill 691 (XD926443) from where they began a tactical movement northwest to a position at XD 893457 (Hill 679). Due to the difficulty of the terrain causing slow movement, Co G only advanced to XD913448 that night and reached their objective area on 14 July, set up a defensive base area from which operations in adjacent territory could be undertaken.[3634] A patrol from this base camp made contact on 16 July and the next day, a helicopter departing from Co G's position crashed but all persons were uninjured and evacuated safely. Again, on 22 July, an ambush from Co G spotted 30 NVA with at least 2 machineguns at XD893456.[3635]

On 30 July, Co "G" [commanded by Capt J. M. Dwyer] saw 10 NVA with automatic weapons at XD883496 who were then taken under fire with small arms and 60mm mortars. While maneuvering to exploit the contact, 2 platoons of the company made contact with a well-entrenched and well-organized NVA force of undetermined size at 1030H. The enemy used grenades and Claymore mines, withholding their fire until the units from Co G were almost on top of them. After the initial burst of fire, Co G attempted to withdraw to make use of supporting arms. From 1400 – 1900H, 8 flights of fixed wing, 4 flights of gunships, and artillery blasted the NVA position. When the patrol broke contact at 1615H, they were unable to recover the point element and 3 KIA were unable to be retrieved until the next day. Poor communications ability plagued the radio net traffic all day between G/2/4, 2/4, and the 2/4 relay on Hill 950.[3636]

02 AUGUST 1968

BLOOM, SGT Ronald Norman	E/2/4
DYE, PFC Ronald Harvey	E/2/4
GOEN, LCPL Richard Dean	E/2/4[3637]
MORTON, LCPL David Eugene	E/2/4
SWAIN, PFC Craig Francis	E/2/4
TRAINOR, PFC Paul William	E/2/4

Hill 950, manned by a platoon from E/2/4, heard movement on their lines at 0230H and by 0330H were under attack, receiving grenades and 60mm mortar fire. The western end of the perimeter, closest to the LZ, was overrun at 0345H. Although the lines were quickly reestablished, the unit was cut off from their LZ. By 0500H the attack began to falter and by 0600, the original lines of the platoon's position were reestablished. The platoon suffered 6 KIA and 11 WIA. A later check determined that the wire had been cut and the illumination devices deactivated.[3638]

At 1330H the next day, CG TF HOTEL assumed OPCON of G/2/9 from 9th Mar and passed same to 4th Mar with plans that G/2/9 to sweep the vicinity of Hill 950.[3639] At 031245H, G/2/9 while arriving at Hill 950 was greeted with 3-4 rounds of 60mm mortar from XD852449 resulting in 7 WIA (evacuated).[3640] On 8 August 1968, F/2/4 was lifted into the Hill 950 at 1300H with the mission of searching, fixing, and destroying the enemy in the area. The lift was completed at 1405. Co B/1/4 had the same mission for the Hill 1015 area east of the 85 grid line.[3641]

[3631] ENS Martin J. Kux, Diary entry for 7 and 8 February 1968.
[3632] 2/4 ComdC, July, 1968, Encl (1), p. 12.
[3633] 2/4 ComdC July, 1968, Encl (1), p. 6.
[3634] Ibid.
[3635] Ibid., pp. 11, 12.
[3636] Ibid., p. 14; 3rd MarDiv COC 310706Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #424, Para 3.A.; 3rd MarDiv COC 310704Z/Jul68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #425, Para. 3.A.
[3637] Goen's unit is listed as "III MAF" in the Coffelt database.
[3638] 2/4 ComdC August, 1968, Encl (1), pp. 5, 7; 3rd MarDiv COC 021130Z/Aug68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #433, Para 3.
[3639] 3rd MarDiv COC 021616Z/Aug68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #435, Para. 4.
[3640] 3rd MarDiv COC 030102Z/Aug68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #439, Para. 3.
[3641] 2/4 ComdC August, 1968, Encl (1), p. 10.

SGT Bloom was on his 3rd Vietnam tour and had just arrived in May, 1968.[3642]

06 AUGUST 1968

BAKER, LCPL Bernard Gerald	G/2/4
CHRISTIAN, LCPL Thomas Barry	G/2/4[3643]
RUDD, PFC James Earl	G/2/4
WHITLOW, HM3 Ronald David	BLT 2/4

At 0418H, Co G/2/4 (commanded by Capt J. M. Dwyer) at XD886496 (in the valley north of Hill 950 and 4 clicks east of 950) came under a heavy ground attack from the northwest initiated by the NVA with small arms and RPG rockets. G/2/4 sustained 4 KIA and 6 WIA. A thorough search of the area disclosed miscellaneous NVA gear and ordnance. At 1130H, G/2/4 was lifted to Vandergrift Combat Base (YD0048).[3644]

16 AUGUST 1968

MANSOR, PFC Thomas Nickolas	III MAF
MC JUNKIN, Robert Taylor	III MAF[3645]

Co I/3/4 conducted two platoon (rein) combat patrols on 16 Aug, operating within 1500 meters of their patrol base at XD896376[3646] found various pieces of bloodied NVA equipment including an AK-47, ammunition, and a helmet, at XD884382 at 0830H on 16 August 1968. A squad followed the bloodied trail and soon came under small arms fire from an estimated 6-8 NVA. The patrol observed several NVA at XD894374 between the patrol (XD894373) and the squad (XD897375) and sustained 4 WIA in the initial contact. Sightings continued throughout the day as I/3/4 received 37 rounds of 60mm and 82mm mortar fire, and at 1930H, spotted an estimated NVA company of NVA at XD894380 moving toward the patrol base. Friendly casualties included 2 MIA, 12 WIA (evacuated) and 2 WIA (not evacuated).[3647]

24 AUGUST 1968

LADEWIG, 1/Lt Melvin Earl 8th TFW

READ, MAJ Charles Harold W. Jr. 8th TFW

Two F4D Phantoms of 497 TFS, 8 TFW, USAF, attacked a storage area 17 miles northwest of Dong Ha. The attack leader spotted a large fireball on the ground and realized it was the wreckage of Maj Read's F4. The case remained undetermined but was assumed to be the result of ground fire. Neither of the 2 crew are thought to have ejected from the aircraft.[3648] According to official records, the F4Dwas shot down during a night armed reconnaissance mission over North Vietnam near XD456547 (just beneath the Khe Sanh NVA Front B5-T8 Hq during the siege battle). No parachutes were sighted and no beeper signals were heard, leading to the status of "presume status of dead, remains not recovered."[3649]

[A memorial service was conducted on the remains of KSCB on 09 October 1968 in memory of 3rd Marine Division and 2nd ARVN Regiment men and their supporting units who gave their lives here. The memorial service was preceded by a general sweep of the area under the code name Operation SCOTLAND II—NANKING beginning 04 October 1968 conducted by the 4th Marine Regiment, 12th Marine Regiment, and 62nd ARVN Regiment. Prior to the operation, K/3/4, artillery battery I/3/12, together with elements of 3rd Engineers and helicopters established FSB NANKING at the old Rock Quarry position to provide fire support for the sweeping battalions. The following morning Marines from 4th Marine Regiment heli-lifted to points north and south of Lang Vei, and soldiers of the 62nd ARVN Regiment heli-assaulted Hill 881S. The Marines moved towards Khe Sanh while the ARVNs moved towards Hill 861.[3650] Numerous old, mass graves, abandoned bunkers, trenches, and gear were discovered.

CAPT Sid Thomas led elements of K/3/4 from NANKING to the old airstrip. There was no contact.

[3642] Gary G. Mosley, email posted on Khe Sanh Veterans Message Board, 01 Feb 2002, 08:15:52 PM.

[3643] Christian's unit is listed as "III MAF" in the Coffelt database. Since there were 4 KIA and no others listed for that date in the database could possibly relate to G/2/4, his name has been included as a member of G/2/4.

[3644] 2/4 ComdC August, 1968, Encl (1), p. 9.

[3645] Both these men are listed as belonging to "III MAF" in the Coffelt database; there are no others KIA for this date who could possibly belong to I/3/4.

[3646] About 1,000 meters south of Route 9 and 3 clicks east of the junction of the base access road to KSCB and Route 9.

[3647] 3/4 ComdC August, 1968, pp. IV-25 and IV-26.

[3648] Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 160.

[3649] Joint Casualty Resolution Center, Refugee Report & Evaluation T84-134, 26 June 1984 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm

[3650] III MAF News Release No. 3204 by CPL Ken Corbett; Leatherneck 52:2 (Feb, 1969) 60; CPL Ken Corbett, "Marines Enter Khe Sanh," III MAF: Sea Tiger 4:42 (18 October 1968), pp. 1, 12; SGT Bob Morris, "Taps Play at Khe Sanh Ceremony," III MAF: Sea Tiger 4:42 (18 October 1968) 1, 12; 1/4 ComdC Oct 1968, Encl (1), p. 3; 2/4 ComdC Oct 1968, Encl (1), p. 5; FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, October, 1968, p. 18; On 5 October, 2/4 was lifted into positions near Lang Vei (2) (XD805355) without incident or contact. From 6-9 October, 2/4 swept in an easterly direction locating several small caches of weapons and one grave (at XD847394) containing 50 NVA bodies apparently 3 – 4 months old. The Bn then set in as security for the ceremony at KSCB. [2/4 ComdC Oct 1968, Encl (1), p. 5].

An hour later, they had established a perimeter around the western turn-around portion of the airstrip and dignitaries began to arrive by air. It was a desolation that could perhaps best be understood by hearing the haunting soprano voice in Villa-Lobos' Bachianas Brasilerias, No. 5. One Marine Staff Sergeant who had been at Khe Sanh in March noted the missing features: "Gone are the many bunkers that protected the Marines from constant shelling.. Gone is Charlie Med, command bunkers, the Avenue of the Flags, the trenches, the old messhall and the.. cement bunkers."[3651]

The 3rd Marine Division band and the Division Chaplain, CAPT John E. Zoller, then arrived. Chaplain Zoller reported:

"What a beautiful morning: brilliant sunshine, azure blue sky, fleecy clouds and breathtaking rugged landscape of mountains and valleys. As we approached Khe Sanh we circled. There it was, a flat plateau scraped bare and scarred by the ravages of war and demolition. The area immediately adjacent in certain directions (of greatest enemy threat) was peppered, literally riddled, with pock marks, bomb craters, where Arc Light and other aerial and artillery assault had rained devastation. Now all seemed bleak, deserted, and still.

"We landed, deplaned, and then I saw our troopers, dispersed in small clusters, crouching in various spots of natural cover. We were the first arrivals by air. They had humped in, arriving an hour earlier, on their assigned mission... Then, abruptly, the air seemed to be ripped, shredded by tearing explosions. The veteran company commander of the sweep troopers, with whom I was chatting, noted my surprise and motioned toward a flanking hillside, perhaps 2 miles away.

"'Suppression fire,' he said, 'Our own. Just to discourage Charlie, if he is there, from trying anything this morning.' Smoke was rising from half a dozen air bursts at tree-top level. This continued intermittently during the 2 hours I was there.

"Soon a crew was busy erecting two flag poles at the west end of what was once the air strip. When all was ready, about 1000, all hands assembled for the service... To the right was a formation of about 40 Marines in combat jungle utilities and battle gear. To the left was a similar formation of 2nd ARVN Regiment troops. Ahead stood USMC and ARVN officers, perhaps 30 in number. Scurrying about were news media personnel and combat photographers..

"General Garretson made a few introductory remarks and traced a brief history of Khe Sanh. I conducted the service up to the raising of the flags, when we all stood at salute as the US and RVN flags were two-blocked, each to the sound of its own national anthem. Nick Hubble [CDR, 4th Marines Chaplain] completed it. Once again, with soaring emotion, we all stood at salute as Taps sounded. Only 15 minutes or so, but never-to-be-forgotten experience it was."[3652]

Also present at the ceremony, a former NVA Sergeant, Nguyen Trong Thuan, raised his hand to salute the Stars and Stripes and Republic of Vietnam standard. Nine months earlier, he had fought here against the forces defending the combat base when he was wounded during an air strike and evacuated to a NVA hospital with severe chest wounds that caused him to bleed from the mouth and nose. Before he was able to recover he had been forced to return to his unit for duty. He turned himself in as a "Hoi Chan" under the "Chieu Hoi" ["Open Arms"] program. "I went on many operations and had many friends killed. I was tired of fighting," he said.[3653]]

[From 4 October – 10 November 1968, 4th Marine Regiment, operating in the Khe Sanh battlefield, patrolled, occupied, and developed the 2nd highest elevation in the Republic of Vietnam, Hill 1739, "Tiger Tooth," (or "Dent du Tigre"). It was at this location that the wreckage of 2 helicopters were found, a USAF C-47 helicopter with 5 skeletons and an old unmarked H-34.[3654] On 1 November, a Spot Report reported a CH-46 wreckage at XD828545 (6 K NNW of FSB Gurkha, XD872482) at 1645H found by a 2-platoon patrol from K/3/4.[3655] The wreckage had 3 skeletons, 1 ID card and 1 ID tag.[3656] The next day, a patrol from K/3/4 found a H-34 helicopter in three pieces (at XD8254). The aircraft was rusted and there were no bodies around the aircraft.[3657] The number on the helicopter was "11-IN."[3658] The UH-34 "appears to have crashed a long time ago, was very rusty, no sign of bodies, most instruments missing."[3659] On 4 November 1968, E/2/4 commenced construction of FSB ALPINE (XD758528, 11 miles northwest of Khe Sanh), completing it on Marine Corps Birthday, 10 November 1968.[3660] Also constructed and occupied was the highest FSB in Viet-

[3651] SSGT John Conic, III MAF News Release, No. 3245.

[3652] Chaplain (CAPT) John E. Zoller, letter to RADM James E. Kelly, CHC, USN, Navy Chief of Chaplains, 19/JEZ:fdg, printed in Navy Chief of Chaplains, Items of Interest, 1 Nov 1968, Memo J111/32/68.

[3653] SGT Robert Morris, III MAF News Release No. 3247.

[3654] Martin J. Sexton, CO, 4th Marines, letter of 7 December 1968, Tab I to 4th Mar ComdC December, 1968, p. 1

[3655] XXIV Corps COC, Resume of Telephone Call, 012035H/Nov 1968, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 01/02 Nov 1968, #154. FSB GURKHA was activated 12 October, 4 miles northwest of FSB NANKING. [FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, October, 1968, p. 18.].

[3656] 3/4 ComdC, November, 1968.

[3657] XXIV Corps COC, Resume of Telephone Call 021945H/Nov 1968, in III MAF COC Journal and File, 02/03 Nov 1968 #131.

[3658] 3/4 ComdC, November, 1968.

[3659] 3rd MarDiv COC 021732Z/Nov68, Opn SCOTLAND II SITREP #797, Para 4.A.1.

[3660] 3rd MarDiv ComdC, November, 1968, Encl (1), p. 33.

nam, FSB ARGONNE (XD678572, at 1308 meters).[3661] On 05 November, a patrol from C/1/4 found one body at XD931405, completely decomposed and fully clothed with flak jacket, rims of glasses, one Marine Corps gift pen, part of chain from dog tags and one cross, one stamp pad (Marine type) with initials and two letters of last name, and one wrist watch. Body was approximately 100 meters northeast of C-130 wreckage which had been there approximately 5 months.[3662] The following day, a C/1/4 patrol returned to the C-130 wreckage at XD931405 and picked up remains found by another patrol on 5 November. The patrol found dog tags of 2 men, one wallet with Geneva Convention Card and Marine Corps ID Card, one prescription label from medicine bottle with name, one map, two wrist watches, 3 rolls of film, 1 cigarette lighter, one empty body bag, one helmet with liner, 1 M-16 rifles, and one flamethrower with nozzle and hose. The following numbers were found on the tail section of the wreckage, "AF/054" in 6-inch black letters, followed by "590" in 12-inch white letters.[3663]

Perhaps the helicopter wreck relates to activities that occurred about four years earlier. In April, 1964, the Signal Engineering Survey Unit (SESU) was organized with 5 officers and 152 enlisted Marines.[3664] SESU consisted of a detachment of 1st Composite Radio Company (3 officers and 27 enlisted drawn from the 1st Radio Company, FMFPAC, and Headquarters Marine Corps, and was commanded by Maj Alfred M. Gray, Jr.[3665], augmented by a 76-man infantry detachment from G/2/3, reinforced with an 81mm mortar section (2 mortars) commanded by 1/Lt Raymond J. Otlowski. SESU, designated Advisory Team One, was "..the first actual Marine ground unit to conduct independent operations in the Republic of Vietnam."[3666] Their base of operations, Tiger Tooth Mountain (Dent du Tigre, also known as Dong Voi Mep or Hill 1739, XD832543) is the highest terrain feature in northern I Corps, over a mile high at 5500 feet. After some preliminary reconnaissance and operations, on 13 June 1964, MAJ Gray, I enlisted men, plus several thousand pounds of equipment, were transported to Tiger Tooth LZ that had been hacked out of the jungled hilltops by ARVN soldiers. The area was violently inhospitable to the Marines, and as bad weather rolled into the area, despite maximum power, one Marine H-34D helicopter was unable to overcome reverse down drafts and forced into the trees, crashing and rolling over on its side.[3667]

15 NOVEMBER 1968

[At 2000H, 14 November 1968, D/1/4 at an ambush position at XD754534 had one Marine of the ambush "dragged away by a carnivorous animal. Search was conducted under constant illumination for a period of some three hours with negative results. At 0930H [15 November], Co "D".. found remains at XD753536. Man had been attacked by carnivorous animals. Remains medevaced."[3668]]

24 NOVEMBER 1968

LARIMORE, PFC John Richard H&S/1/4

The mission of 1/4 in November, 1968, was to establish Fire Support Bases ARGONNE (XD676575) and ALPINE (XD758528) in the extreme northwest section of the old SCOTLAND AO, to conduct reconnaissance in force from these positions, deny terrain to the NVA, and locate units and supply caches.[3669] On 21 November, B/1/4 located 5 hootches, a cave (4 ft. wide, 5 ft high and 25 meters deep containing 2500 pounds of rice, 75 pounds of corn, 75 pounds of tobacco, a sword, a spear, 2 crossbows, and 16 knives, at XD688620. On the same date they also discovered 600 NVA uniforms, all packaged, 16 medical units, 7 cases of medical supplies, 850 pounds of TNT, 50 pounds of Chinese C-4, and a case of 81mm mortar rounds.[3670]

2/Lt Victor J. Ludlum, USMCR, Platoon Commander of B-2 of 1/4, was given the mission to move down a finger on which they had previously found an ammunition supply for bunkers. "My platoon moved out

---

[3661] Martin J. Sexton, Letter of 7 December 1968, Tab I to 4th Mar ComdC December, 1968.

[3662] 1/4 ComdC, November, 1968, Encl (1), p. 5.

[3663] Ibid., p. 6.

[3664] Asst CoS Memo AO1a (JCSO-kn 001A32564, 13 Nov 1964 to CMC, Subj: USMC participation in Vietnam, Encl (1), p. 2.

[3665] Became Commandant of the Marine Corps some 2 ½ decades later.

[3666] Capt Robert H. Whitlow, U. S. Marines in Vietnam, The Advisory and Combat Assistance Era, 1954-1964, Washington, D.C.: HQMC, 1977, p. 139.

[3667] Command Diary, TE 79.3.3.6, 15 Apr – 9 Jul 1964, pp. 10, 11, 12; Whitlow, op. cit., p. 139. In mid-July, a severe storm struck the outpost, blowing away tents and antennas, and on the 17th, an enemy force probed the Marine sector of the perimeter. No casualties were sustained, but the position had been compromised. "The threat really got bad up there, and there were a lot of indications they were going to come after us 'big time'.." [Conversation with General Alfred M. Gray, Jr., 25 April 1989]. MACV ordered SESU to withdraw operations from Tiger Tooth and by 22 July, all SESU personnel and equipment were moved from Khe Sanh to DaNang. [Command Diary, TE 79.3.3.6, 10 Jul-16Oct64, p. 2].

[3668] 1/4 ComdC, November, 1968, Encl (1), p. 7; S-3 Journal for 15 November 1968, Ser #3. The Coffelt database lists no Marine from D/1/4 as KIA on 15 November 1968.

[3669] Comments of LtCol George T. Sargent, HQMC Oral History Tape #3748. Sargent was CO of 1/4.

[3670] Comments of SSGT Paul F. Starrett, HQMC Oral History Tape #3748. Starrett was S-2 of 1/4.

on line with 1st Platoon and we checked out the finger, found several more bunkers and no new ammo caches. 2nd Platoon was on the left side of the trail, 1st Platoon on the right. All along the trail were small fighting holes about 2 x 2 and 3 feet deep covered over with camouflage. Off to the sides were bunkers, larger, fairly old. Some of them were 10 x 15, others 20 by 30 feet, a good 10 feet deep... We moved on down toward the stream bed... As we moved down and got off the finger [we] came into an area that had a high ridge line on the right and a good sized hill on the left.. and were fairly much in the open. We crossed the first small stream, then traveled another 150 meters or so along the stream bed.. At this point we had a S-3 Scout, Marine, along with a Vietnamese scout in the point, checking out the trail for fresh signs of NVA. The Marine scout went across the stream on the trail and found a fresh foot print of a bare foot... We continued to move the platoon across the stream. We had our point across.. which was this Marine scout [and] came to the hill where the trail went right up the side of the hill... The Marine scout was about 10 to 15 meters ahead of the next man in the column, checking out the area. As he moved up this trail, which was very steep, he moved up about 25 meters up this trail with the men following up behind him and all of a sudden the enemy opened up with automatic fire, semi-automatic fire, and threw a good 7 to 10 grenades. We believe the scout triggered this ambush prematurely because the killing zone only had 2 people in it at the time, and if the NVA had waited another minute or two, they would have had a good 8 to 10 people in the killing zone... The scout was killed immediately... He had been shot in the head and in the foot and it looked like he had quite a few rounds—like he had been hit by automatic fire in the back. That's what probably killed him"[3671]

The contact occurred at 1210H and at XD735633.[3672]

30 NOVEMBER 1968

BADER, SFC Arthur Edward, Jr.	FOB-1
FITTS, SSG Richard Allan	FOB-1
LA BOHN,SFC Gary Russell	FOB-1
MEIN, SFC Michael Hammond	FOB-1
SCHOLZ, SFC Klaus Dieter	FOB-1
STACKS, CAPT Raymond Clark	FOB-1
TOOMEY, MAJ Samuel Kamu	FOB-1

A CH-34A Vietnamese Air Force helicopter (#144653) in which this SOG team was flying at 4,000-ft. was struck by 37mm AA fire, went into a spin, crashed in a mass of flames, and exploded. From the time they were hit to the time of impact at XD515410 (just one KM north of Route 9), the aircraft was under observation and nobody was seen to exit the aircraft.[3673]

[On 28 December 1968, Camp J. J. Carroll was deactivated in connection with the 3rd Marine Division's changed tactics from holding static positions to adopting a mobile posture. "The need for security at Camp Carroll would have tied down infantry units that can better operate in the field with swift, bold moves into suspected enemy areas."[3674]]

01 JANUARY 1969

HALL, SSG James Michael	RT Diamond Back
HAWES, SP4 Wayne Lindsay	RT Diamond Back
MC KIBBAN, SSG Michael James	RT Diamond Back[3675]

"I had three killed west of the DMZ on New Year's Day of '69: SSGT James Michael Hall, SP4 Wayne Lindsay Hawes, and SSGT Michael James McKibban... Hawes was a Canadian. They were killed January 1st, 1969. They were just west of the DMZ right up on that big ridge that goes through there, a real high ridge. We discovered an oil fuel pipeline, and it was one of our real high priority areas. I guess every General in Saigon wanted a piece of the pipe for a paperweight. Before it was over with a lot of people and helicopters and everything else interdicted that pipeline which could have probably been done more effectively with TACAIR."[3676]

[At the start of 1969, 3rd Marine Division under the command of Major General Raymond G. Davis (who had assumed command of the Division in May, 1968) had adopted a mobile strategy. No longer ensconced in defensive positions, the Division moved from defensive operations to more aggressive operations modeled after the [3671] Comments of 2/Lt Victor J. Ludlum, HQMC Oral History Tape #3748.

[3672] 1/4 ComdC, November, 1968, Encl (1), p. 10; S-3 Journal for 24 November 1968, Ser #5; Comments of SSGT Paul F. Starrett, Tape #3748, cited.

[3673] LTG James G. Cole, Letter of 28 June 1991 to Mr. Harve Saal. Remains were returned 26 March 1989 and identified 7 Feb 1990 except for Fitts, whose remains were identified 3 Feb 1990.

[3674] "Marines' Camp Carroll Becomes Deactivated," III MAF; Sea Tiger 5:1 (3 January 1969) 1.

[3675] McKibban is not included in the Coffelt database but is listed in the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, Directory of Names, Washington, D.C.: Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, Inc., second printing, December, 1982, p. 484. Harve Saal's 4-volume history of MACVSOG indicates "date unknown, January 1969, number and names of personnel unknown. [Saal, Harve, SOG, MACV Studies and Observations Group (Behind Enemy Lines), Vol. III, Legends., Milwaukee, Wi: Edwards Brothers, Inc., 1990, p. 352.

[3676] Conversation with James Storter, 9 April 1997. Storter was a Captain with SOG, in '68-'69 with CCN and '70-'71 with CCC, Kontum

I Air Cav and extensive use of helicopters.[3677] The tactics depended on fire support bases (FSB) on key terrain features "..constructed approximately 8,000 meters apart with a 3,000-meter overshoot in order to cover enemy mortars" and provided bases from which infantry troops under the artillery fan could scour the local area.[3678]

When the NVA planted their "liberation flag" on a flag pole on KSCB on 9 July 1968[3679] as the Marines departed, only to have it ripped off of the pole by a soldier wrapping it around his arm and yanking it off while in a hovering UH-1H helicopter shortly afterwards. WO2 Thomas J. Harnisher of B Co., 229th Assault Helicopter Bn operating out of LZ SHARON had his planned SOG operation cancelled, but the Special Forces Captain added that the NVA were flying their flag on the KSCB, being the Commander of his section of birds, he launched to steal it. He was only 21 at the time;[3680] the actions/reaction became a parable of what was to occur at Khe Sanh in the following years. Within this "no man's land" US forces, NVA forces, US forces, NVA forces, alternatively reoccupied the land.

On 02 January 1969, Operation DAWSON RIVER WEST was initiated (conducted 020600H/Jan69 – 191600H/Jan69 by 9th Marines together with 2nd and 3rd Battalions of the 2nd ARVN Regiment.[3681] 9th Marines Regiment displaced to an area near the Laotian border west of the former KSCB. Teams from 3rd Reconnaissance Bn secured selected LZs and thus eliminated the need for pre-H-hour prep fires. The entire regiment plus supporting artillery made a simultaneous assault into multiple LZs, completing the assault phase in 3 hours, 50 minutes.[3682] Minimal enemy contact was encountered. Numerous small arms caches and various NVA munitions were uncovered near Lang Vei.[3683] No sizeable enemy concentrations or supplies were found in the Khe Sanh area. Results of the operation: 43 NVA KIA, 1 NVA POW, no friendly casualties.[3684]

On 07 January 1969, E/2/9 revisited the Lang Vei Special Forces camp and at XD785361 found numerous ordnance along with 1 Army jeep, 2 Army 6x6 trucks and 1 bulldozer, all destroyed.[3685] Capt J. D. Ward's Marines of E/2/9 thoroughly searched the area for mines and an intelligence team searched the former camp. Marines stacked all the ordnance in two bunkers, cleared the area, and exploded the munitions. Their mission completed, the Marines departed Lang Vei.[3686]]

03 JANUARY 1969

HOLDER, PFC Carl Lewis H/2/9

At 2230H in the vicinity of XD712388 (about 2 clicks NE of Lao Bao), PFC Holder was accidentally shot twice in his chest in an ambush site and DOW.[3687]

04 JANUARY 1969

ABOLINS, PFC Janis C/1/4

On 03 January 1969 at 1035H, a patrol from C/1/4 was cutting its way through the brush when the point man detonated a booby trap device resulting in 1 KIA and 1 WIA (evacuated).[3688]

14 JANUARY 1969

SHOCK, CPL Jack Dean H&S/1/4

[During January, 1969, 1/4 suffered 3 KIA and 18 WIA.[3689]]

[3677] Smith, Charles R., U.S. Marines in Vietnam, High Mobility and Standdown, 1969, Washington, D.C.: History and Museums Division, HQMC, 1988, p. 15.

[3678] Ibid., p. 17.

[3679] Su Doan 304 (Ky Su) (Tap II) [304th Division (Chronology) (Vol 2), Hanoi: Nha Xuat Ban Quan Nhan Dan [People's Army Publishing House], 1990, p. 116.

[3680] Thomas J. Harnisher, letter of 4 July 2000 (printed in Khe Sanh Veterans Red Clay 47 (Fall, 2000) 17-19; Conversation with Thomas J. Harnisher, 13 March 2005.

[3681] 9th Mar OpO 1-69 (Operation DAWSON RIVER WEST) in 9th Mar ComdC Dec68, gives the task organization as 9th Mar and all three of its battalions plus C/3rd Eng Bn and Dets from 7th ITT, 3rd SP and 1st MP. On D-Day, 1/9 assaulted LZ Bagpipe (XD692445), LZ Copper (XD706440) and LZ Shenandoah (XD688420); 2/9 assaulted into LZ Rick (XD719380) and LZ Crystal (XD754367), and 3/9 provided security for FSB Cates and Hills 691 and 950; 9th Mar ComdC January, 1969.

[3682] 9th Mar ComdC January, 1969, Encl (1), p. II-1.

[3683] Comments of Col Robert H. Barrow, HQMC Oral History Tape #3844.

[3684] Smith, op. cit., p. 19.

[3685] Ordnance included 6 RPG rounds with boosters, 1 50mm mortar base plates, 1 3.5 rocket launcher, 2 3.5 rounds, 20 M-79 rounds, 23 60mm HE rounds, 5 60mm illum rounds, 3 82mm rounds, 1000 rounds of .30 cal, 22 106mm RR rounds, 200 .50 cal rounds, 3 ChiCom grenades, 1 NVA hell box. [9th Mar ComdC, January, 1969, Encl (1), p. III-7].

[3686] LCPL Bob Kerr, III MAF News Release No. 120-69, 15 January 1969; printed in III MAF: Sea Tiger 5:5 (31 January 1969) 3.

[3687] 9th Mar ComdC, January, 1969, Encl (1), p. III-5

[3688] 3rd MarDiv ComdC, January, 1969, Encl (1), p. 7. The Coffelt database does not indicate any KIA from 1/4 for 3 January but does list 1 KIA from C/1/4 for 4 Jan. The Coffelt database does, however, list a LCPL John Robert Kunkel, KIA 3 January 1969, unit: III MAF. The 1/4 Command Chronology for January, 1969, indicates there were 3 KIA from that battalion during January, 1969. Since the Coffelt database lists several with units of "III MAF," it is not possible to determine which ones were with 1/4.

[3689] 1/4 ComdC January, 1969, Encl (1), p. 25.

08 FEBRUARY 1969

HOWARD, PFC Rodger Dale D/1/4

At 1225 on 7 February 1969, the 3rd Platoon of D/1/4 was inserted at XD864577 and began moving to FSB NEVILLE (XD8257) with power sources. The weather prevented resupply by helicopter.[3690] At 0945H on 08 February D-3 made contact at XD832580 and at 1608 the same patrol made contact with 4 NVA resulting in 1 KIA, 3 WIA and 2 NVA KIA.[3691]

24 FEBRUARY 1968

WEBER, PFC Joseph Alan B/1/4

At 2320H, an explosion of a M-26 grenade in the 1/4 transient area killed one and injured 13 others.[3692]

25 FEBRUARY 1969

BARRON, CPL Jeffrey Michael	G/3/12[3693]
BROGAN, PFC Robert Henry	H&S/2/4
COFFEY, PFC Robert Allen	E/2/4[3694]
DAVIS, HM2 Kenneth	3/12
DICKENS, PFC Odell	H&S/2/4
FLINT, PFC Raymond Lloyd	H/2/4
FORSBERG, PFC Douglas Bruce	H&S/2/4
GARCIA, LCPL Steven Vargas	H/2/4
GASTON, PFC Juan	H&S/2/4[3695]
GILLIAM, LCPL Kenneth Ray	H//3/12[3696]
HUNT, 2/Lt William Howard	E/2/4
JENKINS, PFC Michael Lee	E/2/4
KELLUM, LCPL Norman Wade	B/3/12
LAMARR, PFC Walter Loren	H/2/4
LEWIS, LCPL Donald Randell	H/3/12
LOGAN, LCPL James Dwight	E/2/4
LYONS, PFC Marion Wayne	H/3/12
MACON, PFC Samuel Cornelius	H/2/4[3697]
MC GRATH, LCPL Thomas Howard	3/12
MILLER, CPL Tommy Neal	E/2/4[3698]
PESCHEL, PFC James Douglas	H/3/12
PRZYBLINSKI, LCPL Gerald	H/3/12
RAMSEY, PFC Randolph Raymond	E/2/4
ROE, PFC Royce Evert	H/2/4[3699]
RUTGERS, PFC David Lynn	H/3/12
SAUNDERS, LCPL Bruce Allan	E/2/4
SEEL, HM2 Walter Phillip, Jr.	?[3700]
SHARP, PFC Allen Morris	E/2/4
SIKORSKI, LCPL Larry Joseph	H/3/12
SMITH, PFC Willie Franklin	H/2/4
TRAIL, PFC Robert Hill III	H&S/2/4
TUCKER, PFC James Eric	H&S/2/4
WALSH, HN Donald Kevin	H&S/2/4
WELDY, PFC George W Jr.	H&S/2/4
ZAPPIA, PFC Michael Lee	H/2/4
ZAWADZKI, CPL Gerald David	H/2/4

FSB NEVILLE was defended by three guns of G Battery, 3/12, and Marine infantrymen of G Co reinforced with two platoons of H Co, 2/4.

The Commanding Officer of 2/4, LtCol Joseph Edward Hopkins, described FSB NEVILLE: "NEVILLE is a very rocky piece of ground and digging bunkers down into it is extremely difficult, but through a combination of digging and piling rocks and filling sand bags with rocks, we managed to get enough bunkers which were sunk low enough into the ground so that they offered very poor targets for RPG rounds and for the traditional sapper charges, large satchel charges and quarter and half-pound blocks of TNT with which the average sapper attack wreaks so much destruction."[3701] The surrounding terrain consisted of "high ridges, very sharp ridges with a very small amount of navigable terrain on top, extremely thick brush, and at least double and quite often triple canopy on all the mountains and down in the stream beds."[3702] The weather also played a significant factor; low-lying clouds socked-in NEVILLE much of the time. There were 3 days in which the FSB was completely shrouded by cloud cover.[3703]

3690 1/4 ComdC February, 1969, Encl (1), p. 4.
3691 Ibid., p. 11.
3692 1/4 ComdC, February, 1969, Encl (1), pp. 7 & 17.
3693 The Casualty Card in HQMC Historical Center, Wash, D.C., indicates G Battery, 3/12. Listed as C/3/12 in the Coffelt database.
3694 The Casualty Card in HQMC Historical Center, Wash, D.C., indicates E/2/4. Listed as III MAF in the Coffelt database.
3695 The Casualty Card in HQMC Historical Center, Wash, D.C., indicates H&S/2/4. Listed as III MAF in the Coffelt database.
3696 The Casualty Card in HQMC Historical Center, Wash, D.C., indicates H Battery, 3/12. Listed as 3/12 in the Coffelt database.
3697 The Casualty Card in HQMC Historical Center, Wash, D.C., indicates H/2/4. Listed as III MAF in the Coffelt database.
3698 The Casualty Card in HQMC Historical Center, Wash, D.C., indicates E/2/4. The Coffelt database indicates III MAF.
3699 The Casualty Card in HQMC Historical Center, Wash, D.C., indicates H/2/4. The Coffelt database indicates III MAF.
3700 Indicated in Coffelt database as attached to 3/5. However, the article by Janie Blankenship, "Hell Rains Down on Russell and Neville," VFW 95:5 (January, 2008), p. 46, indicates HM2 Walter Phillip Seel, Jr., as receiving a Silver Star Medal posthumously for actions on FSB NEVILLE on 25 Feb 1969.
3701 Comments of LtCol Joseph Edward Hopkins, HQMC Oral History Tape #4341.
3702 Ibid.
3703 Ibid.

The 6 of Co H, Capt. John Knight, remembers the night on NEVILLE as something "right out of a horror movie with fog drifting through the trees."[3704]

At 1730H on 24 February 1969, H/2/4 (-)[3705] on FSB NEVILLE (XD8257) reported 30 NVA proceeding east towards FSB Neville in the vicinity of XD816572. The NVA appeared to be carrying SKS and AK-47 rifles and light machine guns. At 2330H, H/2/4 reported receiving small arms fire from the southeast of their position on FSB Neville. By 0001H, 25 February, the NVA (from the 246th Regiment)[3706] fired 82mm mortars on the position followed by an assault by an unknown size unit at 0100 firing small arms, RPGs and ChiCom grenades thrown into the Marines' position from the south and east after trying to draw fire by making a great deal of noise outside the perimeter with wooden sticks and metal banging against rocks. At 0215, contact between the Co H CP and the artillery battery CP was lost, and at 0255 the NVA began the brunt of their assault on the western side of the perimeter. As their mortar fire died, ground troops assaulted the perimeter with satchel charges as they progressed. Comm with H-1 was lost at 0300, and at 0325 the action died down until 0400 when Co H began to receive small arms fire which continued until 0700. H/2/4 was able to consolidate, gather its WIA, redistribute ammunition, and reestablish its perimeter. NVA bodies were found with satchel charges strapped to their backs and with opium in their possession, apparently prepared to destroy themselves in suicidal attempts to seize the hill. Two wounded NVA deliberately blew themselves up to avoid capture. The small detachment that used a radio direction finder had destroyed all their gear and equipment with a thermite grenade. At 0855 a medevac of WIA and KIA commenced; Co H had suffered 11 KIA and 42 WIA (29 evacuated).[3707] When casualties of the small 2-man radio detachment (which was overrun by NVA sappers in the initial assault, and other attachments are included, the total is 14 USMC KIA and 29 WIA on NEVILLE.[3708]

During this attack of H/2/4 on FSB Neville, HOTEL Battery, 3/12, on FSB RUSSELL (XD9159) fired in support of FSB NEVILLE. FSB RUSSELL was defended by platoons of Companies E, F, and K of 2/4 and H and mortar batteries of the 12th Marines, plus a detachment of 1st Searchlight Battery. A Navy Corpsman, Rich Woy, attached to E-3 on RUSSELL had just returned to his bunker and recalls Lt. Hunt whispering at the opening of his hooch in the pitch black darkness: "Be quiet, there's gooks right outside the front door."[3709] Then, RUSSELL, manned by Co E/2/4, began receiving incoming mortars at 0350H followed by a sapper attack on the northeastern portion of the perimeter with satchel charges. The enemy swiftly breached the perimeter under cover of mortars and hit all the main CPs simultaneously (Company CP, 81mm mortar FDC, artillery FDC, and the platoon CPs).

Charles R. "Rick" Davis, on FSB RUSSELL remembers the night: "I ended up going into a bunker with a kid ..., a kid I had looked up to—tough, LA-street kid, and he immediately started screaming for his mother and climbed underneath a bottom rack. The only thing that saved me and him was this doorway to our bunker [which] had a blanket over it. They knew we were in there, of course, and they tried to throw these satchel charges in. It was dark. The satchel charge hit the blanket and fell down and blew up. They tried about 3 times, came around the back of the bunker where I was sitting in a corner. I was ready for them. I figured I'd just get a couple. And I heard them digging under the back wall (made of rock and dirt-filled 105 wood ammo crates)[3710], so I got on the other side, and they blew the wall and it collapsed, and they left us alone. Then the suppression fire from the Rock Pile started. They were off a little ways. They got a bunker right next to us, and we took a direct hit with a mortar right on top of the bunker and survived."[3711]

All communication with FSB Russell was lost until 0415 when it was reestablished and the company commander called in a heavy artillery ring of steel around the position. At 0535, the NVA force held half the inside of the position and fighting consisted of hand-to-hand combat on an individual basis. At daybreak, the few surviving NVA withdrew from the perimeter and Co E/2/4 began to consolidate, redistribute ammunition, and gather its 38 WIA and 18 KIA.[3712] Of the 60 Marines of H Battery, 3/12, 8 wee KIA and another 25-30 WIA.[3713] 25 NVA bodies were bound within FSB Russell, identified as members of the 27th NVA Regiment.[3714]

[3704] Quoted in Blankenship, Janie, "Hell Rains Down on Russell and Neville," VFW 95:5 (January, 2008), p. 43.
[3705] 3rd platoon of H/2/4 occupied Hill 950.
[3706] Smith, op. cit., p. 22.
[3707] 2/4 ComdC February, 1969, Encl (1), p. 23.
[3708] Blankenship, Jamie, "Hell Rains Down on Russell and Neville,"VFW 95:5 (Januay, 2008), p. 46.
[3709] Blankenship, Janie, "Hell Rains Down on Russell and Neville," VFW 95:5 (January, 2008), p. 42.
[3710] Conversation with Charles R. Davis, 19 February 1995.
[3711] Conversation with Charles R. Davis, 23 September 1994.
[3712] 2/4 ComdC February, 1969, Encl (1), p. 24. Blankenship lists 24 American KIA (15 infantry of 2/4 and 9 artillerymen of 3/12 and 77 WIA. [Blankenship, Janie, "Hell Rains Down on Russell and Neville," VFW 95:5 (January, 2008), p. 43].
[3713] Statement by Ken Heins in: Blankenship, Janie, "Hell Rains Down on Russell and Neville," VFW 95:5 (January, 2008), p. 43. Heins is listed as President of the LZ Russell Association.
[3714] Comments of LtCol Joseph Edward Hopkins, HQMC Oral History Tape #4341.

By 0605, as consolidation of the two positions began, there were only 2 officers and 1 Staff NCO left from the original complement.[3715]

Although WIA and KIA were successfully evacuated from FSB Neville on the 25th, the NVA moved in 6 or 7 mortars ringing the position and every time a helicopter attempted to come into the FSB, these placed a heavy barrage of rounds making it impossible for the helicopters to land. There were no additional troops available other than those manning the FSB, now greatly weakened by the attack,[3716] and unfavorable weather precluded resupply. FSB Neville was closed off for ten days, while FSB Russell was relieved by K/3/4.[3717] In order to break the siege, Companies F/2/4 (which had been re-opening FSB Alpine, XD758528) and G/2/4 (on FSB Cates, XD926443) commenced a 6-day overland march up the Lang Ho Valley through "a piece of terrain that was thickly jungle-vegetated, high mountains, negative trails, no LZs, and heavy enemy activity throughout."[3718] They successfully reached FSB Neville, broke a 10-day siege, and then moved out in the offensive.[3719]

[The battle of 25 February 1969 launched Operation PURPLE MARTIN[3720] which commended 27 February 1969 (and terminated 08 May 1969), conducted by 4th Marine Regiment supported by 3/12 artillery and "A" Company, 3rd Engineer Bn.[3721] The AO was basically the SCOTLAND AO north of Route 9 and south of the DMZ.[3722] The 3 battalions of 4th Marines operated within their own AOs: 1/4, to the west, operated from FSB ARGONNE (XD675572), 2/4 from FSB NEVILLE, and 3/4 operated in the eastern area of the PURPLE MARTIN AO out of LZ MACK and LZ SIERRA.[3723]

01 March 1969

DELGADO, LCPL Raymond Rodriguez	C/1/4
JMAEFF, CPL George Victor	C/1/4
MENNINGER, PFC Robert Patrick	C/1/4

The NVA had started their Winter-Spring Offensive on the night of 24 February and the 4th Marine Regiment, fanned out on FSBs just under the DMZ to the Laotian border, was deployed to stop their new push.[3724] Action started on 01 March near LZ MACK, an old firebase abandoned for about a month (XD9661, Hill 484), at 0430 as C/1/4 received 4 rounds of 60mm mortar in their perimeter causing 3 WIA (evacuated). The following morning, C/1/4 commenced their assault of LZ MACK. It was known that the NVA had heavily fortified the position and over 3000 rounds were fired in prep for the assault, but as the assault commenced, it was apparent the NVA occupied the bunker labyrinth and was determined to hold. 1/Lt Herron, CO of C/1/4, placed his base of fire on LZ AMY (XD973615) and used 2 platoons in the assault. Enroute, the assaulting platoons encountered numerous booby traps consisting of ChiCom grenades and DH-10 claymores detonated by trip wire; these booby traps were to inflict numerous casualties throughout Operation PURPLE MARTIN. Following a mortar barrage, the platoons of C/1/4 withdrew to LZ AMY for the night and Co L/3/4 was moved to LZ AMY as a reserve force. The NVA 82mm and 60mm mortars continued to fire during the withdrawal, and C/1/4 suffered 2 KIA and 21 WIA (evacuated).[3725]

03 March 1969

ANGEL, PFC Michael Eugene	C/1/4
CROWDER, PFC Harold Edward	L/3/4
GODING, PFC Robert Earle	C/1/4
HEISER, LCPL John Louis	H&S/1/4
LANE, LCPL Austin Clifford	L/3/4
LYNN, PFC Roy Eugene	C/1/4
MANGOLD, PFC Leo Joseph	C/1/4
NINOW, HM3 William Charles	H&S/3/4
RODRIGUES, SGT Joe G Jr.	L/3/4
RUDD, HM2 Donald Lee	L/3/4
SCHAEFER, PFC Thomas Koenig	C/1/4
SCHULTZ, PFC Gerald Wayne	G/2/4
SHAUM, PFC Ray Thomas Jr.	C/1/4

[3715] 3rd MarDiv ComdC, February, 1969, Encl (1), p. 10.
[3716] Ibid.
[3717] Comments of Maj Larry R. Ogle, HQMC Oral History Tape #4341. Maj Ogle was the S-3 of 2/4.
[3718] Ibid.
[3719] Ibid.
[3720] Comments of LtCol Joseph Edward Hopkins, HQMC Oral History Tape #4341.
[3721] Comments of Maj George X. McKenna, HQMC Oral History Tape #4341. Maj McKenna was S-3, 4th Marine Regiment. Originally, the operation was named MASSACHUSETTS BAY. On 28 Feb, Opn SCOTLAND II was terminated and SITREPs were prepared on a 4th Marines operation without code name, involving 2/4 and 3/4 while ¼ continued MASSACHUSETTS BAY. On 02 March, 4th Marines was notified that Operation MASSACHUSETTS BAY was changed to PURPLE MARTIN and on 11 April 1969, 4th Marines was notified that the unnamed operation of the 4th Marines was now considered part of Operation PURPLE MARTIN. [CO, 4th Marines, letter of 4 July 1969, to CG, 3rd MarDiv, in 4th Mar ComdC May, 1969, Encl (7), AAR Operation PURPLE MARTIN.
[3722] Map in FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, March, 1969, p. 6.
[3723] Comments of Maj George X. McKenna, HQMC Oral History Tape #4341.
[3724] 4th Mar, AAR Operation PURPLE MARTIN, op. cit., p. 11.
[3725] Ibid., p. 12.

TAYLOR, PFC Philip Joseph C/1/4

On 02 March 1969, the action diminished to sniper fire and occasional 60mm and 82mm mortar fire, causing 2 WIA (minor) for L/3/4 and 2 WIA (evacuated) and 50 WIA (minor) to C/1/4.[3726]

At 0430H on 3 March 1969, the perimeter of C/1/4 and L/3/4 received a ground attack at their north and northeast sector. The enemy penetrated their defenses and inflicted casualties from the rear on personnel in their fighting holes. When the firing started, the ambush on the northeast finger tried to return to the lines. However, several NVA had positioned themselves between the ambush and the lines and the ambush was hit with small arms fire causing all members to be either KIA or WIA. The two companies suffered 9 KIA and 6 WIA.[3727]

05 MARCH 1969

BRAKE, LCPL Boyd Lawerence	C/1/4
DE WILDE, PFC Peter F Jr.	C/3rd Recon
DUSEAU, PFC Richard Frank	I/3/4
FERGUSON, 2/Lt David Charles	C/3rd Recon
JAY, CPL Robert Vern	I/3/4
JENKINS, PFC Robert Henry Jr.	C/3rd Recon
LANE, PFC Gerald Bruce	I/3/4
THOMAS, CPL Charles Wayne	C/1/4

At 051215H, I/3/4 (at XD964627) received 82mm mortar fire resulting in 1 KIA. At 051430H, at the same location, I/3/4 received additional 82mm mortar fire causing another KIA.[3728] At 1500H, following an extensive artillery prep, C/1/4 assaulted LZ MACK with 2 platoons, securing the hilltop with 8 WIA. After the position had been taken, however, they suffered 2 KIA due to RPG fire from several NVA who had slipped into a draw south of the hill.[3729]

Fred Ostrom describes the participation of recon at the battle of ARGONNE:[3730]

"Originally, 2-C-1 was fragged for this mission. P.L. CPL Steve Lowery wanted to take a M60 so he requested additional men. 3-C-1 was selecfdted and Fred Ostrom, Robert Jenkins, Jr., Larry Harrod, and Danny Tirado came along. 2-C-1 included CPL Steve Lowery, Peter DeWilde, Jr., Eddie Bridges, J.J. Jackson, Jr., and Doc Larry Turner. Darrell Eriksen (SGT) caqme along because he was on an earlier team that was shot out of the LZ and Lt Dave Ferguson also accompanied as did Doc "Rock" Bradford. This was an extremely hot location. Prior to March 3rd, three teams attempted to get in but were shot out with heavy SAW. We were supposed to set up on the old Firebase and run patrols off the hill, gathering info on enemy activity—numbers, types of weaponry, etc.

"March 3rd we were inserted onto the hill with no problems in the late afternoon. We set up at the highest point of the hill. They had worked the hill over heavily just before we came in. We had a few hours before sunset and beefed up our positions (fighting holes) in preparation for the night. Lowery set it up like 6 hands on a clock with 2 men per hole.

"Even though Lowery was outranked by Ferguson, Bradford and Ericksen, he was in charge of the mission. Normally I was the primary radioman, Steve used his operator from 2-C-1 for comm.. I was asst. machine gunner with Robert Jenkins, which was kind of funny because I was a 30-day wonder through ITR. I had never fired the M60. I got OJT that night.

"I don't know what month 2-C-1's guys were in country or the guys from H&S, but [of] 3-C-1, I had 7 months in country, Robert had a little under 12 mos., Danny had about 11 mos. and Larry Harrod 9-10 mos. We had been together quite awhile.

"Everythkoing was pretty quiet the first 4-5 hours. But about 2 AM, March 4th, we started getting movement in the wire. The base was basically two tiers. We had jungle on 3 sides with a fair slope and maybe 700-800 yards from the LZ up to our position. We had trip flares going off on 360°. We started taking small arms fire and grenades. We opened up with our weapons, plus M79 and M60 as well as Claymores. We also responded with a fire mission on our perimeter. I can't remember how big the guns were, but I speculate they were 155s, plus we had an illumination fire mission going as well as HE. The firefight lasted about an hour with no casualties to us, and we couldn't confirm any casualties on their side. We later learned we were up against a reinforced platoon of NVA. You could see the Laotian border from our pos and we were 3-4 clicks from the DMZ. The rest of the night was uneventful, and we took turns throughout the night on watch and sleeping.

"We awoke the morning of the 4th at daybreak had breakfast and then started reinforcing our fighting holes. Digging in and piling sandbagts. After lunch we went down into the wire and set up a mess of trip flares and booby traps as well as claymores. Lots of them. The day was very uneventful, although I'm sure there were eyes on us.

"We had dinner and set up watch. We had also built a FO bunker at the top of the hill overlooking the LZ. It was a gradual slope wide open for hundreds of yards. Darrell Ericksen took first watch as FO in the bunker. We had called in the numbers for arty, and settled in. It was extremely quiet through until about 3 AM March 5th. FO came into the main perimeter letting us know of

---

[3726] Ibid.
[3727] Ibid., p. 13.
[3728] 1/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 3; 4th Mar, AAR Operation PURPLE MARTIN, op. cit., p. 13.
[3729] 4th Mar, AAR Operation PURPLE MARTIN, op. cit., p. 14..
[3730] Fred Ostrom, "Battle at FSB ARGONNE, March 3-5, 1969, in his letter of 29 June 2006.

movement in the LZ, and we again had movement in the wire.

"This time they opened up with CS and started in with SAW and grenades. We started blowing the claymores and boobytraps as the fire escalated. Robert and I were pouring fire down one of the steep slopes and it didn't take them long to zero in on us. We called in arty on the coordinates we called in earlier and returned heavy fire down from all positions. That was when 1 ChiCom came into me and Roberts' position. Robert jumped up, shoved me out of the way, and dovered the grenade with his body. He absorbed the majority of the blast, succumbing from the wounds (heavy) he received from the blast. I was badly wounded in my left arm and hand. It turned out I was the most severely wounded person with my arm broke in 4 places and my hand also torn up from the wrist. Steve called arty in closer and got PUFF going, laying fire in almost on top of us. We were taking heavy fire 360°. Lt Ferguson was killed instantly by a grenade as well as Pete Dewilde who had been lobbing [M]-79 rounds down on the gooks. A NVA worked his way into our perimeter and shot and killed Pete. He also wounded Lowery who was busy adjusting arty and PUFF and had called in close air support still very close to oru perimeter. After wounding Steve, the NVA zeroed in on me, wounding me in my right thigh. I was told he was fixing to shoot at me again when J.J. dispatched him. Eddie Bridges Tirado and J.J. Jackson was also wounded. At the end of the confronteation we had 3 KIA and contrary to the after action reports we had seven wounded. I think they didn't count some of the guys because they didn't go to 3rd Med. Finally about sunrise Steve called in birds to give support as well as medevac birds. The more severely wounded were loaded on ponchos and loaded on the birds. Steve refused to be loaded on until all of the other wounded were on the birds as well as our KIAs and he was loaded last. The medevacs came in under heavy fire and evacuated the whole team.

"38 years later it's still a wonder how any of us survived the battle. Personally I think it was because most of the team had T.I. (time in country) and everyone did their job above and beyond. I still can't understand why they never used their mortars on the medevacs. Or on us. They had us completely surrounded. I think we did a lot of damage to their numbers and they didn't have enough people left to overrun us.

"That night there were heroes all over the place. Later on 1 MOH was awarded, 1 Navy Cross (Lowery). DeWilde and Bradford and Ericksen received Silver Stars. I think 3 Bronze Stars and 12 Purple Hearts. I am extremely pround to have served with this group of guys. For a team that was pretty much thrown together at the last minute, we meshed and we survived.

"There is not a day goes by where I don't think of Robert or my other teammates."

In a follow-up letter, Fred Ostrom also writes:[3731]

"The first thing was: why were they so adamant about putting a recon squad 3 other times when that location was so hot? None of the other three teams (7-man teams) were ever able to set foot on the deck. SGT Darrell Eriksen was in the team before ours who were shot out, knowing the difficulties it seems to me, instead of putting an extended team (ours) they should have committed the grunts in force. By the time we came in I think the gooks saw we weren't going to stop trying to insert, so they laid back, letting us land and then attack us at the weak moments of a recon mission, try to overrun the team at night. I'm sure they had plenty of scouts out to gather information on our strength and weaponry, and of course our set up on the top of the hill as well as our defenses (claymores etc) and the way our positions of our fighting holes. The first night they were just checking our reactions and our strengths and weaknesses. We lost no one to injury or death, but although we really didn't have any confirms, with our support and the way we set up and fought, I'm sure we had inflicted casualties.

"The next day we strengthened our fighting positions, laid out more trip flares, claymores and booby traps, which was done all in the open, so they knew what was awaiting them. They decided to come at us in force. Obviously the M-60 stayed one place too long because they zeroed in close almost from the beginning, especially with the tear gas and ChiComs, as Robert and I were the first to fall.

"One thing that's always bothered me was this was a reinforced platoon, maybe bigger, which as you probably know included mortar teams. They had us pinned on a 360 at the top of the hikll with no escape and they never implemented their mortars. Whether we got them early with our major support of what. They never really put a whole lot of men on the attack after the initial attack, and when we were being medevaced they never uwsed the mortars to stop the birds which would have been the smart thing to do.

"We were given a few confirmed kills, but I think we must have really inflicted great harm to their troops, so much that they couldn't really close the deal and overrun us, because there were only 3 of our men not wounded, and 7 in serious stages of hurt, none of them our corpsmen. We for some reason lucked out, and I had Turner and Bradford, 2 solid battle-tested veteran corpsmen that were not only fighting but looking after the seven wounded. Talk about above and behond!! Obviously they had a lot to do woith 9 of us coming off that h ill alive...

"There are at least 2 givens that night. The first was God was looking after us, because everything that happeneed pointed towards none of us surviving. Secondly, the professionalism and courage of DOCKLEAF that night had everything to do with our survival (as well as our support and medevacs).

[3731] Letter from Fred Ostrom, 12 July 2006.

"Something that should be remembered is the team was thrown together the night before we left—3 men came from H&S, 5 from 2C1 Lowery's team and 4 from my team, 3C1. None of us ever worked together other than the guys in their own teams, yet we melded together perfectly when the Sierra hit the fan."

Officially, team DOCKLEAF (2-C-1 and 3-C-1 of 3rd Reconnaissance Bn), fought off a reinforced NVA platoon during the early morning hours of 05 March while patrolling FSB ARGONNE. 3 Marines of the patrol were KIA and 2 were WIA (PFC Daniel Tirado, later KIA on 7 May 1969, and LCPL Larry Harrod later KIA from PTSD). The other members of the patrol made it out safely.[3732]

PFC Jenkins was later awarded the Medal of Honor (Posthumous). From his Citation: "PFC Jenkins and another Marine quickly moved into a two-man fighting emplacement, and as they boldly delivered accurate machine-gun fire against the enemy, a North Vietnamese soldier threw a hand grenade into a friendly emplacement. Fully realizing the inevitable results of his actions, PFC Jenkins quickly seized his comrade, and pushing the man to the ground, he leaped on top of the Marine to shield him from the explosion. Absorbing the full impact of the detonation, PFC Jenkins was seriously injured and subsequently succumbed to his wounds."[3733]

Decades past, and Fred Ostrom, who survived this battle, finally visited Jenkins' gravesite, "..a small black cemetery way out in the boonies. I couldn't believe a Medal of Honor recipient was buried in such an overgrown, disheveled dump. When I returned home, I started out with pleas to refurbish his grave and cemetery. With a letter to the Palattea, Florida, newspaper, I started out to shame the local people into helping out, and with the help of fellow reconners, Senator John McCain, the Director of the MOH Society, and the State Director of the V.A., we got the project moving. About 2 years later, I went down to Interlachen, Fl., for the rededication of Jenkin's grave and cemetery. They replaced all of his stones. It was beautiful! We now have a group of ROTC kids keeping it up. You probably wonder why I do all of this? Well, I'm the Marine who was in the machinegun hole with Robert when a grenade came in. He shoved me out of the way and covered the grenade with his body. He is the main reason I'm still around. As a matter of fact, he's also the reason my son and daughter are alive as well as my grandsons and grand-daughter... There isn't a day that goes by I don't think of him... He was a very devout Christian. A nicer guy you'll never know."[3734]

06 March 1969

ACUNIA, LCPL Edgar	A/1/4
WINGENBACH, PFC Glenn S Jr.	L/3/4

At 0930H, L/3/4 had an engineer team on LZ MACK (XD960624). While disarming a DH-10 claymore mine, the mine was detonated resulting in 2 KIA and 2 WIA (evacuated).[3735]

07 March 1969

ARROYO, PFC Ramon Jaime	H/2/3
GREENWOOD, PFC Dale Edward	H/2/3
MC DONALD, PFC Lewis Levi	H/2/3

Co H/2/3 at FSB Cunningham, while boarding a CH-46 helicopter, was hit by an undetermined explosion causing 3 KIA.[3736]

David Brombaugh recalls: "I was in the rear to go home with Peck when this happened. Peck IDd them and I was sent to meds and graves looking for a man named J. Butler who was missing from this 3-7-69 incident. He was blown down the hill from the blast, knocked-out, and sent to an Army hospital as the Army was also on CUNNINGHAM. He made it back to Quang Tri as I returned from the search."[3737]

09 March 1969

FRANCIS, PFC Lindell	H&S/2/3
GONANO, PFC James Martin ?	III MAF
GRASSIA, PFC Joseph Jr. ?	III MAF[3738]
REX, CAPT Robert F.	23rd TASS
WALTERS, SSGT Tim Leroy	MACV

Platoon G-1 of 2/4, searching the area around XD824606 began to take small arms fire and RPGs. Sporadic fighting continued all day. The remainder of the Company (-) reinforced G-1 and attempted to search the area at 1600, receiving small arms fire, RPG rounds

---

[3732] 4th Mar, AAR Operation PURPLE MARTIN, op. cit., p. 14, Para. u.; Article, "God Bless Them All," in 3rd Recon Bn Association, Harborsite, p. 9. The others who were not WIA or KIA: Fred Ostrom, CPL Steve Lowery, SGT Darrell Eriksen, Doc Rock Bradford, Doc Larry Turner, PFC J. J. Jackson, and PFC Eddie Bridges; Letter from George G. Neville, Jr., 2 June 1998.

[3733] Contained in Jordan, Kenneth N., Sr., Heroes of Our Time, Atglen, Pa.: Schiffer Military/Aviation History, 1994, p. 268.

[3734] Letter from Fred D. Ostrom, 29 June 2006.

[3735] Ibid., p. 14; 1/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 12.

[3736] 2/3 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 10.

[3737] Letter from David Brombaugh, 3 March 2006. David provided the names of the KIA.

[3738] Although GONANO and GRASSIA are listed as members of "III MAF" in the Coffelt database, they are the only two that could possibly be the 2 KIA of G/2/4.

and mortar rounds, resulting in 1 KIA.[3739] The patrol suffered 2 KIA and 6 WIA (evacuated) in a firefight in the vicinity of LZ CATAPULT (XD825616), a friendly Fire Support Base located 4,000 meters from FSB NEVILLE that had been abandoned earlier in the year, subsequently occupied by the NVA. The NVA used claymore mines with small arms at 10-15 meters.[3740]

On 9 March 1969, CAPT Robert F. Rex, pilot, and SSGT Tim Leroy Walters, MACVSOG observer, were flying an 02A aircraft (#67-21425) on a combat support mission over Laos. Another aircraft (identified only as KNIFE 55) reported that CAPT Rex's aircraft crashed due to unknown causes in the vicinity of XD524658 at approximately 1150H. A ground team inspected the wreckage and reported that both of the occupants were dead. Hostile fire, however, prevented them from recovering the remains. An aircraft engine was on top of SSGT Walters.[3741] The area of the crash is approximately 10 miles west of the DMZ,[3742] the location of the B5-T8 Front Headquarters of the NVA during the 1968 siege battle of Khe Sanh. Remains of SSGT Walters were discovered during JTF-FA investigations in early 1999 and positively identified.[3743]

[During early March, 1969, reconnaissance teams reported a major increase in truck and tracked vehicle activity along Route 926, a road in the southern portion of the former SCOTLAND AO; these reports were reinforced by electronic sensor reports which reflected the introduction of tracked vehicle units into South Vietnam by the invading North Vietnam Army units.[3744] With 9th Marines Operation DEWEY CANYON in Base Area 611 and the 101st Airborne Division's Operation MASSACHUSETTS STRIKER in the A Shau clogging the NVA's primary line of communication to the south, the use of Route 926 was expected. Triggered by these reports, III MAF launched Operation MAINE CRAG.[3745] Operation MAINE CRAG was launched at 101610H/March 1969 with the helicopter movement of Bn 2/3 to LZ HAWK (XD895405).[3746] Original plans were for a helicopter movement into the salient, but bad weather precluded that and the battalion moved 7 kilometers southwest shanks mare to FSB SNAPPER (XD843345) during a moonless night over area filled with streams and elephant grass as Capt M. J. Reilly led Co F/2/3, the point company, amazingly and professionally advanced and arrived.[3747] On 15 March, a battery of 105mm howitzers arrived on FSB SNAPPER and 3 companies of 2/3 commenced an overland move to the south to Route #926 as E/2/3 provided security for FSB SNAPPER. The next day, F/2/3 arrived at FSB SAIGON (XD818275) where they found small bunkers and candles still burning. Meanwhile, Task Force Remagen (from the 1st Infantry Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) staged at Ca Lu (YD015455) began to move west over Route 9 on 17 March, opening the road.[3748] On 19 March, Col. P. D. La Fond's 3rd Marine Regiment assumed OPCON of TF Remagen under command of Army LtCol Carmelo P. Milia (which consisted of Co B, 1st Bn, 61st Mechanized Infantry; Co C, 1st Bn, 77th Armor; Battery C, 1st Bn, 40th Artillery (105mm self-propelled); 2 M42 self-propelled Dusters (dual mounted 40mm cannon) from 1st Bn, 44th Artillery (AWSP), 4.2 mortars (self-propelled) from 1st Bn, 77th Armor, and Army and Marine bulldozers, all organized into 3 teams.[3749] 13 bypasses around destroyed bridges were constructed, washouts were spanned, and the road swept for mines, finding them in 2 locations.. Despite all these obstacles, the Task Force arrived by nightfall on 18 March, marking the reopening of Route 9 for armored traffic. C-1-77 Armor began moving west on Route 9 at 190800H and on 20 March moved through the abandoned Special Forces camp at Lang Vei (XD795363) and then turned south along the Laotian border toward Highway 926.[3750]]

3739 2/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 11.

3740 4th Mar, AAR Operation PURPLE MARTIN, op. cit., p. 14, Para. v.

3741 Circumstances of Loss, 3 November 1975, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #328, Folder #93 (Rex); JCRC Biographic Report as of 20 March 1979 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #308, Folder #16 (Walters)

3742 Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 177.

3743 Ibid.

3744 Smith, op. cit., p. 63.

3745 FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Force, Vietnam, March, 1969, p. 7.

3746 3rd Mar, AAR Operation MAINE CRAG (Search and Destroy), p. 11.

3747 Smith, op. cit., p. 64.

3748 1st of the 5th Mech Div, AAR, unnamed operation, 31 May 1969, p. 9, contained in 3rd MarDiv ComdC May 1969, Encl 5B, After Action Reports, Tab A. Phase I of Tack Force REMAGEN (160800H/Mar69 – 111300H/Apr69) was under the control of 1st Bn, 77th Armor and organized into Task Force Control and 2 teams: Team B (B/1-61 Mech (-3rd Plt) and 2/C/1-77 Armor); and Team C (C/1-77 Armor (-2nd Plt) and 3/B/1-61 Mech. During Phase II (111300H/Apr69 – 151200H/Apr69, Task Force REMAGEN was under control of 1st Bn, 61st Infantry (Mechanized), and consisted of Team Armor, Task Force Control, and 3 teams: Team A (A/1-61 Mech (-2nd Plt), 2/A/1-77 Armopr and A Dozer/14 Engr), Team B (B-1-61 Mech (-3rd Plt) and 2/C/1-77 Armor), and Team C (C/1-77 Armor (-2nd Plt) and 3/B/1-61 Mech and Sqd/A/7th Engr). [HQ, 1st Infantry Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (Mech), AAR Task Force REMAGEN, 4 June 1969, Para. 6, "Task Organization," Tab E to 3rd MarDiv, ComdC, May69.

3749 Smith, op. cit., p. 64.

3750 1st of the 5th Mech Div, AAR, op. cit.

11 MARCH 1969

BAUER, PFC Daryl Charles	H&S/2/4
BROWN, LCPL William Henry	G/2/4
CLEMENCIA, LCPL Jean Roger	G/2/4
DIGENNO, LCPL Michael	2/4
WELD, PFC Julio Cesar	G/2/4

At 0820H, as Co G/2/4 continued their attack toward LZ CATAPULT, the NVA launched a counterattack with a company-size force with small arms, ChiCom grenades, RPGs and RPD machineguns. Fighting was at close quarters, sometimes 5 meters and G/2/4 suffered 4 KIA and 13 WIA (evacuated), including 3 KIAs and 4 WIAs from a 105mm short round. This violent contact which lasted all day broke the NVA's final attempt to hold LZ CATAPULT. The NVA broke contact at 1630H. In 3 days, 6,272 artillery rounds were fired with over a thousand in support of G/2/4.[3751]

12 MARCH 1969

FRANCE, LCPL Ronald Lynn	B/1/4

13 MARCH 1969

ANDERSON, PFC James Theodore	M/3/4
BREWER, PFC Don Raylan	M/3/4
KATZ, SSG Ronald Christopher	M/3/4
MOFFITT, PFC Thomas Carroll D	M/3/4
SMITH, PFC James Lee	M/3/4
STAMPS, PFC Johnny Green	M/3/4

By late afternoon on the 13th, M/3/4 had secured LZ SIERRA but enemy mortar fire had not ceased and the Marines suffered 10 KIA and 35 WIA (evacuated. Continuing inclement weather conditions made medevacs difficult along with NVA anti-aircraft fire directed at the helicopters.[3752]

14 MARCH 1969

CARPENTER, PFC James Alvin	M/3/4
CHUBB, PFC Richard Charles	M/3/4
FALCONBURY, PFC Earl Fern	M/3/4
FRANKS, PFC Ernest Richard	M/3/4
HAYES, PFC Michael John Jr.	M/3/4
HOPE, PFC Samuel Jr.	M/3/4
HOWARD, LCPL Sydney Claude	M/3/4
RUIZ, PFC Antonio Elizondo	M/3/4
SMITH, PFC Richard William	M/3/4
STOLLEY, LCPL William R Jr.	M/3/4
THORNTON, PFC Alan Wayne	M/3/4

On 14 March, I/3/4 assaulted SIERRA NORTH (XD946630). Although a well-executed envelopment to the north of the objective, the NVA apparently expecting an attack from the south, were surprised inside their bunkers. By the end of the day, I/3/4 had suffered 1 KIA and 7 WIA (evacuated). Meanwhile, Co M/3/4 received a ground assault initiated when the NVA downed a CH-46 with a RPG. The helo crashed in flames with some medevacs aboard. Results of the action: 5 KIA.[3753]

On 13 March, CPL Clinton W. Thompson launched a single-handed assault on NVA bunkers, using fragmentation grenades to destroy the positions as the rest of the squad provided a base of fire. During his daring assault, he destroyed 3 bunkers, permitting the remainder of his platoon to maneuver and secure the objective. On 14 March, when the NVA counter-attacked M/3/4, concentrating on CPL Thompson's platoon and forcing his men to withdraw, CPL Thompson assumed the billet of Platoon Sergeant when that leader was WIA, rallied his Marines, and led the assault to recapture the position. When a NVA bunker began to spew fire on CPL Thompson and his Marines, he once again personally assaulted the NVA position with grenades and neutralized the position.[3754]

[From 14-17 March, 15,595 artillery rounds were fired in support of the 4th Marines with 75% being fired in support of 3/4's assault of SIERRA NORTH and SIERRA (XD946623). Weather precluded fixed wing and restricted helicopter movement and resupply until the 17th, when fixed wing strikes resumed On 18 March, L/3/4 suffered 2 WIA (evacuated) from a booby trapped claymore.[3755]]

18 MARCH 1969

STITT, PFC Richard Wesley	G/2/3

A Co G/2/3 ambush laid along the road (XD881229, 4 miles east of LZ PARIS, XD807237) spotted 2 enemy trucks heading northeast.[3756] "Allowing the first truck, which was empty, to pass, the ambush opened fire on the second, destroying it and its cargo of rocket and mortar ammunition. The Marines then attacked the security element on the lead truck which had halted a short way down the road.[3757] Results of the action included 1 USMC KIA and 7 NVA KIA.[3758]

[3751] Ibid., p. 15; 2/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 13.
[3752] Ibid., p. 16.
[3753] Ibid.
[3754] Navy Cross Citation on CPL Clinton W. Thompson.
[3755] 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 16.
[3756] 2/3 ComdC March, 1969, p. 11.
[3757] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, March, 1969, p. 9.
[3758] 3rd Mar, AAR Opn MAINE CRAIG, p. 12.

19 MARCH 1969

WESSLER, PFC Daniel Guy G/2/4

During the day, 1st Platoon, G/2/4 began taking small arms fire and RPGs while searching the area around XD824606 in sporadic fighting that continued throughout the day. Co G(-) reinforced G-1 and attempted to search the area at 1600, at which time small arms fire, RPG rounds and mortars were again received. The contact resulted in 2 NVA KIA and one USMC KIA from Second Platoon.[3759]

20 MARCH 1969

BAER, LCPL Max Irwin	D/1/4
BATTLE, CPL Ronald Kenneth	H&S/3/4
CONNELL, WO Vaughn David	B/101st AvnBn[3760]
DAVIS, PFC David Lee	H&S/1/4
EICHELBERGER, PFC Barry Lee	G/2/3
ELDERS, LCPL Ernest Franklin	D/1/4
GORRERA, PFC George Medford Jr.	G/2/3
JEFFRIES, LCPL James Herbert	H&S/3/4
MC CORMICK, 2/Lt Michael P	D/1/4
PETAL, PFC John Darryl	G/2/3
REED, PVT James Clayton	D/1/4

On 20 March 1969, the long anticipated assault on FSB ARGONNE (XD678572) commenced. This area, Hill 1308 (XD675573) offers observation into Laos and parts of the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Information from intelligence sources indicated increased enemy activity in this area. The weather had finally cleared and air support was available. The operation had been planned for almost a month, but deteriorated weather along with air assets committed to support the 9th Marines in the A Shau Valley precluded a helicopter assault on this high terrain. The scheme of maneuver called for a 3-company assault of the hill with one company landing on FSB ARGONNE and 2 companies landing in the valley to the north. A recon team would be inserted just prior to L-Hour and guide the assault helicopters into the zone. Bn 1/4 was tasked with the assault and had moved their companies to FSB ALPINE (XD769427)[3761] prior to the assault. At 0930, following extensive artillery and air prep, Recon Team FROSTBURG approached the LZ. An explosion was set off and small arms fire raked the cockpit killing the pilot and wounding the copilot. The helicopter hit the ground and the recon team disembarked and formed a hasty 360 degree perimeter and pulled the wounded co-pilot to safety. Almost simultaneously, the NVA assaulted the recon team. FROSTBURG reacted quickly and repelled the initial charge, killing 3 NVA. The team leader called for an emergency extraction.

Immediately after the extraction, the first transport helicopter landed (at 1030H, having moved from FSB ALPINE) with the battalion commander and parts of Co D/1/4, the assault company. The wreck of the UH-1E precluded use of the upper zone, and the CH-46D transport used a lower zone. As the lead elements of D/1/4 proceeded up the hill they were met with gradually intensifying automatic weapons from a mutually supporting bunker system. Small units of Marines methodically had to destroy each bunker by providing a base of fire as one or two Marines crawled within grenade range and assaulted the bunker entrance. The action continued into the dark and the objective was secured, although some NVA snipers continued to fire on D/1/4 and the Battalion CP. D/1/4 suffered 6 KIA and 11 WIA (evacuated). The helicopter lift of the remaining two companies to the valley north of FSB ARGONNE was cancelled by higher headquarters.[3762]

2/Lt Michael P. McCormick, a Platoon Commander with D/1/4 found himself and his men pinned down by a heavy volume of fire as them debarked the helicopter. "Reacting fearlessly, 2/Lt McCormick moved across the fire-swept terrain from one man to another and, shouting words of encouragement, restored their confidence. Under cover of machine gun fire, he then initiated an aggressive assault upon the bunkers, and charging up the slope, he and his 3-man team stormed and systematically destroyed 3 of the fortifications with hand grenades and close-range rifle fire... Later that day [the point man was wounded].. Unwilling to risk further Marine casualties, 2/Lt McCormick directed his squad to provide protective fire and, with complete disregard for his own safety, maneuvered toward the casualty. He had almost attained his objective when he was mortally wounded by hostile fire."[3763]

To the south, in Operation MAINE CRAG, Co G/2/3 (XD883216) found a bunker complex for approximately 50 NVA which was occupied by 12 NVA. The position was attacked resulting in 2 USMC KIA, 1 USMC WIA, and 3 NVA KIA.[3764] The previous night, G/2/3 and H/2/3 had established night positions on the high ground near Route 926, about 1500 meters apart. About 2300 o9r 2400, G/2/3 called up and said they had 35 NVA coming through the ambush, down the road. Major Donald J. Myers, the Battalion S-3 responded,

---

[3759] 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 16; 2/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 11.

[3760] The pilot was Army [Comments of COL William S. Goggin, HQMC Oral History Tape #4094].This is the only possible U.S. Army pilot KIA this date, based on information from the Coffelt database.

[3761] Also indicated as XD756532.

[3762] 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, pp. 17-18; 1/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 15.

[3763] Navy Cross Citation, 2/Lt Michael P. McCormick.

[3764] 2/3 ComdC March, 1969, p. 11. 3rd Mar ComdC March, 1969, S3 Journal, 20 March 1968, Ser #1 & 4.

"Blow them away." "They reported once again they had 35 Gooks walking through the ambush. I said, 'Blow them away.' Apparently the Patrol Leader got so enthused, he started counting Gooks and didn't pull the trigger, so 35 of them walked right through the ambush site."[3765] The next day, 20 March 1969, both G/2/3 and H/2/3 conducted saturation patrols throughout the entire area. Apparently both patrols were well off from where they were supposed to be,[3766] disorientated in the jungle terrain, and at 1000, Companies "G" and "H" of 2/3 (XD871231) had patrols that made contact with each other. The collision resulted in a fire-fight causing one Marine KIA.[3767] "We didn't have time because of the tactical situation [to determine] who was at fault. Following the 35 NVA who escaped, the 1 Marine KIA, that afternoon, another Marine shot himself in the foot, Regiment ordered 2/3 to move ASAP and attack to the east, "towards what they termed 'a pot of gold.' We were going to head for it, but we were going to search on the way. Regiment said, 'No, get there as fast as you can. We picked up everything, called our patrols in, and started moving once again. Hotel Company stayed on the road; Golf Company paralleled the road to the south."[3768]

21 MARCH 1969

KING, PFC James Michael D/1/4
REGNOLDS, PFC James Randolph D/1/4
RUIZ, PFC Gilbert D/1/4
SARGENT, LTCOL George Thomas Jr. H&S/1/4
THOMPSON, PFC Philip Bruce D/1/4
WILSON, 2/Lt Carl Richard Jr. D/1/4
+ 3 unidentified, H/2/3

At 0800, 1/4 assumed OPCON of M/3/4 when they lifted into FSB ALPINE to relieve C/1/4. At 0820H, the first round of an enemy 82mm mortar attack instantly killed LtCol Sargent, the Battalion Commander and 2/Lt Wilson, the Battalion S-2 officer.[3769] Every member of LtCol Sargent's staff that was present on the position was either wounded or killed.[3770]

At 0945H, the Alpha Command Group on FSB ARGONNE received 10 rounds of 82mm mortars during medevac helicopter operations. The helicopter was able to board 6 emergency WIA before it had to depart. Although counter-mortar fire was fired, the Marines sustained 3 KIA and 11 WIA. At 1540H, all medevacs were extracted except one routine and 5 permanent routines. Four engineers boarded the helicopter without authority and deprived the rest of the medevacs from getting out.[3771]

Third Platoon of H/2/3 had discovered what looked like bunkers, containing 4 or 5 tons of rice in crates about the size of 100-lb. bags just piled up there. The Marines found a nearby river. The Marines were all out of water and, after receiving permission, about 60 Marines went down to fill canteens. "It was kinda messed up because people were just taking .45s and one magazine. Half of them carried a bunch of canteens and no ammo, no flak jackets, helmets. They started going down the trail there. A couple of rounds went off." 2/Lt John E. Butler, Platoon Commander of H-3, went down to the position which was supervised by a LCPL. Marines of various units, no squad leaders, no team leaders, made for a difficult group to establish security while they were seeking water. About 50 or 60 men were bunched up, some in the river, and just as Lt Butler reached the area, "everything in the world came in on us—AKs, rifle grenades, and everybody was getting hit.[3772]
It was 1505, when Co H/2/3 and the 2/3 CP (at XD908233) were under fire while on the water detail. The NVA held the high ground above the security and water party and opened fire with small arms and RPGs, killing 3 Marines and wounding 18 (medevaced).[3773]

22 MARCH 1969

SWISHER, PFC Clifford Lee H/2/3
+2 unidentified from E/2/3

Today, H/2/3 sent patrols to investigate the area from where they received fire on their water detail. Charlie Squad of H-3 spotted someone on the hill and thought it was H-1 since the men wore camouflaged utilities like the Marines. As Lt Butler moved with his Alfa Squad of H-3, Charlie Squad radioed there was nothing they could do; they were pinned down and had taken casualties. One Marine was killed.[3774] It was 0730H, and Co H/2/3 (XD908233) came upon enemy in numerous spider holes and bunkers while attacking an

---

[3765] Comments of Maj Donald J. Myers, 13 May 1969, HQMC Oral History Tape #4124
[3766] Ibid.
[3767] 2/3 ComdC March, 1969, p. 12.
[3768] Comments of Maj Donald J. Myers, HQMC Oral History Tape #4124.
[3769] 1/4 ComdC, March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 16. Maj Pierpan assumed command of the Alpha Command Group and directed operations at FSB Argonne. LtCol Willcox assumed command upon his arrival at FSB Alpine about 1400H. Accurate NVA 82mm mortar and sniper fire hampered helicopter operations at FSB Argonne.
[3770] Comments of Col William S. Goggin, HQMC Oral History Tape #4094. Col Goggin was CO, 4th Mar.
[3771] Ibid.; 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 18.
[3772] Comments of 2/Lt John E. Butler, 15 May 1969, HQMC Oral History Tape #4124.
[3773] 2/3 ComdC March, 1969, p. 12; S-3 Journal for 21 March 1968; 3rd Mar, AAR MAINE CRAG, p. 12.
[3774] Comments of 2/Lt John E. Butler, HQMC Oral History Tape #4124.

enemy position and received small arms and grenades resulting in 1 KIA.

At 1400H, the lead platoon of Co E/2/3 (XD924246) while moving to a blocking position received small arms and automatic weapons fire causing 2 USMC KIA and 15 USMC WIA.[3775] Contact was broken and approximately 440 tons of rice was found plus 100,000 rounds of AK-47 ammunition.[3776]

23 March 1969

BECK, PFC Norman Elmer	D/1/4
BYARS, LCPL Steve Eugene	D/1/4
OVERSTREET, HM3 David Dewayne	H&S/1/4

On 23 March, D/1/4 moved their patrols to an area north of FSB ARGONNE, an area which had been the assembly area for several probes of the D/1/4 lines.[3777] At 1415H, Co D/1/4 at XD676579 found 5 graves with 3 markers. As they checked out the area, they were taken under fire by 7 NVA. The Company withdrew and fired 60mm and 81mm mortars plus 105s and 106s and had 2 air strikes. Results of the contact: 3 KIA.[3778]

A squad from H/2/4 found 5 friendly KIA in a U.S. Army UH-1H which had crashed west of FSB NEVILLE (XD802596).[3779]

In Operation MAINE CRAG, G/2/3 found a supply cache containing 2000 pounds of powdered milk, 5700 pounds of rice, 3853 82mm rounds, and 2500 RPG rounds, while Co E/2/3 found another cache containing 6 tons of rice, 90 individual weapons, 1000 pounds of TNT, and 15,000 small arms rounds.[3780]

24 March 1969

One unidentified M/3/4

At 0900H, a patrol from Co M/3/4 sweeping the area at XD740540 made contact with an unknown size enemy force in newly constructed bunkers in an area from which NVA mortars had been fired resulting in 1 KIA. The activity was expected because FSB ALPINE was providing supporting fires for FSB ARGONNE.[3781]

25 March 1969

BRANNON, PFC James Edward	A/1/4
CARTER, PFC Jack David	A/1/4
LABOWSKI, SGT Leonard William	A/1/4
ORBINO, SGT Dennis Michael	H&S/1/4
PRESLEY, PFC Avey	A/1/4

On 25 March, A/1/4 continued to sweep toward Hill 1154 near the Laotian border. At 0930H, the point man, a S-2 scout, heard movement to his front. After passing the word to the CO, the scout advanced up the trail into the fire of an AK-47 instantly killing him. The lead platoon killed the NVA before he could retreat.[3782] At 1310H, A/1/4 while moving ran into a multiple bunker complex at XD667574 containing an estimated 2 reinforced squads to a platoon. The Marines assaulted the bunkers and called in air and artillery. One more Marine was KIA and 4 WIA. At 1530H, while calling in artillery, A/1/4 had one short 155mm round killing 3 Marines and wounding 8.[3783]

26 March 1969

BRENNEMAN, CPL Richard Eugene G/2/3

At 1000H, G/2/3 (XD918227) came upon 2 NVA filling canteens, fired on them, killing them. They then received fire from the north resulting in one KIA.[3784]

28 March 1969

BELCHER, MAJ Robert Arthur	366TFW
MILLER, 1/Lt Michael Andrew	366 TFW
+ 2 unidentified from A/1/4

At 0220H, A/1/4 at XD665577 had its listening posts and lines probed by an estimated squad resulting in 2 USMC KIA and 8 WIA.[3785]

CAPT Charles D. Lea, piloting SEAWORTHY 98-15 (Callsign SALINAS 62) on 28 March 1969 with Lt HAMLIN, observer, were conducting a VR near XD895647 and located a bunker complex with fighting holes on a ridge running NW/SE with high rising terrain to the W and SW and another ridge running N/S on the eastern side of the target. 1/Lt Edwin C. Hamlin, the aerial observer in SALINAS 62 requested permission to run the air strike and wrote up a brief: "Possible mortar site, approximately 1000 feet elevation, attack heading 180° with a left hand pull, terrain is mountainous will mark

---

[3775] 2/3 ComdC March, 1969, p. 12. The Coffelt database does not indicate any KIA from E/2/3 for this date.
[3776] 3rd Mar, AAR Opn MAINE CRAG, p. 13.
[3777] 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 18.
[3778] 1/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 17.
[3779] 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 19.
[3780] 3rd Mar ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 8
[3781] 1/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 18; 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 19.

[3782] Ibid.
[3783] 1/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), pp. 18-19.
[3784] 2/3 ComdC March, 1969, p. 14; 3rd Mar, AAR Opn MAINE CRAG, p. 13; 3rd Mar ComdC March, 1969, S3 Journal, 26 March 1969, Ser #8.
[3785] 1/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 20.

with W.P. smoke, not ground fire, friendlies about 1000 meters at 11 o'clock our position will be inside your pattern."[3786] Two F4D Phantoms, GUNFIGHTER 1 and 2, checked in approx. 1655H, but had difficulty locating the target due to ground haze. CAPT Lea marked the target with WP. GUNFIGHTER-1 made his run, Capt Lea again marked the target, and GUNFIGHTER-2 (Maj Belcher and 1/Lt Miller in aircraft #66-8764) made their pass but didn't pull-up. Their aircraft was completely demolished upon impact at XD892663.[3787] No parachutes were seen and no electronic beacon signals were detected. Search and rescue forces located the wreckage, but saw no sign of survivors. Ground search teams attempted to reach the crash site but were unsuccessful due to the presence of enemy forces.[3788]

30 March 1969

[One unidentified]

At 1327 a helicopter set off what appeared to be a booby trap killing one man and wounding 6 (evacuated) during Operation MAINE CRAG in the 3rd Marines AO.[3789]

31 March 1969

BRANNAN, SFC James Curtis	D-1-77
PACE, SGT Gary Lynn	B-1-61

At 0615H, Team B of TF Remagen took approximately 100 rounds of 82mm mortar fire causing one KIA. At 1215H, Team C came under mortar and RPG fire and a VTR from D Company, 1-77 Armor took a RPG round making a direct hit and detonating 6 LAWs stored inside resulting in 1 KIA and 4 WIA.[3790]

04 April 1969

BOULE, PFC Thomas Michael	E/2/3
LISLE, PFC Terrill Michael	E/2/3
SLAWEK, PFC Joseph Dennis Jr.	E/2/3

At 0350H, Co E/2/3 at LZ BIG FOOT was attacked by an estimated NVA company resulting in 2 KIA.[3791] "On the 4th of April at 04 in the morning Gooks attacked our lines after killing 2nd Platoon's LP. They had 3 people out and they had been having trouble getting comm. with the LP. Finally at four o'clock in the morning the LP started running in and started yelling, 'LP coming in!' At that point small arms fire opened up. They killed the LP right off the bat, and at this same time we found out that while the LP was sleeping several CHARLIEs had moved right up to our lines with RPGs and one AK-50 and several AK-47s. They hit my gun hole pretty hard with AK-47s and RPG [fire]. Right after they hit the gun hole the 82mm mortars started coming in and the 60mm. They weren't too accurate with those and I think they probably got more of their own people than they did ours. They hit us in squad waves with RPGs backing them up and the AK-50 opened up every once and awhile. I think the most devastating thing was the satchel charges that they had. We only had 4 KIAs in the whole company and about 7 WIAs. My platoon only had one KIA and 4 WIAs."[3792]

06 April 1969

1 unidentified from E/2/4

Co E/2/4 reported that one Marine was killed by a 105mm short round.[3793]

07 April 1969

BATCHELOR, LCPL John Elsey Jr.	F/2/4
PORTER, PFC Richard Lee	F/2/4
STAPLES, PFC James Arthur	F/2/4
+ one unidentified from F/2/4

2nd Platoon of Co F/2/4 made contact with approximately 4 NVA at XD813644. The NVA detonated 2 claymore mines and fired 10 rounds while throwing Chi-Com grenades. F-2 returned small arms fire and called artillery and mortars on all likely avenues of escape as the NVA broke contact. F-2 suffered 4 KIA.[3794]

10 April 1969

KEITH, PFC Daniel Scott	F/2/4

F-3 of 2/4 made contact with an enemy force of 15-20 NVA at XD854651 who detonated claymore mines

---

[3786] Statement of 1/Lt Edwin C. Hamlin in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #406, Folder #87 (Belcher).
[3787] Statement of Capt Charles D. Lea in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #308, Folder #17 (Miller).
[3788] Narrative, Case 1417 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #308, Folder #17.
[3789] 3rd Mar ComdC March, 1969, S3 Journal for 30 March 1969, Ser #5.
[3790] 1st of 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR, op. cit., p. 11; 3rd Mar ComC March, 1969, S3 Journal for 31 March, Ser #7. Team "B" consisted of B/1-61 Mech (-3rd Plt) and 2/C/1-77 Armor; Team "C" consisted of C/1-77 Armor (-2nd Plt) and 3/B/1-61 Mech. [HQ, 1st Infantry Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (Mech), AAR Opn REMAGEN, 4 June 1969, Para. 6, "Task Organization," in 3rd MarDiv ComdC, May, 1969, Tab E.
[3791] 3rd Mar AAR Opn MAINE CRAG, p. 14.
[3792] Comments of 2/Lt Dennis R. Tague, USMCR, 16 May 1969, HQMC Oral History Tape #4124.
[3793] 2/4 ComdC March, 1969, Encl (1), p. 8.
[3794] 2/4 ComdC April, 1969, Encl (1), p. 9; 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 21, Para. kkk.

and fired small arms and light machine guns. F-3 returned small arms fire and called in artillery and 81mm mortars and worked fixed wing air strikes on the enemy position.[3795]

11 APRIL 1969

HUFF, PFC Richard Elliott	E/2/4
SMITH, PFC Matthew Edward	E/2/4
+ one unidentified, E/2/4

Elements of E-1 reported sighting 10-15 NVA moving west along a stream at XD790640. The enemy was taken under small arms fire and 60mm mortars were called in as the enemy withdrew to a cave complex to the south of the stream at XD789639. E-1(-) joined the element in contact and the cave complex was assaulted without success. Gunships then worked over the enemy position as ambushes were established on all avenues of escape in preparation for the coming night. E-3 suffered 3 KIA and 9 WIA.[3796]

[Co L/3/9 assumed the defense of FSB ALPINE on 11 April 1969.[3797]]

12 APRIL 1969

DAVIS, PFC Duane Ross	H&S/2/4
LIPTAK, PFC Charles Lewis	C/1/4

At 1115H, Co C/1/4 patrol at XD725625, while searching an area for an estimated NVA squad size unit, ambushed the point element. The NVA opened up with automatic weapons and ChiCom grenades and the patrol returned fire with negative results. The contact resulted in 2 KIA and one WIA.[3798]

[On this date, B-1-61 and C-1-77 were relieved by A-1-61 and A-1-77 in Task Force Remagen.[3799]]

19 APRIL 1969

ACKERMAN, PFC Rex William	I/3/4
ALLARD, PFC Paul Edward	E/2/3

A patrol from I-2 of 3/4 tripped 2 claymore mines resulting in 1 KIA and 7 WIA (evacuated).[3800]

20 APRIL 1969

PARKER, SGT George Joseph Jr.	D/1/4

22 APRIL 1969

SKIPPER, PFC Michael Ray	H/2/4

A patrol from H-3 of 2/4 made contact with an enemy force of unknown size at XD814670. H-3 (-), moving to reinforce the squad in contact, made contact at XD810672. Radio contact was lost with the squad in contact. Artillery, 81mm and 60mm mortars were fired on the enemy positions. As H-2 moved to reinforce H-3 and assaulted the enemy position, it made contact with the squad who had originally made contact. Fixed wing was on run on likely avenues of escape. Co H/2/4 suffered 1 KIA and 3 WIA in the battle.[3801]

24 APRIL 1969

WAGNER, PVT James Joseph	F/2/4

Helicopters attempting to resupply F/2/4 (at XD848648) drew small arms fire from the vicinity of XD854651. Artillery and 81mm mortars were fired and small arms fire was returned, silencing the enemy fire.[3802]

25 APRIL 1969

BESSENT, SP4 Samuel Alonzo	A-1-77
LACEY, SP5 David Michael	A-1-77
VANN, 1/Lt Ronald Bryson	C-1-44

At 0330H, an estimated NVA battalion (minus) attacked the 2nd Troop, 7th ARVN Cav which was at XD812410 (about 1 click east of Hill 689). The attack started with a heavy mortar barrage which lasted for about an hour. One mortar round landed near the FDC of C/1-40 Arty killing the battery Executive Officer and wounding every man in the FDC. Following the mortar fire, the enemy attacked the ARVN position using RPGs, small arms fire, automatic weapons fire, flamethrowers and small satchel charges. At 0600 the enemy broke contact leaving behind 33 NVA KIA. Friendly casualties were 8 ARVN KIA, 40 ARVN WIA, 1 Australian advisor KIA, 2 US advisors WIA, 2 US KIA, and 3 US WIA.[3803] The uniforms of the NVA were not only new, but were the same color as those worn by ARVN regulars. Most of the NVA KIAs were young, clean-shaven,

---

[3795] 2/4 ComdC April, 1969, Encl (1), p. 10.
[3796] Ibid., p. 11. Note: the Coffelt database only indicates 2 names identified as belonging to E/2/4. It does have several others who are identified as "III MAF."
[3797] 1/4 ComdC April, 1969, Encl (1), p. 4.
[3798] Ibid., Encl (1), p. 8; 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 21.
[3799] 3rd MarDiv ComdC, April, 1969, Encl (1), p. 12.
[3800] 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 22, Para. sss.
[3801] 2/4 ComdC April, 1969, Encl (1), p. 15.
[3802] Ibid., p. 16.
[3803] HQ, 1st Infantry Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (Mech), AAR TF REMAGEN, 4 June 1969, Tab E to 3rd MarDiv, ComdC, May, 1969.

had short haircuts, were well equipped and, based upon an inspection of the condition of their feet, apparently had not traveled any lengthy distances in the immediate past.[3804]

28 April 1969

DAVIS, SP4 John Clinton	A-1-61
DAVENPORT, PFC John Sanford	A-1-61
TEETH, PFC Austin	H&S/1/4

At 0300H the NVA attacked Co A, 1st Bn, 61st Infantry (Mechanized) at XD845390 (just south of Hill 471). The company was alerted just prior to the start of the attack by a LP which sprang an ambush on the enemy as they moved into position. The NVA attack was supported by RPG, mortar, small arms and automatic weapons fire. Throwing satchel charges and using flame devices, the enemy charged from the southwest but was unable to penetrate the perimeter. At 0540 the enemy broke contact and disappeared into the night. Friendly casualties were 5 KIA and 35 WIA and the enemy lost 34 NVA KIA.[3805] Uniforms were new and the customary khaki/gray color.[3806]

"T-4338 was attempting to commit suicide. T-4338 had a M-16 against lower right jaw. During the attempt to disarm him the rifle discharged killing T-4338. SIR report submitted."[3807]

29 April 1969

FURR, HM3 Frederick Edward	H&S/2/4

Co G/2/4 suffered one KIA and 3 WIA when a M-79 was accidentally discharged at XD827571.[3808]

[Final casualty figures for Task Force REMAGEN, 16 March – 29 April 1969 were: 12 USA KIA, 8 ARVN KIA, 1 other Free World KIA, for a total of 21 KIA; 70 USA WIA, 44 ARVN WIA, for a total of 114 WIA; no POW, MIA, or captured; 1 non-hostile USA KIA; 76 NVA KIA, no POWs taken.[3809]]

30 April 1969

One unidentified from F/2/4

F/2/4 suffered 1 KIA and 4 WIA (evacuated) during a brief firefight.[3810]

02 May 1969

BENNETT, SGT Richard Boyce	F/2/4
EAKINS, LCPL Melvin Warren	HMM-262
FUNK, LCPL Bruce Elliott	H/2/4
HOLTZCLAW, 1/Lt Gary Earl	F/2/4
OSBORNE, PFC David Franklin	F/2/4
POWELL, LCPL Troy Everett	F/2/4
PYLE, LCPL Timothy Howard	HMM-262
STOLLAR, LCPL Larry David	HMM-262
SUMNER, 1stSgt James Howell	F/2/4
THOMAS, PFC William Philip	H/2/4
TRIGALET, 1/Lt Robert Ernest	HMM-262
VIX, PFC Stephen August Jr.	F/2/4
WILLIAMS, 1/Lt Thomas Earl Jr.	HMM-262

H-2 of 2/4 suffered 2 KIA and 1 WIA from command detonated mines at XD831627 after which they opened up with small arms fire. H-2 returned fire and called in artillery on the suspected enemy position. 2 NVA were KIA as they were running away.[3811]

Second Platoon, Co. "F," 2/4 landed and established security at XD901598 for a downed CH-46 helicopter. After F-2 extinguished the fire, they began removing 12 bodies and collected all personal effects.[3812]

04 May 1969

PARENT, LCPL Jeffery Mark	M/3/4
+ one unidentified, M/3/4

On 4 May 1969, M/3/4 was hit by command detonated mines resulting in 2 KIA and 3 WIA (evacuated), and then killed 1 NVA in a brief firefight.[3813]

06 May 1969

BILLIP, 1/Lt Norman Karl	VMO-6
HAGAN, 1/Lt John Robert	VMO-6

1/Lt Billip, pilot, and 1/Lt John Robert Hagan, an AO from 3rd MarDiv, were flying an O1G, SEAWOR-

---

[3804] HQ, 1st Bn (Mech), 61st Infantry, Combat AAR, TF REMAGEN II, 29 May 1969.
[3805] HQ, 1st Infantry Brigade, 5th Infantry Div (Mech), Combat AAR, Operation TF REMAGEN, 4 June 1969
[3806] HQ, 1st Bn (Mech), 61st Infantry, Combat AAR, TF REMAGEN II, 29 May 1969; LtGen John H., Jr., Vietnam Studies: Tactical and Materiel Innovations, Washington, D.C.: Department of the Army, 1974, p. 59.
[3807] 1/4 ComdC April, 1969, Encl (1), p. 12.
[3808] 2/4 ComdC April, 1969, Encl (1), p. 18.
[3809] HQ, 1st Infantry Brigade, 5th Infantry Div (Mech), Combat AAR, TF REMAGEN, 4 June 1969
[3810] 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 23.
[3811] Ibid.; 2/4 ComdC, May, 1969, Encl (1), p. 7.
[3812] 2/4 ComdC, May, 1969, Encl (1), p. 8. Co B/1/4, while patrolling in the vicinity of XD897613 at noon, found the remains of a Marine MIA as the result of the helicopter crash of 2 May 1969. [1/4 ComdC, May, 1969, Encl (1), p. 17.
[3813] 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 23.

THY-37 (WB-45, #156682) on a visual reconnaissance mission. At about 1420, 1/Lt Billip was called by Vandergrift DASC [Direct Air Support Center] and told to conduct his preplanned mission (#5080) of visual reconnaissance from VCB [Vandegrift Combat Base] to the Laotian border along Route 9 in support of 9th Marines (radio callsign CRYSTAL STAR). This was the last known contact with 1/Lt Billip's aircraft. At 1500H a severe thunderstorm developed in the area in which the aircraft was flying, with electrical and heavy turbulent activity. SEAWORTHY-37 never contacted CRYSTAL STAR. Some 3 hours after take-off, 1/Lt Billip's aircraft was determined to be missing. Immediate search efforts were hampered by severe weather (thunderstorms and gusts). By 9 May, a total of 115 aircraft hours had been flown searching for SEAWORTHY-37. On 9 Nov 1984, a letter was received by the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok, Thailand: "We were fallen in Lao Communist prison since 27 December 1971.. For God sake! No one can imagine what suffering! How many years we have to get the cruel punishment from the people of hell!.." The letter contained fingerprints of Billip. The FBI was requested to examine the fingerprints and reported that they had no fingerprints on file for Normal Karl Billipp! The incident is plotted at XD919452.[3814]

07 MAY 1969

SHINAULT, 1/Lt John Michael C/3rd Recon
TIRADO, PFC Daniel C/3rd Recon

On 7 May 1969, Recon Team AIR MINDED made contact at XD881586, moved to a LZ for extraction and took additional casualties. Total casualties: 1 KIA, 2 WIA, and 1 NVA KIA.[3815]

[Operation MAINE CRAG concluded on 021300H, May, 1969, with the following casualties: 16 USMC KIA, 103 USMC WIA (evacuated), 10 USMC WIA (minor), 3 USA KIA, 23 USA WIA (medevaced), 6 USA WIA (minor), 3 USA NBC (medevaced), 95 NVA KIA (confirmed), 50 NVA KBA (confirmed), 4 NVA POW.[3816] Operation PURPLE MARTIN concluded on 082400H May, 1969, with the following casualties: 101 USMC KIA, 336 USMC WIA (evacuated), 91 USMC WIA (minor), 0 USMC MIA; 5 USA KIA, 1 USA WIA (evacuated), 347 NVA KIA, 4 NVA POW.[3817] Operation HERKIMER MOUNTAIN commences on 09 May (terminates 16 July 1969) conducted by 4th Marines who remained in place following termination of Operation PURPLE MARTIN. Operation CAMERON FALLS commences 08 June (terminates 15 August) conducted in the southern portion of the Khe Sanh AO by 9th Marines and F/2/12.]

11 MAY 1969

RYAN, 1/Lt William Cornelius, Jr. VMFA-115

1/Lt Ryan was RIO [Radar Intercept Officer] of a Phantom F4B aircraft piloted by 1/Lt Gary L. Bain. The aircraft, #152988, was hit by ground fire and just after they had released their ordnance on target, the pilot felt an explosion, the aircraft rolled inverted and became uncontrollable. The pilot ejected and the plane crashed at XD456400, approximately 15 KM southeast of Tchepone and 500 meters south of Route 9. Only one parachute was seen leave the aircraft and SAR [Search and Rescue] subsequently rescued Lt Bain. Lt Bain stated he called three times for Lt Ryan to eject before he himself was forced to eject just seconds before the aircraft crashed. It is assumed that Lt Ryan had been knocked unconscious or killed instantly by the initial explosion.[3818]

30 MAY 1969

OLIVER, LCPL Erskine Jay M/3/9
WILSON, CPL Wayne Michael M/3/9

Operation CAMERON FALLS officially commenced at 1000H on 29 May (terminated 0600 on 23 June 1969). On 30 May, a patrol from M/3/9 received small arms fire from their front. In the subsequent fire fight, assisted by Huey gunships, one NVA was captured. As a fire team attempted to move the POW to a medevac position, it was fired upon causing 1 USMC KIA. An artillery mission was called and, while attempting to move to the lines (XD988413), the patrol received small arms fire from 75-100 meters from all sides. Total casualties for the contact: 2 KIA, 3 NVA KIA and one NVA POW.[3819]

31 MAY 1969

[3814] Joint Casualty Resolution Center Biographic/Site Report as of 10 Aug 1990; Circumstances of Loss, report of 22 Sep 1975, I MAW BRIGHT LIGHT Report dated 26 May 1969, Letter from Billip of 9 Nov 1984 with map diagrams; Statement of MAJ A. S. Piper, USMC; COL John R. Oberst, USAF, Memo S-20064/DC-2 of 16 Jan 1985, Subj: Status of FBI Fingerprint Analysis (Billipp); FBI Report of the Latent Fingerprint Section, Identification Division, Case No. C-6903 of 8 Feb 1985

[3815] 4th Mar, AAR, Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 23.

[3816] 3rd Marines, AAR Opn MAINE CRAG, p. 18.

[3817] 4th Mar, AAR Opn PURPLE MARTIN, p. 23.

[3818] Narrative, Case 2000-0-01, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #430, Folder #146. Lt Bain suffered a broken arm and leg, and had already survived the crash of a Phantom on 12 January 1969. [Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 181].

[3819] 3/9 AAR Opn CAMERON FALLS (Search and Destroy), 2 July 1969, p. 5.

TREVINO, PFC Rudolph Robert M/3/9

At 1210H, the point element of a patrol from M/3/9 at XD987408 made contact with approximately 5 NVA 50-75 meters away resulting in 1 USMC KIA and 3 WIA.[3820]

[3 operations in the Khe Sanh area continued during June, 1969. Operation HERKIMER MOUNTAIN, in the northwestern portion, involved all three battalions of the 4th Marine Regiment with 1/4 operating from FSB Neville (XD8357) and LZ Catapult (XD8261); 2/4 operated from VCB [Vandegrift Combat Base], FSB Cates (XD9243) and Hills 691 (XD9244) and 950 (XD8445) until 5 June when they were lifted to join G/2/4 at FSB Russell (XD9159); 3/4 operated from VCB and Elliott Combat Base. 1/9 also operated out of VCB with two companies operating in the vicinity of FSB Pete (XD9758) until 12 June when they were replaced by 2/9 who arrived at VCB 15 June.[3821]]

01 June 1969

ABEYTA, PFC Ernest	G/2/9
BRACK, PFC David Allan	G/2/9
PECK, PFC Darrell Vernon	G/2/9

On 010215 June, FSB Whisman (XD9733) defended by G/2/9 was attacked by an estimated NVA company with a volley of machinegun fire followed by a heavy volume of RPG, rifle grenades, and satchel charges. Co "G" returned fire with organic weapons and artillery and, as the contact broke, a platoon from Co "G" pursued the NVA force. Later at 0315, an alert LP opened fire on an estimated 10 enemy who were returning for their dead. The action resulted in 3 KIA and 9 WIA (evacuated) while the NVA lost 19 KIA (confirmed), 1 POW and 1 Chieu Hoi.[3822]

02 JUNE 1969

MC NEILL, PFC Kenneth Rex	C/1/4
MONTIJO, CPL Michael	M/3/9
RODRIGUEZ, PFC Manuel Jr.	M/3/9
TREVINO, PFC Savas Escamilla	M/3/9

At 0700H, M/3/9 departed from night positions with M-1 reconning by fire and using 60mm mortars to prep an area approximately 100 meters to their front. At XD988407 (near FSB Shepherd and approximately 4 miles east of Khe Sanh), the point element came under heavy machinegun fire, believed to be 2 .30 caliber along with small arms fire, RPGs and ChiCom grenades. One squad attempted to move up to where the point was pinned down. The point man was KIA and the squad could not find him. He was known to be dead but presumed to be blown or dragged away by the NVA. At 1035H, a medevac bird approached and was shot down by suspected AA fire. PFC Savas E. Trevino had rushed across the fire-swept terrain to come to the aid of several WIA. When the helicopter was shot down, it crashed into PFC Trevino's position, fatally injuring him. The helicopter caught fire and the troops tried to get out. 4 WIAs and 1 KIA were taken from the bird before it became too hot and .50 caliber ammo started to cook off within it. Later, the Marines returned and recovered the remains of another body. (The bird was shot down at XD987411). M/3/9 had 2 KIA, 1 MIA, and 13 WIA; the helicopter had 2 KIA and 4 WIA.[3823]

At 1240H, a platoon from C/1/4 came upon 3 – 4 NVA in the process of setting up an ambush at XD831617. The patrol assaulted and killed 1 NVA. In the process 1 Marine was KIA and 5 WIA.[3824]

04 JUNE 1969

BARNITZ, LCPL Douglas Wanner	D/3rd Recon
BUCK, CPL William Andrew Jr.	D/3rd Re con
O'CONNOR, 1/Lt Michael Maurice	D/3rd Re con
PEARCY, PFC Robert Leslie	D/3rd Recon
SKAGGS, PFC Harold Alonzo	D/3rd Recon
WELLMAN, CPL William Martin Jr.	D/3rd Re con

On 020930H/June 1969, FLIGHT TIME, reconnaissance team 3D3 from D/3rd Recon, was inserted at XD848390 (200 meters directly south of Hill 471). Ten minutes later, the team found cooking gear still hot, helmets and fresh banana peels at their IP [Insertion Point] and 10 meters away, a bunker which could have been an OP. FLIGHT TIME found 2 bags of rice, 2 helmets, 1 cartridge belt, 1 first aid kit, 1 belt, 1 pair of tennis shoes, 6 fragmentation grenades, and various other items. The next day, at 031750H, the team observed approximately 5 enemy in brown utilities and helmets after setting into their harbor site at XD848390. On 04 June, at 0250H, FLIGHT TIME started receiving small arms fire and ChiCom grenades. The team reported 1 KIA and 1 WIA (needing evacuation) and 4 MIA. FLIGHT TIME requested emergency extraction. At 040305H, an AO observed that the enemy was 10 meters from and on all

---

[3820] Ibid.
[3821] 3rd MarDiv ComdC, June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 13.
[3822] Ibid., p. 14.
[3823] 3/9 ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 18; 3/9 AAR Opn CAMERON FALLS, 2 July 1969, p. 5; Bronze Star Medal (posthumous) Citation, PFC Savas E. Trevino.
[3824] 1/4 ComdC June, 1969. Encl (1), p. 14.

sides of the team. The team requested a reaction force. At 0315H, the AO expended ordnance and had a secondary explosion. At 0320H, communication with the team was lost. At 0400H, a helicopter was airborne with a 12-man reaction force. At 0620, a helicopter observed 3, possibly 5, members of the team and reported that the area looked like it had been hit with a flame thrower. At 0700, the reaction force found the 6 USMC KIAs at XD848390; 5 men were in a trench and the 6th was approximately 10 meters down the hill. An on site investigation indicated that the enemy came up the northeast side of the hill, that the team received RPGs, satchel charges, ChiCom grenades, bangalor torpedoes, and small arms fire. The area was covered with powder burns from explosives. The reaction team leader stated that the marks on the ground and the way the equipment was scattered indicated that the team was involved in hand-to-hand combat. The bodies were riddled by small arms fire and torn by explosives. About 15 meters to the north, several propaganda leaflets were found written in English.[3825]

A TRIBUTE[3826]
By 1/Lt D. W. Sipperly

"We are here to pay tribute and honor to the six men of reconnaissance team "Flight Time." These men gave their lives in the complete dedication that the performance of duty requires. [Here names are listed]..were killed when their reconnaissance team was assaulted and overrun by a large enemy force on hill 471, 1 mile south of Khe Sanh.

"Each of us will remember the personal experiences that we shared with these men,. They were Reconnaissance Marines performing their duty; but more important they were friends. They suffered with us the trials and hardships encountered in a combat environment, and they laughed with us in the humor that we found around us. The spirit these men showed, each in his own way, will be remembered. Their determination, courage, and professionalism in the face of great obstacles will also be remembered. For us, the living, there remains only to carry on with the energy, enthusiasm and respect that these men showed for life."

[3825] 3rd Recon Bn ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 13.
[3826] Sipperly, 1/Lt D. W., "A Tribute," printed in Third Recon Association, RVN, Harborsite, Premier Issue (Feb, 1992), p. 18.

05 JUNE 1969

BRITTIAN, CPL Charles Henry	H/2/9
BROUGHTON, PVT Robert Ballard	H/2/9
BROWN, PFC Gerald Bernard	H/2/9
COX, LCPL Gary Allen	H/2/9
HARAN, PFC Rory Timothy T	H/2/9
SALLY, PFC Hank	H/2/9
TAYLOR, PFC Dennis Lee	H/2/9
TURNER, PFC Brendan Xavier	H/2/9

At 1450H, H/2/9 made contact with an unknown size enemy force at YD020364. At 1530, the lead platoon came upon 2 NVA in a bivouac site and, after the contact, searched the area and at 1700 made contact with a large enemy force estimated at company strength. At 2027 a CH-46 was shot down attempting to evacuate medevacs. All were rescued except for a gunner whose body was recovered several days later. After consolidating for the night on high ground, the company was continuously probed throughout the night. Totals for the contact were: 11 KIA, 39 WIA (evacuated), 27 WIA (not serious), and 34 NVA KIA (confirmed).[3827]

08 JUNE 1969

BOWLIN, LCPL Paul Madison	E/3rd Recon
LANDI, CPL George Francis	A/3rd Recon
MC LEAN, 1/Lt Ronald Walsh	A/3rd Recon

At 071220H at XD877665, recon team 1E1 heard voices 25 meters to their east and west moving towards them, and then spotted 12 enemy dressed in light brown utilities, brown bush covers, tennis shoes and carrying AK-47s, new web gear who walked past the team's position. At 1235H, the team observed 2 NVA that moved past them. The NVA spotted the team and the immediate contact resulted in 2 NVA KIA, and within minutes the team received a heavy volume of small arms and automatic weapons fire from their south. The team returned fire and began moving towards a LZ. At 1300, the team was hit by automatic weapons fire resulting in 3 USMC WIA. At 1305, the team called for an extraction force and emergency extraction. At 1430H, the extraction force married with the team and moved to the HLZ for extraction. At 071530H, the helicopter, while attempting extraction, received heavy .50 caliber fire forcing the helicopter to land. Following fixed wing air strikes and ordnance delivered by an AO in a OV-10 on enemy positions, at 1630 the helicopter attempted extraction, but was shot down by heavy fire from a dual barrel .50 caliber. At 080600H, 2 NVA were observed moving up a trail from the north toward the extraction force position.[3828] Second Platoon of C/1/9 became OPCON to B/1/4 and had been helilifted at 080930H into LZ Beaver to assist Recon Team BELMONT TONES.[3829] At 090430H, the extraction force married with a SPARROW HAWK reaction force, and at 102020H medevacs were extracted from LZ Beaver (XD862648) as the helicopter took .50 caliber. At 121400H extraction force escorted the team to LZ Catapult where they were extracted at 121700H.[3830]

[3827] 3rd MarDiv ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 14.

Team 2A1 had observed bunkers at XD852668, had captured 2 NVA POWs (who later died), and received heavy small arms fire on 7 and 8 June. At 081815H, the team received AK-47 fire resulting in 1 Marine KIA. At 1930H, a helicopter attempting an extraction received heavy AK-47 fire and the helicopter pulled off. Another helicopter extract attempt met the same fate. Then, at 090130H, a gunship attempted an extraction and was forced to pull out by heavy AK-47 fire. At 091130H, a SPARROW HAWK reaction force married with the team and at 110100H, the team was extracted after being escorted by the Sparrow Hawk to a new LZ.[3831]

1/Lt McLean was the stepson of Jimmy Stewart, the famous actor, who served as a pilot of a B17 in WW II and graduated from Princeton University. When he was 41, he married Gloria McLean and adopted her two sons, Mike and Ronald. Ronald was born in 1944, so he was 5 when Jimmy Stewart became his father. The influence on the young Ron must have been profound. When he was 11, his father, Jimmy Stewart made a movie called "Strategic Air Command" in 1955, the height of the "Cold War." (USAF enlistements doubled after the movie was released).[3832]

12 JUNE 1969

LOVETT, PFC Terry Wayne	D/1/9
PALMIERI, PFC David Harold	D/1/9

At 1000H, 1/9 (-) was lifted from VCB with Co D/1/9 and H&S/1/9 going to FSB Cates (XD927437) and Co C and D to Hill 715. At 2215H at XD920420, D/1/9, while setting in an ambush, exploded a booby trap hung in the trees and suffered 2 KIA and 4 WIA.[3833]

15 JUNE 1969

SHATTUCK, PFC Harold Leon Jr. H/2/4

A LP from H-1 was attacked by 10-12 NVA at XD951629 with satchel charges, ChiCom grenades and small arms resulting in 1 KIA and 9 WIA.[3834]

18 JUNE 1969[3835]

BOYER, PFC Michael David	C/1/9
CARR, PFC Robert George	C/1/9
CHARLES, LCPL Edward William	C/1/9
CRUZ, LCPL Frank	C/1/9
CURRY, SP4 Roy Jerry	B-1-61
DIEHL, PSGT Harry G	B-1-61
DOLVIN, SGT James Richard	B-1-61
EMMERT, SP4 Charles William	B-1-61
GRAHAM, SGT Robert Lee	B-1-61
GRIFFIN, PFC Walter Joe Louis	C/1/9
HENNESSEY, SP4 James Dale	B-1-61
HODGE, SSG Michael Leonard	B-1-61
HUNTER, SP4 Charles Louis	B-1-61
LETSON, 2/Lt Gary Wayne	C/1/9
MARC AURELE, SP4 Lionel Lucien	B-1-61
MIRAMONTEZ, CPL Enrique	C/1/9
NAUGHTON, HN Thomas Daniel Jr.	C/1/9
NARVAEZ, SGT Paul Reyes	B-1-61
OROSCO, PFC Stephen	A/1/9
REZENDES, HM3 Paul Allen	C/1/9
SMITH, SP5 Joseph Frederick Jr.	D-1-61

On 13 June, 2nd Bn, 2nd ARVN Regiment lifted into LZ Cokava (XD9049) and began to operate to the west. On 15 June, D/1/9 moved to LZ Horn (XD8948) to guard the flank of Task Force Mustang, a 1st Brigade, 5th Infantry Div (Mechanized) infantry and armor column which moved west on Route 9. By 16 June, TF Mustang, consisting of B-1-61, C-1-61, and B-1-77, was operating from LZ Horn to the area southwest of Khe Sanh. The NVA reacted to this thrust by conducting a series of night attacks against them, the first being on 18 June. Between 0335-0530, B-1-61, in their night defensive position at XD837379 (about 200 meters southeast of the former Khe Sanh ville), was attacked by an estimated 80-100 NVA which commenced with a heavy volume of small arms fire and 60mm mortars from the west followed by RPG fire and a ground attack. The enemy broke through the perimeter and B-1-61 became involved

---

[3828] 3rd Reconnaissance Bn ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), pp. 10-11.
[3829] 1/4 ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 15; 3rd MarDiv ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 13.
[3830] 3rd Reconnaissance Bn ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), pp. 10-11.
[3831] Ibid., p. 11.
[3832] Information supplied by Richard Delotto, letter postmarked 27 Feb 2007.
[3833] 1/9 ComdC June, 1969, p. 18.
[3834] 2/4 ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), pp. 9-10.
[3835] Although the Coffelt database indicates units for Boyer, Charles, Cruz, Miramontez, Naughton, and Rezendes as either "1/9" or "3rd MAF," a letter from Philip Herrea of 8 June 1998 indicates they were all with first squad, 3rd Platoon, C/1/9. Herrea had been the point man for the unit but had been medevaced either one or two days previously.

in heavy close combat. At 0430, air support arrived and by 0530 the enemy had withdrawn leaving 11 bodies inside the wire and 30 outside. One POW was captured. B-1-61 lost 11 KIA and 15 WIA (evacuated).[3836]

At 0400H, an ambush set by C/1/9 at XD861369 (about 1500 meters southeast of the former Khe Sanh ville) was approached on 2 sides by an estimated 6-10 enemy. The ambush threw grenades at the noise of the enemy and the enemy withdrew. At 0700H, Companies "A" and "D" received small arms fire at XD883383 and suffered 1 KIA and 6 WIA. The area was searched and yielded magazines, grenades, RPG rounds, etc. At 1030H, Co C/1/9 encountered a well-entrenched and camouflaged enemy .50 cal machinegun position with automatic weapons. The patrol aggressively assaulted the position, knocked out the gun, and killed 4 NVA. The enemy then began to outflank the squad which withdrew while the remainder of the platoon retrieved the dead and wounded. Soon the entire platoon was under fire and the rest of the company assaulted the enemy position. C/1/9 suffered 9 KIA and 14 WIA.[3837]

20 JUNE 1969

JOY, SGT Richard Dennis	B-1-61
LONG, 1/Lt William Louis	B-1-61
PARKER, SSG James Edward	B-1-61

B-1-61 and B/1/9 in coordinating operations at XD827385 were hit by 3 ground attacks during the morning hours resulting in 2 KIA, 12 WIA (evacuated), 27 NVA (confirmed) and 2 NVA POW.[3838]

22 JUNE 1969

1 unidentified from H/2/4

2nd Platoon of H/2/4 made contact with an enemy force of unknown size at XD963651 and suffered 1 KIA and 6 WIA (evacuated).[3839]

23 JUNE 1969

[During the period 23-30 June 1969, 3/9 made very extensive contact. Inserting 3/9 near Huong Hoa (XD864376) and sweeping to Lang Hole (XD871308), extensive contact was made with the 4th and 6th Battalions of the 27th Regiment. Night probes and attacks were common; almost every company was hit each night, and Lang Hole was estimated to be a NVA regimental staging area because of the numerous bunkers and heavy resistance encountered in the area.[3840] Operation CAMERON FALLS terminated 0600 on 23 June 1968.[3841] Operation UTAH MESA commenced 230700H with 3/9 under OPCON of the Army.[3842]]

3 unidentified from K/3/9[3843]

K/3/9 at XD868361 (about 1500 meters directly south of "Huong Hoa") was attacked by an estimated force of 2 NVA platoons and suffered 3 KIA and 14 WIA (evacuated).[3844]

24 JUNE 1969

HINSCHBERGER, PFC Lawrence K.	K/3/9
JANNETTA, CPL Rodney Alan	K/3/9
PEREZ, PFC Jesus Albert	K/3/9

At 0123H, K/3/9 at XD868360 received approximately 50-60 RPGs, ChiCom grenades, and small arms fire from the southwest. The Marines returned small arms fire, 60mm, arty illum, and 81mm mortars, but continued to receive fire at 0300. The ambush made contact and had 1 PRC-25 [radio] blown away. All members of the ambush returned. At this point there were 15 WIA; none were serious. At 0425H at XD869361, K/3/9 received 4 60mm mortars from the west. Spooky gave outstanding coverage of the area and 29 NVA bodies were counted outside the wire. K/3/9 searched the area at 0645H found 1 USMC KIA previously listed as MIA, 12 NVA KIA, a RPG launcher, 2 RPD machineguns, 50 ChiCom grenades, and 3 rifle grenades. At 1230H, K/3/9 initiated contact with an estimated 10 NVA. After the contact, a squad size ambush (K2A1) was hit with RPGs from the west and south by an estimated 2 NVA squads triggering an attack against KILO Company which were assaulted by an estimated 2 platoons of NVA. Results of the contact included 3 KIA, 14 WIA, and 29 NVA KIA.[3845]

27 JUNE 1969

3 unidentified

[3836] 3rd MarDiv ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), pp. 15-16.
[3837] 1/9 ComdC June, 1969, p. 19; 3rd MarDiv ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 16.
[3838] 3rd MarDiv ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 16.
[3839] 2/4 ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 10. The Coffelt database indicates 2 KIA from "3rd MAF:" PFC James Edward McMahon and PFC Walter Ray Miller, Jr.
[3840] 3/9 ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 7.
[3841] 3/9, AAR Opn CAMERON FALLS, p. 8.
[3842] 3/9 ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 21.
[3843] The Coffelt database lists 4 KIA with a unit identification of "3rd MAF:" PFC Paul Davis Jones, PFC Charles Edward Kuhn, PFC George Dennis McClelland, and PFC Robert Cleven Williams.
[3844] 3rd MarDiv ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 16.
[3845] 3/9 ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 21; 3/9 AAR Opn CAMERON FALLS, S3 Journal, 240645H-260050H June, 1969, Ser #229-231.

On 26 June, with 3/9 (-) operating east of LZ Snapper, B-1-61 and I/3/9 moved to FSB Tenaru (XD8235) (half-way between the former Lang Vei Special Forces Camp and the former Khe Sanh village). At 170600, FSB Tenaru was attacked from 3 directions by 2 NVA companies using mortars, RPGs, machinegun and small arms fire causing 3 friendly KIA and 17 WIA (evacuated) while the NVA lost 22 KIA (confirmed), 1 POW, 9 RPGs, 20 AK-47s, 1 SKS and 1 Russian radio.[3846]

28 JUNE 1969

CINCOTTA, PFC Thomas Antone L/3/9

At 1115H, Co L/3/9 at XD865322 (about 5 clicks directly south of "Huong Hoa") made contact with 10 NVA. The Company spotted NVA on a hill and opened up with small arms and automatic weapons fire, and the NVA returned fire with small arms, RPGs and ChiCom grenades. The AO on station called in fixed wing. At 1715 at XD866324, L-2 started up the hill to XD866324 and made immediate contact which intensified as they progressed. L-2 and L-3 remained in contact due to closeness of the action, 15-30 meters which precluded use of air on the NVA who were in heavily fortified bunkers and fighting holes connected by trench networks. The Marines withdrew to consolidate but maintained pressure on the area. Results of the action included one Marine KIA (body not recovered) and 10 WIA (all evacuated). At 1715H, at XD865324, L-3 crossed a stream and noticed a hill with fresh steps in a trail leading to the top. L-3 formed a platoon line and crawled to the top and as they reached the summit the NVA opened fire. The platoon dropped their packs and attempted to move forward receiving heavy AK-47, .50 cal machine gun fire and ChiCom grenades. Air and arty were called. K-2 was committed to the attack on the left and became engaged to their front. At this time it became apparent that Co L was engaged on 3 separate hills adjoined by a ravine. Shortly after fixed wing was on station, but could not be employed due to close proximity of friendlies to the enemy, although air continued to strike bunkers on the reverse slope of the hills. The fire fight continued until about 1600H. The aggressiveness of the Marines and the premature firing by the NVA which prevented the troops from complete entry into the complex averted a disaster as the enemy was well fortified and armed in mutually supporting positions. The 1 USMC KIA could not be retrieved since he was positioned in a cross fire between supporting bunkers. 3 attempts to recover him resulted in 1 WIA who managed to get a hand on the body. Results of the contact: 2 WIA, 14 NVA KIA (probably 12 more).[3847]

[During July, 1969, Operation HERKIMER MOUNTAIN, involving 3 battalions, continued to operate in the extreme northwest portion of the Khe Sanh battlefield (9 May – 16 July), followed by Operation ARLINGTON CANYON, involving 1 USMC battalion (from 3 July), and Operation UTAH MESA with 1 USMC battalion and 1 USA battalion (operated 12 June – 9 July 1969).[3848] As of 31 July 1969, the entire western area of the Khe Sanh battlefield was designated "3rd Marine Division Recon Zone."[3849]]

02 JULY 1969

VORENKAMP, PFC David R. G/2/4

G-2 of 2/4 while on a routine patrol detonated a booby trap wounding 4 Marines. As medevac helicopters attempted to land at XD945632, it came under small arms fire and was forced to land at XD948632 and as the Marines were trying to secure the LZ, they suffered 1 KIA and 1 WIA. G-1, while moving to support G-2 had 3 heat casualties who were medevaced as G-3 continued to G-2's position. All medevacs were moved to a new location and successfully extracted.[3850]

06 JULY 1969

DELISLE, PFC Rodney Jerome F/2/4
LOOMIS, PFC Rickie Allan F/2/4

F-2, while on a routine patrol, entered a NVA "L-shaped" ambush site occupied by 15 NVA who detonated 4 claymore mines. The platoon came under intense small arms fire at XD925626 and suffered 2 KIA and 9 WIA.[3851]

[Task Force HOTEL was deactivated on 8 July 1969, terminating a 16-month period in which it was the control headquarters for the 3rd Marine Division's mobile helicopter borne operations in the mountains north, south, and west of Vandegrift Combat Base. The deactivation was the result of the President's decision to withdraw the 9th Marines and supporting units from Vietnam to Okinawa.[3852] COMUSMACV had directed III MAF to begin preparations for redeployment of the 9th Marine Regiment and other ground and air units and detachments to be completed by 31 August with the first of three increments scheduled for redeployment during 13-29 July. On 23 June, 1/9 "stood down" from offensive

[3846] 3rd MarDiv ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 16.
[3847] 3/9 ComdC June, 1969, Encl (1), p. 22; 3/9 AAR Opn CAMERON FALLS, S3 Journal, Ser #254 and 256.
[3848] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, July, 1969, p. 1.
[3849] Ibid., p. 5.
[3850] 2/4 ComdC July, 1969, Encl (1), p. 9.
[3851] 2/4 ComdC July, 1969, Encl (1), p. 10.
[3852] "Task Force HOTEL," in 3rd MarDiv ComdC July, 1969, Encl (1), Para 20, pp. 62 and 66.

operations and moved to Vandegrift Combat Base to prepare for embarkation.[3853]]

09 AUGUST 1969

DES LAURIERS, LCPL Philip Gene F/2/4

F-1 of 2/4 sent out a squad-sized patrol that initiated contact with an enemy unit of unknown size at XD898618 resulting in 1 USMC KIA.[3854]

12 AUGUST 1969

2 unidentified from E/2/4

E-3 was attacked in their night position at XD855600 by an estimated 15 NVA sappers. The perimeter came under intense AK-47 small arms fire with sappers throwing satchel charges and ChiCom grenades, causing E/2/4 to suffer 2 KIA and 5 WIA (medevaced). A CH-46 helicopter, while attempting to land and evacuate the medevacs came under AK-47 fire as sappers again attempted to penetrate the perimeter using satchel charges and grenades. E-3 immediately took the NVA under small arms fire, called in and adjusted 81mm and 60mm mortars, and caused the NVA force to withdraw. A medevac chopper using gunships and Spooky with illumination landed inside the perimeter and successfully evacuated all casualties. After the medevac was completed, Spooky fired in a 360° pattern around the Marine perimeter.[3855]

20 AUGUST 1969

EVERETT, PFC Bobby Joe	H/2/4
GARLO, PFC Michael	H/2/4
ORTIZ, LCPL Randall Isaac-Jed	H/2/4

H-1, while on a routine patrol, found fresh foot prints and propaganda leaflets dropped by the enemy. H-1 continued to move and was ambushed in the vicinity of XD920626 by an unknown-size enemy unit using claymores and grenades followed with small arms fire. Three Marines were killed and 8 wounded.[3856]

27 AUGUST 1969

MC MURRAY, 1/Lt Peter Hinchman CCN

"While I was on Co Roc[3857] there was a frequency on ourPRC-25 radios that you could hear news on. When the first astronauts walked on the moon, I was sitting on Co Roc. It was a full moon night and it was about two o'clock in the morning and I was sitting up there and switched to that frequency. They were talking about the astronauts being on the moon. I'm sitting on a rock in Laos and these people were on the moon. It was a big, full moon, beautiful!"[3858] 6 men were lost on this patrol. The "Lieutenant was standing on the ground, trying to guide the helicopter in, standing right straight under it. The helicopter backed the tail rotor into a tree and it crashed, killing a couple people in the helicopter and also killing 4 people on the ground. The rotor blade hit them. There was only one American killed; the other five were indigo. The Lieutenant was Peter Hinchman McMurray. It would be right in there, a day or so, that the astronauts landed on the moon."[3859]

11 SEPTEMBER 1969

HELWIG, CAPT Roger Danny	390th TFS
STEARNS, CAPT Roger Horace	390th TFS

On 11 September 1969, Capt Roger D. Helwig, Aircraft Commander, and Capt Roger H. Stearns, Pilot, were flying a F4D (#66-7530, callsign STORMY 02) in a VR and arrived in the target area approximately 0950H, the target being a camouflaged truck at XD469415. They were joined by LARIAT (2 F-4E aircraft) and briefed on the target (elevation 750 feet, altimeter 29.65, a truck located on a bypass which looked like a protractor just north of the east leg of the horseshoe in the Xepone River). LARIAT had previously expended ordnance on another target and was directed by HILLSBORO (the ABCCC) to rendezvous with STORMY 02. STORMY-02 marked the position with a smoke rocket and immediately thereafter, as the nose seemed to rise slightly, vapor streamers were observed spurting from the top and bottom of its wings followed by bright spots or small pieces coming from both wings. The aircraft rolled to the right and exploded in a fireball as it impacted the ground in an almost completely inverted position in a mountainous and heavily forested area at about 1230H, crashing at XD472415 about 200 – 500 feet be-

---

[3853] FMFPAC, Operations of U.S. Marine Forces, Vietnam, June, 1969, p. 14.
[3854] 2/4 ComdC August, 1969, Encl (1), p. 11.
[3855] Ibid., p. 12.
[3856] Ibid., p. 13.

[3857] "Co Roc is a granite ridge in Laos that runs along the border from XD725348 southeast to XD768321 and then south to XD753270. Varying in height from 850 meters to 515 meters above sea level the Co Roc is more than 300 meters higher than the Khe Sanh plain and the crest of the ridge is only one to three kilometers inside Laos." [HQ, 1st Inf Brig, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Operation TF REMAGEN, 16 Mar 1969 – 29 Apr 1969, 4 June 1969.
[3858] Conversation with James Storter, 9 April 1997. Storter was a Capt in SOG at the time.
[3859] Ibid.

yond the target, approximately 15 kilometers east southeast of Tchepone.[3860] In May, 1990, a joint US/Lao team investigating the crash site recovered remains that were identified as those of Roger Stearns; no remains of Roger Helwig have been discovered.[3861]

21 SEPTEMBER 1969

BOWEN, PFC Grover	K/3/4
CECIL, SP5 Alan Bruce	CCN
JACKSON, LCPL James Wesley Jr.	L/3/4
SILVEIRA, LCPL Leonel Mendonca	H&S/3/4

CAPT Stephen C. Rutledge led his 4-man team from CCN, SOG, into Laos (XD414634) and, at approximately1500H on 21 September 1969, made contact. The team consisted of himself as team leader, SP5 Cecil as radioman, and two indigenous team members, Lam Quan Son and Phoung. Capt Rutledge spotted the approaching NVA, warned his men, and the NVA opened fire killing Phoung and seriously wounding him. He noticed Cecil in a sitting position approximately 3 – 4 feet from where he was laying. Cecil had taken a bullet wound one-half inch above his right eyebrow and brain matter and blood were flowing out of the wound. Since Captain Rutledge was seriously wounded and only one indigenous team member was effective, he felt he had no choice but to leave the bodies of the indigenous and Cecil and attempt to escape and evade the superior size enemy force. Phoung retrieved the radio. Shortly after leaving he heard AK-47 rifle fire in the location where he had left the bodies and assumed the NVA fired into them before searching them. Capt Rutledge and Lam Quan Son hid in a rocky cave and Rutledge made contact with an airplane at about 1930H. At 2130H the rescue helicopters arrived and 2 ropes were dropped. Rutledge fell down when the helicopter took off. The helicopters flew to a nearby valley, embarked Son, then flew back and located Capt Rutledge in a LZ.[3862]

L/3/4 was preparing to abandon FSB Russell and the company staged ammunition to be blown.[3863] The subsequent explosion blew out the whole side of the hill and collapsed a bunker.[3864] Two Kit Carson Scouts were totally burned.[3865] The scouts, Kalang and Thong (one was nicknamed "Portugal" by the Marines), were burnt beyond recognition.[3866] 1/Lt M. L. Ogilvie, Jr., remembers the scene: "It was the wreckage of an old hootch that burned down and it was still smoldering. There was wood ready to fall. I looked closer and I saw that one definitely was not a body. I saw more of the one on the other side, and I would say definitely that was one body. Then I looked around the rest of the area, and closer to me than that one was another body lying prone. It looked like the remains of a body to me. I can say I was positive that it was the remains of a body. They were both fairly complete skeletons. The first one I saw [was] a rib cage, just complete bones, nothing else at all. The other one I saw closer to me was lying prone on its back. I don't believe it was entirely complete. I just saw the rib cage, but I could definitely tell that it was a human rib cage. It looked a little jagged on the edges.. It was a form of rib cage. The building was smoldering, and this was an area where rounds had been going off, so I didn't get any closer."[3867]

Two Marines died of 100% burns:[3868] Silveira, a S-2 Scout from H&S Co., and Grover Bowen, a scout-sniper from Hq, 4th Marines.[3869]

LCPL James W. Jackson, Jr., stopped HM3 Lannie D. Gray and said, "My back is hurt." Gray lifted up his shirt, spotted some blood on his back, and applied a battle dressing.[3870] SSGT Blaine Wiltse, the Platoon Sergeant of L-1, helped put Jackson on board the medevac helicopter, noting his back injury.[3871] "We picked him up, carried him inside the helicopter, and put him down on the floor... I tried to talk to him .. but he just didn't seem to be aware of what was going on. He said no words.. Right after we put him aboard, I remember seeing Doc

---

[3860] Circumstances of Loss, Case 1488 (data as of 1 March 1976); Narrative, Case 1488-0-01 and 02; Report of Deatgh, Case #10, 8 Sep 1970, USAF Form 484 (Personal Data, Mission Data, Summary); Statement of LtCol Ralph L. Brooks, USAF, all in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #306, Folder #173 (Helwig).

[3861] Hobson, Ralph, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 189.

[3862] Statement of Capt Stephen C. Rutledge; Statement of Lam Quan Son of 24 Sep 1969; Biographic/Site Report as of 25 June 1984; Silver Star Medal Citation (posthumous) for SP5 Alan B. Cecil, all documents in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #299, Folder #89.

[3863] Statement of SSGT Blaine Eugene Wiltse, p. 39 in Hq, 3rd MarDiv: Formal investigation into circumstances surrounding the fire and premature explosion of alleged artillery ammunition on or about 1300 hours on 21 September 1969, at Fire Support Base Russell, 17/HMH/rar, 5830, 10 Jan 1970, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #301, Folder #119. (Hereinafter referred to as 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970). Wiltse was the Plt Sgt of L-1.

[3864] Ibid., p. 42.

[3865] Statement of MAJ John E. Seeburger, Jr., in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, p. 11.

[3866] Statement of SSGT Wiltse in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, p. 11.

[3867] Statement of 1/Lt M. L. Ogilvie, Jr., in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, p. 57.

[3868] Statement of HM3 John H. Bennett, in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, p. 7.

[3869] Statement of LCPL Michael W. Desmond, in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, p. 19. Desmond was the company radioman of L/3/4.

[3870] Statement of HM3 Lannie D. Gray, in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, pp. 5, 54.

[3871] Statement of SSGT Blaine Eugene Wiltse, in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, pp. 4, 39.

Gray go aboard. Then they raised the ramp and the bird took off."[3872] The other Marine helping Jackson aboard the medevac was LCPL Michael W. Desmond, the company radioman for L/3/4, who testified that Jackson "had a back wound and he was still conscious."[3873]

The 3rd Medical Battalion handled over 60 wounded men on the 21st,[3874] but the triage log did not have the name of Jackson[3875] and HM3 Robert S. Hall, the assistant supervisor of the 3rd Med Triage, was unable to locate any record of J. W. Jackson in any of their files.[3876] HM2 Donald J. Douglas, assigned to the triage on 21 September testified, "Jackson's name would not go on the triage log" until after his dog tags had been removed, and if he had been flown to the hospital ship, no record would have been made.[3877] HM2 Douglas further recalls treating a "Jackson" who had a back injury and thinks he was sent to the hospital ship.[3878]

LtCol W. S. Daniels of the 3rd Marine Division G-1 staff testified at the Investigation: "I will give an opinion. This opinion was based upon having studied this case continually since the 31st of October. My opinion is there has been a very definite absence of any tangible, substantive, information that would support where Jackson might be... My conclusion.. is that he is at large, without authority... If Jackson had changed identities completely with someone, then where did that someone go?"[3879]

All hospitals in the Western Pacific area were queried, but none had admitted or treated Jackson. All commands in Vietnam were advised of Jackson's missing status, his description was broadcast over AFRTS [Armed Forces Radio and Television Network], and numerous bulletins were distributed throughout the Pacific area. None of these efforts yielded any clues as to Jackson's fate or whereabouts.[3880]

03 NOVEMBER 1969

BROWN, SFC William Theodore	RT Maryland
SHUE, SFC Donald Monroe	RT Maryland
WALD, SFC Gunther Herbert	RT Maryland

At about 1500H, Recon Team Maryland of MACV-SOG, a combined Vietnamese/American reconnaissance team, came under fire while in the vicinity of XD643674 (the northern slope of Hill 617 overlooking Route 92 which came from the site of the NVA B5-T8 headquarters for the Siege battle in early 1968 some 8 miles to the west and leads into the center of the DMZ, and the Houei Nam Xe River)[3881], Savannakhet Province, Laos.[3882] The team was waiting in a defensive position with 2 man positions about 3 meters apart in a circle about 7 meters across due to bad weather (raining).[3883] Approximately 30 NVA attacked Recon Team Maryland from the high ground to the east and southeast with 2 machineguns and numerous grenades. The ONE ZERO, SSG Wald, was hit in the chest nd right shoulder by a grenade while he was talking on the radio. The ONE TWO (SP4 Shue) was wounded by the same grenade in his left leg. The ONE ONE (SSG Brown) was hit by small arms fire just below the rib cage in the initial burst of fire.[3884]

The 3 Americans retained their emergency distress radios (URC-10) as well as their red and yellow smoke grenades, pen flares, and signal mirrors. There were no distress signals or calls from this area during the period 3-14 November 1969. NVA activity is extremely high in this area and they were capable of rendering adequate medical care for the wounded Americans if taken alive. Pong believed the Americans could still have been alive when he was forced to escape and evade the enemy.[3885]

Bad weather precluded re-entry of the area for recovery until 11 November 1969 at which time only some web gear belonging to the wounded soldiers was found, but nothing else.[3886]

02 JANUARY 1970

LINDSTROM, CAPT Ronnie George	25th TFS
WEST, CAPT John Thomas	25th TFS

On 02 January 1970, CAPT West, Aircraft Commander, and 1/Lt Lindstrom, Pilot, were flying a F4D Phantom in the trail aircraft (#66-8784) in a flight of 2 on a LORAN navigational aid validation mission from

---

[3872] Ibid.

[3873] Statement of LCPL Michael W. Desmond, in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, pp. 8, 43.

[3874] Statement of HM3 Charles L. Lee, in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, p. 13.

[3875] in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, p. 12.

[3876] Statement of HM3 Robert S. Hall, in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, p. 13.

[3877] Statement of HM2 Donald J. Douglas, in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, p. 62.

[3878] Ibid.

[3879] Statement of LtCol W. S. Daniels, in 3rd MarDiv, Investigation, 10 Jan 1970, pp. 66-67.

[3880] "Summary of the Incident," MSPA-1-6-dns, 3040, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm, Reel #301, Folder #119 (Shue); MIA microfilm, Reel #345, Folder #43 (Brown)

[3881] 652nd Engineer Bn (Topographic), U.S. Army, Map Sheet 6342 IV, Series L7014, 1971.

[3882] Narrative, Case 1514-0-01 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #428, Folder #109.

[3883] Statement of Pong, (one of the team members), in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #428, Folder #109.

[3884] Ibid.; MIA Board Proceedings, Special Operations Augmentation (CCN), 29 November 1969, and Narrative, Case 1514-0-0-1, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #428, Folder #109.

[3885] MIA Board Proceedings, Special Operations Augmentation (CCN), 29 November 1969, Para. 9.e.-i., in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #428, Folder #109.

[3886] LtCol J. G. Cole, Chief, POW/MIA Affairs, Dept. of the Army, Letter of 28 June 1991.

Ubon, Thailand. At 13235H, after the lead aircraft, BANYON-01 pulled off target he was unable to make radio contact with Capt West (flying BAYNON-02). The flight leader notified LION CONTROL that he had lost visual and radio contact with his wingman and a search was initiated. At about 1345H, smoking wreckage of a F-4 was located by Maj Robert B. Plowden, Jr. flying a RF-4C (YO-YO-71) and CAPT Donald J. Ryan of 23rd TASS [Tactical Air Support Squadron] (NAIL-41) at XD548329, a densely wooded area, approx. 16 miles SE of Tchepone, Laos. A 100-square meter area was burned clear, and aircraft parts, smoking or burning, were strewn across the site. No signs of life were observed or emergency signals heard, and no parachutes were sighted. The FAC (Capt Ryan) remained in the area for about 20 minutes maintaining an electronic and visual search, without success. An organized search was not conducted.[3887]

12 MARCH 1970

SCULL, MAJ Gary Bernard MACV Advisor

Maj Scull was KIA 12.61 nautical miles from KSCB, MIA reference No. S156.[3888]

[On 18 March 1970, the 26th Marines participated in a farewell ceremony at the DaNang airfield completing a process that had begun in mid-February as 1st Marine Regiment assumed responsibility for portions of the defense of DaNang that had been the responsibility of the 26th Marines[3889] During a ceremony on 5 March, the 26th Marines were presented with the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with palm as a unit award.[3890] The Regiment, assigned to 9th Marine Amphibious Brigade in September, 1966, arrived in Vietnam in April, 1967, and had been presented the Presidential Unit Citation in ceremonies at the White House on 23 May 1968. On 20 October 1969, with the redeployment of the 3rd Marine Division, the 26th Marines became part of the 1st Marine Division and assumed control of the large area around DaNang.[3891] Because of the redeployment of the 26th Marines, the Marine portion of U.S. forces in I Corps now became less than those of the U.S. Army, and III MAF became subordinate to XXIV Corps.[3892]]

06 MAY 1970

BAXTER, WO Roger Bruce	C-158 AHB
BENNETT, CPL George Willy Jr.	A-2-501
CHAVEZ, SP4 Gregory Anton	A-2-501
DAY, CPL Douglas Wayne	A-2-501
DENTON, SSG Robert Anthony	A-2-501
FOUTZ, SSG Kenneth Lee	C-2-501
GORDON, CPL Lawrence Lee	A-2-501
HAWLEY, CPT Richard A Jr.	E-2-501
HERNANDEZ, SGT Frank Sanchez	A-158 AHB
KIER, SSG Larry Gene	A-2-501
KINNE, SSG Allen Gene	C-158 AHB
KIRK, WO Robert Lee	A-158 AHB
OGDEN, SSG David Ellis	E-2-501
POE, CWO Clifford Earl Jr.	C-158 AHB
REAGAN, SGT Dickie Walter	E-2-501
SNYDER, SFC Gary Foster	A-2-501
TERAN, SSG Refugio Thomas	E-2-501
VAN BEUKERIN, SP4 Ronald Dale	A-2-501
VESER, SGT Edward	E-2-501
WEISS, SP4 William Conrad Jr.	A-158 AHB
WIDEN, SGT John George	A-2-501
WILLEY, SSG John James	A-2-501
WORTHINGTON, CWO Richard C Jr	A-158 AHB
ZIEGENFELDER, SSG Frederick P	A-2-501

[All units subordinate to 101st Airborne Division]

[3887] Summary of Facts and Circumstances; Joint Casualty Resolution Center, Case 1543, Circumstances of Loss; Statement of Maj Robert B. Plowden, Jr.; and Statement of Capt Donald J. Ryan, in Library of Congress, MIA POW microfilm, Reel #301, Folder #120.

[3888] Charles W. Henley, Defense Prisoner of War/Missing in Action Office, Dept of Defense, I-95/48170 dated 28 June 1995, providing a printout of all American War Losses within a 25 nautical mile radius of Khe Sanh city, "Analysis Data Report." No geographic location is indicated.

[3889] Melton, Maj William R. and Shulimson, Jack, U.S. Marines in Vietnam, Vietnamization and Redeployment, 1970-1971, Washington, D.C.: History and Museums Division, 1986, pp. 36-37.

[3890] "Honors Bestowed On 26th Marines," III MAF: Sea Tiger 6:11 (13 March 1970) 1. Since III MAF also received the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Palm, individuals of the 26th Marine Regiment should have been permitted to wear the fourragere, an ornament of cord worn on the shoulder, because of having received the award twice; however, only one award, that given to III MAF, was "officially" received. The award was received by the Secretary of the Navy for all III MAF units for 08 March 1965 through 20 September 1969. "Although individual unit awards were also presented in the field.. to preclude duplication of awards, SECNAV approved acceptance of only the III Marine Amphibious Force award." [CMC 261139Z/May74, ALMAR 47, Marine Corps Bulletin 1650]. Among the units receiving the award was the 9th Marine Regiment for service Jan-Dec 1968.

[3891] "26th Marines to Leave As Part of Phase III," III MAF: Sea Tiger 6:4 (23 January 1970) 1.

[3892] "Command to Shift in I Corps Area," III MAF: Sea Tiger 6:7 (13 February 1970) 1; "Operational Control Shifts in I Corps Tactical Zone," IIII MAF: Sea Tiger 6:12 (20 March 1970) 1.

On 06 May 1970, WO Robert Lee Kirk flew as pilot on a UH-1H helicopter (#68-15663) with CWO Richard C. Worthington, Aircraft Commander, SP5 Weiss as Crew Chief, and SGT Frank Hernandez as door gunner, in support of a combat operation. At 1145H, his aircraft and another UH-1H (#66-6706, crew: CW2 Poe, WO1 Baxter, SP4 Kinne, and SP4 Nohl) were in the process of dispensing a protective smoke screen between enemy positions and a formation of troop carrying helicopters which were landing infantry elements nearby. As the two aircraft completed their mission, they were engaged by a heavy volume of enemy automatic weapons fire. Both aircraft veered to avoid the hostile area. #663 hit the skid on the rotor blade of #707 which caused both to crash at XD968382. SSG Arthur D. Neal and his platoon rappelled into the crash site where Neal and his platoon medic, PFC Michael A. Higdon, located a body in a detached pilot seat, an empty chair next to it, another complete body, one half of a body (lower torso and legs), and a large amount of ashes which probably contained the remains of the two other bodies. SP4 Allen H. Nohl was the sole survivor, suffering second degree burns and abrasions.[3893]

At 0500H, FSB Henderson (YD081411) with A/2-501 Infantry defending, received mortars, RPG, small arms fire and satchel charges from an unknown sized enemy force followed by a ground attack resulting in 31 USA KIA, 1 US advisor KIA, 33 US WIA (evacuated), 2 US advisors WIA (evacuated) 2 USA MIA, 19 ARVN KIA, 45 ARVN WIA, 29 NVA KIA.[3894]

SP4 Refugio T. Teran was on the side of an ammunition dump on the side of the firebase which was hardest hit; his platoon was hit from the rear as well as from the front. The ammo dump itself was approximately 25 meters long by 30 meters side and included 3 105mm howitzers. A helicopter LZ was located on the other side of the position. Others in the same guard detail position included SP4 Ronald VanBeukerin, SFC Gary Snyder, and SP4 Dave G. Silva. Van Beukerin and Snyder (the NCOIC) were KIA along with the Officer in Charge, Lt Hawley, a West Point graduate, in a nearby bunker at the end of the ammo dump. SP4 Silva, who was next to Teran when the fighting erupted, ran from position to position, firing at the enemy. Beyond what damage the sappers caused directly, an artillery ammo dump just to the rear of his platoon's positions exploded causing further casualties and making an immediate search of the area impossible. When the search could begin the following day and friendly KIA were recovered, SP4's body could not be identified. Only 5 men out of 37 survived the attack. SP4 Silva stated it was his belief that Teran survived the attack by running into a tree line about 50 meters in front of the position, and states, "I could have reached safety in that manner, but chose to stay in my position."[3895]

23 MAY 1970

BARRY, WO George Francis Jr.	A-158 AHB
LANDERSHEIM, WO Larrie John	B-52, 158
MILLER, CPT Eugene Stuart	A-158 AHB
PERKINS, SP4 Stephen John	A-158 AHB
SOLDATO, MAJ Shane Nunzio	B-52
VAUGHT, SGT William H III	A-158 AHB

Detachment B-52 of 5th Special Forces [Project DELTA] (on Operation DELTA DAGGER) maintained 4 teams which were located at NDPs [Night Defensive Positions] XD881170 (Recon Team 7), XD872357 (Road Runner Team 101), XD952359 (Recon Team 10), and XD768284 (Road Runner Team 102).[3896] The Commanding Officer of Det B-52, Maj Soldato, was on a VR [Visual Reconnaissance] in the vicinity of XD912271 in a UH-1H (Tail No. 628) escorted by 2 AH-1G helicopters (tail Nos. 088 and 103) when his aircraft received unknown type fire at 1655H,[3897] crashed and burned resulting in 6 US KIA and 2 ARVN KIA.[3898] At 1715H, the Strike Recondo Platoon was inserted at XD912271 to secure the aircraft and search for survivors; they reported the aircraft had exploded and was a total loss with just part of the tail boom remaining. After searching, they found 8 bodies and extracted them by 1901H.[3899]

30 JUNE 1970

BELL, SSGT Marvin Earl	40 ARRS
DEAN, SSGT Michael Frank	40 ARRS
GOEGLEIN, MAJ John Winfred	40 ARRS

[3893] 101 Abn Div 070750Z/May70, Subj: Army Aircraft Combat Damage Crash Facts Message Report; DA Form 2496, Disposition Form, from CO, 158th Aviation Bn, to CG, 101st Abn Div, 10 May 1970; Statement of PFC Michael A. Higdon (D Troop, 2/17 Cav); Statement of SSG Arthur D. Neal (D Trp, 2/17 Cav); Statement of SP4 Allen H. Nohl of 19 June 1970; Biographic/Site Report; all documents in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #332, Folder #152 (Hernandez).

[3894] 101st Abn Div, G-3 Daily Journal, 6 May 1970

[3895] Statement of SP4 Dave G. Silva and other documents in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #314, Folder #95 (Teran).

[3896] B-52 LnO (Cpt Honaker) 232035H/May70, Operations/Intelligence Information message to 101 AbnDiv G2/3, in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 23 May 1970.

[3897] B-52 LnO (Cpt Honaker) 231930H/May70, Operations/Intelligence Information message to 101st Abn Div G2/3, in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 23 May 1970.

[3898] 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 23 May 1970. XD9127 is about 8 miles due south of the former Bridge Site manned by C/1/26 in July-August, 1968.

[3899] B-52 LnO (Cpt Honaker) 231930H/May70, Operations/Intelligence Information message to 101st Abn Div G2/3, in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 23 May 1970.

JENKINS, MSGT Paul Laverne 40 ARRS
SANDERS, CAPT William Stephen 23 TASS
SCHANEBERG, CAPT Leroy Clyde 40 ARRS

On 30 June, Capt Sanders, Pilot, and SSG Albert H. Mosiello, Observer, were flying in an OV-10A Bronco aircraft (#68-3807, call sign NAIL-44) on a Forward Air Controller mission. While responding to a call for help from an Army unit, NAIL-44 sustained battle damage and crashed in the area of XD616601. TSGT Mostello was rescued near XD615605.[3900] The aircraft had been hit in the cockpit and TSGT Albert H. Mostello ejected; the pilot did not eject probably due to wounds.[3901] It was while in the process of rescuing SSG Mosiello that Capt Schaneberg's aircraft was shot down.

Capt Shaneberg, Aircraft Commander, with Major Goeglein, Co-pilot, were flying in a HH53C (#68-8283, Call sign JOLLY GREEN-54) on a SAR [Search and Rescue] mission for NAIL-44 over Laos. After a smoke screen was laid, JOLLY GREEN-54 went in for an attempted extraction of one of the downed crew members from NAIL-44. He broke off because the smoke was too thick, but returned over the survivor, and then reported receiving heavy ground fire. As he attempted to climb away from the area, he was seen to burst into flames and crash. No parachutes were observed and no beepers were heard. The aircraft crashed at XD617617 (just south of the DMZ and 4 Km from the Lao/SVN border). Their remains were returned 24 March 1993 and identified 24 March 1995.[3902]
TSGT Mostello was rescued by another HH-3 SAR helicopter after tear gas had been dropped to keep NVA from him.[3903]

[July, 1970: Franck McGee report on NBC-TV, 6:30PM: "In Vietnam, officials in Saigon claim that at least 358 North Vietnamese have been killed near Khe Sanh in an action extending over several days. The damage was inflicted by helicopter gunships, B-52 bombers and finally, by American and South Vietnamese ground troops.[3904] In an article of the time, "A flight of F-4B Phantoms from VMA-314 recently disregarded enemy small arms fire and accounted for 12 enemy dead and 21 bunkers destroyed 8 miles southeast of Khe Sanh." The strike was in support of an ARVN unit operating in the area. There were multiple thunderstorms in the area at the time with poor visibility and low clouds. An aerial observer marked the bunker complex with smoke and the Phantoms dove through a hail of small arms fire to deliver their ordnance.[3905]]

[On 10 July 1970, the Joint Chiefs of Staff issued the large "Draft MACSOG Documentation Study."[3906].]

[On 21 August 1970, C/3-17 Cav, of 3rd Squadron, 5th Cavalry, engaged an element of the NVA 15th Engineer Company, 246th NVA Regiment, at XD855420 (the former water point site for KSCB during and prior to the 1968 siege battle), resulting in 10 NVA KIA and 1 NVA POW.[3907]]

[In response to heavy sensor activations in the vicinity of XD757357 on 07 October, a 3/C/1-11 SPARROW HAWK conducted an air assault on 08 October at 1730H to the vicinity of XD764357 (3 clicks west of the former Lang Vei USSF camp and just above Route 9) and received immediate small arms fire upon insertion resulting in 3 NVA KIA and no friendly casualties.[3908]]

24 NOVEMBER 1970

MC INTOSH, WO Ian A/2-17

At 1110H at XD928222, a OH6A helicopter of A/2-17 at 25-feet AGL received 15-20 rounds of small arms fire, crashed, and burned.[3909] The pilot was picked up by a UH1H (which received intense small arms fire), but the observer remained MIA.[3910] WO Ian McIntosh was a Canadian citizen.

LAMSON 719

When veterans of the siege battle (early 1968) at Khe Sanh return, they sometimes become disorientated because the apparent runway doesn't correspond to what they recall. The reason is due to Operation LAMSOM 719 in which another, parallel, runway was constructed on the combat base. Mr. Gary Foster, supervising the upgrade of Route 9 in the early 21" Century, discovered the "old"

[3900] Circumstances of Loss, Case 1644, as of 26 February 1976, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #425, Folder #61 (Sanders).
[3901] Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 206.
[3902] 432TRW Udorn RTAFB, Thailand 090455Z/Jul70, 432TRW/OPREP-3/001, "Circumstances of Loss, Case 1643," Narrative, Case 1643-1-01 thru 05, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #336, Folder #194.
[3903] Hobson, op. cit.
[3904] Current News, 13 July 1970. (Current News is a compilation of news articles dealing with the armed forces, distributed within the Dept. of Defense to Public Affairs Officers).
[3905] LCPL Bill McClellan, "Phantoms Strike Near Khe Sanh," III MAF: Sea Tiger 6:27 (3 July 1970) 1.
[3906] J3M-1242-70, 16 July 1970, of 16 July 1970.
[3907] 3rd Squadron, 5th Cavalry, AAR for period 22 July 1970 to 29 Jan 1971, 14 March 1971, appended to 1st Infantry Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (Mech) AAR Opn WOLFE MOUNTAIN, 7 Feb 1971.
[3908] TF 1-11 AAR Opn WOLFE MOUNTAIN, 26 Feb 1971, pp. 12, 14.
[3909] 2/17 Cav 241255H/Nov70 Spot Report in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 24 November 1970.
[3910] 2-17 LnO 241128H/Nov70, Spot Report in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 24 November 1970.

runway overgrown with eucalyptus trees and coffee plants, and provided a detailed description of how to locate it.[3911]

Intelligence indicated the presence of a new Corps-level NVA headquarters, the "70B Front," sometime in October, 1970, which planned to launch an offensive with as many as 4 divisions to seize major portions of Quang Tri and Thua Thien Provinces, including Hue and Quang Tri City.[3912]

During December, 1970, and January, 1971, intelligence indicated a sharp increase in the amount of supplies moved into the southern Laotian areas known as Base Area 604, adjacent to Quang Tri Province. Operation LAMSON 719 was designed to interdict the NVA supply and infiltration route in southern Laos and northern Military Region I (Quang Tri Province).[3913] On 14 January 1971, a small planning group of selected key staff officers accomplished the initial planning for the Operation in a limited access area to prevent compromise of the plan. The XXIV Corps order was received on 23 January, and the Operation Order for 1st Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (Mech) was published on 26 January.[3914]

Operation LAMSON 719 (30 January – 6 April 1971) saw the fulfillment (but launched too late) of General Westmoreland's concept of a movement along Route 9 from Khe Sanh deep into Laos to sever the Ho Chi Minh Trail that had been formulated in late 1967 as Operation EL PASO.[3915] There were at least 4 veterans of the siege battle that participated in LAMSON 719: William Dabney (had commanded Co I/3/26 on Hill 881-S; now as a Major, was Senior Advisor to the 258th Vietnam Marine Corps Brigade[3916]), Tommy Steiner (had landed at the Old French Fort on 21 January 1968 as part of the 282nd AHC (Assault Helicopter Company) and in 1971 was a Major, still flying), Jerry Crews (had been S-2 at FOB-3 and now flew a UH-1H with A/101 AHB), and James White (who had been a Marine crewman with HMM-262 and now flew as a crewman with the 4th of the 77th ARA (Aerial Rocket Artillery), 101st Abn Div). John W. Ripley had served in L/3/3 in 1967, patrolling Route 9 to KSCB, and now was Advisor to the 5th Battalion and Brigade 258 of the Vietnamese Marines.[3917]

Operation LAMSON 719, named after the famous battlefield in North Vietnam were the Vietnamese decisively defeated an invading army from China in 1427,[3918] "was a combined American and South Vietnamese ground and air operation aimed at disrupting enemy troop and supply movement southward through Base Area 604 in Laos, and at achieving maximum destruction of enemy forces and stock piles in base areas within the area of operations. The operational area.. included Quang Tri Province.. and an adjacent area in Laos to the west to include the area around the road junction of Tchepone (XD271477)."[3919] The width of the AO varied from 10-20 kilometers north and south of Route 9 in Laos.[3920] The concept of the operation involved 4 phases. Phase I focused on clearing of Route 9 to the Laotian border and establishment of forward logistics bases at Khe Sanh (XD844417) and Vandegrift (XD998480), accomplished 30 January – 7 February. Phase II involved movement

---

[3911] Foster, Gary, "The Khe Sanh Combat Base," Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.: Red Clay, Issue #48 (Winter, 2001), pp. 23-28.

[3912] Sorley, Lewis, A Better War, New York: Harcourt Brace & Co., 1999, p. 231.

[3913] 101st Abn Div (Airmobile), Final Report, Airmobile Operations in Support of Operation LAMSOM 719, 8 February – 6 April 1971, Vol. II, Camp Eagle, Vietnam, 1 May 1971, p. I-1.

[3914] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR, Operation LAMSON 719, 19 April 1971, p. 6.

[3915] For information on Operation EL PASO, Vide Collins, John M., Military Geography for Professionals and the Public, Washington, D.C.: National Defense University Press, 1998, pp. 367-385. The AO for EL PASO extended further west, to Muong Phine, 20.5 km further west than Tchepone. Planning for EL PASO began in November, 1967.

[3916] Photo in Cosmas, Graham A, and Murray, LTCOL Terrence P., U. S. Marines in Vietnam: Vietnamization and Redeployment, 1970-1971, Ed. MAJ William R. Melton and Jack Shulimson, Washington, D.C.: History and Museums Div, HQMC, 1986, p. 382.

[3917] Comments of Maj John W. Ripley in recorded tape of 1 March 1978 to Dr. Steven E. Ambrose, recorded tape of 27 July 1988 to Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.; Taped Comments of 09 Oct 1994.

[3918] Hung, Nguyen Tien, and Schecter, Jerrold L., The Palace File, New York: Harper & Row, Publishers, 1986, p. 42.

[3919] Hq, XXIV Corps, "An Assessment of the Performance of South Vietnamese Forces During Operation LAMSON 719 (30 January – 6 April 1971), p. 1. Tchepone, which fell 01 May 1961 and which became the occasion for American planning to land in Vietnam during Operation TULUNGUN in 1962 [Vide, pp. 9-10 of this book] now was to end American involvement in Vietnam, spelling the inability of South Vietnamese forces to protect the nation. Immediately upon the fall of Tchepone, the NVA began construction of a 80-mile north-south road linking Route 12 with Route 9 near Tchepone. [United States Intelligence Board Memorandum, North Vietnamese Violations of the Geneva Agreements on Laos, 24 June 1964, p. II-6. [CIA, MORI Doc ID 13429]. On 02 May 1961, an emergency meeting of the Republic of Vietnam's cabinet "determined that South Vietnam must take emergency countermeasures as a result of the overrunning of the Tchepone area along Route 9 by Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese forces. A South Vietnamese infantry battalion has been moved to the Laotian border where Route 9 enters South Vietnam, and on 4 May a 150-man special forces group, in civilian clothes, penetrated about six miles into Laos to aid Laotian government troops withdrawing eastward from Tchepone toward the border." [CIA, Weekly Review, 11 May 1961, MORI Doc ID 207620]. The South Vietnamese forces withdrew to the border on 23-24 May. [CIA, Weekly Intelligence Weekly Summary, MORI Doc ID 207623].

[3920] 101st Abn Div (Airmobile), Final Report, op. cit., p. I-1.

of South Vietnamese forces assisted by American forces into Laos, establishment of fire support bases and the rapid advance to Tchepone, accomplished 8 February – 6 March. Phase III focused on consolidation of positions and systematic searching and destruction of base areas in the vicinity of Tchepone, accomplished 7-9 March. Phase IV was the withdrawal from Laos (10 March – 6 April).[3921]

The South Vietnamese forces included a total of 42 maneuver battalions of which 34 operated in Laos at some time during the operation, plus 15 artillery battalions (11 105mm, 4 155mm), 10 of which operated in Laos at some time, plus an assortment of various support units. The American component of the operation included 11 maneuver battalions with supporting elements under XXIV Corps, including the 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile) (4 airborne infantry battalions plus one air cavalry squadron); the 1st Brigade of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) consisting of one infantry, one mechanized, and one armored battalion and one armored cavalry squadron; the 11th Brigade of the 23rd Infantry Division with 2 infantry battalions and one armored cavalry squadron; and other support forces.[3922]

On 29 January 1971, the 1st Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized), reinforced with elements of the 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile) and the 23rd Infantry Division, spearheaded a drive to establish a major supply depot at Khe Sanh and to reopen Highway 9 from Dong Ha to the Laotian Border.[3923] On D-Day (31 January 1971), the 1st of the 5th Div (Mech) attacked into the Khe Sanh plateau and seized and secured Ham Nghi[3924] (XD8441) [the position formerly occupied by CAP O-3 in the summer and fall of 1967 prior to the siege battle, just outside the main gate of KSCB].[3925]

"A" Company, 7th Engineer Battalion (organic to the 1st Bde, 5th Inf Div (M)) had the mission of providing combat engineer support to the Division, and was also assigned the mission of opening Route 9 over approximately 23.5 kilometers. The road was started by A Co, 7th Eng Bn on 30 Jan 1971 with security provided by the 3rd Squadron, 5th Armored Cavalry Regiment. Equipment included 3 D7E bulldozers. A rough pioneer road named "Red Devil Road" was pushed to Khe Sanh on 8 February 1971, taking a total of 10 days to complete.[3926]

CSM [Command Sergeant Major] Steven J. Rogge described the move to Khe Sanh: "We moved out down route QL-9 towards Khe Sanh. The night was unbelievably dark and all the teams stayed bunched up pretty tight. The road hadn't been used for months so was extremely overgrown. And no one knew if the road was mined or not. Teams of engineer mine detector operators were leading the way and alternating, but we felt no confidence with this method of advancement, which seemed incredibly slow because of the overgrown brush, darkness, and unfamiliar territory. We were all on foot, walking, with the exception of a bull dozer and a APC or two up front. The whole scene was eerie."[3927] At 2130, 31 January 1971, the 27th Engineer Battalion (Combat) and attached units arrived by convoy at Khe Sanh where they immediately joined forces with Task Force 326 and attached units. Work was already proceeding on the sub-base preparation for the assault runway and repair of the existing AM-2 aluminum mat airstrip. Initial reconnaissance of the 3900-foot AM-2 matted airstrip led to the conclusion that it could be repaired quickly. Later photographs and research proved otherwise. The matting had been extensively damaged by artillery and rockets with well over 50 significant holes, along with significant sub-grade washout. Consequently, it was recommended that a parallel assault airstrip, 60-ft. by 3200-ft. be constructed and used until the permanent strip could be repaired.

After mine sweeps had been conducted throughout the entire length and breadth of the runway and EOD destroyed unexploded ordnance, repair of the strip began. On D+4 (03 Feb), the new, parallel 3200-ft. by 60-ft. assault airstrip was completed and ready to be tested. In 10 days, over 15,000 panels of MX-19 aluminum matting were transported to Khe Sanh and placed on the assault runway. On 14 Feb, the Khe Sanh air facility became operational. With the completion of the assault strip, emphasis was shifted to the (older) AM-2 runway. Working from west to east, the soldiers of Co A began removal and replacement of damaged panels and repair of damaged grade. A total of 1226 AM-2 panels were required to repair the AM-2 strip and construct connecting taxiways. The final phase of construction required assembly of a 350-ft. x 850-ft. parking apron. 1/591 Engineer Company (Light Equipment) moved 20,000 cubic yards of

---

[3921] Ibid., p. 1.

[3922] Ibid., p. 2.

[3923] 1st Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (M), AAR, Operation KEYSTONE ORIOLE (BRAVO), Annex K, Historical Synopsis, p. 105.

[3924] 101st Abn Div (Airmobile), Final Report, op. cit., p. I-5.

[3925] The 1st Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) traces its history to December, 1917, when it was organized. In May of 1918 the "Red Devils" saw action in the trenches of France, and in September, 1941, was sent to Iceland to protect that island from invasion. The Brigade arrived in Vietnam on 02 July 1968 at Wunder Beach, moved to Con Thien to conduct operations in "Leatherneck Square" and was placed OPCON under XXIV Corps and its AO encompassed Dong Ha, Cam Lo, Con Thien and Gio Linh with its TOC at QTCB (Quang Tri Combat Base at Ai Tu), Quang Tri Province. In the early part of 1969, elements of the Brigade conducted search and clear operations in and around Khe Sanh and the Laotian border

[3926] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR, Operation LAM-SON 719, 19 April 1971, p. 4, Para d.

[3927] Rogge, Steven J., "A Combat Engineer Squad Leader in Vietnam: A Firsthand Account," The Army Engin eer (August-September, 1994) 32.

earth and one platoon of Co A, C, and D, then began placement of 12,325 individual panels of M8A1 steel matting.

Meanwhile, on 01 February (D+2), the 1st and 2nd Platoons of the 591st Engineer Company (Light Equipment) with a squad from Co A, 27th Engineer Battalion (Combat) departed Khe Sanh with the mission of opening QL-9 westward to the Laotian border by D+5 (04 Feb). The mission included clearing a 50-meter width of jungle on either side of the road and construction of a parallel pioneer road whenever possible. The route was completely grown over with vegetation and all bridges had been destroyed.[3928]

Over 400,000 square meters of land were cleared at what was once KSCB (involving clearing over 8,000 land mines), after which defensive positions, helicopter pads, POL areas, refuel-rearm pads, helicopter leggering areas and access roads were constructed at and over 90,000 square meters of helicopter loggering area were constructed and peneprimed. An additional 85,000 square meters loggering pad was constructed at Lang Vei (XD795361). More than 90,000 gallons of peneprime was consumed for dust palliation purposes.[3929]

Co "A", 7th Eng Bn assisted in the construction of a brigade command post near Lang Vei and one near Khe Sanh, along with 4 fire support bases, a 1500 gallon per hour water point at Khe Sanh, and providing nearly 80 kilometers of new road in an area that before the operation had only QL-9 in areas where there had been no previous vehicular traffic, friendly or enemy.[3930]

04 February 1971

SOMERS, PVT Gregory S.	A/2-17 Cav

An unknown type mine was detonated at 1120H at XD845423 (1 KM northwest of Ham Nghi, about where the wire of the northwest perimeter of the former KSCB was located) killing one soldier from A Troop, 2nd Squadron, 17th Cavalry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division.[3931]

05 February 1971

PAUL, WO James Lee	D/3-5 Cav
WOOD, WO Carl Mitchell	D/3-5 Cav

WO1 James L. Paul and WO1 Carl M. Wood of D/3-5 Cav in a AH-1G (#66-15340) flew into the side of a cliff northwest of Khe Sanh (at XD865443, about 1000 meters southeast of Hill 1015 overlooking KSCB). Their bodies were not recovered, but the aircraft was secured.[3932]

07 February 1971

SCHMALTZ, CPL Douglas Ralph	A/4-3
TROYANO, PFC Roland Dean	A/4-3

While moving to their night location at XD773497 (8 KM northwest of Ham Nghi), the 4th Battalion, 3rd Infantry Regiment, 11th Infantry Brigade at 1805H received small arms fire and grenades from 15-20 meters west of their location from an estimated 2-4 enemy personnel. Organic weapons fire was placed on the enemy soldiers who fled south. The contact resulted in the death of 2 American soldiers and 2 WIA.[3933]

08 February 1971

BENITEZ, PSGT Rafael Rivera	C/1-61
BOBO, SGT Charles Glen	C/158th AHB
DOODY, WO Thomas Patrick	C/158th AHB
FIRST, PFC Michael Bruce	C/1-11
FOX, CPT David Nelson	B/7-1
GENTRY, WO Robert Barry	174th AHC
ROBERTSON, CPL John Ernest	B/7-1
STEWART, CWO Paul Clark	C/158 AHB
TWOREK, SSG Gerald John	C/1-11

The attack into Laos was initiated on 8 February from bases established on the Khe Sanh plain. The Vietnamese 1st Armored Brigade Task Force crossed the border at 1000H at Ta Bat (XD699382) and advanced 9 KM westward along Route 9.[3934] During the day, 3351 troops were airlifted into Laos from Khe Sanh.[3935] The weather from 0900-1800 was drizzle, 1000-2000-ft. overcast, low scattered clouds, 3-7 mile visibility, and 53° - 63°.[3936]

[3928] Col W. O. Bachus, 27th Engineer Battalion (Combat), recommendation for the Award of the Presidential Unit Citation, 16 December 1971.

[3929] Ibid.

[3930] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR, Operation LAM-SON 719, 19 April 1971, p. 4, Para d.

[3931] 1st Inf Brig, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Open LAM SON 719.

[3932] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Association, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994, p. 256); G-2 Ops 051700H/Feb71 in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 05 Feb 1971.

[3933] 1st Inf Brig, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Open LAM SON 719; G-2 Fwd 080350H in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 08 Feb 1971.

[3934] 101st Airborne Div (Airmobile), Final Report, Airmobile Operations in Support of Operation LAMSON 719, 8 February – 6 April 1971, Vol. II, Camp Eagle, Vietnam, 1 May 1971, p. III-1; 101st Abn Div Fwd G-3 081430Z/Feb71, Subj: Summary of Op 08 Feb 71; in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 08 Feb 1971.

[3935] Anonymous, "LAM SON 719, 8 February 1971 to 25 March 1971, A Narrative Description," n.d., copy furnished by COL E. Davis, USA (ret) to Mr. Keith Nolan, 13 March 1984, p. 2.

[3936] G-2, Quang Tri msg 081920 in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 08 Feb 1971.

CW2 Stewart, Aircraft Commander, WO1 Doody, Pilot, SP4 Bobo, Crewchief, and PFC Robertson, Gunner, were flying in a UH1H helicopter (#68-16307, call sign CHALK-3) as the number three aircraft in a flight of 10 UH-1Hs in an insertion mission in Laos. During the mission, Stewart radioed the flight leader, Maj James W. Lloyd (who was leading a flight of 40 UH-1 aircraft on a combat assault into Laos), that his aircraft had sustained damage to the tail rotor controls from hits from ground fire. (His anti-torque pedals were jammed with full left pedal). He radioed that he was returning to the pickup zone near KSCB (along Route 9, XD835381). While enroute, Stewart transmitted, "I'm inverted—going in," and nothing further was heard. The flight leader then saw a column of smoke coming from the crash site (XD582368). A Cobra gunship team escorting the 10 UH-1H helicopters was flying near the tail end of the flight formation when the assault commenced. CW2 Russell D. Capps, flying as Team Lead in one of the 2 AH1G Cobra helicopters, heard that "Double Deuce" (W2 Stewart) had been hit and was returning to Khe Sanh. Then other aircraft reported taking fire and the Cobras suppressed the suspected area. Once again "Double Deuce" called and said he was in a spin and crashed. CW2 Capps was diverted by the C&C [command and control] to the crash site and located the burning aircraft, located in a heavily vegetated area adjacent a large river and approx. 500 meters west of a well-used road. While the wing aircraft (flown by CW2 Webb, Pilot, and Cpt Lopez, Copilot) covered him, Capps made passes over the wreckage until recovery aircraft arrived. While Capps laid down suppressive fire for the recovery aircraft, the crashed aircraft exploded, and Capps returned to Khe Sanh due to low fuel, convinced there were no survivors.[3937]

Stewart had earned the nickname "Mr. Invincible" due to his courage; he had just extended his Vietnam tour.[3938]

On 10 Feb 1971, CPT John A. Bottman, Aircraft Commander of a UH-1H (#611) assigned to Co C, 158th Aviation Battalion (Aslt Helo, Ambulance) received the mission to recover the bodies of the 4 crew from Co C, 158th Avn Bn and flew directly to the crash site (XD5836) after picking up body bags. He dropped the body bags and began directing a ARVN infantry unit towards the crash site, a process which took about an hour as he hovered 100 feet AGL (above ground level) about 20 minutes over the crash. (He was unable to land due to terrain and vegetation). The largest visible piece remaining was half of one of the cargo doors; the rest of the aircraft had been completely consumed by the fire. The bodies appeared to be badly burned; a fourth appeared to be just a lower torso. The ARVN unit reached the crash site and started searching the area. 4 charred bodies were recovered, and then 5 ARVN bodies that w2ere not burned or mutilated, passengers that were apparently thrown clear of the wreckage prior to the crash, were recovered.[3939] The remains of Doody and Bobo were positively identified, cause of death: total body burns. The remains of Stewart were not recovered.[3940]

A B/7-1 Cav command and control UH-1H received 12.7mm machinegun fire and took hits in the right side of the aircraft, caught fire, and crashed at XD583573. The CO of the unit sustained a broken leg and the crew chief was burned; Capt David N. Fox, Co-pilot, and Cpl John Robertson, the door gunner, were MIA, not found.[3941]

WO Robert B. Gentry of the 174th Assault Helicopter Company died while departing LZ HOTEL when his cockpit was hit by machinegun fire.[3942]

C/1-11 at 081145H at XD697395 (5 KM northwest of Ta Kut) received automatic weapons fire and grenades from an estimated squad which was on a hill resulting in 1 KIA and 1 MIA (SSGT Gerald J. Tworek and PFC Michael Bruce First).[3943]

2/C/1-61 received small arms fire and RPG rounds at 1456H while at XD954554 resulting in 1 KIA and 6 WIA.[3944]

09 FEBRUARY 1971

FELTON, SGT Melvin James	C/8-4
PAKELE, SSG Fred Dale	A/1-61
WHITNEY, PVT Blake Dominic	C/8-4

At 1235H, 2/C/1-61 received sporadic small arms fire resulting in 1 KIA and 3 WIA.[3945]

[3937] Joint Task Force—Full Accounting, Biographic/Site Report, as of 6 Jan 1993"Circumstances of Loss," 13 May 1975; Statement of MAJ James W. Lloyd, 20 Feb 1971; Statement of CW2 Russell D. Capps, 21 Feb 1971; and Statement of CPT William E. Lopez, 21 Feb 1971; all contained in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #425, Folder #63; 101 Avn Gp 081500, Ser #19 in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 08 Feb 1971., p. 257.

[3938] Nolan, Keith William, Into Laos, Novato, CA.: Presidio, 1986, p. 115.

[3939] Statement of CPT John A. Bottman, in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 08 Feb 1971.

[3940] AVDG-AGP-L (6 Mar 71) 1st End, Subj: Letter of Transmittal, in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #425, Folder #63; CDR JCRC Barbers Pt HI 192242Z/Jul91 in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #425, Folder #63.

[3941] XXIV Corps 081145 in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 08 Feb 1971, Ser #4; Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994)

[3942] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 257.

[3943] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR LAM SON 719; Letter from Keith Short in Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.: Red Clay, Issue #51 (Fall, 2001), pp. 6-7.

[3944] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR LAM SON 719.

[3945] Ibid.

At 1335H, A/1-94 and C Battery, 8th Battalion, 4th Artillery Regiment at XD715375 (2 KM from Lang Ta Kut) received 20-25 unknown type incoming rounds which resulted in 1 ARVN KIA, 2 US KIA, and 5 US WIA.[3946]

Deteriorated weather conditions made flying impossible, forcing the cancellation of all air moves. An ARVN armored column, however, made use of the poor weather to push westward 20 kilometers inside Laos to Fire Base Aluoi (XD526399).[3947]

10 FEBRUARY 1971

BURROWS, Larry	Civilian
HUET, Henri	Civilian
PIETRZAK, SGT Joseph Ray	B/2-17
POTTER, Kent Biddle	Civilian
SHIMAMOTO, Kent Biddle	Civilian
ROBERTSON, WO Mark John	B/2-17

WO1 Mark J. Robertson of B Troop, 2nd Squadron, 17th Cavalry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division died in an OH-6A (#66-17765).[3948] The OH-6 "Loach" (or "little bird") was used as part of a "pink team" combining the "white" loach which darted over the terrain to locate the enemy, frequently by drawing fire to itself and then mark the target with a smoke rocket as a "red" AH-1 Cobra gunship or USAF fast-mover F-4 jet aircraft destroyed the target.[3949]

The first spot report indicated a flight from an unknown unit of UH1H without gun cover flew over XD565552. The first bird was shot out of the sky by 37mm and the 2nd UH1H had its rotor head blown off. Both aircraft were destroyed and there appeared to be no survivors.[3950]

Killed on the flight were four American photographers: Larry Burrows (44, Life magazine), Henri Huet (43, Associated Press), Kent Potter (23, UPI), and Keizaburo Shimamoto (34, Newsweek).[3951]

Two days earlier, James Newman, commander of C Troop, 2-17 Cav (call sign "Condor 6") had encountered NVA 37mm fire from a hillside where now he saw 4 UH1E helicopters venture. Newman attempted to warn the birds of the danger they were to face, broadcasting on all frequencies, but was unsuccessful. Other American pilots joined in the warning, but either the chopper pilots didn't understand English or they weren't turned on to the guard frequency. It was 1230 as Newman saw the orange balls of the NVA 37mm antiaircraft fire strike the lead helicopter's fuel tank, resulting in a horrible explosion, disintegrating the bird. Additional rounds tore off the rotor of the third helicopter and it plummeted to the ground. The other 2 choppers escaped and returned to Ham Nghi. Also killed in the choppers were several of General Lam's staff including a Colonel Nhat who carried a map case containing the maps, operation plans, and secret radio codes for LAM SON 719 and SGT Tu Vu, a South Vietnamese Army photographer.[3952]

Ironically, Larry Burrows, whose photographic eyes caught "the cruelty and brutality of war in the faces of his subjects,"[3953] had such deficient visual acuity that the British Army refused him for military service during World War II.[3954] Burrows was born Henry Frank Leslie Burrows on 29 May 1926, and nicknamed "Harry," which was changed to "Larry" by the Americans in London during WW II to which he seemed gravitated. Burrows covered the Vietnam War from the beginning and earned the respect of his peers.[3955]

Henri Huet was born in Dalat, Vietnam, the son of a French father and Vietnamese mother, and moved with them to France when 5. Starting out as a painter, he entered the Army and veered into photography, returning to Vietnam at the age of 22 as a French combat photographer. He remained in Vietnam following his discharge working for UPI and then AP. He gained a reputation as one of the world's best photographers and rapidly gained renown as a fearless-in-combat professional as he covered battles including Con Thien in 1967.[3956]

Kent Potter began working for UPI at 16. He is described as 6-foot-2, dark hair, pale blue eyes, liked cars and speed, and was a better than average student, played end on a football team, ran hurdles and sprints on the track team, and sang in the chorus of a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta. Then his mother asked him to go to the pharmacy to fill a prescription and she killed herself with an overdose of sleeping pills. The devastating loss of his mother, coupled with his father's undeserved hatred of his unwitting role in it, forced the young Potter into becoming a loner. His father, a pacifist, Kent joined the US

[3946] Ibid.

[3947] Anonymous, Operation LAM SON 719, 8 February 1971 to 25 March 1971, A Narrative Description, n.d., p. 3.

[3948] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 259.

[3949] Pyle, Richard and Faas, Horst, Lost over Laos, Cambridge, MA: Da Capo Press, 2003, p. 151.

[3950] Doc #3 in 101st Airborne Div G-3 Daily Journal, 10 Feb 1971.

[3951] Faas, Horst, and Page, Tim, Requiem, New York: Random House, 1997, p. 269.

[3952] Ibid., pp. 152-155; Richard and Faas, Horst, Lost over Laos, op. cit., p. 133.

[3953] Faas, Horst, and Page, Tim, Requiem, op. cit., p. 92.

[3954] Ibid., p. 96; Pyle, Richard and Faas, Horst, Lost over Laos, op. cit., p. 23.

[3955] Richard and Faas, Horst, Lost over Laos, op. cit., pp. 21-32. An entire book has been devoted to Burrow's Vietnam photography: Larry Burrows Vietnam, Intro by David Halberstam, New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 2002. Included are photos taken at Khe Sanh during Operation PEGASUS, pp. 176-185.

[3956] Lost over Laos, op. cit., pp. 49-66; Requiem, op. cit., p. 316.

Marine Corps Reserve. Potter, in Vietnam working for UPI was summoned from Thailand to Saigon to cover the invasion of Laos.[3957]

Keisaburo Shimamoto was born in Seoul in 1937 during the Japanese occupation of Korea and returned with his family to Tokyo during World War II. He graduated from the prestigious Waseda University in Tokyo in 1959 with a major in Russian literature. In 1962, he became a photographer with the Pan Asia Newspaper Alliance (PANA) and covered the 1964 summer Olympics in Tokyo and from 1965 – 1967 covered military operations in Vietnam. In January, 1968, he signed on with the powerful French news agency, Gamma, and while on assignment to Newsweek, found himself at Khe Sanh as General Lam's helicopters were about to depart on 10 February.[3958]

12 FEBRUARY 1971

ENGLISH, PFC Steve Craig	A/4-3
MCLEOD, CWO Arthur Edward	C/2-17
MORAN, SP4 David Alfred	A/4-3
WILKINSON, CPT Clyde David	C/2-17

1st Platoon, Co "B", 4th Battalion, 3rd Infantry Regiment was hit by a command detonated mine at 1005H at XD922553 (6 KM west of Combat Base Elliott) followed by small arms fire and artillery fire. 2/A/4-3 reinforced the first platoon and also received small arms fire and grenades, resulting in 2 KIA and 6 WIA.[3959]

WO1 Arthur E. McLeod, Pilot, and CPT Clyde David Wilkinson were flying an AH-1G Cobra (#68-17089) on a "heavy pink team." CPT Gary T. Swift was flying as pilot of a LOH. The mission was a VR [visual reconnaissance] in the vicinity of XD676488 where heavy enemy activity had been encountered the previous day. CPT Swift's first run was met with a large volume of automatic weapons and .51 cal. fire, and he marked the target with smoke to mark the target for the Cobras. WO-1 McLeod made 2 runs and on his second run reported that his oil cooler bypass light had illuminated and that he had felt a thump on his last pass, possibly taking a hit. He gained altitude and started back toward Khe Sanh. About 30 seconds later he reported that his engine oil temperature had gone up to 100° Centigrade. CPT Swift, following him, radioed to him, "48, you are trailing smoke," and there was no reply. Immediately flames started emerging from the pylon, and the nose dipped down into a shallow dive. The aircraft leveled out and entered a flare approximately 100 feet AGL [above ground level], exploded when about 4-5 feet off the ground, and crashed into a small hill at XD676488.[3960]

14 FEBRUARY 1971

COVERT, SGT Richard Dean Jr.	A/7th Eng
RUFF, PFC Ronald Calvin	A/7th Eng

"A" Company, 7th Engineer Bn was engaged while working in a stream crossing at XD8147 (about 2700 meters east northeast of Hill 861 and 2200 meters northwest of Hill 558) by small arms fire and RPG rounds resulting in 2 KIA and 3 WIA.[3961]

[On 14 February 1971, Gen Abrams, COMUSMACV, sent a TOP SECRET SPECAT EXCLUSIVE message to Adm Moorer (CJCS) and Adm McCain (CINCPAC) giving his personal appraisal of the progress of LAM SON 719. He noted "execution to date has been somewhat more dliberate than originally envisioned. Three reasons appear paramount: first, General Lam considered it prudent to insure adequate flank security including establishment of fire support bases along Highway 9. Second, the roads on the Laotian side of the border were in far worse condition than expected with many erosion cuts twenty feet deep. Third, General Lam is determined to secure his lines of communication on the ground against the contingencies presented in Washington... The objective of the operation remains to achieve maximum disruption of the enemy system within Base Area 604. A prime purpose of the operation was to sever the enemy LOC, and by cutting and controlling Route 92, this has to a certain degree been accomplished as evidenced by the equipment and supplies already uncovered.... The relatively high AAA threat in the AO resulted in certain helicopter losses. However, these losses have been less than anticipated considering the total helicopter sorties flown to date... The deeper heliborne thrusts will be resumed when the ARVN leaders are convinced that their flanks, rear, and LOC are secure and that their forward supply posture is adequate.[3962]]

15 FEBRUARY 1971

BURKE, WO Joseph Scott	B/2-17
COBB, SGT James Paul	B/2-17
CONCANNON, CWO Richard Neil	B/2-17
CREAR, SP4 Willis Calvin	C/159 ASHB[3963]

[3957] Lost over Laos, op. cit., pp. 107-126; Requiem, op. cit., p. 320.

[3958] Lost over Laos, op. cit., pp. 135-142; Requiem, op. cit., p. 318.

[3959] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Opn LAM SON 719, 19 Apr 1971.

[3960] Statement of CPT Gary T. Swift, 12 Feb 1971 and Statement of CW-2 John R. Shimo in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #335, Folder #177; Spot Report 121345 in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 12 Feb 1991.

[3961] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Opn LAM SON 719, 19 Apr 1971.

[3962] MACV msg 141435Z/Feb71.

[3963] ASHB = "Assault Support Helicopter Battalion."

CRONE, SP4 Donald Everett	C/159 ASHB
FIVELSON, WO Barry Frank	C/159 ASHB
JOHNSON, SP4 Zebulon Murphy	B/2-17
LEONARD, CWO Marvin Maurice	C/159 ASHB
POWERS, SP4 John Lynn	C/159 ASHB
TAYLOR, 2/Lt James Harry	C/159 ASHB

2/Lt James H. Taylor (aircraft commander), WO1 Marvin M. Leonard (Pilot), SP4 Donald E. Crone (crew chief), SP4 Willis C. Crear (door gunner), SP4 John L. Powers (flight engineer), and WO Barry F. Fivelson (passenger) were aboard a CH-47C Chinook helicopter (#18506, call sign REGARD 25) on a combat support resupply mission when it caught fire and exploded in mid-air, and crashed in the vicinity of XD528405. Witnesses who observed the incident stated that the helicopter appeared to be disoriented in that it had overflown the nearest friendly location by several miles, and just prior to the incident, began descending into enemy-held territory. During the descent, the sling load apparently exploded causing the helicopter to explode, break into two pieces, and then crash. The cause of the explosion and crash is unknown.[3964]

2/Lt Taylor had just received a direct commission and WO1 Fivelson "was just a kid, a new guy. We had used him as a LNO [Liaison Officer] at Khe Sanh for some time. He was riding on this trip as an observer, getting his feet wet, taking pictures."[3965]

16 FEBRUARY 1971

CARTER, PFC James Basil	D/4-3
SIMON, SP4 James Martin	D/4-3
STAFFORD, SFC James Hubert	D/4-3

At 0715H, D/4-3 at XD920528 was engaged with small arms fire by an estimated 15 NVA as the unit was preparing to move from their NDP [night defensive position] resulting in 3 KIA and 1 WIA.[3966]

18 FEBRUARY 1971

BAKER, SSG Richard Thomas	HMH-463
BERG, CWO George Phillip	A/101st AvBn
BROWN, CWO Joseph Gordon	48th AHC
CRANDALL, WO Gregory Stephen	C/2-17
DEMPSEY, SP4 Walter Edward Jr.	A/101st AvBn
ENGEN, SP4 Robert Joseph	C/2-17
HATTER, CPL Larry Richard	HMH-463
HYATT, MAJ Wayne Reuben	HMH-463
JOHNSON, SP4 Gary Lee	A/101st AvBn
LEWELLEN, SGT Walter Edward	C/2-17
LILLIE, SGT Richard Arthur	H&MS-1
MARSHALL, 1/Lt Joseph Henry III	48th AHC
MCELFRESH, SGT Allen Keith	HMH-463
ODOM, SGT William Clinton Jr.	HMH-463
SLOAT, SGT Gregory Alec	H&MS-1
WOOD, 1/Lt Strather Franklin	HMH-463
WOODS, WO Gerald Ernest	A/101st AvBn

At 1900H a CH-53D (#15667) exploded in the air and crashed 8 ½ KM northeast of Hue/Phu Bai at YD976184 while returning to Marble Mountain Air Base, DaNang, from support of LAM SON 719, killing the entire crew of 5 and 2 passengers.[3967] The aircraft had taken battle damage earlier in the day while operating in Laos, landed at KILO (XD858387, the site of the Old French Fort) where the damage was inspected and a determination made that the aircraft was safe enough to return to Marble Mountain.[3968] The CH-53D crashed into a rice paddy, "..so it was very difficult looking for the bodies with all the twisted metal and mud and muck. There was no fire."[3969]

1/Lt Joseph H. Marshall took a .51 cal. round in the head and immediately died during a mission in Laos.[3970]

C Troop, 2nd Squadron, 17th Cav Regt lost a OH-6A (#67-12528) at XD465415 from ground fire killing WO Crandall, SP4 Engen, and SP4 Lewellen.[3971]

A UH1H from the 158th Aviation Battalion received an unknown number of rounds of small arms fire at 75-ft. AGL while hovering, crashed and burned, resulting in 4 MIA:[3972] Berg, Dempsey, Johnson, and Woods.

[3964] Joint Casualty Resolution Center, Biographic/Site Report as of 2 Oct 1990, Case #1703-0-04 and Circumstances of Loss (as of 29 March 1976), in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #335, Folder #178 (Crear); Statements of LTC William N. Peachey and CW2 John A. Herbold, both 26 Feb 1971, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #324, Folder #47 (Crone).

[3965] Comments of James Scott in Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 260.

[3966] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Opn LAM SON 719, 19 Apr 1971.

[3967] G-3, I MAW msg 182105H to III MAF in III MAF Journal and File, 9-18 Feb 1971, #43; Cosmas, Graham A. and Murray, LTCOL Terrence P., U.S. Marines in Vietnam: Vietnamization and Redeployment, 1970-1971, ed. Melton, MAJ William R. and Shulimson, Jack, Washington, D.C.: History and Museums Div, HQMC, 1986, p. 204. [References listed: CG III MAF msg to CG XXIV Corps of 18 Feb 1971; III MAF Spot Rpt, 18 Feb71, both in III MAF Journal and File, 19-28 Feb 1971.]

[3968] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 262.

[3969] Statement of Mike Wasko in Ibid.

[3970] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 262.

[3971] 2-17 Cav Fwd Spot Report 181953H in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 18 Feb 1971.

[3972] ADAO msg 181845H in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 18 Feb 1971.

Early in the morning, the 237th Medical Detachment sent a DUSTOFF to RANGER NORTH (XD595515) consisting of CW2 Joseph Gordon Brown (nicknamed "Easter Bear") and Darrell Monteith as the other pilot and medics SP5 Costello, SP5 Fujii and SP5 Simpco, escorted by 2 AH-1G Cobras. Taking heavy fire from NVA in the area, Brown landed and the wounded were loaded. As they lifted off, a mortar round exploded on the LZ and the aircraft crashed to the ground. Brown was KIA and the remainder of the crew were wounded except one. During the mortar attack, a rescue Huey landed and embarked the crew other than Fujii who returned to a bunker and radioed the aviators to warn them to stay clear of RANGER NORTH.[3973]

During the period of 19-22 February, the northern flank of the LAMSON 719 operation came under heavy counterattack by the NVA who concentrated their forces on the RANGER NORTH (XD595515) and RANGER SOUTH (XD581503) firebases. Resupply was hampered by enemy direct and indirect fire on LZs and on 20 February, Ranger North was penetrated by the NVA. Division-sized NVA units surrounded both Fire Bases and applied constant pressure through rocket, mortar and ground attacks in an attempt to overrun and destroy the firebases. The Vietnamese Rangers suffered heavy casualties and ran short of ammunition and medical supplies. On a medical evacuation mission on 18 February, one helicopter had been shot down killing CW2 Joseph Gordon Brown and leaving SP5 Dennis Fujii who, for 3 days directed armed helicopter and air strikes around the position, preventing it from being overrun and destroyed. As the situation became critical, a plan was executed combining all available firepower around the 2 fire bases and the decision was made to resupply and rescue Fujii with one helicopter. Maj Jim Lloyd, Commander of C Company, 158th Aviation Battalion, volunteered for the mission despite heavy rocket and mortar fire falling on the firebase and enemy ground probes breeching the perimeter. As SP5 Fujii boarded the helicopter, the bird received numerous hits causing it to burn and lose altitude. Maj Lloyd nursed the damaged bird to Ranger South for an emergency landing where he and his crew were later rescued. Fujii, however, remained with the Rangers for 2 more days directing armed helicopters and air strikes against the NVA until he was rescued again on the 24th.[3974]

19 February 1971

CARACCILO, CPL Anthony Joseph Jr.	3/D/1-11
MARSHALL, CPL Clifford Wayne	3/D/1-11
MATTHEWS, SGT Charles Toney	3/D/1-11
MONNETT, SP5 Leonard Allen	173rd AHC
SMITH, SGT Lyle Elton	3/D/1-11

At 1715H, Third Platoon of D/1-11 at XD744493 was cut off from the remainder of the company while linking up and received small arms fire. Returning small arms fire and artillery, the contact remained until after sunset. At 2345H, the unit observed movement 50 meters southeast of their position moving east to west. Friendly casualties were 4 US KIA, 7 US WIA, and 1 US MIA.[3975]

SP5 Leonard A. Monnett was killed in an OH-6A in Laos.[3976]

20 February 1971

ACALOTTO, SSG Robert Joseph	48th AHC
GILLILAND, SP4 Dennis Elbert	498th Med Co
HUNTER, 1/Lt John Clark	Bde HHC
JOHNSON, SFC Randolph Leroy	48th AHC
LYONS, SGT Chester George	C/3-187
MAY, CPT David Murray	48th AHC
NACCA, WO Carl Jr.	Bde HHC
RAUEN, WO John Vernon	498th Med Co
REID, CWO Jon Eric	48th AHC

+ 3 unidentified soldiers from the CP and 2/D/1-11

At 1245H, WO1 Jon E. Reid (Pilot), 1/Lt David M. May (Co-pilot), SP5 Randolph L. Johnson (Crew Chief), and SP4 Robert J. Acalotto (Door Gunner) were crewmen of a UH1C helicopter (#66700) from the 48th Assault Helicopter Company, 223rd Aviation Battalion, 1st Aviation Brigade providing gun cover for an emergency resupply mission. The helicopter was hit by hostile fire at XD508208 and crashed at XD562198. Although 2 people (believed to be the door gunner and crew chief) were seen exiting the aircraft from the right side and running toward nearby trees, attempts to rescue the downed crew were unsuccessful due to heavy enemy fire. A circling helicopter took fire from all sides surrounding the downed aircraft, and on the 8th or 10th pass sustained numerous hits with the gunner being seriously wounded, necessitating their return to Khe Sanh. The 1st ARVN Division was moving to assist the ground rescue attempt, but the tactical situation changed before the infantry could reach the area and the unit had to be extracted and no contact was made with the downed crew. Rescue attempts were made for several days but were unsuccessful because of heavy weapons fire.[3977]

[3973] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 262.

[3974] Berry, MajGen Sidney, LAMSON 719—The Assault into Laos 8 February – 6 April 1971, unpublished manuscript [Copy from files of Keith William Nolan], pp. 5-7.

[3975] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech) AAR Opn LAM SON 719.

[3976] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 262.

[3977] JCRC Biographic Rpt as of 20 Mar 1979, Ref No 1708-0-01 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #143, Folder #651 (Case #02714); Statement of SP5 Gerald F. Winchester, 27 May 1971, and Joint Casualty Resolution Center Narra-

At approximately 2150H WO1 John V. Rauen (aircraft commander), WO1 John M. Souther (pilot), SP4 Dennis E. Gilliland (engineer) and SP4 John J. Levulis (medic) took off in a UH-1H (#69-15273) from the 498th Medical Company, first refueling at the POL and then returning to B Med. While maneuvering, a ground fog intermittently obscured the area, making horizontal visibility from zero-zero to unlimited. The aircraft took off from the POL, entered the fog, and apparently descended while turning. As the aircraft neared the ground, the pilot apparently realized how close to the ground he was and flared the aircraft in an attempt to decrease his rate of descent. The aircraft impacted the ground (aft, left skid) descending at 650 ft. per minute, continued forward approximately 45 feet, made contact with the ground a second time where the right skid made a furrow in the ground 8-ft. 3-in. long, 2-ft. wide, and 8-in. deep. The right skid collapsed and the main rotor blade made contact with 2 55-gallon drums. The bird continued forward in approximately a 30° right bank condition and nomex sleeve was torn off one of the crew members by a jagged edge from one of the 2 55-gallon drums. The head separated from the mast, and as the aircraft rolled, the tailboom separated from the main fuselage which rolled another 250 feet leaving puddles of burning JP4 fuel. The aircraft was completely engulfed in flames. The pilot, WO1 John Souther, was extracted from the main fuselage with the use of a front loader, and died 26 February from 3rd degree burns of the head and shoulders. The crew chief, SP4 De Gilliland, was thrown clear of the main fuselage and landed near the tailboom. The Medic, SP4 John J. Levulis, was extracted critically burned and died 21 February.[3978] John Rauen was still in the left seat as only charred remains. "I could tell it was him from the shape of his head in the helmet. John was a flight school class mate of mine and a good friend. I thought we found Gilliland partially buried in the cabin behind Rauen. I distinctly remember his round wire rim glasses."[3979]

5 soldiers of the CP and 2/D/1-11 were killed as a result of a tripflare and mechanical ambush detonation at XD842469 (off north slope of Hill 950). 1 Kit Carson Scout was also KIA and 7 US WIA in the incident.[3980]

21 FEBRUARY 1971

LEVULIS, SP4 John Joseph 498th Med Co

Died of burn wounds received 20 February 1971.[3981]

23 FEBRUARY 1971

ARMENTROUT, SSG Raymond Lee	D/3-5
BARTON, SP5 James Eugene	173rd AHC
BRUIN, SP4 John William	173rd AHC
FARRIS, 1/Lt Dennis Claude	173rd AHC
HAUSHERR, SP4 Charles Raymond	173rd AHC
HISCOCK, CWO Stephen Mayo	D/3-5
MINER, CWO James Allen	173rd AHC
OGATA, SP4 Terrance Aki	173rd AHC
SHINKAWA, WO Roy Yasushi	173rd AHC
USHER, 1/Lt Terry Maxwell	173rd AHC

A UH-1H (#67-19516) of the 173rd AHC (Farris, Usher, Bruin, and Ogata) was lost in a mid-air collision with a UH-1C (#65-09503) (Miner, Shinkawa, Barton, and Hausherr) while working near a LZ in Laos, killing both crews.[3982]

CWO Hiscock died in an OH-6A.[3983]

25 FEBRUARY 1971

JOHNSON, SP4 Edward A Jr. C/7-17

SP4 Johnson died from injuries while in Laos. A USAF F4 was shot down while making an airstrike and the 2 pilots ejected. A Cobra command and control helicopter went in to rescue the pilots and was also shot down. Another Cobra rescued the crew, but a bullet had cut through a main artery of the gunner on the C&C bird causing him to bleed to death from the wound.[3984] the 174th AHC lost a UH-1 that crashed and burned near LZ Scotch (XD934585). WO1 Steven R. Burch was evacuated to Japan but died on 5 March of pneumonia. WO1 Patrick D. Erb was also evacuated to Japan and died of pneumonia on 15 March.[3985]

26 FEBRUARY 1971

SOUTHER, WO John Martin 498th Med Co

---

tive, Case 1708-0-01 through 04 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #440, Folder #16 (Reid); Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #257, Folder #274.

[3978] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 263.

[3979] Statement of Howard Modjeski in Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 264.

[3980] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Div (Mech) AAR Opn LAM SON 719; Msg 201245H in 101st AbnDiv G-3 Daily Journal, 20 Feb 1971.

[3981] Vide entry for 20 February 1971.

[3982] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 266.

[3983] Ibid. There are no references to any KIA listed in the 1st of the 5th AAR for LAMSON 719.

[3984] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 268.

[3985] Ibid.

Died of burn wounds received 20 February 1971.[3986]

27 FEBRUARY 1971

BABCOCK, 1/Lt Ronald Lester B/7-1
MOONEY, SFC Fred B/7-1
+ 1 unidentified from A/8-4 artillery

From 0015 – 0020H, A/8-4 Artillery at XD754352 received an unknown type and number of incoming rounds and from 0310 – 0320H an unknown number of RPG rounds resulting in 1 US KIA and 7 US WIA.[3987]

A heavy "pink team" was conducting a visual recon for the 1st ARVN Division in Laos consisting of Lt Babcock (scout), WO-1 Hummel (low gunship), CPT Jimmie L. Davidson (high gunship), and CPT John Edwin Waters (chase ship). At 1520H, while flying over Fire Support Base DELTA (XD648301), an OH-6A Cayuse observation helicopter (#67-16256) was hit by ground fire. Lt Babcock transmitted words to the effect: "I'm taking fire," as he broke off to the north, and then, "Still taking fire. I'm hit. I can't control the ship. I think they hit my tail rotor. I can't control it. I'm going down. I can't control it. We are going to crash." The LOH-6 swerved as it took heavy fire from several locations, dropped through the trees, and descended to the ground landing on its skids at XD625208 into the side of a small hill. CPT Waters, in the UH-1 chase ship, cropped down to the crash site, attempting to rescue the crew, and the door gunner (Mooney) managed to silence one of the .51 cal positions, but wasn't over the crash site more than 30 seconds before it limped out due to heavy fire. Capt Waters transmitted that he observed that both members of the LOH had exited the aircraft and were laying face down near the aircraft. WO-1 Hummel and CPT Davidson continued to strike the enemy positions, aided by 2 USMC Cobras. A second UH-1 was scrambled from Lang Vei, piloted by Lt. Morgan who was able to descend to within 10 feet of the downed bird. Lt Morgan reported that the 2 crew were laying face up with their eyes open, staring up into space. The bodies were pale and positioned in an unnatural manner; it appeared they had been hit by ground fire after they had exited the aircraft.[3988]

Mooney was not required to fly but volunteered to show the young draftees an older man in his forties[3989] could be as tough as they were. Mooney's tour was to be over in May and his plans were to return to Killeen, Texas, and continue his life with his wife and four children. Ron Babcock graduated from college with a degree in forestry and was anxious to return home and resume his career.[3990]

28 FEBRUARY 1971

SIMPSON, 1/Lt Morris Alfred C/2-17

1/Lt Simpson of C Troop, 2nd Squadron, 17th Cav Regiment, took 10 bullets in his head and died while flying a OH-6A in Laos; the observer, who was not a pilot, flew the helicopter back to safety.[3991]

01 MARCH 1971

RAMSEY, MAJ Milton Hardin 21st SOS
TIJERINA, CPT Albert Jr. 21st SOS

Two USAF helicopter pilots of the 21st Special Operations Squadron, 7th Air Force, Maj Ramsey and Capt Tijerina, were killed in Laos due to hostile fire.[3992]

03 MARCH 1971

ANDERSON, 1/Lt Charles Richard A/158th AHB
PADILLA, CPL Gary Teofilio 174th AHC
SGAMBATI, SP4 Paul Anthony A/158th AHB

[An air assault into LZ LOLA began on 03 March as part of the ARVNs decision to renew their assault towards Tchepone with their armored and air assaulted forces, and then withdraw. As part of the plan, 3 new LZs were designated, named after movie stars: LZ LOLA named for Gina Lola Brigida, XD431372; LZ SOPHIE named for Sophia Loren, XD 498348; and LZ LIZ named for Elizabeth Taylor, XD 383378; all on a southern escarpment, and then one more, LZ HOPE (XD344479) near Tchepone. The ARVN 1st Div, already in Laos, would conduct the assault, replacing elements from the South Vietnamese Marine Corps Division.[3993]

[3986] Vide entry for 20 February 1971.
[3987] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech) AAR Opn LAM SON 719.
[3988] Joint Casualty Resolution Center, Narrative, Case 1711-01-02; Statements of CPT Jimmie OL. Davidson and CPT John Edwin Waters in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #223, Folder #126.
[3989] Nolan, Keith William, Into Laos, Novato, Ca.: Presidio, 1986, p. 151.
[3990] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 268; CO, 2/17 Cav letter to CG, 101st Abn Div (Ambl), 26 Feb 71, 2/17 INTSUM 57-71 in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 27 Feb 1971. [This document lists the crash site at XD626258].
[3991] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 269.
[3992] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 269.
[3993] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 270; Location of ARVN Fire Bases in 101st Abn Div, Final Report, Airmobile Operations in Support of Operation LAMSON 719, 8 February – 6 April 1971, Vol. II. There is also a "SOPHIA East" at XD 498348.

There was no air cover for the assault into LZ LOLA; the location had been Arc Lighted the previous day.[3994] Daniel Grigsby recalls his door gunners starting to fire as they approached LZ LOLA. "I was coming in fairly hot and flared, looking for a touchdown spot. The LZ was lousy under the very best of conditions and under fire it was terrible. I picked a spot, brought the aircraft to a hover and when the troops we4re off grabbed a bunch of collective to get the hell out of there. A lot of things happened in those few seconds that are forever burned in my mind. Out of my peripheral vision I saw muzzle flashes to the front, left and right. I noticed NVA running in a crouch to the left front of the aircraft. I also noticed my co-pilot's head bobbing and weaving as if he were dodging bullets. I glanced at the instruments – without really seeing anything and pulled pitch. I don't see any way the ARVN who got off my ship ever made it to the trees.."[3995] 7 of the first 10 helicopters in the assault were extensively damaged by NVA AA fire and 4 helicopters with 16 crewmembers were down in the LZ. The assault was interrupted as LTCOL Gerald Kirklighter, Commander of the 223rd, directed additional artillery, air strikes and armed helicopter fires around the perimeter.[3996]]

CHALK-4 (CPT Bishop) had asked for a smoke (grenade) and was heard over the radio to say, "I've got Mellow Yellow," whereupon his aircraft (#68-15639) was shot down by NVA who were obviously monitoring the radio net, and their gunner, CPL Gary T. Padilla, died on his gun. The Crew Chief, Rhodes, survived the landing of the burning bird and remained with the pilot, CPT Bishop. The Co-pilot, LT Carl Flemer, exited the aircraft and escaped and evaded to an ARVN FSB near the border.[3997]

During the afternoon, more Hueys assaulted LZ LOLA with more ARVN troops, one of which was from B/158, the Lancers piloted by WO Manuel Catzoela. "We watched the troops get off this one and a second or two after he started to leave the LZ we heard this big WHAM and he comes crashing to the ground. It might have been an RPG, I don't know. Anyway, the Huey lands in some soft dirt, not far from our trench, and the front of the Huey sinks in. Lt Charles R. Anderson didn't take this into consideration when he got out of the ship and started running toward the trench. He was hit in the head by the main rotor and died on the spot. Their CE [combat engineer], a tall good looking man, had taken an AK round in the head with no exit wound."[3998] (This was SP4 Paul Anthony Sgambati, who did not die on LOLA but at the Evac hospital in Quang Tri after being evacuated.)[3999]

05 March 1971

BURCH, WO Steven Ralph 174th AHC

Died of pneumonia from wounds sustained on 25 February 1971, q.v.

06 March 1971

BURGDORFER, SP5 Stephen Walter	C/1-1
BURTON, SP4 Horace Lee	C/1-1
HUMMEL, CWO John Floyd	B/7-1
MILLINER, CWO William Patrick	B/7-1

06 March was a bright and clear day and a planned assault on LZ HOPE (XD344479), consisting of 120 UH-1H helicopters, "was the largest airmobile assault (77 KM one-way) ever conducted by a combined force across an international border."[4000] The assault was launched earlier than planned because just prior to the scheduled departure of the first helicopters,[4001] at 1125H, Khe Sanh received 15-18 122mm rockets causing 2 KIA and 10 WIA from C Troop, 1st Sqd, 1st Cav Regt.[4002] 2 battalions of the 2nd Regiment, 1st ARVN Infantry Division were inserted on the final objective of LAMSON 719 in less than 90 minutes.[4003]

On 05 March, the 174th Co of 14th Avn reported: "UH1H at unknown altitude and speed received unknown type fire and unknown number hits. Aircraft crashed. Crew consisted of 4 crew & 3 riggers. Radio contact was made through survival radio. In attempted extraction, aircraft met with heavy ground fire and pulled out. Darkness prevented additional extraction attempts. Enemy was advancing on downed crew. They sought cover in old bunker & enemy was kept at bay with air support. The radio's power supply was weak and further reports were broken & feeble. Aircraft continued

---

[3994] Comments of Daniel Grigsby in Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 270.
[3995] Ibid.
[3996] Berry, MajGen Sidney, Lamson 719—The Assault Into Laos 8 February – 6 April 1971, unpublished MS [Copy from files of Keith William Nolan], p. 10.
[3997] Comments of William Early in Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 274.
[3998] Comments of Robert Morris in Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 275.
[3999] Comments of John Gale in Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 275.
[4000] Berry, MajGen, op. cit., p. 13.
[4001] Ibid.
[4002] 1/5 Mech TOC 061125H in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 06 March 1971.
[4003] Berry, MajGen, op. cit., p. 13.

support. Results: 7 MIA."[4004] The downed bird, the maintenance helicopter of the 174th Assault Helicopter Company, 14th Combat Aviation Battalion, was piloted by 1/Lts Ralph Elliot and Richard Gebauer. With NVA surrounding them, they found shelter in a bunker 150 meters from their downed helicopter to await anticipated immediate rescue. Although USAF SAR was initiated, dense NVA AA positions made it apparent that the only way the 7 crew could be rescued was to insert ARVN forces on the ground to fight their way to the downed crew (with a radio call sign of WITCH DOCTOR 5). The ARVN designated the elite Hac Bao (Black Panther) Company of the 1st ARVN Div who were placed OPCON to the 2/17 Cavalry Squadron. 16 of the 17 UH-1 helicopters of 2-17 were successful in inserting the Hac Bao troops under cover of Cav cobras reinforced by cobras from the 4/77th Aerial Field Artillery. 14 of the 17 choppers received battle damage. By 2200, a small team of Hac Bao scouts reached a position 500 meters from the 7 Americans in the bunker but could not proceed further due to the large number of NVA in the area, and they remained at that position for the night.[4005]

About 1730H, 4 AH1G Cobra gunships and 1 UH1H launched from Lang Vei to act as ARA and moved to a position of 7 downed Americans (at XD4741) and report to 2/17th.[4006] The 4 AH1G Cobras were: CW2 James L. Davis (with WO George P. Downing, Co-pilot), CWO Hummel (with CWO Milliner, Co-pilot) as 2nd team, and Mr. Beck and 1/Lt Dickerson (with WO1 James B. Sexton).

Soon after take-off, Mr. Beck suffered a D.C. generator failure and was forced to return to the staging area as Lang Vei. It was getting dark, which forced another AH1G (Dickerson) and the UH1H bird to return since they were not night flyable. Fuel was getting low, and 2/17 directed an air strike just north of the friendly position after which the 2 AH1Gs proceeded east along QL9 towards Khe Sanh. CW2 Davis instructed CWO Hummel to change frequencies. At approx. XD6237 a large cloud bank appeared, running N/S. Davis instructed Hummel to use the Khe Sanh GCA at the big horseshoe bend in the river at the "pink line" (i.e., the Lao/SVN border) and at 1930H, the 2 aircraft, Call signs CHOICE WRITER 25 and 28, broke station to return to Khe Sanh. Gun lead, CHOICE WRITER 28, told WRITER 25 to change to the Ham Nghi GCA. GCA was informed of 2 aircraft approaching 9 miles west. Davis entered the cloud bank on IFR and landed at Khe Sanh only to discover that Hummel hadn't followed him. The unit called ramp checks and contacted different airfields and towers to determine if Hummel had made it to a different field, but no one had any contact with Hummel. The search for his Cobra, AH1G (#67-15464) continued throughout Operation LAM SON 719 and until the redeployment of 2/17 Cav. The last radar contact was at XD6747 (approx. 10 KM north northwest of Lao Bao).[4007]

The 7 downed Americans were finally rescued about noon on 07 March, as the 1st ARVN Div was assaulting their final objective, Tchepone.[4008]

07 March 1971

ARD, CWO Randolph Jefferson	Bde HHC
BURNETT, COL Sheldon John	HHT, 1-1

On 7 March 1971, WO1 Randolph J. Ard (Pilot), LTC Sheldon J. Burnett (Commander, 1st Squadron, 1st Cavalry Division), CPT Philip G. Bodenhorn (Commander, Co. A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry), and 2/Lt Saturnio Castillo, Jr. (Artillery Forward Observer of Battery A, 5-4 Artillery) were flying in an OH-58A helicopter (#68-16814). The Third Platoon Leader, Lt William McConnell, had been wounded and the platoon was having communications problems while they were in contact at XD711412. As the helicopter approached the position of 3rd Platoon, CPT Bodenweiser radioed for the 3rd Platoon to signal with smoke when the helicopter came over their landing zone. Yellow smoke was sighted and the pilot nosed the helicopter down towards the smoke. At about 200-300 feet, a long burst of rapid light machine-gun fire struck the aircraft in the lower front causing it to crash, end over end, upside down at XD653388 (approximately 5 KM west of Lao Bao and the Vietnam/Lao border). They had mistakenly flown past Third Platoon and into Laos. CPT Bodenweiser was able to extract himself from the wreckage and then pulled WO1 Ard from the wreckage. Both of WO1 Ard's legs were broken, his hip was thought to be crushed, and he had several bullet wounds. LTC Burnett, who was injured and bleeding, was pinned in the wreckage and couldn't be extricated. CPT Bodenhorn and 2/Lt Castillo remained at the crash site for 20-25 minutes awaiting rescue while under fire. They continuously signaled for help with smoke and radio. As the enemy was about to assault their position, CPT Bodenweiser and 2/Lt Castillo began to take evasive action. When they left the aircraft, WO1 was alive and armed with a .45 caliber pistol and LTC Burnett was trapped in the wreckage, bleeding profusely from wounds in the head, neck and arms and speaking incoherently. CPT Boden-

---

[4004] Msg from G-2 Air Fwd, 060230 in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 06 March 1971.

[4005] Berry, MajGen, op. cit., pp. 13-17.

[4006] Statement of CW2 James L. Davis in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #324, Folder #49 (Milliner).

[4007] Statements of CW2 James L. Davis, WO1 George P. Downing, and Maj Timothy C. Scobie (CO, 2-17); Technical Report of U.S. Army Aircraft Accident, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #324, Folder #49 (Milliner) and Reel #326, Folder #72 (Hummel).

[4008] Berry, MajGen, op. cit., p. 19.

horn and 2/Lt Castillo linked-up with the 11th ARVN Airborne Battalion. The ARVN Company Commander, 1/Lt Pham Hungl, was able to battle his way to the crash site on 18 March and reported that the area was badly damaged from all the fighting and that he saw no remains in the area.[4009]

08 March 1971

GRANTHAM, SGT Robert Eugene	B/2-17
HALE, 1/Lt John Douglas	B/2-17

11 March 1971

BILBREY, CPT Edmond David	48th AHC
EASTON, SP5 David Everett	HHC, 5th Inf
LOCKHART, SP5 John Thomas	48th AHC

CPT Edmond David Bilbrey was killed in a UH-1C of the 48th Assault Helicopter Company during the withdrawal of the ARVN from Tchepone.[4010]

SP5 David E. Easton was killed in an aviation incident at XD677457 while serving with the 5th Mechanized Division.[4011]

12 March 1971

DANAY, PFC Jerry Lee	3/C/1-11

PFC Danay was KIA at XD750489 near FSB Alpine while serving with Charlie Company, 1/11.[4012]

15 March 1971

PECK, WO Steven Russell	D/3-5
SEXTON, SGT David Mason	B/5-4 Arty
THOMAS, CPL Clyde	B/5-4 Arty

At 1720H, an OH-6A received heavy small arms causing numerous hits and crash landed at XD675382. Reaction force was inserted and gunships and artillery were employed. Results of the action were 1 US KIA and 1 US WIA.[4013]

[Beginning on 15 March when 250 rounds of NVA artillery impacted on Khe Sanh until the last units departed Khe Sanh, numerous artillery barrages hampered efforts to maintain the runway. With over 1150 incoming artillery rounds impacting at Khe Sanh from 15 March – 1 April, special trenches were dug along the edges of the air facility to provide immediate shelter to the engineers working on the runway.[4014] Fortunately, the 27th Engineers did not suffer any KIA during LAMSOM-719.][4015]

16 March 1971

ALLEN, CPT Charles David, Jr.	B/4-77
MCCARTHY, CPT Loyd Van Jr.	101st Div

17 March 1971

ERB, WO Patrick Douglas	174th AHC
SCHARNBERG, MAJ Ronald Oliver	HHC, 3-187
SCHLUTTER, 1/Lt William David	Bde HHC
SUTTON, LTC Bryan James	HHC, 3-187

WO Erb died of pneumonia from burn wounds he sustained on 25 February 1971, q.v.

At about 1400H, an OH-58 (#68-16884) at XD779438 from the 1st Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech) was lost. The pilot was 1/Lt William D. Schlutter, and passengers were LTC Bryan J. Sutton (CO of 3/187 Inf) and Maj Ronald O. Scharnberg (Ops Officer of 3/187 Inf).[4016] Sutton and Scharnberg wanted to be with their troops on the ground. Scharnberg had been wounded and was in the hospital only a few days before he returned.[4017]

[4009] JCRC Biographic Report as of 20 March 1979 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #143, Folder #651; JTFFA Narrative, Case 1719-0-01 and 02 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #513, Folder #20; CG USARV LBN RVN msg 121800Z/Mar71 to C Cas Div DA in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #325, Folder #50; CG 1st Bde 5th Inf Div M Rear QT message 130300Z/Mar71 and Statement of 1/Lt Pham Hungl in Library of Congress MIA Reel #326, Folder #73; 1/5 Mech msg 072230 in 101st Abn Div G-3 G-3 Daily Journal, 07 Mar 1971; Nolan, Keith William, Into Laos, Novato, Ca.: Presidio, 1986, pp. 64, 246-247; Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 278.

[4010] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 279.

[4011] Ibid.

[4012] Short, Keith, letter to Khe Sanh Veterans, Inc.: Red Clay, Issue #51 (Fall, 2001), pp. 6-7.

[4013] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Opn LAM SON 719.

[4014] Col W. O. Bachus, 27th Engineer Battalion (Combat), recommendation for the Award of the Presidential Unit Citation, 16 December 1971.

[4015] Ibid., Incl. (7). Personnel strength of the engineer task force: 359 on 31 Jan, 272 on 20 Feb,l 300 on 1 Mar, 330 on 4 Mar, 231 on 10 Mar, 191 on 19 Mar, 271 on 25 Mar, 196 on 27 Mar, 87 on 31 Mar, and 46 on 1 Apr.

[4016] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 280.

[4017] Nolan, Keith William, Into Laos, Novato, Ca.: Presidio, 1986, p. 327.

18 MARCH 1971

AHRENS, SP5 Russell George	571st MedDet
BOFFMAN, 1/Lt Alan Brent	D/101st AvBn
BRANDT, CPT Keith Allan	D/101st AvBn
ELIZONDO, SGT David	E/1-11
+ 1 unidentified from 2/B-101

At 1445H, 2/B/1-1 at XD736364 received 82mm mortars resulting in 1 KIA and 6 WIA.[4018]

SP5 Russell G. Ahrens of the 571st Med Det was killed at XD578427.[4019]

Following 14 days of continuous combat, only 88 of the 420 men of 4th Battalion, 1st Regiment, 1st ARVN Infantry Division, remained. Unless help came soon, they faced surrender or death. All the officers of 4/1 Bn were KIA, and 61 of the surviving 88 enlisted men were wounded. NVA surrounded their defensive perimeter of less than 60 meters in diameter, and were using loudspeakers to induce the survivors to surrender. Ammunition was low, and only one PRC-25 radio served as the comm. link. The mission of 4/1 was to provide rear security for the extraction of the 1st Regiment, 4 KM to the east. The USAF provided 68 air strikes in their defense.

Capt Keith A. Brandt, D Co, 101st Aviation Battalion, 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile), radio call sign MUSIC 16, piloted an AH-1G Cobra and 3 times between 1300 and 1550 expended all his ammunition in support of 4/1, returning to Khe Sanh to rearm and refuel. He assured the Sergeant in command of the 4/1 Bn, "We're going to get you out of there." At about 1700, the 173rd Assault Helicopter Company ("Robinhoods") began arriving from the east to extract the besieged ARVN. Realizing that the trapped men had no smoke grenades to mark their position, Capt Brandt volunteered to lead the first UH-1H at tree top level into the bomb crater even though he had already expended all his ammunition. Without ammunition, Capt Brandt's AH-1G and the UH-1H approached the bomb crater meeting a heavy volume of enemy fire which hit MUSIC-16. Capt Brandt veered away and radioed toe UH-1H (call sign ROBIN HOOD), "I've lost my hydraulics and my mast is on fire. Follow me ROBIN HOOD 3 and I'll lead you back around to the friendlies—There it is, ROBIN HOOD! Twelve o'clock, 100 meters. I'm going to try to make the river." The next transmission was his last: "I've lost my engine and my transmission is breaking up. Good-bye. Send my love to my family. I'm dead." His rotor RPM slowed and he almost made it to the river. The Cobra exploded just before impact with trees, killing both Capt Brandt and 1/Lt Boffman.

The 88 survivors of 4/1 were rescued. The first UH-1H contained 22, some clinging to the helicopter skids. Many fell, and some were injured. Of the 88 in the crater, only 36 made it back to Khe Sanh. "The international press exploited the photographs of the 4/1 Bn. survivors landing back in Vietnam hanging from the helicopters. They didn't realize that the soldiers had been rescued from certain capture or death.. the direct result of the heroism and sacrifice of one man, 'MUSIC 16', Captain Keith A. Brandt."[4020]

Maj Klose of the "Robinhoods" saw the crash of MUSIC-16 and thought, "My God, that man was a true hero." Capt Brandt had laid down his life so others might live, and Klose thought he should have been awarded the Medal of Honor. Apparently, the only awards given (posthumously) to Capt Brandt were the Bronze Star Medal, 27 Air Medals, and the Purple Heart.[4021]

19 MARCH 1971

CRISTMAN, CW2 Frederick Lewis	48th AHC
GARCIA, SP5 Ricardo Martinez	281st AHC
SPARKS, WO1 Jon Michael	48th AHC

On 19 March 1971, CW2 Frederick L. Cristman (Pilot), SP5 Ricardo M. Garcia (Crew Chief), WO1 Jon M. Sparks (Co-Pilot), and SP4 Paul A. Lagenour (Door Gunner), were crewmen of a UH-1C helicopter gunship (#65-9489) as the trail ship in a flight of 2 UH-1Cs on an armed escort mission involving the extraction of a battalion four miles north Fire Support Base ALPHA (XD597378). Earlier in the day, the extraction attempt was cancelled due to heavy NVA AA fire and at 1335, the mission resumed with a flight of 2 UH-1C gunships launched from Khe Sanh. The lead CH-1C piloted by CW2 Stephen T. Knowles (Co-pilot, CPT James E. Burke, and gunner SP4 Dan A. Enin) took numerous hits, some of which severed its armament controls. During a second pass over the PZ [Pickup Zone], CW2 Cristman's aircraft was hit by enemy ground fire. CW2 Cristman radioed the flight leader that his transmission oil pressure caution light was on and he was making an emergency landing on the PZ. Mortars began hitting around the helicopter immediately upon touchdown, and SP5 Garcia pushed SP4 Lagenour out the right side of the ship. Lagenour heard someone yell, "Get out of the aircraft." He dashed toward a group of ARVN soldiersw who yelled to him to come over to cover and assumed the

---

[4018] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Opn LAM SON 719.

[4019] Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 281.

[4020] Berry, MajGen Sidney, Lamson 719—The Assault into Laos 8 February – 6 April 1971, unpublished MS [Copy from files of Keith William Nolan], n.d., pp. 25-27; Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 281.

[4021] Nolan, Keith William, Into Laos, Novato, Ca.: Presidio, 1986, pp. 279, 365.

remainder of the crew followed him. When he reached safety, all he could see was violet and white smoke emerging from the aircraft. He started to return to the ship, but was held back by the ARVN soldiers.[4022] The landing was at XD585428,[4023]

SP4 Lagenour "..had shrapnel wounds in his left arm. The NVA made an attempt to overrun the pickup zone. He used an infantry radio to direct air strikes and armed helicopter fires against the attackers. Lagenour joined up with 4 soldiers from the 2nd Airborne Battalion as they were forced to withdraw to the east. For 12 days he lived on rice and leaves dodging NVA patrols, traveling at night, sleeping by day. He was almost captured twice, and had to avoid a U. S. armed helicopter strike against a NVA position. On the 12th day, after traversing 30 kilometers Lagenour was found by a U. S. armored patrol just west of Khe Sanh. He was medically evacuated to the united States."[4024]

20 MARCH 1971

BARKER, MAJ Jack Lamar	B/101st AvBn
CHUBB, PFC John Jacobsen	B/101st AvBn
DILLENDER, SGT William Edward	B/101st AvBn
DUGAN, CPT John Francis	B/101st AvBn
KARAU, SGT Ronald Dean	E/3-187

The mission involved an emergency extraction of a battalion size ARVN force that had been in heavy contact with surrounding NVA for three days and in danger of being overrun near FSB Brown (XD500350). Helicopters from Co B and Co C of the 101st Aviation Battalion encountered murderous antiaircraft fire by NVA forces which surrounded the 3 PZs [pickup zones], despite obscuring white phosphorus which had been laid to conceal their approach. SP4 Dillender and PFC Chubb fired a high volume of accurate machinegun fire that enabled their bird to land twice and embark ARVN soldiers as well as crew from downed American choppers. After return to Khe Sanh, they volunteered to return to Laos to evacuate more ARVN soldiers in an aircraft (#66-16185) piloted by Maj Barker ("Color 6") and Capt Dugan ("Kingsman 16"). Maj Barker was the Company Commander. Now in the lead helicopter, a RPG struck their aircraft on their short, final approach. The helicopter began to disintegrate and fell to the earth where it exploded in a ball of flame, killing all aboard.[4025] The helicopter crashed at XD515352.[4026]

Dillender was only 19 and Chubb a few months older; both had been in Vietnam 28 days. Barker had been flying less than 6 months and Dugan, a 23 year-old, did not yet command his own chopper.[4027]

Barker, the 7th child born to blue-collar Baptist parents in Georgia, grew up as a quiet boy who liked to spend much time outdoors fishing and exploring. With a natural talent for singing, he joined the church choir. He was also academically gifted in high school and later attended college with the goal of being a veterinarian. He spent 6 months in Switzerland with the 4-H Club's International Foreign Youth Exchange, and went on active duty 4 Jan 1962. He then completed Jump School the following year, and arrived in Vietnam, reporting to the 3rd Radio Research Unit in Saigon. While with the ARRU, he flew in the DeHavilland Beavers and earned 24 Air Medals and a Bronze Star Medal. He returned to Vietnam for a second tour, arriving at Camp Eagle 20 Oct 1970 as Executive Officer of an assault helicopter company of the 101st Aviation Battalion, a quiet, religious man.[4028]

Dugan, like Barker, was in his second Vietnam tour, the first as a forward observer with an artillery unit. He was born 10 November 1947 and he and his 2 brothers shared a bedroom in a small apartment above a stationery store, Chinese laundry, and barbershop. Upon return from a vacation, the landlord had taken one of the two bedrooms for use as a dance studio, and his parents slept on a pull-out couch. Dugan married his 15 year-old sweetheart, but her parents snatched her and were working on an annulment. He joined the Army and left for Vietnam in April, 1968, for his first tour. Upon return home, he attended flight school and then eagerly sought to return to Vietnam.[4029]

The 19 year-old Dillender's father served as a firefighter and crash-rescue crewman for the Air Force until he retired in 1960 and settled in Tennessee. His early life is characterized as wild, impulsive, and active. He and a buddy enlisted in the Army and after basic training and airborne school, had orders to Vietnam.[4030]

Chubb grew up in Los Angeles where he played football, baseball, swam at the YMCA, learned judo, and ran

---

[4022] Statement of Circumstances (as of 15 May 1975) in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #143, Folder #651 (Case #02714); Statements of CPT James E. Burke, CPT James E. Burke, SP4 Dan A. Enin, and SP4 Paul A. Lagenour in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #328, Folder #98.

[4023] JCRC, Narrative, Case 1730-0-01 through 03, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #328, Folder #98. The location is approximately 5 miles northwest of Ban Houei Sane (XD6337).

[4024] Berry, MajGen Sidney, op. cit., pp. 28-29.

[4025] Statement of Jon F. Evans in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #30 (Dillender).

[4026] Biographic/Site Rpt as of 20 March 1979, in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #325, Folder #51 (Chubb).

[4027] Swift, Earl, Where They Lay, Searching for America's Lost Soldiers, Boston, New York: Houghton Mifflin Co., 2003, p. 17.

[4028] Ibid., pp. 68-88.

[4029] Ibid., pp. 92-95.

[4030] Ibid., pp. 99-101.

track. He was dyslexic, and later worked as a steelworker in L.A. He reported for basic training in June, 1970, and reported to his unit in Vietnam on 6 March 1971.[4031]

Ronald Dean Karau has just passed his 21st birthday one day earlier (born 19 March 1950). While in high school, he was active in Future Farmers of America and 4-H, working with crops and animals. He was called into service on 4 September 1969, attended NCO school at Ft. Benning, Ga., and arrived in Vietnam 14 September 1970. Ronald Karau is described as a deeply religious man.[4032]

21 MARCH 1971

LANCASTER, WO David Clyde	C/7-17
MANTHEI, WO James Walter	C/7-17

Two AH-1G Cobra helicopters from C/7-17 Cav had been scrambled to support an ambushed ARVN armored unit. As David Ferrell arrived on the scene, he saw a RPG or B40 hit a APC "which blew just like in the movies," and another hit a tank, blowing off its turret. There were at least 3 .50 cal. positions, and the Cobras attended to them. Ferrell, who had expended all his ammo, later wrote: "I told Dave [Lancaster] I was out of ammo and wanted to leave. Dave said he wanted to make one more pass. I told him I could not cover his break; but he said he was going in anyway. He made his run and emptied the ship. We watched in horror as he took a full broadside of .50 cal. He called that they had been hit, lost the tail rotor and that Jim [Manthei] was wounded. He continued south looking for any place along the highway to land the Cobra. They didn't get too far when their airspeed went to nothing and they went twirling into the ground. We later talked to the medevac team that retrieved their bodies. They said they believed both men died of broken necks caused by their chicken plates and this twirling fall. I remember being really upset about loosing Dave. We had become good friends. That very morning he had shown me a picture of his wife and the card she had sent him—today was their anniversary!"[4033]

22 MARCH 1971

ABERNETHY, PFC Reginald Joe	C/3-187
CLEVE, WO Reginald David	176th AHC
DRUZINSKI, CPL Karl Walter	HHT/2-17
FELLS, SP4 William Henry	C/3-187
GLENN, PFC William Stuart	C/3-187
HALL, SP4 Walter Ray	176th AHC
KNUTSEN, SP4 Donald Paul	176th AHC
MCLEMORE, PFC John Wilson Jr.	C/3-187
MORIARTY, CPT Peter Gibney	614th TFS
STAHL, CPL Roger William	C/3-187
TRAVER, WO John Grove III	176th AHC

Khe Sanh had been taking artillery fire for over a week, and on 22 March, a UH-1H (#69-15403) was returning after having unsuccessfully searched for NVA artillery tubes. As they landed, a round exploded some 200 yards ahead of them. LTC Archie Rider (who had just taken over the squadron) and Steve Powers, along with the Crew Chief, were able to run from the chopper just seconds before another round made a direct hit on it. The Crew Chief was wounded in his leg and couldn't move, so Steve Powers and LTC Rider dragged him to the nearest bunker. The gunner, Karl Druzinsky, didn't make it out of the bird. All happened within seconds, and when they looked back at the helicopter, it was already completely consumed in fire. All the ammo and grenades aboard the chopper were cooking off. Powers remembers that Druzinsky "..was an interesting guy. In our early days at Khe Sanh we used shape charges to blow our trenches and holes for bunkers and he found an old Marine .50 cal. He cleaned it up and worked and worked on it until it fired again."[4034]

WO Reginald David Cleve (Aircraft Commander), WO1 John G. Traver (Pilot), SP4 Donald F. Knutsen (Crew Chief), and SP4 Walter R. Hall (Door Gunner) were the crew of a UH1H (#68-15759) in a flight of 5 helicopters on an emergency resupply mission when the helicopter burst into flames and crashed in the vicinity of XD666365, in Laos. The aircraft impacted in one piece, exploded, and continued to burn. No one was observed to exit the aircraft and rescue attempts were not made due to heavy concentration of enemy troops and anti-aircraft fire in the area.[4035]

E4 Michael Anthony Mencarelli officially stated: "I saw it because it was on my side and we were in a left hand orbit. One minute the ship was there and then there was nothing. We were at 5000 feet and the cloud of black smoke just hung there in the air.. I lost track of everything as it went behind a cloud. There was no way they could have survived the explosion. Really a bummer. We took fire before they were hit and it was a black puff of smoke under our tail boom on the right

---

[4031] Ibid., pp. 122-123.

[4032] "Ronald Dean Karau," in Ward, Don, The Faces Behind the Names, Minnesota: The Memorial Press, 1996, pp. 180-181.

[4033] Statement of David Ferrell in Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 283.

[4034] Comments of Steve Powers in Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (Oct, 1994), p. 283.

[4035] JCRC, Circumstances of Loss (as of 4 March 1976), in Library of Congress microfilm Reel #323, Folder #32 (Hall), Reel #330, Folder #123 (Traver), and Reel #326, Folder #74 (Knutson).

side. They were all very close to me and the whole ordeal was worthless. It really hurt deep down."[4036]

CAPT Moriarty (call sign BLADE 82) departed Phan Rang Air Base in a F100D as part of a flight of 2 aircraft at 1428 on a scheduled mission, and was making his first pass on 3 Russian T-54 tanks when he encountered ground fire. On his final approach, his aircraft impacted straight into the ground at XD634395 and burst into flames. There was no sighting of a parachute and no beeper signals were heard.[4037]

Capt Thomas A. Rodgers, commanding Co "C" of 3/187, led his company up the valley northwest of Khe Sanh, seeking NVA positions that had been firing on Khe Sanh since the 15th of March. The weather, which had been rain all day, deteriorated by night with heavy rains and winds so loud it was difficult to detect any noises, and a fog that shrouded visibility. As the soldiers were shivering under their ponchos and in their muddy holes a burst of fire awakened everyone about 2100 as the NVA assaulted the M-60 machinegun position. CPL Roger Stahl and another soldier moved towards the shooting when the NVA threw satchel charges and grenades on him. Stahl and his comrade had been hit in the chest with shrapnel; both instantly died. The NVA probe continued throughout the night and managed to capture the M-60 machinegun from the perimeter. The 3/187 CP placed a ring of steel in the form of mortar fire around their position during the night, and in the morning, the 3/187 CP on Khe Sanh base itself came under mortar and artillery fire.[4038]

23 March 1971

KEETLE, CPL Jeffrey Charles	D/2-17
QUINTANILLA, SGT Jeffrey Iglesias	D/2-17
ROBINSON, CPL Lance Allen	D/2-17
SCHELL, SP4 William Leroy	C/1-11

"SP4 William L. Schell, 194-40-3488 gunshot wound in forehead from .45 cal pistol. Pending investigation by CID 1/5 Mech. Pronounced dead on arrival at 187th Surg."[4039]

By this time, there were only 650 troops defending Khe Sanh base and positions along the perimeter were thin.[4040] Of these, only about 350 were ground combat troops.[4041] "What frightened the tough troops defending Khe Sanh most was not the enemy firepower in the area. Instead it was their own lack of men, ammunition, and operable weapons."[4042] Reminiscent of the early days of the 1968 siege battle at Khe Sanh, when the soldiers arrived their job was "to dig, to start digging our holes; we were going to live underground. So we'd dig and dig and dig all day and fill sandbags, and the faster you could dig your hole and get it covered, the sooner you could be out of harm."[4043] By 23 March, their positions had been well dug-in.

The NVA made their preliminary reconnaissance of Khe Sanh. About the 11th of 12th of March, various units had reported "suspicious looking" individuals lurking in and around the airfield and outlying positions. Those checked out appeared to be civilians seeking to salvage food from the garbage and trash. One, wearing khaki clothing and carrying a clipboard and binoculars, disappeared before he could be apprehended and 2 in ARVN uniforms ran after being challenged near the 101st Div Forward Command Post. Beginning on the 15th, artillery rounds pounded Khe Sanh, mainly at dawn and dusk, and on the 19th of March, increased to 40-60 rounds every few hours during the day and into the night.[4044] "Every day over a hundred 82mm and 122mm rockets and 152mm artillery shells pounded the parallel airstrips at Khe Sanh, and when the blazing NVA guns were slightly off target the shells would rain down on American bivouacs."[4045] By the evening of 22 March, the troops of 2/17 Cav and 4/77th Artillery were receiving continuous bombardments. There had been some direct hits on bunkers causing injury. Fog rolled in about midnight.[4046]

At 0237 of 23 March, Khe Sanh base received 17 rounds of unknown type ordnance directed against the two units (2/17 and 4/77 Arty) accompanied by mortars, leading the soldiers of 2/17 Cavalry to suspect a ground attack was imminent. Supporting artillery with illumination was alerted.[4047] At 0257, 2-17 Cav reported sappers were in and through the wire perimeter, penetrating the eastern part of 2-17's sector. Incoming artillery ceased as mortar and RPG fire continued from a ridgeline north of the perimeter. A total of 120-150 82mm mortars were received during the attack.[4048] In an apparent attempt to broaden the breach between 2/17 and 4/77 Arty, the small sapper force which had penetrated the wires turned and

---

[4036] Statement of E-4 Michael Anthony Mencarelli in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #326, Folder #74.
[4037] JCRC, Narrative, Case 1732-0-01 and 35CMBTSPTGP Phan Rang AB RVN 230645Z/May71 to CSAF in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #31.
[4038] Nolan, op. cit., p. 333.
[4039] 1/11 msg 230910H in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 23 March 1971.
[4040] Conversation with Stuart Howe, 24 September 1996.
[4041] Peterson, John, "Khe Sanh II, The Overseas Weekly (Pacific Edition), Sat., 24 Apr 1971, p. 11.
[4042] Ibid.
[4043] Conversation with Richard Daeda, 07 April 2002.
[4044] Berry, op. cit., p. 29.
[4045] Peterson, op. cit..
[4046] Berry, op. cit., p. 30.
[4047] Summary in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 23 March 1971; Berry, op. cit., p. 30.
[4048] CG 101st Abn Div (Ambl) QTR RVN msg in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 23 March 1971, Para (48), p. 6 of 16.

savagely struck into the right flank of D Troop. "Moving into the trench lines which connected platoon positions, the sappers started throwing satchel charges and grenades into bunkers and fighting positions."[4049]

One of the positions that received the satchel charges was manned by SP4 Michael J. Fitzmaurice of 3rd Platoon, Troop D, 2nd Squadron, 17th Cavalry, 101st Airborne Division. Three other Army cavalrymen occupied the same bunker. Fitzmaurice picked up 2 of the 3 satchel charges that were thrown into his bunker and tossed them outside. Realizing that the third one might detonate any second, Fitzmaurice threw his flak jacket on top of it and then dove on top of that, to shield his comrades from the blast. He received severe wounds to his upper body and the loss of sight in one eye as metal splinters shot into him. Although seriously wounded, he grabbed his rifle and began to fire at NVA in the trenches. When his rifle became useless from an enemy grenade, he seized a machete and charged through the trench, killing any NVA he encountered—they were in the process of blowing up the American bunkers. He continued wielding his machete with devastating effect until the last of the NVA were wiped out at about 0335, at which time he was evacuated as a result of a direct order. His injuries were so severe that he was evacuated to the United States.[4050] The shy and quiet Fitzmaurice[4051] was later to receive the Medal of Honor.

The NVA sappers also managed to hit 2 ammo dumps causing the area to be illumined like the 4th of July. The attack generated a lot of tension as the soldiers imagined that the NVA were on a roll, causing a devastating rout of the ARVNs who had penetrated into Laos and would now maintain the momentum and roll over Khe Sanh as well. For Richard Daeda, who would turn 19 on 26 March, the thought raced through his mind: "Maybe the NVA wanted to show how good they could kick ass. So we, as 18 and 19 year-olds were sitting in our bunkers, nervous as all hell. We were on full, 100% alert. It was eerie because some of the places where Americans died—like Lance Robinson, who lived a couple of blocks from where I live—I had to go into his bunker the next night. I got taken out of mine because I had to fill in some voids down the line. I had this eerie feeling—my buddy from Brookfield, Wisconsin, died there."[4052]

One platoon sergeant, Terry Stallard, remarked that his platoon had 33 men before the attack, and now had 18, and the platoon medic, PVT Edward White, was quoted, "We are too damned scared to sleep." In addition to 3 KIA, the platoon suffered 15 WIA after the 4-hour fight.[4053]

A NVA POW was captured by the 4/77 ARA,[4054] PVT Nguyen Van Anh of 1/2/2/D15 Engineers (Sapper) who disclosed the mission of the 40-man unit was to destroy Khe Sanh airfield and helicopters, re-arm point, and American tanks.[4055]

Results of the attack: 3 US KIA, 13 US WIA.

24 MARCH 1971

AYERS, SGT Douglas Edward	C/4-3
BECKWITH, SGT Harry Medford III	D/3-5
COKER, CPT David Langston Jr.	D/3-5
NEAL, SP4 William Edward	D/3-5
PICHON, PFC Herman Edward	C/4-3
RAMOS, CPL Bernardo Kealoha	C/4-3
WRIGHT, SP4 Michael Dale	C/4-3

On 24 March 1971, CW2 James P. Ross (Pilot), SGT Harry M. Beckwith, III (Left Front Observer), and SP4 William E. Neal (Right Rear Observer), crewmembers of 3rd Squadron, 5th Cavalry, took off at 0730H in an OH-58A helicopter (#69-16136) on a VR mission 15 miles NW of Khe Sanh from their squadron forward CP at Ham Nghi. Shortly thereafter, the aircraft was hit by enemy automatic fire and crashed into an enemy-surrounded area at XD668543. Within minutes the aircraft exploded and burned.[4056]

CW2 Ross recalled: "My aircraft became the target of heavy automatic weapons fire, lost its engine and crashed. When the aircraft first came under fire, numerous rounds came through the cockpit, immediately to my front left as we were going down through the trees. I suffered a blow to the head rendering me unconscious. I next remember being on the ground inside the crashed aircraft. I looked to my left for my observer, where Sgt Harry Beckwith sits, and it appeared that Sgt. Beckwith had suffered several wounds. His chest and arms were covered with blood and it didn't appear to be any movement. As I reached out for him, I must have blacked out. My next remembrance was outside of the aircraft. The aircraft burned, the ordnance being carried, approx. 25 fragmentation grenades, 10 concussion grenades, 15 white phosphorus grenades, and 800 rounds of 7.62 ammuni-

---

[4049] Berry, op. cit., p. 31.

[4050] Fitzmaurice, Michael John, Medal of Honor Citation; Conversation with Richard Daeda, 07 April 2002; Berry, op. cit., pp. 31-32.

[4051] Nolan, op. cit., p. 335.

[4052] Conversation with Richard Daeda, 07 April 2002.

[4053] Emerson, Gloria, "G.I. Mood at Battered Khesanh: 'We Don't Want to Be Relieved—We Want to Get Out'", New York Times, Friday, 26 March 1971, p. 11.

[4054] Base Defense msg 230230H in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 23 March 1971.

[4055] Initial Interrogation Report, 23 March 1971, in 101st Abn Div G-3 Daily Journal, 23 March 1971. Interrogators: Cpt Nguyen Quang Hue and Capt John H. Black, S-2, 2/17 Cav.

[4056] Board of Inquiry, SGT Harry M. Beckwith, III, 17 April 1971 and Statement of Maj Rodney W. Wolfe in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #326, Folder #75 (Beckwith).

tion, began to explode. I do not believe that Sgt Beckwith or his body escaped the fire and explosion that destroyed the aircraft."[4057]

A UH1E helicopter was immediately dispatched to the crash site and a team of aero-rifle platoon members was inserted to secure the area and rescue any survivors. Once on the ground, the infantry unit encountered enemy fire but was able to secure the aircraft. They located the Aircraft Commander, CW2 Ross, near the aircraft, who indicated to Sgt Zamora, section leader of the aero-rifle platoon (ARPS), that both crewmembers were dead and that nothing could be done to help them. Due to enemy in the area and extent of the aircraft fire, a total search of the area was not made. The remains of the 2 crewmen were placed in the extraction helicopter by the infantry. After takeoff, another helicopter came into the LZ about 100 meters behind the body-carrying helicopter. Before he could land he saw something fall out of the departing helicopter which later turned out to be Sgt Beckwith's body wrapped in a poncho liner. The chase helicopter swept in an attempt to fix the location where the body fell, but because of distance and the fact that the poncho liner color blended with the terrain and foliage, no definite fix could be ascertained. On 1 April 1971 another visual search was made over the same area, with negative result. It was concluded that because of wind conditions, the lightness of the poncho liner, and the fact that it just literally became part of the terrain, further attempts would be futile.[4058]

At 0815H, a heavy scout team from C Troop, 2nd of the 17th Cav, contacted a large enemy force in the vicinity of XD6748. An OH-58A (D/8-5), after receiving small arms fire and possible .51 cal fire, crashed at XD668543 (8 ½ KM W of FSB Alpine), causing 2 KIA and 1 WIA. Aero-rifle platoons (ARP) were inserted to secure the aircraft. At 0920H, a UH1H attempting to land elements of the aerial rifle platoon in the vicinity received hits and crashed. 4 personnel in the UH1H were extracted. At the time of extraction a second OH58A was shot down. Eventually all personnel were evacuated to safety.[4059]

While this was happening, a platoon from the 4th of the 3rd encountered extremely heavy contact and it was apparent that reinforcements were necessary to prevent annihilation. Maj Tommy C. Stiner, Brigade Aviation Officer (who had been involved in the opening of the 1968 siege battle at Khe Sanh village on 21 January 1968) directed reinforcements into the area.[4060]

[4057] Statement of CW2 James F. Ross, 24 June 1971, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #326, Folder #75 (Beckwith).

[4058] JCRC Biographic Report in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #326, Folder #75 (Beckwith).

[4059] 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech) AAR Opn LAMSON 719.

[4060] Statement of Maj Tommy C. Stiner in Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), pp. 284-285.

25 MARCH 1971

CALHOUN, SGT Edwin Gerald	B/3-5
GEIGER, SP4 Gary George	B/3-5
MCDONELL, SSG R D	B/1-1
PUENTES, SSG Manuel Rameriz	B/1-1
ROSSANO, CPL Richard Joseph	B/1-1
SIMONSON, SP4 Larry Arnold	173rd AHC
THOMPSON, CPL Randall Alan	B/1-1
+ 1 unidentified from B/1-82 Arty

1/Lt Jimmie C. Johnson joined his unit on 24 March, and the very next day found himself leading a 12-man patrol from B Troop 1st Platoon (OPCON to B Troop, 3-5) to check out enemy activity in an area near Khe Sanh. Except for his radioman, he didn't know any of the others in his patrol. At 1141, 1/B/1-1 at XD813485 (3.36 miles from Khe Sanh), the unit came in contact with an estimated platoon of sappers as an incoming grenade landed between Lt Johnson and SSGT Puentes. Puentes picked it up to throw it out of the way, but it exploded in his face, killing him but saving several men from injury. Lt Johnson began moving the patrol south to attempt link-up with the rest of the platoon, which was their reaction force. Bringing up the rear while assisting some of the wounded, the Lt sent the Point Man, SP4 John Schmidt, and PFC Rex D. Norman to set up a M-60 machinegun on the other side of a creek bed. As Schmidt crossed the creek bed he heard voices and returned to the Lt to inform him. As the Lt told everyone to spread out, a NVA opened up with an AK-47 and PFC Norman leaped behind a rock. SSGT McDonell was standing in the creek and was shot in the back. Then a grenade exploded between Lt Johnson and SP4 Rossano. The Lt jumped away just as it detonated, but Rossano was covered with blood. PFC Norman was next to the Lt and Rossano when the grenade exploded, and Rossano said he couldn't continue. The Lt tried to push him up the hill and told Norman and the others to continue up the hill. The remnants of the patrol made it up a very steep hill and reached their tracked vehicles as Lt Johnson remained behind to care for the wounded. He found himself cut off from the others as air strikes blasted around him. Immediate results of the contact were 2 US MIA, 1 US KIA, and 2 US WIA. A second patrol (from 3-5) was dispatched to rescue survivors and retrieve the dead. It, too, was ambushed resulting in the death of Sgt Calhoun and a medic. The patrol was able to locate one body and rescue Lt Johnson. Total casualties reported were: 5 US WIA, 6 US KIA, and 36 NVA KIA.[4061]

[4061] Statements of SP4 John Schmidt, 1/Lt Jimmie C. Johnson, and 1/Lt James F. Bartlett in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #326, Folder #76; 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Opn LAM SON 719.

SP4 Larry A. Simonson was KIA in Laos while serving as a crew member of 173rd AHC,. 223rd Avn Bn, 12th CAG, 1st Aviation Brigade.[4062]

B/1-82 Arty at XD857385 received 122mm rounds at 1005 and 1230 resulting in 1 UA KIA and 5 US WIA.[4063]

29 March 1971

COX, SGT William Gayle	C/3-5
PEDERSON, SP4 Roger Allen	HHT/3-5

1/C/3-5 while moving west in a M113 on Red Devil Road at XD910495 at 1230H received RPG rounds. The unit then received small arms fire from an estimated 8 NVA approximately 25-30 meters from their position resulting in 2 US KIA and 8 US WIA.[4064]

03 April 1971

TRUJILLO, SGT Felix Marcial	HHC/1-77

At 2310H, a team from 1-77 at XD820418 (2 KM north of Khe Sanh) received AK-47 fire and grenades from an estimated 6 NVA resulting in 1 US KIA, 1 US WIA, and 2 NVA KIA. A subsequent search of the area disclosed heavy blood trails and drag marks throughout the area.[4065]

CASUALTY SUMMARY:

XXIV CORPS units:	KIA	WIA	MIA	NVA KIA
by 101st Airborne Division:
	68	261	17	1949
1st Bde, 5th Inf Division:
	55	431	3	433
11th Bde, 23rd Inf Division
	47	256	7	134
XXIV Corps Artillery:
	9	76	0	1679
Other support forces:
	36	125	11	600
Vietnamese I Corps Units:
1st Infantry Division:
	537	1607	537	6622
1st Airborne Division:
	455	1933	0	2424
1st Marine Division:
	355	770	63	1188
1st Armored Brigade:
	54	364	0	418
1st Ranger Group:
	93	435	27	960
I Corps Troops:
	55	314	24	3214
TOTALS:
	1764	6632	689	19360[4066]

[12 June 1971: The 1st Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) was notified it would redeploy from the Republic of Vietnam no later than 31 August 1971.][4067]

[With ground troops removed, operations in the Khe Sanh area next involved USAF activity. Interdiction of overland flow of supplies from North Vietnam to forces operating in South Vietnam was a primary mission for the 7th AF. The North Vietnamese were building a new road, extending Route 103 in North Vietnam, through the DMZ, and following a route approximately 5 miles east of the Lao/SVN border, continued south towards Route 608 (the base access road from Route 9 to KSCB and then northwest, then west into Laos), towards the area of Lang Ho (XD774567) and Nguon Rao (XD770540), generally following the Khe Ta Bong River.[4068] The USAF designated this operation as COMMANDO HUNT VI, and it was executed 15 May – 31 October 1971.[4069] "Completion of such a road structure would significantly reduce the transit time of supplies from NVN to his forces in the RVN and reduce the exposure to Allied interdiction efforts."[4070] By the end of July, 1971, the road was under active construction from the DMZ to Route 608. Beginning in August, 1971, the USAF seeded 300 x 800 meter segments with anti-personnel and anti-vehicular munitions.[4071]]

17 May 1971

DEHNKE, SSG Dale Willard	TF1AE
ENTRICAN, CPT Danny Day	RT ALASKA
HOLLINGSWORTH, SP5 Gary Lynn	TrngSuppHQ
PEARCE, WO Dale Allen	C/158th AHB
SOYLAND, CWO David Pecor	C/158th AHB

4062 Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Assn, 1994 Membership Directory, Vol. 11 (October, 1994), p. 285, indicates a lack of details concerning his loss.
4063 1st Inf Bde, 5th Inf Div (Mech), AAR Opn LAM SON 719.
4064 Ibid.
4065 Ibid.
4066 Hq, XXIV Corps, "An Assessment of the Performance of South Vietnamese Forces During Operation LAMSON 719 (30 January – 6 April 1971), Inclosure 7, Cumulative Results.
4067 1st Brigade, 5th Infantry Division (M), AAR, Operation KEYSTONE ORIOLE (BRAVO), Annex K, Historical Synopsis, p. 1.
4068 Army Map Service, Sheet 6342 IV, Series L7014, 1965.
4069 Layton, CAPT Bruce P., Commando Hunt VI, HQ, PACAF, Directorate of Operations Analysis, CHECO/CORONA HARVEST Division, 7 July 1972, pp. 1, 13.
4070 Ibid., p. 13.
4071 Ibid., p. 14.

The Khe Sanh area—indeed the entire western area of Quang Tri Province—while not occupied by friendly forces was nevertheless patrolled by recon teams. Recon Team ALASKA (of Task Force ONE Advisory Element, a successor unit of CCN, SOG) inserted 15 May 1971 and was operating within 2 KM of the Vietnam/Lao border, some 14 KM SW of KSCB. The area contained an important and well-defended Base Area of the NVA Military Region Tri-Thien-Hue with a large concentration of NVA soldiers, including Binh Tram 41, the 66th Regiment, and other elements of the 304th Division. The day after their insertion, RT ALASKA located 3 trails and remained overnight on the southern slope of Nui Giang Gio Mountain (YD042276).[4072]

On 17 May, RT ALASKA moved out of the bush and made contact at YD036214[4073] during which one American and one Vietnamese member of the team were KIA. The team evaded and huddled close together for the night. With darkness nearing and mindful of the danger, WO1 Soyland and his crew[4074] (call sign PHOENIX 22) heroically volunteered to attempt a rescue of RT ALASKA and launched his UH-1H from Camp Evans at 1630H, 17 May.[4075] As Soyland began his approach to the team, his aircraft began banking right and was hit by enemy fire causing the aircraft to bank and start to invert. A RPG [rocket propelled grenade] hit and severed the tail boom. The violence of the explosion threw SP4 Garry E. Allcorn, Door Gunner, out of the aircraft just before it crashed near the top of a very steep slope[4076] about 100-300 meters from RT ALASKA. After the impact, the UH-1H (#65-17607) continued to slide to the bottom of the slope, coming to rest at YD048268, about 300-500 meters south of RT ALASKA.[4077]

The Co-pilot, WO Dale Allen Pearce, was killed in the crash. WO1 Soyland survived the crash with minor, if any, injuries. Only one other crew member remained in the UH-1H, SP5 Harold E. Parker, Crew Chief, who was severely wounded and unconscious. Apparently believing Parker to be dead, WO1 Soyland took the 2 survival packs with emergency radios from the helicopter and moved away from the wreckage, possibly toward RT ALASKA's position. It is believed that NVA troops captured Soyland within moments before he could use his emergency radios to contact rescue forces.[4078]

On the morning of 18 May, the team, out of ammunition, moved into bushes at YD036214. A number of NVA soldiers advanced up the trail and shouted, "You are surrounded, get up, don't follow American." About 10 seconds later, one NVA soldier peered into their hiding place and shouted in Vietnamese, "Who are you?" to Truong To Ha, one of the Vietnamese members of the patrol, and then, in Vietnamese, "First Squad, go through area, capture alive." 1/Lt Entrican was wounded in the back and ordered the remainder of RT ALASKA to go on without him, and they rolled down the hill. A few moments later, a team member heard a frightened yell from 1/Lt Entrican followed by a burst of gunfire.[4079]

Meanwhile, a rescue force inserted at 1930H on 17 May was unable to move to either RT ALASKA or the UH-1H due to darkness. At 0700 on 18 May, as the rescue force was attempting a link-up, it was struck by NVA B-40 rockets killing one man and causing several serious wounded. At 1245H, following 3 air strikes, MLT-2 [Mobile Launch Team-2] inserted a second rescue force including members of RT KRAIT and RT HABU which swept through the area of the contact and crash. About 10-15 meters from their insertion, the force located the bodies of Sgt Dehnke and one SCU from RT ALASKA and one dead NVA. After moving 10 more meters, the body of Sgt Hollingsworth was found. A hundred meters further, parts of the downed helicopter were found strewn throughout the area: 2 skids, 1 M-60 machinegun, 1 tail boom, 1 main rotor, numerous maps and charts, and pieces of Plexiglas. The mutilated remains (waist down) of WO Pearce were found about 70 meters up the hill from the crash along with flight fatigues. Lacking tools, recovery of all body parts was impossible due to parts buried in dirt, trees, brush, and under aircraft debris. He was completely mutilated; it appeared that some of his limbs had been ripped off while falling through the trees. His body was trapped by dead fall and the soldiers were unable to extract him from the debris and trees pinning him without tools. From the waist up, the body was totally mutilated and beyond recognition. The remains of the aircraft were located upside down, laying on its nose at the bottom of a steep ravine. Pieces of the chopper were scattered for about 200 meters down the hill to the chopper. SP5 Parker was found inside, severely wounded (shot in his leg and a fracture in the same place). Speed in extracting him was essential if he were to survive, and Sgt Lemuel D. McClothren, the "One [4072] "Case 1748: Entrican, Danny D.," "Warrant Officers David P. Soyland..," documents in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #219, Folder #64.

---

[4073] "Narrative, Case 1748-0-01 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #219, Folder #64.

[4074] Of Co C, 158th Aviation Battalion (Assault Helicopter) (Airmobile), 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile).

[4075] HQ, 101st Abn Div (Airmobile) ltr 1 Aug 1971 and Statement of CPT Neil C. Doty in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #264, Folder #557 (IN553, Soyland).

[4076] Statement of SP4 Gary Earl Allcorn in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #264, Folder #557 (IN553, Soyland).

[4077] "Warrant Officers David P. Soyland.." document in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #219, Folder #64.

[4078] Ibid.

[4079] Statement of SCU Truong To Ha in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #219, Folder #64.

Zero" put his own STABO rig on Parker and he was extracted by ladder.[4080]

Allcorn woke up, finding himself 25 meters from the tail boom. As he followed the marks downhill made by the UH-1H, he heard movement, thought it was NVA, and hid in the bushes for the night. The next morning at dawn, he heard one rifle shot near the aircraft and moved up the slope, disorientated.[4081]

As RT KRAIT and RT HABU were being extracted by ladder, Allcorn was spotted 2 ridge lines from the crash site in the middle of a field waving his white under shorts, and was rescued.[4082]

Despite extensive search of the area on subsequent days, no trace of 1/Lt Entrican or WO1 Soyland were detected. Loss was at YD048268.[4083]

01 JUNE 1971

MAGERS, 1/Lt Paul Gerald	D/158th AHB
WANN, CWO Donald Lynn	D/158th AHB

On 01 June 1971, Delta Co, 158th Infantry Battalion (Assault Helicopter), 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile) furnished one light fire team of AH-1G Cobra helicopters to 1st Brigade, 5th Mechanized Infantry Division: CW2 Donald L. Wann and 1/Lt Paul G. Magers piloted one helicopter (#68-15002, Oxhorn 22); CPT William D. Loftin and WO1 Nicholas E. Dreessen piloted the other.[4084] Earlier in the day, the 2 birds had supported D/3-5 with a combat assault (0830-1000), with a flame drop (1000-1200), and a sensor drop (1415-1515), and at 1515 were given the added mission to extract a ranger team from FSB Sheppard and insert them on top of Hill 1015, near Firebase Telstar (XD855454).[4085] "Hill 1015 has a very steep rocky slope, yet is highly vegetated. The ranger team had set up their LZ near the top of the eastern slope of the hill. The hill was casting a shadow in a southeasterly direction and an enemy gun emplacement was in the shadow near the base of the hill, approximately 1000 feet from the top of the hill."[4086]

Four UH-1H's successfully extracted and inserted the ranger team, the last of which drew fire. The AH-1G Cobras, low on fuel, returned to Mai Loc for refueling and then were informed that the ranger team was in close contact with enemy in 2 bunkers about 25 meters from their position. The 2 Cobras returned, neutralized the position, and 4 lift ships successfully extracted the ranger team. After refueling, the Cobras returned to destroy some claymore mines and grenades the rangers had left on the hill.[4087]

CW2 Wann and 1/Lt Magers made the first gun run on the position. "Starting from an altitude of 2500 to 3000 feet the Cobra started a run from northwest of the position toward the southeast, breaking off from the gun run approximately 400 to 500 feet above the target. The aircraft leveled off and received fire from the base of the hill. The aircraft then nosed upward and gained approximately 100 to 150 feet of altitude, yet apparently lost power from damages caused by the enemy fire and lost most of the forward airspeed. The aircraft caught fire and began to fall vertically spinning to the right in a level spin. Apparently uncontrolled, the aircraft continued to fall at a faster and faster rate, and spiral in a tight right hand turn until it crashed into the side of the mountain at a rate of descent equal to that of an autorotation, 2000 to 3000 feet per minute. The momentum of the aircraft pushed it about 100 feet through the vegetation on the side of the hill after it impacted and exploded. The ordnance aboard the aircraft then began to 'cook off' tearing what was left of the aircraft apart."[4088]

It was 1855 and the location of the crash was XD855454.[4089] The wreckage and remains were on the southeast slope of the hilltop down from the top about 200 meters in a densely vegetated area.[4090] CPT Loftin, nearby in the other Cobra, observed the crash and concluded that no one could have survived the crash and violent explosion.[4091]

[4080] Statement of Sgt Richard A. Hendrick in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #219, Folder #64; Statements of Sgt Richard A. Hendrick, SSGT Kenneth W. Holmes, SGT Lemuel D. McClothren, and SGT Copy W. Reese in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #264, Folder #557 (IN 553, Soyland).

[4081] Statement of SP4 Gary Earl Allcorn in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #264, Folder #557 (IN553, Soyland).

[4082] Statements of SGT Richard A. Hendrick, SGT Coy W. Reese, SSG Robedrt E. Cook in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #264, Folder #557 (IN553, Soyland).

[4083] JCRC, Circumstances of Loss (as of 31 March 1975) in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #219, Folder 62, Vol. 1.

[4084] Statement of Incident, 16 June 1971, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33.

[4085] Statement of CPT William D. Loftin in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33.

[4086] Gouge, 2/Lt Edward M., Letter of 8 August 1971, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33. (Also in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #34 (Wann).

[4087] Statement of CPT William D. Loftin in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33.

[4088] Gouge, 2/Lt Edward M., Letter of 8 August 1971 and Statement of WO1 Nicholas E. Dreessen, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33.

[4089] Statement of Maj Ronald F. Massey, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33.

[4090] Joint Statement of WO1 Nicholas E. Dreessen and CPT William D. Loftin, 16 June 1971, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33.

[4091] Statement of CPT William B. Loftin, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33.

The weather on 2, 3, 4, and 5 June "marginal to prohibitive for flying."[4092]

05 JUNE 1971

JONES, SGT John Robert TF1AE, SOG

The detachment from Task Force One Advisory Element occupying Hill 950, known as "Hickory Outpost," contained 67 indigenous and 27 Americans and had the mission of radio relay for reconnaissance and monitor movement of NVA in the area.[4093] The outpost included Walton, a specialist in reading electronic sensors[4094] as well as the signals intelligence system known as EXPLORER.[4095] Perhaps because of its highly classified equipment as well as mission, worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, if not millions, American commanders refused to acknowledge its existence, even as it fell, and consequently, it was not given optimal defensive materiel. One officer was to note, "They didn't even want to acknowledge it was there, so how could they reinforce it? These people were left out there with no defenses at all. Nothing. Not even barbed wire or big guns."[4096]

Defense of the outpost was the responsibility of Jon Robert Cavaiani who was later to be decorated with the Medal of Honor for his heroism in defending the outpost. Adopted in England when he was 7 or 8 months old, he never was able to discover his parentage or even date of birth since a fire destroyed the records. He took his birthday as 2 August, Friendship Day in England, "..because they figure I was born somewhere around that time."[4097] Along with Cavaiani, other Americans on HICKORY included Sgt John Jones (a radioman), Sgt Hill, Walton (the specialist reading electronic sensors), and Lt Valersky (a Special Forces officer present to observe).[4098] One of the indigenous personnel on the position was actually a North Vietnamese Army officer incognito, a spy, something Cavaiani was to discover after he had been captured and was languishing in POW torture facilities in Hanoi.[4099] In the weeks preceeding 4 June 1971, the position was mainly quiet, and Cavaiani collected various insects: "You couldn't believe some of the iridescent colors that you'd get on some of those insects up there—beautiful! I remember the 'borers" The more beautiful ones, the large ones, real long antenna and all that, were actually pone-borers, and they would put off the odor of turpentine."[4100]

At approximately 0600 on the foggy morning of 4 June, a South Vietnamese soldier of the unit defending HICKORY detected Chinese-made claymore mines in their outer perimeter pointed into the outpost. Sgt. Cavaiani determined that the 8 mines discovered had been emplaced during the night. Sgt. Hill and 4 South Vietnamese soldiers went down the hill to the lower helipad to obtain metal culvert halves stored there which had been delivered to improve their position. When Sgt Hill was half-way there, NVA soldiers began firing B-40 rockets from a bunker approximately 75 yards from them. During this initial attack, Sgt Hill was wounded in his knee and returned to the top of the hill and Sgt Cavaiani used a M-60 machinegun to destroy the Chinese claymore mines.[4101]

Walton, the sensor reader technician from the 1st of the 5th (Mech) Div, came over to Sgt Cavaiani, who was firing the .50 "because Charlie had really opened up on us." He crawled over and said, "Why don't you let me take over the .50 and you can check on your people." Cavaiani said, ""Walton, what do you know about .50s?" "Nothing," he replied, "But I figured you were Special Forces and could teach me in two or three minutes!" There was a young Bru Montagnard with him that Cavaiani knew well enough to know that he could set timing and space, so he gave the .50 to Walton who engaged several NVA machinegun positions and knocked them out. A little while later, Cavaiani returned to find Walton standing up on the berm, and with NVA shooting at him, shooting back at them. Cavaiani dove down and knocked him down. "What the hell you doing?" he asked. "I looked at him, because I was laying on his chest. His glasses were just like somebody had frosted them from all the sand when it [the rounds] hit the sandbags, and he said, 'Sarge, I think I'm going blind.' The rest of his face looked like raw hamburger where he had been hit by all the sand, so I said, 'Walton, you got an-[4092] Statement of CPT Larry C. Kennemer, Asst Launch Officer, Mobile Launch Team-2, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33.

---

[4093] Conversation with Jon Cavaiani, 09 February 1991.

[4094] Ibid.

[4095] Gilbert, James L., The Most Secret War, Army Signals Intelligence in Vietnam, Military History Office, U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Command, Ft. Belvoir, VA, 2003, pp. 97-98. The EXPLORER system, controlled by operators at 8th RR Field Station in Phu Bai, faced several logistics problems, the most significant of which was providing adequate supplies of gasoline to power the system. To draw as little attention as possible, ASA soldiers buried all of the equipment minus the antennas, and to cut down on noise, used generators specifically designed for 'whisper' quietness. At 2100 on 4 June, orders were given to destroy the equipment with thermite grenades on Hill 950.

[4096] Unidentified clipping, "Secret Base's Fall Laid to Negligence," copy furnished by Jerry Crews in his letter of 10 June 1996.

[4097] Conversation with Jon R. Cavaiani, 24 March 1991.

[4098] Conversations with Jon R. Cavaiani, 6 August 1991 and 9 February 1991; Agent Report of 9 April 1973 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #423, Folder #35.

[4099] Conversation with Jon R. Cavaiani, 9 February 1991.

[4100] Ibid.

[4101] Agent Report of 9 April 1973 in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #423, Folder #35.

other pair of glasses?' He said, 'Yeah, back in my hootch.' I managed to make it back to his bunker, grabbed his other pair of glasses, brought them back and put them on him, and he says, 'I can see!... Walton had turned into a regular 'John Wayne! I loaded that kid on a helicopter 4 times! He'd return and say, 'Sarge, I fell out.! When I put him on the last chopper that was leaving, I had a Bru Montagnard point a CAR-15 at him with instructions to shoot him if he left, and told Walton to get his ass out of here. I wrote him up for the Medal of Honor. He had done some extraordinary things!'"[4102]

The NVA mortarmen were proficient, accurately lobbing over 127 rounds within the camp from a distance of 2600 – 2700 meters away[4103] (a little over a mile) and Sgt Cavaiani determined it was prudent to destroy all the special electronic eavesdropping equipment—"so much for several millions dollars worth of government equipment!"[4104]

At 1615, 4 June, LTC Bobbie B. Fernander, commanding 101st Aviation Battalion (Assault Helicopter) of the 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile) attended a briefing at CCN headquarters discussing the extraction of 6 US and 47 ARVN personnel from Hickory. 9 UH-1H and 4 AH-1G aircraft from the 101st Aviation Battalion (AH), 2 UH-1H and 2 AH-1G from the 158th Aviation Battalion, and 2 medevac aircraft were to comprise the effort. "The flight arrived over Khe Sanh at 1800 hours. The Air Force FAC told me that a 15 minute delay would be necessary in order to employ TAC air. After the air strike, extraction of personnel began encountering a heavy volume of small arms fire, rockets, mortars, and anti aircraft weapons. The first aircraft extracted 8 personnel with the second aircraft extracting 5 personnel. The second aircraft was hit by enemy fire and was forced to make a forced landing at the abandoned Khe Sanh airstrip. At this time I stopped the extraction and requested additional TAC air on the suspected enemy positions and had the flight refuel. At 1845 hours additional TAC air arrived on station and the extraction was attempted while the strike was in progress. The first aircraft, while under heavy enemy fire, extracted 7 personnel; the second made a go around; the third aircraft extracted 5 personnel but was hit numerous times by enemy fire and was forced to shut down at LZ Star for combat damage. The second aircraft, which previously had made a go around, re-entered the landing zone and was only able to extract 3 personnel because the remaining personnel would not leave bunkers during the mortar attack to get on the aircraft. The FAC advised that the next TAC air would not arrive until 1920 hours. I directed all assets to return to CCN and await further instructions due to the non-availability of continuous TAC air and darkness in the area of operations. At this time all wounded personnel had been evacuated and numerous enemy automatic weapons, mortar positions, and .51 caliber weapons had been located. Upon returning to CCN at 2030 hours, commanders at all levels agreed that an extraction would be impractical and that further operations would begin at 0600 hours 5 June."[4105]

By 1700, Cavaiani and Sgt Jones, along with the South Vietnamese defenders, were in one bunker on the northeast corner of the perimeter, and in the early morning hours of 5 June, Cavaiani ran to another bunker to bolster the defense and told the remaining South Vietnamese to flee. They retreated down the hill. Cavaiani received word of Air Force air carrying 250-pound bombs. "I had all my people in bunkers and there were 65, 70 NVA in the camp. He called back, refusing to fire, saying it was too close. "I finally was really ticked off and I told him, 'My Name's Jon Cavaiani. This relieves you of any responsibility of the fire mission. Fire!' They wouldn't fire!"[4106]

At approximately 0400 a hand grenade was dropped through the air vent of their bunker and Sgt Jones was wounded in both legs. "It was at this point that Jones decided to surrender. He left the bunker and handed his weapon and his wallet over to a NVA soldier who then fired six rounds into Sgt. Jones chest, killing him."[4107]

Cavaiani decided to "play dead." A lone NVA soldier entered the bunker and punched him in the chest to determine if he were alive. Cavaiani, covered with blood, played dead. Believing Cavaiani to be dead, he departed and set the bunker on fire. About 16 to 17 NVA watched the bunker being burned and shortly after they left, Cavaiani dashed outside, exhausted, burned, and shortly thereafter, lost consciousness. He moved to another bunker, destroyed all the papers in his wallet other than his ID card, a check for $350.00, and a picture of his daughters, moved under a cot and fell asleep. Waking, he noticed a NVA was sitting on the cot above him, tugging at his boot, but released it and walked outside the bunker. He was eventually captured, taken to Hanoi, and then released 27 March 1973.[4108] He was decorated with the Medal of Honor.[4109] [4102] Conversation with Jon R. Cavaiani, 6 August 1991.

[4103] Ibid.

[4104] Quoted in Halberstadt, Hans, War Stories of the Green Berets, The Viet Nam Experience, Osceola, Wi.: Motorbooks International Publishers & Wholesalers, 1994, p. 211.

[4105] LTC Bobbie B. Fernander, Memo of 5 June 1971, Subj: Account of CCN Extraction of Hickory Radio Relay from 1615 Hours 4 June thru 1725 Hours 5 June, in letter from Jerry Crews, 10 June 1996.

[4106] Conversation with Jon R. Cavaiani, 6 August 1991. For a more detailed account, see Halberstadt, op. cit., p. 212.

[4107] Agent Report, 9 April 1971, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #423, Folder #35.

[4108] Ibid.; DOD Intelligence Information Report #2 261 0024 73, 18 April 1973, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #423, Folder #35.

[4109] Copies of Citation contained in: Sutherland, LTC Ian D.W., 1952/1982, Special Forces of the United States Army, San Jose, Ca.: R. James Bender Publishing, 1990, pp. 630-

Hickory was struck by an Arc Light 7 days later.[4110]

15 July 1971

TAYLOR, CAPT Ted James A/2-17

KIA 8.1 nautical miles from Khe Sanh.[4111]

07 August 1971

BERG, SGT Bruce Allan	RT KANSAS
BINGHAM, SSG Oran Lothier	RT KANSAS
HAGEN, 1/Lt Loren Douglas	RT KANSAS

With the loss of HICKORY, the massive construction of extended infiltration roads within South Vietnam in western Quang Tri Province, it became essential to know what was happening near Khe Sanh, and a prisoner-snatch mission was assigned to Recon Team KANSAS commanded by 1/Lt Loren D. Hagen. The plan was to land conspicuously on an abandoned firebase, using the NVA's tactic of providing a lucrative target which would attract and fix enemy soldiers. RT KANSAS would then be extracted, but furtively leave behind half of their team. Then, when the NVA investigated the area to see if any electronic sensors had been left behind, they would snatch a POW and be extracted. Unfortunately, they landed unknowingly near a new 6-inch POL pipeline that had been laid across the DMZ, and after their insertion, the hill became surrounded by at least a regiment of NVA, over a thousand men. The soldiers heard tail gates of trucks drop, bringing more and more NVA that formed into platoons and companies to assault the old fire base. When in place, the position was assaulted by approximately 2,000 NVA infantrymen.[4112]

The bunker holding Sgt Berg was struck by a RPG, initiating the attack which developed into 10,000 rounds per second as a human wave assault by NVA stormed the position. Lt Hagen rushed to check on Berg, but was killed by small arms fire. Oran Bingham crawled out to reposition a claymore, and was killed in the process.[4113]

Following massive air strikes, including napalm, the NVA temporarily withdrew permitting UH-1E helicopters to extract the team with its casualties. In half a hour, 9 of the 14 members of the team had been killed.[4114]

1/Lt Hagen was posthumously decorated with the Medal of Honor.[4115]

10 AUGUST 1971

BATES, CPT Paul Jennings Jr.	220th RAC
DOLAN, PFC Thomas Albert	101 MiCo

Capt Bates, pilot with the 220th RAC, 212 Bn, 11th CAG, 1st Avn and observer, SSG Dolan of the 101st MI Co., 101st Abn Div, were on an O1G (#51-2267) on a VR mission over the southwestern portion of the DMZ when they received hostile weapons fire, crashed and burned at XD829654. A medevac helicopter (CW2 Jerald A. Lee) on the scene surveyed the wreckage and crash scene but saw no survivors on the ground and deemed it inadvisable to risk further loss of life by lowering someone into the area. No ground search was made.[4116]

[On 09 September 1971, Major John W. Ripley, an Advisor to Brigade 258 of the Vietnamese Marine Corps, flew to Hill 1015 for a preliminary reconnaissance for an operation planned to retrieve MIA casualties from June (1/Lt Paul Magers, MIA 1 June 1971, and some 30 bodies from the attack on 4/5 June). The minute they put a team into Hill 1015, the helicopters came under intense fire. The troops had already debarked and the insertion helicopter was shot down. The bird carrying Ripley and one other were shot up in the process, and auto-rotated, spinning down and crash landed on the old Khe Sanh airstrip. One of the helicopters was able to fly back to Quang Tri and Maj Ripley was retrieved and flown back to FSB SARGE (YD029479, the CP of Brigade 258).[4117]

The very next day, 10 September 1971, an Army Major, Al Ruschatz (West Point Class of '62) requested a guide back to Hill 1015. They flew over the area without landing and were unable to make contact with the recon team that had been inserted the previous day.[4118]

On 11 September, 8 troop-carrying helicopters, a Command and Control bird and a scout aircraft carrying Ruschatz approached from the north following a zone 631 and Jordan, Kenneth N., Sr., Heroes of Our Time, Atglen, Pa.: Schiffer Military/Aviation History, 1994, pp. 340-341.

[4110] Conversation with Jon R. Cavaiani, 9 February 1991.

[4111] Analysis Data Report in letter from Charles W. Henley, Director, Defense POW/MIA Office, I-95/48170, 28 Jun 1995.

[4112] Plaster, John L., "Last Stand of Recon Team Kansas," VFW 84:11 (August, 1997) 38-40, 49.

[4113] Ibid., p. 40. The article indicates "Klaus Bingham" but Klaus Bingham was KIA 10 May 1971. The man with RT Kansas was Oran Bingham.

[4114] Ibid.

[4115] Copy of Citation in Saal, Harve, SOG MACV Studies and Observations Group, (Behind Enemy Lines), Vol. III, Legends, Ann Arbor, MI: Edwards Brothers, Inc., 1990, p. 533.

[4116] Biographic/Site Report, Report of Casualty, 8 Feb 74 (finding of death), Statement of CW2 Jerald A. Lee and other documents in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #329, Folder #103 (Bates).

[4117] Oral tape made by Maj John W. Ripley dated 01 March 1978 to Dr. Steven E. Ambrose.

[4118] Oral tape made by Maj John W. Ripley dated 27 July 1986, to Oral History Div, Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.

prep. The skids of Ripley's helicopter cleared the trench, the pilot began turning down the power, and the troops were getting ready to debark when suddenly, from both sides of the trench and all around, the NVA jumped up and began firing at the aircraft from both sides. "It was an incredible sight. Many automatic weapons. Every man in the aircraft was being fired on by automatic weapons. The door gunners were splattered against the fire wall of the aircraft and couldn't move. There was so much fire being pumped into everybody. Bits and pieces [of body were] blown off of everybody—just a shocking sight. I was so mesmerized. Both pilots were hit and founds came up through the deck itself, one of which, as I was kneeling on the deck, hit me—came between my legs and hit me in the magazine pouch on the starboard side of my cartridge belt, and the round literally picked me up off the deck and slammed me against the fire wall directly behind me.. All this happened in less than 15 seconds probably. There was an enormous volume of fire. While the troop ship to my right, just a rotor-blade length away from us, was taking all this fire, the enemy exploded a claymore mine beneath the cockpit—blew both doors off, ripped the chin bubble and caused the aircraft to roll to the right, critically wounding both pilots, in fact, flowing the legs off, parts of them, off the pilot in the left seat... Both aircraft somehow—God knows how—made a controlled descent back into Khe Sanh, reminiscent of the previous one I'd been in the day before. It was absolutely miraculous work by the pilots... All in the aircraft were Killed in Action or Wounded in Action—every single man."[4119] After checking on everyone and placing all on one of the helicopters, it took off, leaving Ripley alone on the airstrip with the other severely damaged helicopter with its blades still rotating—"burning and turning." Ripley looked around, saw no means to protect himself, looked at the damaged bird, and "..made a conscious decision to take my changes in that aircraft rather than to take them alone at Khe Sanh. So I got in the left seat of the aircraft. I remembered enough from my training at Pensacola as a Midshipman. I had to take my canteen out and splash water on the wind screen which was virtually opaque with the blood of the casualties. I had no communication. Red warning lights beeped continually. The doors were blown off. There was no fuel indication. Suddenly, like a flash of light, a man jumped into the right seat—an Army Warrant Officer—and he began to grab the controls, checking things. He had his pilot's helmet on. He was in the process of trying to get the aircraft airborne when I leaned over and shouted as loud as I could if there was any help I could give him. His response was unprintable, but very memorable, and I'll never forget what he had to say, which amounted to 'Leave me alone!' I did assist by splashing some more water from my canteen on his wind screen so he could see forward instead of hanging his head out the door. He managed to get the aircraft airborne with quite a struggle. It was making all sorts of weird noises. We got airborne and moving along and suddenly a scout returned to escort us. It was Ruschatz, the Airborne Commander, who realized he was missing some airplanes. We moved from Khe Sanh to Quang Tri airfield, approximately 33 air miles by the route we had to take."[4120]

On the 15th – 20th of September, the Vietnamese 5th Marine Battalion landed on the eastern part of the ridge line overlooking Khe Sanh base at Hill 613 (XD895438) and worked westward towards Hill 1015 (XD854455) on the western end of the ridge to link up with and extract the recon team inserted on Dong Tri (Hill 1015). While walking this ridgeline, Ripley saw the extensive NVA positions that had been constructed, including a continuous, virtually unbroken, trench line over its 5-mile length with intermittent firing positions and fighting positions. As the battalion approached Hill 1015, they established a night defensive position approximately 2000 meters east and the following day an Army Cobra began to transmit to Ripley personally, asking him to investigate the grid of the crash where another Cobra had been shot down (Magers, 01 June). The Vietnamese Marine patrol continued on while a small patrol consisting of a rifle platoon, Ripley, and his assistant, Capt Bob Jassam, eventually reached the crash site on the eastern slope of Hill 1015. Capt Jassam positively identified the remains. The Commander of the Vietnamese Marine unit did not want to divert from his patrol, and the operation continued several days until the recon patrol had been successfully recovered. On the movement back, Capt Jassam was bitten by a snake and became delereious and was medevaced.[4121] The recon team was located and rescued in what was the last friendly action of any consequence at Khe Sanh. By this time, Route 9 west of Ca Lu (YD013453) had been completely abandoned, un-patrolled, and written-off. Civilians, Bru Montagnards, did not use the road which was virtually impassible and enemy-controlled. "The Vietnamese had absolutely no interest in the western Quang Tri Province which was disappointing especially considering the extraordinary cost and blood, lives, and treasure that had been invested in it. They either did not have the forces to protect that area or perhaps saw it as tactically unnecessary, infeasible."[4122] The NVA were present "in abundance, controlled the area, and had every intent to remain there."[4123]]

[4119] Ibid.

[4120] Ibid.

[4121] COL J. W. Ripley, letter to Defense Intelligence Agency, 8 February 1990, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #323, Folder #33.

[4122] Conversation with COL John Ripley, 09 October 1994.

[4123] Ibid.

30 SEPTEMBER 1971

BOND, CPT Ronald Leslie	421st TFS
DONOVAN, CPT Michael Leo	421st TFS

Capt Donovan, Aircraft Commander (STORMY 03), and CAPT Bond, departed DaNang Airfield at 0647H on 30 September 1971 in a F-4E with a visual reconnaissance mission in the Steel Tiger area of Laos. Their last radio transmission with another FAC (STORMY 04) was at 1130H having completed aerial refueling and proceeding to their final target, XD619099. At 1215, after they failed to return to DaNang as scheduled, they were declared missing.[4124]

20 JANUARY 1972

BERDAHL, PFC David Donald	D/3-5
EDWARDS, SP4 Harry Jerome	L/75th Inf
FIGUEROA, SGT Fernando	D/3-5
MORAN, SP4 Walter C B	TRF 95

[All with 101st Abn Div]

A USAF Phantom had crashed, and a UH1H from 3rd Battalion, 5th Cavalry, 101st Airborne Division was sent to scout for it. The UH1H included 4 of its own crew and 3 soldiers from the Air Rifle Platoon (PFC Dennis Trimble, Sgt Figueroa, and SP4 Edwards).[4125] At approximately 1815, Capt William L. Allen, Pilot, was returning from a rescue mission northwest of Khe Sanh in a UH-1H helicopter (#67-16717) when it was struck (at 4300 feet) by anti-aircraft fire (vicinity of XD853393), probably a 12.7mm machinegun in the vicinity of XD858406. In an effort to save his crew, Capt Allen auto-rotated to the bank of the Rao Quan River at XD883408. The aircraft burst into flames, landed hard, and rolled onto its left side.[4126] Capt Joseph C. Hogg, Aircraft Commander of another UH-1H (#70-15708), who followed the burning aircraft down ".. exited my aircraft and started pulling the survivors from the crashed aircraft. The aircraft was severely crushed laterally... I lifted or assisted five crew members from the ship. I saw one body pinned face down under the ship, but the fire was too hot to rescue that person. He was wearing a flight helmet and a body armor vest. He appeared to be pinned under the transmission and I could not see the lower half of his body... I did not thoroughly inspect the ship for other bodies because the ship was exploding and I did not believe that anyone left in the ship was still alive. The stream was very swift. In attempting to bring CPT Allen back across the stream we were washed about 50 feet downstream. A man who fell into the stream would have been washed away and drowned. A quick check of the area around the aircraft revealed one other wounded person on the south bank of the river... There were 8 persons on board the aircraft, 6 of which were rescued and one of which I saw pinned in the wreckage."[4127]

PFC Trimble recalls that the UH-1H caught on fire from some ground fire. "The pilot informed us that everything was all right, but the flames were spreading to where I was seated, so I got up and moved outside of the aircraft and stood on the skid. Again, the flames were spreading to where I was so I jumped from the aircraft while it was still in flight. This was the last that I can remember until I later gained my consciousness approxi-

---

[4124] JCRC, Narrative, Case 1772-0-01 and 02, Document dated 28 April 1972, Intelligence Case File Report of 8 Oct 1971, and Dept of the Air Force, "Continuance of Missing in Action Status Beyond Twelve Months—Case #436," in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #336, Folder #198.

[4125] Statement of PFC Dennis Trimble, 16 March 1972, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #327, Folder #85 (Berdahl).

[4126] "Synopsis of the Crash," in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #442, Folder #40 (Edwards) and Reel #327, Folder #85 (Berdahl).

[4127] Statement of CPT Joseph C. Hogg, Jr., in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #442, Folder #40 (Edwards) and Reel #327, Folder #85 (Berdahl). Rescued and WIA: CPT William L. Allen (Pilot), WO1 Francie L. Angotti, Jr. (Aircraft Commander), SP4 Walter E. Morris (Crew Chief), and PFC Dennis W. Trimble (Grenadier); rescued and DOW: SGT Fernando Figueroa (Rifleman) and SP4 Walter C. B. Moran (Team Leader); MIA: SP4 Harry J. Edwards (Rifleman) and PFC David D. Berdahl (Door Gunner). ["Synopsis of the Crash" in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #442, Folder #40 (Edwards) and Reel #327, Folder #85 (Berdahl). CPT Hogg also stated: "When I first approached the aircraft, one man was standing near it. I took this man and placed him near the large boulder. Then I took 2 more men and placed them next to the portion of the rotor blades, on the bank. CPT Allen walked up to me and grabbed me, put his arms around me. I took him across the river to my aircraft. I saw someone floating in the river and jumped in to get him. SP4 Weiland helped me pull him out. I went back across the river and found WO1 Angotti walking around in a daze. I put him on top of the boulder. I motioned for the aircraft to hover to my side of the river because the other injured were in too bad of shape to swim across. We put them on the aircraft. I then climbed into my aircraft and then we saw a man on the other side of the river. We hovered over and picked him up and departed the area... I think the last man extracted was Trimble." Capt David A. Quimby, Pilot of the aircraft of which Capt Hogg was Aircraft Commander, remained with the UH-1H on the south side of the Rao Quan (the crash was on the north side), about 40 feet from the crashed helicopter, and saw that all survivors were in or immediately outside of the aircraft. "Unable to fend for themselves, they were dragged from and clear of the intense heat and fire by crew members of our own aircraft." [Statement of CPT David A. Quimby in Ibid.] mately 100 yards from my helicopter which was crashed in the side of a hill."[4128]

30 MARCH 1972

CROSBY, SGT Bruce Allen Jr. 8th ARRS
WESTCOTT, SP5 Gary Patrick 8th ARRS

[Full unit: 8th Army Radio Research Field Station, 509th ASA Group, Army Security Agency, US Army, Vietnam]

Fire Base SARGE (YD028478, Dong Toan Mountain), one of two fire support bases (the other, at YD0348, about 2,000 meters away being near Nui Ba Ho, YD015511), perched in the mountains to the east of Route 9 as it wended on a north/south leg overlooking the old Vandegrift Fire Base, was defended by the 4th Battalion, Vietnamese Marine Corps. Two American advisors, Maj Walter Eugene Boomer and Captain Ray Smith, were present at the positions; the senior advisor, Maj Boomer, on FSB Sarge while Capt Smith was on the Nui Ba Ho mountain. The positions were ineffective against encroaching NVA units since active patrolling did not occur and Route 9 was not visible from SARGE. It was patently clear to Maj Boomer that significant NVA activity to the west was unfolding. He informed General Ghai who visited SARGE, "We would see boxes stacked along the road for a short period of time, and then they would disappear," but General Ghai "felt that he did not have sufficient strength to aggressively patrol to the west. This was a fatal mistake. While it would have been an extremely dangerous operation, had even one battalion been sent out to the west to explore our sightings, it would have revealed the North Vietnamese build up that was taking place prior to their offensive. Such lack of aggressiveness, however, was typical of the Vietnamese military hierarchy, and can to a large degree explain their ultimate loss to the North Vietnamese."[4129]

Abandonment of Khe Sanh portended the fall of South Vietnam. Arnold Toynbee, after extensive analysis of civilizations through the millennia, had concluded that they do not fall due to aggression from without, but from internal flaws, lack of will, moral degeneracy; outside forces simply seize the opportunity. Route 9, the ancient invasion route for Mongols entering what later became Vietnam, along with Siamese armies using the same route, brought in invading forces even as Annamite forces (from what eventually became central Vietnam) moved along the same route westward into what is now Laos. For the North Vietnamese, "Highway 9 was the path to victory in northern I Corps."[4130] Walter E. Boomer notes concerning Route 9: "In 1972 it was a major invasion route for the Easter Offensive. Ray Smith and I did in fact observe supplies being dropped off in broad daylight but were unable to convince our Vietnamese counterparts to take necessary preventive action. The attack against Fire Base SARGE and Ray Smith's position several hundred meters to the north came right down Route 9."[4131]

The attack on FSB SARGE began the morning of 30 March 1972 as NVA units began to shell the position with artillery at dawn. From the quantity and concentration it was immediately apparent that this was no ordinary attack.[4132] Located on the position was a bunker housing a steel CONEX box containing Sgt Bruce Crosby and SP5 Gary P. Westcott, two U.S. Army enlistedmen from the 8th Radio Research Field Station[4133] who had been monitoring the incursion of NVA units by signals intelligence (i.e., determining location by triangulation and determining chain of command by determining who talks to whom and how frequently—a "pattern analysis"). They were ordered to remain in their bunker (containing Explorer equipment) and maintain radio contact with Det Alfa at Quang Tri.[4134]

During the intense bombardment, Boomer was informed of a large fire blazing in the vicinity of the radio research bunker. He ran outside, "..and discovered their bunker had taken a direct hit. The round had penetrated the bunker wall and detonated inside, caving in the roof and causing an intense fire inside. I called down into the bunker but received no answer. No attempt at rescue could be made because of the fire and continuing heavy artillery attack."[4135]

[Both positions eventually fell, the Marine Battalion was moved to Hue to regroup and reform after having lost about 40% of its manpower during the attack.[4136]]

[4128] Statement of PFC Dennis Trimble in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #327, Folder #85.
[4129] Taped comments of Maj Walter E. Boomer, 8 March 1983, Oral History Section, Historical Center, HQMC, Washington, D.C.
[4130] Andrade, Dale, America's Last Vietnam Battle, Halting Hanoi's 1972 Easter Offensive, Lawrence, Kansas: University Press of Kansas, 2001, p. 40.
[4131] Walter E. Boomer, Letter of 22 November 1994.
[4132] Boomer, op. cit.
[4133] Gilbert, James L., Most Secret War, Army Signals Intelligence in Vietnam, Military History Office, U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Command, Fort Belvoir, Va, 2003, p. 124.
[4134] CW2 James Leroy Wilson, Statement of 6 April 1972 to MIA Board, in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #330, Folder #129. For explorer equipment vide Gilbert, James L., op. cit., pp. 97-98.
[4135] Maj Walter Eugene Boomer, Statement of 6 April 1972 to MIA Board, in Library of Congress, MIA microfilm Reel #330, Folder #129.
[4136] Taped comments of Boomer, op. cit.

09 April 1972

KETCHIE, CPT Scott Douglas VMA (AW)-224

At 1811 on 9 April 1972, Maj C. D. Smith (Pilot) and 1/Lt Scott D. Ketchie (Bombadier/Navigator) launched from the USS CORAL SEA (CVA-43) in an A6A Intruder (#155652, call sign BENGAL 505) for a strike mission against lines of communication in Laos. At about 1920, Maj Smith and 1/Lt Ketchie conducted a dive-bombing attack on 5 trucks in Laos. While departing the target area after a second attack, the A6A aircraft (at 12000 feet) was hit in the aft section by AA fire. The aircraft pitched up and went into a spin at 8000 feet indicated. Maj Smith, seeing flames over his left shoulder, hit 1/Lt Ketchie on the arm and motioned to the ejection curtain. As Maj Smith ejected, he saw 1/Lt Ketchie reaching for the secondary ejection handle. Maj Smith landed near the aircraft at XD565572 and immediately went to a hiding place about 40 yards away. Yelling and gunfire was heard throughout the night on the other side of a ridge from where Maj Smith sought refuge, and gunfire, enemy troop movement and truck traffic were heard for the next 4 nights until Maj Smith was rescued on 13 April 1972.[4137]

14 April 1972

GREENLEAF, LT Joseph Gates VF-114
MC KINNEY, LT Clemie VF-114[4138]

[Both are part of VF-114 embarked in USS KITTY HAWK of the US 7th Fleet]

Three F-4J Phantoms launched from USS KITTY HAWK to strike a POL dump just below the DMZ and 17 miles west of Quang Tri. The Phantom flown by LTs Greenleaf and McKinney (#15752) was hit by 37mm AA and crashed near Cam Lo. A nearby FAC saw the plane take a hit in the cockpit and neither of the crew eject. Although the Vietnamese returned the remains of McKinney which were confirmed by the Navy to be his, his family disputes the claim.[4139]

[4137] JCRC, "Circumstances of Loss, Case 1824, 27 January 1975," Marine All Weather Attack Squadron 224, Det "C" Informal Investigation, 4:PCK:wrl, 5830, 21 Apr 1972, Statement of Maj Clyde D. Smith of 21 April 1972, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #331, Folder #132 (Ketchie).

[4138] LT McKinney is not listed in the Coffelt database but is listed in the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, Inc.: Vietnam Veterans Memorial: Directory of Names, 1982, p. 484 and in Hobson, Chris, Vietnam Air Losses, Hinkley, England: Midland Publishing, 2001, p. 222.

[4139] Hobson, op. cit., p. 222.

07 May 1972

CONSOLVO, CPT John Wadsworth Jr. VMFA-212

VMFA-212, the third USMC Phantom squadron to deploy to Vietnam in 1972, arrived 14 April to join MAG-15. On 7 May, the target was a small convoy transporting SA-2 missiles near the DMZ. After a second pass, CAPT Consolvo's F-4J was hit by AAA fire. About 10 miles east of Khe Sanh, Capt Consolvo ordered his navigator, CWO3 J. J. Castonguay, to eject. Castonguay was rescued by a USAF SAR helicopter, but it is not known if Capt Consolvo, who had flown more than 150 missions during 2 Vietnam tours, ejected.[4140]

07 July 1972

ROBERTSON, MAJ Leonard VMA-553

Due to the increasing threat to DaNang from NVA sappers as their Easter Offensive approached, MAG-15 moved to Nam Phong, an air base constructed in 1967 in Thailand that had a 10,000-ft. paved runway. First VMFA-115 arrived, 16 June, followed by VMFA-232 and VMA (AW)-533, later joined by the C-130s of FMGR-152 and 4 CH-46s of H&MS-36 for SAR.[4141]

On 7 July 1972, an A-6A Intruder (#155690) was shot down while conducting a strike on a storage area 5 miles south of Khe Sanh. The pilot, 1/Lt Kroboth, ejected at 600-ft. when the aircraft was hit in the starboard wing and landed at XD831381 (about 1 click due west of the western edge of the former Khe Sanh ville). He was captured and released on 27 March 1973. His captors told him that his navigator had perished in the crash.[4142]

20 November 1972

BREUER, CAPT Donald Charles VMFA-232

At 1440, Capt Breuer (RIO) and Capt W. D. Anderson (Pilot) departed as crew aboard a F4J aircraft (#153849) in a flight of 2 aircraft and was armed with inboard LAU-10s and a centerline with 6 MK-82 bombs. The target, as briefed by NAIL 23, the FAC, and directed by HILLSBORO (the ABCCC) was to be a bomb run on 2 trucks and supplies. Capt Anderson stated his aircraft was struck by AA: "I was already jinking and jinked harder, rolling out just in time to pickle. I began a pull.. At that time I felt something hit us extremely hard, immediately causing large muffled explosions in the rear, [4140] Hobson, op. cit., p. 224.

[4141] Ibid., p. 231.

[4142] Ibid.; JCRC, Refugee Report and Evaluation in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #292, Folder #9.

complete loss of control with regard to the stick, and a negative G condition with accompanying roll to the right. I was thrown up against the canopy, heard an unreadable exclamation from Capt Breuer and said something like 'get out' or 'punch out'.. Immediately after the hit my whole canopy was in a fire ball.. I reached twice for the alternative handle and got it about the third time, the face curtain seeming an impossibility to reach. I pulled it and the plane seemed to be in a semi-one G condition." The aircraft crashed near XD662350, 1 KM south of the Xepone River (the location of the former BV-33 at Ban Houei Sane). Capt Anderson safely parachuted from the airplane and was subsequently rescued. The crew members of the other F-4J did not see Capt Breuer parachute from the aircraft nor did they detect any beeper signals from him. Extensive aerial search and rescue efforts continued for 3 days with negative result.[4143]

[The Cease-fire became effective 28 January 1973. Photographs of the Khe Sanh base taken on 18 February 1973 revealed that the NVA had emplaced 3 antiaircraft missile launching sites at Khe Sanh which could not have been constructed before the Cease Fire Agreement became effective, and that these missiles were a clear violation of the Agreement which prohibits both sides from introducing war materiel, except to replace equipment already in place. The missiles were identified as SAM-2.[4144] By 13 March 1973, Americans declared that if the Russian-made missiles were not removed from Khe Sanh, they would be subject to air attacks, and subsequent reconnaissance disclosed that they had been removed.[4145] On 17 March 1973, two International Control Commission Supervision Commission (ICCS) were fired upon while enroute to Lao Bao.[4146]

On 7 April 1973, the North Vietnamese shot down an official helicopter of the ICCS, killing all eleven men aboard, including two PRG liaison officers.[4147] The helicopter was enroute to Lao Bao where Route 9 passes on the Vietnam/Lao border. Since Lao Bao was listed as one of 3 ports of entry for replacement war materiel, the ICCS planned to station a team at this location to monitor the supplies, and the helicopter was enroute to Lao Bao to check on the status of the construction of facilities to house them. The 11 included representatives of the 4 ICCS nations, Canada, Indonesia, Hungary, and Poland, as well as Viet Cong and American crewmembers in a helicopter flown under contract with Air America.[4148] The anti-aircraft batteries of Division 377 of the NVA intimidated the ICCS into withdrawing, opening the door to North Vietnam's final invasion thrust to conquer South Vietnam.[4149] By May, 1973, United Press International reported: "Two Communist SAM2 antiaircraft sites remain manned near the old U.S. Marine base at Khe Sanh and ... At least four missile sites appear to be under construction around Khe Sanh, where the Communists have improved the old Marine air strip, in addition to the two sites reported in that area late in March."[4150] Khe Sanh had become a major NVA base. "Engineers and labor gangs have been extending the airstrip at Khe Sanh to more than a mile in length and covering it with steel matting."[4151] The U.S. Defense Department complained that the development of Khe Sanh into a major military and logistics base by the North Vietnamese was clearly in violation of the cease-fire agreement. "The base now includes storage and supply areas ringed with Soviet-supplied surface-to-air missiles, antiaircraft guns and heavy field artillery pieces. Some 122mm towed field artillery guns with a range of 17 miles have been spotted in the area. An estimated 8,000 to 10,000 North Vietnamese troops are stationed at the base. On the day of the cease-fire, Khe Sanh's old 3,900 foot aluminum runway was cratered and generally unusable. All this changed once the agreement was signed. Within a month of the cease-fire, the North Vietnamese started grading and clearing the area to rebuild and extend the runway. Photographs taken a month ago revealed that the runway had been lengthened to 5,300 feet... When completed, Khe Sanh will be able to accommodate North Vietnamese MIG21 jet interceptors and IL28 light jet bombers... The Khe Sanh base includes large truck parks, maintenance facilities, a headquarters and communications building complex, large petroleum depots, facilities for troop billets and an expanded road network that has been extended down the rugged western highland corridor including the A Shau Valley.. as far south as Kontum Province."[4152]]

[4143] JCRC, Narrative, Case 1947-0-01 and Statement of Captain W. D. Anderson in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #430, Folder #144.

[4144] "Red Missile Sites Reported in South," The Milwaukee Journal, Monday, 26 Feb 1973, p. 2.

[4145] "Reds Bow to Ultimatum, Shift Khe Sanh Missiles," Pacific Stars & Stripes 29:71 (13 March 1973) 1.

[4146] JCS msg 181210Z/Mar73, Subj: Ceasefire Situation Report March 18, in Library of Congress MIA microfilm Reel #59, Folder #8.

[4147] Mather, Paul C., M.I.A., Accounting for the Missing in Southeast Asia, Washington, D.C.: National Defense University Press, 1994, p. 8.

[4148] "2 ICCS Copters Lost in Viet," Pacific Stars & Stripes 29:98 (Mon, 9 Apr 1973) 1.

[4149] Cawthorne, Nigel, The Bamboo Cage, The Full Story of the American Servicemen still held hostage in South-East Asia, London, England: Pen & Sword Books, 1991, p. 44.

[4150] "SAM Sites Spotted," Pacific Stars & Stripes, Monday, 7 May 1973, p. 6.

[4151] Fred S. Hoffman, "N. Viets Plan to Hold Land?" Pacific Stars & Stripes, Wed., 22 Aug 1973, p. 6.

[4152] Marc Huet, "Reds Build Khe Sanh Into Fortress," Pacific Stars & Stripes, Thurs, 30 Aug 1973.

[Battlefields continue to kill. Munitions become more sensitive, more apt to detonate, as decades pass. The immense amount of ordnance that fell in France in World War I (1914-1918) caused over 16 million acres of farm land to be declared off limits, including 2 million acres that remained such as late as 1996.[4153] Currently, one-fifth of the bomb disposal technicians are killed every year clearing this ordnance.[4154] The French government estimates that more than 12 million unexploded shells from WW I still litter the soil near Verdun, while millions more await discovery in the battle zone along the Marne and Somme Rivers near Verdun. Millions more undiscovered shells remain embedded in the beaches of Normandy and Brittany as do sea-mines off shore.[4155] Sometimes, unexploded ordnance from the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 are unearthed. Some shells do not explode, they merely discharge lethal gas.[4156]

The Khe Sanh battlefield continued to kill. According to Vietnamese officials, since 1975 (the year they give for the end of the war), "at least 5,000 people have been killed or maimed at Khe Sanh.." due to unexploded ordnance.[4157] The article noted that 2 people were killed in less than a year according to Cao Thi Tien. People stepped on mines or detonated shells while poking in the ground with wire rods to locate American dog tags, helmets, flak jackets, shell casings and weapons, spent bullets, pieces of bomb-pierced steel plating that covered the airstrip, barbed wire, and tank treads, all selling for about 2 cents a kilogram [2.2 pounds] for steel and more for aluminum or brass.[4158] Most of the victims are impoverished local farmers searching for whatever they can salvage. Once pocked with craters of exploding ordnance, the barren Khe Sanh landscape soon became laced and pocked with countless freshly dug holes.[4159] One scrap metal dealer in Khe Sanh village included in his inventory: defused 500-pound bombs, artillery shell casings, mortar rounds, tank treads, barbed wire, and oil drums."[4160]

An article in the New York Times reported: "A quarter century has passed since one of the most costly battles of the Vietnam War raged across the desolate Khe Sanh plateau, but this old battlefield.. is still filling hospital beds with fresh victims."[4161] The article notes the immense amount of ordnance used in the 1968 siege battle: "In the battle American forces rained 100,000 tons of bombs (equivalent in destructive force to five Hiroshima-sized atomic bombs) and 158,000 large-caliber shells on the hills surrounding the base, killing an estimated 15,000 Communist soldiers."[4162] Many of these were duds which remain alive, still killing farmers and others who, using a metal detector imported from Thailand, "..easily find enough metal around Khe Sanh to make a living," but the results are deadly.]

[4153] Webster, Donovan, Aftermath, The Remnants of War, New York: Pantheon Books, 1996, pp. 12-13.
[4154] Ibid., p. 15.
[4155] Ibid., p. 18.
[4156] Ibid., pp. 22-23.
[4157] Steve Raymer, (National Geographic News Service), "The Ghosts of Khe Sanh," Richmond Times-Dispatch, Fri, 29 Oct 1993, p. 1.
[4158] Ibid.
[4159] Bob Drogin, "The Debris of War Still Kills, Maims," The Milwaukee Journal, Sun, 21 Feb 1993, p. J6.
[4160] Ibid.
[4161] Malcolm W. Browne, "Battlefields of Khe Sanh: Still One Casualty a Day," New York Times 98:49, #695 (Fri, 13 May 1994) 1.
[4162] Ibid.

ALPHABETICAL LISTING OF KHE SANH KIA

In the following alphabetical listing of KIA, the date is Year/Month/Date and "Wall" refers to the panel and line in the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
ABERNETHY, Reginald Joe	PFC	710322	C/3-187	4W 65
ABEYTA, Ernest	PFC	690601	G/2/9	23W 34
ABOLINS, Janis	PFC	690104	C/1/4	35W 32
ACALOTTO, Robert Joseph	SSGT	710220	48 AHC	5W 122
ACKERMAN, Rex William	PFC	690419	I/3/4	26W 5
ACUNIA, Edgar	LCPL	690306	A/1/4	30W 51
ADAME, Gilbert Jimmie	PFC	680407	2/26	48E 38
ADAMS, Edward Cody	SWF2	680416	CBMU301 DetB	50E 10
ADAMS, Lee Scott	2/Lt	680406	B/2-7	48E 26
ADDICE, Frank Paul	HN	680411	MAG-36	49E 18
ADDINGTON, Zach Taylor	LCPL	680516	M/3/4	61E 7
ADKINS, John	CPL	680407	A/2-7	48E 38
AGUIRRE, Carlos Cruz	CPL	680224	E/2/26	41E 6
AHLMEYER, Heinz Jr	2/Lt	670510	A/3dRecon	19E 77
AHRENS, Russell George	SP5	710318	571 Med	4W 57
AKINS, Ronald Paul	LCPL	680225	B/1/26	41E 15
ALDRICH, David Alan	CPL	680330	B/1/26	47E 7
ALDRIDGE, Herbert Ray	PFC	680306	B/1/26	43E 12
ALENCASTRE, Anthony Albert	PVT	680414	L/3/26	49E 50
ALFANO, Rodney Arthur	1/Lt	680202	37 Sig Bn	36E 64
ALLARD, Paul Edward	PFC	690419	E/2/3	26W 7
ALLEN, Charles David Jr	CAPT	710316	B/4-77	4W 53
ALLEN, Dale Charles	2/Lt	670627	I/3/26	22E 67
ALLEN, Eddie Hugh	PFC	680527	M/3/4	65W 3
ALLEN, Herbert Marshall	SGT	680619	H&S/1/1	57W 31
ALLEN, Kenneth Jeffrey	PFC	680208	A/1/13	38E 22
ALLEN, Paul James	CPL	680411	VMO-6	49E 18
ALLEN, Richard James	PFC	680517	H/2/1	61E 22
ALLEN, Robert Christian	LCPL	680531	B/1/1	62W 12
ALLEN, Terry Lee	CPL	680509	H/2/4	58W 5
ALLERBY, Milton Richard	HN	680611	A/1/4	58W 21
ALMEIDA, Richard Henry	LCPL	670503	E/2/3	19E 20
ALMON, William Russell	PFC	680730	G/2/4	50W 33
ALMONEY, John Stanley	CPL	670503	E/2/3	19E 20
AMESCUA, Steven Epefanio	PFC	680515	L/3/4	60E 18
AMMON, William Resor	1/Lt	680416	M/3/26	50E 10
ANDERS, Richard Alan	PFC	680414	B/1-5	49E 50
ANDERSON, Charles Richard	1/Lt	710303	A/158 AHB	4W 18
ANDERSON, David Bruce	PFC	680330	B/1/26	47E 7
ANDERSON, David George	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 24
ANDERSON, James (n)	PFC	670503	E/2/3	19E 21
ANDERSON, James Theodore	PFC	690313	M/3/4	29W 27
ANDERSON, John Louis	2/Lt	690721	M/3/3	23E 97
ANDERSON, Michael Francis	LCPL	680524	G/2/3	67E 4
ANDRUS, Daniel Francis	LCPL	680611	A/1/4	58W 21
ANGEL, Michael Eugene	PFC	690303	C/1/4	30W 18
ANSELMO, William Frank	SSGT	680306	APS-15	30W 62
ANTOINE, Dennis Lloyd	CPL	670721	M/3/3	23E 97
ANTONACE, John Jr.	LCPL	680707	C/1/1	53W 31

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
ANTRIM, Tommy Edward	SGT	680208	A/1/13	38E 20
APONTE, Edwin	LCPL	670430	K/3/9	18E 117
APPLETON, John Burdette	LCPL	670430	K/3/9	18E 117
ARD, Bobby Joe	CPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 118
ARD, Randolph Jefferson	WO-1	710307	HHC, 1-5	4W 30
ARMENTROUT, Raymond Lee	SSG	710223	D/3-5	5W 131
ARROYO, Ramon Jaime	PFC	690307	H/2/3	30W 62
ARTHUR, Lawrence Kenneth	PFC	680528	F/2/3	64W 4
ASHLEY, Eugene Jr	SFC	680207	A-101 USSF	37E 77
AVERITTE, William Clayton	CPL	680416	D/1/9	50E 11
AYERS, Douglas Edward	SGT	710324	C/4-3	4W 72
AYERS, Leslie Steven	LCPL	680208	A/1/13	38E 20
BABCOCK, Ronald Lester	1/Lt	710227	B/7-1	4W 8
BACON, William Ivory Tenny	SSGT	670629	H&S/3/26	22E 82
BACOTE, Moses June	LCPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 4
BADER, Arthur Edward	SFC	681130	FOB-1	37W 9
BAER, Max Irwin	LCPL	690320	D/1/4	29W 86
BAILEY, Joseph Thomas	LCPL	680219	C/1/26	40E 17
BAKER, Bernard Geraqld	LCPL	680806	G/2/4	49W 18
BAKER, Donald	LCPL	680609	F/2/1	58W 6
BAKER, Richard Thomas	SSG	710218	HMH-463	5W 114
BAKER, Robert Nelson	SFC	680221	FOB-3	40E 51
BAKER, Steven Dewitt	CPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 5
BAKER, Tony Anderson	PFC	680705	K/3/4	53W 15
BALADES, David Zavala	PFC	680228	A/3d ShoreP	41E 58
BALDWIN, Clarence Jay	PFC	680524	G/2/3	67E 5
BALKIT, Donald	PFC	680425	G/2/3	52E 2
BALL, Robert Lee	PFC	680618	K/3/4	56W 17
BANEY, Charles Lynn	SGT	671015	109 QmCo	28E 11
BAPTISTE, Michael Bradford	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 15
BARBER, Ronald Lee	LCPL	670424	B/1/9	18E 79
BARBOUR, James Wesley	PFC	680605	C/1/4	60W 15
BARDET, Raymond Frederick	PFC	680528	B/3d Tk	56W 17
BARKER, Jack Lamar	MAJ	710320	B/101	4W 59
BARMMER, Timothy Michael	LCPL	680130	B/3d Recon	35E 65
BARNES, Donald Joseph	EOCS	670606	NMCB-10	21E 60
BARNITZ, Douglas Wanner	LCPL	690604	D/3d Recon	23W 61
BARRETT, Michael Barry	HN	680208	H&S/1/9	38E 20
BARRINGER, Ardrey Watts Jr	PVT	680609	F/2/4	58W 6
BARRON, Jeffrey Michael	CPL	690225	B Btry/3/12	31W 42
BARROW, Thomas Melvin Jr	PFC	670426	K/3/3	18E 90
BARROWS, Irving Donald	PFC	680421	E/2/1	51E 16
BARRY, George Francis Jr.	WO	700523	A-158 AHB	10W 83
BARTH, Wayne Robert	LCPL	670424	B/1/9	18E 78
BARTON, James Eugene	SP5	710223	173 AHC	5W 132
BATCHELOR, John Elsey Jr.	LCPL	690407	F/2/4	27W 28
BATES, Paul Jennings Jr	CAPT	710810	220 RAC	3W 127
BATTLE, Joseph Chriss	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 15
BATTLE, Ronald Kenneth	CPL	690320	H&S/3/4	29W 86
BATTLE, William Alfred	LCPL	680707	H&S/1/1	53W 32
BAUCHERIO, Harold	LCPL	670820	HMM-164	25E 18

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
BAUER, Daryl Charles	PFC	690311	H&S/2/4	29W 4
BAUER, Karol Raymond	SSGT	670430	M/3/3	18E 118
BAXTER, Bruce Raymond	MSGT	671108	FOB-1	29E 47
BAXTER, Roger Bruce	WO	700506	C/158 AMB	11W 108
BAXTER, Terry Lee	SP5	680404	HHC, 3 Bde	47E 58
BAYES, Thomas Joseph	PFC	680407	G/2/26	48E 38
BEACH, Sam Festis Jr.	CAPT	680117	20th TASS	34E 61
BEALE, George Eugene	PFC	680306	2/26	43E 13
BEAN, Donald Wayne	SGTMAJ	680311	H&S/1/26	44E 13
BEAN, Richard Raymond	LCPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 77
BEAN, Stephen Louis	PFC	680524	G/2/3	67E 4
BEASLEY, Luzon	CPL	680330	H&S/1/9	47E 8
BEAUFORD, Willis Jr	PFC	680306	B/1/26	43E 13
BECK, John Theron	PVT	680224	C/1/9	41E 6
BECK, Norman Elmer	PFC	690323	D/1/3	6E 56
BECKWITH, William Arnold	LCPL	680704	3/4	53W 11
BECKWTH, Harry Medfor III	SSGT	710324	D/3-5	4W 72
BEDDOE, Paul Melvin Jr	PFC	680121	B/3d Recon	35E 2
BEECK, Ronald Marvin	SP4	680406	D/1-5	48E 23
BELCHER, Robert Arthur	MAJ	690328	366 TFW	28W 65
BELCHER, Robert Winslow	CPL	680411	H&S/3/26	49E 19
BELL, Marvin Earl	SSGT	700630	40 ARRS	9W 102
BELL, Ronald Eugene	PFC	680609	58W 6	58W 6
BELLAMY, Paul Robert	PVT	680121	K/3/26	35E 2
BELLER, William Russell Jr	PFC	670430	K/3/9	18E 118
BENGE, Larry Wayne	LCPL	680301	H&S/1/9	42E 15
BENIGNI, Alfredo	CPL	680228	HMM-262	41E 59
BENITEZ, Rafael Rivera	PSGT	710208	C/1-61	5W 86
BENNETT, George Willy Jr	CPL	700506	A/2-501	11W 108
BENNETT, James Harrell Jr.	CAPT	671030	20 TASS	28E 100
BENNETT, Richard Royce	SGT	690502	F/2/4	26W 96
BENOIT, Francis Arthur	HM3	670316	E/2/9	16E 88
BENSON, Robert John	PFC	680406	B/2-7	48E 23
BERDAHL, David Donald	PFC	720120	D/3-5	2W 98
BERG, Bruce Allen	SGT	710807	RT KANSAS	3W 125
BERG, George Phillip	CWO	710218	A/101AvBn	5W 114
BERGENSTEIN, Dennis Paul	CPL	670503	E/2/3	19E 21
BERGER, John Edward	PFC	680227	B/1/26	41E 48
BERNARD, Donald Lee	PFC	670426	B/1/9	18E 90
BERNESKI, Lawrence Augusti	A1C	671015	314 TAW	28E 13
BERTRAM, David Michael	PFC	680615	L/3/4	57W 22
BESSENT, Samuel Alonzo	SP4	690425	A/1-77	26W 46
BETTENCOURT, Daniel Stephen	CPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 69
BETTS, Albert Leon	SP5	680202	362 Sig Co	36E 65
BIEHL, Garry Ladd	LCPL	670503	E/2/3	19E 21
BIERLEIN, Patrick M R	PFC	680412	A/1/26	49E 28
BILBREY, Edmond David	CAPT	710311	48 AHC	4W 36
BILLINGHAM, Frederick A Jr	LCPL	680225	B/1/26	41E 16
BILLIPP, Norman Karl	1/Lt	690506	VMO-6	25W 9
BINGHAM, Oran Lothier	SSG	710807	RT KANSAS	3W 125
BIRCH, Thomas H	CPL	680223	A/1/26	40E 72

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA
NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
BIRD, Leonard Adrian	1/Lt	680713	VMFA-115	52W 21
BIVENS, Frederick Wood Jr	CPL	670430	H/2/3	18E 118
BIXBY, Thomas Eugene	PFC	680327	B/1/26	46E 44
BJORKE, Erle Lawrence	CAPT	671015	314 TAW	28E 7
BLAZ, James Lujan	LCPL	670607	B/1/26	21E 65
BLOOM, Ronald Norman	SGT	680802	E/2/4	50E 48
BOBO, Charles Glen	SGT	710208	C-158 AHB	5W 86
BODA, James Albert	LCPL	670429	G/2/3	18E 112
BODDEN, Timothy Roy	MSGT	670603	HMM-165	21E 42
BODZICK, William Joseph	SP4	661202	17th Avn Grp	13E 2
BOFFMAN, Alan Brent	1/Lt	710318	101 AD	4W 57
BOGARD, Jack Crosby	PFC	680205	E/2/26	37E 31
BOICOURT, Jess Burton Jr.	CPL	680311	H&S/1/9	44E 14
BOLGER, Lawrence Joseph	2/Lt	670627	A/1/26	22E 68
BOND, Ronald Leslie	CAPT	710930	366 TFW	2W 31
BOND, Theodore Charles	LCPL	680616	F/2/1	56W 1
BORDUAS, Raymond Arthur	PFC	680604	G/2/4	60W 8
BORRELL, Clifford Glenn	PFC	680224	E/2/26	41E 7
BOSHEERS, James Larry	LCPL	680501	K/3/4	53E 27
BOTT, Russell Peter	MSGT	661202	Det B-52	13E 3
BOULE, Thomas Michael	PFC	690404	E/2/3	27W 8
BOURDEAUX, Lee Joseph Jr.	SP4	661202	17th Avn Grp	13E 3
BOWEN, Grover	PFC	690921	K/3/4	18W 119
BOWERS, James David	CPL	680524	G/2/3	67E 5
BOWLIN, Paul Madison	LCPL	690608	E/3d Recon	23W 109
BOYD, Wayne	PFC	680403	C/2-7	47E 46
BOYE, Henry Joseph Jr	PFC	680531	B/1/1	62W 5
BOYER, Alan Lee	SFC	680328	FOB-4	46E 52
BOYER, Charles Goodhue	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 14
BOYER, Michael David	PFC	690618	C/1/9	22W 72
BOYNTON, Charles B Jr.	HM3	680416	H&S/1/9	50E 11
BRACK, David Allan	PFC	690601	G/2/9	23W 35
BRADLEY, Kenneth Robert	CPL	680228	HMM-262	41E 59
BRADY, John James	2/Lt	680403	C/2-7	47E 46
BRAKE, Boyd Lawerence	LCPL	690305	C/1/4	30W 41
BRANAM, Ronnie Franklin	SGT	680410	A/2-7	49E 8
BRANDT, Keith Allan	CAPT	710318	D/101	4W 57
BRANNAN, James Curtis	SFC	690331	D/1-77	28E 96
BRANNON, James Edward	PFC	690325	A/1/4	28W 33
BRAUN, Harry Walker Jr.	PFC	680519	F/2/1	63E 5
BRAZIER, John Kenneth	SSGT	680606	C/1/4	60W 25
BRELLENTHIN, Michael J	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 17
BRENKE, Frederick Joseph	PFC	670627	L/3/26	22E 72
BRENNEMAN, Richard Eugene	CPL	690326	G/2/3	28W 44
BRERETON, Raymond James	PFC	680226	H&S/1/9	41E 35
BRETT, Robert R	LTJG(ChC)	680222	H&S/2/26	40E 58
BREUER, Donald Charles	CAPT	721120	VMFA-232	1W 91
BREWER, Don Raylan	PFC	690313	M/3/4	29W 27
BRIDGES, Ernest Larry	SGT	680404	C/1/9	47E 59
BRIGGS, Ernest Frank	SFC	680105	176 Avn Co	33E 41
BRIGNAC, Joseph Paul	CPL	680306	B/1/26	43E 14

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
BRINDLEY, Thomas Drew	2/Lt	680120	I/3/26	34E 83
BRITT, Ted Dennis	PFC	680330	B/1/26	47E 14
BRITTIAN, Charles Henry	CPL	690605	H/2/9	23W 78
BROGAN, Robert Henry	PFC	690225	H&S/2/4	31W 43
BROTZ, Danny Ray	LCPL	670430	K/3/9	18E 118
BROUGHTON, Robert Ballard	PVT	690605	H/2/9	23W 70
BROWER, Ralph Wayne	CAPT	671108	37th ARRS	29E 51
BROWN, David Dee Jr.	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 12
BROWN, Dennis Lee	LCPL	680629	G/2/1	54W 14
BROWN, George R	SGT	680328	FOB-4	46E 53
BROWN, Gerald Bernard	PFC	690605	H/2/9	23W 71
BROWN, Joseph "L" Jr.	PVT	680606	D/1/4	60W 26
BROWN, Joseph Gordon	CWO	710218	48 AHC	5W 115
BROWN, Marcus Jr.	LCPL	670828	C/1/26	25E 55
BROWN, Richard Samuel	CPL	680705	G/2/1	53W 16
BROWN, Theodore Jr.	PFC	680121	K/3/26	35E 3
BROWN, Vaughn Lee	PFC	680708	C/1/1	53W 42
BROWN, Wilbur Ronald	CAPT	660203	311 ACS	4E 134
BROWN, William Franklin	PFC	680406	D/1-5	48E 24
BROWN, William Leo	SSGT	680210	H&HS-1	38E 65
BROWN, William Theodore	SFC	691103	CNN	16W 22
BRUDER, James Robert	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 17
BRUIN, John William	SP4	710223	173 AHC	5W 132
BRYAN, Charles William	CPL	680120	B/3d Recon	39E 83
BRYANT, James Roy	PFC	680223	K/3/26	40E 72
BUCIOR, Andrew Zbigniew	CPL	680405	C/1/9	48E 15
BUCK, William Andrew Jr	CPL	690604	D/3d Recon	23W 61
BUFFINGTON, Fred	LCPL	680630	I/3/4	54W 25
BUGGER, Curtis Burke	PFC	680121	W/1/13	35E 3
BUMSTEAD, Donald Royce	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 15
BUNGARTZ, Frederick William	PFC	680214	K/3/9	39E 29
BUONO, Matthew Joseph	PFC	680404	B/1-77	47E 59
BURCH, Steven Ralph	WO	710305	174 AHC	4W 23
BURDICK, William F Jr.	PFC	680609	C/1/4	58W 6
BURGARD, Paul Edward	PFC	680606	C/1/4	60W 26
BURGESS, Alex Leroy	LCPL	680219	H&S/3/26	40E 18
BURGESS, Ruben Anthony	PFC	680223	B/1/9	40E 73
BURGESS, Russell David	PFC	680426	F/2/3	52E 15
BURGORFER, Stephen Walter	SP5	710306	C/1-1	4W 27
BURKE, John Roland	CPL	670606	H&S/1/26	21E 60
BURKE, Joseph Scott	WO	710215	B/2-17	5W 105
BURKES, Bruce Wayne	PFC	680606	C/1/1	60W 15
BURKHEAD, Jerry Clark	CPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 22
BURLESON, Michael Finnie	LCPL	680519	F/2/1	63E 6
BURNETT, Sheldon John	LTCOL	710307	HHT, 1-1 Cav	4W 31
BURNHAM, Joseph Francis	PFC	680519	F/2/1	63E 6
BURNLEY, Earl Rosemond Jr.	HM3	680516	M/3/4	61E 6
BURNS, Victor L	LCPL	670627	A/1/26	22E 68
BURROWS, Larry	Civilian	710210	Life Magazine	not on
BURTON, Horace Lee	SP4	710306	C/1-1	4W 27
BUSH, Paul William	1/Lt	680322	C/1/26	45E 54

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
BUTLER, Larry Wayne	LCPL	670426	K/3/3	18E 91
BUTTENBAUM, Gary Richard	PFC	670509	F/2/3	19E 69
BYARS, Steve Eugene	LCPL	690323	D/1/4	28W 17
BYNUM, Franklin Delano	CAPT	670627	L/3/26	22E 78
BYRD, George Benjamin Jr.	PFC	670430	M/3/3	18E 119
BYRNES, Robert Howard	CPL	680515	K/3/4	60E 20
CAHILL, Edwin Lewis	HM1	680609	F/2/1	58W 7
CALDWELL, Robert Edward	CPL	680228	H&S/3/26	41E 60
CALHOUN, Edwin Gerald	SGT	710325	B/3-5	4W 76
CALHOUN, Franchot Tone	PFC	680524	G/2/3	67E 5
CALVIN, Glenn Henry	SSGT	680210	E/2/26	38E 65
CAMPBELL, Thomas Francis	PFC	680409	A/1/9	48E 56
CAMPESTRE, Albert John	PFC	680517	E/2/1	62E 1
CARACCILO, Anthony Joseph Jr.	CPL	710219	3/D/1-11	5W 120
CARBAUGH, Woodrow Franklin	SGT	680605	C/1/4	60W 15
CARMICHAEL, Dale Eugene	PFC	670425	K/3/3	18E 83
CARNEY, Tyrone Edward	PFC	680617	H/2/4	56W 12
CARPENTER, James Alvin	PFC	690314	M/3/4	29W 37
CARR, Robert George	PFC	690618	C/1/9	22W 73
CARROLL, Fergus Joseph	CPL	680618	K/3/4	56W 18
CARSON, John Harvey	1/Lt	680605	D/1/4	60W 16
CARTER, Anderson Jr.	PFC	670502	G/2/3	19E 10
CARTER, Jack David	PFC	690325	A/1/4	28W 34
CARTER, James Basil	PFC	710216	D/4-3	5W 110
CARTER, James Louis	LTCOL	660203	311 ACS	4E 134
CARTER, John Lewis	LCPL	680703	D/1/1	54W 42
CARTER, Ralph Winfield	PFC	670424	B/1/9	18E 78
CASARES, Manuel	PFC	680606	D/1/4	60W 26
CASAREZ, Raul	PFC	670424	B/1/9	18E 78
CASSELL, Kevin Ray	PFC	680421	H/2/3	51E 21
CASTELOT, Robert Sheehan	PFC	680611	A/1/4	58W 22
CASTILLO, George Ralph	CPL	680124	L/3/26	35E 20
CASTILLO, Jose	SGT	670721	H&S/1/26	23E 97
CASTRO-RAMOS, Justino Enri	LCPL	670424	B/1/9	18E 78
CATLIN, Norman Richard	PVT	670316	E/2/9	16E 89
CAUDILLO, Pedro Jaime	WO-1	680519	3d ITT	63E 6
CAVAZOS, Ronald Thomas	PFC	680404	H&S/1/9	48E 1
CECIL, Alan Bruce	SP5	690921	CCN	18W 119
CERVANTES, George Andrew	LCPL	670430	K/3/9	18E 119
CHABERT, Gary August	PFC	680421	G/2/3	51E 17
CHAMBERS, David Wayne	PFC	680403	A/2-7	47E 47
CHAMBERS, John Luther	SP4	680404	A/1-5	48E 1
CHAMBLIN, Donald Ray Jr.	SGT	680308	1/13	43E 52
CHANEY, Arthur Fletcher	WO-1	680503	A/1-9	54E 24
CHANEY, Donald Lee	SFC	680117	FOB-3	34E 62
CHAPP, Robert Anthony	SGT	670414	B/1/9	18E 25
CHARLES, Edward William	LCPL	690618	C/1/9	22W 73
CHASE, John Joseph	LCPL	670607	B/1/26	21E 65
CHAVEZ, Gregory Anton	SP4	700506	A/2-501	11W 110
CHEARNLEY, Joseph Michael	PFC	680609	H/2/4	58W 7
CHEEKS, John Herbert	CPL	670428	B/1/9	18E 110

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
CHERVONY, Eddie Edwin	SGT	680505	A/1-77	55E 6
CHILDRESS, Lewis Clayton	CPL	671116	FLC Air Del	29E 104
CHIN, Alexander Scheleph	PFC	680222	H&S/2/26	40E 58
CHISHOLM, James	PFC	680223	H&S/1/26	40E 73
CHRISTIAN, Daniel Keith	LCPL	680416	A/1/9	50E 12
CHRISTIAN, Thomas Barry	LCPL	680806	G/2/4	49W 19
CHRISTMAN, Ronald S J	LCPL	680228	HMM-262	41E 60
CHUBB, John Jacobsen	PFC	710320	B/101	4W 60
CHUBB, Richard Charles	PFC	690314	M/3/4	29W 36
CHUTIS, John Vincent	SSGT	670430	M/3/3	18E 119
CICIO, Robert Daniel	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 12
CINCOTTA, Thomas Antone	PFC	690628	L/3/9	21W 27
CLAIRE, Kenneth William	CPL	680225	B/1/26	41E 18
CLARK, Jimmy Ray	CPL	680504	A/1-77	54E 31
CLARK, John Howard Jr.	LCPL	680306	2/26	43E 15
CLARK, Thomas Osborn	HM3	670721	M/3/3	23E 97
CLARKE, James Phillip	PFC	680418	G/2/3	50E 37
CLAY, Doyle Gregory	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 18
CLAY, Eugene Lunsford	SSGT	671108	37th ARRS	29E 57
CLAY, Ralph Wayne	CAPT	671108	37th ARRS	29E 56
CLAYBORNE, Milton Gay	LCPL	680516	M/3/4	61E 5
CLAYTON, Michael Marshall	LCPL	680420	A/1/1	51E 6
CLEAVE, Lonnie Leonard	PFC	680605	C/1/1	60W 16
CLEMENCIA, Jean Roger Jr.	LCPL	690311	G/2/4	29W 5
CLEMSON, Gerald Richard	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 23
CLEVE, Reginald David	WO	710322	176 AHC	4W 66
CLIFTON, Layne Farell	PFC	670509	F/2/3	19E 70
COBB, James Paul	SGT	710215	B/2-17	5W 105
COCHRAN, James Clifford	PFC	680414	B/1-5	49E 51
COFFEY, Robert Allen	PFC	690225	E/2/4	31W 45
COHRON, James Derwin	SFC	680112	FOB-3	34E 35
COKER, David Langston Jr.	CAPT	710324	D/3-5	4W 72
COLEGATE, William Karl	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 23
COLEMAN, John Lee	PFC	680421	G/2/3	51E 17
COLEMAN, Lynn Bailey	PFC	680519	F/2/1	63E 6
COLEMAN, Michael John	LCPL	680127	B/1/9	35E 44
COLEMAN, Richard Freeman	PFC	670721	M/3/3	23E 98
COLEMAN, William Frank	PFC	680416	D/1/26	50E 12
COLES, Kyle "J"	LCPL	680228	H&MS-36	41E 61
COLLINS, James Alfred	PFC	680120	I/3/26	34E 84
COMBS, Lowell Thomas	CPL	680214	K/3/9	39E 30
CONCANNON, Richard Neil	CWO	710215	B/2-17	5W 105
CONLIN, Jeffrey Francis	SGT	680306	311 ACS	43E 16
CONNELL, Edwin Douglas	SGT	680408	F/2/26	48E 52
CONNELL,. Vaughn David	WO	690320	B/101	29W 87
CONNOR, Glenn Marshall	PFC	680508	F/2/1	56E 36
CONSOLVO, John Wadswort Jr	CAPT	720507	VMFA-212	1W 14
CONTRERAS, John Jenaro	PVT	680121	H&S/3/26	35E 4
COOK, Ronald John	HN	680524	H&S/2/3	67E 7
COOL, Mark Douglas	CPL	680302	H&S/1/26	42E 28
COOLEY, Ocie Daniel	PFC	670721	M/3/3	23E 98

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
COOPER, Donald Nathaniel	CPL	680228	HMM-262	41E 62
COOPER, James William	PFC	680519	F/2/1	63E 7
CORBIN, Russell B Jr	LCPL	680207	B/1/26	37E 81
CORCORAN, Richard Francis	CAPT	680607	HqCo 3dMarDiv	59W 20
CORLEY, Thomas Eugene	LCPL	680206	C/1/26	37E 52
CORNELL, Robert Leslie	PFC	670430	H/2/3	18E 120
CORRY, Charles Michael	SP5	680415	FOB-3	50E 3
COTTRELL, Darrell Wayne	LCPL	680504	G/2/1	54E 32
COTTRELL, Thomas Lee	LCPL	680122	B/1/26	35E 11
COURTNEY, Allen Wesley Jr	1/Lt	680517	A/1/1	62E 1
COX, Gary Allen	LCPL	690605	H/2/9	23W 71
COX, William Gayle	SGT	710329	C/3-5	4W 91
CRAIG, Bruce Keith	PFC	680416	A/1/9	50E 11
CRAIG, Thomas R Jr	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 24
CRAMER, David Arthur	PFC	680222	H/2/26	40E 59
CRANDALL, Gregory Stephen	WO	710218	C/2-17	5W 115
CRANEY, Leslie Lee	PFC	680403	F/2/1	47E 48
CRASE, Lionel Russell	LCPL	680407	H&S/2/26	48E 40
CRAUN, Gale Eugene	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 13
CREAR, Willis Calvin	SP4	710215	C/159 ASHB	5W 105
CRENSHAW, William Anderson	CAPT	670504	A-101 USSF	19E 36
CRICKENBERGER, Richard Way	PFC	680526	A/3d Eng	66W 4
CRISTMAN, Frederick Lewis	CWO	710319	48 AHC	4W 58
CRITCHFIELD, Reece A Jr	PFC	680121	I/3/26	35E 4
CRONE, Donald Everett	SP4	710215	C/159 ASHB	5W 106
CRONE, Gary Lee	SSG	680129	FOB-3	35E 58
CROOKS, Ronald Lee	CPL	670607	B/1/26	21E 66
CROSBY, Bruce Allen Jr.	SGT	720330	8th RFFS	2W 125
CROWDER, Harold Edward	PFC	690303	L/3/4	30W 21
CROWELL, Arthur Albert	CPL	680526	D/1/1	66W 4
CRUITT, Michael Douglas	PFC	680121	K/3/26	35E 4
CRUSE, James Dale	HN	680615	M/3/4	57W 24
CRUZ, Frank	LCPL	690618	C/1/9	22W 74
CUNNINGHAM, Bruce Edward	PFC	680208	C/1/26	38E 24
CUNNINGHAM, William L	PFC	680301	D/1/9	42E 14
CURRY, Roy Jerry	SP4	690618	B/1-61	22W 74
CUTBIRTH, Kendell Dwayne	SSGT	670225	B/1/9	15E 89
CUTBIRTH, Richard Eugene	LCPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 7
CUTRI, Michael John	LCPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 7
CZARNY, William Eugene	LCPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 71
DABREU, Daniel John	PFC	680604	F/2/4	60W 8
D'ADAMO, John Jr	MSGT	680210	VMGR-152	38E 66
DAGNER, Carl Richard	CPL	680517	I/3/4	62E 2
DALEY, Michael James	PFC	670316	E/2/9	16E 89
DALTON, Bill Norman	PFC	680208	A/1/13	38E 24
DAMIAN, Allan James	LCPL	670627	A/1/26	22E 69
DANAY, Jerry Lee	PFC	710312	3/C/1-11	4W 40
DANBERRY, Charles Labaw	PFC	680523	K/3/4	66E 8
DARDEN, Larry Euel	LCPL	680401	E/2/3	47E 31
DARNELL, Dana Cornell	LCPL	670426	B/1/9	18E 91
DAUGHERTY, James	LCPL	680509	H&S/2/1	57E 13

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
DAVENPORT, John Sanford	PFC	690428	A/1-61	26W 69
DAVID, Jeffrey Jay	LCPL	670627	I/3/26	22E 69
DAVIDSON, Dennis Robert	PFC	680411	A/3d Tk	49E 20
DAVILA, Jose	PFC	680524	G/2/3	67E 7
DAVIS, Charles Cecil	PFC	670503	E/2/3	19E 23
DAVIS, Clifford Gordon	CPL	670430	H/2/3	18E 120
DAVIS, David Lee	PFC	690320	H&S/1/4	29W 87
DAVIS, Duane Ross	PFC	690412	H&S/2/4	27W 62
DAVIS, Gary Ray	PFC	680518	H/2/3	62E 16
DAVIS, John Clinton	SP4	690428	A/1-61	26W 69
DAVIS, Kenneth	HM2	690225	3/12	31W 45
DAVIS, Randall Mark	PFC	680604	K/3/4	60W 11
DAY, Douglas Wayne	CPL	700506	A/2-501	11W 110
DE WILDE, Peter F. Jr.	PFC	690305	C/3rd Recon	30W 43
DEAN, Michael Frank	SSGT	700630	40 ARRS	9W 103
DEARING, Jerry Wayne	PFC	680126	H&S/3/26	35E 37
DEGNIS, James Edward	PVT	680618	H&S/3/4	56W 19
DEHNKE, Dale Willard	SGT	710518	TF1AE	3W 39
DELANEY, John Patrick III	CPL	680730	G/2/4	50W 34
DELANO, Jimmy Lynn	LCPL	680313	SptCo/3dEng	44E 34
DELAPLANE, James Charles	HN	680417	H&S/2/26	50E 27
DELGADO, Raymond Rodriguez	LCPL	690301	C/1/4	30W 1
DELISLE, Rodney Jerome	PFC	690706	F/2/4	21W 69
DEMARCO, Michael Gregory	LCPL	680411	VMO-6	49E 20
DEMPSEY, Ronald Lee	CPL	680228	B/1/13	41E 63
DEMPSEY, Walter Edward Jr.	SP4	710218	A/101	5W 115
DENNING, Dwight Thomas	PFC	680126	A/1/26	35E 38
DENNIS, Paul Leslie	LCPL	680425	D/1/1	52E 4
DENTON, Robert Anthony	SSG	700506	A/2-501	11W 110
DES LAURIERS, Philip Gene	LCPL	690809	F/2/4	20W 117
DEVIK, David Ralf	LCPL	680210	VMGR-152	38E 66
DEWBERRY, Jerry Don	LCPL	680705	D/1/1	53W 17
DEXTER, Ronald James	SGM	670603	FOB-1	31E 43
DI GENNO, Michael	LCPL	690311	2/4	29W 6
DIAZ, Francisco	PFC	680515	F/2/3	60E 21
DICESARE, Anthony Jr	CPL	670627	I/3/26	22E 69
DICKEN, Perry	LCPL	680411	E/2/1	49E 20
DICKENS, Odell	PFC	690225	H&S/2/4	31W 46
DICKERSON, Bernard W Jr.	CPL	680611	A/1/4	58W 24
DICKIE, Guy Douglas	PVT	680208	A/1/9	38E 25
DICKSON, Eric Voughn	LCPL	680531	B/1/1	62W 8
DIEHL, Harry G	PSGT	690618	B/1-61	22W 75
DIEUDONNE, Carroll Stephen	PFC	680705	K/3/4	53W 21
DILLENDER, William Edward	SGT	710320	B/101	4W 60
DILWORTH, Arthur William	LCPL	680705	D/1/1	53W 18
DISCEPOLO, Anthony Albert	LCPL	680524	G/2/3	68E 1
DISTEFANO, Ferdinando	2/Lt	680224	E/2/26	41E 8
DIXON, Morris Franklin Jr	CPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 70
DODD, James William	CPL	680429	D/1/1	53E 1
DODSON, Jerry Lee	LCPL	680225	B/1/26	41E 19
DODSON, Robert Gerald	1/Lt	680707	C/1/1	53W 34

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
DOLAN, Thomas Albert	SSGT	710810	101 MI Co	3W 127
DOLAN, William John	PFC	680417	D/1/9	50E 35
DOLBY, Melvin Lester	PFC	680407	F/2/26	48E 40
DOLVIN, James Richard	SGT	690618	B/1-61	22W 75
DONOVAN, Michael Leo	CAPT	710930	366 TFW	2W 31
DOODY, Thomas Patrick	WO-1	710208	C-158 AHB	5W 87
DOOLEY, Robert Ellis	PFC	680222	M/3/26	40E 61
DOORNBOS, Don Michael	CPL	680214	D/1/9	39E 31
DOUGLAS, Paul Melvyn	SSGT	680221	FOB-3	40E 52
DOWNING, William Kelly	CPL	670503	E/2/3	19E 24
DOWNS, Jack Dennis	PFC	680406	B/2-7	48E 25
DRAKE, Michael Leon	PFC	680528	F/2/3	64W 8
DRIGGERS, Arthur H. Jr.	PFC	670721	M/3/3	23E 99
DRUZINSKI, Karl Walter	CPL	710322	HHT/2-17	4W 65
DUGAN, John Francis	CAPT	710320	B/101	4W 60
DUNDAS, Jerry Richard	SGT	680505	A/1-77	55E 10
DUNLAP, Darrell Edward	PVT	680208	I/3/26	38E 26
DUSEAU, Richard Frank	PFC	690305	I/3/4	30W 43
DUTY, Charles Howard	PFC	670430	M/3/3	18E 120
DWYER, Matthew Murice Jr.	LCPL	680228	A/3d Eng	41E 63
DYE, Ralph Victor Jr.	CPL	670502	G/2/3	19E 12
DYE, Ronald Harvey	PFC	680802	E/2/4	50W 49
DYER, Irby III	SGT	661202	Det B-52	13E 4
EAKINS, Melvin Warren	LCPL	690502	HMM-262	26W 98
EARLY, William Dail	CPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 121
EASTON, David Everett	SP5	710311	HHC, 5th Inf	4W 38
EATON, Clifford Lyman	PFC	680605	C/1/4	60W 16
EBRIGHT, William Raymond O	CPL	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 1
ECHEVARIA, Raymond Louis	SGM	661003	FOB-1	11E 39
EDIE, Kurt Charles	HM3	670503	2/3	19E 24
EDMONDS, Arthur Lee Jr.	PFC	680213	H&S/2/26	39E 20
EDMONDS, Joseph J	LCPL	680414	L/3/26	49E 52
EDWARDS, Harry Jerome	SP4	720120	L/75 Inf	2W 98
EGGER, Walter Jacob	CAPT	680322	C/1/26	45E 55
EGLY, Shelly	PFC	670426	B/1/9	18E 92
EICHELBERGER, Barry Lee	PFC	690320	G/2/3	32W 97
ELDERS, Ernest Franklin	LCPL	690320	D/1/4	29W 88
ELIZONDO, David	SGT	710318	E/1-11	4W 58
ELLIOTT, George L III	PFC	680306	A/1/13	43E 17
ELLIOTT, Jerry W	SSGT	680121	282 AHC	35E 5
ELLIS, John Patrick	CAPT	680228	MABS-36	41E 64
ELLISON, Robert	Civilian	680306	Photographer	not on
EMMERT, Charles William	SP4	690618	B/1-61	22W 75
ENCLISH, Steve Craig	PFC	710212	A/4-3	5W 98
ENDERBY, Robert Francis	LCPL	670607	B/1/26	21E 66
ENGEN, Robert Joseph	SP4	710218	C/2-17	5W 115
ENIX, Jack Gene	LCPL	680606	D/1/4	59W 1
ENSIGN, Walter Lyman Jr	PFC	680518	E/3d Recon	62E 17
ENTRICAN, Danny Day	CAPT	710518	RT ALASKA	3W 39
ENZINNA, John Joseph	CPL	680324	A/1/9	46E 4
ERB, Patrick Douglas	MAJ	710315	3-187	4W 48

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
ERWIN, Richard Eugene	PFC	680411	H&S/3/26	49E 21
EVANS, Clifford Melvin	SGT	680609	B/3d Tk	58W 8
EVANS, Haydn	PFC	680531	E/2/3	62W 5
EVERETT, Bobby Joe	PFC	690820	H/2/4	19W 78
EWING, Lon Barry	PFC	680519	F/2/1	63E 18
EWING, Michael Lee	PVT	680611	C/1/12	58W 24
FAHRENBRUCH, Richard L	SGT	680403	D/2-7	47E 49
FALCONBURY, Earl Fern	PFC	690314	M/3/4	29W 36
FARRIS, Dennis Claude	I/Lt	710223	173 AHC	5W 135
FAULKNER, Elmer Lee Jr.	PFC	680618	A/3d Eng	56W 20
FEATHERSTONE, Richard H	PFC	680208	A/3d Shore P	38E 27
FEIT, Cristian Franz III	HN	680125	H&S/3/26	35E 31
FELLOWS, Allen Eugene	COL	680320	20th TASS	45E 39
FELLS, William Henry	SP4	710322	C/3-187	4W 65
FELTON, Melvin James	SGT	710209	C/8-4	5W 91
FERGUSON, David Charles	2/Lt	690305	C/3rd Recon	30W 45
FERGUSON, Ralph	CPL	680531	B/1/1	62W 8
FERNANDEZ, Dennis	PFC	680704	I/3/4	53W 9
FERRARI, Arnold Jay	SGT	680331	C/1/26	47E 21
FERREN, Jerry Wayne	LCPL	680301	VMGR-152	42E 15
FERRY, Ray Leonard III	LCPL	680409	A/3d AT	49E 55
FESER, Jeffrey Evan	LCPL	680605	C/1/1	60W 17
FIGUEROA, Fernando	SP5	720124	D/3-5	2W 100
FIGUEROA, Javier Puentes	CPL	680128	H&S/3/26	35E 54
FINLEY, Charles Richard	PFC	680411	M/3/26	49E 21
FIRST, Michael Bruce	PFC	710208	C/1-11	5W 87
FITTS, Richard Allan	SSGT	681130	FOB-1	37W 10
FITTS, Richard Lee	PFC	680615	3/4	57W 25
FIVELSON, Barry Frank	WO	710215	C/159 ASHB	5W 106
FIX, William Leroy	PFC	680426	F/2/3	52E 17
FLAHIVE, William Joseph Jr.	CAPT	680131	MACTU-62	36E 8
FLANNERY, Robert Edward Jr.	PFC	670503	E/2/3	19E 24
FLEMING, Dennis K	CPL	680214	K/3/9	39E 32
FLEMING, Morris Lafond	PFC	680505	A/1-5	55E 11
FLETCHER, David Foster	LCPL	680508	L/3/4	57E 2
FLINT, Raymond Lloyd	PFC	690225	H/2/4	31W 46
FLORES, Felix Frank	LCPL	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 1
FOILES, Francis Ivan	PFC	680527	M/3/4	65W 7
FONTENOT, Chester Joseph C	HN	680517	2/1	62E 4
FORBES, Kevin Lynn	PFC	680518	H/2/3	62E 17
FORD, Clifford Eugene, Jr.	LCPL	680609	1st MT Bn	58W 08
FORDHAM, Benjamin S	2/Lt	680415	K/3/26	50E 3
FORDHAM, Kenneth Charles	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 27
FORSBERG, Douglas Bruce	PFC	690225	H&S/2/4	31W 46
FOSTER, James Lester	CPL	680519	I/3/4	63E 9
FOSTER, Julius Cartwright	LCPL	680222	E/2/26	40E 62
FOUTZ, Kenneth Lee	SSG	700506	C/2-501	11W 111
FOWLER, Robert Allen	SMAJ	680504	C/1-5	54E 33
FOX, David Nelson	CAPT	710208	B/7-1	5W 87
FRALEY, David Forrest	CPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 71
FRANCAVILLA, John F	LCPL	680409	I/3/26	49E 1

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
FRANCE, Ronald Lynn	LCPL	690312	B/1/4	29W 18
FRANCIS, Lindell	PFC	690309	H&S/2/3	30W 88
FRANCISCO, Patrick Phillip	LCPL	670426	K/3/3	18E 93
FRANKENSTEIN, Jackie	LCPL	680606	D/1/4	59W 2
FRANKS, Ernest Richard	PFC	690314	M/3/4	29W 37
FRAZIER, Ronald Leon	LCPL	680409	C/1/9	49E 1
FRAZIER, Timothy Joseph	LCPL	680606	D/1/4	59W 2
FROMME, Frederick W Jr	LCPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 71
FUNK, Bruce Elliott	LCPL	690502	H/2/4	26W 99
FURLONG, Edward Francis Jr.	CPL	670607	B/1/26	21E 67
FURR, Frederick Edward	HM3	690429	H&S/2/4	26W 77
FURTADO, Edward Jr.	PFC	680515	E/2/3	60E 22
GAGNON, Patrick John	LCPL	670425	K/3/3	18E 85
GAINES, Allen Joseph	PFC	680407	G/2/26	48E 41
GAINES, Bernard Laverne	PFC	680324	A/1/9	46E 5
GALABIZ, John Rosalez	LCPL	680708	C/1/1	53W 43
GALINDEZ, Manuel Antonio	LCPL	680616	H/2/4	56W 2
GALINDO, Edwin Gene	CPL	680504	C/1-5	54E 34
GALLAGHER, John Theodore	SFC	680105	FOB-3	33E 48
GANNON, Eugene Richard	CAPT	680411	HMM-163	49E 22
GARBER, Charles W Jr.	CPL	680409	C/1/9	49E 1
GARCIA, Joe Cecillo	PFC	670430	E/2/3	18E 121
GARCIA, Ludin	PFC	680701	I/3/4	54W 28
GARCIA, Ricardo Martinez	SFC	710319	48 AHC	4W 58
GARCIA, Steven Vargas	LCPL	690225	H/2/4	31W 50
GARCIA-FIGUEROA, Juan F	LCPL	680605	C/1/4	60W 17
GARD, Danny "D"	CPL	680228	HMM-262	41E 65
GARDNER, John Garrett	CAPT	670603	HMM-165	21E 45
GARIEPY, Robert David	CPL	680504	A/1-77	54E 34
GARLO, Michael	PFC	690820	H/2/4	19W 78
GASTON, Juan	PFC	690225	H&S/2/4	31W 47
GATES, James Wayne	CAPT	660406	20th ASTA	6E 89
GATEWOOD, Charles Hue	LCPL	680531	B/1/1	62W 9
GAUGHAN, Austin Michael	PFC	680315	A/3d Shore P	44E 59
GAYNOR, James Thomas	SGTMAJ	680215	H&S/1/26	39E 47
GEIGER, Gary George	SP4	710325	B/3-5	4W 76
GEIGER, Larry Frederick	PFC	670426	B/1/9	18E 93
GELLER, Charles Gregory	LCPL	680225	B/1/26	41E 20
GEMMATI, Oronzo	CPL	680406	D/2-12	48E 26
GENTRY, Robert Barry	WO	710208	174 AHC	5W 87
GERO, John Anthony	CPL	680629	G/2/3	54W 16
GETTINGS, Guy Clifton	PFC	670426	K/3/3	18E 93
GIAMBRONE, Richard Lawrence	1/Lt	680401	1-7 Cav	47E 32
GIBBS, Michael Gerald	HM3	670426	K/3/3	18E 85
GIBSON, William Terry	PFC	680618	K/3/4	56W 21
GIFFORD, William Gary	LCPL	680531	E/2/3	62W 9
GILLESPIE, Albert Aloysius	PVT	680519	F/2/1	63E 10
GILLIAM, George Harvey	PFC	680403	C/2-5	47E 50
GILLIAM, Kenneth Ray	LCPL	690225	H Btry, 3/12	31W 47
GILLILAND, Dennis Elbert	SP4	710220	498 Med Co	5W 123
GLASPER, William Lawrence	LCPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 28

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
GLENN, William Stuart	PFC	710322	C/3-187	4W 66
GLIDDEN, Arthur	SFC	661109	Det B-52	12E 47
GODINEZ, Alejandro Ray	LCPL	670627	I/3/26	22E 70
GODING, Robert Earle	PFC	690303	C/1/4	30W 22
GOEGLEIN, John Winfred	MAJ	700630	40 ARRS	9W 104
GOEN, Richard Dean	LCPL	680802	E/2/4	50W 50
GOETZ, James Gormon	LCPL	670316	E/2/9	16W 90
GOI, Louis Charles	CPL	680318	B/1/13	45E 22
GOLZ, James Roland	PFC	680127	I/3/26	35E 46
GOMEZ, Armando Abel	PFC	680220	E/2/26	40E 39
GONANO, James Martin	PFC	690309	III MAF	30W 88
GONZALES, Robert	PFC	680403	H&S/2/3	47E 49
GOODMAN, Kenneth Virgil	PFC	680124	K/3/26	35E 21
GOODWIN, Raymond Ray	LCPL	670303	HqCo,3dMarDv	16E 10
GORDON, Lawrence Lee	CPL	700506	A/2-501	11W 111
GORDON, Richard Dale	PFC	680628	H&S/1/1	54W 10
GORE, Harold Douglas	CPL	680531	E/2/3	62W 9
GORMAN, Paul James	PFC	680730	G/2/4	50W 35
GORRERA, George Medford Jr	PFC	690320	G/2/3	29W 89
GOSS, Larry Jo	HM2	680214	K/3/9	39E 32
GOTTI, Gale Edward	PVT	670607	A/1/13	21E 67
GRAFF, Thomas George	CPL	670430	K/3/9	18E 121
GRAHAM, Robert Lee	SGT	690618	B/1-61	22W 76
GRANTHAM, Robert Eugene	SGT	710308	B/2-17	4W 32
GRASSIA, Joseph Jr.	PFC	690309	III MAF	30W 88
GRATEN, Frederick Dunham	CPL	680411	VMO-6	49E 22
GRAVEL, Bobby Joe	SP4	680406	C/2-7	48E 26
GRAY, John Patrick	LCPL	680531	E/2/3	62W 9
GRAY, Michael Douglas	PFC	680306	FLSG-A	43E 19
GRAY, Ruzell	PFC	680531	E/2/3	62W 10
GREB, James J	SGT	680414	B/1-5	49E 52
GREEN, Claude Hewitt	PFC	680409	E/2/1	49E 1
GREEN, Norman Morgan	LTCOL	680109	497 TFS	34E 7
GREENE, Danny Marvin	LCPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 71
GREENE, Kenneth John	SP4	680314	SVC Bty, 8-4	44E 55
GREENIDGE, Michael Rodney	LCPL	680331	D/1/9	47E 22
GREENLEAF, Joseph Gales	LT	720414	VF-114	2W 136
GREENWOOD, Dale Edward	PFC	690307	H/2/3	30W 62
GREGORY, Frank Edwin	LCPL	680606	D/1/4	59W 3
GRIFFIN, Walter Joe Louis	PFC	690618	C/1/9	22W 77
GRIJALVA, David Centeno	CPL	670427	B/1/9	18E 102
GRIMSTAD, Sigard Richard	PFC	680519	E/2/1	63E 10
GRIST, William Anthony	LCPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 9
GROHMAN, John Joseph	GYSGT	680322	C/1/26	45E 56
GROSHONG, Allen Eberly	HN	680408	F/2/1	48E 52
GRZEGOREK, James Andrew	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 19
GUENTHER, Carlyule Lloyd	SSG	680505	A/1-50	55E 14
GUILLORY, Wendell	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 13
GULA, Paul Richard	PFC	680330	D/1/9	47E 11
GULLUNG, Joseph Frank III	PFC	680406	B/2-7	48E 27
GUNN, Charley Edward	LCPL	670316	E/2/9	16E 91

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
GUSTAFSON, James Ernest	HM3	680422	G/2/3	51E 30
GUTHRIE, Steven Allen Jr.	SP4	680131	1/44 Arty	36E 12
HABERMAN, David	PFC	680416	A/1/9	50E 14
HACKETT, David Spencer	1/Lt	670430	H/2/3	18E 122
HAEFNER, David Allen	CPL	680505	A/1-77	55E 16
HAGAN, John Robert	MAJ	690506	VMO-6	25W 11
HAGARA, Leslie Paul	SGT	680416	A/1/9	50E 14
HAGEN, Loren Douglas	I/Lt	710807	RT KANSAS	3W 125
HAGEN, Loren Douglas	1/Lt	710807	TF1AE	3W 125
HALE, John Douglas	I/Lt	710308	B/2-17	4W 32
HALEY, Harrison LeRoy	CAPT	680526	D/1/1	66W 7
HALL, Blucher Ray	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 19
HALL, James Michael	SSGT	690101	CCN	35W 15
HALL, Lindy Ronald	CPL	670426	K/3/3	18E 93
HALL, Walter Ray	SP4	710322	176 AHC	4W 66
HALL, William Gardner	1/Lt	680324	VMO-6	46E 6
HALLER, Leroy Clayton	PFC	680531	B/1/1	62W 10
HALLOCK, Douglas Paul	CPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 122
HAMEL, Wayne Douglas	PFC	680205	HQ 26 MAR	37E 36
HAMILTON, Dennis Clark	CWO	680105	176 Avn Co	33E 49
HAMILTON, Douglas Blake	PFC	670424	B/1/9	18E 77
HAMMONS, James Luther	PFC	680506	H&S/3/4	56E 7
HAMPTON, Frederick Jordan	LTC	680306	311 ACS	43E 20
HANCOCK, William Tyler	PFC	680406	D/1-5	48E 27
HANDLEY, Anthony William	CPL	680208	H&S/1/9	38E 29
HANNA, Kenneth	SMAJ	680207	A-101 USSF	37E 83
HANNINGS, William Elwood	LCPL	680606	H&S/1/4	58W 3
HANRAHAN, Jerome M Jr	CPL	670430	H/2/3	18E 122
HANSON, Robert	LCPL	680601	W/1/11	61W 1
HANSON, Stephen Paul	MAJ	670603	HMM-165	21E 47
HARAN, Rory Timothy T	PFC	690605	H/2/9	23W 72
HARPER, Donald Eugene Jr	SGT	670316	B/1/9	16E 91
HARPER, Ralph Lewis	LCPL	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 4
HARRELL, Lenwood Thomas	PFC	680505	A/1-77	55E 15
HARRINGTON, John Charles	PVT	680604	F/2/4	60W 10
HARRIS, Earl Wayne	PFC	680228	E/2/26	41E 65
HARRISON, Donald	WO	661202	381 AHC	13E 5
HARTNESS, Donald Harry	LCPL	680607	M/3/9	59W 26
HATTER, Larry Richard	CPL	710218	HMH-463	5W 116
HAUSHERR, Charles Raymond	SP4	710223	173 AHC	5W 134
HAWES, Wayne Lindsay	SP4	690101	CCN	35W 16
HAWKINS, Don Albert	SGT	671101	FOB-1	29E 3
HAWLEY, Richard A Jr	CAPT	700506	E/2-501	11W 112
HAWYER, Donald Robert	LCPL	680615	L/3/4	57W 27
HAYDEN, Michael Pym	1/Lt	680416	A/1/9	50E 14
HAYES, Michael John Jr.	PFC	690314	M/3/4	29W 37
HAYES, Phillip III	LCPL	680225	B/1/26	41E 21
HEALY, Louis Glenn	PVT	680705	F/2/3	53W 19
HEALY, Richard John	CPL	680114	B/3d Recon	34E 48
HEALY, Thomas Michael	PFC	670607	B/1/26	21E 68
HEATH, Lloyd Lavern	HN	670502	G/2/3	19E 14

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
HEAVIN, Willis Ray	SGT	670503	E/2/3	19E 25
HEDGPATH, William Thomas	PFC	670426	K/3/3	18E 94
HEIFNER, Edward William	PFC	680125	F/2/26	35E 32
HEISER, John Louis	LCPL	690303	H&S/1/4	30W 24
HELGESON, Ellis Eugene Jr.	1/Lt	680306	311 ACS	43E 20
HELLWIG, Steven Louis	LCPL	680121	H&S/1/26	35E 6
HELMKE, Darrel Bruce	PFC	680412	A/1-8	49E 32
HELMSTRETLER, Michael David	1/Lt	680619	HMM-161	56W 31
HELWIG, Roger Danny	CAPT	690911	390 TFS	18W 69
HENDERSHOTT, Thomas Edward	PFC	670521	A/1/26	20E 76
HENDERSON, John Michael	LCPL	670502	H/2/3	19E 14
HENDRIX, John Russell	SP4	680405	B/7th Sq	48E 17
HENNESSEY, James Dale	SP4	690618	B/1-61	22W 77
HEPNER, Stephen Thomas	2/Lt	670502	K/3/3	19E 14
HERNANDEZ, Frank Sanchez	SGT	700506	A/158 AHB	11W 112
HERNANDEZ, Richard	PFC	670430	K/3/9	18E 122
HERNANDEZ, Robert	PFC	680710	A/1/1	52W 10
HESTER, William Walter	PFC	680701	I/3/4	54W 29
HICKS, Norman Edward Jr.	CPL	680531	H&S/2/3	62W 11
HICKS, Paul Everett	PFC	680306	G/2/26	43E 21
HIGGS, Ralph Edward	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 21
HILL, Billy David	SGT	680121	282 AHC	35E 6
HILL, James Edward Jr	PFC	670502	2/3	19E 14
HILL, Jerry James	PFC	680524	G/2/3	68E 3
HIMEBAUGH, Lee Edward	CPL	680527	M/3/4	65W 9
HIMMER, Lawrence	CAPT	680416	C/1/9	50E 14
HINKLE, Jack Lee	PFC	680416	D/1/9	50E 14
HINSCHBERGER, Lawrence K	PFC	690624	K/3/9	21W 7
HINSON, John Robert	PFC	670816	C/1/26	35E 1
HISCOCK, Stephen Mayo	CWO	710223	D/3-5	5W 134
HODGE, Michael Leonard	SSG	690618	B/1-61	22W 78
HOLDEN, John Parker	2/Lt	680411	HMM-163	49E 23
HOLDER, Carl Lewis	PFC	690103	H/2/9	35W 27
HOLDER, Kenneth Leroy	HM3	670509	F/2/3	19E 72
HOLDWAY, David Keith	LCPL	670503	H&S/2/3	19E 26
HOLLAR, Howard Eslie	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 22
HOLLIMON, Billy Michael	PVT	680305	F/2/26	43E 6
HOLLINGSWORTH, Gary Lynn	SP5	710518	TF1AE	3W 40
HOLLIS, Thomas William	LCPL	680128	B/3d Recon	35E 54
HOLLOWAY, James Owens Jr	LCPL	680404	A/1/9	48E 5
HOLMES, David Hugh	LTC	660315	22nd TASS	6E 10
HOLT, James William	MSGT	680207	A-101 USSF	37E 84
HOLTZCLAW, Gary Earl	1/Lt	690502	F/2/4	26W 99
HOOD, Jerry Wayne	PFC	670430	M/3/3	18E 122
HOPE, Samuel Jr.	PFC	690314	M/3/4	29W 35
HOPKINS, Gary Wayne	CPL	680705	H&S/1/1	53W 20
HORNBAKER, Kenneth Eugene	CPL	680219	HHB-2-94	40E 22
HORSLEY, LaMonte Van	CPL	680509	H&S/2/1	57E 23
HORTON, Robert Bernard	PFC	680707	C/1/1	53W 35
HORVATH, Robert John	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 22
HOTTENROTH, James Randall	1/Lt	671015	314 TAW	28E 9

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA
NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
HOUSTON, John Davis Jr	PFC	680417	L/3/26	50E 29
HOUSTON, Marvin Lynn	LCPL	680609	F/2/1	58W 9
HOWARD, James Byron	HN	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 5
HOWARD, Rodger Dale	PFC	690208	D/1/4	33W 85
HOWARD, Sydney Claude	LCPL	690314	H/3/4	29W 38
HOWLETT, Norman Locke Jr	LCPL	680330	A/3d Eng	47E 12
HUBBARD, Charles Austin	BUL3	670606	NMCB-4	21E 62
HUBER, Leon Fairden	SP4	680202	544 Sig Det	36E 74
HUBER, Randy "S"	LCPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 11
HUDSON, Roy	LCPL	680131	A/1/26	36E 16
HUET, Henri	Civilian	710210	Photog--AP	not on
HUFF, Richard Elliott	PFC	690411	E/2/4	27W 56
HUFF, William Edward	CPL	680225	K/3/26	41E 22
HUGHES, Samuel Reuben	SP5	680421	FOB-3	51E 21
HUMMEL, John Floyd	CWO	710306	B/7-1	4W 28
HUMPHREYS, Larry Don	PFC	680612	K/3/4	58W 32
HUNT, Joseph Thomas	CPL	680127	B/1/9	35E 47
HUNT, Ralphe Edward Jr.	1/Lt	680607	VMO-6	59W 23
HUNT, William Howard	2/Lt	690225	E/2/4	31W 49
HUNTER, Charles Louis	SP4	690618	B/1-61	22W 78
HUNTER, John Clark	I/Lt	710220	Bde HHC	5W 124
HURD, Roger Michael	LCPL	670521	A/1/26	20E 75
HURLBERT, Roy Douglas	CPL	680416	C/1/9	50E 15
HURST, John Clark	CAPT	680713	VMFA-115	52W 23
HURST, Ronald Lynn	PFC	680504	C/1-5	54E 40
HUSTON, Charles Gregory	SSGT	680328	FOB-4	46E 55
HUTCHINS, Frank John	SGT	680302	D/1/9	42E 33
HUTCHINSON, Paul Lee	PFC	680324	A/1/9	46E 7
HUWEL, Michael Francis	FPC	670503	E/2/3	19E 31
HYATT, Wayne Reuben	MAJ	710218	HMH-463	5W 116
IANIERI, Richard Joseph	LCPL	680609	F/2/4	58W 10
IBANEZ, Di Reyes	GYSGT	670605	A/3d Recon	21E 58
IMPERIALE, Ronald Joseph	LCPL	670316	E/2/9	16E 92
IRSCH, Wayne Charles	1/Lt	680109	497 TFS	34E 7
IRWIN, Robert Joseph	LCPL	680611	A/1/4	58W 28
ISLER, Reid Allen	HM3	680517	2/1	62E 6
IVES, Timothy James	CPL	670430	K/3/9	18E 123
IVES, William Allen	PFC	680324	A/1/9	46E 7
JACKSON, Andrew	LCPL	680306	F/2/26	43E 23
JACKSON, Billy Lee	SSGT	680409	F/2/1	49E 2
JACKSON, Curtis Darrell	HM3	670627	L/3/26	22E 71
JACKSON, James Wesley Jr.	LCPL	690921	L/3/4	18W 121
JACKSON, Leonard Jr.	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 30
JACKSON, Nathaniel Earnest	CPL	680416	C/1/9	50E 15
JACOB, Robert Michael	PFC	680404	A/1/9	48E 5
JACQUES, Donald	2/Lt	680225	B/1/26	41E 22
JAGGERS, Thomas Murl	CPL	670504	G/2/3	19E 37
JAMES, Mark Everett	LCPL	680214	K/3/9	39E 48
JANNETTA, Rodney Alan	CPL	690624	K/3/9	21W 8
JANOWICZ, Joseph Anthony	SP4	680414	B/1-5	49E 54
JASNOCHA, Alfred Ladislaw	LCPL	680515	L/3/4	60E 24

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
JAY, Robert Vern	CPL	690305	I/3/4	30W 48
JAYNES, James Oakley	LCPL	680425	C/3d Tk	52E 6
JEFFRIES, Gerrie George	LCPL	680224	E/2/26	41E 10
JEFFRIES, James Herbert	LCPL	690320	H&S/3/4	29W 89
JENKINS, Earl Dale Jr.	PCL	671116	FLC Air Del	30E 3
JENKINS, Michael Lee	PFC	690225	E/2/4	31W 50
JENKINS, Paul Laverne	MSGT	700630	40 ARRS	9W 105
JENKINS, Robert Henry Jr.	PFC	690305	C/3rd Recon	30W 46
JEREMIAH, Randall Craig	PFC	680530	L/3/4	63W 16
JMAEFF, George Victor	CPL	690301	C/1/4	30W 4
JOHNS, Carey Lee	LCPL	680618	H&S/3/4	56W 23
JOHNSON, Charles Timothy	LCPL	680504	G/2/1	42E 67
JOHNSON, Charles William	LCPL	680509	A/1/1	57E 24
JOHNSON, Daryl Linn	PFC	670503	E/2/3	19E 26
JOHNSON, Donald Vern	PFC	680519	F/2/1	63E 11
JOHNSON, Edward A. Jr.	SP4	710225	C/7-17	4W 5
JOHNSON, Eugene Melvin Jr.	LCPL	680407	G/2/26	48E 42
JOHNSON, Freddie Lee	LCPL	670627	I/3/26	22E 71
JOHNSON, Gary Lee	SP4	710218	A/101	5W 116
JOHNSON, George Dennis	PFC	670316	E/2/9	16E 92
JOHNSON, Gerald Lee	PFC	680505	A/1-77	55E 18
JOHNSON, Harrell Wayne	LCPL	680531	H&S/2/3	62W 11
JOHNSON, Havert Earl	PFC	680612	K/3/4	57W 1
JOHNSON, Howard Leon	CPL	680122	HQ 26 Mar	35E 11
JOHNSON, Kenneth Michael	PFC	670607	B/1/26	21E 68
JOHNSON, Kenneth Richard	LCPL	680216	B/1/9	39E 62
JOHNSON, Kim Williams	1/Lt	680223	H&S/1/26	40E 77
JOHNSON, Randolph Leroy	SFC	710220	48 AHC	5W 124
JOHNSON, Terry Melvin	PFC	680121	I/3/26	35E 6
JOHNSON, Zebulon	SP4	710215	B/2-17	5W 106
JOHNSTON, Dennis Neil	HN	680416	H&S/1/9	50E 19
JOHNSTON, Richard William	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 16
JONES, Bruce Edwin	LCPL	680225	B/1/26	41E 22
JONES, Clifton Randal	LCPL	680121	K/3/26	35E 6
JONES, Donald Ernest	PFC	680308	K/3/26	43E 56
JONES, Howard Lemuel Jr.	LCPL	680224	FLC POL	41E 10
JONES, Isaac	LCPL	670426	B/1/9	18E 94
JONES, Jack Pahl	LCPL	680705	K/3/4	53W 21
JONES, James	SGM	661003	FOB-1	11E 42
JONES, Jimmie Lee	PFC	680330	B/1/26	47E 12
JONES, John Robert	SGT	710605	TF1AE	3W 66
JONES, Joseph Richard	PFC	680705	D/1/1	53W 21
JONES, Larry Allen	PFC	680424	H&S/1/9	51E 47
JONES, Melvin Lewis	PFC	680214	K/3/9	39E 34
JONES, Sam	LCPL	680611	A/1/4	58W 26
JONES, Terry Agusta	PFC	671230	B/3d Recon	33E 3
JONES, Walter Chapman III	CAPT	680404	H&S/1/9	48E 5
JORDAN, Allan Harold	1/Lt	680406	B/1/13	48E 28
JOY, Richard Dennis	SGT	690620	B/1-61	22W 98
JOYNER, Stephen Douglas	1/Lt	680615	L/3/4	57W 27
KAMINSKI, Kenneth	PFC	680326	E/3-187	46E 36

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
KARAU, Ronald Dean	SGT	710320	101 AD	4W 61
KATZ, Ronald Christopher	SSG	690313	M/3/4	29W 30
KAULBACK, Peter Jon	LCPL	680531	B/1/1	62W 11
KEARSLEY, Ronald Charles	PFC	680421	H/2/3	51E 22
KEEFE, Dennis Michael	CPL	680211	HQ 26 Mar	38E 78
KEEFER, Kenneth Ray	LCPL	670607	B/1/26	21E 68
KEETLE, Jeffrey Charles	CPL	710323	D/2-17	4W 70
KEGLOVITS, Edward Joseph	2/Lt	670330	VMFA-542	17E 72
KEITH, Daniel Scott	PFC	690410	F/2/4	27W 50
KELLUM, Norman Wade	LCPL	690225	B Btry 3/12	31W 51
KELLY, Eddie Jr.	CPL	680517	B/1/1	62E 7
KENNEDY, Larry Scott	CPL	680306	A/1/13	43E 23
KENT, Daniel Wilder	CPL	680124	B/3d Tk	35E 23
KENT, Gregory Patrick	LCPL	680328	B/1/26	46E 55
KERCHNER, Robert Bard	SGT	680406	B/2-7	48E 28
KESSLER, Julius Allen II	CPL	670430	H/2/3	18E 123
KESTLER, Gary Lyle	LCPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 11
KETCHIE, Scott Douglas	CAPT	720409	USS CORAL SEA	2W 134
KIDD, Melton Lavone	PFC	680609	F/2/1	58W 10
KIDD, Phillip Meredith	PFC	680409	C/1/9	49E 3
KIER, Larry Gene	SSGT	700506	A/2-501	11W 112
KILDERRY, Michael Joseph	LCPL	680706	C/1/4	53W 27
KILGORE, Danny Ray	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 16
KINCAID, Paul Eddie	SGT	670627	A/1/26	22E 71
KING, DeWayne	LCPL	680414	M/3/26	49E 53
KING, George Louis Jr.	PFC	680605	C/1/4	60W 19
KING, James Michael	PFC	690321	D/1/4	29W 101
KINGSTON, Thomas Lloyd	LCPL	680121	I/3/26	35E 7
KINNE, Allen Gene	SSGT	700506	C-158 AHB	11W 114
KINNEY,Richard Lee	HN	670430	H/2/3	18E 123
KIRK, Robert Lee	WO	700506	A-158 AHB	11W 114
KISSLING, Benjamin Kaon	CPL	680409	D/2/12	49E 3
KLEIN, Joseph	CPL	680605	C/1/4	60W 19
KLEMENCIC, Joseph Gordon	PFC	670509	F/2/3	19E 72
KNIGHT, Hubert Charles	PFC	680516	M/3/4	61E 12
KNOLL, Anthony	PFC	680525	E/2/4	68W 4
KNUTSEN, Donald Paul	SP4	710322	176 AHC	4W 67
KOENIG, David Bruce	LCPL	670503	E/2/3	19E 27
KOMAN, Lawrence Ryland	2/Lt	680330	D/1/9	47E 13
KOPP, Patrick Daniel	PFC	680707	H&S/1/1	53W 36
KOT, Myron	CPL	680207	H&S/3/26	38E 5
KOTIK, Robert John	PFC	670430	M/3/3	18E 123
KRISELL, James Lee	LCPL	680519	H/2/3	63E 13
KRUGER, Robert Henry Jr	PFC	670503	E/2/3	19E 27
KURILICH, Robert Vaso	MAJ	680607	H&S/1/1	59W 25
KURTZ, Lloyd Nelson	PFC	670316	E/2/9	16E 92
KUSICK, Joseph George	SGT	671108	FOB-1	29E 51
LA PLANT, Kurt Elton	LCPL	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 6
LA VIGNE, Steven Bruce	LCPL	680618	K/3/4	56W 23
LA VIGNE, Steven Bruce	LCPL	680618	K/3/4	56W 23
LABOHN, Gary Russell	SFC	681130	FOB-1	37W 13

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
LABONTE, Donald Arthur	HN	680228	H&S/2/26	41E 68
LABOWSKI, Leonard William	SGT	690325	A/1/4	28W 37
LACEY, Davied Michael	SP5	690425	A/1-77	26W 47
LACEY, Franklin D	PFC	680328	L/3/26	46E 56
LADEROUTE, Michael John	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 23
LADEWIG, Melvin Earl	1/Lt	680824	8th TFW	46W 5
LAFAYETTE, John Wayne	MAJ	660406	20th ASTA	6E 90
LAFOND, Roland Robert	CPL	680502	H/2/3	54E 10
LAGENFELD, Charles T	HM3	680417	H&S/2/26	50E 30
LAMARR, Walter Loren	PFC	690225	H/2/4	31W 52
LAMITIE, Tyrone Francis	LCPL	680205	E/2/26	37E 38
LAMON, Francis William Jr.	PFC	680417	G/2/1	50E 30
LAMON, William Charles Jr.	LCPL	670316	E/2/9	16E 93
LANCASTER, David Clyde	WO	710321	C/7-17	4W 63
LAND, Sylvester	SGT	670316	B/1/9	16E 93
LANDERS, Ronnie Ray	LCPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 73
LANDERSHEIM, Larrie John	WO	700523	B52, 158	10W 86
LANDI, George Francis	CPL	690608	A/3rd Recon	23W 111
LANE, Austin Clifford	LCPL	690303	L/3/4	30W 26
LANE, Gerald Bruce	PFC	690305	I/3/4	30W 47
LANE, Louis Michael	SGT	680409	K/3/26	49E 3
LANEY, Billy Ray	SGM	670603	FOB-1	31E 48
LANGFORD, James Minter	SP4	680403	A/2-7	47E 52
LANGLEY, David Francis	SGT	680705	D/1/1	53W 17
LANGSTON, Melvin Doyle	PFC	680606	C/1/4	59W 6
LANGSTON, Michael Gary	LCPL	670505	2/3	19E 43
LAPHAM, Robert Granthan	MAJ	680208	14 ACW	38E 32
LAPORT, Leonard Oscar	LCPL	670426	K/3/3	18E 94
LARIMORE, John Richard	PFC	681124	H&S/1/4	38W 50
LASSITER, John Alfred	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 24
LATSHAW, Harry K	PFC	680306	G/2/26	43E 25
LAVOIE, Gerald Henry	CPL	680615	L/3/4	57W 28
LAVOY, Eugene Louis Jr.	PVT	670303	FLSG A	16E 11
LAWRENCE, Larry Eugene	LCPL	670606	HqCo 26 MAR	21E 62
LAWRENCE, William Aubrey	PFC	680417	G/2/1	50E 32
LAWS, Delmer Lee	SFC	660729	FOB-1	9E 87
LE BLANC, Alfred Leroy	CPL	680416	D/1/9	50E 16
LE COMPTE, John Ault	LCPL	680701	1/1	54W 31
LEAGUE, Roy Barry	SGT	680504	C/1-5	54E 36
LEAHY, Robert Michael	PFC	680607	3/9	59W 25
LEASURE, Delbert Louis	CPL	680223	C/1/13	40E 76
LECASTRE, Kenneth John	CPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 73
LEONARD, Kent Alan	PFC	670424	B/1/9	18E 80
LEONARD, Marvin Maurice	CWO	710215	C/159 ASHB	5W 107
LESAGE, Armand Paul	LCPL	680407	K/3/26	48E 42
LETSON, Gary Wayne	2/Lt	690618	C/1/9	22W 79
LEVULIS, John Joseph	SP4	710221	498 Med Co	5W 128
LEWELLEN, Walter Edward	SGT	710218	C/2-17	5W 117
LEWER, Thomas Charles	CPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 32
LEWIS, Clarence Henry	CPL	680315	B/1/9	44E 63
LEWIS, Donald Randall	LCPL	690225	H Btry, 3/12	31W 52

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
LILLIE, Richard Arthur	SGT	710218	H&MS-1	5W 117
LINDBERG, Brian Victor	LCPL	680404	A/1/9	48E 7
LINDERMAN, Mark Thomas	PFC	670721	M/3/3	23E 101
LINDEWALD, Charles W Jr	MSGT	680207	A-101 USSF	38E 5
LINDSAY, Philip Trieste	PFC	680409	A/1/9	49E 4
LINDSTROM, Ronnie George	CAPT	700102	25 TFS	15W 119
LINK, Frederick Beard	LCPL	680301	C/1/9	42E 19
LIPTAK, Charles Lewis	PFC	690412	C/1/4	27W 66
LISLE, Terrill Michael	PFC	690404	E/2/3	27W 11
LITTLE, Donnie Hugh	CPL	680609	A/1/1	58W 10
LITTLEFIELD, Robert Henry	CPL	680416	A/1/9	50E 17
LIVINGSTON, Billy Dale	LCPL	680226	CAC OSCAR	41E 40
LLOYD, Kenneth Edwin	PVT	680302	D/1/9	42E 35
LOCKETT, Lloyd	PFC	680505	A/1-77	55E 23
LOCKHART, John Thomas	SP5	710311	48 AHC	4W 38
LOFSTROM, Leland Eddy	LCPL	680515	L/3/4	60E 25
LOGAN, James Dwight	LCPL	690225	E/2/4	31W 52
LOHMAN, Herman Augusta Jr.	CPL	680406	G/2/26	48E 29
LONG, Leonard	HN	680326	H&S/1/9	46E 37
LONG, William Louis	I/Lt	690620	B/1-61	22W 99
LOOMIS, Richie Allan	PFC	690706	F/2/4	21W 71
LOONEY, Paul Thomas	CAPT	670510	HMM-164	19E 84
LOPEZ, Jose Angel Jr.	HN	680418	H&S/2/26	50E 40
LOPEZ, Robert Francisco	PFC	680615	M/3/4	57W 29
LOUIS, PFC Robert Youngdale Jr.	PFC	670503	F/2/3	19E 28
LOVATO, Michael Leon	PFC	680209	C/1/9	38E 55
LOVETT, Terry Wayne	PFC	690612	D/1/9	22W 33
LOWE, Barry	PFC	680609	F/2/1	58W 10
LOWE, Louis Cardell	LCPL	680514	K/3/4	60E 14
LOWERY, James Allen	PC	680205	A-1-40	37E 39
LUEBBERS, Ralph Joseph Jr.	LCPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 11
LYNCH, Charles Aaron	LCPL	670627	CAC O	22E 71
LYNN, Roy Eugene	PFC	690303	C/1/4	30W 31
LYON, Donovan Loren	MAJ	680322	559 TFS	45E 58
LYONS, Carl	PFC	680322	B/3d Recon	45E 59
LYONS, Chester George	SGT	710220	C/3-187	5W 125
LYONS, Marion Wayne	PFC	690225	H Btry, 3/12	31W 53
LYVERE, Ronald Lee	PFC	670425	K/3/3	18E 86
MACAGBA, Edilberto Dula	HM3	680313	B/1/26	44E 38
MACMILLAN, Thomas	LCPL	680306	K/3/26	43E 28
MACON, Samuel Cornelius	PFC	690225	H/2/4	31W 53
MAGERS, Paul Gerald	1/Lt	710601	D/158	3W 61
MAHARG, Evert Ralph	PFC	670426	B/1/9	18E 95
MAHONEY, Michael Thomas	SP5	680129	FOB-3	35E 61
MAHONEY, Thomas P III	LCPL	680706	B/1/1	53W 27
MAKIN, Woodrow Jr.	PFC	680528	F/2/3	64W 12
MALONEY, Jeffrey Raymond	CPL	670426	K/3/3	18E 95
MANGOLD, Leo Joseph	PFC	690303	C/1/4	30W 27
MANTHEI, James Walter	WO	710321	C/7-17	4W 64
MARC AURELE, Lionel Lucien	SP4	690618	B/1-61	22W 79
MARCOTTE, Andre Edward	LCPL	670701	3d FLC	22E 92

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
MARIN-RAMOS, Hector Ramon	SGT	680414	B/1-5	49E 53
MARIZ, Robert J	1/Lt	680130	HQ 26 Mar	35E 75
MARSHALL, Clifford Wayne	CPL	710219	3/D/1-11	5W 121
MARSHALL, Joseph Henry III	1/Lt	710218	48 AHC	5W 118
MARSHALL, Roland Trent	PFC	680517	M/3/4	62E 8
MARSON, Rickey Joe	PFC	680407	2/26	48E 43
MARTEL, Normand Richard	PFC	670502	E/2/3	19E 28
MARTIN, Gary Alan	LCPL	680301	C/1/9	42E 20
MARTIN, Harry Pemberton	PFC	680609	H&S/2/4	58W 11
MARTINEZ, Mauro	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 18
MARTORELLA, Gary Mario	LCPL	680531	E/2/3	62W 4
MARTURANO, Joseph Anthony Jr.	PFC	680306	G/2/26	43E 25
MARX, Robert Garry	CPL	680527	M/3/4	65W 11
MASSIE, George Edgar	PFC	680524	G/2/3	68E 5
MASTERS, Edward Ulyses	PFC	680406	G/2/26	48E 30
MATHEWS, James Michael	CPL	680618	K/3/4	56W 25
MATTHEWS, Charles Toney	SGT	710219	3/D/1-11	5W 121
MATTHEWS, William Lawrence	LCPL	680415	H&S/3/26	50E 6
MAY, David Murray	CAPT	710220	48 AHC	5W 125
MAYBERRY, Squire Newton Jr.	PFC	680531	E/2/3	52W 13
MAYER, Paul Evans	MGYSGT	680328	MWHG-1	46E 57
MAYSAY, Larry Wayne	SGT	671108	37th ARRS	29E 60
MAZARIEGOS, Francisco Albe	LCPL	670627	CAC O	22E 68
MAZILLO, Peter Jr	LCPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 124
MC CABE, Marc Wayne	SGT	680228	HMM-262	41E 70
MC CALL, Billy Ray	SGT	680222	G/2/26	40E 66
MC CANN, James Kevin	LCPL	680203	B/3d Recon	37E 10
MC CARTHY, Loyd Van Jr.	CAPT	710316	101 Div	4W 52
MC CASKEY, Robert Walter	MAJ	680407	11th GS	48E 44
MC CASKILL, William	PFC	670426	K/3/3	18E 96
MC CLAIN, William David	SGT	680516	K/3/4	61E 15
MC CLATCHEY, Jeffrey Jr.	SP5	680301	FOB-3	42E 12
MC CLELLAND, Aubrey David	PFC	680416	D/1/9	50E 19
MC CLELLAND, George	SSGT	680225	B/1/26	41E 25
MC CLINTOCK, Gerald	PFC	680615	L/3/4	57W 29
MC CLUNG, Ronald Olin	PFC	670924	A/1/26	27E 5
MC COOK, Gregory Madison	SGT	670509	F/2/3	19E 73
MC CORMICK, Michaep P	2/Lt	690320	D/1/4	29W 91
MC COSAR, Winford	LCPL	680306	B/1/26	43E 28
MC DANIEL, Roy Dean	CPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 35
MC DONALD, Henry III	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 26
MC DONALD, Lewis Levi	PFC	690307	H/2/3	30W 62
MC DONELL, "R" "D"	SGT	710325	B/1-1	5W 125
MC ELFRESH, Allen Keith	SGT	710218	HMH-463	5W 118
MC ELRATH, Winston Jr.	LCPL	680531	K/3/4	62W 14
MC GARVEY, Patrick George	CPL	680412	H&S/1/26	49E 35
MC GRATH, Edward	CPL	680406	G/2/26	48E 31
MC GRATH, Thomas Howard	LCPL	690225	3/12	31W 64
MC HENRY, Paul Vincent	LCPL	680615	H&S/3/4	57W 30
MC INTOSH, Ian	WO	701124	A/2-17	6W 79
MC KAIN, Bobby Lyn	CW2	680503	A/1-9	54E 27

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
MC KEE, Julian Allan	LCPL	670316	E/2/9	16E 95
MC KEEVER, Michael E	LCPL	680223	H&S/1/26	40E 75
MC KENZIE, Richard W	LCPL	680225	B/1/26	41E 26
MC KIBBAN, Michael James	SSGT	690101	CCN	35W 17
MC KINLEY, Allen	PVT	680208	A/1/9	38E 35
MC KINNEY, Bernard B Jr.	SSGT	680208	A/1/9	38E 35
MC KINNEY, Clemie	LT	720414	VF-114	2W 136
MC KINSEY, Gerald Leroy Jr.	WO	680121	282 AHC	35E 8
MC LEAN, Ronald Walsh	1/Lt	690608	A/3rd Recon	23W 113
MC LEMORE, John Wilson Jr.	PFC	710322	C/3-187	4W 68
MC LEOD, Arthur Edward	CWO	710212	C/2-17	5W 100
MC MACKINS, Reuben Carl Jr.	CPL	680414	L/3/26	49E 54
MC MANUS, Truman Joseph	LCPL	680605	D/1/4	60W 20
MC MILLAN, Bruce Francis	CAPT	680411	VMO-6	49E 24
MC MULLIN, Charles	PFC	680517	H/2/1	62E 9
MC MURRAY, Fred Howell Jr.	1/Lt	680407	TrpB, 1Sq9Cav	48E 45
MC MURRAY, Peter Hinchman	1/Lt	690827	CCN	19W 125
MC NAMAR, Carl	HN	680417	H&S/3/26	50E 32
MC NAMARA, Donald Woodward	CPL	670721	M/3/3	23E 102
MC NAMARA, William James	LCPL	680527	M/3/4	65W 12
MC NEILL, Kenneth Rex	PFC	690602	C/1/4	23W 46
MC PHEE, Randy Neal	PFC	670430	M/3/3	18E 125
MC RAE, Jimmie Lefon	PFC	680328	B/1/26	46E 57
MEAD, Dennis Michael	PVT	680306	D/1/26	43E 26
MEADE, Thomas Allerton	CPL	680206	D/1/26	37E 62
MEADOWS, Artis Wilbur Jr	CPL	680407	G/2/26	48E 44
MEADS, Kim Elmer	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 25
MEDEIROS, Dennis J	CPL	680306	H/2/26	43E 26
MEDEIROS, William Correia	LCPL	680416	A/1/9	50E 18
MEGGS, Marion Lee	LCPL	671116	B/3d Recon	30E 4
MEIER, Roy Alan	PFC	680302	D/1/9	42E 36
MEIER, Terrance Leo	SSGT	670721	M/3/3	24E 104
MEIN, Michael Howard	SSGT	681130	FPB-1	37W 13
MEISTER, David William	LCPL	680508	H&S/3/4	57E 6
MEIXNER, Edwin George	MAJ	680228	HMM-262	41E 69
MENNINGER, Robert Patrick	PFC	690301	C/1/4	30W 6
MENTON, Charles Russell Jerome	LCPL	680516	K/3/4	61E 13
MERCER, William Ivan	HM2	680615	M/3/4	57W 129
MEUSE, John Richard	PFC	670503	E/2/3	19E 29
MEYSEMBOURG, Daniel L	PFC	680311	B/1/9	44E 18
MIDTHUN, Roger Wayne	PFC	680515	D/1/1	60E 25
MIECZKOWSKI, Joseph	CPL	670430	K/3/9	18E 124
MIKELS, James Herbert Jr.	SGT	680228	H&S/1/26	41E 69
MILES, James Edward	PFC	680306	H/2/26	43E 27
MILLARD, Kenneth Arthur	LCPL	670627	I/3/26	22E 72
MILLARD, Loren Ray	HM3	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 8
MILLER, Charles Claude	LCPL	680404	H&S/1/9	48E 7
MILLER, Charles Wayne	HN	680124	B/3d Recon	35E 24
MILLER, Eugene Stuart	CAPT	700523	158 AHB	10W 86
MILLER, Malcolm Thomas	HM3	670510	A/3d Recon	19E 72
MILLER, Michael Andrew	1/Lt	690328	366 TFW	28W 72

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
MILLER, Tommy Neal	CPL	690225	E/2/4	31W 53
MILLETT, Steven Lawrence	PFC	670607	B/1/26	21E 69
MILLINER, William Patrick	CWO	710306	B/7-1	4W 29
MILLS, Arthur Lee	PFC	680412	C/1/26	49E 34
MINCH, Roger Carl	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 26
MINER, James Allen	CWO	710223	173 AHC	5W 135
MINES, James Jr.	CPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 125
MIRACLE, James Jr.	PFC	680403	C/1-8	47E 52
MIRAMONTEZ, Enrique	CPL	690618	C/1/9	22W 80
MITCHELL, Joseph Robert Jr.	2/Lt	670430	M/3/3	18E 125
MIZNER, Darrell Condie	PFC	680609	F/2/1	58W 11
MOCK, Donald Ray	PFC	680505	H&S/1/1	55E 23
MOFFETT, James Delton	CPL	680604	F/2/4	60W 11
MOFFITT, Thomas Carroll D	PFC	690313	M/3/4	29W 31
MOISE, Herve Jean	PFC	680416	A/1/9	50E 18
MOLAISON, Gordon Thomas	CPL	680519	E/2/1	63E 13
MOLE, Malcolm Geoffrey	HM3	680121	H&S/3/26	35E 7
MOLETTIERE, Joseph Anthony	LCPL	680205	2/26	37E 40
MONAT, Donald Henry Jr.	HM3	670425	K/3/3	18E 87
MONCAYO, Jose Roberto	SGT	680618	M/3/4	56W 25
MONNETT, Leonard Allen	SP5	710219	173 AHC	5W 121
MONROE, Wilber Dean	LCPL	680611	A/1/4	58W 26
MONTGOMERY, Michael Mallory	CPL	680505	A/1-77	55E 27
MONTIJO, Michael	CPL	690602	M/3/9	23W 45
MONTZ, Roger Ellis	PFC	680519	F/2/1	63E 12
MOODY, Charles Wilburn	SSG	680406	D/2-12	48E 30
MOONEY, Fred	SFC	710227	B/7-1	4W 10
MOORE, Dallas Henry	SGT	680306	311 ACS	43E 27
MOORE, Harry Truman	LCPL	680531	B/1/1	62W 13
MOORE, James Ezra	PFC	680306	G/2/26	43E 27
MOORE, Larry Gene	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 19
MOORE, Lewis Wayne	PFC	680310	A/3d Eng	44E 10
MOORE, Lloyd Whitfield	HN	680225	B/1/26	41E 25
MOORE, Wayne Paul	LCPL	680330	B/1/26	47E 14
MOORE, William Roosevelt	CPL	670503	H/2/3	19E 29
MORAN, David Alfred	SP4	710212	A/4-3	5W 99
MORAN, Walter C B	SP4	720123	TRF 95	2W 100
MORDEN, Robert Nelson	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 33
MORELAND, James Leslie	SFC	680207	A-101 USSF	38E 7
MORELOS, Catarino Jr.	PFC	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 8
MORGAN, Charles Lewis	LCPL	680531	B/1/1	62W 14
MORGAN, Michael Roy	LCPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 125
MORIARTY, Peter Gibney	CAPT	710322	614 TFS	4W 68
MORRIS, Larry Lee	PFC	670607	B/1/26	21E 69
MORRIS, Wayman Dewey	PFC	680531	B/1/1	62W 14
MORRISSEY, Thomas J Jr.	CPL	680605	C/1/4	60W 20
MORROW, Harold Eugene	GYSGT	670621	M/3/26	23E 101
MORTON, David Eugene	LCPL	680802	E/2/4	50W 52
MOSES, Clifton	PFC	680407	F/2/26	48E 44
MOSLEY, Edward	TSGT	671015	314 TAW	28E 10
MOSS, Thomas John Jr.	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 27

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
MOSSO, Robert Bruce	SGT	680326	B/1/9	46E 39
MOTTOLA, Vincent Antonio	PFC	680223	B/1/26	40E 77
MOUNT, John Edward	LCPL	680407	E/2/1	48E 44
MUELLER, Marco Francisco	LCPL	680515	F/2/3	60E 26
MULGREW, Kevin Spear	LCPL	680409	A/1/9	49E 4
MULLET, Steven James	PFC	670721	M/3/26	23E 102
MURDOCK, Carl Thomas	LCPL	680515	H/2/3	60E 26
MURFF, William Edward	PFC	670721	M/3/3	23E 103
MURPHY, David	CPL	680423	D/1/1	51E 40
MURPHY, Patrick Michael	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 34
MURPHY, Richard Brian	LCPL	680615	M/3/4	57W 29
MURRAY, James Francis	CPL	670426	K/3/3	18E 95
MUTZ, Dennis Howard	LCPL	680304	K/3/26	42E 69
MUVICH, Dennis Robert	2/Lt	680519	E/2/1	63E 14
MYERS, David Gephart	1/Lt	670608	VMO-3	21E 75
NACCA, Carl Jr.	WO	710220	Bde HHC	5W 126
NARVAEZ, Paul Reyes	SGT	690618	B/1-61	22W 81
NASH, David Eugene	SGT	680609	F/2/1	58W 12
NASH, Thomas Steven	PFC	680407	E/2/1	48E 45
NAUGHTON, Thomas Daniel Jr	HN	690618	C/1/9	22W 81
NEAL, Charles Marion Jr.	LCPL	670425	K/3/3	18E 87
NEAL, William Edward	SP4	710324	D/3-5	4W 73
NEELEY, William Merritt	PFC	680421	H/2/3	51E 24
NELSON, Max Alvin	LCPL	680224	E/2/26	41E 11
NELSON, Roger Miller	HN	680407	H&S/2/26	48E 45
NELSON, Stephen Carl	PFC	670425	K/3/3	18E 87
NEWFIELD, Jimmy Charles	LCPL	680612	3/4	57W 2
NEWTON, Leonard Lee	PFC	680119	I/3/26	34E 80
NICKLOW, Danny Eugene	PFC	670316	B/1/9	16E 95
NIEBUR, Edward Leroy	HM2	680227	H&S/1/26	41E 52
NIELSEN, Charles Joseph	LCPL	680414	L/3/26	49E 52
NIELSEN, Harold Richard	CPL	670721	M/3/26	23E 103
NIGHTENGALE, Timothy James	PFC	680406	A/1/9	48E 31
NILES, Ronald Edward	CPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 73
NINOW, William Charles	HM3	690303	H&S/3/4	30W 28
NIXON, John Arleigh	CPL	680411	VMO-6	49E 24
NOEL, Joseph Paul	CPL	680605	D/1/4	60W 21
NORMAN, Marion Henry	1/Lt	680330	A/1/13	47E 15
NORTON, Kenneth Bradley	CPL	680508	F/2/1	57E 7
NOVEMBRE, Carmine	CPL	680425	D/1/1	52E 9
OBREGON, Raul Albert	PFC	680528	E/2/3	64W 14
O'CONNOR, Dennis Alfred	CPL	670627	CAC O	22E 72
O'CONNOR, Michael Maurice	1/Lt	690604	D/3d Recon	23W 66
ODOM, William Clinton Jr.	SGT	710218	HMH-463	5W 118
OESTERICH, Tilo Rudolf	CPL	680407	E/2/1	48E 45
OGATA, Terrance Aki	SP4	710223	173 AHC	5W 133
OGDEN, David Ellis	SSGT	700506	D/2-501	11W 115
O'HARE, Richard James	PFC	680306	G/2/26	43E 29
OLIVER, Erskine Jay	LCPL	690530	M/3/9	23W 22
OLIVER, Troy Robert Jr.	CAPT	680519	F/2/1	63E 15
OLNEY, Steven Ira	CPL	680602	H&S/2/3	61W 15

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
OLSEN, George Charles	PFC	680501	B/1/1	53E 39
OMMEN, Peter Richard	PFC	670430	M/3/3	18E 126
ORBINO, Dennis Michael	SGT	690325	H&S/1/4	28W 39
ORNELAS, John Carl	SGT	680205	FLC POL	37E 41
OROPEZA, Manuel Garcia	PFC	680702	G/2/4	54W 38
OROSCO, Stephen	PFC	690618	A/1/9	22W 81
ORTIZ, Eliezer	PVT	680605	D/1/4	60W 21
ORTIZ, Randall Isaac-Jed	LCPL	690820	H/2/4	19W 81
ORTON, Kenneth William Jr.	SGT	670426	B/1/9	18E 96
OSBORNE, David Franklin	PFC	690502	F/2/4	26W 101
OSTAPCHUK, Walter Michael	LCPL	680405	A/1/9	48E 19
OUTWATER, Albert Aleya	SGT	670721	M/3/3	23E 102
OVERTON, Doyle Wayne	PFC	680614	L/3/4	57W 21
OWENS, Elwood	LCPL	680618	K/3/4	56W 26
OWENS, Robert Franklin	CPL	680416	D/1/9	50E 19
OWENS, Timothy Eugene	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 19
PACE, Gary Lynn	SGT	690331	B/1-61	28W 100
PADILLA, David Esequiel	LCPL	680518	E/3d Recon	62E 22
PADILLA, Gary Teofilio	CPL	710303	174 AHC	4W 20
PADILLA, Ralph Henry	PVT	680612	K/3/4	57W 2
PAGAN, Miguel	PFC	680515	F/2/3	61E 1
PAKELE, Fred Dale	SSG	710209	A/1-61	5W 92
PALACIOS, Luis Fernando	LCPL	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 11
PALMA, Francis Michael	LCPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 126
PALMIERI, David Harold	PFC	690612	D/1/9	22W 35
PAMPLIN, John Mac	CPL	680516	M/3/4	61E 16
PARCEL, John William	LCPL	680422	G/2/3	51E 32
PARENT, Jeffrery Mark	LCPL	690504	M/3/4	25W 1
PARKER, George Joseph Jr.	SGT	690420	D/1/4	26W 15
PARKER, James Edward	SSG	690620	B/1-61	22W 100
PARKER, William Hill	LCPL	680606	D/1/4	59W 11
PARSLEY, Edward Milton	A1C	660203	311 ACS	4E 135
PARSONS, Charles Edward	SGT	680228	5th Comm	41E 69
PATRICK, Albert Earl	PFC	680214	A/3d Eng	39E 37
PATTERSON, Jerry Leroy	PFC	680730	G/2/4	50W 37
PATTERSON, Patrick Chasie	PFC	680415	K/3/26	50E 7
PATTERSON, William Anthony	PFC	680609	F/2/1	58W 16
PATTON, Barry Michael	LCPL	680402	H&S/2/3	47E 41
PAUL, James Lee	WO	710205	D-3-5 Cav	5W 79
PAYNE, Robert Paul	CPL	680318	A/3d AT	45E 24
PAYNE, Troy David Jr.	CPL	670426	B/1/9	18E 97
PEARCE, Dale Allen	WO	710517	C-158 AHB	3W 39
PEARCY, Robert Leslie	PFC	690604	D/3d Recon	23W 67
PECK, Darrell Vernon	PFC	690601	G/2/9	23W 39
PECK, Steven Russell	WO	710315	D/3-5	4W 51
PECKHAM, George Robert	LCPL	680404	F/2/1	48E 8
PEDA, Robert Charles	1/Lt	680407	A/1-9	48E 46
PEDERSON, Roger Alan	SP4	710329	HHT/3-5	4W 92
PEMBLETON, Ronald Lee	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 36
PENETTI, Francis	LCPL	680124	K/3/26	35E 26
PEOPLES, Perry Lee	LCPL	670426	2/3	18E 97

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
PEPPER, Anthony John	PFC	680406	G/2/26	48E 32
PEPPLE, Carl Franklin, Jr.	CPL	670505	CAC "O"	19E 44
PERETTA, John Rocco	CPL	680215	I/3/26	39E 52
PEREZ, Daniel Torres	LCPL	670424	B/1/9	18E 81
PEREZ, Jesus Albert	PFC	690624	K/3/9	21W 9
PERILLO, Donald Lee	PFC	680404	G/2/3	48E 8
PERKINS, Charles Harold	GYSGT	680517	K/3/26	62E 9
PERKINS, Stephen John	SP4	700523	158 AHB	10W 87
PERRY, James Earl	PFC	670316	B/1/9	16E 96
PESCHEL, James Douglas	PFC	690225	H Btry, 3/12	31W 55
PETAL, John Darryl	PFC	690320	G/2/3	29W 91
PETERSON, Carl Elving	COL	680210	I MAW	38E 71
PETTITT, James Allen	SP4	680414	B/1-5	49E 54
PHEARS, Ronald Gene	WO	680404	HHC, 2d Bde	48E 9
PHELPS, Randall Carl	PFC	680408	A/3d Eng	48E 54
PHILLIPS, Daniel Raymond	SFC	680207	A-101 USSF	38E 10
PHIPPS, James Alvin	PFC	680611	C/1/12	58W 28
PIAZZA, Robert Gary	PFC	680406	G/2/26	48E 33
PICANSO, Leonard Jr.	PFC	670503	F/2/3	19E 30
PICHON, Herman Edward	PFC	710324	C/4-3	4W 73
PIETRZAK, Joseph Ray	SGT	710210	B/2-17	5W 93
PINALES, Lawrence	LCPL	680704	M/3/9	53W 11
PINATELLI, Thomas Michael	PFC	680209	C/1/9	38E 71
PINO, Alfred	LCPL	670316	B/1/9	16E 96
PINSONNAULT, Richard Norma	HM3	680707	C/1/1	53W 38
PITTS, Freddie Richard	LCPL	670430	K/3/9	18E 126
PITTS, Wayne Monroe	PFC	670607	B/1/26	21E 70
PIZARRO, Vic Manuel	CPL	680306	A/1/13	43E 30
PLANCHON, Randall T II	CPL	680615	H/3/4	57W 30
PLILER, Larry Dean	SGT	680531	B/1/1	62W 15
PLUNCKETT, Raymond Louis	CPL	680330	D/1/9	47E 15
POE, Clifford Earl Jr	CWO	700506	A/158 AHB	11W 116
POILANE, Eugene	Civilian	640420	Coffee planter	not on
POILANE, Felix	Civilian	680413	Coffee planter	not on
POLK, Robert Louis	LCPL	680609	F/2/1	58W 13
POLLARD, William Alfred	PFC	670721	B/1/26	23E 103
POLT, Erwin Andrew	PFC	680324	H&S/1/9	46E 10
POMERLEAU, James Gerald	CPL	670424	B/1/9	18E 81
PONDOFF, John Christopher	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 36
PONIKTERA, Stanley F Jr.	LCPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 14
POPOWITZ, Gregory Francis	LCPL	680124	B/3d Recon	35E 26
PORTER, Lawrence Eugene	LCPL	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 12
PORTER, Richard Lee	PFC	690407	F/2/4	27W 33
POTIER, Milton Phillip	CPL	680505	A/1-77	55E 27
POTTER, Kent Biddle	Civilian	710210	Photog--UPI	not on
POWELL, David Lee	LCPL	680623	K/3/4	55W 22
POWELL, John Dee Jr	LCPL	680630	W/1/11	54W 24
POWELL, Peter Earl	SP5	680411	8th Eng	49E 25
POWELL, Robert Clyde	SGT	670503	E/2/3	19E 30
POWELL, Troy Everett	LCPL	690502	F/2/4	26W 102
POWERS, John Lynn	SP4	710215	C/159 ASHB	5W 107

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
PRESCOTT, Milton Emmett Jr.	SGT	670430	M/3/3	18E 127
PRESLEY, Avey	PFC	690325	A/1/4	28W 39
PRESLEY, Ronnie Calvin	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 30
PRESTON, Alvin Lewis	PFC	680508	H&S/1/1	57E 9
PRICE, Dwight Anthony	PFC	680611	A/1/4	58W 28
PRIEBE, James Edward	LCPL	670430	K/3/9	18E 127
PRUIETT, Thomas Pierre Jr.	PFC	680331	K/3/26	47E 25
PRUITT, George Alan	CPL	680408	H&S/2/26	48E 54
PRZYBLINSKI, Gerald	LCPL	690225	H Btry, 3/12	31W 56
PUENTES, Manuel Rameriz	SSGT	710325	B/1-1	4W 78
PYLE, Timothy Howard	LCPL	690502	HMM-262	26W 102
QUAMO, George	MAJ	680414	FOB-3	50E 1
QUATTLEBAUM, John Franklin	PVT	680407	F/2/26	48E 46
QUIGLEY, James Michael	CPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 74
QUINONES, Edward	CPL	680603	E/2/1	60W 5
QUINTANILLA, Jeffrey Iglesias	SGT	710323	D/2-17	4W 71
RAMIEREZ, Juan Jose	LCPL	670503	H/2/3	19E 30
RAMOS, Bernardo Kealoha	CPL	710324	C/4-3	4W 75
RAMOS, George Michael	SGT	680531	H&S/2/3	62W 16
RAMPULLA, Terry James	LCPL	680416	A/1/9	50E 20
RAMSEY, Milton Hardin	MAJ	710301	21 SOS	4W 14
RAMSEY, Randolph Raymond	PFC	690225	E/2/4	31W 56
RANDALL, James Arthur	PFC	670430	M/3/3	18E 127
RANEY, Steven Leon	SP4	680202	362 Sig Co	36E 83
RANSBOTTOM, Michael Lee	CPL	680407	C/2-7	48E 46
RASH, Donald Ray	PFC	680330	B/1/26	47E 15
RAUEN, John Vernon	WO	710220	498 Med Co	5W 126
RAY, Franklin Daniel	PFC	680223	A/1/26	41E 2
RAY, Kermit Anthony	LCPL	670426	K/3/3	18E 97
READ, Charles Harold W Jr	MAJ	680824	8th TFW	46W 7
REAGAN, Dickie Walter	SP4	700506	D/2-501	11W 117
REATHER, Wallace Lee Jr.	PFC	680127	B/3d Recon	35E 50
REDENIUS, David Gary	CPL	680416	C/1/9	50E 20
REECE, Walter James	SGT	680519	F/2/1	63E 17
REED, James Clayton	PVT	690320	D/1/4	29W 92
REED, Larry Bruce	PFC	680606	D/1/4	59W 12
REESE, William Robert	2/Lt	680214	K/3/9	39E 38
REGNOLDS, James Randolph	PFC	690321	D/1/4	28W 2
REID, James Alfred	PFC	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 12
REID, Jon Eric	CW2	710220	48 AHC	5W 126
REVLAND, Rickey Don	PFC	670505	2/3	19E 45
REX, Robert F	CAPT	690309	23d TASS	30W 95
REX, Robert F	CAPT	690309	23 TASS	30W 95
REYES, Ronald	PFC	680330	D/1/9	47E 16
REYES, William	LCPL	680705	D/1/1	53W 23
REYNA, Samuel	CPL	680420	A/1/1	51E 13
REZENDES, Paul Allen	HM3	690618	C/1/9	22W 82
RHOADES, David	PVT	670316	B/1/9	16E 97
RICE, John Climath	PFC	670303	E/2/3	19E 31
RICE, Robert	SGT	680416	A/1/9	50E 20
RICHARDSON, James Douglas	PFC	680407	F/2/26	48E 47

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
RICHARDSON, Scott Douglas	PFC	670430	H/2/3	18E 127
RIDENHOUR, Darwin Bruce	SSG	680401	8th Eng	47E 36
RIEDE, Ronald Edgar	1/Lt	680411	VMO-6	49E 25
RIGSBY, Barry Lane	PFC	680214	K/3/9	39E 38
RILEY, James Thomas	CAPT	680222	HMH-463	40E 68
RILEY, Larry Lloyd	LCPL	680524	G/2/3	69E 1
RIMEL, Melvin Lewis	GYSGT	680121	K/3/26	35E 9
RIMSON, Martin Luther	PFC	680205	E/2/26	37E 43
RIORDAN, Patrick Carlisle	PFC	680519	F/2/1	63E 17
RIOS, Noel Louis	SSGT	680306	APS-15	30W 69
RIPORTELLA, Frank J Jr.	LCPL	670426	B/1/9	18E 97
RIVERA, Arnold Javier	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 27
RIZO, Albert Martinez	CPL	680512	H&S/2/3	59E 12
RIZZO, James Patrick	LCPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 38
ROACH, Terence Raymond	2/Lt	680208	A/1/9	38E 38
ROBERTS, Ben	PFC	670503	E/2/3	19E 31
ROBERTS, Gary Kenneth	LCPL	680606	D/1/4	59W 13
ROBERTSON, Gerald William	PFC	680214	A/1/9	39E 38
ROBERTSON, John Ernest	CPL	710208	B/7-1	5W 89
ROBERTSON, Leonard	MAJ	720707	VMFA-533	1W 54
ROBERTSON, Mark John	WO	710210	B/2-17	5W 94
ROBINSON, Lance Allen	CPL	710323	D/2-17	4W 71
ROBINSON, Lionel Lareau	CPL	680410	A/1/9	49E 15
ROBINSON, Samuel Percell	CPL	680306	2/26	43E 31
ROBINSON, Walter R Jr.	LCPL	670430	H/2/3	18E 127
ROBITAILLE, Paul Edward	GYSGT	680223	M/3/26	41E 2
RODRIGUES, Joe G Jr.	SGT	690303	L/3/4	30W 29
RODRIGUEZ, Domingo Jr.	PVT	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 31
RODRIGUEZ, Manuel Jr.	PFC	690602	M/3/9	23W 47
RODRIGUEZ, Paul M Jr.	PFC	670627	A/1/26	22E 72
ROE, Royce Evert	PFC	690225	H/2/4	31W 56
ROGERS, Douglas Manuel	CPL	680531	G/2/3	62W 11
ROLDAN, William Junior	LCPL	670430	G/2/3	18E 128
ROMANO, August	PFC	680609	F/2/1	58W 14
ROMERO, Manuel Villareal	LCPL	680406	G/2/26	48E 33
ROSA, Juan Antonio	LCPL	680124	B/3d Recon	35E 27
ROSSANO, Richard Joseph	PFC	710325	B/1-1	4W 78
ROTH, Frank Theodore	LCPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 128
ROUNTREE, Ronald Corbin	LCPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 38
ROWE, Arthur Mortimer	PFC	680601	F/2/1	61W 6
ROWE, Sharber Mayfield	SGT	680707	C/1/1	53W 38
ROZELLE, David Thomas	LCPL	680121	K/3/26	35E 9
RUBY, Blane Markwood	PFC	680605	C/1/1	60W 21
RUDD, Donald Lee	HM2	690303	L/3/4	30W 29
RUDD, James Earl	PFC	680806	G/2/4	49W 20
RUDD, Richard John Jr.	PFC	680421	H&S/2/1	51E 25
RUFF, Willie Jerome	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 28
RUIZ, Antonio Elizondo	PFC	690314	M/3/4	29W 40
RUIZ, Gilbert	PFC	690321	D/1/4	28W 3
RUIZ, Jose	CPL	680416	C/1/9	50E 20
RUIZ, Jose Jr.	PFC	680330	B/1/26	47E 16

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
RUIZ, Thomas	LCPL	680701	H&S/2/1	54W 32
RUNKLE, Robert Leslie	LTCOL	680404	1-5 Cav	48E 10
RUSH, Ervin Lee	LCPL	680403	H&S/2/3	47E 54
RUSH, Marvin Gene	PFC	680416	D/1/9	50E 21
RUSSELL, David Adams	SGT	680309	H&S/1/26	43E 69
RUSSELL, James Lowell	LCPL	680311	D/1/9	44E 20
RUSSELL, John Malcolm Jr.	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 32
RUSSELL, Larry Gene	LCPL	680417	L/3/26	50E 33
RUTGERS, David Lynn	PFC	690225	H Btry, 3/12	31W 57
RYAN, Ronald Royce	CPL	680306	B/1/26	43E 32
RYAN, William Cornelius Jr.	1/Lt	690511	VMFA-115	25W 54
RYDEN, Gary Ardean	PFC	680403	D/1-5	47E 54
RYDER, Aldo Eugene	PFC	680604	G/2/4	60W 12
SACHEN, William George Jr.	LCPL	680519	H/2/3	63E 17
SAIN, Don Rue	SP4	660729	FOB-1	9E 88
SALLY, Hank	PFC	690605	H/2/9	23W 79
SAMUELSON, Robert L	SGT	680407	A/2-7	48E 43
SANCHEZ, Javier Arturo "E"	SSGT	670503	E/2/3	19E 32
SANCHEZ, Jose Ramon	PFC	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 13
SANDERS, Gerald Jude	LCPL	680705	D/1/1	53W 23
SANDERS, Glenn Edward	LCPL	670629	A/1/26	22E 85
SANDERS, William Stephen	CAPT	700630	23d TASS	9W 107
SANDOVAL, Daniel Flore	SP5	680415	FOB-3	50E 10
SANFORD, Albert Russell	CPL	680330	B/1/26	47E 16
SANSEVERINO, Anthony	CPL	670429	F/2/12	18E 116
SANTISTEVAN, Benny Manual Jr.	PFC	680402	I/3/26	47E 43
SARGENT, George Thomas Jr.	LTCOL	690321	1/4	28W 3
SATTER, Donald Stephen	PFC	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 13
SAUER, Phillip Howard	1/Lt	670424	A/3d AT	18E 81
SAUNDERS, Bruce Allan	LCPL	690225	E/2/4	31W 57
SAUNDERS, Donald Baron	PFC	680304	HQ/1/13	42E 71
SAXTON, Gary Lee	LCPL	680122	HQ 26 Mar	35E 11
SCANLON, Michael John	CPL	670118	3d FRC	14E 50
SCARBOROUGH, Russell	HM3	680406	G/2/26	48E 34
SCARBROUGH, David Clifton	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 28
SCATES, Charles Edward Jr.	PFC	680518	H/2/3	63E 1
SCHAEFER, Thomas Koenig	PFC	690303	C/1/4	30W 30
SCHAFER, Marvin Albert	LCPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 128
SCHAFER, Marvin Albert	LCPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 128
SCHANEBERG, Leroy Clyde	CAPT	700630	40 ARRS	9W 107
SCHARNBERG, Ronald Oliver	MAJ	710317	3-187	4W 56
SCHAVELIN, Hugh Ernest	LCPL	680416	D/1/9	50E 21
SCHELL, William Leroy	SP4	710323	C/1-11	4W 71
SCHLEY, Robert James	CPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 128
SCHLUTTER, William David	1/Lt	710317	51D	4W 56
SCHMALTZ, Douglas Ralph	CPL	710207	A/4-3	5W 84
SCHMITZ, Richard Travis	CPL	670430	G/2/3	18E 128
SCHNEIDER, David Francis	CPL	680214	K/3/9	39E 39
SCHOLZ, Klaus Dieter	SFC	681130	FOB-1	37W 14
SCHROEDER, Donald Ray	CPL	680407	F/2/26	48E 47
SCHROEDER, Joe Lawrence	PFC	670316	E/2/9	16E 98

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
SCHUCK, Donald Philip	PVT	680528	F/2/3	64W 15
SCHULTZ, Gerald Wayne	PFC	690303	G/2/4	30W 31
SCHULTZ, Sheldon Duane	WO-1	680105	176 Avn Co	33E 53
SCHURRER, Jon Rodney	CPL	680618	M/3/4	56W 28
SCOTT, Edward Drake	LCPL	680612	K/3/4	57W 4
SCOTT, James Frank	LCPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 38
SCOTT, Jeremiah	GYSGT	680201	I/3/26	36E 60
SCOTT, Walter Michael	PVT	680211	H&S/1/26	38E 80
SCRIBNER, Gary David	LCPL	680124	B/3d Recon	35E 27
SCULL, Gary Bernard	MAJ	700312	MACV	13W 120
SCULLEN, Thomas James	PFC	680302	D/1/9	42E 41
SEALL, George Melvin	LCPL	670430	G/2/3	18E 121
SEARS, Michael	CPL	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 33
SEDILLO, Juan Natividad	CPL	680408	H&S/1/9	48E 54
SEE, Otto William	SFC	680407	A/1-9	48E 47
SEEL, Walter Phillip, Jr.	HM2	690225	?	31W 58
SEGINE, Ronald Eugene	LCPL	680529	A/1/1	63W 13
SELDERS, William Dean	PVT	680205	K/3/26	37E 43
SELLERS, Floyd Eugene	PFC	680730	G/2/4	50W 37
SEVELL, Robert Lee	CAPT	680228	HMM-262	41E 72
SEXTON, David Mason	SGT	710315	B/5-4 Arty	4W 51
SEYMOE, Joseph Phillip	LTC	680121	MACV Det 19	35E 8
SGAMBATI, Paul Anthony	SP4	710303	A/158 AHB	4W 20
SHAFER, Francis Leo Jr.	CAPT	680330	D/1/9	47E 15
SHANNON, Stephen Craig	LCPL	680322	C/1/26	45E 60
SHARP, Allen Morris	PFC	690225	E/2/4	31W 58
SHARP, Lufkin Scott	CAPT	680619	HMM-161	55W 2
SHARP, Samuel Arthur Jr.	LCPL	670510	A/3d Recon	19E 86
SHATTUCK, Harold Leon Jr.	PFC	690615	H/2/4	22W 54
SHAUM, Ray Thomas Jr.	PFC	690303	C/1/4	30W 33
SHAVER, Ronald Lee	HM3	680622	BLT 2/4	55W 20
SHELTON, Henry Earl	PFC	680526	M/3/4	66W 12
SHEPARD, James Merrill Jr.	CPL	670627	CAC O	22E 73
SHERIDAN, Phillip Francis	LCPL	680414	C/1/13	50E 1
SHERREL, David Frank	CPL	670606	A/3d Recon	31E 63
SHIMAMOTO, Keisaburo	Civilian	710210	Photo-Newswk	not on
SHINAULT, John Michael	1/Lt	690507	C/3rd Recon	25W 29
SHINKAWA, Roy Yasushi	WO	710223	173 AHC	4W 1
SHIVER, Charles Jr.	LCPL	670430	M/3/3	18E 129
SHOCK, Jack Dean	CPL	690114	H&S/1/4	34W 2
SHOVLIN, Frank Joseph	PFC	670607	B/1/26	21E 70
SHUE, Donald Monroe	SFC	691103	CCN	16W 24
SHULL, Sandy Lee	LCPL	680216	H&S/1/9	39E 66
SIKORSKI, Larry Joseph	LCPL	690225	H Btry, 3/12	31W 58
SILER, Jimmy Louis	PFC	680215	B/1/9	39E 53
SILVA, Rito	LCPL	680618	K/3/4	56W 30
SILVEIRA, Leonel Mendonca	LCPL	690921	H&S/3/4	18W 123
SIMMONS, William	PFC	680606	G/2/4	59W 15
SIMOES, Anthony	SP4	680401	1-50	47E 36
SIMON, James Martin	SP4	710216	D/4-3	5W 112
SIMON, Michael Wayne	LCPL	680605	C/1/1	60W 22

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
SIMONSON, Larry Arnold	SP4	710325	173 AHC	4W 78
SIMPSON, Morris Alfred	1/Lt	710228	C/2-17	4wW 12
SINGER, Michael Ernest	PFC	680707	D/1/1	53W 39
SINK, Melvin Francis	CPL	671013	D/1/26	27E 101
SISSON, Bennie Joe	PFC	680322	C/1/26	45E 60
SKAGGS, Harold Alonzo	PFC	690604	D/3d Recon	23W 68
SKANSON, Louis James	PFC	680704	M/3/9	53W 14
SKINNER, Phillip Craig	LCPL	670503	E/2/3	19E 32
SKINNER, Walter Francis	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 30
SKIPPER, Michael Ray	PFC	690422	H/2/4	26W 27
SKUZA, Arvid Burdeen	LCPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 39
SLACK, Steven George	PFC	680214	D/1/9	39E 39
SLAWEK, Joseph Dennis Jr.	PFC	690404	E/2/3	27W 13
SLOAT, Gregory Alec	SGT	710218	H&MS-1	5W 118
SMITH, Alan Ray	PFC	680205	E/2/26	37E 44
SMITH, Author "C"	LCPL	680330	B/1/26	47E 17
SMITH, Cary Carson	1/Lt	680222	HMH-463	40E 69
SMITH, Charles Daniel	LCPL	680615	L/3/4	57W 31
SMITH, Dennis	PFC	680404	D/1/26	48E 11
SMITH, Donald Lee	LCPL	680606	D/1/4	59W 15
SMITH, Douglas Wayne	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 30
SMITH, Harold Roger	PFC	680403	A/1-5	47E 55
SMITH, James Herbert Jr.	LCPL	680306	FLSG-A	43E 35
SMITH, James Lee	PFC	690313	M/3/4	29W 32
SMITH, Jimmy Herman	LCPL	680610	H&S/2/1	58W 20
SMITH, John Archer	PFC	680208	I/3/26	38E 39
SMITH, Joseph Frederick Jr.	SP5	690618	D/1-61	22W 82
SMITH, Larry Michael	CPL	670430	M/3/3	19E 1
SMITH, Lyle Elton	SGT	710219	3/D/1-11	5W 121
SMITH, Matthew Edward	PFC	690411	E/2/4	27W 59
SMITH, Michael Stephen	LCPL	680528	F/2/3	64W 15
SMITH, Richard John	HN	680408	B/3d Recon	48E 55
SMITH, Richard William	PFC	690314	M/3/4	29W 40
SMITH, Rickey Gene	PFC	670430	M/3/3	19E 1
SMITH, Robert Lee	LCPL	680531	H&S/2/3	62W 17
SMITH, Terrence Glenn	SGT	680121	HQ 26 Mar	35E 9
SMITH, Terry Lee	CPL	680220	H&S/3/26	40E 48
SMITH, Willie Franklin	PFC	690225	H/2/4	31W 59
SNEAD, Bernard James	PFC	680611	A/1/4	58W 29
SNYDER, Gary Foster	SFC	700506	A/2-501	11W 117
SNYDER, John Herbert	A2C	671015	314 TAW	28E 12
SNYDER, John Marshall Jr.	LCPL	680407	G/2/26	48E 48
SOBEL, Irwin Ross	PFC	680327	M/3/26	46E 50
SOLDATO, Shane Nunzio	MAJ	700523	B-52	10W 88
SOMERS, Gregory S	PVT	710204	A/2-17	5W 77
SOUTHER, John Martin	WO	710226	498 Med Co	4W 7
SOUTHERN, Rickey Dale	CPL	670426	K/3/3	18E 98
SOYLAND, David Pecor	CWO	710517	C-158 AHB	3W 39
SPACH, Jimmy Russell	PFC	680406	B/2-7	48E 35
SPANGLER, Larry Keith	CPL	680212	HQ 26 Mar	39E 13
SPARKS, Jon Michael	CWO	710319	48 AHC	4W 58

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
SPARKS, Ronald David	PFC	680406	D-2-12 Cav	48E 35
SPARKS, Steven Lee	PFC	680406	H&S/1/9	48E 35
SPEIR, Dale Lloyd	CPL	670606	A/3d Recon	21E 63
SPICER, Jonathan Nathaniel	PFC	680314	B/1/26	44E 54
SPICZKA, Aloysius Francis Jr.	PFC	680615	K/3/4	57W 34
SPILLMAN, Charles Otto	BU1	680228	CBMU-301 B	41E 74
SPINDLER, John Gates	2/Lt	680421	G/2/3	51E 25
SRSEN, Steve Albert	PFC	670127	A/1/3	14E 89
STACKS, Raymond Clark	CAPT	681130	FOB-1	37W 14
STAFFORD, James Hubert	SFC	710216	D/4-3	5W 112
STAHL, Roger William	CPL	710322	C/3-187	4W 68
STALLINGS, Franklin Delano	1/Lt	670504	A-101 USSF	19E 41
STAMPS, Johnny Green	PFC	690313	M/3/4	29W 34
STANCIU, Kenneth Allan	LCPL	680306	K/3/26	43E 35
STANTON, Emmett Charles	PFC	680228	A/3d Eng	41E 74
STAPLES, James Arthur	PFC	690407	F/2/4	27W 34
STAPLES, Louis Franklin	LCPL	680205	E/2/26	37E 45
STARK, Willie Ernest	SMAJ	661202	Det B52	13E 7
STAYER, Harry Sherman	SP4	680401	8th Eng	47E 37
STEARNS, Roger Horace	CAPT	690911	390 TFS	18W 73
STEDMAN, Paul Francis	LCPL	680226	A/3d Shore P	41E 44
STEFFEN, Frederick George	HN	680524	H&S/2/3	69E 3
STEIN, Ronald Marvin	CPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 75
STENBERG, Jerry Oscar	LCPL	680121	C/1/13	35E 10
STEVENSON, Charles Robert	PFC	680205	E/2/26	37E 45
STEWART, Paul Clark	CWO	710208	C-158 AHB	5W 89
STEWART, Rick James	PFC	670627	A/1/13	22E 73
STEWART, Tommy Lane	PFC	680208	A/1/9	38E 40
STICKEL, Gary Stephen	PFC	671222	B/3d Recon	32E 48
STITT, Richard Wesley	PFC	690318	G/2/3	29W 73
STOLLAR, Larry David	LCPL	690502	HMM-262	26W 103
STOLLEY, William R Jr.	LCPL	690314	M/3/4	29W 41
STOOPS, Jonathan Lynn	PFC	680606	H&S/1/4	59W 16
STORZ, George William	SGT	680308	H&S/1/9	43E 62
STOUDT, Gordon Edward	LCPL	670430	K/3/9	19E 1
STOVALL, Wilbur	LCPL	680309	HQ 1/13	44E 1
STRAUSBAUGH, Howard Albert	LCPL	680309	H&S/2/26	44E 1
STREET, Lenard Jr.	PFC	680403	H&S/2/3	47E 56
STRONG, Gridley Barstow	PFC	680421	H/2/1	51E 25
STRONG, Stanley Grant	CPL	680306	C/1/26	43E 35
STROUD, Roger Lee	CPL	680707	C/1/1	53W 40
STUCK, Ransom Lee	PVT	680226	C/1/26	41E 44
STULL, Jay Webster	CAPT	680228	HqBn, 3dMarD	41E 69
STUPAR, Michael Nick	LCPL	670606	H&S/1/26	21E 64
SULANDER, Daniel Arthur	WO	661202	17th Avn Grp	13E 7
SULLIVAN, Neil Brian	CPL	680518	E/3d Recon	63E 2
SUMNER, James Howell	1stSgt	690502	F/2/4	26W 103
SUNIGA, Michael Edward	LCPL	671222	K/3/26	32E 48
SUTTER, Richard Furlong	CPL	670721	M/3/26	23E 105
SUTTON, Bryan James	LTC	710317	3-187	4W 56
SUTTON, Jack Lenn	LCPL	670424	B/1/9	18E 82

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
SWAIN, Craig Francis	PFC	680802	E/2/4	49W 1
SWANGVARIM, Lawrence Alfred	PFC	680406	D/2-12	48E 36
SWEENEY, Thomas James	LCPL	680226	C/1/26	41E 45
SWEET, Jerry Alan	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 24
SWISHER, Clifford Lee	PFC	690322	H/2/3	28W 15
SWOPE, Charles Frederick	CAPT	661109	USAF FAC	12E 49
SZMANSKI, Frank Adam IV	PFC	680226	I/3/26	41E 31
TAGLIEBER, Leonard Joseph	LCPL	670705	LSU	23E 16
TALLENT, Gary Glenn	LCPL	670820	B/3d Recon	24E 21
TATE, Lyle Scott	CPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 75
TAYLOR, Albert Russell II	SSGT	680618	K/3/4	56W 28
TAYLOR, Bobby Allen	CPL	680203	B/1/9	37E 14
TAYLOR, Danny Gene	SSGT	660928	5th SFGA	11E 27
TAYLOR, Dennis Lee	PFC	690605	H/2/9	23W 79
TAYLOR, Ernest Vernon	PFC	680205	E/2/26	37E 45
TAYLOR, Homer Jr.	CPL	680218	I/3/26	40E 14
TAYLOR, James	LCPL	680705	G/2/1	53W 25
TAYLOR, James Harry	CAPT	710215	C/159 ASHB	5W 109
TAYLOR, James Otis	PFC	680306	2/26	43E 36
TAYLOR, Louis Gaines	LCPL	680306	A/1/26	43E 36
TAYLOR, Philip Joseph	PFC	690303	C/1/4	30W 33
TAYLOR, Robert L	SFC	680404	FOB-3	48E 13
TAYLOR, Steven Earl	PVT	680414	L/3/26	50E 2
TAYLOR, Ted James	CAPT	710715	A/2-17	3W 108
TEETH, Austin	PFC	690428	H&S/1/4	26W 75
TERAN, Refugio Thomas	SSGT	700506	E/2-501	11W 117
TERHUNE, Daryl Bert Jr.	PFC	680306	G/2/26	43E 36
TERRELL, William Lee	PFC	680306	A/1/26	43E 36
TERRY, Allen Lee	CPL	680430	H/2/3	53E 24
THEYERL, Clayton Joseph	PFC	680225	B/1/26	41E 31
THIBAULT, Jeffrey Allen	PFC	680615	M/3/4	57W 32
THOMAS, Barry Don	LCPL	670507	E/2/3	19E 54
THOMAS, Charles Wayne	CPL	690305	C/1/4	30W 50
THOMAS, Clyde	CPL	710315	B/5-4 Arty	4W 52
THOMAS, Gary Joseph	CPL	680518	E/3d Recon	63E 3
THOMAS, Joseph Eugene	PFC	680707	D/1/1	53W 40
THOMAS, Michael Howard	2/Lt	680120	I/3/26	34E 92
THOMAS, Nathan	PFC	680615	L/3/4	57W 32
THOMAS, William Philip	PFC	690502	H/2/4	26W 104
THOMPSON, Kenneth David	PFC	680411	A/1-8	49E 26
THOMPSON, Louis Kenneth	LCPL	680705	D/1/1	53W 24
THOMPSON, Philip Bruce	PFC	690321	D/1/4	28W 5
THOMPSON, Randall Alan	CPL	710325	B/1-1	43W 7
THORNTON, Alan Wayne	PFC	690314	M/3/4	29W 41
THORPE, Dennis Ray	SGT	680415	FOB-3	50E 9
THORPE, Gary Wilford	CPL	680223	H&S/1/26	41E 5
THOTLAND, John Alfred	LCPL	680228	HMM-262	42E 1
TIJERINA, Albert Jr.	CAPT	710301	21 SOS	4W 15
TILLSON, Cardner Jr	HM2	670509	F/2/3	19E 75
TINGLEY, Thomas James	LCPL	671230	B/3d Recon	33E 5
TINO, John Francis Jr.	PFC	670430	E/2/3	19E 1

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
TIRADO, Daniel	PFC	690507	C/3rd Recon	25W 19
TODD, Robert Jacy	PVT	670509	F/2/3	19E 75
TONER, Louis Joseph	HN	680306	H&S/3/26	43E 37
TOOMEY, Samuel Kamu III	MAJ	681130	FOB-1	37W 15
TORRES, Manuel Prieto	CPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 42
TOTH, John Paul	SGT	680228	HMM-262	42E 2
TOTTEN, Kenneth Romaine Jr.	PFC	680330	B/1/26	47E 17
TOWSLEE, Edward Lawrence	PFC	680404	A/1/9	48E 12
TRAIL, Robert Hill III	PFC	690225	H&S/2/4	31W 60
TRAINOR, Paul William	PFC	680802	E/2/24	49W 2
TRANTHAM, Donald Ray	LCPL	680531	B/1/1	62W 18
TRANTHAM, Raymond Farley	LCPL	680519	F/2/1	63E 15
TRAVER, John Grove III	WO	710322	176 AHC	4W 69
TRAVIS, Edward Burke	CPL	670627	A/1/13	22E 73
TREDENNICK, Charles Nichol	SFC	680129	FOB-3	35E 63
TREVINO, Rudolph Robert	PFC	690531	M/3/9	23W 34
TREVINO, Savas Escamilla	PFC	690602	M/3/9	23W 48
TRIGALET, Robert Ernest	1/Lt	690502	HMM-262	26W 104
TRIMBLE, James Mitchell	CPL	680406	G/2/26	48E 35
TROYANO, Roland Dean	PFC	710207	A/4-3	5W 85
TRUJILLO, Felix Marcial	SGT	710403	HHC/1-77	4W 104
TUCKER, James Eric	PFC	690225	H&S/2/4	31W 60
TURNER, Brendan Xavier	PFC	690605	H/2/9	23W 80
TURNER, Michael Glenn	LCPL	680421	G/2/3	51E 26
TURNER, Robert Lawrence	1/SGT	680211	A/1/9	38E 82
TURNER, William Oliver	CPL	680228	H&S/3d Shr P	42E 1
TWOMEY, Raymond Lee	PFC	670424	B/1/9	18E 82
TWOREK, Gerald John	SSG	710208	C/1-11	5W 90
TYCZ, James Neil	SGT	670510	A/3d Recon	19E 88
TYRCZ, Walter Fred Jr.	PFC	680314	A/1/26	44E 54
USHER, Terry Maxwell	1/Lt	710223	173 AHC	4W 1
UUTELA, Derris Lee	PFC	680605	D/1/4	60W 23
UZZELL, Frank Nelson	PVT	680127	D/1/26	35E 51
VALENTE, Anthony Nicholas	GYSGT	680226	C/1/9	41E 56
VALRIE, Dwight Theodore	PFC	680519	F/2/1	63E 19
VAN BEUKERING, Ronald Dale	SP4	700506	A/2-501	11W 118
VAN DER SHANS, Donald Ed	HN	680401	H&S/1/9	47E 37
VAN DEUSEN, Philip Andren	PFC	670607	A/1/13	31E 68
VAN TASSELL, James Warren	CPL	680705	D/1/26	53W 24
VANCE, Reggie Lee	PFC	680222	A/1/26	40E 70
VANDERHEID, Mark Edward	LCPL	680628	B/1/1	54W 8
VANN, Ronald Bryson	1/Lt	690425	C/1-44	26W 51
VASQUEZ, Jesus Roberto	SGT	680130	EOD	35E 83
VASQUEZ, Patrick John	LCPL	670721	M/3/26	23E 105
VAUGHT, William H III	SGT	700523	158 AHB	10W 88
VEDDER, Richard Jerome	SGT	670316	E/2/9	16E 103
VERCOUTEREN, Edward Arnold	LCPL	670607	B/1/26	21E 71
VERCRUYSSE, Gregory Paul	HN	670607	B/1/26	21E 71
VESER, Edward	SP4	700506	E/2-501	11W 118
VICKERS, Robert Lee	LCPL	680306	A/1/26	43E 37
VIX, Stephen August Jr.	PFC	690502	F/2/4	26W 104

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
VLASAK, William James Jr.	LCPL	670502	G/2/3	19E 19
VOORHIES, Emory David	CPL	680609	H&S/2/4	58W 16
VORENKAMP, David R	PFC	690702	G/2/4	21W 49
VRANKOVICH, Nicholas Samuel	LCPL	680524	G/2/3	70E 1
WAFER, David Earl	PFC	680629	G/2/4	54W 21
WAGNER, James Joseph	PVT	690424	F/2/4	26W 41
WAINZ, Robert Michael	LCPL	670424	B/1/9	18E 83
WALBRIDGE, George Wilcox	SSGT	680210	H&HS-1	38E 73
WALD, Gunther Herbert	SFC	691103	CCN	16W 25
WALDRON, Howard Bert	MSGT	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 37
WALKER, Richard Lee	CPL	670627	I/3/26	22E 74
WALKER, Thomas Edward	PFC	680605	D/1/4	60W 24
WALKER, Tommy Dale	SP4	680410	C/1-12	49E 17
WALLACE, Jackie Elmore	PFC	680615	M/3/4	57W 33
WALLACE, Michael Walter	LCDR	680328	VFP63 Det 14	46E 60
WALLER, Charles Robert	LCPL	670509	F/2/3	19E 76
WALLER, Therman Morris	A1C	660203	311 ACS	4E 135
WALSH, Charles Sumner	PFC	680315	K/3/9	44E 62
WALSH, Donald Kevin	HN	690225	H&S/2/4	31W 60
WALSH, Jeffrey Michael	LCPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 41
WALTERS, Craig Collins	SP4	680505	B/1-5	55E 34
WALTERS, Tim Leroy	SSGT	690309	MACV	30W 97
WANN, Donald Lynn	CWO	710601	D/158	3W 61
WARD, Alexander Kearney	CAPT	680214	K/3/9	39E 68
WARD, Walter Leonard	CPL	670607	B/1/26	21E 71
WARREN, Donald Albert	CPL	680330	B/1/26	47E 18
WASSENICH, Stephen George	CPL	670627	I/3/26	22E 74
WEBER, Joseph Alan	PFC	690224	B/1/4	31W 41
WEED, Donald Edmond	CPL	680127	B/1/9	35E 51
WEINTRAUB, Neil William	PFC	680622	G/2/4	55W 19
WEISS, William Conrad	SP4	700506	A/2-158 AHB	11W 118
WELD, Julio Cesar	PFC	690311	G/2/4	29W 17
WELDY, George W Jr	PFC	690225	H&S/2/4	31W 61
WELLMAN, William Martin Jr	CPL	690604	D/3d Recon	23W 69
WELLS, James Randall	LCPL	680407	F/2/26	48E 49
WELLS, Robert James Jr	PFC	680416	A/1/9	50E 23
WENGER, David Allen	PFC	680609	H/2/4	58W 12
WENTZELL, Jeffrey Raymond	LCPL	680214	K/3/9	39E 41
WESSLER, Daniel Guy	PFC	690319	G/2/4	29W 86
WEST, James Edward Jr.	LCPL	680531	E/2/3	62W 19
WEST, John Thomas	CAPT	700102	25 TFS	15W 117
WEST, Seth Lee Jr.	SSGT	680416	C/1/9	50E 24
WEST, Stephen Alan	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 38
WESTCOTT, Gary Patrick	SP5	720330	8th ARFFS	2W 125
WETHINGTON, David L Jr.	HN	680302	H&S/1/9	42E 45
WHEELER, Joseph Keith	PFC	680331	C/1/9	47E 28
WHISENHUNT, James Henry	CPL	670430	M/3/3	19E 1
WHITAKER, Donald Eugene	CPL	680225	B/1/26	41E 32
WHITE, Charles Clinton	LCPL	680611	A/1/4	58W 30
WHITE, Larry Frederick	LCPL	680121	H&S/3/26	35E 10
WHITE, Michael Matthew	PFC	680612	K/3/4	57W 5

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA
NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
WHITE, Wesley William	LCPL	680402	E/2/1	47E 44
WHITESIDES, Richard Lebrou	CAPT	640326	19th Tac Grp	1E 48
WHITLOW, Ronald David	HM3	680806	BLT 2/4	49W 21
WHITNEY, Blake Dominic	PVT	710209	C/8-4	5W 92
WHITTED, Joe Ray	SGT	680515	H&S/2/3	61E 5
WHITTEN, Tommie Joe	GYSGT	670509	F/2/3	19E 76
WHITTICOM, Jonathan Charle	LCPL	670627	H&S/1/26	22E 74
WICKLIFFE, Robert Logan	HM3	680122	H&S/3/26	35E 13
WIDEN, John George	SGT	700506	A/2-501	11W 119
WIEDEMAN, Robert Arthur	CPL	680225	I/3/26	41E 33
WIENCKOSKI, David Raymond	PFC	680306	L/3/26	43E 39
WILEY, Gilbert	LCPL	680407	F/2/26	48E 49
WILKINS, Gary Lee	LCPL	680519	H/2/3	64E 2
WILKINSON, Clyde David	CAPT	710212	C/2-17	5W 100
WILLEY, John James	SSG	700506	A/2-501	11W 119
WILLIAMS, Derex Jr.	CAPT	670823	20th TASS	25E 36
WILLIAMS, Dorsey Burwin	PFC	670430	M/3/3	19E 2
WILLIAMS, Douglas Candit	SGT	680219	HHB-2-94	40E 34
WILLIAMS, Doyle	PSGT	680402	1-8 Cav	47E 44
WILLIAMS, Eddie Lee	SGM	661003	FOB-1	11E 40
WILLIAMS, Hollis Jr.	LCPL	680306	H/2/26	43E 39
WILLIAMS, Ira Winard	LCPL	670627	A/1/26	22E 75
WILLIAMS, James	SGT	670804	M/3/26	24E 79
WILLIAMS, James Alec	LCPL	680701	D/1/1	54W 34
WILLIAMS, Kenneth R Jr.	CPL	680309	2/26	44E 1
WILLIAMS, Maxie Raymond	1/Lt	680410	A/1/26	49E 17
WILLIAMS, Nathaniel Mearlo	PFC	680416	C/1/9	50E 22
WILLIAMS, Richard Earl	PFC	680405	M/3/26	48E 22
WILLIAMS, Robert Earl	PFC	670509	F/2/3	19E 76
WILLIAMS, Robert Eugene	LCPL	680705	D/1/1	53W 25
WILLIAMS, Samuel	CPL	680531	B/1/1	62W 19
WILLIAMS, Ted	LCPL	670316	B/1/9	16E 98
WILLIAMS, Thomas Earl Jr.	1/Lt	690502	HMM-262	26W 105
WILLIAMS, Thomas Hansford	PFC	680306	H&S/1/26	43E 39
WILLIAMS, Tommy Dorsey	PFC	680417	L/3/26	50E 35
WILLIAMS, William Jack	PFC	670627	L/3/26	22E 75
WILLIAMS, Woodrow	LCPL	670503	E/2/3	19E 45
WILLIAMSON, James D	SFC	680105	176 Avn Co	33E 54
WILLIBER, Gerald Paul	CPL	680519	F/2/1	64E 1
WILLS, Robert John	LCPL	680615	K/3/4	57W 31
WILSON, Carl Richard Jr.	2/Lt	690321	H&S/1/4	28W 7
WILSON, Eugene	PFC	680606	C/1/4	59W 18
WILSON, Reginald Eugene	PFC	670721	B/1/26	23E 106
WILSON, Ronald Eugene	PFC	680401	2-5 Cav	47E 37
WILSON, Wayne Michael	CPL	690530	M/3/9	23W 24
WILSON, Wilmer Dwayne	HN	680416	H&S/1/9	50E 24
WINGENBACH, Glenn S Jr.	PFC	690306	L/3/4	30W 61
WIRE, Eugene Charles	GYSGT	680223	M/3/26	41E 6
WITHEY, Howarde Hugh	CPL	670606	A/3d Recon	21E 64
WITMER, Omar David Jr.	PFC	670917	A/1/26	26E 86
WOLF, [Monsieur] ?	civilian	640200	pharmacist	not on

Alphabetical Listing of Khe Sanh KIA

NAME	RANK	DATE	UNIT	WALL
WOMBLE, William Thomas Jr	LCPL	670503	E/2/3	19E 34
WOOD, Carl Mitchell	WO	710205	D-3-5 Cav	5W 80
WOOD, James Anthony	LCPL	680225	E/2/26	41E 33
WOOD, Strather Franklin	1/Lt	710218	HMH-463	5W 119
WOODALL, John Braxton	1/Lt	670430	K/3/9	19E 2
WOODARD, Jon Robert	PFC	680705	1/1	53W 25
WOODARD, Paul Leroy	SSGT	680315	A/1/9	44E 63
WOODARD, Wayne Howard	CPL	670430	M/3/9	29E 2
WOODEN, Charlie K	SGT	680411	B/1-7	49E 28
WOODS, Cordell Emanuel	LCPL	680216	H&S/1/9	39E 68
WOODS, David Alexander	SFC	671101	FOB-1	29E 8
WOODS, Gerald Ernest	WO	710218	A/101	5W 119
WOODS, John Kevin	1/Lt	680211	H&S/3/26	39E 1
WOOLSEY, Jack Lee	LCPL	680709	H/2/4	58W 16
WORTHEN, Larry Eugene	PFC	670607	B/1/26	21E 72
WORTHINGTON, Richard Char Jr.	CWO	700506	A/158 AHB	9W 125
WRIGHT, Arkie Junior	SGT	680219	HHB-2-94	40E 35
WRIGHT, Edward Taylor	GYSGT	680611	A/1/4	58W 30
WRIGHT, Michael Dale	SP4	710324	C/4-3	4W 75
WRIGHT, Michael Vincent	PFC	680226	E/2/26	41E 46
WRIGHT, O'Neal	LCPL	680131	A/1/9	36E 44
WRIGHT, Robert	CPL	680416	C/1/9	50E 24
WURTZ, Emil John	HN	680222	H&S/3/26	40E 71
WYMER, William Wayne	PFC	680416	A/1/9	50E 24
YAGUES, Robert Gene	PFC	670503	E/2/3	19E 34
YAMANAKA, Roger Kimo	LCPL	680304	H&S/3/26	43E 2
YBARRA, Ricardo	PFC	680527	M/3/4	64W 4
YEARY, Randall Douglas	2/Lt	680114	B/3d Recon	34E 48
YERION, Jefrfrey Allen	PFC	680504	E/2/3	54E 41
YOHN, William Leon	LCPL	680407	G/2/26	48E 50
YORK, Henry	CPL	680208	A/1/9	38E 42
YOUMANS, James Nelson	PFC	680518	K/3/4	63E 2
YOUNG, James Ray	PFC	680518	E/3d Recon	63E 3
YOUNG, John Curtis	LCPL	680527	M/3/4	64W 4
ZAPPIA, Michael Lee	PFC	690225	H/2/4	31W 63
ZAWADZKI, Gerald David	CPL	690225	H/2/4	31W 63
ZERBST, Gilbert Leroy	PFC	680407	F/2/26	48E 50
ZIEGENFELDER, Frederick P	SSG	700506	A/2-501	11W 119
ZIEGLER, Lawrence Goric	GYSGT	680515	F/2/3	61E 5
ZIMMERMAN, David Paul	LCPL	680421	G/2/3	51E 27

CHISELED MEMORIES (A TANKA)[4163]

Chiseled memories
Granite permanence enshrined
Eternal world touched
Laid down life—no greater love lives—a bountiful garden.
--Ray William Stubbe, 11 May 2003

BEHOLDING THE WALL BEHOLDING GOD (A Sestina)

O Lord, You search our heart, You touch our hurt;
You lift our sadness, show'ring gifts of goodness:
Your power, presence, promise, perfect peace.
You give so we may live despite our loss.
The burdens borne and prices paid, we see—
Yet know Your constant comfort, kind compassion.

These walls' long arms embracing in compassion—
We gaze at names which peer into our hurt.
We know, behold what others do not see,
While You, O Lord, are reaching with Your goodness,
Your penetrating eyes regard our loss;
Your mighty arms embrace in strengthening peace.

Reverberating terrors cease in peace
Accomp'n'ing Presence of Your own compassion,
While we regarding gravely granite loss,
Un-healing wounds revealing ru'nous hurt,
Enfolded in the greatness of Your goodness,
Embraced by blessing, we Your mercy see.

This wall, an opportunity to see,
A place within our space, a grace, a peace:
Remembrance of our brothers and their goodness
Who live within us, bonded in compassion,
Who hallow hollow heart halls of our hurt,
And fully fill with flow'rs our lasting loss.

Mementos placed as symbols of our loss—
We walk, we move, we search, we stop, we see

[4163] Prayer poem completed 11 May 2003 for ceremony at visiting Vietnam Wall to Veterans Park, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, 15 and 16 May 2003. The Tanka, an ancient Japanese poem form, consists of a Haiku of five syllables in the first line, seven in the second, and five in the third, followed by two lines of seven syllables each. It predates the Haiku.

Uncovered chards of broken memories' hurt.
Perhaps another with us hugs their peace
And You, O Lord, contain us in compassion
And hold and hug and help us in Your goodness.

Now may the Lord bless us and all with goodness.
Now may our good Lord's love fill all our loss.
May we receive and live and give compassion,
Your purpose, Lord, within this place to see.
Now may our Lord bless you with healing peace.
Now may our caring Lord heal all your hurt.

All shall see their goodness and compassion
Who pass and pause and touch our hurt and loss;
And may the Lord now bless us with His peace.
--Ray William Stubbe, 10 May 2003[4164]

A PRAYER[4165]

O Lord, our God:
Today we pause, we ponder, we remember
we never walk alone;
You are always with us
no matter where we are in time or place.
Today we see a face—always yet never now near, a place at a table, in a room, in a chair now empty, we expect to hear a voice,
see a presence we love forever in the emptiness, in the shadows, on our cross, You!
stand beside us, with us, near us always Your strengthening arms embrace and assure, strengthen, give courage, peace!

[4164] Completed 10 May 2003 for ceremony of the visiting Vietnam Wall to Veterans Park, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, 15 and 16 May 2003. The sestina, an unrhymed 39-line, 12th Century poem, follows a very intricate scheme: the last words of each line of each 6-line stanza are repeated in the following 6-line stanzas according to a fixed arrangement. The first line's last word becomes the last word of the next stanza's first line. The second line's last word is the last word of the next stanza's fourth line. The third line's last word is the last word of the next stanza's sixth line. The fourth line's last word is the last word of the next stanza's fifth line. The fifth line's last word is the last word of the next stanza's third line. The Envoy ("send off") includes all six final words, distributed with the first three in the first part, the last in the last.

[4165] Poem prayer completed 23 August 2008 for a ceremony at the Zablocki Veterans Administration Medical Center, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, correlated with a ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, D.C., 24 August 2008 as a small team of runners arrived, having began a run on 14 June in California, in remembrance of the fallen from Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Alone we fall and fail;
with You we triumph, hope in You, the source of love and life joining us,
an invisible fabric of threads woven in love
a radiant tapestry in heaven above yet now dimly visible and known.
O Lord, sooth and calm the troubled waters of our soul that flow in tears and fear's dark night
Your blessing conveying now and forever upon us Your life, Your love,
Your Holy Name. Amen.
--Ray William Stubbe, 24 August 2008

APPENDIX

THOSE AT KHE SANH WHO DIED AFTER LEAVING KHE SANH
NAME	UNIT	RANK	DIED	CAUSE
ADAMS, Larry Earl	D/1/26	LCPL	19680629	KIA
ALAIRE, Richard	A/1/26		?	?
ALBERS, Craig William	CAC O	CPL	19820415	?
ALDERMAN, Harry J	3/26, CO	COL	20070204
ALLEN, Charles	FOB3	COL	20030424	Stroke
ANDERSON, George	B/1/26 supply		20060510	Died in hospice
ASASAKI, Jerry	Seabees		19910920	Heart attack
AUEN, David Oliver	D/1/26	LCPL	19680607	KIA
BABBITT, Manuel P.	A/3d Ats		19990505	Murdered
BADDGOR, Patrick L	B/3d Tanks		20030504	Agent Orange
BAIG, Mirza Munir	Hq26Mar	CAPT	19710420	Assassinated
BAILEY, Beetle	C/1/9		19981122	?
BAILEY, George	1st Radio Co	GySgt	20041222	?
BALDWIN, Daniel Lord III	CCN	COL	19940601	Cancer stomach
BALDWIN, Donald	1/13		19941113	Heart attack
BANKS, Henry Duane	A/1/9	CAPT	19680714	KIA
BARKOWSKI, William J	A/1/13		19940601	Brain hemmorhage
BASKIN, Richard W	26Mar	SGT	19841118	Suicide gunshot
BENNETT, Prentice J.	B/1/9	CPL	19680717	KIA 52W 40
BERNARD, Robert	HqBn/3dMarDiv		?	?
BOHANNON, Edward J	K/3/9	CPL	19670521	KIA
BRACKMAN, James T. II	C/1/13	?	19930621	Lung cancer
BREWER, Robert	CIA		199612??	Cancer
BROWN, Edward J	F/2/26		1988	Heart attack
BURNS, Edward	A/3d Recon		198908	Cancer thymus
BURNS, Roy T	B/3d Recon		19951014	Alcohol related
BYSTROM, Tom	L/3/26		19921121	Car accident
CAHILL, John H "Blackie"`	1/9, CO	COL	20050714	?
CALDON, David	2/26	LtCol	20071214
CALZIA, Frank Vincent	B/1/26	HN	19680510	KIA
CAMPBELL, William Roger	E/2/26	PFC	19680606	KIA
CASEY, Thomas E	B/1/26	HM3	19980301	Abdominal aneurysm
CAUDILL, James	A/1/26		19680818	KIA
CAWLEY, Leo	1/1		19910721	Leukemia
CEFAIL, Norman	H&S/1/26	CAPT	?	Cancer
CENISEROS, Frank	H&S 26 Mar		20030402	Leukemia
CERRA, Bernard	HMH-463		19970629	?
CHAMBERS, James Larry	D/1/26	PFC	19690518	KIA
CHAPMAN, Kurtis Nolan	D/1/26	LCPL	19680509	KIA
CHVARAK, Don	108th Arty		?	?

THOSE AT KHE SANH WHO DIED AFTER LEAVING KHE SANH
NAME	UNIT	RANK	DIED	CAUSE
COATES, Charles Thomas	E/2/9	LCPL	19680527	KIA
COFFEY, Patrick	I/3/9		199504	Lung disease
COLEMAN, Charles L	D/1/26	CPL	19680531	KIA
COLEMAN, William Frank	D/1/26	PFC	19680416	KIA
CONICK, John E	ISO, 3dMarDiv		19990808	Sarciodosis
COPELAND, Charles	A/1/13		19870109	Lymphoma
COTTINGHAM, Duane Roger	D/1/26	LCPL	19680613	KIA
CRAIG, William	A-101 LangVei	MSGT	19990429
CRUNK, Virgil	B/1/26		2006
CUMMINGS, James H		COL	20050117	Pulmonary Disease
DABUZZO, Denny	E/2/26	LCPL	19680606	KIA
DAFFIN, Gary	E/2/26	LCPL	19680916	KIA
DAHLHEIMER, Gary	A/3rd Ats		2006 ?
DAMIANO, James			20010713
DEARING, Rich	C/1/26		2006
DEGRYSE, Richard	11th Eng		19891008	?
DESCHAINE, Norman C	D/1/26	CPL	19680607	KIA
D'HONDT, Camille	A/1/9	GySgt	20000113	Heart attack
DONNELLY, Joseph A	1/9, XO	MAJ	20061203	?
DORING, George	H&S/1/26		19900830	?
DOUGLAS, Thomas H.	M/3/26		19980408	Motorcycle accident
DRISCOLL, Fr. Walter	26th Mar Regt	LCDR	20020112	?
DUFFY, Patrick	H&S/1/26	1/Lt	1999	?
DURHAM, James C Jr. "Bull"	E/2/26	PFC	19680916	KIA
EPPS, James	C/1/26	1/Lt	20000118	Lung failure
ERNST, Clayton H.	3rd ForceRecon	SSGT	199502??	Brain stem detached
ESPY, Johnnie Bee	D/1/26	CPL	19680607	KIA
FAUREBRAC, Les	A/1/16		199201	Suicide
FERNANDEZ, Eugenio E Jr	D/1/26	PFC	19680509	KIA
FEYH, William	3rd Force Recon		20051109
FLOYD, David P	A/1/9		19940411	Brain tumor
FOX, Charles	C/1/26		20050814	?
FOX, Joseph	B/3d Recon		19700611	?
FRANK, Ernie	HQ/1/13 Comm		19970902	Heart attack
FRIEDRICH, John			2005	Cancer
GALBREATH, Bobby Frank	VMO-6	1/Lt	19680216	KIA
GARCIA, Larry	3dEng		199410	Cancer
GASTEN, John	B-52 crew		19990128	Alcohol
GEERDES, Dkonnie Delbert	D/1/26	LCPL	19680613	KIA
GILLASPY, Edward Andrew	D/1/26	PFC	19680509	KIA
GOMEZ, Ernesto			2007
GREENE, Bruce	B/1/26 CO	MAJ	20021026	?

THOSE AT KHE SANH WHO DIED AFTER LEAVING KHE SANH
NAME	UNIT	RANK	DIED	CAUSE
GRENAT, Richard	D/1/26		19990226	Cancer
GRIMES, Charles		COL	20080124	ALS
GUM, Edward Sheridan	D/1/26	CPL	19690222	KIA
HAALAND, John "Dutch"	3rdMarDiv, AO		20050226
HAGGEY, Jim	E/2/26	LCPL	19681206	KIA
HANNAH, Samuel James	D/1/26	2/Lt	19680607	KIA
HARRELL, Robert	3rd AT	?	2002	Liver cancer
HEAGY, James W	E/2/26	?	19681206	KIA
HEINRICH, John	I/3/26		199504	Cancer
HENDERSON, Larry	CCN	?	19951204	Lung cancer
HENNELLY, John	1/13-CO	LtCol	19950605	Heart attack
HENSON, Clark Lee Jr	D/1/26	SGT	19680616	KIA
HERB, Dennis	B/3rd Recon		20011127	Heart attack
HERNANDEZ, Aumont	FLC		19991124	?
HOLLAND, Roger Lee	?		19990219	?
HONN, Jerry	1/26	MSGT	20060503
HORNE, Thomas M.	SOP Khe Sanh	COL	19951231	Heart attack
HOUGHTON, Kenneth	III MAF G-2	MG	20060327	?
HOWELL, Gatlin	B/1/9	2/Lt	19670707	KIA
HUBER, Charles	2/26		20000211	Heart attack
HUDSON, Jerry	26 Mar S-2	CAPT	20050629	?
HUGHES, Edward John Jr.	D/1/26	CAPT	19680509	KIA
HUSHER, Robert	M/3/26	LCPL	199009	?
ISHMAN, Huey Lee	C/1/26	PVT	19691119	KIA
IZENOUR, Frank	E/2/3	1/Lt	19881216	Heart attack
JABUSCH, William	H&S/3/26		19911108	Brain fungus
JACOBS, Quilles	B/1/26		19950419	Cancer
JARABEK, John J	Hq/1/11		1996	Lung cancer
JENNINGS, Orval	B/3d Recon		19841110	?
JOHNSON, Kenneth	FO		19780209	Heart attack
KERCH, Richard J	MAG-16		19980619	?
KERR, Thomas J	HMM-164		2007
KILPATRICK, Eldon	C/1/9		19980207	?
KINANE, James	B/3d Recon		19940616	Cancer throat
KNOX, David	D/1/26	LCPL	19680608	KIA
KOSTROUM, Ronald	D/3d Recon		19701215	?
KUCHERA, Gary L	M/3/26		19920404	Alcohol related
LANE, Chris	H&S/2/26 CO	?	20050122	?
LEE, Dale	FOB3	?	20080321	?
LEITCH, David P	Correspondent	Civ	2004
LEONARD, Arnold Lee Jr		LCPL	19680616	KIA
LOUGHRAN, Joseph M	3/26-XO	MAJ	19680502	KIA

THOSE AT KHE SANH WHO DIED AFTER LEAVING KHE SANH
NAME	UNIT	RANK	DIED	CAUSE
QUINN, Donald	B/1/26		19980527	?
RAYBURN, Ed	B/1/26		late 70s	Suicide
RAYMOND, John	A/1/26 - CO	CAPT	19870828	Heart attack
RICHARDS, Lawrence	B/3rd Recon		20080218	Heart attack ?
RICHARDSON, Dennis	A/3rd Ats		2006
ROBERTS, John P.	20th TASS	COL	20010309	Stroke
ROBINSON, Henry	26Mar-Security		19690223	KIA
ROBLES, Joe	E/2/26	LCPL	19680916	KIA
RODELL, David L	W/1/13		19970509	Respiratory failure
ROMAN, Joseph	HMM-265	CAPT	20000111	Heart attack
ROMINE, Richard E	HMM-165	CAPT	19910731	Cancer
ROSE, Harold K	CCN	COL	19900511	Aneurysm
RUSSELL, Verner	CAC O		19730501	?
SAAL, Harve	FOB3	MSGT	19971201	Cancer
SAMMS, Tom	A/1/26		19921122	Heart attack
SANCHEZ, Juan Oscar	E/2/26	SSGT	19680917	KIA
SAYERS, Michael	B/1/9, CO	CAPT	20061122	Cancer
SCARPINATO, John A	D/1/26	LCPL	19680607	KIA
SCHABEL, Kenneth	E/2/26	Cpl	19680606	KIA
SCHAFFENBERGER, Wally	H&S/3/26		19990325	Cancer
SCHRON, Courtney	?	CAPT	19940518	Lung cancer
SCULLY, Robert L	FOB-3		19850525	Hodgkins
SECOR, Gilbert Arthur	FOB-3	MSGT	19680823	KIA
SERMEUS, William	CAC O	CAPT	20030404	Brain cancer
SICKEL, Robert Paul	D/1/26	LCPL	19680509	KIA
SIMS, Rev. Timothy C	M/3/26		20020610	Car accident
SPILLVER, Cliff	E/2/26	LCPL	19680916	DOW
ST. JOHN, David Michael	A/1/26	LCPL	19680818	KIA 48W 49
STAGGS, Dan	E/2/26		19890704	Stabbed in prison
STAMPER, Thomas	CAC O, CO	CAPT	19960904	Cancer
STEPTOE, Billy	A-101 Lang Vei		19930207	Heart attack
STEVENS, Edward L	B/3d Recon		19760629	Suicide
STEWART, Billy Gray	D/1/26	PFC	19680509	KIA
STORE, James	A/3rd ShoreParty		2004	Cancer
STOTT, Fr. James S.	G/2/26		20050118
STRANDE, Thomas	L/3/26	PVT	19680404	KIA
STROSS, William	G/2/3		19880417	Head injury
SULLIVAN, William	HMH-463		19830717	?
THEIS, James M	D/1/26		19760326	Heart attack
THOMPSON, Floyd James	Special Forces	CAPT	20020716	?
TOLENTINO, Clarence	D/1/26	SSGT	19680617	KIA
TORTI, Joseph	I/3/26		19980415	Auto accident

THOSE AT KHE SANH WHO DIED AFTER LEAVING KHE SANH
NAME	UNIT	RANK	DIED	CAUSE
LOVETT, Michael Robin	D/3rd Recon		20070312	Automobile accident
LOYA, Paul Nelson	D/1/26	LCPL	19680613	KIA
LUMPKIN, Albert R	B/3d Recon		20001209	Heart attack
MAGILLIGAN, Donald	C Med	LT	19890620	Cancer skin
MARKUM, Robert Bailey	D/1/26	CPL	19681117	KIA
MARTIN, O.K.	3d Tanks	GySgt	20011028	?
MC FARLAND, Forrest Jr	15th AP		2006
McCAIN, Donald	G/2/26		19810730	?
McCONNELL, Terry	C/1/26		199308	Suicide
McCRACKEN, Jack Hill	HMM-165	CAPT	1967	Car accident
McDONALD, Jimmy L	1/13		19941106	?
McINTYRE, Donald M	EOD		19960606	Colon cancer
McNEAL, Jesse James	E/2/26		19911031	Cancer prostate
MELANSON, James			20071215
MEREDITH, Douglas	175 Gun Liaison	CAPT	20040101	Confestive heart failure
METTS, Andrew L	A/1/9		19961102	Heart attack
MICKE, Nicholas	B/3d Recon		19710416	Motorcycle accident
MILLER, Carl Robert	D/1/26	LCPL	19680718	KIA
MILLS, Robert	H&S/1/26	?	20021214	?
MITCHELL, Homer Jr	D/1/26	LCPL	19680509	KIA
MORRISON, James	CCN	?	20000811	Lympho Sarcoma
MOUSEL, Thomas	1/1		1974	Snowmobile accident
MURPHY, Robert	VMFA-542		1994	?
NESTER, Gary Stephen	G/2/1		199805	Suicide
O'DONOVAN, Jerome "Chip"	H/2/26		19981022	Cancer bone
ONSLOW, Robert Cranley	H&S/1/26	CAPT	19680510	KIA
PADGETT, Robert C	?		19990123	?
PADLEY, John J	RLT-26	COL	19911206	Heart attack
PARKER, Robert	B/1/26		20011105	Suicide
PARR, Ron	B/3d Recon		19900920	Heart attack
PEGRAM, Richard Epps	FOB-3	SMAJ	19680823	KIA
PENZARA, Donald	B/1/9		20060528	Cancer
PERRY, James	KheSanh ville	(medic)	20060212	Stomach cancer
PETTIT, Stanley Russell	E/2/26	CPL	19680915	KIA
PLESS, Stephen Wesley	VMO-6	CAPT	1969	Motorcycle accident
POILANE, Madeleine	Wife of planter	civilian	20070106	Cancer
POLLAND, Dr. Daniel	1/9	HN	?	?
PORTER, Jack Eugene	D/1/26	LCPL	19680509	KIA
PRADO, Warren T. C.	B/1/26 Wpns		20020219	Agent orange
PRESLEY, James Henry		LCPL	19680602	KIA
PRITTIE, Raymond R.	VMGR-152	?	20060826	Suicide gunshot
PROCK, Danny	E/2/26	LCPL	19680606	KIA

THOSE AT KHE SANH WHO DIED AFTER LEAVING KHE SANH
NAME	UNIT	RANK	DIED	CAUSE
TURNER, Ellis "Butch"	26th Mar		20060822
UPHOLD, George	D/3d Recon		19741125	Car accident
VAUGHT, Johnnie L Jr.	A/1/26	PFC	19680929	KIA 42W 44
VINING, Francis E Jr.	B/3rd Tanks		20050908
WALL, Gilbert	B/1/26, 81s FO	CPL	20040322	Brain aneurysm
WARD, Mark	G/2/26		19990623	Heart attack
WARNER, James W	HMM-364	LTCOL	20070313
WASHUT, Walter Junior	K/3/9	CPL	19670520	KIA
WATERS, William	I/3/26		19680720	KIA
WATHKE, Michael	C/1/9		1996	Brain tumor
WATSON, Talbot	D/3d Recon	1/Lt	19800512	Suicide
WEATHERS, William B III	B/1/9	CPL	19680717	KIA 52W 47
WEST, James	E/2/3	?	?	?
WHALEN, Harry D	FOB-1	SMAJ	19930514	Cancer
WIGTON, Phillip G	M/3/26	LCPL	19680509	KIA
WILKINS, James Marvin	A/1/26	LCPL	19680731	KIA 50W 40
WILLOUGHBY, Frank	A-101 Lang Vei	CAPT	20000426	?
WILSON, Wm "Woody" A	E/2/1		19960131	?
WOOG, Peter	26Mar		late 1994	Heart attack
WRIGHT, Leo F	L/3/26		19980816	Heart failure
WROBLESKI, Joseph	M/3/26	?	1993	?
YOUNG, Robert William	D/1/26	PFC	19680629	KIA

Terry Redlin is a world renowned artist, and is the most widely collected painter of Nature & Americana. His painting, "His Last Goodbye", captures and tells the story of loved ones being informed that a family member has been KIA. It was dedicated, and honors his Brother-in-Law, Charles Langenfeld, a Navy Corpsman who was KIA, while serving with Echo Company, Second Battalion, Twenty Sixth Marine Regiment.

The picture is a scene of a neighborhood, aglow with lights, as families prepare for the upcoming holiday season. The snow glistens in the moonlight and the stars twinkle in the clear night sky. In the painting, Dad has just finished hanging the homecoming banner, having been busy all day getting ready for his son's return. The cars are washed and the garage straightened. Mom has the tree decorated and lit. From the house wafts the aroma of freshly baked chocolate chip cookies, their son's favorite. From the window, she sees a car slowly pull up to the front walk. As she opens the door, expecting to embrace her son, she is horrified to see a representative from the Navy along with a Chaplain, walking up the snowy steps. Her heart sinks as she realizes it is not her son arriving as they had been expecting, but the devastating news that he has been killed in war. As her body begins to crumble from the inside out, she finds herself unable to speak, unable to even breathe. An old buddy drops the teddy, knowing his friend is never coming home again. "His Last Good-Bye" immerses us in the pain of an American family's ultimate loss.

DUSTERMAN

VIETNAM

STORY OF THE LAST GREAT GUNFIGHTERS

TRANSCRIPTS FROM MY VIETNAM DIARY AND MEMOIRS

JOSEPH M. BELARDO, SR.

DUSTERMAN

VIETNAM

Story Of

THE LAST GREAT GUNFIGHTERS

Transcripts from My Vietnam Diary and Memoirs

Written By

Joseph M. Belardo, Sr.

Military Assignment:

U.S. Army - 1st Field Force
Charlie Battery
1st Battalion - 44th Artillery
Automatic Weapons - Self Propelled
Twin 40mm - Dusters

Mobile Combat Team & Body Recovery
Combat Attachment to:
III Marine Amphibious Force
3rd Marine Division

Vietnam Tour of Duty
August 1967 to August 1968

DUSTERMAN

VIETNAM

Story Of

THE LAST GREAT GUNFIGHTERS

Copyright 2010 by Joseph M. Belardo, Sr.

All rights reserved. This book may not be reproduced by any means either in whole or in parts, excluding passages for the purpose of magazine or newspaper reviews, without the written consent of the publisher or the author.

ISBN 978-0-98022-474-0
Library of Congress 2010938264

First Edition, 2010

Edited by Samuel W. Hopkins. Jr.
Design and layout by Christine D. Kjosa

Published by the SamPat Press
Printed in the United States of America
by Painton Studios, Inc.

Correspondence and publication requests contact:

SamPat Press
1027 Timothy
Jacksonville, TX 75766
(903) 586-4488
sampatpress.com

In Loving Memory of My Nephew
Scott Thomas Ribar

Dedicated to the men of Charlie Battery 1st Battalion,
Automatic Weapons – Self-Propelled – 44th Artillery,
Dusters, Quad-50's, and Searchlights, and all the Heroes who served in Vietnam.

A special recognition to my first Hero "My Father"

TABLE OF CONTENTS

FOREWORD i

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS v

PREFACE vii

1. UNCLE SAM WANTS YOU 1

2. THE DUSTER GUNFIGHTER 15

3. LOST INNOCENCE 43

4. TO REALLY LIVE –YOU MUST NEARLY DIE 67

5. AND HELL CAME CALLING 89

6. A DEADLY DECEMBER 101

7. JANUARY MEANS TET 123

8. THE MOTHER OF ALL BATTLES 137

9. RESCUE FROM DONG HA 149

10. RECOLLECTIONS 161

11. G. I. JOE ROLLS ON 179

12. RELIEF FOR KHE SANH 201

13. ABANDONING KHE SANH 221

14. THE SHORT TIMER GOES HOME 255

EPILOGUE 276

ABOUT THE AUTHOR 277

FOREWORD

While I was in the military, I was encouraged by my father and mother to keep a daily journal of my military experience. In each letter home, I included a short story of my daily experience. When I went overseas, a relative sent me a small pocket diary which encouraged me even more to keep writing.

A month after I returned home, I sat with my Father and transcribed all my paper notes and diary into one memoir. As I wrote, I shared my story with my Father. We compared my war experience with his WWII experience. My Dad had been a Sergeant in the Army and had served as General Patton's Forward Infantry Platoon and had experienced a lot of combat. It was the first time in our lives that we shared a common bond-- "WAR". Our talks also allowed both of us to unload a lot of war baggage that only fellow warriors would understand.

Finally, with the invention of the modern day computer, I copied everything that I had written on paper into my Dell. It still took years for me to have the courage to let another read my memoir. I was worried about how or what they would think of me after reading my story. I did not want to re-experience the public stoning that often befalls a Vietnam Veteran. That was another time, another place, and another Joe Belardo. A few years ago, I cut and pasted a few pages and let several of my friends and family read what I considered were my most treasured and secret thoughts. To my surprise, I was not stoned.

This is my memoir and how I saw and felt about my military experience. If you asked another with whom I served, they would either tell the same story or have their own version. It is all in retrospect and what I call "A View From the Turret."
I can only hope and pray that my memoir does these great and valiant men justice. I am proud to call them my friends and brothers. Allow me to introduce you to a group of men who represent the most courageous, brave, and heroic veterans of the Vietnam War.

They were known as Dustermen. Not only did they endure the normal hardships of war but, during combat, were required to man their weapon in the standing or upright seated position, exposing either their entire body or upper torso. There was no room to duck, lie down, crawl, run, or hide. Dustermen were fighting the enemy eye-to-eye, face-to-face; watching every round hit its mark and seeing the enemy shooting back. The troops called it "Dueling with the Dragon". It was more like an old Wild West gunfight. These American servicemen were awarded more than 450 Medals for Valor and earned more than 1,000 Purple Hearts. I am not exaggerating when I say that they earned:

10 - Army Presidential Unit Citations
3 - Marine Presidential Unit Citations
15 - Valorous Unit Awards
11 - Meritorious Unit Commendations
2 - Navy Meritorious Unit Commendations
31 - Vietnam Cross of Gallantry Citations with Palm
9 - Vietnam Civil Action Honor Medals First Class with Palm

I want you to remember where they came from, who they are, and to understand the brotherhood that bonds them.

I want you to picture the DMZ with its high mountains and lush green jungle.

I want you to envision the scream of "INCOMING!", the crack of a rifle, the bang of an RPG, and the sounds and smells of war.

I want you to see the brightness of the Searchlights, the burst of the Quad-50 machine guns, and the rhythm of the Dusters' Twin 40s rapid fire.

I want you to know they were part of the ultimate ground-war fighting machine.

I want you to know that, man for man, they took more ground than they gave and earned the greatest respect of every unit to which they were attached, as well as the grudging respect of the VC and NVA who came in front of them.

The Searchlight crews perched on the perimeter of some nameless camp, exposing themselves to mortars, rockets and sniper attacks.

The Quad-50 and Duster drivers drove down that "Road to Hell", leaving the sanctuary of their Driver's compartment to hand out ammo and retrieve the wounded and the dead, dancing between the AK-47s and hoping not to be kissed by an RPG.

The Cannoneers stood to load their guns, defying the enemy sharpshooters to hit their mark.

The Gunners and Squad Leaders picked targets and gave orders, hoping that their choice was right and would bring their crews safely back to camp.

Returning to camp only meant guard duty, mine sweeps, H&I's (Harassment and Interdictions), search and destroys, sapper attacks, more "INCOMING!", and another convoy in the morning.

I want you to appreciate the support teams: cooks who fed them the best they could with the little they had; mechanics who came out in the field and kept them running at all costs; medics who would give their lives to save a friend; clerks; radio operators; ammo teams; combat chaplains who gave faith, hope and giant shoulders to lean on; and hundreds of others who were all part of the best fighting group in Vietnam. I can't say enough about the NCOs (Non-Commissioned Officers) and the officers who lived and fought beside them. They directed them with concern, understanding and military professionalism, as proven by the amount of unit citations and minimal number of casualties versus the number of battles fought.

No matter how history was written or what the journalists said, when these men left Vietnam they knew they had militarily won the war. They won all the battles. Then, someone forfeited their war. We Dustermen have a simple saying…

"Always Remember – We Are Somebody".

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A Simple Thank You

Over the years, I have made many relationships. I thought it was about time that I let the world know about a certain few.

To my wife, Nancy, thank you for being by my side all these years. You have worked hard to make my life simple and beautiful and full of love. We have known each other since we were fifteen. It has been a wonderful life together. I will love you forever.

To my children, Mary, Joseph and Patrick: God could not have given me better children. Thank you for always helping. You have made me the proudest dad in the world. I love you for who you are and the great adults you have become.

To my mother and father: Thank you for teaching me the values of family and friends. Thank you for your patience and love.

To my sister, Brenda, and my brother-in-law, Ken: There is nothing in my heart that can express my appreciation for the love and understanding you both have given me all my life. I will always be there for you, as you have been for me. Ken, thanks for the diary. Without it, this book could not have happened.

To Paul Fusco, my "brother": Since childhood, you have been by my side through all phases of my of life and are part of my family.

To my veteran friends: Chaplain Sam Hopkins, thank you for giving me the courage to finish this story. You are a true friend and gentleman. The world is fortunate to have a person like you. God bless you.

Lieutenant L. Steve Moore, Lieutenant Bruce Geiger, and Captain Vincent Tedesco, your leadership and concern for your men were superior to all other officers and you gave us courage. To this day you exemplify that spirit and friendship.

Sergeant Chester Sines, thank you for teaching me everything about a Duster and how to stay alive.

John "Tank" Huelsenbeck, Donald Wolfe, Earl Holt, Wally Owens, Roger Blentlinger, Norman Oss, Cleve Lanier and James "Doc" Butler, thank you for your undying friendship, weekly telephone calls, and e-mails. Most of all, thank you for risking your lives for mine.

To my other Duster, Quad-50 and Marine friends, thank you for sharing all you photographs with me. Most of all, thank you for getting me home. We are all true blood brothers.

To the rest of my family and friends, especially my cousin Michael Dellipoali: Thank you for listening to me all these years about Vietnam. Someday, when we all go and meet our "Maker", we will see each other again in heaven. Someone once told me that in the Bible there is a passage that says, "When we go to heaven, we sit at the right hand of the Father". Remember, if you want to find me, look to the left, and I'll tell you another story.

PREFACE

By Chaplain Sam Hopkins

Get ready for an action packed, combat adventure story about a patriotic young man from the loving Belardo family of an Italian neighborhood in New Jersey. This G.I. named Joe served his country with honor and distinction in the most heavily decorated artillery unit in the history of the United States Army. Joe and his buddies didn't plan on being heroes; the fighting was thrust upon them by a savage enemy intent on over running their positions at any cost. If you ask these men about the frequent, memorable battles they fought in Vietnam, they will sincerely and reverently say they were just doing their job and only trying to stay alive. Despite their many decorations for bravery and valor, these mighty veterans maintain that the only heroes they know have their names on The Wall in Washington, D.C. So true, so true.

Joe is profusely modest about his tour of duty. However, the well-known Lieutenant Colonel Ollie North has nationally publicized Joe and his unit's outstanding service record on the Fox TV program Men At War. ABC television has broadcast his combat story too. Those programs were based on this publication's detailed, day-by-day, frontline battle narratives extracted from Joe's combat diary. His fascinating, introspective memoir reveals a sensitive soul's struggle to be physically and mentally strong amidst unimaginably horrible suffering and dying. He always praises the many service personnel who stood fast in the line of duty, and remains mindful of the countless sacrifices they made for God and country. As Joe has often said, "ALL GAVE SOME, AND SOME GAVE ALL." He respectfully disguises or keeps anonymous the names of people who miserably let their buddies down, or whose flawed character crumbled in the crucible of wartime's dramatic life or death struggles. Some servicemen deserve to have medals hung around their necks, and others simply deserve to be hung by the neck. Joe describes in sharp, vivid terms his experiences with the good (family, service buddies and friends), the bad (the vicious enemy constantly surrounding him), and the beautiful (the lush, green paradise known as Vietnam).

America is lucky to have men like Joe Belardo faithfully serve their country in time of war. America has been doubly blessed by his peacetime service to others too. Since his return to civilian life, Joe has unselfishly given time and tangible aid to schools, civic groups, hospitals and homes. Most of all, he helps fellow veterans in need of comfort and emotional healing. In recognition of these many good deeds, the Vietnam Veterans Association, at a national ceremony in Cape May, New Jersey, deservedly gave the prestigious "Four Chaplains" award to my dear friend and brother-in-arms, Joseph.

I should like to add a fifth chaplain's tribute to Joe's work and war record. From the perspective of a fellow combat veteran who served in a Duster unit like Joe's during the same period of time of the Vietnam War, I acknowledge with high admiration that he and his unit saw far more action than most of us. More importantly, Joe and his unit set an inspiring example of devotion to duty for all time. This old soldier salutes you, sir. As an ordained (and now retired) clergyman who has served among men and women in uniform, I am confident that Joe and his kind shall someday enter the kingdom of heaven because they have already served their time in hell. In the mean time, I pray that he and all his buddies will add many more fabulous chapters of living to their exciting chronicles begun some forty-odd years ago. Finally, as a fellow American, I offer these heartfelt sentiments to Joe and all Vietnam veterans: although you didn't hear these precious, long overdue words when you returned to the world, our nation owes you the following tribute

- Welcome Home, G.I. Thanks for a job well done.

Samuel W. Hopkins, Jr.
Chaplain (Colonel), U. S. Army, retired
Vietnam Veteran 1967-68
4th Battalion 60th Artillery, Dusters

Joe Belardo Vietnam 1967 age 20

A SPECIAL THANK YOU TO SAM, CHRISTINE,
LISA, MIKE,
& NANCY

THIS BOOK WOULD HAVE NEVER HAPPENED
WITHOUT ALL YOUR HARD WORK, DEDICATION, AND LOVE.

THANK YOU!
JOE

Chapter 1: UNCLE SAM WANTS YOU

On October 24, 1966, I was drafted into the United States Army. Because I was from New Jersey, I was sent to Fort Dix. Like all new GIs (Government Issues), I got the standard issue haircut, boots and uniform. To my surprise, we were loaded on an airplane and shipped out to Fort Hood, Texas for Basic Training in Battery C, 1st Battalion, 78th Artillery. After landing, we were then loaded on buses and transported to Fort Hood. As the bus drove through the main gate at Fort Hood, we saw a life-sized statue of Elvis Presley. The bus driver told us that Fort Hood was considered the home of Elvis Presley and that Elvis had donated a lot of recreation and restaurant places for soldiers to enjoy.

When the bus finally came to a halt, we were introduced to the traditional "Welcome to the Military". It was like the bus had been struck by lightning. Drill Instructors jumped into our bus, yelling and screaming for us "termites" to get off their buses. Their language was an assembly of operatic curse words, transformed into a dialogue of songs that only a Drill Instructor after many years of training troops could sing. It was beyond anything any of us had ever heard or experienced. Yet, we all knew exactly what they wanted us to do. As instructed, we emptied the bus in seconds and formed three equal rows of fifteen, twenty feet from the bus. One of the soldiers took out a tape measure and measured the distance from the bus to our first row of men. Holding the tape high in the air, he screamed that we were a bunch of "blind asshole dickheads" and could not measure dog shit. We all laughed and that made him go wild. At the top of his lungs with his eyes bulging out of his head, screaming a slur of profanities, he ordered us to "hit it" and give him "twenty". Only those who had played sports knew that he wanted us to do pushups. I nudged the guy next to me to follow my lead and hit the ground. We gave him his twenty and jumped back up. Those who did not follow his instructions were ordered to run in circles, screaming that they were "assholes" and "pussies", and wanted to live on a diet of shit and used condoms. Finally, after all the yelling and screaming, we were introduced to our personal Drill Instructor or "DI", a soldier named Sergeant Dillard.

Compared to a lot of the other guys, I was in good physical shape. I had played sports in high school and boxed on the P.A.L. boxing team, so I was better prepared for the rigors of boot camp. I thought that boot camp, with all its running, calisthenics, marching, shooting, teamwork and military protocol, was a fantastic experience. We were now soldiers and being retrained to the military way of life, which also included cleaning the bathrooms or as they called them, "latrines". All of us took turns at this job, which included using a combination of mops, brushes, sponges and toothbrushes, making our latrine shine until our DI could see his reflection and be proud of what he called his "girls".

After our graduation from Boot Camp, we were given a two week leave. I flew home and surprised my parents, family and friends for Christmas. While on leave I asked my high school sweetheart, Nancy, to marry me. We agreed that we would get her an engagement ring and make wedding plans on my next leave. Christmas break was great, seeing all my friends and relatives, and especially the Christmas Italian feast. I returned to Fort Hood and was assigned to 1st. Battalion, 16th Artillery for my AIT (Advanced Individual Training). In AIT, I was trained as a rocket assembler for an old surface-to-ground, high-explosive or small nuclear warhead rocket called "Honest John". Our First Sergeant was named Johnson. Sgt. Johnson was quite a character. In our first formation as new AIT trainees, the good old Sergeant did an alphabetical roll-call of names. We were instructed to take one step forward as our names were read. Loud and clear he called: Allen, Allsworth, Bailey, Bardone, Bellarah, Block, Ellis, Grinner, Gunesch, Harris, Raymond, Roundtree, Shapiro, Treemont, Upchurch, Waite and Woods. As he called out each name, he quickly stepped in front of the person, giving each one of us the once over. At the end of roll call, I and two others did not have their names called. What happened next was something totally unexpected. One at a time, the Sergeant went up to us, just pointed at us, and made the following loud announcement, "As long as you are in my Battery, Treemont will be called Truman because he looks like good old President Truman, Shapiro will be called Smith because he looks like Buffalo Bob Smith from Howdy Dowdy, and this Belardo guy will be called Bellarah because I don't like names ending in "O". Do you understand me, ladies?! Do you get my message?!" To which we responded, "Yes, First Sergeant!" "By the way, Bellarah, you are I-talian?" "Yes, Sergeant!" as I snapped to attention. "I-talians do know how to plant a garden?" "Yes, Sergeant!" "Starting tomorrow, on the left side of my building, you will make me a garden. I want my garden to be fifty feet wide by fifty feet long. I want two rows each of tomatoes, peppers, eggplants, lettuce and string beans. I'll get together with you next week and give you the rest of my list. It's January, so you can work two hours a day getting it ready for spring planting." I just stood there in disbelief. With that he walked to the front of the formation, slowly turned, and in his booming voice said "If I catch any of you Mother Fuckers fuckin' with my garden or giving Bellarah any shit, I'll shoot you myself! Do you fagots understand me?!" "Yes, First Sergeant!" "Formation dismissed."

Army life was easy and my only concern was keeping the Sarge happy with his new garden, as it gave me a few extra privileges. The First Sarge got me my own ¾ ton truck so I could run all his errands. My friends were jealous. Besides my daily chores for the Sarge, I was being trained as an Honest John Rocket assembler. The highlight of our assembling was placing the rocket on a launching rail truck and doing firepower shows for high-ranking officers and state dignitaries at the end of each month. The Honest John launching was the grand finale. Shot without warhead at some unseen target thirty-five miles away, it was so fast that a standard instamatic camera could not catch it in flight. You would hear the launcher yelling the countdown: 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1, FIRE! There were a few popping sounds, a flash, then a giant flame out the rear of the rocket that burned all the paint off the launching truck. In a blink the rocket was gone, leaving behind a cloud of dust and a loud explosion as it broke the sound barrier, making everyone jump and scream. It was fantastic!

I liked military life and thought strongly about making it a career. At first I thought of going to OCS (Officers Candidate School). All of the officers graduating from OCS went straight to Vietnam and that immediately changed my mind about pursuing that path. My goal was to get a college education from Uncle Sam and then, if I had to go overseas, it might not have to be to Vietnam. Through the encouragement of two cousins who were career military, or what they called "Lifers", I then applied for a military appointment to West Point through the Fort Hood Base Commander. After a series of tests, I was put on a waiting list for prep school in Maryland and, if I did well, I'd go on to West Point. Since I was not going to advance with the other soldiers on Honest Johns, I remained a Private E-2, the lowest of military personnel.

Without the advancement of rank, I got all the menial tasks. Weekly, I would have KP (Kitchen Police). KP meant working in the barrack's kitchen and dining area known as the "Mess Hall". I would learn to clean off plates, wash dishes, peel potatoes by the thousands, wash floors, clean stoves and ovens, load milk into the milk machines, clean out garbage cans, and the nasty job of cleaning out the giant grease traps.

Another one of my weekly jobs was GD (Guard Duty). GD was an all night task that rotated on and off every two hours. Most of the time, we guarded military equipment and buildings. Prior to GD, the duty officer of the night held what they called "Guard Mount". The officer inspected your clothes, your rifle for cleanliness, and asked a series of questions. If you passed inspection and answered the questions correctly, the officer named you "Colonel's Orderly." As Colonel's Orderly, you got two days off with no duty. I learned that none of the guys liked KP or guard duty, especially on Fridays or weekends, so we would swap days. Our Duty Sergeant did not mind as long as he had enough soldiers for each duty detail. Each night I studied military handbooks and learned the answers to all the duty officer's questions, hoping to be named Colonel's Orderly. I now had my week planned: Fridays KP, Friday night GD, answer all the officer's questions, and have the weekend off. It was a great plan that would give me the weekends off so I could fish the Texas lakes for bass.

Once a week I demonstrated shooting techniques for the new guys taking basic training. I had to show them the various shooting positions: standing, kneeling, sitting-cross legged like an Indian, and the prone position. I then took a shot or two at targets set at various distances, so they knew where to shoot. Twice a month I would demonstrate the shooting of a .45 pistol for the officers in training. In July 1967, I was issued orders to go to Vietnam. I thought they had made a mistake because I was still on the waiting list for prep school. Plus, I only had the rank of E-2 and you had to be an E-3 (PFC/Private First Class) to go to Vietnam. The First Sergeant told me that my dreams of going to West Point would have to wait and he instantly made me a PFC. Uncle Sam needed me in Vietnam. He thanked me for the great I-talian garden and wished me well. Smiling, as we shook hands, I palmed his desk memento and placed it in my pocket. It was a small cannon shell casing with our unit crest 1st/16th on one side. My friend, Doug Stamp, took over as gardener. He wasn't even I-talian.

I had come from a long line of veterans and quickly realized the idea of fighting communism and oppression was something that seemed natural. Freedom was the right I was born to defend. I would go to Vietnam and serve my country proudly. As I left Fort Hood, I could hear the new GIs going through boot camp, singing and marching in cadence to "Kill a Commie for Mommy".

The Army gave me a thirty-six day leave. I never told my parents I was coming home or even going to Vietnam. I arrived at Newark Airport about 9:00 p.m. and began hitchhiking to Plainfield. I lived in South Plainfield, the next town over, and knew that, if I got to Plainfield, a friend or cousin hanging out at the local diner would take me home. I was picked up by a kind stranger who told me he could not drop me off where I wanted because he had heard on the radio that Plainfield was in the throes of a race riot. Instead, he dropped me off about a half-mile from the diner. The side streets were barricaded and, as I casually walked down the main street in the center of town, I could hear gun shots in the distance. As the song said, "The Times They Are A-Changin'."

Leave was great. I got engaged to my Nancy. My friends and family gave me non-stop parties. Inside, I've always felt guilty about how, without warning, without softening the news, I went home and told my parents, sister, girlfriend and relatives that I was going off to war. They were shocked and cried a lot. I pinned a poster of Allen Ginsburg on my parents' living room wall. Ginsberg was dressed as Uncle Sam with his index finger pointing at you, with a caption that read "Uncle Sam Wants You". I told my family "We'll take that down when I come home." On my last day, we all sat in the airport together. We are a close family, giving hugs, kisses, and the reassurance that all would be fine and I'd be home before we knew it. It's only one year. I did not realize how difficult it was to say goodbye and maybe what could be our final farewells. Taking turns, I hugged my mother, father, my sister Brenda and brother-in-law Ken. I saved Nancy for last and gave her a big hug and kiss. I held her face for a brief moment, looked into her eyes, kissed her forehead and told her I loved her. Holding back a few goodbye tears, I slowly turned and walked away. I was really going to miss her. My original intent was to marry her, but I knew better. I did not want her to be a young widow.

As I walked to the plane, my father yelled my name and came running to me. My father, a strong-spirited, hard Italian man, was calling after me, "I have something for you!" I stood there bewildered, not knowing what he was talking about or going to do. He slowly took out his wallet and removed a small square of red cloth and held it firmly in his hard, callused, steelworker's hand. He said, "You can borrow this for one year. My mother gave me this when I went off to war with Patton. I carried it across Europe and it brought me home. Your grandmother gave it back to me when she was dying. When you come home, I'll be the first to meet you and it will be the first thing you give me." He pressed the little red square into my hand and muttered, "Now get out of here." To my surprise, the little red square was an old religious scapular. I placed it in my wallet and held back my tears. At the same time, Louis Block, another local boy and good friend, was saying his goodbyes to his family. We had gone through boot camp together and advanced training, and were now boarding the plane together for Oakland, California and then Vietnam. Lou and I caught up in our own emotions about leaving our family, said nothing to each other for the first hour of the plane ride. Together in California, we spent our last night of freedom hanging out with the Hippies at the infamous corner of Haight and Ashbury in San Francisco, before reporting to Oakland's debarkation center for Vietnam.

On August 21, 1967, I arrived in Bien Hoa, Vietnam for assignment to an artillery unit in Saigon. The twenty-seven hour flight from California to Vietnam was long and tiring. I thought it was generous that our government had chartered Braniff Airlines to bring its troops to Vietnam. It was a long flight and, after the plane touched down, we all jumped out of our seats readying ourselves to depart the plane. We did not know what to expect. Through the windows, we could only see a few buildings with soldiers and civilians milling around. As the airplane's crew opened the exit door, the noon heat of Vietnam came pouring into the plane. Instantly, the plane went from a comfortable 70 degrees to an unbearable 100 degrees of suffocating humidity. Men at the front of the line started getting lightheaded from the drastic change. Our nostrils perked open to the smells of our new home as we all gasped for air.

After arriving at the Army deportation center in Bien Hoa, we were reissued orders and sent to the seaport town of Nha Trang. A fellow soldier, Steve Harris, and I volunteered for office duty. All we did for three days was sign people in and out of this Army Transfer Center. It was a cake job. We spent the afternoons at the beach. Nha Trang was beautiful and Vietnam seemed like a tropical paradise. The Duty Sergeant told us they were looking for limo drivers for military dignitaries. We all had great hopes of becoming those limo drivers. That evening the Viet Cong hit the airport with mortars. The sound whistling over our heads brought us back to our war-torn reality. It was our first war experience and we had no idea what to do or where to go. Frightened out of our minds, we hid behind some steel storage containers. Our only defense was some giant Jim Bowie knives we had each purchased that day at the local PX (Post Exchange store). We stood there, brazen in the night, thrusting our knives into the shadows and yelling, "Commie Bastards, try and kill us! We'll kill some of you before you get all of us!" We all laughed, with fear in our voices, as we spoke of holding "the Cong" at bay.

The morning of our fourth day, the Duty Sergeant told us to "saddle up". We were being re-assigned to an Army mobile artillery unit called the 1st Battalion (Automatic Weapons) (Self-Propelled), 44th Artillery (1/44th). Our new unit was attached to the Third Marine Division stationed along the DMZ (Demilitarized Zone) in the northern most sector of "I" Corps. We were body replacements for an ambush that had taken place on August 21st. The Sergeant chuckled as he said, "Welcome to the Marines, hope you make it back." There were twenty-four of us from the Honest John Missile Training Unit to arrive in Nam. I wondered how many of us would be going home.

On the way to the 1/44th, we slept on an LZ (Landing Zone) pad in Da Nang. When we awoke, we found the local villagers had stolen my bags and the bags of two others. This was an omen of my tour to come in Vietnam. I was naive enough to have left all my orders, papers, and personnel record information in my bags. I was really mad at myself for being so stupid and trusting.

We finally boarded a C-130 cargo plane and headed to Dong Ha, the most northern airport in South Vietnam. The C-130 was packed like sardines with Marines and us few Army personnel. We sat in rows on the floor, with our backs to the front of the plane. Each row of men sat with the next man between his legs. We all held tight to nylon cargo straps secured to the floor. The rear cargo door was opening as we made our final steep decent towards the runway. The first loud explosion was heard as NVA (the enemy, North Vietnamese Army) artillery tried to blow the plane out of the sky. The plane shook violently as the NVA artillery followed it to the ground. Rays of sunlight peaked through the hundreds of holes made in the plane's skin from the exploding bombs. Men started praying, yelling, screaming, and bleeding. The plane seemed to be heading straight to the ground. I thought we were going to crash and die in a ball of fire. Another explosion was followed by another and then another. More holes in the plane, more blood, and more pieces of America's Best splattered everywhere. We were covered in smears of red and body parts I had never seen before. My friend, Louis Block, who was sitting between my legs, started screaming, "I'm hit! I'm hit!" As he turned to face me, I could see a long thin piece of shrapnel sticking out of the center of his forehead. It looked like an Indian headdress feather. Head wounds bleed profusely, so his head and face were instantly covered in blood. I started screaming with him. I yelled so loud, it made no sound. Our screams could not be heard over the loud explosions, the roar of the engines, and the crescendo of fellow soldiers and Marines scrambling and praying for their lives. Louis was lucky it had only broken the skin and not punctured his skull. He was yelling, "Take it out! Take it out!" It was terrible seeing him with that piece of shrapnel sticking out of his head, so I obliged him, pulled it out, applied pressure, and we held each other tight. Vietnam had gone from beautiful to ugly in just a few seconds.

On touchdown, the C-130 quickly slowed to a slow roll and we were ordered to jump off the moving plane through the rear cargo door. The excited flight crewman at the cargo door threatened to shoot and throw us off the plane screaming, "My plane is worth more than your sorry asses! Get the hell off my plane, before I shoot you off!" As instructed, we grabbed our bags and jumped out the back of the plane. Holding onto Louis, I made a mad dash to safety, sprinting, stumbling and crawling to a small building on the north side of the runway. For the first time we were running for our lives, frightened beyond anything we had ever experienced. The C-130 never stopped, but did a fast U-turn and hastily flew back to Da Nang, its wheels almost hitting the men it had strewn all over the runway.

"INCOMING!" A volley of enemy artillery shells started landing all around us. Crazy with a new kind of fear, we all dived into a very long trench about five feet deep by three feet wide that was filled to the top with smelly, muddy water. Only moments before, we had spoken of our bravery and how we wouldn't jump into that nasty looking ditch. As I stood chest deep in the condemned water, I could feel something wiggling under my feet. In my frantic haste to take cover, I had jumped on top of my friend, Frank Bardone. I almost drowned poor Frank. We were all so nervous and jumpy, it didn't matter. Lou pointed to some guys running along the runway and saw them disappear into some kind of underground bunker. Leaping from the muddy water, Lou and I sprinted to the bunker. Finally inside and trembling with fear, we tried to regroup. The other guys in the bunker tried to reassure us. Lou asked me for a cigarette because his got wet. I took off my helmet and reached inside for my Tareytons. My hand was shaking so much, I could not hand Louis a cigarette. They just seemed to be jumping out of the pack on their own and landing on the floor. Finally, we lit up, took a big drag and both exclaimed "Holy Shit!"

We were the new guys they called "Newbees." The experience, natural to war, was only a taste of what was to come. Being wet, hot, cold, or half-drowned would soon be the least of our problems. By the end of our first day on the famous DMZ, we would hide from the enemy artillery five more times. "Welcome to the Vietnam Conflict."

Private Joe Belardo,
Advanced Individual Training Graduate

Honest John Rocket

Nancy and I got engaged before I deployed to Vietnam.

Belardo family religious scapular that was carried by my father in WW-II and me in Vietnam.

U.S. Army "Duster" unit attached to 3rd Mar Div

It's a long way from Fort Bliss, Texas and the Oro Grande, New Mexico desert training area, but the 1st Battalion (Automatic Weapons) (Self Propelled) of the 44th Artillery Regiment made it.

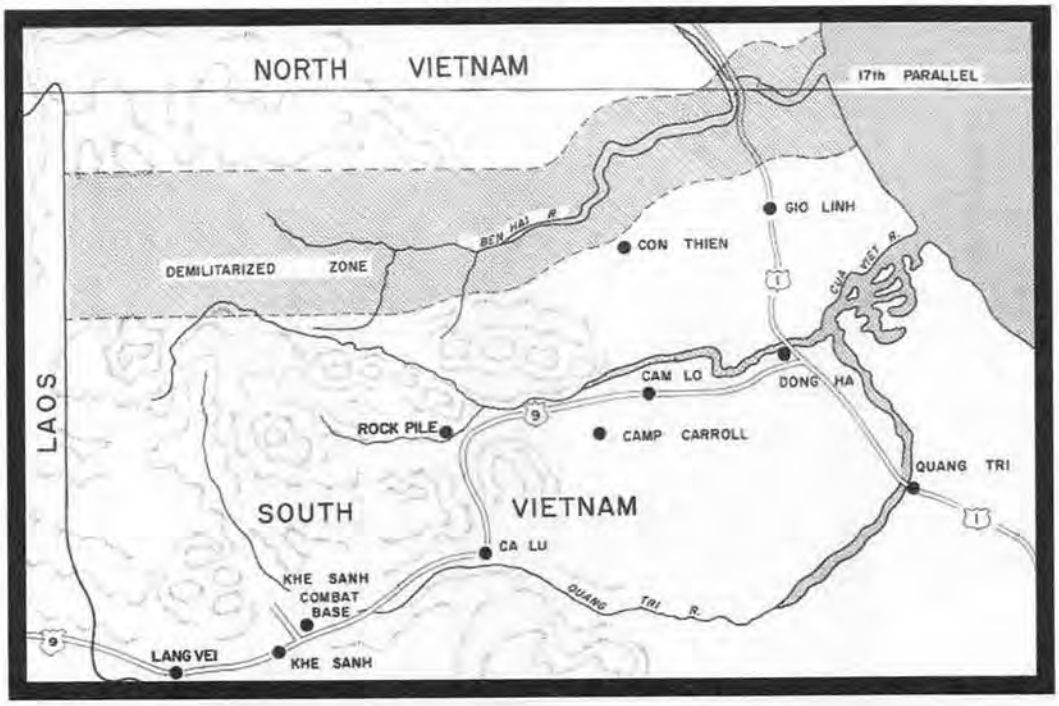
The Army battalion is now settled in the Dong Ha base perimeter and adds its tremendous firepower to the 3d Marine Division. The battalion is unique in that it has the "Ocelots" of Battery G, (50 CAL MG) 65th Artillery attached as a machine-gun element.

The battalion has had a long and proud heritage of the 44th Artillery which it now carries to the DMZ. Twenty-six battle streamers and two presidential citations add body to the battalion colors; ranging from World War I through World War II campaigns and the Korean Conflict. Reactivation at Fort Bliss, Texas, in March 1966 was followed by intensive basic and advanced unit training at Oro Grande Range Camp, neighboring White Sands Missile Range, New Mexico, in preparation for deployment to the Republic of Vietnam.

The 44th brings into combat weapons that have been re-established in the Army arsenal; M42, twin 40mm gun, mounted on a light track chassis, with latest modifications, and M55, 50 Caliber (Quad 50) mount machine-gun. The M42 has been known as the "DUSTER" since its conception, and has proved the title well earned in dry weather. The M55 "Quad" type machinegun earned the title "WHISPERING DEATH" from the Chinese Communists during the Korean Conflict. Both have a tremendous firepower as a ground support weapon and still maintain the ability to fire against low level air targets in the Dong Ha base defense.

I had just arrived in Vietnam in this picture.
The next day I was put on a plane like the one in this photo and flown to a place called Dong Ha.

DMZ
(Demilitarized Zone)



Belardo's deployment area in Vietnam

Chapter 2: THE DUSTER GUNFIGHTER

At 1st/44th Headquarters in Dong Ha, I was told not to worry because all my records would be reconstructed and placed in proper order. I was still concerned that, without my records, I really didn't exist in the military. For some stupid reason, I did not want them to lose me or misplace me.

We all thought we were going to a standard artillery unit on the DMZ to be trained how to shoot some kind of big cannon over a hill at the unseen enemy. I should have known better, since they told us the 1st/44th used some kind of self-propelled automatic-weapon and was attached to the Third Marine Division.

The officer in charge of our training explained to us that the 44th was comprised of Twin 40mm Dusters, an attachment of Quad-50 machine guns mounted on 2½ ton trucks, and Searchlights mounted on the back of jeeps, all incorporated into the Marine Corps as their mobile combat team and body recovery unit. It was our job to provide perimeter and convoy security, daily guard duty, evening firing of Harassment and Interdiction missions, search and destroy missions, body recovery, or anything else the Marines required. All of our group would be trained and shipped to different combat batteries along the DMZ. We looked at each other in wonderment and disbelief. The officer then turned us over to his Training Sergeant.

The Sergeant first introduced us to the Quad-50 machine gun. The Quad had four 50 caliber machine guns mounted on a very small motorized turret that one man, the Gunner, could sit in and shoot. The turret was then mounted on the rear deck of a 2½ ton truck. There were two Loaders and one Driver. The top deck of the truck was loaded with two layers of ammo cans. The Quad-50 shot up to 1,500 rounds per minute. We had a quick four hour lesson on the Quad, each taking a turn loading, unloading and shooting the Quad. I could not believe the firepower this weapon had when you shot all four guns at once. It was a blaze of bullets, ripping the earth to shreds, including anything in its way. We all hoped that we would be the Gunner, sitting inside the mini-turret, squeezing the triggers and blazing away at the charging enemy. At the end of the four hour training lesson, the Sergeant told us that he just wanted us to be familiar with the weapon in case we had to use them in combat and that we were being assigned to Dusters. We still had not seen a Duster and had no idea what he was talking about.

Instead of being trained on cannons that shot long range over hills at the unseen enemy, we were now introduced to a small tank-like weapon that shot directly at the enemy. This little tracked vehicle had two small cannon barrels (Twin 40s) and was called a "Duster."

After three days of training, we learned that the Duster crew was comprised of a five man fighting team: a Squad Leader, a Driver, a Gunner and two Cannoneers. The Duster had the same Twin 40mm Bofors ack-ack cannons that were mounted on Navy ships and were used to shoot down enemy airplanes. The twin machine gun cannons, with open turret, were re-mounted onto a small modified Walker Bulldog tank chassis and renamed the "Duster". The four men who sat in the small open turret were only protected by a thin ¼ inch thick armor plate that gave no adequate protection from enemy ground forces. The top edge of the turret was only twenty-four inches high and exposed the crew to enemy fire. Their head, chest and arms were totally unprotected. Upper head and chest wounds were quite common. The two Cannoneers had to stand to load the machine gun-like cannon shells into the clip-fed high-speed loaders, or shoot the M60 machine gun or their personal weapon, exposing themselves to increased danger. The Gunner sat to the left of the cannons, with head and chest exposed, and was responsible for raising and lowering the guns and shooting the auto-cannons. The Squad Leader sat to the right of the cannons, with head and chest exposed, traversing the turret left to right and giving target acquisitions.

The Driver sat below the turret and was responsible for daily track maintenance. His responsibilities also included radio communications, calling in and coordinating artillery and air strikes while under attack.

During combat, the Driver was forced to leave the confines of his compartment and distribute ammunition stored inside the track to the men in the turret. It was also the Driver's job to make sure the enemy did not get close to or breach the Duster. The Squad Leader, Gunner, and Driver wore radio-equipped plastic helmets for constant communication. The two Cannoneers wore standard-issue helmets. Because of the lack of officers, the Squad Leaders were totally in command of the Duster with the Driver being second in command. On the Duster, there was no room to hide or run. The crew had to stand and fight, brazenly defying the enemy to kill them.

The Training Sergeant barked, "This, 25 tons of steel is not a tank. It is a track vehicle, type M42A1, better known as a Duster. When some Marine General saw us shoot at Fort Bliss, he had Congress assign our sorry asses to the Marine Corps. The Dusters and Quad-50s are the meanest, toughest, mother-fuckin' killing machines in all Vietnam."

We would soon learn that the crew of a Duster seldom saw their Battery Headquarters or an officer. Because the Squad Leaders were in charge of the Dusters, our trainer called it a "Sergeant's War". We were orphaned out to Marines or other outfits scattered across the DMZ and received most of our orders via radio. Each day started an hour before sunup with a mine sweep along part of the road. Then we would return to base to take a group of Marines on a combat or body recovery mission, or a convoy to an isolated oasis called a "Combat Base".

Convoy duty was dangerous and nerve-racking. During World War II and the Korean War, U.S. convoys operated mainly behind enemy front lines with virtual impunity. Things were different in Vietnam. You never held the ground you fought. You never advanced from town to town as you defeated the enemy. There were no front lines and your permanent base camps were prime enemy artillery targets.

Ambushes were a constant threat along all supply routes. Ambushes posed a serious logistics problem since trucks provided most of the supplies for inland installations and combat bases. Normally, on convoys or search and destroy missions, the lead Duster (at or near the front) covered the left side of the road while the rear Duster covered the right side. The roads we traveled were usually in the valleys of the mountainous northern terrain where we lived, thus making us easy targets. Convoy duty was like being in a shooting gallery, except we were the targets, "the sitting ducks". Dusters, caught in an ambush, pulled off the road, traversed their guns and provided covering fire. The remainder of the convoy accelerated to escape the Kill Zone. The tactic was effective, but it meant Duster crews spent eternities in the Kill Zone. Sometimes ambushes would overwhelm even the firepower of the Dusters. When this happened, a reactionary force would hopefully roll to the rescue from one of the nearby base camps.

Duster crews from the 1st Battalion (Automatic Weapons) (Self-Propelled), 44th Artillery were stationed at Dong Ha, Gio Linh, Con Thien, Cam Lo, Camp J.J. Carroll, Khe Gio Bridge, Rockpile, Ca Lu, LZ Stud, Khe Sanh, Quang Tri and a dozen other outposts, reaching as far south as Hue. Their total effectiveness was reduced by the vast amount of territory they had to patrol.

The Duster shot two hundred-forty 40mm high explosive cannon shells per minute. It had M60 machine guns, LAW's rocket launchers, hand-grenades and the crew's personal weapons. With a top speed of about fifty miles per hour, it was the perfect mobile ground weapon. It was an awesome weapon for war, fast and accurate, with an effective firing range of three straight miles. Each cannon shell travelled at twice the speed of sound and upon impact had a one hundred foot shrapnel killing field. After three miles, if the target wasn't hit, the warhead would self-detonate into what was called "flak". The Duster was originally meant to shoot down airplanes and instead was used against enemy ground forces. Its firepower was more than two companies of infantry. When firing, it looked like the grand finale at the 4th of July fireworks, but ten times louder and a hundred times more dangerous. It was the Army's gift to the Marines, a mobile five-man combat team and body recovery unit. It meant death and destruction for the enemy and was one of America's ultimate ground weapons. Basically, it was just two big machine gun cannons mounted on a small, tracked vehicle…a human killing machine.

Dusters and Quad-50s were a lethal combination and were considered the most devastating ground weapons in Vietnam. Because of their fire power, they were hunted by every enemy sharpshooter. Destroying one of these weapons was the dream of every NVA soldier.

After three days of "OJT" (on the job training) on a weapon that none of us had ever seen or used, we were told we were ready for combat and would be assigned to our respective Combat Batteries. We were now official "Dustermen". Our small group of "Newbee0073" was taken to the Chapel for a short church service before departing headquarters and going to our new positions. On the wall of the Chapel was a plaque listing the names of those already killed or missing in action from our unit. The Chaplain slowly read their names: Wright, Ford, Croom, Fox, Teatsworth, Wilkerson, Royster, Thompson, Atkins, Henry, Evans, Lewis, Cribbs, Schneider, Pendergrass, Gerber, Valenzuela, Watson, Weigert, Baldoni……losing track of the names as he read, I prayed he would never have to read my name.

We didn't have to guess to which Battery most of us would be sent. Two of the men went to "A" (Alpha) Battery, one to "B" (Bravo) Battery and one stayed at Headquarters. The rest of us were sent to "C" (Charlie) Battery as body replacements for their August 21st battle.

A guy named John "Tank" Huelsenbeck ordered us to load onto a 2½ ton truck. As we got on the truck, he gave each of us one of the KIA (killed in action) names that were listed on the Chapel wall. He grabbed my arm and told me I was now Billy Watson and I better not let him down. I just stared at him and nodded my head in agreement. Christ, I better live up to this Billy Watson guy's reputation. Without any personal weapons or the knowledge of where we were going, we drove alone without escort down a dusty dirt road called Route 9 to a place someone called "Carroll." This we were told was "SOP" (standard operating procedure) and our initiation to the DMZ. I could not help but think that this Route 9 looked nothing like Jersey's good old Route 9. I couldn't believe how casually Tank drove down this long dusty road. The soldier who rode shotgun in the cab had handed each of us one hand grenade. He laughed as he told us that, if something happened, to pull the pin and kill ourselves, because if the NVA caught us, they would cut off our balls and stick them in our mouths...another new kind of fear.

Heading west from Dong Ha on Route 9, we passed the Vietnamese relocation settlement of Cam Lo and then slowly ascended into the area called the Dong Ha Mountain ridge line. We finally made a hard left turn and headed up another long winding dirt road to Carroll. They all must have gotten a good Christian education on that ride, as I recited out loud all the prayers I had learned as a young boy.

At Carroll we were finally issued M-16 rifles and ammunition from a guy named Mike Romanski. After inspecting my M-16, I realized that the barrel had a slight bend. I went back to the supply room and asked for an exchange. Romanski just shrugged his shoulders, smiled and said he had issued me a good rifle and, if I wanted another rifle, what did I have to trade. I had to give him a pack of cigarettes to get my choice of rifles. Tank then brought us to the Command Post Bunker where we were introduced to Captain Morgan, Lieutenant Amerman, the First Sergeant Slater, equipped with a handlebar mustache, and our Platoon Leader, Lieutenant Moore.

Captain Morgan welcomed us to Camp J.J. Carroll named after a Marine officer who gave his life defending his Marines. Carroll was centrally located along Route 9 and situated on top of a high, flat-topped mountain overlooking the DMZ and several combat bases in the area. He also told us that Carroll was known as "Artillery Hill" because of all the heavy duty, short and long range cannons located on the base. He told us that Carroll's artillery included 105, 106, 155 and 175 millimeter cannons, 8 inch cannons and an assortment of mortar platoons. Carroll's artillery could protect all bases up to thirty-four miles away. Plus, it was the home and central jumping-off point for all the Marine units in the area. He then gave us another brief description of Duster life and how we would interact with the Marines. Lt. Amerman and the First Sergeant each gave a short speech and then turned us over to our Platoon Leader Lt. Steve Moore.

Moore now separated us into our respective new MOSs (Military Occupational Specialties). He was shocked and upset that his new men had no formal stateside military training on a Duster. Four of the men were assigned to "C" Battery Headquarters, working in the motor pool or communications. The rest of us went directly onto "tracks" (Dusters). Moore asked if any of us knew how to drive a Duster. I told him I knew how to drive a bulldozer and I instantly became a Driver. I didn't mind and thought it beat being a Cannoneer. Gun Bunnies, as we called them, had to stand and load the cannons. Since the turret was high off the ground, it made them an even greater target. I didn't think being a Gun Bunny would be safe. I would soon learn that no job was safe.

As I listened to Moore give his lecture about what he expected of us and what life would be like in base camp, on the road, and in combat, I could not help but think this was going to be like the gunfight at the OK Corral and that I was going to be another Wyatt Earp. Maybe trying to get from base to base strung out across the DMZ would be more like storming Omaha Beach and Iwo Jima combined. All I knew was this "jungle dirt highway" he called Route 9 sounded real scary. He expressed, over and over, how the Duster was a crew-served weapon and that her crew had to stand to fight the enemy. "Since there is no room on a Duster to duck or hide, you will always see who is shooting at you and you will also see who you kill." At all cost we had to protect ourselves, the troops in our charge, and the Duster's virtues from all enemy intruders. He expected his men to rise to the occasion, stand tall and make Charlie Battery 1st/44th proud and nothing less. I thought it was interesting that he referred to the Duster as a woman. He ended with a prayer. Moore's speech made the Duster come alive and the war a reality.

Of all the officers I got to know, Lt. Moore would earn the most respect from his men. Moore thought like the men who rode the roads. He knew from early encounters with the NVA how to use the Duster firepower to our advantage, what to do and what not to do in a firefight. Getting in too close didn't always mean victory. It always gave me a feeling of relief when Moore was in the TC's (Track Commander's) hatch. The TC hatch was an additional individual seat to the right of the Driver. We all felt Moore was not there for the glory, like some other officers. Moore was there for his men. I would steal knowledge from this man by listening, learning and adapting. The only hard part about fighting on the road with Moore was that we were quite sure we would be the last ones back to camp after a firefight. Moore always accounted for his men and the Marines we supported. Moore never knew that returning back to camp last from a battle meant, to the men at the camp, that we had kicked some NVA butt and were one of "Moore's Road Warriors". Surviving the battles gave us courage and gave courage to the men who never rode the road. It gave us another reason to "saddle up" and escort the next convoy down the infamous Route 9.

To my surprise, I was sent immediately to the First Track Position directly in front of the Mess Hall at Camp Carroll. My new home was a "bunker", a 9 foot cube with only one door, no windows, and constructed from sandbags and old ammunition cans. This hole in the ground had only candles for light and an outside outhouse they called the "shitter." Little did I know, a bunker would be the best home I'd have over the next year. If we didn't have a bunker to live in, we slept under the stars or under the Duster.

I was introduced to my new combat team: Dieter, Lanier, Green, and Musso. Their Driver, a soldier named Louis Calya, who was going home in a few days, would be training me to be the new Driver. The men welcomed me with a traditional hot meal of C-Rations (meals in a can). Stateside, I had only eaten C-Rations once, which we cooked in the can on a tiny field stove. Cleve Lanier insisted on showing me the proper technique in preparing C-Rations. He explained that there were three different cases of C-Rations, each case was marked either, B-1, B-2 or B-3. B-1 had things like Beef Steak, Ham Slices, Fruit, and Crackers and Peanut Butter. B-2 had Beans and Wieners, Beefsteak with Potatoes, Ham and Lima Beans, Cheese Spread, Pecan Roll, and Pound Cake. B-3 cases contained Boned Chicken, Spiced Beef, Chicken and Noodles, and Bread and Jam. The accessory packs had plastic spoons, salt, pepper, coffee, sugar, creamer, Chiclets chewing gum and cigarettes.

Cleve said, "Joe, we treat all new guys to the best meal in all the boxes…Ham and Lima Beans, or better known as "Ham and Mother Fuckers!" The rest of the crew just smiled and nodded in agreement. Something inside me said I was being setup for a fall. Cleve then took out of his pocket a tiny metal can opener called a P-38. It's a very small piece of metal with a fold-out sharpened claw used to open the cans. He announced that the P-38 got its name because it takes 38 punctures to open a can. He then grabbed an old, used short C-Ration can, which already had the top cut off, and told me he was going to make me an official "John Wayne Boonie Stove." I watched, hoping to learn from these seasoned troops, how to properly prepare and cook these meals in a can. With his P-38, Cleve cut a couple of grooves in the can and pressed the sides in. This would hold up the can you were going to cook and let air in for the compressed Sterno tablet used to heat your meal. Next, he took another empty soup-sized can and told me to wash it out because this was going to be my drinking cup. He took a small piece of wood about four inches long and carved it round like a dowel. At each end he cut a groove. He then wrapped the top and bottom edges of the can with a piece of stiff wire, attaching the dowel. After several twists and turns around the can and dowel, he smiled and presented me with my first "jungle cup." I stared at it in amazement. Instead of using the Sterno heat tab, Cleve grabbed a block of C-4 plastic explosive and ripped off a small piece. He rolled it into a ball, placed it in the can and proceeded to light it. I ran out of the bunker as he struck the match. I thought he went crazy and was going to blow us all up. They all followed me out of the bunker, laughing and screaming at me as I ran and took cover, waiting for the big explosion. Finally, after they stopped laughing, they explained how C-4 will only burn when lit, will only explode with a detonator, and is used all the time for cooking. I still thought they had all gone a little nutty. To their surprise, I enjoyed the "Ham and Mothers". I quickly learned that "Beanie Weenies" was the number one meal on the DMZ. They became my favorite, but I would have to wait my turn for this meal.

The following morning, my training consisted of driving around the camp three times and becoming rear security on my first convoy, heading to a place called the "The Rockpile". On the way to our destination, we had to cross a river at a place called the Khe Gio Bridge. I still remember Calya yelling instructions, "Keep up the RPMs! Don't go too fast into the water! Stay to the left!" "There's a big concrete block under the water from the old bridge. Stay to the left!" I was more than a little nervous and did all the wrong things, including hitting the concrete block. That was all I remembered. The Driver's hatch, weighing about 100 lbs., slammed closed on top of me, forcing the periscope mount through my plastic Driver's helmet and knocking me out cold. They told me I slid down on top of the gas pedal and the track went out of control. It went down the river, up and over several embankments and into the elephant grass before they finally got me off the controls. While this was happening, the convoy was being shot at by some NVA and we weren't shooting back. I was thankful no one was hurt or killed. A few days later, we were told all hatches had to be tied open. Darryl Hale would always remind everyone how I almost got him killed on that convoy.

I learned there was a great responsibility in being the Driver. In our three-day training period, we were taught only the basic Driver duties: keep the Duster gassed, greased, oiled, and full of ammunition, ready to travel. I thought if there was any chance of going home or getting the crew in the turret home, I'd better learn all I could about this hunk of steel called a "DUSTER." I started asking questions, lots of questions. I asked about "INCOMING!," outgoing, past battles, land mines, Marines, jets, helicopters, medivacs, Army units, first aid, call signs, radio frequencies, convoys, convoy ambush deployment, grid coordinates, and the names of the radio operators from Dong Ha to Khe Sanh. I was shocked how we all learned from my questioning.

As I became a proper, gung-ho Duster Driver, I gave my Duster its own insignia. On the front turret plate above the 40mm cannon barrels, I painted a white skull with the words "GRIM REAPER."

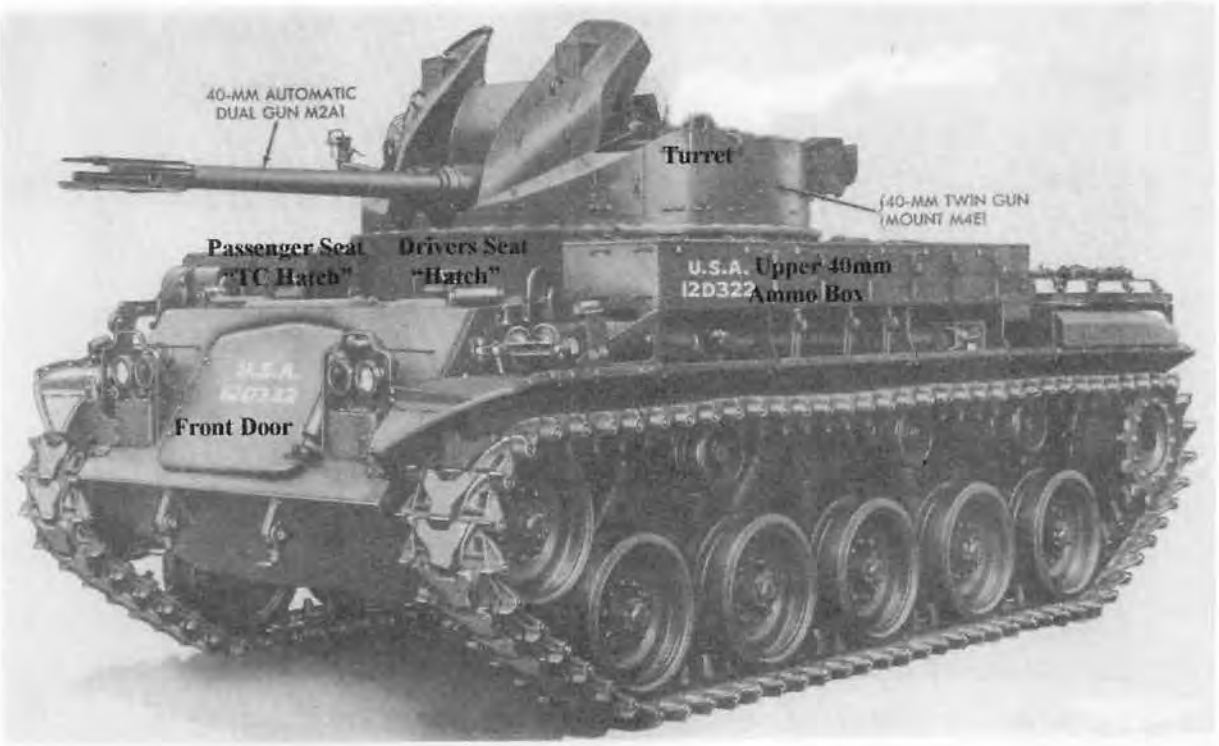
I began ending all radio calls with my track number, followed by "Grim Reaper." I wanted everybody to know who we were and where we were, always. This wasn't radio protocol, but I didn't care who got offended. It was my butt on the line and, when I needed assistance, I could cut out the protocol bullshit and get down to business. The camp's "Office Pogues", shooting from the hip, tried to tell us what was happening on the road. The Duster Crews were the Road Warriors. We knew what was happening on Route 9 and we didn't need some asshole up on the hill telling us what to do. We called ourselves "The Thundering Herd".

I was proud to be the Driver. It taught me the meaning of true teamwork, the value of courage under fire, the commitment you must be willing to give to another human being, and what it meant when they said, "There are those who just drive and there are those who are drivers." You knew when you achieved true Driver status. The crew from the turret would start telling jokes about you. The best joke was, "My Driver's so stupid that, during a fire fight, he will open the front door of the track, get out from the safety of the Driver's compartment, and tap dance around the outside of the Duster, while handing us ammo in tune to the rhythm of the enemy's AK-47s." Jokes about anyone or anything seemed to break the cutting edge of war.

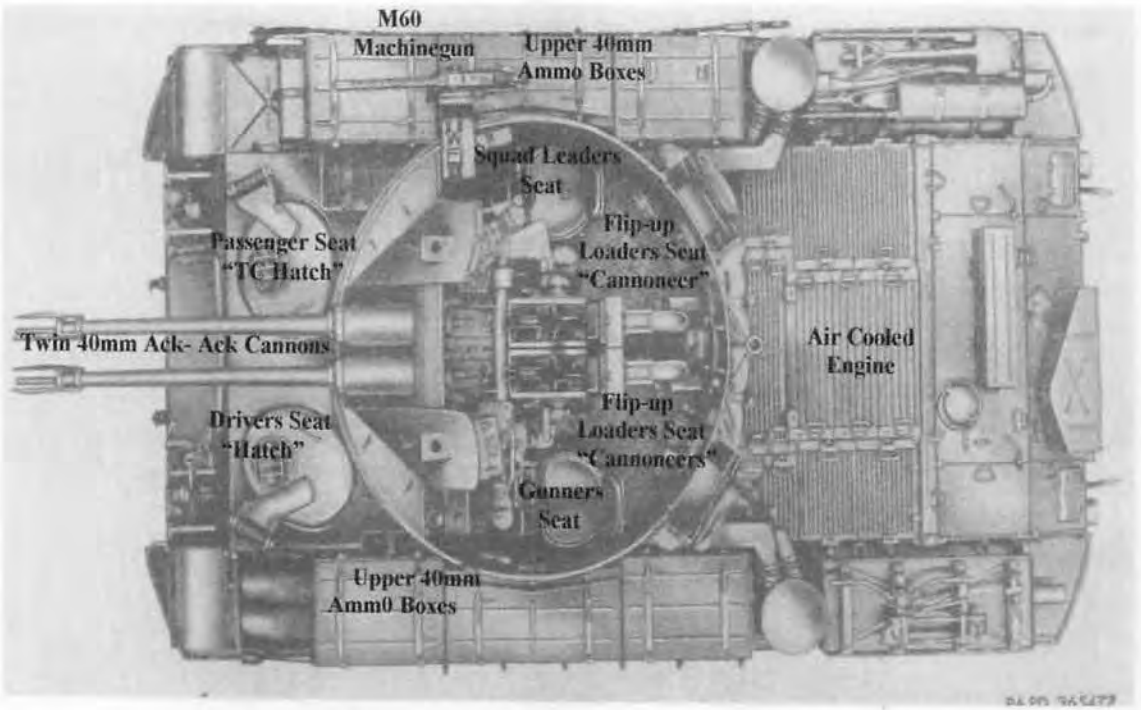
The troops in our part of the war zone often said, "If Hell could be renamed, it would be called Route 9, the Road to Khe Sanh." Route 9 or "THE ROAD", as we called it, was to become my home, my way of life. It was as if only our Duster knew the way to all the other camps. Our track would run the road an average of five to six days per week. If it wasn't what we called "regular convoys", it was a small convoy the Marines called "The Rough Rider". Sometimes we would do area sweeps with the Marines, search and destroy missions or body recovery.

I remember the first time an "RPG" (Rocket Propelled Grenade) was fired at our track. It was my third or fourth convoy to The Rockpile. I was about a half-mile past the Khe Gio Bridge. All of a sudden, an NVA soldier jumped out of the elephant grass, brought a tube-like object to his shoulder, shot, and jumped back in the grass just as fast. Like a giant smoking bottle rocket, it flew at us like a vision from an old Flash Gordon flick, spitting smoke and flying sporadically with the Gook acting the part of Ming the Merciless. The RPG hit the ground in front of us, exploded and sent hot metal and dirt all over us. Like some crazy man, I drove into the tall grass, hoping to run over the little Gook bastard. I was instantly ordered to a slow crawl, and we started shooting into the tall grass. We allowed the first three vehicles in the convoy to pass us. The firefight ended as fast as it started.

When we got to The Rockpile, the only conversation about the incident was among our own crew. They laughed that the Gook had missed us by a mile. If that was a mile, I'd hate to see what they considered close. I guess laughing built courage. We replenished our ammo and took another convoy back to Camp Carroll. I always wondered if I had run over that NVA soldier. The guys in the turret said I got him, but I didn't think so. I thought I should have felt a thump or something as I ran him over. Maybe when twenty-five tons of steel going 40mph runs over someone, you don't feel too much. When we got back to camp, I asked if we were supposed to file an incident report or notify the Captain. I was shocked when I was told that no one cared. We only report the seriously wounded or the dead. They didn't ask and we didn't tell. The only time they cared was if a lifer sergeant or officer riding with us got hurt. We'd then tell them all about the battle. They'd get their medals and maybe we'd get some recognition. Purple Hearts were a dime a dozen and, unless you were really bleeding and needed a medic, we didn't bother reporting injuries. I would soon learn that my first Squad Leader was telling the sad truth. There were only four ways you left our outfit: dead, missing some parts, missing in action, or your tour was over. Army soldiers attached to the Marines had their rules, and I quickly learned what rules kept me alive and what rules would get me killed.



"Duster"
M42 Twin 40-mm Cannons, Self Propelled – Automatic Weapon
Front View



"Duster"
Top View

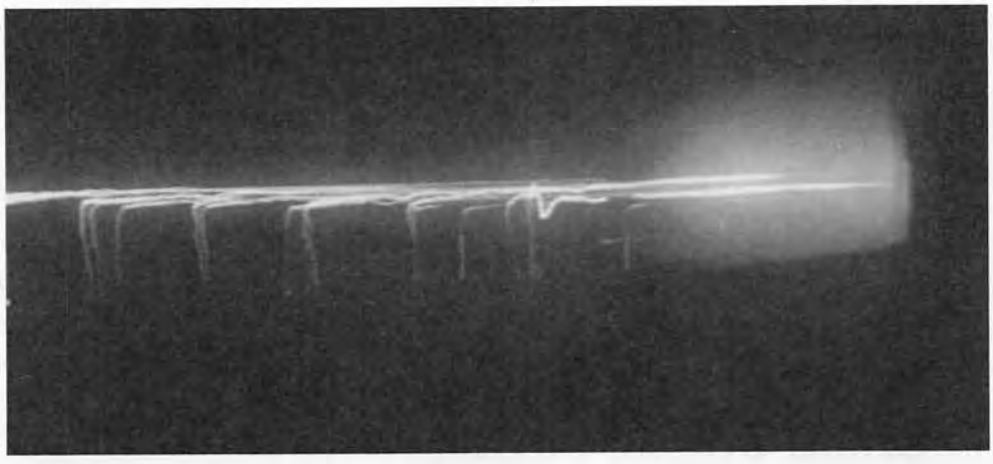
Duster – Twin 40mm breaches loaded for action.

Standing on my Duster holding a clip of 40mm ammunition.

Manning my Duster's M-60 machine gun.

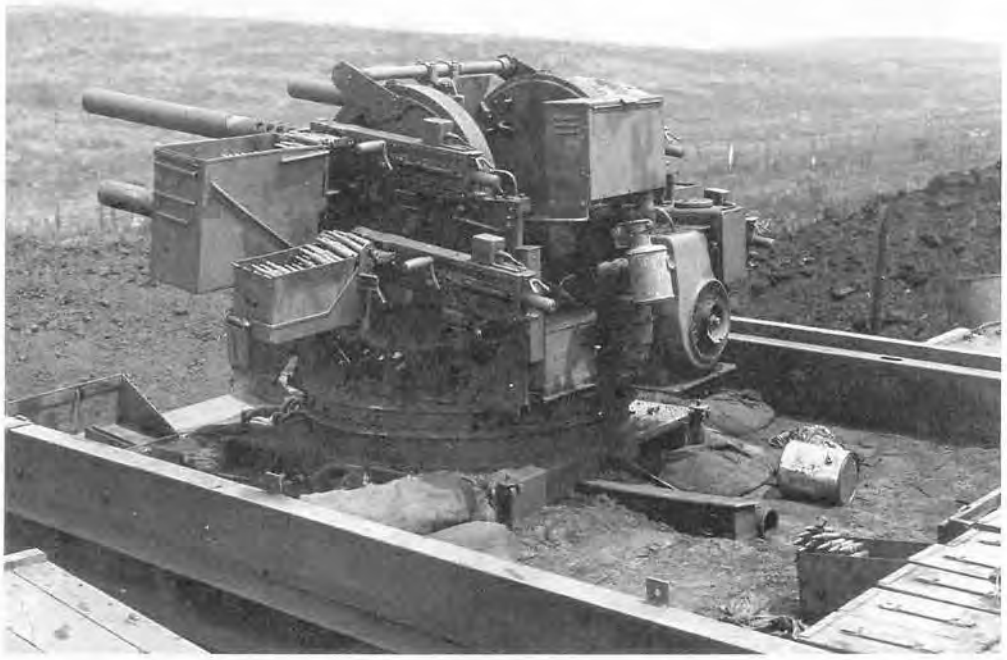
Claymore Mine

The training sergeant said that anything seen in these sights must "Die."

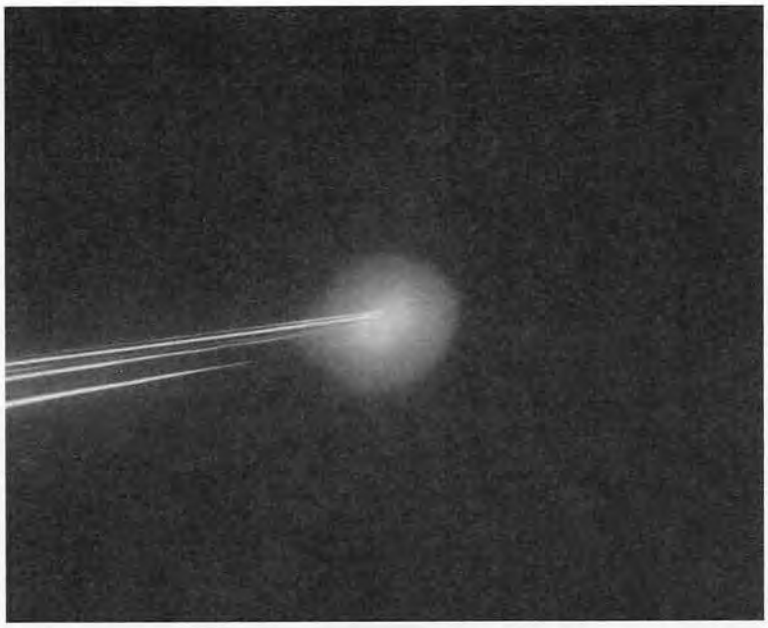


Duster 40mm shooting at night.

Quad 50 machine guns mounted on 21/2 ton trucks.
Note: The nose art on the front shield of the right truck -
"The Widow Maker" was the most famous Quad 50.



Quad 50 machine guns with special cooling aircraft barrels.



Quad 50 shooting at night.

John "Tank" Huelsenbeck.

Loading the "Newbee's" on the 21/2 ton truck at Dong Ha.

Passing the Vietnamese relocation settlement outside Cam Lo called "Tin City" on Route 9.

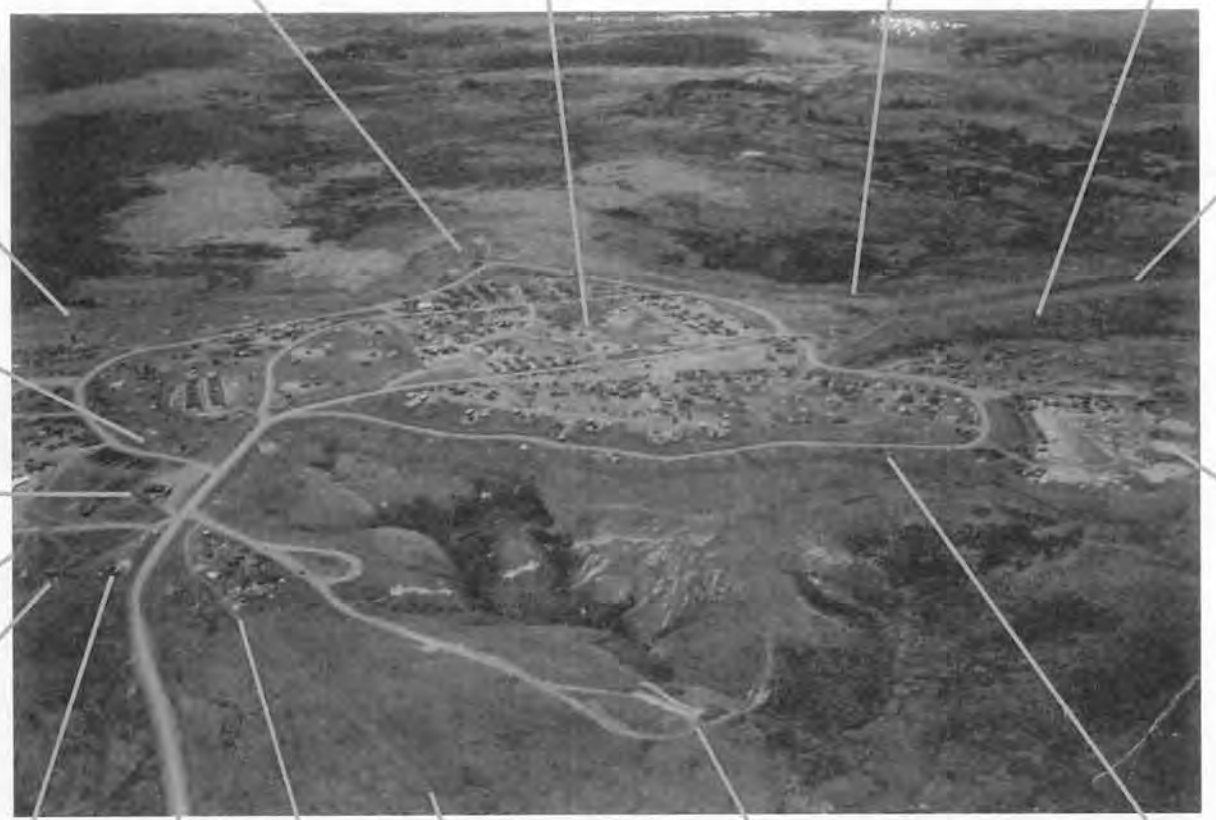
Montagnard Village relocated next to "Tin City."

Charlie Battery main area at Camp Carroll.

Dave Woods standing next to Charlie Battery sign at Camp J.J. Carroll.

Lieutenant Steve Moore
Lt. Mitchum can be seen in the background wearing a baseball cap.

Camp J.J. Carroll

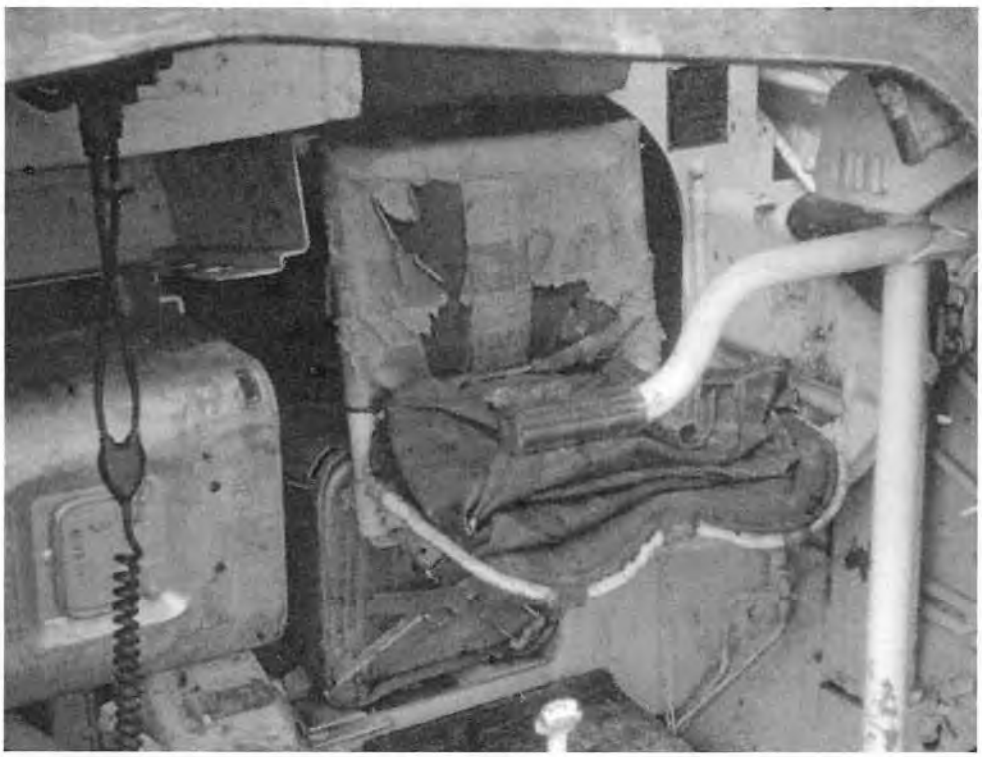


Camp Carroll looking from the South to the North.
Note: The Lookout Tower next to the Waterpoint position in the distance.
Headquarters of Charlie Battery, 1/44 Artillery, is to the right of the Tower.

Duster motor pool at Camp Carroll.

I painted my new call new sign and symbol "Grim Reaper" on our Duster.

Grim Reaper Duster at Camp Carroll waterpoint position.



The Driver's seat of my Duster.
The 40mm ammo cans are stored beside the Driver.

2nd/94th Artillery – 175mm Cannon.

Charlie Battery – "The Thundering Herd."

Convoy assembling to travel down Route 9.

The original Khe Gio Bridge lying in the water, the place where I hit the old concrete piers.

Chapter 3: LOST INNOCENCE

September 6, 1967: I received a small pocket diary from my brother-in-law, Kenny. I now have a place for my thoughts. That little book and some treasured scraps of paper would be the safe keepers of my year in Nam. If I die, my family will have some knowledge of what I had experienced.

Dear Diary,

BUNKER DREAMS

Uncurling from my fetal position of sleep, I realized I was not alone. To my surprise and pleasure, my mind had brought me a Monk to see me through the night. As he stood there hidden by his majestic raven cloak, I was shamefully reminded of Bela Lugosi. I accepted him wholeheartedly, although he was featureless, except for the outline of a painfully thin person. This apparition waited patiently and finally spoke. The voice, though not lucid, was calm and warm, trained on a thousand rosaries. I sat up, waiting to be filled with his words of wisdom, like a balloon readying itself for a helium trip. I was in the confessional of life. "Please speak,"
I begged him, "I need your words to help me this night." My Monk just stood there, motionless in his stance of prayer. I stood to apologize for something I did not know. Finally, I comprehended why my Monk had arrived. Protruding from beneath his cloak was the skinless bones of a foot and the blade of his Reaper's Scythe swishing through the air screaming..."INCOMING!"

September 7: We were called out as part of a reactionary force to find a missing Marine lost in this morning's firefight. We searched the ambush area with a small squad of Marines. After about an hour of driving through the elephant grass, we found him. He had been tortured by the NVA. His back was broken and his pecker stuffed in his mouth. We all cried and swore our vengeance. I never knew his name, may God forgive me. We could only pray for his soul and hope someone knew his name. Dear God, please don't let that happen to me. My innocence was being destroyed before my eyes. I prayed to what I hoped were not deaf ears.

Dear God, I have only been here a few short weeks. There is so much death, especially the enemy. Please make me strong for what I have to do. This isn't football, track, or boxing. Make me quick with no hesitations. I know my job is to kill. I just never knew I would be good at it. I'm afraid this war will make me another type of person, someone my family won't like. God, maybe it's the Duster that makes us kill. We keep her well fed on a diet of NVA. I don't know how to explain it to you, God. I am already caught up in her rhythm of killing. Forgive me...

September 8: I met my first Marine Gunnery Sergeant. They just call him "Gunny". His men adore him. He is like their Messiah. We sat around joking and getting to know each other. The Marines called me a "doggy" soldier and taunted me, saying that Army meant, "Ain't Ready to be a Marine Yet." We all laughed and I teased them about being called "Jar Heads". I thought they were from a Marine unit called 1/9 and nicknamed "The Walking Dead". The Gunny was telling all of us how he wished Chesty Puller was here. Chesty would do things right, Chesty would do this, and Chesty would do that. I chirped in and announced. "If Chesty were here, I'd do her right, too." With that announcement, the Gunny attacked me as if I had said something bad about his mother. To his and the other Marines' surprise, I quickly knocked him on his ass several times and almost knocked him out. After all the commotion, they told me Chesty Puller was the most famous Marine that ever lived. I apologized to my Marine friends. I hadn't meant to insult them or Mr. Puller. I had no idea who he was or that he was the greatest Marine alive. The Marines nicknamed me "The General," a reference to when I disrespected their most beloved General.

Years later one midnight, I would meet Chesty's son, Lewis Puller, Jr., at The Wall (Vietnam Memorial) in Washington, D.C. I told him the story about his father and we laughed. I casually pushed him in his wheelchair along the Wall. Lewis had been seriously wounded in Nam and his wheelchair was now his chariot. It was as if we were the only two men there. We talked easily about our experiences and introduced each other to our friends on The Wall. We had a simple friendship that only lasted a few short years. I still listen to the audio version of his book, "Fortunate Son". Lewis, you are deeply missed.

September 9: I finally began to realize that we had a daily routine. The average day started at dusk. Each night, four of the five-man crew pulled two-hour shifts of Guard Duty. Daily, one man got a turn to get some extra sleep. Our Duster shot all night H&I missions. About an hour before sunup, we would leave camp with a small group of Marines. The morning ritual was called "mine sweeping". Marines walked in front of us with metal detectors. We swept about two miles of the road for landmines. We found them every day and the Marines blew them up in place. I felt sorry for the Grunt whose job it was to use the metal detector. It was sadistically comical when he found a landmine. He stopped real quick, waved his "magic wand" back and forth, and tapped several times on his headset as if confirming his newfound treasure. He stepped back and did it all again, and then waved for help. His teammates joked and told him he was on his own, and then they'd all curse out the landmine and each other...building courage. They blew up the mines they found, and we'd all go back to camp and eat something. Hopefully, we could get a hot meal from one of the mess halls. If not, we ate C-Rations. We would then announce the famous military term "Saddle Up!" and leave the camp on some kind of other mission, either convoys, search and destroys, body recovery or extracting Marines from some isolated area, or hopefully just staying at camp.

September 10: Camp J.J. Carroll was hit by twenty NVA artillery shells. The sound of the shells screaming through the air made my brain cry out in fear. My heart nearly burst out of my chest and my bones ached as the shells exploded all around us. The ground shook and there was a horrible dusty, burnt smell as the bombs exploded and all I could hear was the shrapnel ripping things, and people, apart. The screaming of the wounded and dying could be heard over the explosions. All I could think of was being hit by one of those shells and my body ending up in thousands of tiny pieces splattered all over the DMZ. Nothing left of me to send home to my family. I don't know if I can ever get used to "INCOMING!".

Dear Heavenly Father, How can I explain to you what incoming and body recovery is doing to me, my brain, my heart, my body, my soul... my belief in you is changing. Please do not forsake me. If nothing else changes me in this war, this will...

My tour is now only into its second week, and I am in the Duster doing what we call "the mail run" to Dong Ha and back to Camp Carroll. On the return trip, we were advised by radio to go up the road that led to a place called Con Thien. We were to act as a reactionary force for some Marine tanks hit by the NVA on the road that left Con Thien to Route 9. This was to be my christening into what the Grunts or Infantry called "COMBAT." For some strange reason, I thought I had already experienced combat. Maybe someone forgot to inform me. We didn't travel very far before we saw a tank and some trucks stationary on the road about a hundred or more yards in front of us. It looked like they were on fire. Shooting could be heard everywhere. I was told to stop the Duster. The Squad Leader spoke briefly to someone on the radio. I was sweating and holding tight to the steering bar. Within seconds, the Twin 40s started shooting. The noise of the 40s shooting over my head is always a new experience. Each shell fired hurt my ears and made me twitch in my seat. I was ordered to proceed at a crawl toward the smoking tank and to stop no closer than a hundred feet from it.

As we approached the tank, I could see smoke coming out of the top hatch and engine compartment. Two men, who I thought were tank crew, were lying on the outside of the tank. Behind it I could see a few trucks in the trench alongside the road. About a dozen Marines were scattered along the road. Three or four were still shooting, the others were not moving. It was a horrible scene. Then the order came, but not the one I was waiting for. I was hoping we were going to leave. It was the order I would learn to hate the most, "Ammo up!" It meant my guys in the turret were almost out of ammunition. If we stopped shooting, we could die. Frantically, I started to open the reserve 40mm ammunition stored in the Driver's compartment. Each ammo can weighed 116 pounds and held 16 shells. As fast as I could hand out ammo was as fast as they shot it. Soon, there was no room to move in the Driver's compartment because I never threw out the empty ammo cans or lids. I realized, for the first time, I had to open the front door of the Duster and get out. Bullets were pinging off the Duster hull like a drum roll. I took what I hoped was not my last deep breath, kicking open the front door and jumping out of the Duster.

Not knowing what to do with the empty cans, I somewhat hastily stacked them next to the Duster as I handed ammo up to the men in the turret. My back was to the enemy. I continually turned around and gave short bursts with my M-16 in the direction the enemy bullets were coming from. Like some kind of wild tap dancer, I followed the back of the turret as it traversed, handing ammo up to the Cannoneers. Above all the noise, I could hear someone yelling for help. I saw a Marine trying to crawl to the safety of our Duster. He was covered in blood and yet was trying to drag a fellow wounded Marine with him. All he wanted me to do was save his friend. I don't know why, but I ran to him. Grabbing his friend and flipping him up onto my left shoulder, fireman's style, I ran back to the Duster, placing him inside my Driver's compartment. As I ran, his blood covered my hands, arms, shoulder and neck. As he bounced on my shoulder, I could feel his warm blood pumping into my ear and running down my back and chest. It made me tremble. Before I knew it, I had four Marines piled inside the Driver's compartment next to my seat, packed so tightly I had trouble closing the door. The Squad Leader was screaming at me to get back in the Duster. He had me "neutral steer" 180 degrees around and told me to "Dee Dee-Move Fast" and drive as fast as I could back towards Route 9 until he told me to stop. As I drove, the minutes seemed like hours. I didn't know what was happening. I could no longer see all the action. I just sat there, holding the steering bar tight, trembling with fear. The Squad Leader chirped into my headset to stop. I could not help but stare at the wounded Marines piled next to me in my small Driver's compartment, moaning and asking for help. The loud bursts of the shooting 40s reawakened me to the reality of war. Over the intercom, I could hear the Squad Leader screaming at the men in the turret. Patiently, I waited for my next order. Again, the thought of really dying entered my mind. Who would tell my parents? All at once the shooting stopped.

Reinforcements must have come out from Con Thien or another base, because Marines were all over the place and seemed to be assessing the damage. I advised the Squad Leader that we had four wounded Marines stacked in the Driver's compartment. He started yelling at me and then said something inaudible into the radio. He said "Dee Dee" and we quickly left the ambush site and went to a place called the Cam Lo Compound. We left the wounded at a small medivac station. I was mentally shook up and totally lost and had to be directed back to camp. Two were injured badly. The guy who was crawling had a hole in his face and one through his leg. The fourth guy, I think, was dead. He never moved or said anything. I had no idea what to do for them and feel guilty that I may not have done the right things in my first firefight.

After we got back at Camp Carroll, the crew was very quiet and stayed to themselves. I began to clean the blood out of the Driver's hatch area. I cried as I cleaned, hoping that the crew would not notice. I had to suck up all my emotions if I was to be accepted. Soldiers don't cry. I thought, 'God, we're with the Marines. I've got to suck it up.' I was surprised that the whole incident had taken less than three hours from start to finish. I cleaned up all the blood and was starting to fill the inside of the Duster with new ammo. One of the Cannoneers came out and told me that the Sarge wanted to see me in the bunker. I was shocked at how angry he was with me. He told me to never pick up the wounded or the dead until all the shooting stopped—not even the Duster personnel. My main objective was to keep the track running, help with ammo, shoot my M-16, help with the radio, and make damn sure no Gooks got on or close to the Duster. Dusters are killing machines and it is our job to protect the Grunts and kill the enemy before he kills our troops or us. The Driver is the most important crewmember. If he didn't do his job, nobody went home. I was determined to be able to do both jobs, keep the crew safe and supplied with ammo, and pick up the wounded and dead.

The Sarge then started yelling at everyone. We all cleaned the Duster and got it ready for the next convoy. After we were finished, he told me I had to burn my fatigue shirt because it was covered in someone else's blood and it was bad luck to keep the shirt. I knew I needed all the luck I could get and didn't argue. I dipped the shirt in the diesel fuel and gas mixture we used to clean our 40mm cannons. In silent tribute to another human's essence, I lit the shirt on fire. The Sarge nodded in satisfaction. Again, there was no official acknowledgement of the day's firefight. At the mess hall that evening, a few of us briefly went over the battle with the men from the camp. My fellow soldiers always wanted to know all about the blood and guts of the firefights. Lt. Moore walked by and told us what a good job we had done. His words of praise were mixed with words of Christianity. We were shocked he even knew of the battle. I should have known better; he was the best officer we had.

Dear Lord, I don't know if I can live up to the Sergeant's rules about not helping the wounded and dying during a battle. Something inside me says I cannot let any of them down. Maybe if I learn more and practice more, I can fight and save lives at the same time. Help me, Lord, this war will test my mettle.

September 11: Between all the convoys we run up and down Route 9, we have to make mail runs all alone to Dong Ha and back to Camp Carroll. Sometimes we bring a small convoy back with us. We notice on each trip back that there are always the same three Vietnamese people standing at the end of the Cam Lo Village, two men and a woman. One of the men holds a pen and clipboard and starts writing as we pass. When we get about a mile down the road, we always get hit by the NVA. We agree that, by the way they are dressed, they are brazen NVA soldiers and are sending convoy info to their comrades. The days they are not there we don't get hit. They are so bold that I was able to take a picture of them. Bastards!

September 12: Besides being a target for every NVA artillery unit, camp life has other kinds of obstacles. My friend, Rodriguez, came to my position on the perimeter of the camp and told me the Sergeant sent him to fetch me for shit burning and piss tube detail. I started laughing, thinking he was joking. "It's your turn. You've been pissing in the tubes and taking a dump in the main camp's shitter for weeks. Now you can clean and burn." "Thanks a lot, buddy." The latrine, or shithouse, is a small wooden structure. Inside there are two wooden planks with four holes cut into each plank for you to sit on and have your moment of peace and comfort. There are no toilet seats, just wood splinters from the rough-cut holes. The only problem is that you can be sitting with seven other guys, knees touching, wanting the same experience and begging for toilet paper. Toilet paper is a prized commodity.

The first thing he showed me was where the lime and window screening were stored. After loading a wheelbarrow with lime and grabbing a handful of window screens, that were pre-cut to about two-foot squares, we started off for my new adventure, "Shit Burning Detail." The first thing we walked to was one of the piss tubes. The tubes were the empty storage cylinders from Howitzer cannon shells. A hole was dug into the ground and the tube was placed at a forty-five degree angle, crotch high. The window screen was wrapped around the open end for you to pee through. The screen also prevented jungle critters from getting in the tube and biting your pecker. He explained that if the screens had holes, I was to replace them. Then I was to throw lime all around the piss tube area. There were six piss tubes spread around Charlie Battery's main area and only one main, eight-seat shitter. Next I was to pull the eight cut-in-half 50 gallon drums full of rank shit and piss out of the back of the outhouse. I was to fill them with kerosene, add a little gasoline, roll up some newspaper, light it, and toss it into the drum. While the shit burned, and between stirrings, I was to finish working on the piss tubes. Rodriguez walked away laughing and yelled, "Have fun and don't get killed!" With the flick of my Zippo lighter, I lit a piece of rolled up paper and tossed it in the can. Instantly, flames started licking at the shit, with lots of billowing black, smelly smoke. In a flash all the cans were lit and on fire, a towering black inferno full of the nastiest smells on earth. I stirred each can with a long stick as if I were stirring a pot of my favorite soup. It was an easy job. All I had to do was stand there and occasionally stir the brew until it turned to ashes. There was only one problem. It took more than four hours to burn an eight-can shitter. I was covered in what they called "shit ash," plus the smoke was a giant target for all the NVA artillery teams in the area. Burn, stir, and dodge artillery. It was lots of "fun".

I always wondered if I was to get killed while burning shit, would my parents get a letter saying "Your son died while burning human waste" or maybe "in the line of "doodie".

September 14: I was curious about the August 21st battle and the men we replaced because of it. Lt. Moore, John Huelsenbeck and Don Wolfe went into great detail telling me that Charlie Battery was part of Captain John Ripley's Raiders, Lima Company, 3rd Battalion – 3rd Marines, and that, on the 21st , they were involved in another big battle on Route 9.

A super convoy, about a mile long, was traveling from The Rockpile to Ca Lu and got hit halfway to Ca Lu. Reactionary forces from the Rockpile and Ca Lu went to the rescue. Lt. Steve Moore came from Ca Lu commanding two Dusters. With him were Eugene Triola and Joseph Musso. As they approached the ambush, the NVA turned several RPGs in their direction, hitting the Marine M48 Tank in front of them and knocking it out of commission. Moore's two Dusters then started shooting full auto at the rushing NVA infantry. RPGs were flying overhead and exploding all around them. On full auto, they quickly exhausted the 40mm ammo in the turret boxes. As the Driver opened the reserved stored ammunition from inside the Duster hull, Moore ran around the sides of the Duster and tossed them up to the Cannoneers in the turret. Seeing the enemy's .51 caliber machine gun shooting at the piper cub spotter plane, he directed his Duster to take out the enemy's gun. The pilot chirped on the radio a big "Thank You." Two NVA then physically attacked Moore. He shot one with his .45 pistol and dispatched the other in a hand-to-hand battle. One of the NVA slightly wounded him with a bayonet during their brief struggle. As they advanced forward, enemy mortars exploded all around them, wounding Moore and his crew with splinters of hot shrapnel. Slowly, they fought their way east into the ambushed convoy, knocking out any NVA positions they encountered.

Two Dusters and one 2 ½ truck full of 40mm ammunition advanced towards the ambush from The Rockpile. The two Duster crews were comprised of Lt. Stephen Drennen and Dustermen Sgt. Dailey, Ed Hoffman, Cooper Thomas, Don Wolfe, Joseph Konopka, Buddy Russell, Billy Watson, Roger Lewis, Juan Valenzuela, Larry Wiegert, and Duster Driver Donald Gerber.

Leaving The Rockpile, they proceeded at full speed toward the ambush. Riding on top of their Duster was a squad of Marines and Captain John Ripley, holding tight to the turret and the M60 machine gun. Before they could even approach the destroyed convoy, a second NVA unit, waiting in hiding, sprung a full scale "L-Shaped" surprise attack. Volleys of NVA RPGs began shooting from both sides of the road, flying inches over the top of the Duster. A few of the RPGs hit the ground in front of their moving Dusters and ammo truck. The combat-experienced Drivers accelerated through the maze of explosions which covered them and their crews in red hot metal and smoldering earth. The bullets were so fierce that they shot the tip off of Joe Konopka's M-16 and put a hole through the rifle stock. Captain Ripley instantly grabbed the Duster's M60 machine gun, positioned next to Don Wolfe, and opened up at the rushing NVA, unloading two full cans of ammo on them. As the next volley of RPGs flew over Ripley's head, he turned to Don and his Marines and yelled, "We're getting off this fucking metal coffin. These guys are crazy!" Like human torpedoes, they all dove off the moving Duster into the tall elephant grass and charged the enemy on foot.

John Huelsenbeck, with Steve Williams, drove a 2 ½ ton truck full of ammunition and was positioned between the two Dusters. As their truck rolled forward, one of the enemy mortars landed between him and the Duster, ripping holes in the truck fenders and hood. Next, the truck windows were blown out and the right side of the truck was riddled by NVA heavy machine gun fire. John, grabbing his M-16 and his Marine grenade bag, bailed out of the moving truck, followed by Williams. Forced to leave the truck, they took cover in an old bomb crater. Hearing NVA talking and shouting, they started to fight their way up the sides of the road, killing any NVA in their path. The second Duster, unable to advance forward, pushed the destroyed ammo truck off the road.

Because of the physical strength of the NVA, it was very difficult to advance forward or backward. To protect their left flank, Sgt. Dailey's Duster positioned itself, alone, in an open flat space of land between the road and the rushing enemy. As both Dusters and Marine combat teams fought off the NVA, John Huelsenbeck noticed Juan Valenzuela slumped over the turret. Quickly, he climbed on top of the Duster and realized Juan had been killed. Placing Juan on the back of the Duster, John started helping load the 40mm cannons and got the Duster shooting again. Dailey's Duster called for more ammo. They were out and being overrun. Steve Williams called John Huelsenbeck and advised him of Dailey's situation. Huelsenbeck and Williams, assigned as the only ammo team for the firefight, grabbed two cans of ammo and ran to their aid. Lt. Drennen ordered John and Steve to go get more ammo. Before they could return, the NVA hit Drennen's Duster with an RPG. The RPG penetrated the Duster turret, fatally wounding Watson, Lewis and Wiegert. Hundreds strong, the NVA then boarded the Duster and shot the men a second time, guaranteeing their kills. Lt. Drennen, now shot through the jaw, escaped being killed by diving head first into the TC hatch.

Don Wolfe's Duster crew, having witnessed their friends being killed, instantly turned their guns on the NVA and killed them. John and Steve, shocked, looked on in disbelief. Billy Watson had been one of John's best friends.

During the entire battle, other Dusterman were trapped on trucks in the center of the ambush. Lindsay Baldoni and Leroy Gerber were killed by the first wave of NVA. Joe Murphy on a Duster fuel truck, along with other Dusterman, fought off the NVA with their M-16 and prayed the truck would not explode and go up in flames. The remaining Dustermen would always thank the Marines for coming to their rescue.

The battle lasted all day and took several days to clean up. After the battle, they loaded their dead and wounded comrades on the back of their Duster and ammo truck and limped back to The Rockpile. Lt. Steve Moore was awarded the Bronze Star with "V" Device. Don Wolfe and John Huelsenbeck were each awarded the Army Commendation Metal for their heroism.

Marine, Leonard Bud, was taken prisoner.

He was held as a Prisoner of War and was not released until 1973.

They then told stories of other similar enemy battles, one on April 25th when Joshua Atkins, Leonard Thomas, and Joseph Royster were killed and another on May 7th when Rhoden Talmadge, Franklin Lewis and Thomas Evans got killed. I was horrified as they told their stories.

They explained to me that nobody really ever talked about the battles or their friends killed in action. They each spoke of an inner hurt and tried to explain that you are given no time to grieve, no day off, and there is no way you can tell their family how you cared. Plus, there was no funeral for you to attend. You just went on as if nothing had ever happened, as though your friends never existed. They then went on to say that I should expect the same scenario during my tour with the 44th.

September 16: We did another mail run today to Dong Ha. I was the lead Duster on our trip back, followed by three supply trucks. As we got to the Cam Lo area, I slowed the Duster down hoping to find and see our three NVA friends. Like clockwork we could see them standing in their same spot. This time we were ready for them. As we approached them, I shot and killed the guy with the clipboard. The other guy and girl quickly ran and disappeared into the bushes. The guys in the turret opened up on them with their M-16s. We think we got them because we did not get a hit today.

September 17: I received a package from Rome. It was from my Uncle Nick's sister. She was a nun named Sister Mercedes who was stationed at the Vatican and was an emissary to Pope Paul VI. Inside the package were five sets of rosary beads and a dozen small medallions with the picture of the Pope and a letter. The only problem was that the letter was written in either Italian or Latin. Knowing she was multi-lingual, I copied her address and wrote her a letter.

Each month I received a letter from her written in English, along with a few rosary beads and other tokens blessed by the Pope. Regardless of religious belief, the guys cherished the blessed gifts from the Pontiff.

September 21: The NVA blew up the Dong Ha ammunition depot. What an explosion, it could be seen for miles.

September 22: Vietnam is the most beautiful place I have ever seen. Where I live in the north is very mountainous and the vegetation grows tall and green. The mountains are like razor sharp spears sticking out of the earth, looming over giant rolling lush green hills. The dirt is reddish in color. In our area, we have old pineapple, banana, coffee, and tapioca plantations, which were once owned by the French and American produce companies. Every day I see giant wild boars running across the road, and monkeys and mongoose. Occasionally, I see some sort of very tiny deer, no more than two feet tall. Insects are gigantic. There are scorpions and spiders of all sizes and shapes. We have eight-inch long centipedes, green and orange in color with half-inch pinchers. I see all kinds of snakes. The ones I worry about were the Cobras and a snake they call a "Green Bamboo Viper," or the "Step-and-a-Half Snake," because that's all you will take before you drop dead. Before you take a dump in the latrines or the makeshift toilets the Marines call a "Head", you have to stick your head down in the shitter and look under the piece of wood your butt is about to sit on to check and see what assortment of creatures are waiting to bite your ass.

While digging one of our fighting holes the other day, we uncovered a very large worm about sixteen inches long. We first thought it was a snake, but one of the guys told us it was just a worm. Leeches stick to us like glue and roaches crawl inside our clothes. Rats seem to be the biggest everyday problem while at camp. They constantly crawl on us in our sleep or over our feet while we write letters home. I'm not talking your average size rat, but a rat that's about as big as a rabbit.

September 23: We were assigned a new position guarding the main entrance to Camp Carroll and the western and northern slopes. They call it "The Water Point Position" because all the purified drinking water for the combat bases in the area is made there. Plus, it is the closest Duster position to the main gate for taking out the daily convoys and doing other crazy Marine missions. I don't like how this position is situated. It is away from the main camp and we are sitting at the tip of a long finger, making us an easy three-sided target for the enemy.

September 24: Carroll was hit by 88 NVA rockets. The Rockpile was hit by 21 enemy rockets. We never have body bags and just use ponchos, poncho liners, or pieces of tent to wrap the dead. It is sad that, as the Body Recovery Team, we don't have body bags. Recovery is a job from the bowels of Hell. We drop off the wounded at the medical or medivac areas. The dead are taken to a makeshift location called "Graves Registration". I have become too acquainted with Graves Registration. I taste the stench and smell of death. My insides never stop crying. Is this what my Dad experienced in WWII? Suck it up, Joe, suck it up!

Every time we are at camp, I practice getting ammo out from the Driver's compartment. Never again am I going to let down anyone in my crew or on the battlefield. I learn how to load the 40s, clean the 40s, unjam the 40s, shoot the 40s, call in fire missions, and am determined that everyone on the crew know each other's job. If one of us gets hurt, the others will take up the slack. I asked the medic for a crash safety course and extra medical supplies.

Eventually, I would demand from my fellow crewmembers their whole-hearted effort in learning everything they could about the Duster. I would hold training classes and, if necessary, become physical to prove my conviction to teamwork and effort. Don Wolfe told me I had a reputation as a badass city kid and that was okay with me. I beat a few asses and thus they all knew I meant business. "Let the training begin," said I.

September 25: At 19:30 hours we were on the receiving end of about 30 NVA artillery shells. Ninety minutes later, we were barraged again by 30 more NVA shells. Diving for cover became a new Olympic sport.

Today we went to the Camp Carroll Mess Hall and we were harassed by one of the Marines. This is not the first time we have had trouble with this particular Marine. He likes to pick on the new guys and spit in their food or stir it with his finger. Yelling that he is trying to make us Army Dogs tough like Marines, I instantly hate this guy and want to punch his lights out. But I am told to "cool it" and to "chill out".

September 26: We luck out and are sent for a week to "Hill 250" just outside Camp Carroll. My new crew consists of Squad Leader Eugene Triola, Gunner Johnny Towns, and Cannoneers James Biers and Dwayne King. I am the Driver. Triola gave me my first .45 caliber pistol. It makes me feel good to have my own personal weapon. I am tired of borrowing one. He told me to just keep it out of sight. It is not considered regular issue equipment.

Hill 250 is possibly the best position on the DMZ. It is a hilltop outpost with a magnificent 360 degree view of the DMZ. On top of the hill is a Ground Surveillance Radar team who help locate the direction of enemy artillery. A platoon of Marines and a lookout tower gives us an even better view of the area. It is our job to shoot at any enemy movement, shoot any enemy artillery that is in our range, or give our big artillery shooting coordinates.

September 27: I could see, in the valley, a large group of what I thought were NVA crossing the Cam Lo River. The crew confirmed my sightings. I was so nervous giving the 105mm Artillery Unit's FDC (Fire Direction Center) the grid coordinates of their location. Each crewmember confirmed my map grids. I didn't want to be alone in my uncertain decision. I prayed that God would forgive me for killing. Our training seemed to make the enemy less than human and okay to kill. We followed the heavy artillery with a few hundred Duster 40mm rounds and saw some secondary explosions. Later in the afternoon, a Marine officer brought us a case of cold beer, a rare commodity on the DMZ, and congratulated us on a job well done. He drank a cold one with us, climbed onto the Duster, sat in the Gunner's seat, and made like he was shooting the Duster. He shouted, "You guys have to be fuckin' nuts to be in one of these metal coffin-RPG magnets!" He then saluted and left the hill. Our crew sat there drinking beer and praising our kills for the day.

Beer never seemed to taste the same again. A cold beer for taking a life. It's been over forty years and I still won't drink the stuff.

September 28: One of the guys going home gave me his battery-operated record player. It is great, complete with records and a couple dozen batteries. Along with listening to Gunsmoke on the radio, dancing around the bunker to Motown, country, and folk music gives me a taste of home. Now we will be able to listen to Hanoi Hannah spout her bullshit about killing Americans—asshole!

September 29: Tank and the other seasoned Dustermen finally started calling me by my real name. Billy Watson's soul can finally rest in peace.

September 30: We have very little contact with the native people. There seem to be two types of people in this area, the Vietnamese and the Montagnards or "Mountain People". The "Yards", as we call them, are an indigenous group of people, living a lifestyle that reminds me of the jungle natives of South America and Africa, complete with crossbows and blow guns. Their homes are made of thatch and straw. To promote harmony, peace, and trade, our unit has the Vietnamese people in the relocation settlement at Cam Lo do some of our laundry. We very seldom get back the same clothes we send.

My favorite activity is visiting and helping the Montagnards. The children are very pleasant and loved candy. I give them Bazooka Bubble Gum and teach them how to blow bubbles. After a few tries, they swallow the gum. They are very friendly to Americans and support the war effort against the NVA. It is easy to realize why they like us and not the NVA.

Airplanes spraying Agent Orange.
The troops could feel the oily mist sticking to them.

NVA soldiers, two men and a woman, brazenly standing in NVA clothes, hiding under Cooley hats.

"Burning human waste,"
also known as "Shit burning detail"

The billowing black smoke from the burning shit made a great target for enemy cannons, rockets, and mortars.

Aerial view of a Duster shooting.
In the turret, sitting in the Squad leader's seat is Don Wolfe (no shirt). In the Gunner's seat is Cleve Lanier. Standing on the rear deck are Cooper Thomas (white shirt) and Leslie "Red" Dietze.

Left to right: Cleve Lanier, Donald Wolfe, and Leslie "Red" Dietze.

Billy Watson and John "Tank" Huelsenbeck, best friends. Billy was "Killed In Action" on August 21, 1967.

Left to right: John Gunesch, Noble Grinner, Wayne Bailey, 1st SGT Boone, Steve Harris and Frank Bardone.

Marines mine sweeping Route 9.

Dong Ha ammunition depot blowing up.

New Jersey flag sent to me by Governor Hughes.

Montagnard Village past Ca Lu in the area called Joliet.
The woman pictured is thrashing rice on a bamboo mat. By the look of the pile of old husks, she has been thrashing in the same area for years.

CHAPTER 4:
TO REALLY LIVE-YOU MUST NEARLY DIE

October 3: We were rear Security on a supply convoy headed for another outpost called Ca Lu. It was eerie how we drove through The Rockpile without stopping. We just yelled hellos and dirty slogans at the troops in the camp. This stretch of the road always made me very nervous. I was driving again into what we called "Ambush Alley – The Road to Hell". As if from nowhere, the trucks in the middle of the convoy were riddled by NVA automatic weapons. Bombs exploded everywhere. Marines jumping out of their trucks were being disembodied by small NVA anti-personnel mines. It happened so fast, I was almost against the bumper of the truck in front of me. I quickly backed up the Duster a good 100 feet and stopped along the right shoulder of the road. Before I finished backing up, the Duster started shooting. Each burst of the 40s' high explosive rounds shredded the elephant grass, trees, and leaves, ripping the enemy to pieces. Debris and human parts were flying everywhere. It was our time to kill. The guys called it "Mowing Grass."

We advanced ever so slowly, shooting in close to the convoy. Then shooting a few hundred yards away, we made our mark of death on Mother Earth in the shape of a giant square with an "X" in the middle. Again, "Joe! Ammo! Ammo! Ammo up!" was screamed into my headset. By now, after several firefights, I was prepared to leave the sanctuary of my Driver's compartment and hand up more ammo to the turret. In the Driver's compartment, I had started carrying a few empty .50 caliber ammunition cans full of hand grenades. Before I exited the hatch, I threw one grenade to the left and one to the right, to hopefully kill any Gooks who had gotten close to my Duster. Then, I jumped out of the track onto the ground and fired a quick burst from my M-16 into the same areas.

Holding true to the typical NVA ambush tactics, two sappers (enemy soldiers, similar to the Japanese Kamikaze) jumped out of nowhere and started running at us, swinging satchel charges (high explosive bombs) over their heads. The two sappers were the first of many I was forced to kill face-to-face that day. As I handed ammo up to the turret, I had to pick up Marines, dead and alive, and throw them anywhere I could, off the road or onto my Duster. If I didn't pick up and move them, I would have had to drive over them as we advanced. That was something I would not allow myself to do, even if it meant dying trying to move them. The Squad Leaders were always getting pissed off at me for not obeying Duster combat orders about not picking up the dead and wounded during a battle. However, I thought I was quick enough to hand out ammo, advance the Duster, do radio communications, kill the Gooks, and still load the wounded on the back of the Duster and move the dead out of the way of my track. On the other hand, running over "Dinks" was good luck.

The battle was very smoky, extremely hectic, and frightening beyond comprehension. The "INCOMING!" and shooting seemed endless. The noise was deafening and droning. Over the sounds of war, I could hear the screams of the wounded and dying from both sides. As I pulled out a can of ammo, there was a loud explosion and I was thrown against the Duster. Everything inside me went into slow motion recovery mode. As they say, my bell was rung (for the first time) and I was on a super adrenaline rush trying to regroup and shake off the cobwebs.

I got wounded for the first time. A long piece of toothpick thin shrapnel was sticking through my left side at my waist, in the area I called my "spare tire". The hot sliver was just under the skin but was too painful to remove when I tried to pull it out. My arms had what looked like hundreds of little needles in them, with small smears of blood everywhere. Death and destruction was all around us. I knew I had to keep humping ammo, driving forward, picking up Marines, and staying focused. We were now all operating on adrenaline and trying to stay alive. Killing the NVA was at another all-time high. I had emptied my ammo can full of grenades into the brush on each side of the road. No Gooks were going to take my track or me, or cut off my balls. Muzzle flashes from some kind of NVA artillery could be seen coming from the surrounding hills. I radioed for our own artillery support. Over the radio, we heard Wayne Bailey, from our Second Platoon, advising us that he could see with his binoculars part of the ambush from his hill position at The Rockpile. Bailey also advised us he could see the small flags tied to our whip antennas above the elephant grass. I radioed Bailey and asked him to shoot high and over us into the hills. In less than a minute, Bailey's crew, via our Squad Leaders radio commands, swept the ridgeline with effective 40mm counter-fire, hitting the enemy and getting secondary explosions. In a flash, the firefight was over. We sat poised for another rush. I could see dead NVA lying in the grass, and some wounded and trying to crawl away. A shot was fired and another NVA soldier stopped crawling forever.

Marines, trained to perfection, instantly began regrouping. Within minutes the Marine lieutenant in charge had the convoy back on the road to Ca Lu. Vehicles towed vehicles. It was an everyday occurrence to them and they acted professionally. A Marine Corpsman dressed my wounds. He leaned me against the Duster and bent the long piece of shrapnel around my waist. Now at least I could sit in the Driver's seat without pain. The Corpsman hitched a ride on our Duster and told me I was lucky that the shrapnel in me was just under the skin and had stopped bleeding. I wasn't going to die and it was only a flesh wound. He advised me to have a doctor remove it back at Carroll. As I drove, the Corpsman climbed back and forth over the Duster, administering aid to his fellow Marines we carried. The Corpsman's courage and caring was beyond admiration. Medics and Corpsman were the Messiahs of the combat field. I had a saying, "Corpsman and Medic's held two hands, yours and God's." We arrived at Ca Lu about two hours late. As if nothing serious had happened, we exchanged quick firefight stories, said our hellos to the Duster crews at Ca Lu, replenished the ammo, and headed back to Carroll with three trucks.

At Carroll, I was taken to the back south end of the camp to the Medivac Station where a doctor tended to my wounds. It was the area's head Triage Center. They did not ask your name or unit. Like an assembly line, the lesser wounded were bandaged and the severely wounded were airlifted off of the base. I became unraveled when a Priest approached me and started giving me what I thought were my last rites. "Father, the Corpsman told me I only had a flesh wound and now you think I am dying?" I freaked and told him if he continued I would have to shoot him and wasn't ready to die yet. When the doctor finally approached me, he looked in amazement at the piece of shrapnel wrapped around me. I assured him it was only a flesh wound and was only just under the skin, probably less than 1/8" of an inch. He told some other doctor-type guys or Corpsman to ship me to Dong Ha. That put me over the edge. I told them I was not going to Dong Ha and, after a short but loud argument he agreed they would treat me. Now, totally out of control, I insisted on knowing how they were going to remove MY Shrapnel. The Priest approached me again, trying to console me. "Father, please go the fuck away." I refused to lie down and now stood in the corner. After an hour or so, a guy who looked like a mechanic showed up with a bolt cutter. After a lot of coaxing, I allowed them to cut off the back portion of the shrapnel. The doctor told me he was going to slowly pull out the last piece of metal and for me to stand real still and try to take a deep breath. My stomach turned and I almost passed out. Now on a stretcher, they cleaned out my wounds, used some glue-type substance and butterfly bandages, and sent me on my way. I feel like a real asshole for how I acted.

October 4: We headed out to Dong Ha, one Duster and a truck driven by my friend, Tank. His truck was full of less seriously wounded men who were sitting alongside or on top of their dead friends, just another one of our common medivac runs. It would be a full speed non-stop run down Route 9. We all ran with no governors on our engines. All of the wounded would be checked out, including me, at the main medical station known as Delta Med. The dead would be dropped off at Graves Registration. I think Tank carried more wounded and dead on his truck than any person on the DMZ. He would say, "Joey, this job fuckin' sucks!"

We have a saying, "Who cares?...Only the Rats."

After I got back, I heard that Bailey's crew got a "royal ass chewing" for shooting without permission to fire. As far as we were concerned, they had saved our butts.

Years later, Wayne Bailey and his wife, Dixie, visited my home. The old "Beetle" (his nickname) glowed as he told my family how he saved my life.

October 5: We returned to Carroll with a truckload of new guys. A new Section Chief named Noel Brown, a transferee from another southern Duster unit, was in charge of the Newbees. They were all given the traditional initiation: one hand grenade for the ride and the customary speech about the NVA cutting off their balls. Now, after scaring them shitless, we took them down Route 9.

October 6: We acquired a new guy named Joe Presley. We are ordered to rebuild the roof of our bunker because some big lieutenant named Mitchum hit his head on the doorway and got knocked out trying to run for cover during "INCOMING!" We never have any trouble ducking into the doorway. I guess all the footprints on his back, from all of us running over him when he got knocked out, were too much for his ego. Someone has to pay. He got even. The roof job was a real ball buster. As we finished the roof, we watched the B52s bomb the ridgeline of Dong Ha Mountain.

October 7: We made some mine sweeps in the morning. I paid my last installment to Tyrrell Jewelers in California for some gold four leaf clover good luck pins I purchased for my Mom and Dad. I also got a package of goodies from my sister Brenda and her husband Ken, but there's been no mail from my girl, Nancy, in four days. It was my turn to burn the shitter.

The thought still brings a smile to my face. Burn and stir, until shit turns to ash. What a fucking terrible, nasty job! I hate the smell of gasoline and diesel fuel to this day.

Dear Diary,

UNTIL

I still remember when I first saw the flash of lightning. Heard and felt the roar of thunder. As a little boy I thought there could be nothing on earth as frightening. Hugging the pillow and taking shelter under the blankets. It was the best protection I could get. I always loved those blankets...
Until I went to Nam...Now they cover my lost friends.

October 8: On our way to do a search and destroy mission with the Marines, we dropped off Section Chief Brown and a few new guys at Delta-5 (D-5), an old French Fort south of Carroll. The fort was surrounded by a mine field and a dry moat filled with punji sticks (sharpened bamboo sticks). It had concrete walls to live in. It was a mud hole when it rained. Plus, it was full of rats. When we got back to our bunker, we cleaned our M-16 and I helped build a half-ass door for the bunker. Still no mail from my Nancy, but I got a goody package from my sister, Brenda. I shared it with my friends. Hopefully, they won't tell me I have KP in the morning.

October 9: The day was business as usual with mine sweeps and trips to the old deserted plantations to cut down little green bananas and pick pineapples. I liked to go there. Before we cut the bananas, we have to hit the banana tree leaves with the flat side of the machete to get rid of the hand-sized spiders and green bamboo viper snakes. We were preparing for another visit to D-5, complete with rations, ammo and water. There, I shared some bananas with my old friends, Lou Block, Norman Oss, Don Wolfe, Steve Harris and their crews. The guys loved my bananas and pineapples. We all laughed when they told us how Section Chief Brown found Norman's Spider Monkey, Lester, in their Duster's turret playing with the hand grenades. Norman told Brown it was Wolfe's monkey and he would gladly get rid of the nasty little bastard. Wolfe got an ass-chewing and Norman hid his monkey on the other side of the camp with a Marine friend. Lester is their mascot.

Many years later, at a reunion, we told Noel Brown that it was Norman's monkey and he had Lester until he went home in August. We all had a good laugh. "Lester...You Stinky Little Bastard, thanks for breaking the monotony of war."

After we returned from D-5, they had us take position up on Observation Post Hill 250. We had our nightly H&I fire mission called to us on the lima-lima (land line or telephone) from the Fire Direction Control Center at Camp Carroll. We wrote down the coordinates, elevations, rounds to be fired, and hourly times of firing. Our Duster fired three-hundred rounds at various pre-planned locations.

October 10: At 0200 hours we got a radio call from Steve Harris' track, C132, stationed at D-5. The ARVNs (Army of the Republic of Vietnam), who shared the fort, had fragged (thrown hand grenades at) some of the Marines stationed there. Harris said the Duster crews had placed all the ARVNs in the center of the fort and wanted to open fire, but were awaiting a reply and orders. At daylight our track and another, along with some Marines and ARVN advisers, arrived at D-5. The matter seemed to be quickly resolved and the fraggers were taken away. The compound at D-5 had lots of problems. Sharing the fort with the ARVNs was not what you would call easy duty. There never seemed to be enough trust about on whose side of the war the ARVNs were fighting.

We were informed, when we got back to Hill 250, that we had killed two and seriously wounded eight villagers from Cam Lo. Our butts were on the line and we had to prove to the officer quizzing us that the Fire Direction Control gave us the fire mission. It was easy to prove it wasn't our fault. Duster standard procedure was writing down all night fire missions. Sorry, Captain, go hang one of your FDC jerkoffs!

October 11: Duster C132 broke down on maneuvers. They had to retrieve it and tow it back to Carroll for repairs. Back at camp, my Nancy's letters finally caught up to me.
I am very happy. I sniffed her perfumed letters on and off for hours before opening them. I love reading them over and over again. They bring me closer to her and home.

October 12: We continued doing what Dusters do best: running convoys and mine sweeps from Dong Ha to Khe Sanh while being mortared, rocketed, and shot at as we killed the NVA along the way.

October 13: The Duster crews are always changing personnel and reorganizing to give the new men experience. Replacements are needed because men are rotating back to the States or because of death, injury or just plain incompetence. I inquired about my missing personnel records and was advised that they had been reconstructed, but payroll still had to be updated. I elected to receive a Quarter Master Allowance of $50 pay per month. They will send the balance home to my family to bank for me, since I have no place to spend money, but they had no idea when I would get paid.

I always wondered how they could reconstruct my files without asking me any questions.

We saw Puff the Dragon (C147 plane equipped with Gatling guns) shoot NVA all night. What a display of firepower!

While at Camp Carroll, we stopped at the Mess Hall for some hot chow. I can never get all the flour bugs out of the homemade bread. I make them disappear with jelly. That same asshole food-stirring Marine sat across from us and started his usual routine with our food and his wise-ass remarks. Stirring his finger in each of my guys' meals and laughing, my crew just looked at me for some kind of assistance. They didn't want to start anything with their Marine friends. Very politely, I asked him if he would please stop fucking with my crew. "We hardly get a hot meal and just want to eat, leave, and have no trouble. It's not a joke and you're not funny and if you don't stop I'm going to teach you some fuckin' manners." "And what kind of manners are you going to teach me, Pussy?" Like lightning striking, I stabbed his right hand to the plywood table with my good old Army issue heavy-duty fork. Before he could even react, I quickly reached over the table and grabbed the S.O.B. by the back of his head, slammed his head down on the table, and pulled him real close to my chest. Then I grasped his throat with my right hand and squeezed his larynx real tight with my four fingers and thumb, so he couldn't scream or breathe. I thought for some silly reason nobody would notice me taking out this jerk. I knew I had his sorry ass and it would only take a minute for his lights to be out. He slumped and started to twitch. My crew quickly pulled me off him before he stopped breathing forever. Nobody bitched, complained, or said anything as his Marine friends dragged him out of our Mess Hall. We finished eating, smiling at each other between bites. The other guys in the Mess Hall just stared at us as we slowly walked out drinking chocolate milk. I didn't even get in trouble. It's the Nam.

October 14: We took an empty 50 gallon drum that had contained the defoliant (Agent Orange) we used to keep the weeds down around our position. With an ax and a hammer, we cut the barrel in half long ways. We now have our own little bath tub and a place to wash our clothes. It is great. Lighting a small fire underneath gave us hot water. One of the guys used a small pail and, as we squatted, he poured the hot water over our head. A quick lather of soap, some splashing, another pail of water, and bath time was over. In less than thirty minutes, the five of us had a bath. We took turns being "guy number 5". Then, that same bath water was used to wash our clothes.

October 15: We escorted a truck loaded with medical supplies out to the Ayd Station at Ca Lu. Lt. Moore told us that the medical station was named after the Marine Jacques J. Ayd, who was a Corpsman with Ripley's Raiders and was killed by NVA artillery at Ca Lu. He was right behind Don Wolfe's Duster position when the shell hit. Captain John Ripley had the Montagnards build a thatched building as the medical evacuation center for this area. Besides treating Americans, the Yards could get medical assistance. On June 22, 1967, he had our Dusters escort the Marine Corps Band out to the building for a formal dedication ceremony. He said it was amazing to see the Yards hear a band play for the first time in their lives. He always thought that a few in attendance were NVA soldiers. Who else but the Marines would send their band into the combat zone? Those poor guys had to be scared shitless.

October 19: I told the guys it is my girlfriend Nancy's 20th birthday. We sang "Happy Birthday" to her. I re-read her letters. I have sniffed all the perfume off of them.

I hope to get a new scent soon. It is funny how we pass around each other's unopened letters trying to guess the name of the perfume. We came up with all kinds of silly sexual names. If you sniffed another guy's letter too long, they'd get pissed off.

October 20: I dreaded body recovery. Being one of the newer guys, I have to pick up all the pieces. The dead have to meet God with all their parts. It is the task from Hell. If the men are severely wounded, I give them morphine to ease their pain. If they are dying and time allows, I hold them and comfort them until the chariot from Heaven arrives. I owe this to their mothers and my own salvation.

October 21: The medic at Camp Carroll had me airlifted to the hospital in Da Nang to get my jungle rot treated. The Mycelex cream ointment he had given me previously was not working and my legs had about twenty oozing holes in them about 3/8" round and a 1/2" deep. My crotch had a purple rash, and the skin was peeling.

October 22: The hospital is great; hot showers, great food, a bed and clean clothes. While the doctors and nurses cleaned my rot, I had to help the wounded soldiers and Marines. I was considered one of the "Walking Wounded". Our tasks included everything from mopping floors to changing bed pans and pushing gurneys.

I cannot believe that they had wounded NVA in the same room as our wounded. The wounded NVA had a military policeman guarding them. The cop never said a thing or even gave a glance as the Marine in the bed next to the Gook pulled out his intravenous lines. I just kept mopping.

October 23: The funniest thing happened today. In the morning they had the entire Walking Wounded stand in formation in front of a nurse. There we were, all in our hospital gowns with our asses hanging out. There were about thirty of us standing tall, ten across and three rows deep. The nurse started telling us about a parasite that was in the river water that could have gotten up into our colon through our anus. She then pointed to a cart full of small soup size paper cups with lids. She announced that she wanted each one of us to label a container with our name and service number, defecate into the container and return it to the cart. We all stood there staring at the cart, thinking "This is nuts." One of the brothers chirped up and said, "Excuse me Mams. Did I hear you right? You want us to pinch one off into that little cup?" Everyone burst into laughter. The poor embarrassed nurse started yelling and handing out cups, screaming if we didn't do what she said we could not go back to our units. That sounded great to us, we all threw the cups in the garbage and walked away laughing. Twenty minutes later we were all back in formation. Standing in front of us was a Colonel wearing bloody surgical scrubs. At the top of his lungs he spoke a language we all understood. "Listen you assholes! You will take one of those fucking cups, write your name and service number on it, and take a shit in it! I don't care if you shit in your hands, or pants, or dig it out of your asshole with a tongue depressor, but that cup will be filled and placed back on that fucking cart! Do you maggots understand me?!" All you heard was a big "Hoo Rah, Colonel," as we all snapped to attention and saluted. The nurse just stood there smiling.

October 25: Before going back to the DMZ, the hospital took us over to a large PX and USO Center. It was a relaxing day of playing games and picking up some needed toiletries. They had a place that sold Zippo lighters and you could get them engraved for a dollar. I bought a new Zippo and had it engraved "To Really Live – You Must Nearly Die". It was crazy, because the guy standing in front of me in line was a hometown friend named Tony Zelec who was in the Marines. As we waited to get our lighters engraved, I told him I had seen John Driscoll, another Marine from our town, playing baseball up in Dong Ha. Talking to Tony was a nice change of pace.

October 26: To forget we are in a war, we are always having some kind of card game, knife throwing contest, shooting contest, or boxing and wrestling. Today, we started a new type of knife throwing contest. Instead of throwing at a small wooden target leaning against or nailed to a pole, we took turns holding the target. What a rush! You just stood there while a guy threw his knife at you and you followed the knife to the wood. If the knife went off target, you quickly moved the target to the knife. If it hit you, so what, maybe you'd go home.

October 27: The crew helped me tension the track treads. We need the Duster to run straight and true. Sometimes we don't come to a complete stop while shooting. I need the Duster to go perfectly straight as I let her chug down the road at a slow jerky pace, so I can hand out ammo from the Driver's hatch.

October 28: After a few days of having lots of fun and laughs, Lt. Moore caught us at our new knife throwing contest. Screaming and yelling, he called us a bunch of sickos and said this was not what he expected of his men. One of the guys laughed and told him it was the Army's new type of agility drill. Moore did not like his humor and told us if he found us doing something crazy like that again, he would ship us off to another unit. We all looked at each other and smiled…No knives?...How 'bout axes?

October 31: Halloween…I cannot help but think of how I survived another month killing all kinds of goblins and scary creatures of the night. Would I make it through this night or would the Devil come calling for my soul? No…The Devil was already here.

Ca Lu

"The Razorback Mountain" part of the mountains made up of "The Rockpile" and "Fish Bowl" area. On top of the Razorback is a Marine lookout position, only accessible by helicopter.

Heading out to the Fish Bowl.

Our bunker on Hill 250. This is where Lt. Mitchum hit his head.

The new bunker Lt. Mitchum made my crew build.

Delta – 5

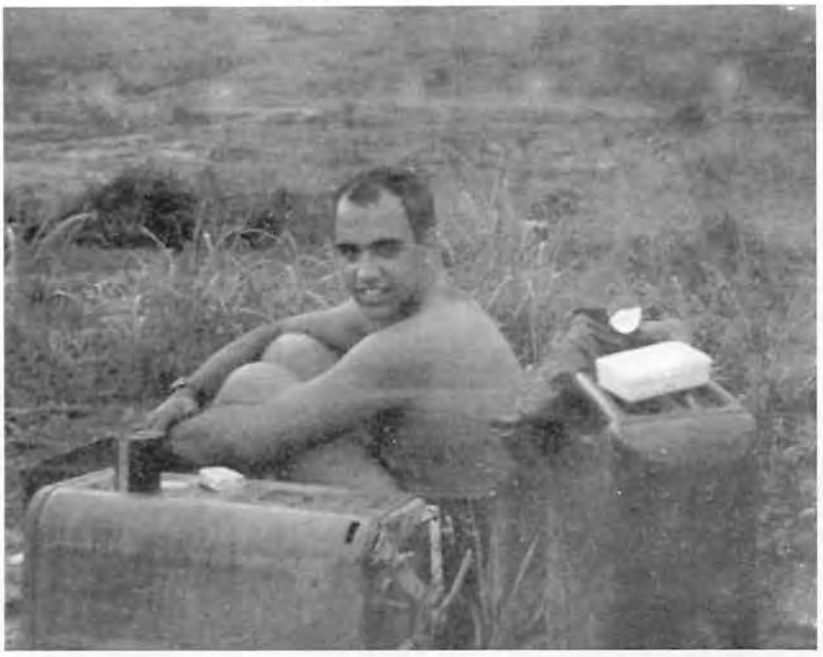
Delta – 5 Punji Pit

Duster at Delta – 5

Bananas

Norman Oss and Joe Belardo.
Norman was the best driver in the 1/44 Artillery.

"Lester" the monkey



Bath time

The Marine Corps band playing at the dedication of the Ayd Station.

Ayd station dedication – the Montagnard people had never seen or heard a band. The tall guys were suspected NVA-Chinese advisors enjoying the music.

I carried this picture of my fiancée, Nancy, throughout Vietnam.

The spectacular view and firing advantage from Hill 250.

Secondary explosions were seen from Hill 250 after hitting enemy positions on the eastern slope of Dong Ha mountain.

Hill 250 ground-artillery radar surveillance.

A pile of 40mm empty brass ammo casings, lying on the ground
After only one minute of shooting at an NVA position.

CHAPTER 5: AND HELL CAME CALLING

November 1: Sgt. Dieter took Russia Holley and me with him to Ca Lu. After a few days, Dieter will leave to return home to the United States and we will return to The Rockpile.

November 2: Today, our Squad Leader, Eugene Triola, got bitten by a rat. I feel sorry for him because he only has a few days left before he is to return home and he has to get two weeks of rabies shots before he can leave.

His instant replacement is a dumb-ass guy we immediately nickname Dufuss. We are not happy with this sergeant as our Squad Leader. In addition, the LT sent orders to swap two experienced men for two other experienced men. Our crew now consists of me as the Driver, Gunner Joe Musso, Gun Bunnies Cleave Lanier and Russia Holly, and Dufuss.

We started running north of The Rockpile, past our North OP (Observation Post) to a place they called "The Fish Bowl". Our job was to escort Marines to and from this tiny outpost situated between three high peaks, north of the highest mountain peak called The Razor Back, west of what they called Mutters Ridge. It was a shooting gallery for the NVA and a nightmare of a place for anyone. A Marine or two would always get wounded or killed on each trip. When we returned to The Rockpile, we put the KIAs next to the Landing Zone pad situated on the east edge of the camp on a lower flat area just below our Duster position. It was the official "Tag and Bag" area. I heard the Marine Priest singing "Simeon's Chant" again to the dead. I hated him and his song. It makes the war become a reality; it makes me vulnerable, it makes me think. And that type of thinking will get me killed.

Twenty years passed and, at my Uncle Henry's funeral, a young Irish Priest sang. His words of Simeon were more than a flashback. My mind and soul melted, I cried, sobbed, and shook out of control as the priest chanted. My relatives thought it was for Uncle Henry.

November 3: We all examined the hole in Cleve Lanier's helmet. Cleve told us this horrifying story of how he got shot in the head and how his helmet saved him. "The bullet hit my helmet, went through, and cut my head right here. It continued to travel between the plastic helmet liner and metal outside and exited right here," he explained.
It was a miracle he survived.

Don Wolfe continued the story and told us the battle had taken place on August 30th. A convoy heading back from Ca Lu to the Rockpile was hit by the NVA. Don's Duster, commanded by Squad Leader Sgt. Laurier Derosier, went out to help them. Trying to rescue the Marines, they fought their way into the fire fight. Because of the carnage on the road, they were forced to stop. Their Duster was now stopped on an elevated section of Route 9 surrounded by elephant grass. Because of their position, it was impossible to lower the 40s enough to shoot real close and clear the area of NVA. Cleve said Don grabbed the M60 and started blasting away at the advancing NVA. The NVA then turned their focus on the Duster. RPGs started flying overhead, and enemy automatic weapon bullets began feverishly pinging off the Duster. One of the bullets hit Cleve in the helmet and sent him flying and another hit Derosier in the head, severely wounding him. Because of the ferocity of the battle, they were unable to give aid to Laurier until after the battle. Still alive, he was dropped off at The Rockpile by the crew along with the other wounded and dead. They hope their friend will survive from his horrible head wound.

November 4: The Battalion Commander, Lieutenant Colonel John House, came to Camp Carroll and fired Charlie Battery's 200,000th 40mm cannon shell. The Chaplain, Captain Cecil Lewis, assisted. It confirmed our suspicions that our battery was in deep heavy contact with the NVA. Almost a quarter of a million 40mm cannon shells had been fired at the NVA. How many did I help kill?

November 5: Sgt. Dufuss, our new Squad Leader, always becomes unraveled during "INCOMING!" and loses his leadership ability during firefights. We have get to get rid of this guy.

November 6: Lt. Moore was reassigned to Charlie Battery Headquarters. Our Section has been taken over by a new lieutenant named Lt. Hardin. Our Duster crew is not sure of the new lieutenant. He has never been tested under enemy fire. Whatever stateside jungle training tactics he had is a far cry from the Vietnam Conflict and doesn't work. We will try to teach him the ropes and hopefully keep him alive. We also agree that we will override his orders during combat if they jeopardize the mission.

November 7: Two NVA cannon shells landed next to our bunker. What an explosion!
I thought we had taken a direct hit. Debris was everywhere. A few of us were thrown up into the air and flung against the walls by the concussion of the blast. Our ears rang and are bleeding. It shook the hell out of us. Our bodies hurt and we have black and blues all over.

November 8: We escorted a truck full of C-Rations, water, and ammo out to a little outpost north of The Rockpile called the North OP. We have one Duster crew there and a platoon of Marines. My friends Norman Oss, Daryl Hale and Billy Conley were part of the Duster crew. It was good to see my old friends. As I approached Norman, his monkey Lester jumped on my shoulder and as quick as lightning opened my shirt pocket and pulled out my last Tareyton cigarette and ate it. I tried to grab him and he bit me. Then, he reached in my pocket again and took out my last piece of Juicy Fruit chewing gum and ate that. I quickly pulled him by his leash, tossed him to the ground, stepped on him, pulled out my .45 pistol, and was going to blow his brains out. Norman started screaming, "Jooooe! Noooooo! Please don't kill my son! He is the heir to my throne!"
I couldn't help but laugh. I let him go and the little bastard took a quick shit and threw it at me. Everybody became hysterical with laughter. Lester was a hard act to follow.

Years after the war, Norman would settle in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. To promote peace and harmony, Norman hand carves beautiful walking sticks for all ages. He hands out, free of cost, over 1500 sticks per year. The town blog calls him "The Stickman".

November 10: We installed a new engine in C141. The job took about three hours. We then went down to the river and washed the dried blood and parts from the wounded and dead off the Duster. I couldn't help but cry. I am constantly picking up wounded and dead. They call us "The Body Snatchers". The feeling of their blood becoming sticky and drying on my skin makes me unbelievably sad. I can't help but stare at myself as it dries and turns burnt reddish brown on my hands and clothes. My friend's life blood dries under my fingernails. I can't stand how they look and clean them constantly with my knife. God, please save me.

November 11: A Duster crew from the other side of our combat base observed lights from NVA moving along the perimeter. The lights were extinguished with a minute long burst of our 40mm guns.

November 12: Our track C141 was not running well, so the LT ordered us to swap Dusters with Lou Block. We had to keep running the road to Ca Lu or some other God-forsaken place. Lou was not happy.

November 13: Still raining, still eating C-Rations, and we are all still scared shitless. We had to drive through three or four feet of mud to get into Ca Lu. What a mud hole! The mud was so deep, it pulled our boots off as we walked. We took turns with the bulldozer, pushing the trucks and other vehicles through the deep thick mud.

I heard my own confession and gave myself absolution, reciting three Hail Mary's. God won't mind. Some days I feel like the Devil is taking over my body and soul.

November 14: We ran Route 9 past Ca Lu to a place called Joliet. Route 9 was always scary because the elephant grass grew high and thick, right up to the edge of the road. Charlie could just step out of the grass and let you have it. The road smelled from all the dead NVA we killed on our trips up and down it. They keep coming and we keep killing.

November 16: Lt. Hardin had a meeting with our crew. He called our crew "rebels and trouble makers" and is tired of us not listening to him and overriding his orders. We explained to him that we are only trying to stay alive and keep him alive. He does not have enough combat experience yet and should learn to listen to the more experienced crews. We told him not to be drawn into the ambush, stay outside if possible, counter fire, and see if he could get any enemy return fire. Eliminate them and pick other targets. "Remember, Sir, we can't shoot closer than 88 feet. If the Duster is caught in the center of an ambush without first counter firing, it will be destroyed. Under 88 feet you have to use the machine gun, grenades and rifles, and reposition the Duster on the sloped banks of the road to be able to shoot lower and closer." Somehow our discussion, which we thought was going on the positive note, turned into an argument and screaming match. He told us that he was the officer in charge and we had to listen to him. Again he called us "rebels" and told us he was going to give us all the road duty. That's okay with us, because we already do all the road duty. We could not figure what went wrong with our meeting. We were just trying to help the new lieutenant.

November 17: We got C141 back from Lou. The engine now ran great, but the starter was broken. They told us to jump-start it and drive it anyway. What a joke!

November 18: Ambush Alley kept its reputation. The truck in front of us was hit square with an RPG from the left side of the road. Trying to block the road was a typical NVA tactic. The Marines scrambled for the nearest cover, the right side of our now stationary Duster. I could feel the Duster as it rocked from what felt like two explosions. The Duster had not yet begun firing. I thought we were hit, but the Duster was still running. I emptied my M-16 into a few Gooks running at us with satchel charges. The charges exploded and Gook parts flew everywhere. Again, there was another explosion. Dirt, debris and smoke now covered our Duster. Joe Musso started screaming into the headset, "The Sarge is freaking out, won't shoot, and is rolling grenades off the right side of our Duster, blowing up Marines!" I frantically climbed out of the Driver's hatch and up to the turret. I grabbed Sgt. Dufuss, threw him onto the rear deck of the Duster, and gave him a quick slap to the face that knocked him on his ass. I told Cannoneer Lanier to get the fucking guns shooting. I gave the injured Marines the best aid I could and placed them on the rear deck of the Duster. I told the Sarge to hold on to them and not to fuck up or I'd kill him.

We dropped the Marines off at the Ayd Station. Later today, we heard that two Marines had died in the battle and many others had been wounded. I prayed that our sergeant was not responsible for any of their deaths.

November 20: This evening, Sgt. Dufuss ran his mouth about his triumphs of the other day's battle. I went crazy and wanted what I called "a piece of the Old Sarge". Before I could grab him and kick his ass, he retreated to the confines of our bunker. I started screaming for him to come out of the bunker, so I could kick his butt "Jersey style" all over the camp. The rest of the crew started getting just as crazy. The sergeant wouldn't come out, but continued to heckle us about the battle. We all charged into the bunker. Pushing the Sarge up against the dirt wall, I pressed my M-16 against his forehead and announced that chicken shits, cowards, and assholes had no place on our track and that it was his turn to die. Lanier grabbed the gun and stopped me from killing the bastard.

I quickly hit the Sarge with a few hard punches. He slumped to the dirt floor, lights out. I became hysterical and retreated to the confines of my Driver's compartment, my private sanctuary. We were a team and the team was having troubles. I did not want to die because someone screwed up and I wasn't going to put up with his shit. Back in the bunker I announced, "If the Sarge fucks up again, just shoot him. Only listen to Musso and me." I then proceeded to beat his ass again. Nobody said anything. They knew better.

November 21: Lt. Hardin got us another Duster C131, "The Track from Hell." He told us C141 needed its engine rebuilt again. We needed a good running Duster to keep us running Route 9. The LT asked the Sarge how he got all busted up. The Sarge was smart and told him he fell off the Duster during night Guard Duty and hit his face and head. I just shrugged and smiled.

November 24: We heard that Con Thien was half overrun by the NVA. We continued the run to Ca Lu, the crew praying that the Sarge wouldn't screw up again. I began to hate two things: the NVA, and the Sarge.

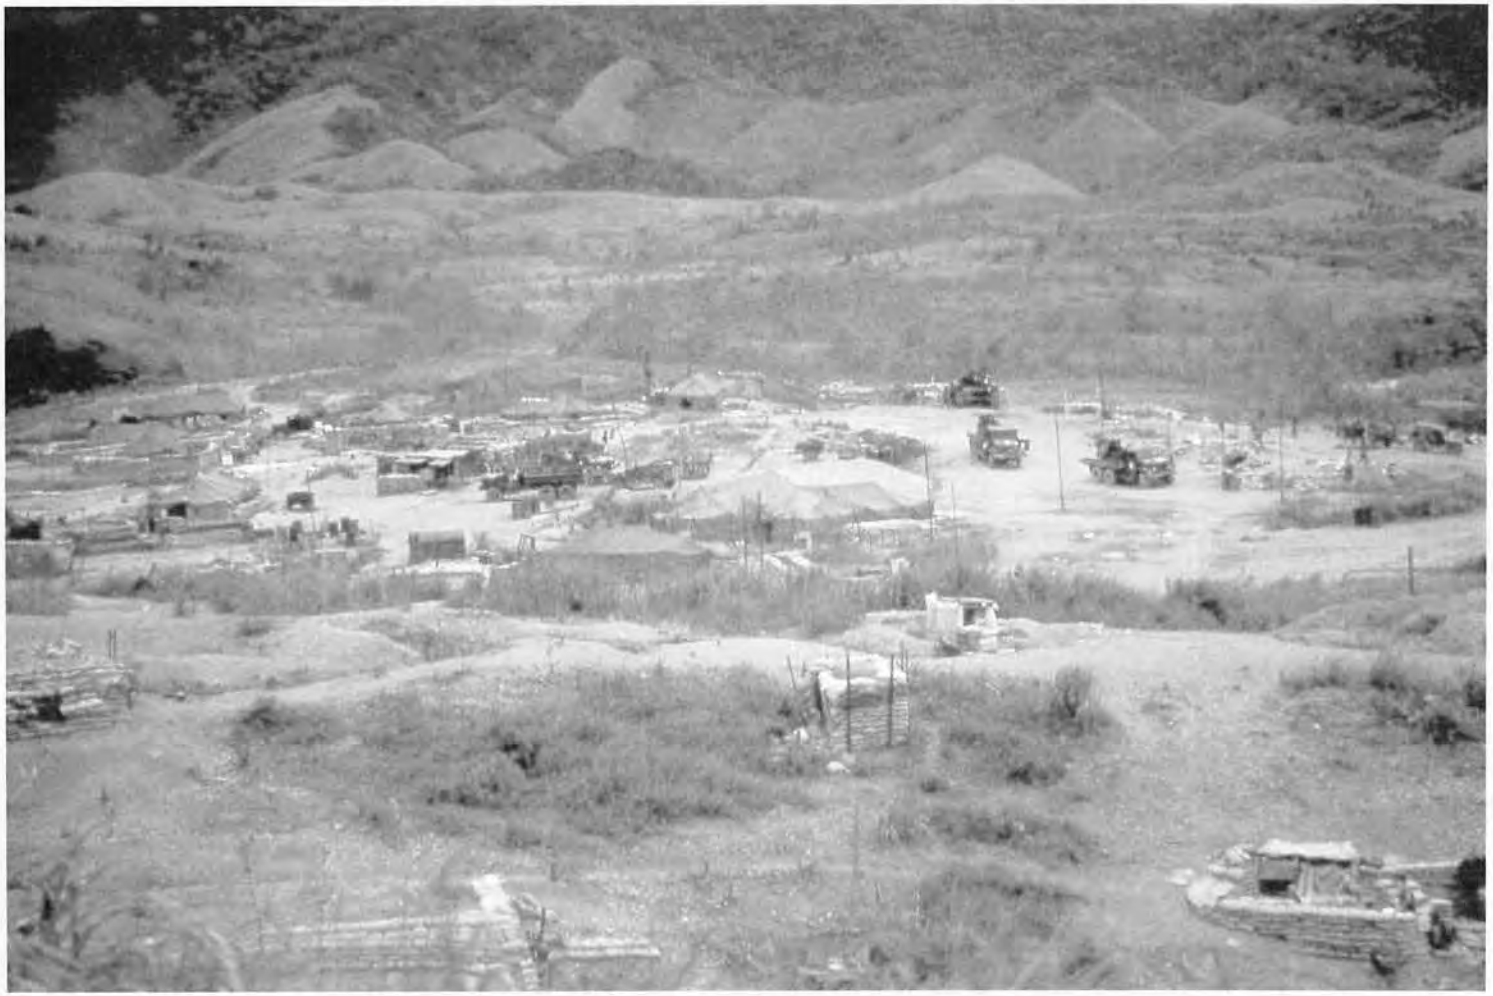
Wayne Bailey came back from the hospital after a bout with malaria. Sergeant Noel Brown got bitten three times by a rat. A tiger bit a Marine on the arm. He became a celebrity. Lou Block became the driver of C121. The original men I came to Carroll with are just starting to get a taste of the road.

I finally received my Quarter Master Allowance. I got paid $182.00 and sent $160.00 home to Mom. To get money, I have been selling surgical alcohol mixed with Lemon-Lime Kool-Aid. I call it a Jungle Daiquiri. Unbelievably, some asshole from Headquarters called me on the radio and asked if I knew where my personnel records were, because they are missing. How would I know, you dumb shit?

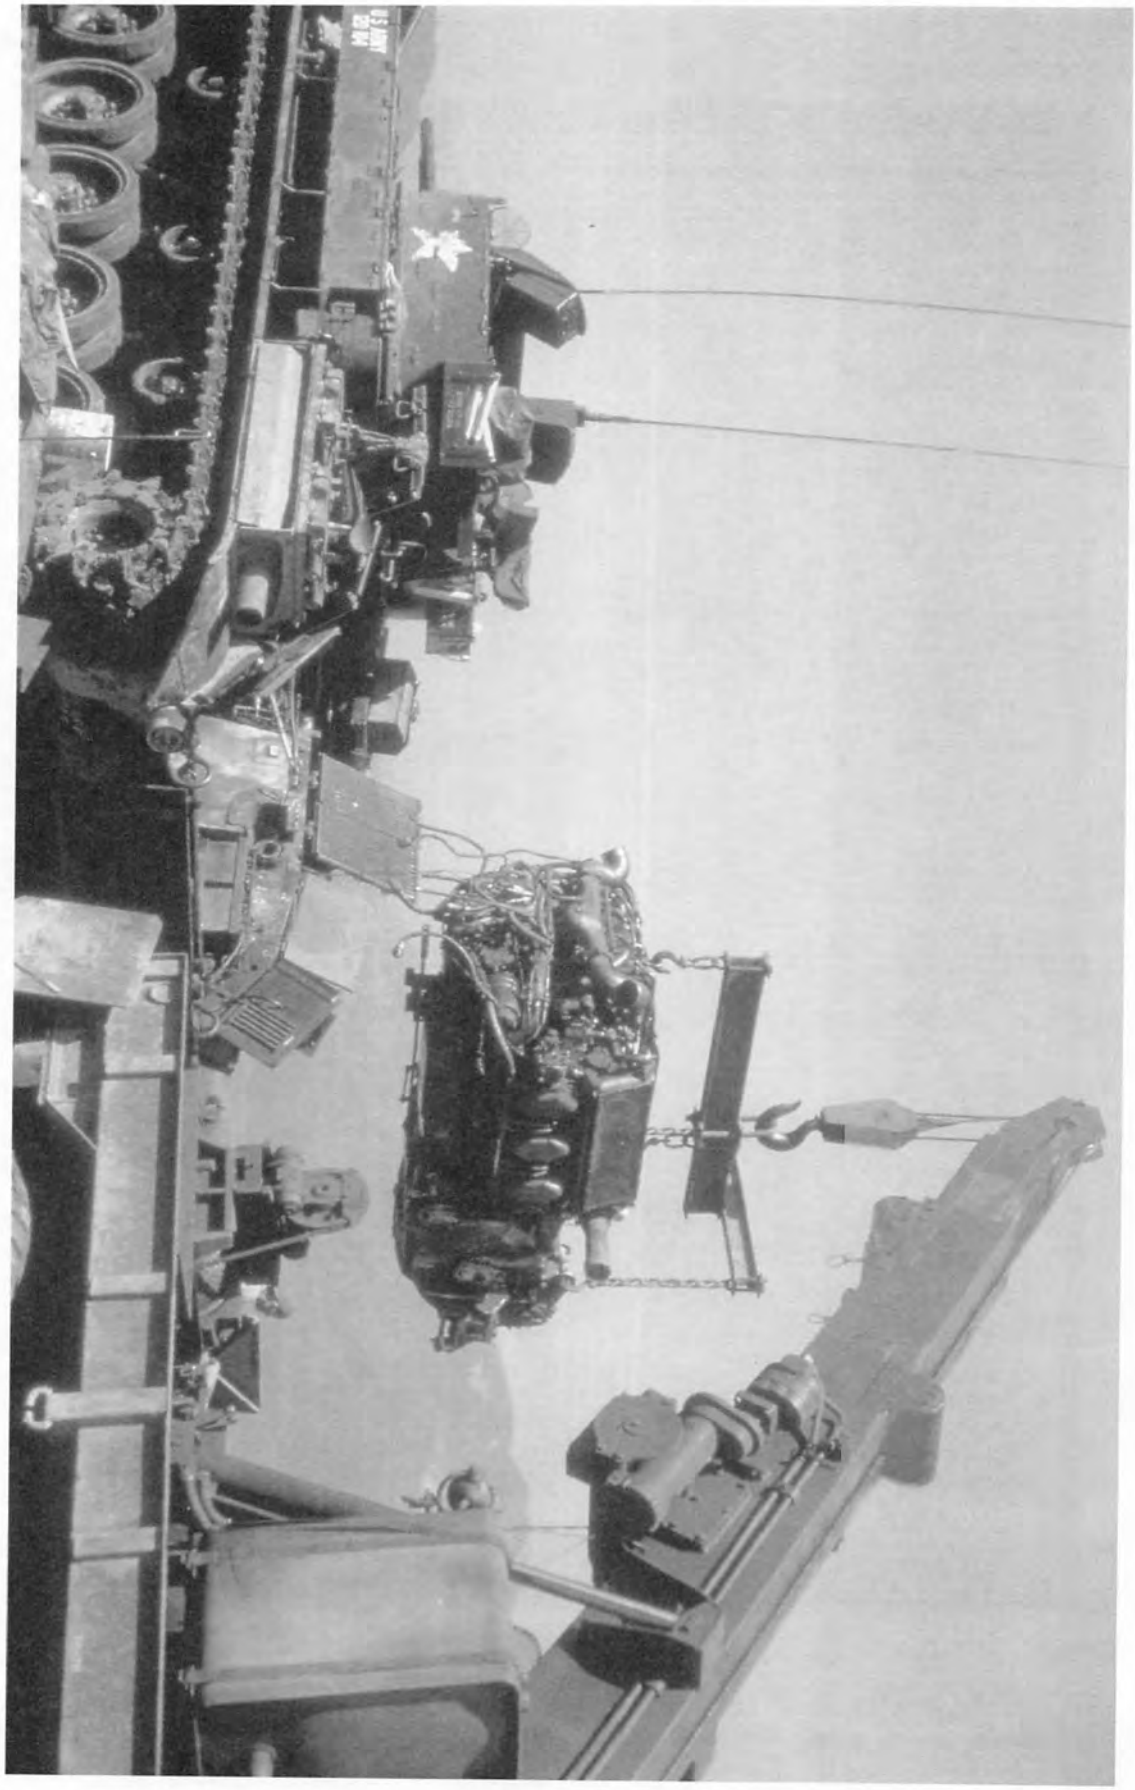
November 26: The Sarge was finally replaced and no one ever said another thing about "Dufuss." Joe Musso has become our Squad Leader. Chester Sines was promoted to Staff Sergeant E-6 and has become our new section chief. I know Chester will make the best Section Chief in the 44th. This is the beginning of the makings of another great fighting team.

The NVA tried to hit the top of the outpost known as "The Razorback". We continue to run the road.

November 28: Battalion announced that we have held our positions on the DMZ for one full year. By now, all of the original party that had come to Vietnam with the 1/44th had completed their tours of duty and were going home. The only year I wanted to celebrate was completing the twelve months I had to serve, allowing me to go home too.



"The Rockpile"
Duster position can be seen in upper right.
Two Quad-50's can be seen driving though camp.



Another new engine for the Duster.

Marine resupply truck heading down muddy Route 9 to Ca Lu.

Bulldozer pushing Duster fuel truck through mud at Ca Lu.

The Rockpile LZ and Graves Registration area.
Marines can be seen waiting to load a helicopter.
The Marines' chaplain would stand next to the Marine guard position in foreground and chant his prayers and song.

Medivac

CHAPTER 6: A DEADLY DECEMBER

December 2: The Dusters and Quad-50s engaged a large NVA unit at Camp Carroll. The Dusters shot over 950 rounds of 40mm cannon shells and the Quad-50s shot 2,200 rounds of 50-caliber machine gun ammo. It was just another busy day at the office for my people. We blew the shit out of the NVA. Parts and bodies were all over the place. It felt good to get even with those little bastards. They were left to rot where they fell.

December 3: We heard that Sergeant Derosier died from the head wounds he had received in the August 30th battle. I prayed that God would rest his soul. He will be sadly missed, especially by Don Wolfe, Cleve Lanier, Cooper Thomas and Leslie "Red" Dietze.

December 5: I was called to an awards' formation regarding the October 3rd battle. After the formation had assembled, I was asked to step out of the awards line. I was told there must have been an error. It was very humiliating. The officer in charge of the awards ceremony made it seem like I was stealing someone's day of fame and glory. I told him where he could stick it. He just smiled. I then told him to get fucked and smiled back.

December 6: We went back to Carroll to pick up our new medic. Via the radio, we were told he was one brave son-of-a-bitch and fearless. His name was James "Doc" Butler. After a brief introduction, Doc gave me another crash lesson on medical aid and treatment on the combat field. After my two hour session, the LT asked me to take Doc to The Rockpile, so he could meet the other combat teams and give them a little extra medical training.

Since Doc had never been in any combat on the road, I went over some basic survival skills with him before heading back to The Rockpile. I wanted Doc to sit next to me on the TC's seat of our Duster. However, I explained to him that I had taken out the seat and replaced it with 40mm ammo cans surrounded by lots of loose ammo. The entire Driver's compartment now carried ammo and the only place to really sit was my Driver's seat. It was tough sitting for the rider, but I wanted all the ammo I could carry. On top of the can I had placed two flak jackets for the rider to sit on.

I told Doc, that if anything should happen, he should stay real low, with only his eyes sticking out above the rim of his side of the compartment, and to shoot only at confirmed targets. To my surprise, he announced that he was only there to save people and not to kill them and was more than willing to die trying to save lives. Looking into his eyes, I knew he was not lying and had convictions of steel. I quickly inspected the M14 rifle he carried. I wanted to make sure that if I needed to use it, it was loaded and ready to shoot. There was no ammo in it and the barrel was full of dirt. "I just carry it because I was ordered to." Nodding and shrugging my shoulders, I told him to get in the Duster. I did not know what to do, so I handed him one of my hand grenades and instructed him to throw it on my order. In a firm, no nonsense voice I said "Doc, when I say "throw", you throw as far as you can and then get low and out of sight. I don't care if you don't want to kill another human, you're on my Duster and we don't fuck around. If you want all of us to live, you best throw that fuckin' grenade when I tell you. Be careful, the pins are partially straightened, so it will be real easy to pull and throw. Hopefully nothing will happen."

As we road down Route 9 to The Rockpile, we received a few enemy sniper rounds and small arms fire, but just kept riding and only shot back with our M60 machine gun. Doc, ducking from the bullets pinging off the Duster, accidentally dropped his hand grenade into my pile of loose 40mm ammo. He shouted to me that he could see the grenade rolling all over the Duster floor under all the ammo. I started laughing and yelling, "What a fucking way to die! Doc, get down there and find that fucking grenade and make sure the pin does not pull out." I was the lead Duster in the "Rough Rider Convoy" and was traveling at 45 miles per hour down Route 9's winding, bumpy road. Dusters only stop when the convoy gets really hit by the enemy and needs our fire power. Otherwise, we just keep going to our destination, driving through the shooting gallery like sitting ducks. Doc, screaming and fishing through the ammo, finally found the grenade. Showing it to me in triumph, I quickly grabbed it, bent the pull pin tight and handed it back as if nothing happened, yelling "Keep your head down!"

At The Rockpile, I introduced Doc to the other guys and instructed him that he would be living with them in the small bunker next to our Command Post. In the morning, I will take him to meet the rest of the guys at The Rockpile.

December 7: I told the crew I will be getting married to my girl, Nancy, one year from this day. David Lewis arrived in the morning and became our new Cannoneer. I took Doc around and introduced him to the other guys from the 44th and his counterparts, the Marine Corpsmen. We still run Ambush Alley every day. Death and destruction, living and dying, melts into one everyday occurrence. My God, I have only been in Nam a little more than three months. Will my Nancy think I have changed? Will my family hate me for what I have done?

December 8: Six days a week, I have guard duty and hate every minute. It is lonely and very frightening. Each day before Guard Duty I set up my position, changing the place I sit every night. In the daylight hours, I check out what is in front of my position and make small stone replicas of the trees, brush, and hills. In the dark I can feel the rocks and stare into the midnight shadows hoping nothing has moved. It's amazing how the NVA disguise themselves as trees and brush and move up on me. With just a feel, I can always account for what is in front of me. I keep the safety off my M-16. I don't want the enemy to hear it click on, if I need to shoot. Any added objects to my field of view automatically get shot. I never sit in or on the Duster. It is a prime target. Each night I sneak up to the Duster and place a helmet on the sighting rings. From a distance it looks like you are sitting in the Duster. You just sit, wait, and pray nothing happens. I can out sit a mouse. It's amazing what you hear or think you hear, and when the shadows move...OOOh, shit!!

December 10: Joe Musso and I shared a small bottle of Mogen David Wine that my Aunt Margie sent me for Christmas. We sat in our bunker by a Christmas tree his mother sent, sipping the wine and eating the popcorn the wine had been packed in to protect it from breakage on its long flight from home. They tasted great together.

December 11: Joe Musso left Nam for his home in Union, New Jersey. When he gets home, he promised to visit my family and tell them that everything is okay, not to worry, and that I am in a fairly safe area. Only a Nam brother can look into another soldier's mother's face and lie that good.

Today Joe is a firefighter in his hometown. He can't stop saving others.

December 12: Sam Lewis, a very quiet man from Oklahoma, with some combat experience, became our Squad Leader.

December 14: Earl "Tex" Holt became our other new Cannoneer. He was my personal pick out of all the guys. Tex is big, about 6'-2". I told him he will be my main cannon loader and I expect him to load both guns while the other loader shoots the machine gun. I warned him not to disappoint me.

Tex rose to every occasion and never let me down or disappointed me throughout our time together in Nam. He was a Warrior King and is a true friend to this day.

I have begun to worry. We have two new guys and we haven't stopped running Ambush Alley. It turns out that Chester Sines and David Lewis are next door neighbors back in the real world. Chester and I started giving crash combat courses to the two Newbees. We wanted them to quickly understand the life-threatening conditions they are in and that training is of the utmost importance. My instinct tells me that they will rise to "Kill the Dragon" and "Duel with the Devil".

Sam Lewis and I asked Lt. Hardin if our crew could rest a few days before hitting the road again. I don't know exactly what happened but, as usual, our meeting didn't go as planned and I ended up cursing out Lt. Hardin. Sam started yelling at him in some Native American language and I started laughing. I have this loud, wild laugh and get this silly smile and grin. It drives the Lieutenant crazy. We just walked away, cursing him out in Native American and my broken Italian.

December 15: We were ordered to rebuild our dilapidated bunker and live in some little, shitty tent.

December 16: Our assignment was another run to Ca Lu and back. The crew of Sam Lewis, Russia Holley, Earl Holt, David Lewis and I are magically able to work as a team. I am amazed how comfortable we are with each other. The crew removed the front plate with our Grim Reaper insignia painted on it from between the 40mm barrels and replaced it with a plain plate. They thought the logo was bad medicine. The only bad omen they could have would be if they ever hesitated to kill. God didn't plan it that way, but someone has to be the Grim Reaper in war. Uncle Sam and the war have trained us too well. Our surroundings make us rise to the occasion. It is kill or be killed, something we have become real good at...too good.

December 19: Another convoy got hit in Ambush Alley. Three trucks and one M48 tank got hit, two Marines were KIA and four were WIA. John Stokes from Charlie Battery, carrying the mail to Ca Lu, was hit real badly through the upper arm. He came back to The Rockpile screaming and looking for help. A portion of his bone was missing. I thought his arm was going to fall off as it swung like a pendulum from side to side. I dressed his wound the best I could and wrapped his arm in a makeshift sling tight to his body. John just stood there bitching and yelling like a wild hillbilly. Stokes was medivaced and never returned. He got his ticket home. Christmas came early for John Stokes.

We headed back to the ambush site under Lt. Moore's leadership and swept the enemy from the area with a volley of 40mm rounds. The enemy small arms and automatic weapons being fired at us were instantly quelled. We then blew up the two destroyed Marine ammo trucks left at the ambush. I don't know for sure what kind of ammo it was, or if the NVA had planted booby traps in the trucks, but it was one hell of an explosion when the trucks blew up. We quickly tucked our heads down into our flak jackets like turtles, as we got pelted by all kinds of debris (dirt, rocks and metal parts of the trucks) bouncing off us and our Duster.

December 20: We returned again with Lt. Moore and helped drag and push the blown up trucks off the road, bringing back any pieces we could find. This afternoon we took out another convoy to Ca Lu, as though nothing had ever happened.

This was Lt. Moore's last ride down Ambush Alley to Ca Lu. He decided we would leave The Rockpile forty minutes before the rest of the convoy. He ordered us to travel at a slow speed and hammer the north and south of the ridgeline with our 40s, hoping to kill the always waiting NVA before they had a chance to get off a shot. About a half mile out, we both noticed a lone tree about ten feet off the road. The crew, engrossed in their shooting mission, never noticed the tree. Before we could stop or yell into our communication helmets, the turret swung and let the tree have it with both barrels. I quickly stopped the Duster. The pieces of the exploding tree bounced back and hit me and Moore. We looked like two giant porcupines with thousands of tiny toothpicks sticking out of us. We climbed out and up to the turret to show the guys what they had done. They became hysterical with laughter, as Moore and I picked out the toothpicks.

I was hoping Moore would stay with us, but he has been reassigned to Charlie Battery's Headquarters section back at Camp Carroll. We are all happy for him that he is leaving "THE ROAD". He had led us well and taught us much. I hope we will meet again someday, stateside, so I can thank him in person for everything he had done for the men and me.

December 21: Lt. Hardin asked for one volunteer from our track for another one of his suicide recovery missions. We cut playing cards to see who would go. The new guy, Tex, pulled an ace. I looked Tex square in the eye, smiled, and announced, "Sorry Earl, you lose, aces are ones in Nam." I looked around the bunker and we were all nodding in total agreement. We all thought that Earl would not be coming back.

Later, on our radio, we had heard one of the guys got killed. We all thought that Tex had bit the bullet. We went through his belongings and divided up his clothes and personal cleaning items. Hours later, to our surprise, Earl returned, only to catch me writing a letter of condolence to his mother and the guys packing his personals to send back to his family. He was even more upset when one of the guys asked him if he wanted his stuff back. The other guys started laughing. I could not help but raise my eyebrows and smile. Tex is very, very religious and insisted we all pray with him and repent our heathen ways. We said a prayer with Tex and listened as he read scriptures to us---his pulpit, a sandbag illuminated by a candle. Reality Check.

December 22: We shot our way back and forth from Ca Lu. No troops were hit, Thank God.

We dropped off some supplies to the Yards living a little past Ca Lu. My heart was broken when I found out that the NVA practiced genocide on the poor Montagnard people. Because Montagnards took aid from the Americans and did not obey the NVA, they killed a few of their children, beheading them and placed their heads on bamboo pikes. The sight was beyond anything I had ever seen. I cried at the very thought that my gifts of Bazooka Bubblegum and candy got those beautiful children killed! Is there a God?! I hate the NVA. I promised the village chief, through hand gestures and body language, that we will revenge their children's deaths. Another broken-hearted memory is born.

December 23: We escorted another convoy to Ca Lu and back to the Rockpile. At Ca Lu we got hit with seventy NVA rockets. We were lucky none hit the convoy staging area. We loaded the trucks with the dead first and then the wounded. Live friends were sitting on top of dead friends. My heart never stops breaking.

To this day, I can never understand why we just didn't take and hold all the roads, hills, and mountains from Dong Ha to Khe Sanh. Why weren't we allowed to fight like they did in other wars? Thousands of soldiers and Marines would have been saved, both physically and mentally. We all knew the military was not running this war, but that some asshole politician, with some liberal asshole reporter stuck up his ass, was in control.

We think that either someone has it in for us, or that we are the best crew around, because we still have not stopped running Ambush Alley.

December 24: Lt. Hardin surprised us and gave us off Christmas Eve and Christmas Day. We had no bunker and are living in a small tent with a candle for light. Joe Musso has left us his mother's small Christmas tree with a box of miniature Christmas balls. We spent the morning decorating our tree. Since we have no tinsel, we unwrapped my eight packs of Juicy Fruit Chewing Gum and twisted the middle so they looked like little bows and added them to our tree. As we dressed our tree, we all sang Christmas Carols. It was contagious. Before we knew it, we had half The Rockpile singing "Jingle Bells." We played cards for matchsticks and lost at horseshoes to a surprisingly agile old sergeant named Cecil Hamilton. The evening was spent sharing some pepperoni and provolone cheese from one of my "CARE" packages and helping Earl tape-record messages to his mother. We took turns giving his mom pre-planned messages about how great Earl was doing and how wonderful it was where we lived. The rest of the night was spent listening to the taped messages she sent Earl and our crew. Her soothing Texas voice made it a wonderful taste of home and a great Christmas Eve gift for all of us.

December 25: It is Christmas Day. Duster crews took turns running to Camp Carroll for a great hot Christmas meal. We rushed down to the river and took a quick bath. We didn't have time to wash our clothes and were forced to celebrate the holiday in our dirty, blood-stained clothes. The cooks did a fantastic job in the mess hall. I could not believe the great assortment of food and all the holiday decorations. As the Soldiers and Marines in the mess hall bowed their heads, Earl said grace. We ended our meal trying to sing a few Christmas songs. Our designated thirty minutes of great chow and good tidings was over. It was time to saddle up and head back to The Rockpile and give the next crew their turn. "Merry Christmas".....

December 26: A Marine was riding shotgun on our Duster in the TC hatch (the additional opening and seat to the right of the driver) and stood to get a better look and wave at his buddies in the truck in front of us. An enemy sniper's bullet hit him through his left shoulder, the bullet exiting out his right side. The convoy didn't stop. It was The Rough Rider Convoy. The Marine just slumped back into the TC hatch, asleep forever.

I called the turret and automatically slowed the Duster to a crawl and started shooting a slow rate of counter fire at the ridge line all the way to Ca Lu. We didn't tell the two Cannoneers until we got to Ca Lu. They became very upset. We taught them a new phrase: "It's only a thing, you'll get over it. It don't mean nothin'."

*To this day we have never gotten over IT.

December 27: A Marine we called "Chicago", riding on the back of the Duster, got shot through the chest and landed in the turret on top of Earl. Earl kept him breathing and we dropped him off at Ca Lu. Nobody talked about it. I gave Earl a change of shirt, one of our old rag shirts I kept in the side compartment for cleaning the guns. It was better than his blood-soaked one. I was told that the Marine didn't make it. None of us ever knew his real name. Nicknames made it slightly easier for us to accept their fates. We had no words of wisdom for Earl. I just gave him a quick hug, patted his back, and walked away. I lit his blood-stained shirt on fire, but it only smoldered. The glowing embers turned the green jungle fatigue shirt wrinkly black, leaving the blood soaked areas untouched. The last remains of a friend's life…

December 29: We rotated back to Carroll to the Water Point position. I was hoping to get back on Hill 250 outside the northeast corner of Carroll. Hill 250 had the best view and firing positions, but the Water Point had hot showers and a great field of fire of the western slopes and road leading to Carroll. Plus, it sure beat the river baths with the leeches. Roger Blentlinger, the Marine combat engineer who ran the Water Point, is one of my best Marine friends. He is my personal hero. Every time a Duster or Marine group gets into trouble, he is the first to volunteer for the reactionary team. Roger would always risk his life for our lives. He helped us and several others out of many bad situations.

We started getting ready for a big inspection. The men started joking, "If they inspect our balls, I bet they'll still find crotch rot."

December 30: Roger showed me how he made the water drinkable. He explained to me that the water we got came from either a water truck or through a pipe that was installed from the creek below. The water was then pumped into large rubber vats that were about ten feet round and four feet deep. He then added a few different chemicals. I could not help but think that this was his personal swimming pool and we were getting ready to take a swim. Next, he took a big wooden paddle and walked around each vat, mixing the chemicals and making a whirlpool. After each vat settled, all the bugs and other creatures were in the middle, making it easier for Roger to scoop them out with his net. He then pushed down the edge of the vat to drain off an oily substance floating on top. He said it was the residue left by the planes spraying the area with defoliant called Agent Orange. Finally, the light colored brown water, "ready to drink," was pumped into a big metal water tank that was covered in layers of sandbags. There was only one problem with The Water Point. Every NVA artillery team tried to hit the water tank.

I cannot help but think of the many trips we make to the river, guarding the water tanker trucks as they filled with water. In addition, we have the gruesome job of helping the Marines pull out the dead water buffalos or NVA bodies that blocked the big water pump.

December 31: It is New Year's Eve and they gave our crew the night off. Some of the guys from the motor pool and office had to pull Guard Duty for us. I hoped they knew what they were doing. At 03:00 some Marines, from the Listening Post, were coming through the barbed wire. Dave Woods was the soldier on Guard Duty. The Marines had a password and Dave had a password. When the Marine called out "Geronimo," Dave forgot his response, "Indian", panicked, and started shooting. The Marines were lucky that Dave was nervous and a bad shot. At least, we had a few hours off and no one was injured.

Earl shared with me a note his Mother had placed in his pocket bible.

Hello My Baby,
I thought I could write this better than I could say it. Cause I don't want to cry right now. But remember how much I love you, just look around you and see how big this world is and say to yourself my Mama's heart is just this big and she loves me with every bit of it.
I love you, My Baby.

After I read her note, Earl read out loud the 91st psalm and I prayed I could keep him alive.

James "Doc" Butler

Sgt. Laurier Derosier (on left) with his crew.
Laurier died from the wounds he received on August 30, 1967.

Joe Musso and I celebrating Christmas.

Left to right: Sam Lewis, Joe Belardo, Chester Sines, David Lewis and Russia Holley.

Earl Holt

Our Duster returned to the ambush site with Lt. Moore to clear the area of the destroyed trucks.

The booby trapped Marine truck that blew up after we shot it with a volley of 40mm.

The famous tree we shot that covered Lt. Moore and me with splinters.

Duster at The Rockpile.

A Duster crew, with a squad of Marines riding on the Duster, celebrates their safe return through the "Infamous Ambush Alley."

Lt. Moore's final formation with his platoon.

My Christmas tent at The Rockpile.
You can see our Xmas tree decorated with gum wrappers.

Sgt. Cecil Hamilton beat all of us in horseshoes.

Earl Holt (facing forward) waiting for his Christmas dinner. Check out how dirty his Road Warrior pants are compared to his friends.

The Camp Carroll mess hall decorated for Christmas.

The cooks did a great job preparing our Christmas meal.

Joe Belardo and Marine Roger Blentlinger.

Here I am checking out the Roger's rubber vat filled with drinking water.

Shooting at the enemy as they make a daytime assault towards the Waterpoint and Camp Carroll.

CHAPTER 7: JANUARY MEANS TET

January 1, 1968: Today is New Year's Day and, at dusk, Tex and I saw what looked like a panther in front of our position. His cry was like the howl of a woman. More than anything, we wanted to be the first to shoot a panther. Grabbing our M-16 and flashlights, we stalked after the animal. Afraid he would end up behind us, we walked somewhat back-to-back, with our flashlights shining down the length of our barrels. Before we could get a shot off, the fast-moving jungle animal disappeared off into the jungle. All we could hear was his cries.

We now have track C142, and it is our job to get it in good running and fighting condition. It is one of the fastest tracks in our section, but still needs to be towed to get it running.

January 2: The crew awoke to find I had replaced the front Duster plate with our old friend "The Grim Reaper."

We trapped eight rats this evening. This beat the old record of five rats and one rat foot! The rats are so big that I had my father send me some muskrat traps. Ordinary rat traps are a joke to these rabbit-sized rodents. The candy, Chuckles, is the best bait. It gives me the creeps when the rats crawl on me. They like to lick my lips and place their nose in my nostrils. I hate the little bastards. I lay there motionless, praying I won't get bit. I don't want to take rabies shots in my belly.

January 3: The Marines issued us a small potbellied stove which we put in our bunker. The monsoon is wet and cold. One day it is 105 degrees hot; the next day it is 40 degrees cold. But, it feels like 20 degrees. I went from wearing tee shirts to long johns and rain gear. The little stove is wonderful. We stole a fuel drip pot from one of the mess hall hot water heaters. We stoked it with rocks and hard teakwood, and let our dripper drip. Five Dustermen and fourteen Marines are warm and dry as toast in our twelve-foot cubical.

January 4: I cannot believe the bullshit; they gave me KP and shit-burning detail again at the main latrine. What a foul way to get rid of human waste! I didn't think I had pissed off anyone lately. It must have been the silly grin and laugh I gave the officers.

We showed them. Tonight, we robbed all the sheet metal and wood the officers had stored for the roof of their new bunker and day room. We used it for our new bunker roof. After we completed our mission, we covered up the new roof with a layer of sandbags to hide our insubordination.

The short break from convoys is a welcome stand down. The only problem with base camp, living at the four-star resort known as Camp Carroll, is the constant ducking to avoid being hit by the NVA artillery.

January 5: We informed our Section Chief, Sgt. Chester Sines, that our telephone land line (lima-lima) that went from the Command Bunker across the camp to our position had been knocked out by the enemy artillery. The lines where strung across the base on telephone poles the Marine Combat Engineers had installed. Since Camp Carroll was always being hit by enemy artillery, the lines could be broken anywhere or in multiple places. We divided up into two, three-man teams. One team started at our bunker and the other started at the Command Bunker, a distance of about 500 yards. After about a two hour search, we found the broken line lying next to one of the poles that crossed over the road where the convoys assemble to leave Camp Carroll. Chester said he knew the supply room had a set of pole climbing spikes, and he would go get them and climb the pole and repair the lines. Like a professional pole climber, Chester ascended the pole. Holding tight to the top, he pulled up one end of the line and reattached it to the pole. As he started to pull up the other end for splicing, we heard the first volley of enemy artillery leave their gun tubes. Screaming, we told Chester to get down.

As the first round landed, we could see that the volley would be heading straight towards Chester. Screaming encouragement, we waited for him to descend. The spikes slipped and Chester fell flat to the pole.

Unable to help him, we were forced to run for our lives as the shells exploded even closer. The five of us huddled in a nearby bunker. Five explosions, ten, twenty, and then came that terrible quiet as we listened for more incoming and people screaming. Sprinting out of the bunker, we feared what we would find. To our surprise, there was Chester, still up on the pole. He was now at the very top, with his arms and legs wrapped tightly around it. We all looked in total amazement. Chester was still alive. There were hundreds of pieces of shrapnel stuck in the pole all around our poor buddy. The pieces ranged in size from only a few inches long to about two feet long. His climbing apparatus and clothes were literally pinned to the pole by the shrapnel. It looked like every square inch of the pole had metal sticking out of it and yet none of it had hit Chester. To get him down, we had to send for the boom truck that was used to install our Duster engines. Straddling the top of the boom, the operator boomed me up to Chester. After what seemed like hours, we had him back on the ground. Chester said that, with each explosion, he could feel the shrapnel hit the pole and shake it violently. All he could do was pray and hold on tight. We are all thankful, amazed and hope we will never have the same experience. God was with Chester today....

January 6: We caught eight rats and killed three scorpions, two centipedes, and one bamboo viper snake. The crew helped replace another engine for one of the other crews. It's amazing how efficient and quick we have become at accomplishing this chore.

I always dream of all kinds of great Italian food, but for some strange reason I keep dreaming of my favorite "Texas Wieners" and promise myself they will be one of my first meals when I get home.

January 7: One of the Marines taught us how to use our track's radio to get in touch with guys from our home states that were also stationed in Nam. Because this was totally illegal to do, we first had to come up with a fictitious name so the CIA could not trace the call back to us. They call it "Radio-Free Nam". I call myself "Jersey Joe". Tonight, I spoke with a guy from Edison, the town next to mine. He called himself "Thomas Edison".

January 8: They called off the "Big Inspection" until the 18th or 19th. Big deal, I am tired of cleaning that hunk of metal. What a joke, inspecting combat teams on the DMZ…

January 13: We escorted a small convoy of India Company, 3rd Battalion 9th Marines out of Camp J.J. Carroll and headed west on Route 9 with our final destination Ca Lu. Our Duster was rear security. After reaching Ca Lu, we were scheduled to return with another convoy back to Carroll. The convoy was made up of about fifteen Marine trucks and a few Marine tanks. We first stopped at the Khe Gio bridge outpost, dropped off men and supplies, and continued to The Rockpile. At The Rockpile, the convoy regrouped and proceeded to Ca Lu with the remainder of the troops. Our Duster remained as rear security. The Marine mortar ammo truck and a flat bed truck lowboy were positioned in the middle of the convoy.

As the convoy turned into one of the curves in the road, about halfway to Ca Lu (the area known as Ambush Alley), the NVA made their first full-scale attack of the new year. Using command-detonated mines, the NVA blew up the ammo truck and lowboy. Charlie had his shit together and had lined both sides of the road with booby traps and personnel mines. The trucks in front of our Duster came to a scattered halt all over the road. Marines seeking cover started jumping out of and off their vehicles. Landing on personnel mines, they were tossed into the air like rag dolls. It was a terrible sight. It happened in seconds. The NVA soldiers were less than five meters off the road and raked the stalled convoy with automatic weapons, mortars, and RPGs. Our Duster started shooting, but was unable to clear the area close to the convoy because of the mix of NVA and Marines. The Marines, knowing that the land mines and automatic weapons would kill them, were forced to push into the heavy brush and try to regroup. I could see individual and small groups of NVA soldiers moving into the convoy and onto the trucks trying to finish off the survivors and wounded along the road. I shot as many as I could with my M-16 and .45 pistol.

Our Duster's standard shooting and killing routine is to shoot close, sweep quickly out about a 100 yards, mow the middle, start all over, and quickly pick targets. The Marines unconsciously had been drawn into a well-planned ambush. The NVA were shooting RPGs and recoilless rifles from both sides of Route 9. The NVA were so close I could see them throwing satchel charges into the trucks. Our Duster was forced to shoot over the Marines at the NVA shooting from the ridgeline on the north side of the road. Wounded and dead Marines were scattered everywhere. As I drove my Duster slowly forward, I could feel and hear the small NVA personnel mines exploding under my tracks. I feared that the small mines would blow the tracks off, rendering us immobile. Sam Lewis, my squad leader, was screaming in my headset to be careful and not get us killed. We could only advance a few feet before I had to stop and remove the injured and dead Marines from our path. I placed the Marines who were alive on the rear of the Duster. I moved the dead to the side of the road. I felt horrible that I had no time to give them aid. Finally, our 40mm high-explosive shells cleared a path for a group of Marines from the road to the first ridgeline. We positioned the Duster so we could shoot effectively at both the north and south sides of the road. It was important that we suppressed the heavy NVA automatic weapons and RPG teams… or die.

Reinforcements from Ca Lu and the Rockpile were already responding. Our Duster ¾-ton supply truck driver, Spec. 4 John Rowe, a reactionary volunteer from the Rockpile, continually replenished our Duster with ammunition. John and I would first unload the 40mm ammo and then stack his bullet-riddled truck with the wounded from the back of my Duster and the dead off the road. At one point, Rowe was laying between the NVA personnel mines as he emptied his M-16 into the rushing NVA. I lifted him up, dragged him behind the Duster and with a quick burst of my M-16, the landmines exploded. As he pulled into The Rockpile for the third or fourth time, with the last of the wounded we could find, the truck engine seized. The radiator and engine were pierced with bullet holes. Marine reactionary forces from both The Rockpile and Ca Lu saved the day. The Marines regrouped, sweeping both sides of the road, killing and clearing out the NVA.

It was a sad day for "India" Company, 3/9 Marines. We never got to Ca Lu. As we drove back to The Rockpile, our rear deck was covered with Marines, wounded and dead. The Marines had 22 KIA and 60 WIA.

If it weren't for my grenades and another .45 pistol I had acquired from a Marine, I would have been killed today. As I turned to handout more ammo to the guys in the turret, a gook ran up to me and, was so close, I was staring down the length of his rifle barrel. All I heard was a "click". I was lucky, because I think he was out of ammo and I wasn't. Thirteen has become my unlucky, lucky number.

In 1993 at the "Vietnam Women's Memorial" dedication banquet in Washington, D.C., I met former I/3/9 Marine John Lang and he later reintroduced me to Alfred "Flipper" Seals, a survivor of the January 13th battle. That was a day of both tears and joy. They made me an honorary member of their association, "The Flaming I's"...another bond to the Vietnam brotherhood, another toast to the Dusters.

I never understood why we aren't officially allowed to carry side arms. They are confiscated if the Captain finds them. He would have sent me to Leavenworth if he had caught me with all my contraband. We would joke, "Maybe the officers think we will kill someone with a pistol." Wasn't killing the game? I always dreamed of a General driving my Duster and a big NVA Chinese Advisor stepping out in front of the Duster with his AK-47. The old General would be just a little too slow getting his unauthorized .45 pistol out and would catch a bullet smack between the eyes. What a crazy dream, a General driving my Duster!

Back at Carroll, I was running out of shirts to burn. We needed a mail run back to Dong Ha, so we could replenish our clothes from the fatigue rag bin at the motor pool.

Dear Diary:

CRIMSON RED

Nam has four seasons – Living – Learning – Dying – Going Home.

There was a firefight somewhere in Nam. Its exact location could have been anywhere.

Its outcome had been rehearsed a thousand times, as far back as the Crusades.
I could see from my Metal Chariot of Destruction

The Ground Pounders scrambling for cover...
Sniper...Sniper.

I prayed our guns would quell this sniper before his crosshairs found their mark.
Our "Duster's" forty-millimeter cannons blazed as we cleared jungle and tree line.
Like the crack of a whip, a lone shot rang out and one of America's Best flips backwards.

...CRIMSON RED – CRIMSON RED
...CORPSMAN UP – CORPSMAN UP

All guns knew the direction and took aim.
A lone soldier cradles his wounded friend.
...HOLD ON BILLY – HOLD ON ...FOUR HANDS HOLDING – KNUCKLES WHITE
...CRACK – CRACK --- CRACK – CRACK
...HOLD ON, JOHNNY – HOLD ON
...EIGHT HANDS HOLDING – KNUCKLES WHITE

Full auto – Brass a-flying
...A MINUTE DOWN!

Tears now filled this game of death.
A bad omen for America's Best.

Un-heeding the rules of the Dragon's game.
A lone grunt swearing a brother's revenge stood and charged the unseen quest.
...CRACK – CRACK ---- CRACK – CRACK
...CORPSMAN UP – CORPSMAN UP
...CRIMSON POOLS – NOW CRIMSON TIDES
...TWO MINUTES DOWN
...SNIPER GONE
If patience counted, why couldn't he wait?
Now loaded on the back of my "Steel Coffin's" deck.
Standing silently... I apologized for this metal hearse.
...THREE MINUTES DOWN
...AN ETERNITY OF TIME
America's Best withstood another test.

January 14: We returned again to the ambush site looking for a few Marines who were missing. Dead NVA were everywhere. What a nightmare! The grunts found their missing comrades. I just sucked it up and lit another Tareyton.

January 15: We finally finished recovering all the Marines and equipment from the battle. I have not received mail from home in four days. It is very unusual for them not to write or send a CARE package.

January 16: Still being on someone's shit list, I had KP again. But it sure felt good to get off The Road and get a hot meal.

January 17: The Seabees got hit. Four were wounded. They were working a little past the Sand-Gravel Pit. Now we had to clean up Seabee blood. "God, how much more do you want us to endure?"

January 18: We passed that BIG inspection. The only thing that we accomplished by having that inspection was that all the Dusters got a good cleaning and the area was policed.

January 19: I received a letter from my Mom telling me all about Christmas. She was going to save my presents for me to open when I get home, if I get home. In her letters, Mom loved to tell me about everything they ate—daily and holidays. She didn't know that we were starving, and I couldn't tell her. I would read her letters to the crew. "We had the freshest Italian bread, the best tossed salad, cold antipasto with everything you like: salami, pepperoni, prosciutto, provolone, olives, artichoke hearts, roasted red peppers plus the seven fishes of Christmas, baked ham, Dad's homemade lasagna, wine and all kinds of dessert from Bovella's Bakery." Our mouths drooled as I read her letters. I then began our time-honored tradition of opening my switchblade and slicing every description of food from my Mom's letter. The guys held out their hands as I filled their palms with the equally shared pieces of paper food. We tossed them into our mouths, a course at a time, moaning in ecstasy and laughing hysterically as we savored the paper meals from home. Dessert was the highlight of our gourmet meal, eating Bovella's famous almond cookies and rum cakes. It was a meal fit for any Warrior King.

January 20: The "B" Battery convoy got hit below Carroll, and suffered two WIA. At 1300 hours, Carroll got hit with another 74 NVA rockets. At 1630 hours, our Duster spotted the smoke from the NVA rocket tube shooting at Carroll. We dueled with the NVA as their rockets burst all around us. The crew cheered when we saw the first enemy secondary explosion, proof of our day's kill. I bitched because it took one hundred sixty-five 40mm rounds to finish off the gook rocket team. Thank God the NVA only shot one rocket at a time. My crew knew I wouldn't put up with them missing their target, any target. It made me crazy.

January 21: At sunup, the base got hit with more "INCOMING!" Earl saw a wisp of smoke coming out of the lower tree line along Dong Ha Mountain and yelled that he could see the location of the Gooks' artillery. Because Holley, our Gunner, was on KP, we told Earl that, since he was trained on Dusters, he could get himself a few kills. The enemy guns were about a mile away and in range of our 40s. I stood behind the turret and gave Earl some words of encouragement before he pressed the trigger. Sam Lewis, traversing the turret, told Earl he was on target and to shoot the first round high and adjust on target. It took less than ten seconds after the first round exploded for Earl to put our next volley on top of the Gooks' heads. With a quick 120 rounds, we made our square with an "X" in the middle, and the Gooks were eliminated. We all cheered as we got three secondary explosions. We peppered the area with another 40 rounds, just to make sure nobody escaped.

Later this afternoon, the Marine search team told Earl he had seven confirmed kills. By this evening, Earl became very withdrawn and sad. I had a long conversation with him, trying to explain to him that he would be okay. "Joe, I just killed seven men. Even though we consider them the enemy, it was seven men with families. How do I sort this? How will God forgive me? How do you do it?" I did not have a real answer for my friend. "Earl, you'll just get used to it." As I walked away, I could see the tears flowing down his cheeks and I remembered how much it hurts. How could I explain to him that it's probably only going to get worse?

January 22: At 1800 hours, the NVA hit the base by the 175mm cannon area with four shells, wounding soldiers from the 2nd Battalion 94th Artillery.

January 23: We saw three NVA in front of our position and fired at them. Later, we only found traces of blood and some parts. I'm sure I nailed one in the chest. We blamed the Marines for shooting without authorization.

Marines

Route 9 – Ambush Alley

Route 9 – further on Ambush Alley.

Route 9 – Ambush Alley escort duty.

Hand grenade being thrown during a fire fight.

Wounded

John Rowe

Two carrying one

CHAPTER 8: THE MOTHER OF ALL BATTLES

January 24, 1968: We got involved in a large ambush below Camp J.J. Carroll on Route 9. This battle had the fury of a tornado.

Without our knowledge, we ended up fighting against the combined enemy forces of the 320th Infantry Division, the 48th and 52nd Regiments. Being outnumbered and overrun took on a whole new meaning. These events were so remarkable that this battle has entered the annals of military history and comprised the stories featured in LTC Ollie North's program "Men At War" on Fox TV.

THE OFFICIAL MILITARY HISTORIC THIRD PERSON ACCOUNT:

Taken from the After Action Report, Fort Bliss, TX; and from the ADA (Air Defense Artillery Magazine) #HQDA 44-96-2, March-April 1996.

0700 hours: Section Chief SGT Sines had accompanied one of his section's tracks to the Camp Carroll Battery "C" maintenance motor pool for repair. The normal crew of the track consisted of Squad Leader SGT Sam Lewis, Gunner SP4 Russia Holley, Cannoneers SP4 Earl Holt and PFC David Lewis, and Driver SP4 Joseph Belardo. At the motor pool, the crew was to replace both 40mm cannons with new barrels; repair damaged track treads; and replace the starter, since the current way to start the track was by pulling it with another track. After a few hours, the track treads were repaired and re-tensioned; the engine oiled and checked; and both barrels were replaced, but not fully cleaned. The starter was not yet replaced or repaired. In the distance the crew could hear what sounded like a full-scale firefight, a common sound along the DMZ.

1130 hours: A two-and-a-half-ton truck traveling from Camp Carroll to Cam Lo on Route 9 received small-arms fire. The Army vehicle following the truck received mortar fire as well as small-arms fire. The occupants of both vehicles, upon reaching Cam Lo, warned a convoy pulling out of Cam Lo for Camp Carroll that Route 9 had been interdicted. The Marine Captain in charge of the convoy disregarded the warning. Being shot at on Route 9 west of Cam Lo was a common everyday occurrence. As the convoy approached a small bridge that crossed a minor tributary of the Cam Lo River, the NVA regulars hidden in the hills overlooking Route 9 ambushed the convoy with small arms, automatic weapons, recoilless rifles, rocket-propelled grenades (RPGs) and mortars. The overwhelmed convoy was halted in minutes by the NVA. The troops were shocked by the intensity of the firefight and incoming rounds. Those still alive were forced to take cover along the edge of the road.

1135 hours: The observation post on Hill 250 outside the northeast corner of Camp Carroll (the 4th Marine Regiment's combat base and home of "C" Charlie Battery, 1st Battalion, 44th Artillery "Dusters") noticed explosions along Route 9. Large numbers of enemy were observed moving along the river and ridgelines north of the ambush site. The Dustermen and Marines manning the outpost (OP) were now aware that an ambush was taking place in front of Camp Carroll. They could see NVA infantry crossing the Cam Lo River in boats. Explosions and smoke were coming from the ambushed convoy. The OP requested permission to fire their Duster at the enemy, and the 4th Marines granted their request. Simultaneously, Camp Carroll was advised that the convoy was being ambushed and prepared for a possible assault on Camp Carroll.

The camp forces were advised that the fight was just below the eastern slope of Camp Carroll. All Dusters in the battery area were instructed to take positions along the northern camp perimeter. All other tracks were to hold position and await instructions. SGT Lewis' track was one of five Dusters that began to shoot more than 8,000 40mm rounds at the NVA that had attacked the convoy on Route 9 in the valley in front of Carroll. Lt. Hardin had taken command of one of the Dusters, comprised of a new inexperienced crew. The only seasoned combat veteran was squad leader Johnny Towns, who had only one week left to DEROS (going home). Towns' crew consisted of Gunner SP4 Jackie Gilbert, Cannoneers PFC Shora Solomon, PFC Townsend, and Driver

SP4 Robert Conley. Lt. Hardin instructed Lewis to saddle up, refuel, replenish ammo and meet his Duster within fifteen minutes at the camp gate as a reaction force for the ambushed convoy. Lewis instructed Lt. Hardin of the Duster's starting problem, but was still ordered to follow, since Hardin needed a seasoned fighting crew. Lewis instructed his crew to return to their position "water point" and re-supply. The crew hastily fueled, ringed the turret with 40mm ammo, restocked upper and side turret ammo compartments, and filled the Driver's compartment with all the extra reserve of loose clips of 40mm ammo. Section chief SGT-E6, Chester Sines went as the extra sixth combatant and sat to the right of the driver in the extra hatch known as the "TC" seat.

1200 hours: The two Dusters met two Marine tanks and a squad of Marines at the main gate. A Marine LT was in command of the first M48 Tank and was followed out the gate by Lt. Hardin' s Duster; next in line was the other M48 tank with half the Marine squad holding on to that tank; and then by Lewis's Duster along with the balance of the Marines sitting on the back of the Duster. The relief force stopped within 100 yards of the ambushed convoy and began to give direct fire to enemy forces along the northern ridge above the convoy. Via radio, Joe Belardo instructed the Driver of the other Duster, SP4 Conley, via radio to keep a fighting distance between his Duster and the M48 tank in front of him and the ambush site. All was now relatively quiet at the ambush sight. Americans could be seen lying in the kill zone, wounded or dead. There was no shooting now from the NVA or the convoy. The only sound was the eerie whistle of hundreds of Duster 40mm shells from Camp Carroll shooting over their heads and exploding into the slopes along Dong Ha Mountain.

Both lieutenants instructed all tracks to proceed forward with caution into the ambush site. Belardo instructed Conley to hold fast and not move. Sines advised both lieutenants that this was not a hit-and-run NVA action, and that all caution should be used and not to advance. Sines advised them to sweep both the north and south sides of the convoy before moving forward. SP4 Belardo advised Conley to drive the Duster to his right and take position on a small, elevated knoll overlooking the convoy so they could get a better look at the situation. Sines advised Hardin to reassess the situation and to clear the area around the convoy before advancing into a possible trap.

Seeing no NVA, both officers again instructed their drivers to proceed slowly and cautiously along the center of the road. SGT Lewis instructed his Duster and the other M48 to hold fast and be ready to fire. The first M48 Tank had just crossed over the small bridge that spanned a small creek on Route 9. Lt. Hardin's Duster was just approaching the bridge. Both tracks had traveled no more than 100 yards. The NVA, hidden from view, suddenly ambushed the M48 and Duster with volleys of RPGs and satchel charges. Both tracks were instantly out of action. The crew of the M48 were all either seriously wounded or killed. The crew on Lt. Hardin's Duster had four men with minor wounds and two seriously wounded. Squad Leader Towns could be seen standing in the burning Duster turret, shooting the M60 machine gun at the rushing enemy soldiers. Cannoneer Solomon had lost the back of his legs from one of the RPGs. Gunner SP4 Gilbert had lost both his arms from another RPG.

Squad Leader Lewis' Duster immediately opened fire on the RPG teams, killing the first four RPG teams they could see. Caution had to be taken because the remaining RPG teams were within feet of the destroyed M48 and Duster. SP4 Belardo instructed the driver of the other M48 Tank to follow him and take position on that small knoll overlooking the ambush site. Both tracks did figure eights to level any tall grass that would conceal the enemy and to give an area for the squad of Marines to dig in. As they drove up the knoll they were firing at the NVA that were visible and instructed the twelve Marines that came with them to dig in and protect the west and south slopes of the knoll.

1315 hours: Lewis' Duster and the other M48 were now about 100 yards off the road on the south side of Route 9. The ambushed convoy along with the other destroyed Duster and M48 were 150 to 200 yards slightly to the right, at their one o'clock position. Lewis' field of fire was excellent. The terrain around the knoll was mostly low brush and grass. Directly across Route 9 was an area about 200 to 300 yards wide that went north for about one-quarter mile to a small hedgerow along the Cam Lo River. The area was clear and had small clusters of brush. The small stream at the ambush site ran back north to the river. Its eastern side terrain was hilly and covered with heavy brush. This area was known as Mike Hill because the Marines had lost many men from Mike Company on the hills in a previous battle. The south side of the bridge had similar terrain. At the bridge crossing stood a lone tree about seventy feet tall, later to be known as Ground Zero. The destroyed Duster was in close proximity to the tall tree. At the eleven o'clock position in front of Lewis' Duster was the beginning of a large hill with heavy cover and a steep drop-off. The area behind Lewis' Duster was a sharp steady rise up to Camp Carroll and the Observation Post known as Hill 250.

1330 hours: Sines requested reinforcements from Camp Carroll. Captain Easter, "C" Battery 1st/44th Commanding Officer, advised: "Hold position, recover men, casualties and equipment from ambush, return to Camp Carroll." Lewis' Duster proceeded slowly towards the entrapped destroyed Duster and tank, raking the area with 40mm and M60 machine gun fire. SP4 Belardo repeatedly tried to contact the destroyed tracks via radio, but now only received radio microphone clicking. The other M48 gave rear security as the Marines hastily dug new positions. Lewis' Duster was now within 50 yards of the destroyed Duster. NVA automatic weapons and machine guns now opened fire. RPGs from across Route 9 were fired, falling short of their mark or soaring overhead. A small group of NVA began to rush forward, only to be killed by 40mm fire. NVA 57mm recoilless rifles began shooting at the Duster from the eleven o'clock position. More NVA started rushing from concealed positions along the road. SGT Chester Sines instructed Belardo to return back up the knoll. Belardo was unwilling to turn around and expose the Duster's sides or the engine, fearing a RPG or 57 recoilless hit would destroy the Duster. Holt used inter-track radio communications to verbally guide him backwards and up the hill until they were sure that turning was safe.

Automatic weapons fire was constantly strafing the Duster, and mortars were exploding at close range. Sines again radioed Camp Carroll advising enemy action and requesting backup. Carroll advised him to hold position and sweep the area. The new 40mm cannon barrels, recently installed at Carroll, had not been completely cleaned and began to smoke profusely from the cosmoline oil. The Duster stopped shooting as Belardo and Holt feverishly swabbed the barrels with the little reserve oil left on the Duster. NVA could be seen running out in the open along the small stream and into the heavy brush at the eleven o'clock position, and along the stream that headed towards the ambush site. The Duster again began firing along the stream area, delivering effective fire on the advancing NVA. Large groups of NVA, dead and wounded, were now visible from the river to within 20 yards of the ambushed convoy. NVA mortars once more began landing in the Duster area. NVA automatic weapons and small arms fire were sporadic but heavy. SP4 Belardo was advised to keep his track moving around the knoll and away from the Marine infantry and M48. A moving target was not as easy a target.

The M48 took up position by the path that was made by the two tracks as they went up the knoll. The Marines dug in slightly to the left and rear of the M48. Sines, the sixth man of normally a five man crew, now stood on the back of the Duster giving firing orders, exposing him to enemy fire. Belardo began giving artillery coordinates to the Fire Direction Control at Carroll. The enemy could now be seen dragging their dead or wounded into the heavy brush. Sines, now as the driver, and Belardo in the TC hatch, advanced the Duster towards the destroyed convoy, raking the area with 40mm and M60 fire. The NVA again charged the Duster. Sines stopped the Duster and was holding position. The Duster was now only a few yards from Route 9 and less than 30 yards from the destroyed Duster. The Duster was now shooting direct fire at the charging NVA. Belardo, exposing himself to enemy fire, now stood on the top front right corner of the Duster so he could see the other Duster. Only gunner Gilbert's head was visible and not moving. No other Duster crewmen could be seen.

Sines was now shooting Belardo's M-16 at the advancing NVA from the Driver's compartment. Belardo, now on the ground outside the Duster, had the front main door of the Duster open. This was a common combat practice for Duster Drivers. It was the only way to take the 40mm ammo out of the inside storage area and hand it to the loaders in the turret. Belardo, continually exposing himself to enemy fire, repeatedly climbed in and out of the Driver's hatch, retrieving 40mm ammo and distributing it to the loaders in the turret. Belardo advised Sines that the 40mm ammo was extremely low. NVA RPGs, mortars and 57mm recoilless rifles began hitting close to the Duster. Belardo was instructed by Sines to get back in the Duster as they did a 180-degree turn, and headed back up the knoll. Two helicopters, that had been called to help, began shooting extremely close to the east slope of the Duster and advised them that a very large NVA force had crossed over Route 9 and was advancing towards them from the east and up to Camp Carroll. The helicopters continued to shoot into a small ravine that headed up to Camp Carroll and covered the eastern slope of the knoll. The M48 was now out of 40mm ammo, so its crew began using their rifles. Sitting motionless, the NVA stopped shooting at the M48 with mortars and RPGs, possibly thinking they had already scored a direct hit. The dug-in Marines, almost out of ammo, were using reserve M-16 ammo borrowed from the Duster.

1415 hours: Belardo radioed Carroll that the 40mm ammo was down to 60 rounds and they would not abandon the convoy, expected to be overrun, needed ammo and reinforcements immediately. Jets had now arrived and were dropping bombs and napalm on the north side of the river. The Duster continued to shoot the M60 machine gun at the visible NVA. Sines and Belardo continued to direct air strikes and napalm strikes on the NVA positions. The NVA had now stopped shooting at the Duster. Out of nowhere, a small group of villagers began running across the open combat field between Route 9 and the river, heading west towards Cam Lo. After they disappeared, no other shots were fired from either side. The NVA seemed to vanish. Maybe they were digging-in, out of view in the heavy cover, or trying to avoid the jet air strikes. Camp Carroll had stopped shooting 40mm and heavy artillery fearing it would hit the helicopters or jets. Sines again radioed Carroll reminding them of the situation and that forty to fifty NVA laid dead on the knoll next to the Duster, and what seemed to be hundreds of NVA lay dead between Route 9 and the river. NVA could now be seen dragging their wounded into heavy cover.

Sines repeated that they needed ammo and reinforcements and would not give up the hill advantage to the NVA. Captain Easter advised that no reinforcements were coming, but a small group of volunteers would try to bring ammo and that the Duster should hold position until they arrived. SP4 Robert Williams was the ammo truck driver along with Duster crewman SP4 Donald Wolfe and four other volunteers. Fearing the ammo truck would run into the NVA and hoping to intercept it before it reached the ambush site, Belardo proceeded alone down the west slope of the knoll to Route 9 about 100 yards from the Duster, on the same path they drove up to get on the knoll. It was the Duster crew's belief that if Belardo reached the ammo truck, he could direct it back up the knoll after which the Duster could replenish its ammo, extract the wounded and dead from the ambush, and return to Carroll. The Marines had been instructed to keep this path open, knowing it was the alternate route back to Route 9 and Camp Carroll. Belardo, armed with M-16 and hand grenades, sprinted down the knoll through the dead NVA, shooting into the heavy brush killing any NVA in his path and throwing grenades at enemy positions. The Marines constantly gave support fire. At the road, Belardo waited and crouched in a drainage ditch. NVA could be seen taking up position across the road. Belardo quickly dispatched six of the NVA he could see and threw the remaining grenades into other NVA positions across Route 9. Belardo, waiting for the ammo truck, could hear automatic weapons fire and explosions from the west on Route 9 in the direction of the ammo truck. The ammo truck was being riddled with NVA automatic weapons fire, wounding Wolfe. Twenty minutes had elapsed and no ammo truck arrived. Belardo began his return back up the knoll, shooting at the enemy from behind the dead NVA bodies as he advanced up the hill.

1500 hours: The Duster crew radioed Carroll that they were almost completely out of ammunition. Carroll advised that they had dispatched a second group of volunteers with a Marine weapons squad. Belardo, in contact with the second ammo truck via radio, advised SP4 John Huelsenbeck and Marine CPL Roger Blentlinger, a combat engineer and volunteer weapons man aboard the ammo truck, as to the road area where he would meet them. Belardo again descended down the hill. The Marines and Duster were not giving support fire because ammunition was very low. They now could see Belardo about halfway down the slope engaging NVA soldiers in hand-to-hand combat. Quickly overcoming and dispatching the enemy, Belardo continued to fight his way down to the road. At Route 9, Belardo now wounded from an enemy bayonet hastily moved west and waved down the second ammo truck with its reinforcements. Belardo, riding on the running board of the ammo truck, directed it and one other truck with about twelve Marines, up the path. About fifty yards up the hill, the ammo truck slid off the path and its front wheel fell into a ditch and was unable to move. The other Marine truck was unable to push it out. Mortars began landing all around the two trucks. Huelsenbeck ordered the Marine officer on the other truck to move his vehicle and have his men dig in and give support fire. Huelsenbeck, exposing himself to enemy fire, positioned the Marines for maximum support. Belardo was now running up the hill through the enemy mortar barrage and heavy automatic weapons fire to get to the Duster. The Duster was now proceeding down the eastern slope of the knoll spraying the ravine that led to Carroll with M60 gunfire. The jets and helicopters had left the area. A lone observation plane could be seen flying on the eastern side of the stream.

Belardo advised the crew what had happened and drove the Duster to the stranded ammo truck. At the ammo truck Holt, using the M60, gave additional fire support for Huelsenbeck and Blentlinger. Exposing themselves to enemy fire, they fastened the Duster tow cable to the ammo truck. The ammo truck, laden with ammunition, was pulled to the top of the knoll. The Marine lieutenant was now assessing the situation with SGT Sines. The officer, after viewing the battle area from on top the Duster, agreed to try to secure the path back to Route 9. The ammo truck was now parked behind the Duster's right south side. As the reactionary crew replenished the Marines and Duster with M-16, M60 ammo, and a truckload of 40mm ammo, the Duster crew again opened fire on the advancing NVA. The crew, giving each other a needed rest, took on new assignments. Squad Leader Sam Lewis was now the Gunner, seated in the turret on the left side of the twin 40mm cannons. Belardo, behind him as Cannon Loader, stood on the left side of the 40mm cannons. Traversing the turret was SP4 Russia Holly. Holt was behind him as the other Cannon Loader. PFC Dave Lewis, now standing on the outside of the turret, shot the M60. Huelsenbeck and Blentlinger were handing Belardo and Holt 40 mm ammo. A human assembly line was humping shells from the ammo truck to the Duster.

The Duster, now shooting on full auto, first cleared the ravine leading to Carroll and shot as close to the destroyed convoy as possible. The NVA again opened fire with mortars and 57mm recoilless rifles, and again could be seen crossing the river in large groups. Sines, on the ground with another group, was reloading the inside of the Duster with 40mm and giving artillery coordinates to Carroll's FDC. The ammo team was yelling to the crew in the turret, giving them additional NVA 57mm recoilless rifle and mortar targets they could see. Secondary explosions were everywhere. The Duster crew and the NVA were not giving ground. Killing the NVA was again at an all-time high. When fully loaded, the Duster along with the Marines were going to clear a path to the ambushed convoy, rescue the dead and wounded, destroy the damaged vehicles and return to Carroll. The crew had now fired an additional 2,000 40mm rounds. The 40mm cannons, red-hot, began to jam and cook-off without firing. Holt and Belardo repeatedly reached into the cannon breeches with their bare hands to remove the hot 40mm rounds before they self-exploded. The twin 40s now had two 40mm shells jammed half in the breech, not allowing the firing block to move into firing position. Holt stepped out of the turret, hoping to find more oil on the ammo truck or Marine truck. The oil would be used to free the overheated cannon breeches. Belardo continued to reach in the hot breech trying to dislodge the jammed shells. NVA artillery rocked the Duster and ammo truck.

Squad Leader Lewis, seeing a NVA team shoot a 57 recoilless rifle, yelled, "Duck!" The 57s hit the ground a few feet from the Duster. The explosions threw Holt, Huelsenbeck, and Blentlinger over the ammo truck. PFC Dave Lewis was hit in the face with shrapnel and stood frozen with blood running into his eyes and down his face. Two more NVA shells hit the area, the explosions tossing David Lewis between the Duster and ammo truck. Squad Leader Sam Lewis, with bad head wounds, lay unconscious or possibly dead in the Gunner's seat. Belardo was now on his back lying over the 40mm cannon breeches with head, chest and arm wounds. The two 40mm rounds in the breech exploded, wounding Belardo a second time and sending him up and on top of Sam Lewis. Holly, who was sitting on the other side of the turret, was thrown unconscious but unwounded, on top of Dave Lewis between the Duster and the ammo truck. Belardo, still conscious and covered in blood, thought the Duster had been hit a second or third time. The turret was now in flames and filled with smoke. Belardo, seeing Sam Lewis unconscious and bleeding, picked him out of the Gunner's seat Belardo, with Lewis on his shoulder and armed with an M-16 from the turret, held onto the hot 40mm barrels and exited the Duster. Belardo, carrying Lewis and firing the M-16 at the advancing NVA, moved behind the ammo truck.

The event happened so quickly that the Marines by the M48 were now just responding with aid and counter fire. The ammo crew was trying to assess damage and regroup. Duster medic James "Doc" Butler, who was one of the reactionary volunteers, was quickly giving medical aid to the wounded. Belardo, refusing medical aid, climbed back into the turret and used the fire extinguisher on the burning cannons. Grabbing the M60 from its mount, Belardo returned fire, killing the advancing NVA. Huelsenbeck, Holt and Blentlinger joined Belardo in the turret. Holt and Huelsenbeck frantically tried to salvage the cannons and clear the loading magazines of hot 40mm ammo. Unable to fix the cannons, they commandeered M-16 and remained up in the turret giving direct fire at the rushing NVA. The survivors held on, hoping to get relief from a reactionary force.

CHAPTER 9: RESCUE FROM DONG HA

January 24, 1968 at 1600 hours: While this battle raged, Capt. V. J. Tedesco, the 1/44 Artillery liaison officer, was in the Officer's Club at Dong Ha enjoying a cold beer, totally unaware that one of his combat batteries was in a hellacious firefight. Word came from Lieutenant Colonel John House, the Battalion Commander that Charlie Battery and some Marines were in deep contact with the NVA on Route 9 and needed some serious bailing out or would be overrun. As the liaison officer, it wasn't Tedesco's job to take out the Dong Ha reaction force, but the Reaction Force Commander couldn't be located.

1700 hours: Sines advised Carroll of the situation and told them he would try to get back to Carroll. The wounded Duster men and Marines were placed inside the M48 and in the Duster TC hatch. With Marines lying on the top decks of the Duster, M48, and loaded into the trucks, they departed the knoll. Sines drove the Duster with Belardo at the M60. Huelsenbeck, Holt and Blentlinger were shooting their M-16 and throwing grenades. With the two trucks in the middle and the M48 bringing up the rear, they blasted their way through enemy positions and fought their way up Route 9 and back to Camp Carroll.

At Carroll they were advised by Captain Easter to keep the chatter down about all the NVA in the valley. Easter did not want the men to think that Carroll could or would be overrun. The crew was ordered back to the water point position to stand guard duty. The wounded were medivaced to Dong Ha and Da Nang. Sines and his crew were never again asked about the ambush, although their heroic actions were probably the reason Camp JJ Carroll was not overrun.

1730 hours: Tedesco led two Dusters and two truck-mounted Quad-50s to the rescue. The following morning, he described the action in a tape made for his wife, Suzanne. "I don't know where to start to tell you, Suzanne, about what happened yesterday, well last night, to be exact," Tedesco said. "I guess I'll start from the beginning. I was over in the club around a quarter to five when we got word that Charlie Battery was in contact with the enemy on Route 9 between Cam Lo and Camp Carroll. They had gone to try to relieve a convoy that had been ambushed on that road, and they were in deep contact. They needed help and Rick Taylor wasn't around. He is the Reaction Force Commander; I'm the alternate commander. Rick wasn't around, so it was my job to take the reaction force in there and try to bail Charlie Battery out."

"We left Dong Ha about 5:30, or 1730, and it took us a half hour to get out to the ambush site," he continued. "I had with me two Dusters and two Quads. I was in the lead Duster, the Quads were in the middle, and there was one Duster in back. When we approached the ambush site, I saw a tank off to the side of the road. Apparently knocked out of action; it was abandoned. Later, I found dead lying on the front deck of the tank. There were four trucks and a jeep in the convoy, lined up straight down the middle of the road. Every one of them had been knocked out. The jeep had been knocked out by an RPG, which is similar to our bazooka or 3.5-rocket launcher. The people from the convoy were hiding against the vehicles and against the sides of the road; not doing anything very much, but looking very horrible and scared and frightened. I saw, farther up the road and across a little bridge, Charlie Battery's Duster off to the side of the road. The guns pointed crazily up at the sky, the hatch in front was open, and nobody was visible around the track. I took my track, and we drove past the tank and pulled off the side of the road and proceeded toward Charlie Battery's track to find out what the story was with them and to give them any support we could."

"As we started moving along the road," Tedesco continued, "we had to pull way off the road into the bushes because there were so many wounded all along the side of the road. We moved back on the road and across the bridge, and I moved my track off the road to my right and saw where the fire was coming from. We were receiving sniper fire, and the Air Force was putting air strikes into the area."

Tedesco directed the track commander, SGT Vincent DeSantis, to return the fire raking the column. With DeSantis directing fire and loading the guns, the Duster delivered effective fire against the NVA automatic weapons, recoilless rifle, and mortar positions in the surrounding hills.

Tedesco left the track and ran across the road to Charlie Battery's track, looking for the officer or NCO in charge, hoping to find out what had happened. He found Lt. Hardin and discovered three of Lt. Hardin's five-man crew had been wounded when RPGs had slammed into their track. SP4 Gilbert in the turret had had both arms blown off by the first RPG. The second RPG had wounded the gunner, PVT Solomon. The explosion had ripped the muscles, tendons and flesh from the back of his legs. Then, the track had taken two more RPG hits in quick succession. Marines who had been riding on Lt. Hardin's track were also wounded. Nearby, a Marine lieutenant, who could not speak because his lower jaw had been shot away, was calmly writing down grid coordinates on a piece of paper. He passed the piece of paper to his radio operator, who tried to call in fire missions; not knowing his radio was broken.

Running in a low crouch across the road, Tedesco re-crossed the bridge and made his way past the main body of the convoy, past the knocked-out tank to where he had left the two Bravo Battery Quad-50s and rear Duster. He directed their fire on the hills on either side of the road at the same place the Marines were placing their fire and where the sniper fire was coming from. Satisfied the rounds were on target, he moved back down the line, trying to find the officer in command of the convoy.

"There were two officers, a Marine Captain and an Army Lieutenant present," Tedesco said. "All they could do was hide up against the track. There were wounded all over the place. Suzanne, it was horrible. People were dead and wounded all over the place. The wounded were in a complete state of shock. It was almost impossible to get them to move off the road, set up some security and try to get the convoy functioning. Anyway, when I saw that these two officers weren't very willing or capable of taking command, I took command of the entire convoy. And my first problem was trying to get the wounded out. We got on the horn and notified Carroll what the situation was, the fact that we needed infantry security and needed aircraft in to evacuate the wounded."

While Tedesco was busy trying to reorganize the convoy, the NVA concentrated their fire on Bravo's lead Duster. Seriously wounded in the back, De Santis refused medical aid and continued to direct his crew's fire and load the guns. Then, an RPG struck the rear of the turret, killing one of the Cannoneers and wounding the rest of the crew. Wounded a second time, DeSantis continued to refuse medical aid and, with bullets showering all around him, began evacuating the casualties from the stricken vehicle.

"I moved back down the road across the bridge and headed to my track to try to find out what was going on," said Tedesco, "and I noticed that my track - the track I had come in on - was not firing," he continued. "As I crossed the bridge, someone called to me from the bushes on the bank of the little stream the bridge goes over. And it was the sergeant [DeSantis] who had been aboard the track. He had taken a small arm sniper round in his back and fragments in his arm. Two of the other three people who had been in the tub with the sergeant were both wounded and in the bushes with him. We didn't know where the fourth man who had been up in the tub was at the time. We later found out that the Cannoneer killed was SP4 Billy Strickland."

"The sergeant told me that they had been hit again," Tedesco continued. "I ran around to the front of the track to try to get to the radio to let them know we had lost another track, and I saw a horrible, horrible sight. The driver, the man who had driven me in there, had apparently been sitting with his head out of the hatch when an RPG or an aerial bomb, I'm not sure which one it was, landed near the track: and it just blew shrapnel and debris all over his face and shoulders and neck. I thought the man was dead. As of now, he's still alive. He's still in critical condition, but they think he might pull through now. The radio was out of action and everything was covered with blood. I moved across the road back to Hardin's track again, trying to get medical aid for the guy in the track, in case he was still alive, and for the sergeant and his people."

"Meanwhile, all of this time I ran across more and more wounded, more and more dead, and more and more scattered groups of Marines. I was trying to organize them, trying to move them," he continued. "We had a medivac chopper come in, and we started taking small arms fire all over the place. I ran over to the chopper and got him out of the area before he got downed right in the middle of our area, so we'd never get anything in or out. This went on and on and on, Suzanne, just on and on and on. I kept moving up and down the convoy, kept calling for the infantry. I kept calling for the artillery. As it started getting darker, I kept calling for illumination."

The illumination rounds, bursting high overhead, released parachute flares that bathed the terrain in an eerie orange glow. Tedesco knew the NVA might use the cover of darkness to move in for the kill.

"Finally," he continued, "I decided we were going to load all the wounded on the two Quad-50s, and on the Dusters and make a run for it. Well, we had gotten one of the Quads loaded with wounded when two Seabee trucks came in to help us on their own; and we got the dead and some more wounded loaded. All of a sudden, the choppers started coming in. The choppers started landing all around us, taking out the wounded."

"Now that the wounded were going," Tedesco said, "my main concern was my two tracks that were out of action. I moved back across the bridge. There were at least 50 civilians in the area. I had no idea where they came from. We had fired over their heads to keep them down. We weren't sure whether they were VC – NVA, or what they were doing. We had a Marine sergeant covering them the whole time with a machine gun. We finally got some trucks in and got the wounded moving out on the trucks, and then the helicopters came in and we kept evacuating. We started pulling back toward the main convoy, evacuating all the wounded with us, picking up all the weapons. I left Lieutenant Gregg, one of the officers from Bravo Battery, in charge there, and he saw to it that the wounded were medivaced."

"Lt. Hardin and I returned with a bunch of Marines to secure our Dusters. This was my main concern now. What were we going to do with the Dusters? I didn't want to leave them to the enemy. I requested permission to destroy the Dusters, and battalion denied this permission. They said another relief column was on their way."

A third reaction force commanded by Captain Charlie Vickers, the 1/44 Artillery S-4, roared out of Dong Ha. The reaction force consisted of 1/44 personnel acting as infantry, two Dusters from A/1-44, two Quad -50s from G/65, and four ammunition-laden five-ton trucks from 1/ 44, Headquarters Battery. They reached the ambush site at 1900 hours.

"Well, about 7 o'clock, or 1900, it was getting pretty dark, and I was just about to say "to hell with battalion" and blow them [the Dusters] anyway, when I saw the headlights of the Charlie Vicker's relief column. Once Charlie got there with his extra force and his people, things cleared up pretty quickly. We got the rest of the wounded out and as many of the dead as we could get out. Lt. Hardin started my original track and found it could run, and he drove that out. Charlie brought one of his tracks across the bridge and hooked the Charlie Battery track (Lt. Hardin's original track) up with the tow cable, and we towed that out. Charlie covered my withdrawal with one of his Dusters that were still operational. And finally at 1930, or 7:30, we left the ambush site.

"We moved out to Cam Lo at the district headquarters there," Tedesco said. "There we left the vehicles that weren't operative and, with the help of the Huey gunships, we came the rest of the way back into Dong Ha. We got back to Dong Ha about 10 o'clock, or 2200 hours. It was a very, very horrible -unbelievably horrible - experience. I don't guess I will ever forget the sight of that battlefield, or the look on the face of that poor kid who was driving me after I got back to the track and found that they had been hit. I didn't sleep very much. In fact, I didn't sleep at all last night." The 3rd Battalion, 4th Marines Regiment moved in to secure the ambush site, standing watch through the night over the dead and disabled vehicles.

Following the ambush, the survivors discovered that they had gone up against elements of the NVA's 320th Division's 48th and 52nd Regiment. Total friendly casualties were seventeen killed in action, 42 wounded seriously enough to require medical evacuation, and 13 with minor wounds. The 1/ 44th artillery had committed 11 Dusters, five Quad-50s and 152 soldiers. They had fired over 20,000 40mm shells and 28,000 .50-caliber rounds. The ambush was supported by direct and indirect field artillery, jets and Huey gun-ships. Captain Tedesco, Lt. Hardin and SGT DeSantis were awarded the Silver Star.

After the battle, the Marines placed a dead NVA atop a mile marker adjacent to the ambush site, and then added a helmet, clothes and a poncho and a cardboard sign made from a C-ration box. The macabre scarecrow stood along Route 9 for months, symbolizing the savagery of combat. A single lone tall tree standing on the northwest side of the bridge identified the site. Weeks later, the hundreds of NVA dead were buried in two mass graves on the west side of the stream north of Route 9. A few days later the NVA would attack the Cam Lo Combat Base. Again the Duster reactionary force would come to the aid of the Marines at Cam Lo. The battles at base camps across the DMZ and convoy ambushes along Route 9 never stopped in 1968, the "TET YEAR".

January 24, 1968, Dusters shooting at the NVA from Camp Carroll.

After shooting 5,000 40mm rounds at the NVA, the Duster is covered by smoke.

The "lone tree" that represented the apex of the January 24, 1968, ambush "Ground Zero."

This is the bridge the Marine M48 tank crossed before they were hit by NVA RPG's. The Duster was hit by the RPG's before it got to this bridge.

Lower S.E. Slopes of Big Dong Ha Mountain
NVA
NVA
NVA
NVA
Cam Lo River
NVA
MIKE
HILL
NVA (Dug In)
Creek
NVA
NVA
NVA
Flat Land
NVA
AMBUSH
SITE
NVA
NVA GROUND ZERO
Convoy heading West
9
NVA
East to Dong Ha and Cam Lo bridge
Johnie Town's
C-140 Duster
NVA
Joe Belardo's
C-141 Duster
N CONVOY AMBUSH
January 24, 1968
M-42 Duster
M-48 Tank
Spider Hole
Mass Grave
North
Observation Post
HILL
250
HILL
158
Camp J.J. Carroll

NVA soldier being taken out of a spider hole.

Billy Strickland "Killed In Action" – January 24, 1968.

CHAPTER 10: RECOLLECTIONS

I've been trying to sort out the events of the January 24th battle and what went wrong. I was part of a seasoned crew, but the other crew chosen to go down to the ambush had no idea what to expect. Their Squad Leader, Johnny Towns, was the only combat-experienced member on the Duster and was scheduled to go home within the week. This alone was unfair to a short-timer. The Driver, Conley, was not the designated Driver for that track, but only a reactionary force volunteer. He had only been in a few skirmishes and was another short-timer. Lt. Hardin had been advised that our Duster had no starter and had to be towed to start. He knew the shortcomings of Towns' crewmembers and took charge of that Duster himself. He was the Platoon Leader. We had no clear plan and all the cards were stacked up against us. Everyone knew that the ambush was big and bad by the amount of firepower the NVA had already expended trying to destroy the convoy. We also knew it was a bad scene by the thousands and thousands of 40mm shells we had already counter fired at the NVA from Camp Carroll. Both Dusters had already fired thousands of rounds at the ambush site from Camp Carroll and should have been quickly cleaned and re-oiled before leaving camp. The 40mm shells were already jamming in the breaches up at Carroll due to overheating. Lt. Hardin said this was not the time to get squeamish and to "SADDLE-UP".

We all proceeded out the gate of Carroll in high gear. When we were about hundred yards from the ambush, we all came to a stop. We just sat there as ordered, looking and listening. The only shooting was the 40s flying over our heads from Carroll, exploding at some unseen targets to our left. I could feel my jaw muscles tighten and taste my own bile. We were sitting ducks for the NVA.

The Marine Lieutenant and our Lieutenant called all the shots. Sergeant Chester Sines, our Section Chief and the extra man on the crew, repeatedly advised both officers about proper ambush deployment. I begged Towns and Conley not to move and start shooting. The two officers issued orders that they were moving forward and would not chance shooting any Marines who might have taken cover in the brush. Nothing was moving or shooting from the ambushed convoy or from the NVA. It should have been obvious by how quick the enemy knocked out the convoy, that they had a lot of firepower and did not have time to leave the area. They ordered us to hold our positions and await instructions. It was standard combat operating procedure, when in doubt, to shoot the 40s a few hundred yards out past the ambush site and shake up the enemy and see if you got their attention with some return fire. We would put them on the defensive and then assess the situation before committing and moving. Shoot, move, and communicate was our motto. This ambush was too big to be so quiet, and I was very concerned. Sines radioed the lieutenants and suggested we take up position on a small knoll on the south side of the road overlooking the ambush site. It had a small path leading up and down and was wide enough for our track vehicles. This position would give us an advantage if something should happen and still let us be close enough to retrieve the wounded and dead. They were the officers in charge and Chester's suggestions were ignored.

The last radio communication I got from Towns was, "Joe, you guys better cover my ass. I'm short." Towns was referring to his week or so left in country. Screaming into my radio headset, I begged the guys not to advance forward. "Johnny Towns, Billy Conley, what are you fucking crazy? They've never done this before; stay the fuck where you are and start shooting; you know better; we've done this a hundred times together; open up full auto and clear a path and then pick your targets; we will follow your lead and cross over your shells making a big fucking X; you know the drill." The only response we got was from the two lieutenants screaming the words "Move Out". It was the last communication we would ever get.

It was not Americans but NVA who were hidden in the brush. They let the lead M48 tank cross over the small bridge that went over the creek and then blasted it at point blank range with a volley of RPGs (Rocket Propelled Grenades). Before Hardin's Duster could react, the next RPG team blasted them. It was over in less than a minute...the tank and Duster never got a chance to shoot. The NVA were so brazen, they just stood in full view and fired repeatedly. We looked on in horror. We immediately started killing the enemy we could see. In seconds, it became another full size ambush directed at us. RPGs and automatic weapons were now firing at us from everywhere. NVA, swinging satchel charges, sprinted down the road in our direction. Chester and I dropped them with a quick burst of my M-16. Sines screamed at me to get us up on the knoll "NOW!"

The top of the knoll gave us a clear view of the battle area and the elevated firing advantage we needed. Large groups of NVA were running in all directions. As we fought off their attack, Sines was trying to see what needed to be done to retrieve the men from the ambushed convoy. All we needed was some immediate fire support and infantry.

The NVA should not have been allowed to dig in and take ground. We desperately needed additional firepower and ammunition. Sam Lewis handed me his little green book of secret codes from around his neck. As I adjusted the radio frequencies, Chester Sines made the first calls for choppers and air support. As our Duster shot the first obvious enemy targets, Chester and I quickly made circles on my map of the grid coordinates of all the NVA positions we could see. Chester then climbed up the back of the Duster and stood behind the turret pointing at the NVA positions he could see and screaming verbal commands where the Duster should shoot. I radioed Lt. Moore up on Carroll and gave him the grid locations of the enemy. Moore instructed me to radio the four Dusters, who were shooting blindly over our heads from Carroll, and give them targets. Their lines of fire now adjusted, they could sweep the NVA positions effectively. We then gave the same coordinates to the 105mm and 155mm artillery Fire Direction Control at Carroll. All Hell was breaking loose. Our artillery shells, which now began to exploding everywhere, just made the enemy run toward us even faster. They knew, if they got close to us, our large artillery from Carroll could not shoot without killing us. We were going to die. Our orders from Captain Easter at Carroll were vague and non-committal. Our crew could not understand "C" Battery's thinking, and that no other Dusters were immediately sent to help.

We became infuriated with Easter. It was a hard pill to swallow, knowing and feeling you were left to die. Our crew all agreed that we were not going to leave the ambush site without saving the other Duster crew. We thought, if we could fight long enough, Captain Easter would have to send help or body bags. But we were not prepared for the number of NVA we had to fight. The gooks seemed to be coming out of the cracks in the earth. I am amazed at how easy it was shooting them. It was a slaughter, but they did not give an inch. In all the other firefights I had been in, the NVA would try to hide and shoot, hit and run, killing and wounding as many of us as they could and then disappear back into the jungle taking their dead with them. This fight was completely different. They were well equipped with lots of firepower and were here to stay and fight to the end. All of us knew they were headed for Camp Carroll and we had to stop them. If Camp Carroll fell to the enemy, it would be the end of the war.

Even though we were furious at Captain Easter, we all knew, as seasoned combatants, that Easter could not and would not leave Camp Carroll undefended. He had to do what was best, and possibly sacrifice a few men. Us! So, we were pissed off to say the least.

We knew we were in deep shit when the NVA bugles and whistles started blowing. Any weapon we fired was effective in killing or wounding the enemy. There were so many NVA that firing one to three 40mm rounds would injure and or kill many enemy soldiers. We would no sooner shoot at one group and another group popped up. As we went from group to group, the first groups we shot could be seen dragging their wounded into the cover of nearby brush or dragging them by a short piece of rope tied to their leg. By the time we traversed back, most of the bodies had disappeared from sight. The NVA did not stop coming and we did not stop killing them. If any got below the line of sight of the 40s, I would shoot them with my M-16 or .45 pistol, or Earl and Dave shot them with the M60 machine gun. The crew was in disbelief when Easter repeated he was not sending help or ammo. Camp Carroll had to be held at all cost. Chester got on the radio and was screaming at him. His screams went unanswered. We had killed or wounded the entire first wave of NVA we could see on each side of the ambushed convoy. As the Duster shot, I just kept doing my job: drive, send radio communications, give firing grids to the artillery, direct the jets and choppers, and shoot my M-16 at any NVA who were getting close to our Duster. It was very eerie how cold and methodical we had become. There were times when we just stopped and waited and nobody was shooting.

Chester or I constantly had to get on the radio and tell the "Bird-Dog" spotter plane that was flying over the area to "go away." We knew he was just trying to help us, but his plane was in the way of the 40s and our artillery shooting at the enemy from Carroll. We were afraid he would be blown out of the sky by one of our shells. Plus, he was in the way of the jet bombing and napalm runs we were trying coordinate. We were glad when he finally left.

There were dead NVA everywhere. It looked like over five hundred, just in the area north of the convoy. Even though the artillery, jets and choppers helped kill the enemy, it felt like just us six and a handful of Marines did most of the killing. I thought we were winning because they had stopped removing their dead from the battlefield. Earl Holt counted 49 dead NVA next to our Duster on the knoll alone. I never counted, but I know only dead NVA were left on that hill. Bodies and parts were strewn everywhere. There would be a pause for a few minutes and then they would start coming again and we would start shooting. With each pause they would rush a little slower, disappearing behind every piece of brush, bush or crevice. It was the most I ever shot my M-16 and .45 pistols. It was the first time I had emptied all my ammo bandoleers of M-16 ammo and had to reload.

To avoid being hit by NVA artillery, we did a sporadic stop-and-go all over the knoll. It was impossible, as we dodged artillery, not to run over some of the NVA bodies. On the east side of the creek, we could see a small group of NVA advancing toward the convoy. We shot at them with our M60 but could not shoot the 40s because the shrapnel from them would hit the convoy. Out of nowhere, a small group of villagers and Montagnard people started running across the battlefield, heading for their homes at Cam Lo. It was amazing, everyone stopped shooting. It caused a semi-pause in the battle. We screamed and yelled for them to run as fast as they could and get out of the way. Everyone seemed to be regrouping. We were almost out of ammo and still hoped for relief. Because we could not shoot, the NVA began feverishly picking up their dead and wounded, and disappeared with them back into the brush. They had to know we were low on ammo, but they did not risk the test under fire. Our 40mm ack-ack guns had ripped them virtually to pieces. We now just stared at each other and waited. As the NVA ran out from their cover, we shot them with our M-16s. If we had been given the ammo we requested, this would have been the only time we could have evacuated the men trapped in the ambush. As history was being written, the wait for ammo was too long and neither side was retreating.

When Easter finally allowed the first group of volunteers to try and bring us ammo, it was too late. The NVA could be seen regrouping and were advancing very slowly. We had stopped shooting the 40mm, because we were down to only a few clips of 40 ammo. We shot our M-16 and took turns shooting the M60 machine gun. It was an awful feeling, this waiting to die. I began to wonder how I would die and what gook was finally going to kill me. I kept telling myself "I'm not going to let them take me alive." Our situation was not very good. The phrase "Wha'd'ya think?" must have been said a thousand times. Nobody really gave a shit what we thought. I thought we were just NVA bait. We were going to finally be overrun, and die. "Wha'd'ya think?"

Lt. Steve Moore was now up on OP Hill 250 with Lou Block's Duster crew. Hill 250 overlooked the ambush site and had the best field of view. Chester and I again coordinated with Moore the counter battery fire against the enemy. Moore knew what to do and would give us all the protection he could. There was only one problem. They could visually see us but could not lower the guns enough to clear the enemy that surrounded our Duster and the convoy area. Like the other Dusters at Carroll, they could only shoot and cover an area about three-hundred yards from us and out to the Cam Lo River and slopes of Dong Ha mountain. Our crew agreed that we could not let our friends, who were coming to help us, drive the ammo truck into the main ambush area below our knoll and be killed. Plus, we could not risk driving our Duster back down onto Route 9 because we now had no more 40 ammo and could not take or fight back another direct NVA assault. The ammo truck driver, Bob "Willy" Williams, and Don Wolfe, riding shotgun with an M-60, didn't know exactly where we were. One of us had to try to get to them before they drove directly into the ambush site and were killed.

I am not sure how I was selected to run down the hill to Route 9 and "fetch" the first ammo truck. Some say I volunteered. My crew said they just pointed at me and off I went. I'm not really sure, and it really does not matter. I filled my pockets with grenades, wrapped two bandoleers of M-16 ammo around me, and attached my bayonet before descending down the hill. I thought if I went on an angle, away from the ambush site and yet towards the road, I would go somewhat unnoticed by the NVA and stop the truck before it got too close. As I ran down the hill, my pants were falling off from the weight of the grenades. I guess I was a little overloaded and had to hold my pants up with one hand and hold my M-16 with the other hand. I used all the little things they teach you in boot camp: running in a zigzag, low crawling, rolling, and counting before you throw the grenades, shooting single shots and short bursts, and bayonet training.

I finally had to stop and pull up my pants. I had just killed a handful of gooks and needed to regroup and get my bearings and fix my pants. Lying on my back against a small dirt hill, I pulled up my pants and tightened the belt. I now could hear Vietnamese language, and what I thought was French, being spoken on the other side of the hill I had to go down. Trying to stay unnoticed, I shimmied up under some brush. Straining to get a better look, I could only see legs, boots and a very tall guy in a beige uniform talking and pointing up the hill. I pulled the pin of one grenade and tossed it over the hill. I closely watched the grenade as it slowly sailed through the air and prayed I had given it a good enough toss and that it wouldn't come back down on top of me. I quickly followed with two more tosses. After the explosions, I quickly crawled up over the hill. A small group of NVA lay dead and wounded in the small depression. Without counting them or searching them, I quickly shot them again and continued my run down the hill to Route 9. Things were so crazy and confusing going down that hill. I could hear NVA yelling and screaming, their whistles and bugles blowing. I would run a few yards and hide behind some cover before advancing again. My heart was pounding out of my chest as the NVA walked past without noticing me. I shot the little bastards in the back. It was too late to change my mind or direction. I was now about a hundred yards from my Duster. I just shot at anything that moved or I thought was moving. To this day, I don't think they were prepared for one Army idiot assaulting them. They were caught completely off guard. Plus, I could run real fast, as it was all downhill. Maybe that helped.

When I got to Route 9, I took cover in the drainage ditch on the south side of the road. I wasn't sure what to do and was exhausted. My mind told me not to make any noise and take time to regroup. This was the first time I was truly ever alone in Vietnam, and the first time I had done anything like this. I was not in the infantry. All kinds of crazy thoughts ran through my mind. Should I advance west towards the approaching ammo truck or wait for it to arrive? I didn't know what to do. How many more gooks could I kill before they killed me? I had a good view up Route 9 and was concealed from view, so I decided to wait, and when I saw the truck coming, I would wave it down.

Within minutes, I saw six NVA soldiers on the other side of the road walking slowly in a crouched position towards my direction. My heart was pounding out of my chest. They had no idea that I was sitting less than a 100 feet from them. Occasionally, they stopped and ducked their heads like turtles and crouched as Moore's 40s from Hill 250 and Camp Carroll hit the areas behind them. They just pointed up at Camp Carroll and again started moving forward slowly, using hand signals. They had grass sticking out of their helmets and waistbands, with bandoleers around their chests. I held my breath and took aim at the gook in the middle of the group. As the next volley of artillery exploded, I shot. They quickly ducked. I think they thought they were shot at from our group on the knoll or hit by the shrapnel from the exploding artillery. They had no idea how their friend got killed and they seemed not to care. I was amazed that they never ran to or even gave any real aid to their fallen comrade. They were hard Sons-of-Bitches. They never made the next 50 feet or knew who shot them. Remaining in the ditch for what seemed to be an eternity, I prayed that my friends would find my remains if I got killed. Hearing a lot of shooting and explosions from the direction of the ammo truck, I ran down the road a few 100 feet and took cover again in the ditch. I could see the ammo truck being riddled by NVA heavy weapons fire. As Don Wolfe blasted away with his M60, killing the NVA rushing the truck, another group of NVA charged the truck from both sides, wounding Don and a few other guys. All I could do was pick off a few NVA with my M-16 as I looked on in horror, crying and watching from my hiding position, as my friends got hurt and maybe killed trying to help me. Unable to fight their way past the NVA, the truck was forced to turn around and limp back to Carroll. I felt totally helpless and ashamed that I could not help them. I quickly started back up the hill.

My memory has always been good, but maybe a portion of my brain got fried on the way down or toasted when I climbed out of the ditch along the road and started back up the hill. All I remember are the screams and that horrible silence when their screaming stopped. The only sound I remember hearing was my heart pounding. Everything around me went into slow motion. A feeling of unbelievable loneliness and hopelessness overwhelmed me. Then I finally went into the, "I don't give a shit, I'm dead." mode. We all want to survive and I was in survival mode. Lots of NVA died on my runs down and up that horrible hill, more than I care to remember or want to write in my diary. I made friends and blood brothers with the Devil today and can only hope that God forgives me. As they say, my name wasn't at the top of His list. I hope my Mom forgives me if she ever reads this diary.

I was bloody from what I thought were cuts and scrapes from running through the brush and crawling past the dead NVA. It was more frightening to run back up the hill. The Marines were shooting at anything or anybody coming up that hill. Constantly, I yelled my name, "New Jersey," and any other American name I could think of. As I ran and crawled back up the hill, I rested and took cover next to the dead NVA, using their bodies as a shield and protection from both the NVA and Marine bullets. I could feel the bullets hitting the bodies and feared they would come through and kill me. If I thought they were still alive, I would shoot the NVA again before advancing. It was hard getting back up the hill.

When I was finally close enough for the Marines and my Duster brothers to get a good look at me, I stood all the way up in the "I surrender" position, with my rifle over my head. I walked slowly up the center of the path, screaming my name and silently praying on the inside not to be killed by my fellow Americans or the NVA. I never held my breath so long. My comrades finally motioned to me and waved me up the hill. I ran like Hell. I told my crew what had happened, swapped positions with Sines, and started driving again around the knoll. I then called Camp Carroll to find out WHAT THE HELL HAPPENED?

The Marines, who were with us, wanted to withdraw up the hill, straight to Outpost Hill 250 or Camp Carroll. NVA artillery, RPGs, and recoilless cannon shells were now landing everywhere. Sines convinced them to hold on a little longer. The waiting seemed endless. The radio crackled full of chatter. Duster crews from the Khe Gio Bridge, Rockpile and Ca Lu were calling and volunteering to help their friends. It was pure chaos and had become out of control. Radio language was now on a first-name basis.

Our Battalion Commander, Lieutenant Colonel John House, ordered all radio frequencies cleared and exclusively used for battle communications. Thank God, House's courageous orders brought the battle back to military standards. He was sending reactionary reinforcements from Dong Ha, under the guidance of Captain Easter at Carroll. We thought that LTC House's brave combat decision was going to save everyone in the kill zone. I gave credit to the Colonel, for a decision that could possibly have saved hundreds of Americans and Camp Carroll.

The Marine from The Water Point, Roger Blentlinger, radioed our Duster to say that another volunteer Reactionary Group was coming from Carroll. I radioed back and gave him a different radio frequency to use. We all knew each other and did not need or want to use proper military radio language. The radio barked: "Joe, this is Roger. Tank and I are coming down with some volunteers, two truckloads of ammo, a squad of Marines, and Medic "Doc" Butler. We're not exactly sure where you are or what your situation is, but we're coming down. Hold tight, buddy, and give us a sign where you guys are." I radioed back and spoke with Tank and told him where I would meet them on the road. He was a fellow Road Warrior and knew the location.

The NVA had now moved really close to the knoll. Because we had no 40mm ammo, we could not stop them. We were saving the balance of our personal ammo for a face-to-face confrontation. We did not want this ammo truck and volunteer rescue team to run into the advancing NVA. One more time, I ran down that Godforsaken hill to Route 9. This time I took one of the small paths back to the road. I was running so fast that my forward momentum was causing me to stumble. As I ran and stumbled down the hill, an NVA soldier out of nowhere attacked me from my back right side. As he jumped on me, he tried to stab me with his knife and ended up hitting my M-16. His next swing cut my left wrist. I quickly let go of my rifle and grabbed his arm. Scared shitless, we went falling and rolling, head over heels, down the hill. I never let go of his arm or the hand holding the knife. Kicking and screaming, we both fought for our lives. I quickly sent him to his maker. Struggling to get back up on my feet, another gook poked at me with his screwdriver pointed bayonet pig sticker and hit me in the right forearm. Kicking him in his knee, he fell backwards. Scrambling for my life, I finally got off a shot with my .45 and sent him flying on his ass. Crawling on my belly, I recovered my M-16 and shot him again as he tried to get back up. Frightened out of my mind and trying to catch my breath and get my bearings, I got back on my feet and I ran over to the first guy and shot him in the head. The two NVA were either out of ammo or trying to take me prisoner, God only knows. Running like a crazy man, who just escaped from a mental hospital, I continued down the path.

After what seemed like another eternity of shooting, running, ducking, crawling and cursing, I reached the road. In my haste to get away from the enemy, I was nowhere near my original goal on the road. Instead, I was on a ledge about six feet high overlooking my destination. Running full speed downhill, I had no choice and leaped off the ledge like a flying squirrel sailing through the air. I landed on my ass in front of the approaching ammo truck, only to be shot at by Roger. Thank God he missed. Tank stopped the truck just short of running me over. I directed them back to the top of the knoll, taking the same path back I took on my first run. Getting the ammo truck up the hill was another nightmare. I could not believe the fuckin' truck got stuck in a small ditch. I just couldn't believe it. I told Tank to take over and get the Marines in a fighting position. I'd be back with the Duster. It was a living nightmare. Cursing and screaming, I sprinted back up the hill. This time I just ran until I got back to my Duster. After all, it made no difference; we were all dead men walking. If my friends or the Marines shot me, no one gave a shit at this point. Friendly fire or enemy, it made no difference now how I died.

My Duster crew could not believe what had just happened and headed down the hill to the trucks, the M-60 blazing a trail. As we hooked up our tow cable to the truck, Chester quickly explained to the Marine Lt. what the situation was and what needed to be done.

Finally back on top of the knoll, with our new supply of ammo and reinforcements, we started to shoot back at the advancing NVA. As we shot, the reinforcement crew refilled the Duster with 40mm ammo. They could not believe how many NVA we had killed. Bodies and body parts were growing everywhere. Everyone was screaming and yelling and cursing and crying. In true Duster Gunfighter Tradition, our crew stood brazenly, defying the NVA to kill us, as we humped ammo and fired our guns at the advancing enemy. Enemy bugles and whistles blowing added an eerie soundtrack to the killing of other humans, as NVA bodies were mutilated by our high explosive 40mm shells.

My brain still screams when I think of that horrible day. I still hear the clacking of rifle butts against rifle butts, and butts against flesh, as we dueled for our lives. We just stood there doing our jobs as the enemy bombs exploded around us and endless bullets pinged off the Duster. We all knew this could be our last day on earth as each man made constant eye contact and stood tall to his task of killing. Chester, now on the radio, was informed that a relief force from Dong Ha was being sent to rescue the destroyed convoy, the Marine tank, and Lt. Hardin's Duster with Johnny Towns' crew. But, they never mentioned us. Chester looked at me and said, "I don't think the reactionary force even knows where we are, or even that we are here at all." I got on the radio and asked for another sit-rep and got the same answer. I then called again and tried to get the radio frequency of the approaching reactionary team and their call sign. The radio operator advised us that the Captain Easter's orders were not to communicate with us, because he did not want to compromise the mission. We couldn't believe what we just heard. It didn't matter. We would be dead by the time they got here. All we wanted to do was tell the reactionary force not to charge into the ambush site and where the enemy was now situated. We were never given the opportunity and knew in our hearts that another Duster crew was being sent to their death.

Since this could be our last hurrah, I climbed into the turret behind Sam Lewis and started to load the 40. The guns were really hot and the 40s were self-detonating as they entered the firing chamber. Constantly, Earl Holt and I took turns reaching into the red hot breaches and un-jamming the stuck 40 rounds, the hot shells and loading chambers burning our fingers and arms. Earl said he thought we might have some oil in the outside storage compartment or on the trucks. Giving his loading task to David Lewis, he went for the oil. We continued to pick off enemy 57 recoilless cannons and RPG teams, their shells flying over our heads like giant smoking bottle rockets. Sam Lewis yelled, "Duck," as he saw another NVA shoot his 57 recoilless directly at us. The enemy shell hit the ground next to our Duster. The exploding shell hit us with hot shrapnel and debris. I thought the skin was burned off my body by the explosion. I stood there frantically patting my chest, arms and face. There were at least three or four more explosions. I remember being thrown on top of the 40mm breach and trying to sit up. Then there was another horrific noise as both our cannons exploded. It was a mess.

I now found myself on top of Sam with a long thin toothpick piece of metal from my own guns sticking out of the right cheek of my ass. It was hard to regroup. My ears were ringing and I was dizzy from the explosion. I was trying so hard to remember where I was and what had just happened. In a blurry daze, I pulled out the piece of shrapnel in my ass. Standing, I felt something hit me in my left underarm, twisting me in a bent position over the edge of the turret. Struggling to stand, I looked around. At first I saw no one and thought the explosions had killed the rest of the crew. Then I noticed David standing there covered in blood with a long piece of shrapnel sticking through the bridge of his nose. He slowly fell backwards between the Duster and the ammo truck. I thought he was dead. No one else was in sight. They had been blown off the Duster and ammo truck. I was still trying to regroup and orientate myself and was really groggy and fucked up. It felt like all my corpuscles were exploding inside me. Everything was going in slow motion. As I bent over, trying to keep from fainting, I noticed Sam slumped over the Gunner's turret crank. Our helmets had been blown off by the explosions. The skin on the side of Sam's head had been peeled to the back of his head. I thought he was dead. Blood was everywhere and all you could hear was screaming and yelling and the faint distant sound of more NVA whistles and bugles. Hot shrapnel peppered us as the NVA shells continued to explode all around us.

I soon realized that the blood dripping on Sam's head was mine. I now thought the enemy had blown out my brains and shot me full of holes, and that I had lost my right eye. Smoke seemed to be coming out of me and my flak jacket. I started patting myself again like a madman, trying to put out the unseen fire. Frantically, I pulled the long slivers of shrapnel out of my head, the corner of my eye, my nose, and mouth. I then started choking on my own blood. When I felt my face, I thought the hole by my right eyebrow went into my brain. I started screaming and cursing at the fucking gook bastards for blowing my brains out. The turret was swinging wildly and I thought it was on fire, so I pulled the turret fire extinguishers. Yanking Sam out of the Gunner's seat, I jumped off the Duster and ran with Sam slumped over my shoulder, as I shot at the NVA. A Marine helped us and dragged us away from enemy fire to the back of the trucks. Doc Butler quickly revived Sam with mouth to mouth, and the Marine helped him apply bandages to my head, arms and chest. For some reason, I got back in the turret and grabbed the M60 machine gun off the turret mount and started shooting at the NVA. I really was just trying to stay alive.

Earl, John, and Roger joined me in the turret with their M-16. Things were happening faster than most of the guys could react. I think we were all in total survival mode and running on energy from the final fear of dying. We all now fought like wild savages, each of us screaming, howling, laughing and cursing as we fed off each other's courage. As we killed the enemy, Chester Sines ordered the others to collect our dead and wounded and put them in or on the trucks, tank and Duster. Sines screamed, "Prepare to fight your way through the advancing NVA; we're going back to Carroll or die." Sines radioed Carroll advising them we were hit, out of commission, and were coming back. We had not recovered the other Duster and M48 Tank. To this day, we don't know how we did it. We had cut a path through the advancing NVA and back to Camp Carroll. It was something we all will never forget. Like true Grim Reapers, we harvested the enemy.

When we finally got back to Carroll, the first thing we did was insist that Sam and David get immediate medical help. We then tried to get more Dusters and Quad-50 machine guns to go back down to the ambush and retrieve our friends. We ran around, crazed with the lust to fight and to kill more enemy and save our friends. Sines advised us that we were ordered to stop and stand-down. The reactionary force from Dong Ha had arrived at the ambush site. We all went crazy, screaming and yelling how we wanted to be the ones who saved our men, our friends. The rescuers should have been from Charlie Battery, not some reactionary force guys from Dong Ha. We had fought so hard. We had killed so many. We had shed our blood. They kept insisting I get medivaced, and we insisted on seeing Captain Easter. Finally exhausted, I sat on the sandbag wall by Paul "Boston" Conley's tent and bummed a cigarette and some water. Paul just stared at me and patted my back. I was not trying to be a martyr or a hero. I knew I was wounded, but not bad, and just looked like shit. Doc Butler was now covering my forehead, right eye, and forearms with field dressings and telling me he wanted me medivaced. A bandage was wrapped tight at my left armpit where I was shot by a ricochet or a small piece of shrapnel. One tooth was broken off and a little blood was coming out of my ears, eyes and broken nose. The back of my flak jacket was hanging off, and my clothes looked like shredded wheat covered in blood. My butt felt like a pincushion from my own Duster blowing up and peppering my ass - "the final insult".

I was very lucky that my wounds were not life threatening. I looked a lot worse then I felt, but really was in shock and running on adrenaline. Being covered in an extra layer of dirt and black ash, from the exploding NVA shells and our own 40mm rounds exploding, made me look like someone who just walked out of Hell.

Captain Easter finally met us outside the Command Bunker. He just stood there, staring at us in disbelief. We must have been some sight. I will never forgive him for telling us how to report what we did and saw. He instructed us not to upset everyone and to say very little. He ordered us to say that we had encountered a small group of NVA, and that our guns had jammed and blown up before we could rescue the other Duster.

For some stupid reason, or maybe because of all the confusion, we let him have his way. He was the Captain. The jamming and blowing up of our guns would be our only recognition. We were then accused of abandoning our comrades and running back to camp during a firefight. In the bunker, he interrogated us as if we had done something wrong.

Everybody in the Command Bunker was shooting questions so fast that we could not reply in time. My heart was broken. We sat with our heads bowed in disbelief, giving the tribunal one-word answers we thought Easter wanted us to say. I wanted to explode and beat the shit out of all those guys. I thought they were supposed to be our friends. Who the hell did they think they were? They had no clue what we had done, what had happened, or what was happening down at the ambush. They were twisting the truth to save their own chicken-shit butts and poor combat decisions. It was now late, so I finally asked to be transported to the medivac station. A chopper took me to Dong Ha.

After arriving at "D" Med in Dong Ha, I could not find my wounded crewmembers and asked one of the Corpsman what happened to the first wave of wounded. He told me they had already been shipped out, either to one of the hospital ships, the Repose or the Sanctuary, or to the hospitals in DaNang. I saw the crew from Johnny Towns' Duster. It was hectic and noisy, doctors screaming orders trying to save lives. Johnny just stood there with powder burns down his side. He looked like a burnt marshmallow. He was trying to get the best aid he could for his injured crew. I assured him that everything was going to be okay. We hugged and he thanked me for saving them. He told me we were the ones who kept the NVA off them. Johnny was a great soldier and a natural leader. He stayed with his men to the end. Wounded and dead soldiers from the reactionary force lay next to Gilbert, who had lost his arms, and Solomon, who had big holes through his legs. Vince DeSantis, a former "C" Battery person, had upper body wounds and didn't look too good. I gave each of them a few words of encouragement and a hug. A few others I did not know were waiting for treatment. I was deeply saddened when I learned that Billy Strickland was killed. DeSantis said that an RPG had smoked their Driver, Carr. I looked around, but could not find him. I then went over to Graves Registration and said a prayer over my dead friends. Standing outside and alone, crying, I was enraged to see all of my friends lying there wounded, mutilated or dead. This would not have happened if Command had listened to us Road Warriors. After a while I was treated and sent to Da Nang and spent a few days in the hospital getting some needed body repairs before being allowed to return to Camp Carroll. I never again saw the wounded guys from Johnny Towns' crew or Tedesco's reactionary crew.

January 24, 1968 was an unforgettable day. I have dreamed a million times about this battle. It seemed that there was no other battle in Duster history that surpassed this tragic day. Yet, it was just another day for the Duster Road Warriors. At all the reunions, this battle is rekindled and the Dragon of War is allowed to breathe flames once more. In the eyes of our crew, someone just waited a little too long to make a commitment to action. The hierarchy seemed to shudder at the mere thought of either screwing up, having death on their hands, or losing more of Uncle Sam's equipment. War is not fair or just and has no conclusion but victory or defeat. Some soldiers never engaged the enemy up close and are curious and eager for the gory details of battle. They don't know how lucky they are. I push right past that memory and on to the rest of the saga. I tell myself, it was just another day in "The Nam". I guess it was so terrifying that my mind protects me from the memory - most of the time. I didn't think I had recovered from the January 13th battle and probably will never fully recover from the January 24th battle.

The smell of the dead NVA still lingers in my nose. How odd.

Twenty years later, in 1988, I finally received the actual Purple Heart medal. I was thankful that the Marines had sent my father a letter attesting to my wounds and informing him that I had received a Purple Heart. It was instrumental in my finally getting the Purple Heart Medal.

In 1998, I saw Johnny Towns for the first time since the war. We hugged and cried and jumped around like two little kids. It was an unbelievably great feeling. I met his wife and other members of his family. His family was curious about Johnny's wild tales of the war. John (Tank) Huelsenbeck and I told them about all the different war experiences the three of us had together. What was once an unreal war story now gave him credibility. Johnny's family beamed with joy, admiration and love. After waiting 35 years to be decorated, Towns was finally awarded his Purple Heart and Bronze Star in November 2003 with the help of Lt. Steve Moore.

CHAPTER 11: G.I. JOE ROLLS IN

February 1: Robert "Billy" Conley was killed today. I became hysterical when I got the call on our radio. I had promised Conley that, on his last day in the combat zone, I would lead his convoy to the safety of Dong Ha and get him home safe and in one piece. His memory haunts me. I wasn't there to lead him home. He was killed halfway to Dong Ha. I blame myself for his death.

Norman Oss, another Duster Driver, and I still cry when we think of him.

I was told Lt. Steve Moore went home, only to be reassigned as one of the officers who knocked on the door to tell the parents that their son died in the war. It was hard enough for him to fight the enemy, get wounded, and lose some of his men, but now this……. Why?!

I guess Uncle Sam thought someone had to do it – why not him?

They told us that Camp J.J. Carroll had been hit by hundreds of NVA artillery shells everyday for the last twenty-eight days. While I was recovering from my wounds, we were given a new Duster called "Float 4." This Duster is completely refurbished and looks brand new. No dents, no holes, engine runs great and there is no play in the turret, making it shoot straight as an arrow. Plus, it is the fastest Duster and can hit 54 mph.

I cannot believe I have survived this long. I've been in so many firefights that I have lost count. One battle just rolls into another. It seems an endless ordeal. How much more do they expect us to handle? How many more do they want us to kill?

Twenty-nine years would pass before a handful of us from Charlie Battery would meet Moore and Amerman in Washington, DC, on Veterans Day at "The Wall." Our meeting was much more than we had anticipated. The hugs and tears allowed our guards to drop for just a moment. It was filled with deep friendship and a personal bond of mutual respect and understanding. Hand on top of hand, we rubbed our fingers over each carved granite name of our departed friends. As we rubbed each name, we said their names aloud, bringing their memory back to life for just a moment as our minds drifted back to slaying Dragons together in a far away land. The magic of "The Black Granite Wall" reached out to us, making all of us even closer to the covenant called "Nam".

February 2: Cam Lo Base Camp was half overrun by the NVA, proof that they had not left the area. A couple of Quads got hit by RPGs. Again, Duster reactionary forces from Dong Ha helped save the day. My good friends, Hollis Hale and Johnnie Sheares from the Quad 50s, were killed in the battle.

February 5: The Rockpile was hit by twenty NVA rockets. Captain Easter accused me of prematurely pulling the fire extinguisher in the turret during the battle. This was the straw that broke my back. Seven months of blood and guts came to a head. How could I be so stupid as to think the Duster was on fire, when it was only the 40s that were blowing up in the turret and burning?! We still had half a tank of gasoline. What did he fucking think, gas wouldn't burn? I went berserk and totally out of control. As he ran into the command bunker, I was screaming how I was going to kick his sorry fucking ass across the DMZ. I now stood in front of the Command Bunker, screaming obscenities. "You can give me all your shit missions, but I am not going to let you accuse me or my crew of any other wrong doings." I bellowed. "You can kiss my Italian ass. Come out of the fuckin' Command Bunker, you chicken-shit-mother-fucker. We did all your fuckin' dirty work. It's time for you to get a little bloody. No guns, no knives, no sticks, and no stones, just simple hand-to-hand, man-to-man, "up front and personal". I'll show you what it's like to get a real ass kicking. I'll give you a beating that you'll remember for the rest of their lives. Then you can give yourself a Purple Heart." All I wanted to do was what I called "play" and I am real good at "playing". I am no longer going to allow them to break our spirit or accuse my crew of something we did not do or deserve.

They sent big Dave Woods out to try to calm me down. Dave and I were friends from boot camp. I told poor Dave I was not in the mood. He did not want a piece of me, not today. After a short conversation, I finally walked back to my bunker, mumbling to myself.

February 7: Dusterman Robert Coates was killed. I feel bad that I didn't get a chance to know him better. He was from one of the other firing Batteries.

February 8: Our crew was called to the CP (Command Post) for another debriefing of the January 24th battle. I thought we were in trouble again. An officer I did not know but had seen around camp did all the talking. To our surprise, the officer reported how courageous we had all fought and how proud he was of us and Charlie Battery. The officer went into some detail about the strength of the enemy we had fought and some battle statistics. He further explained how important our role was in this war, and how he was personally going to see that all of us got proper recognition and medals. We had successfully defended the enemy from taking Camp Carroll. The officers talked to Chester and me for a long time and took notes. We each wrote a story about the battle. Our letter was short and brief. It was a good meeting.

I wrote my Dad another letter marked "Personal".

Dear Dad,
How are you? Fine I hope. I am also fine. I know you are probably wondering how I got wounded again. This isn't the first time things like this happen around here and won't be the last. Well, here goes. January 24th, the convoy got hit going from Dong Ha to Camp Carroll. It was almost here when it got hit. Our track and another were called to go help pull them out. To make a very long story short, we drove up almost to the ambush site. The other track and a tank with us went right into the ambush. Before we knew it, that tank and track got hit with RPGs (they blow tanks apart). It was real bad. Dad, we tried to get them out. The fighting was furious. We were outnumbered and just couldn't get to them. We pulled on top of this small hill overlooking the ambush. They started hitting us with everything they had: rifles, RPGs, mortars and recoilless rifle cannons. We never stopped trying to save our friends. We finally got hit by a couple of their cannons. That's what wounded most of us. The blast also caused both our twin 40mm cannons to explode, making us useless. Dad, we kept fighting with our rifles and hands, it was tough going. We had to fight our way back to our camp. I wish you could meet my friends. You would really like them. They're a great bunch of very brave guys. As they say, "That's all she wrote." At our last briefing, we were told that, at the end of the battle, there were four hundred of the enemy killed. Half of the Marine unit we were trying to help were wounded or wiped out. Three tracks, a tank, and many trucks were destroyed, and some Army personnel (us) were killed and wounded. Since then, we're running the roads even more, becoming regular roadrunners. We get hit every day at Camp Carroll. Well, that's about all, Dad. Don't worry; I know the ropes of the game. Since I have been here, life has a new look for me. I'm a real lucky guy to have parents like you and Mom. The saying that fits this place goes like this, "To really live, you must nearly die". Thanks, Dad, for everything you've done for me.

Love you,
Your son
xxxxx

February 9: We were one of two Dusters assigned as the security team to guard the Marine engineers who were being sent down to the January 24th ambush site to clean up the dead NVA. As we stood guard, a bulldozer dug two long trenches like a letter "L" on the north side of Route 9. One was parallel to Route 9 just west of the lone tree we called ground zero during the ambush. The other was dug parallel to the small creek north of the lone tree. It was a horrible sight watching the Marines collect the NVA bodies and throw them in the trenches. The smell was disgusting. They dragged one of the NVA out of the ditch that ran along the road and tied him to the concrete road marker that was engraved with the words Dong Ha and an arrow pointing east. I wondered if it was one of the gooks I had shot. They dressed him in a fatigue shirt and pants, a helmet, and a pair of Tank Driver's goggles. They put a cigarette in his mouth and placed a sign dangling from his neck that read "Fuck with the Marines – Die like the Rest".

